BLACK HAND LETTERS AROUND NORTHVILLE

MRS. F. D. KATHERLY RECEIVES TWO OF THEM.

Asks for $250.00 or Will Carry Out Threats.

An amateur black hand local artist commenced operations in Northville vicinity a week or more ago and while not being extravagant in his or her demands, yet takes the same prison chances that the big professional do.

The letters demanded $250 be held under a stone down in the fields of Katherly farm. The communication was turned over to the U. S. authorities and a constant watch has been kept on the parties suspected. A term of 15 years in prison stares them in the face, for it is a matter of history that all "black hand" writers finally get caught and land behind the big steel bars.

SAD NEWS OF MISS ERWIN'S DEATH

Was Resident of Northville for Two Years.

The sad news of Miss Mabelle Erwin's death at her home in Marlette, reached here Friday and was a severe shock to her numerous friends in this village where she had lived for two years.

Of her death the Marlette Leader of Oct. 13, says:

"The many friends of Miss Mabelle Erwin were inexpressibly shocked to learn yesterday afternoon that she died just at the noon hour, her spirit passing out to the other world after an illness of only a few days. For some months she had been in ill health, but her plucky spirit had enabled her to keep about, mingling with the family and friends as when in days of health and strength. Soon after the disease which has afflicted her became relentless and she became critically ill and her condition grew worse steadily, medical skill and loving ministrations being unavailing to ward off death."

"Miss Erwin was a young lady of the noblest qualities who numbered warm friends wherever she went. Here she gained her education, graduating with high honors from the high school with the class of 1888. For the past two years she had been stenographer in the office of the state oil inspector at Northville, which position she resigned in June because of her failing health. Her going out from life so suddenly is a blow that falls keenly on the entire community as she was beloved by all who knew her. Especially severe is the shock to the parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Erwin, whose sunset days she had filled with comfort and gladness by her devotion and faithfulness in the home. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon."

Golden Age Day at M. E. Church.

The church celebrated "Golden Age Day" in the Sunday morning service. The church was beautifully decorated in autumn leaves, corn, wheat and sweet briar branches. About forty-five of the old people of our town were present, many of them having been brought in autos, which were kindly furnished by our citizens. The audience was the largest in some time. The text of the sermon was "Thou Hast Crowned the Year with Thy Goodness." The pastor visited many of the older people who were unable to attend the service but who enjoyed the spirit of the occasion. An interesting feature of the service was the reading of a chapter in the bible by Benjamin Cook, who has been blind these many years. The bible from which he read very readily contained raised letters.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. Gen. Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important message to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sergeant Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. The two, after a wild ride, get within the lines of the enemy. In the darkness, Wayne is taken for a Federal officer who came to keep an appointment, and a young lady on horseback is given in his charge. She is a northern girl and attempts to escape but fails.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

On one side of us the bank fell away with such precipitancy that when we once succeeded in dragging our load to the edge, we experienced no difficulty in sending it crashing downward. The body, plunged through the thick underbrush at the bottom of the gorge, where I knew it would be completely hidden, even in the glare of daylight, from the spying eyes of any troopers riding hard upon our track. As we rapidly worked on this disagreeable task, I thought and planned; two horses and three riders—one of these a woman in need of protection—a dispatch to be delivered by daylight, at all hazards. It was indeed a difficult proposition, and I saw only a single possible solution. One of our number must press on; two of us must remain behind. Which one? What two? If I rode with the dispatch (and how eagerly I longed to do so!) and succeeded in bringing Lee's message safe to Longstreet, it meant much to me—promotion, distinction, honor. On the other hand, if I remained behind, and Craig successfully carried out the duty which had been especially entrusted to me, I should be fortunate indeed to escape with a reprimand instead of more serious consequences. It failure resulted, it meant certain and deserved disgrace. Yet I could absolutely trust him with the dispatch; he was a soldier, and would faithfully perform a soldier's duty. More, he would carry the message with even greater certainty than I, for he knew the roads much better, and I wrote the words hesitatingly—I could not trust him there alone with the woman.

I glanced aside at him as I thus turned the perplexing situation over in my mind—a tall, gaunt mountaineer, whose sole discipline of mind and body had been the army, hardened by service until every muscle in his lean, sinewy frame was like steel, a cavalry man who would follow his leader into the very jaws of hell.

"Sergeant," I asked, flinging aside the improvised brush, "how far do you suppose we are from Longstreet's picket line?"

"Ten miles at the very best, sir," he answered promptly, "and I reckon with another Yankee outpost between."

"With fair luck and good riding it might be made by daylight!"

I reckon as how it might, captain, if we only had sum fresh horses," he said glumly, but it's bin mighty hard on my nag. I've looked for him to roll over like yer sorrel did fer the last two mile."

"Well, Craig, you shall have both horses. Ride the woman's. It is the fresher of the two; but you are to get through if you kill them both and then walk."

"I remain with the woman; there is no other way. Wait here a moment while I speak with her."

I left him standing there, and moved back to where she waited. As I came up she faced me, and for the first time (for the night had lightened somewhat) I could see her eyes and discern some faint outline of her face where the night wind flung back the upturned cape. It was a winsome sight to soldier vision, but with a certain semblance of pride and reserve about it that caused a hesitancy in my speech strange to me.

"Madam," I rested my hand upon her horse's mane and looked at her with a glance as proud as her own. "It might be as well for you to draw the cape closer about your face at present. There are rough men in all armies who would consider your beauty a lawless prize. The life we lead is not conducive to gentleness; virtue is not born in camps, and it would be better not to provoke a danger which may be so easily avoided."

"You claimed, I believe, to be an officer and a gentleman," she said coldly.

I smiled, even as I felt the full chill of her words, and my purpose stiffened within me.

"Even as I yet claim, and trust to be able to prove to your satisfaction," my eyes looked unflinchingly into hers—"but unfortunately, I have one with me tonight who is neither. I would that he were for my own sake. However, madam, let that pass. The fact is here, and we have no time to argue or quarrel. I have already told you that we ride with dispatches for Longstreet. These must go forward, at all hazards, for thousands of human lives depend upon them; yet I dare not leave you here alone and unprotected to the mercies of the wolves who haunt these hills."

"You are exceedingly kind."

"The tone in which she spoke was most sarcastic."

"I thank you for your approbation," and I bowed again, but I venture to tell you this merely because I have already fully determined to dispatch the sergeant forward with the message, and remain behind myself to render you every protection possible."

"Very well, sir; I simply yield to what I am powerless to avoid, and will obey your orders however distasteful they may be. What is your first command?"

"That you dismount. The sergeant must ride your horse, as he is the more fit of the two."

Creatively to my surprise and relief she placed her gauntleted hand in mine, and, without so much as a word of protest, permitted me to swing her lightly from the saddle to the ground. "Craig," I called, "come here."

"You know your work," I said to him, briefly. "And now, the sooner you are at it, the better. Ride this horse and lead your own. As soon as you deliver Lee's message at headquarters, hunt up the cavalry brigade commander and report to him my position. Get a detail, insist upon one, and be back here by tomorrow without fail. That is all."

He saluted, wheeled about, swung lightly into saddle and rode off on a rapid trot, grasping, as he passed down the hill, the rein of his own mount, and leading it, lagging behind him, until the night swallowed the figures, and even the sound of the hoof-beats could be no longer heard. We were alone.

CHAPTER VI.

A Struggle in the Dark.

I have seldom been more deeply embarrassed than at that moment. I knew not what to say or now best to approach this young woman, left so strangely to my protection. The very fact, which I now realized, that she was both young and fair, added some indefinable burden and complicated the delicate situation. I saw no safety for us but in careful, hiding until Craig could return, a squad of hard riding troopers at his back. To permit the girl to venture forward alone through the desolate country we were in, overrun as I knew it to be by irregular bands whose sole purpose was plunder, and whose treatment of women had made my blood run cold as I listened to its recital, was not to be so much as thought of.

There was no help for it, and but one way out, disagreeable as that might prove to my lady. She stood there before me, motionless and silent as a statue, exactly where she had alighted when the sergeant took her horse, and it seemed to me I could plainly read righteous indignation in the indistinct outline of her figure and the haughty pose of her head. To her at that moment I was evidently a most disagreeable and even hated companion, a "Rebel," the being of all others she had been taught to despise, the enemy of all she held sacred. "Could any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

"The time has come when it becomes my duty to look after your comfort and safety," I said, striking to disguise all self-consciousness. "Every moment we delay now merely increases the danger of our remaining here."

"I imagine I might very easily dispense with any further care on your part."

Her reply nettled me, and I answered with an earnestness which she could neither ignore nor check: "Possibly you may think so, but if you do it is merely because of your utter ignorance of the disorganized conditions which prevail in these mountains. Your pride is almost ridiculous under all the circumstances. You have no just cause to feel that I am forcing myself unnecessarily upon you. Our being compelled to take you in charge has proven as disastrous to us as to you. Personally I can say that nothing will relieve me more than to be able to place you uninjured into the care of your own people. I would willingly assume great risks to that end. But while you remain here and in my care, I shall perform my full duty toward you as though you were my own sister. Now please listen to me, and I assure you I shall speak nothing for the mere purpose of alarming you, but simply that you may better comprehend the facts which must influence our present relationship. I have sent forward Sergeant Craig with the message especially entrusted to me for delivery, and thus, if it falls to reach its destination, I have laid myself open to the charge of a grave military crime. In doing this I have not only perilled my own future, but the lives of my comrades and the faith of my commander. Yet I have deliberately chosen to do so because I feel the impossibility of leaving you here unprotected, and because I was unwilling to trust you alone with my companion. I dare not permit you to traverse these roads alone. The mountains all about us, deserted as they now appear, are filled with wandering bands of desperate and hunted men whose tenderest mercy is death. Any rock may be the hiding place of an outlaw, any dark ravine the rendezvous of as wild a gang as ever plundered for plunder."

"But the Sergeant said there was a Federal picket post at the crossing of the White Briar."

Her voice trembled as she spoke. "He merely supposed there would be; but even if it were true, we have no positive means of knowing that the men stationed there would be of the regular service. Doubtless, those thieving, murdering bands, such as that headed by Red Wolfe, of whom you may have heard, are sufficiently organized to keep patrols posted, and may, indeed, be utilized at times by both armies for that purpose. Were you to go to their you might be simply walking into a den of wolves."

"But could you not go with me?" I smiled at the naive innocence of her query.

"I wish you to feel that I have never thought so much about my own danger as about yours," I returned quietly. "But would it be a pleasure even to you to behold me swinging from the limb of a tree, hung as a spy without trial, merely because I ventured to walk with you into a Federal camp?"

"I could see her eyes now resting full upon me, and much of the hardness and doubt seemed to have gone out of them as she scanned my unadorned features in the dim light. I scarcely think I was ever considered a handsome man even by my friends, but I was young then, frank of face, with that about me which easily inspired confidence, and it did me good to note how her eyes softened, and to mark the perceptible tremor in her voice as she cried impulsively:

"Oh, no! Not that!"

"Your words yield me new heart," I replied fervently, determined, now that ice was partially broken, to permit no excuse for its again forming.

There Burst a Vivid Flash of Flame Within a Foot of My Face.

"For if you but once fully realize our situation you will certainly feel that I am merely endeavoring to perform my plain duty."

"I will, of course, bow to the inevitable, sir," she said, "and shall endeavor to adapt myself to the requirements of my unfortunate situation. May I venture to inquire what you now propose to do?"

To the right of where we stood the ground sloped rapidly downward until the dense darkness at the foot of the steep defile shrouded everything from view. The descent, appeared rocky and impracticable, and I could distinguish the sound of rapid water far below. On the opposite side stood a dense wood, the outer fringe of trees overhanging the road, and through the waving leaves the moonlight checked the ground with silver, while the dense mass beyond seemed to flow back up the steep side of the mountain, thick with underbrush. Just below us, and possibly fifty feet from the highway, I could perceive a small one-story log cabin, as silent, gloomy, and deserted to all outward appearance as were the somber woods of which it formed a part.

"There seems a mad choice," I said, speaking as cheerfully as possible. "But I propose to investigate the log hut, yonder, and learn if it may not afford some degree of shelter. If you will rest here, in the shadow of these trees, I will soon discover whether it has inmates or not."

She followed me in silence across the road to the spot designated, but as I turned to leave her seated upon the grass, and well protected from prying eyes, she hurried quickly after me, and in her agitation so far forgot herself as to touch my sleeve with her hand.

"Oh, please do not leave me here alone. I am not naturally timid, yet everything is so gloomy I cannot stand it. Let me go with you, if you must go."

"Most assuredly you shall if you desire," I returned heartily.

There appeared before us a dim, little-used path leading in among the trees, and following its erratic curves we were soon before the cabin, which grew even more gloomy as we drew near. As I paused a moment before the closed door, in order that I might listen for any possible sound within, I could hear her quick breathing, as though the terror of the moment had driven all else from her mind. The wooden latch yielded readily enough to my pressure, and pushing wide open the door, which creaked slightly upon its rusty hinges, I stepped across the threshold, thrusting out the hard earthen floor. There was no window visible, and the slight reflection of moonlight which crept in through the doorway scarcely revealed the nature of that dark interior. I could dimly perceive what I believed to be a table directly in front of me, while certain other indistinct and ill defined shadows might be chairs pushed back against the wall. At least this room was without occupants, yet it was with every sense alert that I entered, pressing slowly past the table toward where I felt the fireplace would naturally be, knowing that my companion was yet with me, her hand clutching my arm.

"Oh!" she cried sharply in terror "what was that?"

It was only over, I said weakly, for my breath yet came to me in gasps. "The brute is dead."

I could scarcely mark her quivering across the narrow streak of moon light, moving toward me as a fright and wild night, startled at everything and passing as far from the fire as possible on the floor as the small space would allow. As she bent suddenly over the table face was so in shadow that I could distinguish nothing of its features.

"What in heaven's name are you indeed so very hurt?"

Not seriously, I think yet I have lost some blood, and am in great pain. There is brandy in the inner pocket of my jacket, but I am unable to move my arm in order to reach it. Would you mind availing to draw the flask out?"

I felt her bend over me, her soft mouth coming almost in contact with my face as with trembling fingers she added the bottom of my trooper's jacket and extracted the small flat flask I had been thoughtful enough to store away there.

The fiery liquid seemed to put new blood into my veins, and with it there returned all my old-time audacity, with that intense hopefulness in which I had been trained by years of war and self-reliance.

"I trust you realize," I said, "that I am neither thoughtless nor ungrateful. Years of war service make one careless of life, but I know it was your shot that saved me. You are a brave girl."

Her overtaken nerves gave way at my words, and I knew she was crying softly. The sobbing was in her voice as she strove to speak.

"Oh, no, I am not; you do not guess how great a coward I am!" I scarcely knew what I was doing when I fired that horrid thing—that was it."

"A huge mastiff, I imagine; one of the largest of his breed. But what ever it may have been, the beast is dead, and we have nothing more to fear from him."

"Yet I tremble so," she confessed, almost hysterically. "Every shadow frightens me."

I realized that no amount of conversation would quiet her nerves so effectively as some positive action; besides, I felt the hot blood constantly trickling down my arm, and realized that something needed to be done at once to staunch its flow, before weakness should render me equally useless.

"Do you think you could build a fire on the hearth yonder?" I asked. "I am afraid I am hardly capable of helping you as yet; but we must have light in this gloomy old hole, or it is bound to craze us both. Take those broken chairs if you find nothing better."

She instantly did as I bade her, moving here and there about the room until she gathered together the materials necessary, but keeping carefully away from where the dead dog lay, until in a brief space of time the welcome flame leaped up in the wide black chimney, and cast its red glare all over the little room. The activity did her good, the light flooding the gloomy apartment yielded renewed courage, and there was a cheerier sound in her voice as she came back to me.

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Granville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, B.H.D., Granville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's life has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's life such as indigestion, ulceration, blood tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Where's the Fool-Killer?

It was a great piece of enterprise on the part of the "Detroit" daily papers to advertise the fact that all the thugs and burglars in that city could legally carry revolvers and other murderous appliances until further notice. Where is the fool killer? If a country newspaper had made a break of that kind it is publisher would have been sent to an asylum.

TWO HORSES STOLE

SATURDAY NIGHT

CHIEF BOGART HAS RECOVERED THEM BOTH.

One Man Under Arrest; Looking for the Other Man.

A gray horse belonging to Ed. Musoloff was stolen off the streets Saturday night and was found hidden near Farmington late the same night.

Harry Spinks of this place was arrested and rather admits taking the horse, but only for a little ride. His story is that he was held up near Farmington by three men who took the rig and hid it in the place where it was found.

Spinks has been employed here for some time as an operator in the moving picture show. Postmaster McCowan of Novi had a bay horse stolen from our streets the same night, which was found in Detroit Wednesday. The man who took the rig has a Polish sort of a name with "Winski" on the end of it, which no one has as yet been able to either spell or pronounce.

Chief of Police Bogart, who found the horse, did some regular Pinkerton work with these results.

In his successful efforts Mr. Bogart was ably assisted by the night watch, John Lockwood.

Spinks pleaded not guilty and his hearing is set for Saturday when the assistant prosecutor will be present. The Detroit man will be arrested today.

If you have young children you have perhaps noticed that disorders of the stomach are their most common ailment. To correct this you will find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets excellent. They are easy and pleasant to take, and mild and gentle in effect. For sale by all dealers.

W. R. C. Notes.

(By Press Correspondent.)
Attention! Members of Allen J. Harmon W. R. C., No. 225. On Wednesday, Oct. 25, will occur our annual inspection. Mrs. Florence Moody of Detroit, inspecting officer of the day. Let every officer polish up her shoulder straps, buttons and boots and be prepared to put her best foot foremost, performing her work in a manner creditable to herself and the order. Drill (for practice) will begin at 6:30 o'clock in the hall. The regular meeting will be called to order at 7:00 o'clock.

Sacrifice Not His.
Note in the Ceylon Independent: "Dear Sir—Mutualist Harry Jayawardene has evidently forgotten that he handed me his hat at the cremation of the late high priest. I am sorry I failed to inform him before that, carried away by the sentiment of the moment, I hung it to the burning pyre, hoping for future merit. May the merit be his, as he was the owner of the hat!"

Myth Concerning the Salamander.
News and salamanders are pretty much like frogs and toads, only they have a tail and look like a lizard, and in some breeds the pair of hind feet are small and in others lacking. Salamanders often get into old rotten wood and get out of the fire run out and being hurt in many cases, because they are more or less damp and do not actually pass through much fire. Put a salamander in a fire and it is right at home in the fire.

Soothes itching skin. Heals cuts or burns without a scar. Cures piles, eczema, salt rheum, any itching. Doan's Ointment. Your Druggist sells it.

Materially Improved.
There is no landscape in the world that is agreeable after two days of rusty bacon and black biscuit. "How lovely this would be," exclaimed the professor, "if it had a background of beefsteak and coffee!"—Charles Dudley Warner.

That Failed.
Jean is a matter-of-fact tot of three years. Another one day, while her mother arms the wee baby with a very delicate, remarkable "look so frail a breath away" Jean taking a sudden puff of air into her little sister, and, in a moment, she is in a state of complete collapse. Well, why don't you go?

For the Teeth.
The chemical action of peroxide of hydrogen upon gold teeth which makes an unpleasant taste in the mouth can be destroyed by using salt with the liquid. Its whitening virtues are excellent.

Confidence

We Back up Our Statements with Our Personal Reputation and Money.

We are so positive that we can sell you a medicine, no matter how crude it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine free of all cost if we fail.

We think that it is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Cathartics may do much harm. They may cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels, and make constipation more chronic.

Constipation is often accompanied and may be caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or colon. Expect a cure; you must therefore tone up and strengthen those parts and restore them to healthier activity.

The discovery of the active principle of our remedy involved the labor of skillful research chemists. This remedy produces results such as are expected from the best of the best-known intestinal tonic, and it is particularly prompt in its results.

We want you to try Rexall. Orderlies on our guarantee. They are exceedingly pleasant to take and are ideal for children. They apparently act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels, having, it would seem, a neutral action on other organs or glands. They do not purge or cause inconvenience. If they do not positively cure chronic or habitual constipation and thus relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, your money will be refunded. Try Rexall. Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes of packages, 10c, 25c, 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at my store—The Rexall Store, A. E. Stanley, Northville.

Can't be Separated

Some Northville People Have Learned How to Get Rid of Both.

Backache and kidney ache are twin brothers. You can't separate them. And you can't get rid of the backache until you cure the kidney ache. If the kidneys are well and strong, the rest of the system is pretty sure to be in vigorous health. Doan's Kidney Pills make strong, healthy kidneys. Mrs. William Cole, Horton Ave., Northville, Mich., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills and found them to be a splendid remedy for kidney trouble. About a year ago I suffered from backache and pains in my kidneys and I was greatly annoyed by a difficulty with the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally procured from Murdock Bros. drug store and after I had used two boxes, the backache ceased and my kidneys gave me no further trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills have also been very beneficial to another member of the family." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

PUMPKINS FOR HALLOWE'EN

DELIVERING THE HALLOWE'EN PUMPKIN

PROBABLY very few of the younger generation who as did their fathers and mothers before them, derive so much enjoyment from the mischievous and mirthful Halloween season ever stop to consider in their frolicking how much they are dependent upon the prosaic pumpkin, the principal ammunition for the fun-making. Nature's golden globe, so symbolic of all the glories of autumn, is not only the ammunition, but it is likewise the emblem of the mysterious holidays at the end of October. Furthermore, the pumpkin, as it lies in the field or reposes in the market stalls, is so suggestive of a hundred pranks that it might almost be denominated the inspiration of much of the Halloween revels.

MAKING A JACK-O-LANTERN

is to be taken into account the demand for pumpkins for Halloween itself, and, it is no slight demand, either, for it amounts to a consumption of thousands upon thousands of pumpkins every October, even without counting those which are utilized in making pies for Thanksgiving feasts.

The pre-eminent Halloween use of the pumpkins is, of course, for jack-o'-lanterns. You will agree that it would not be merely superfluous, but little short of an insult, to insert any description of these nocturnal terrors for the timid. Fifty the boy who has not in the halcyon days of his youth openly or surreptitiously carved the grinning teeth, staring eyes, strong nose, and expansive ears that vested the placid pumpkin with a sudden ferocity worthy of the most desperate cause. Perhaps it were not well in all cases either to inquire too closely as to just how the pumpkin was acquired. But whatever be the means whereby it was apportioned to its present purpose, it is a safe guess that its selection represents much care and thought and judgment in canvassing the possibilities and qualifications of candidates. For he it known the symbol of vegetable gold that is to be toted around with a candle inside to frighten maiden ladies and youngsters in the first or second reader and the hapless passer by, must come close to certain rigid standards of form and outline. And then, too, it is not advisable to have the "pumpkin head" too big, although that is a temptation, but when he is prone to pick a 40-pound pumpkin the far-sighted sculptor will recall that a 20 pounder may be much more handy

MAKING READY FOR HALLOWE'EN

It is all very well to talk about the advantages of the modern, quiet and decorous Halloween in contrast to the rather more boisterous ones that were formerly the rule, and yet in in some localities, but whatever the form of celebration it would naturally leave all the fun for juvenile America without the grinning jack-o'-lanterns made possible by the pumpkins. Moreover, without the vividly obvious the Halloween hostess would be at a loss for decorative effects at dinner and party. And finally, without the wealth of the pumpkin's mellow interior we should one and all be deprived of that supreme delicacy—the pumpkin pie—which is our bounden right on Halloween even if some crabbed old doctor does deny it to us all the rest of the year.

No one, probably, has the imagination to predict how we could get along without the pumpkin at this prankish time, because not within the memory of the oldest inhabitant have we been without these harbingers of the waning year. We can imagine Christmas without a tree illuminated by the tiny electric lamps or conceive a St. Valentine's day without those convenient and economical post card valentines, because it was not so many years ago that we knew not these holiday adjuncts. But Halloween without pumpkins? Why, it is too preposterous to give credence even for a moment. As well try to imagine a Christmas without mistletoe or mince pie, a Memorial day without flags, or a Fourth of July without fireworks.

Yet for all that it is the pumpkin and its contents that gives "go" to the Halloween celebration; this glory of the autumn corn field has never been accorded much formal notice by an unresponsive world. To be sure, some homely poet putting into verse the look of things in the period known as the afternoon of the year, does make some passing reference to the "frost on the pumpkin," or something of that sort, but what kind of recognition is that for a vegetable the very sight of which is enough to make one's mouth water. It ought to have a monument or be the subject of commendation by congress, says the enthusiast on Halloween. Instead of such commendation (whisper the fact in shame) the United States government, which gets out countless books on all sorts of fruits and flowers and vegetables and bugs, has never devoted so much as a pamphlet to the rotund delicacy—hasn't, indeed, deigned to notice his majesty of Halloween except to give a few hints to housewives who may desire to can pumpkins, as though that were a fit fate for so useful a holiday adjunct.

But for all that there is so little lore relative to the history and antecedents of the pumpkin—and perhaps this is, after all, in keeping with Halloween stealth—it is known that the pumpkin is a distinctively American delicacy. The aborigines of North America planted it among their corn long before the first white man set foot on the continent (if tradition is to be believed), and we have followed much the same custom to this day. Of course, pumpkins are raised in other environments than in corn fields, but no other surroundings seem so appropriate for the heralds of the fall festivals.

Every true friend of the pumpkin is forced to admit that the name it bears is a plebeian one for so royal a fruit. Its name has not only proven a disadvantage in some respects, but has resulted in the pumpkin being confused with certain other products of the farm. As every person who goes in quest of a pumpkin for Halloween plots can well attest, there is only one form of pumpkin that is worthy the name and occasion—that shapely orb of joy, round as a ball and with its glossy surface tinted a more vivid orange than the orange fruit itself. And yet there are people who confuse the only and original simon-pure pumpkin with its numerous cousins, none of which have its traditions or claims to distinction. Just because the pumpkin belongs to the same family as the summer and crookneck squashes and the common, inedible gourds is no reason why anybody should confuse them as one and the same thing. Why, even the squashes that approach most nearly to the pumpkin in color lack its symmetry of form.

The uses of the pumpkin are certainly as varied as of any fruit or vegetable, but whatever its mission it comes into its own along about Halloween. For one thing, that is the height of the harvest season for the pumpkin, and the people who are canning the delicacy or stocking the cellar are busy now, as are likewise those housewives who are utilizing the fleshy layer, that is found just beneath the rind of the pumpkin, for "stuffing" for the most famous of pies—the kind, you know, that the little boy objected to because they "mussed up his ears." And, finally, there in the event that it is necessary to beat any hasty "treats" on the scanty night.

The up-to-date Halloween hostess depends more upon the pumpkin than she does upon ice creams, the popcorn the fudge or any of the other necessities of the frolics at the end of Indian summer. A substitute might be found for any of the eatables, but there is no substitute for the pumpkin as a Halloween decoration. Most of the pumpkins that thus go to add to the jollity of the occasion are the bona-fide products of the farm, but of late years make-believe pumpkins have made their appearance at many an entertainment. It is that they fill a special niche in the scheme of things rather than that they have been required by any shortage of the real pumpkin crop. The situation may be explained by an example. Your ingenious hostess employs the real pumpkins—halved or with an opening at the top, or slashed with the outlines of a Jack's visage, as shades for the candles that are deemed to give sufficient illumination for such a spooky occasion, but she has miniature pumpkins fashioned from colored cardboard as place cards at the supper table, and the favors for the guests are candy boxes in the form of pumpkins filled with pumpkin-colored candy.

It might be supposed that a jack-o'-lantern is a jack-o'-lantern, and that there is very little difference between the reincarnated pumpkins, but any student of this class of sculpture can assure you that there are wide differences that distinguish the different "schools." The boys whose sole thought is of the impression to be made by the flaming countenance looking out from the pumpkin bestow all their thought upon the facial features that are to be thrown into relief by the candlelight from inside of the pumpkin, whereas the hostess whose pumpkin sentries are posted in well-lighted rooms is wont to embellish a plain countenance with black or white eyebrows and mustaches and other supposedly life-like touches.

Surely the Age of Paper

Its Use Becoming Universal—Hard to Set a Limit on the Possibilities.

A report from Lynn, Mass., announces that the police of that city are to be provided with clubs made of paper instead of hickory. The new clubs will be harder, tougher and more durable than the old. In a new direction, then, paper is to take the place of wood.

Blaine struck the fancy of the country by saying in an address at a college commencement that the nature of our civilization is fairly illustrated by the fact that the wheels of the car that brought him to Washington and the napkin given him at the commencement luncheon were made of the same material as that upon which he had written his speech. The wheels, the napkin and the stationery were all of paper. But since the time of Blaine the use of paper has been carried far beyond the limits that excited his admiration. Who could then have foreseen that the policeman's club would be made of it?

It is as hard to set the limits to the possibilities of paper as to those of rubber. We have paper wheels and rubber tires. "Already there is talk of paving streets with rubber surfaces and perhaps the foundation may be of paper-mache. We are soon to be required to carry paper drinking cups along with handkerchiefs as a part of the necessary equipment of dress. By and by the whole dress may be paper. Fortunately, we can pay for all these things with paper money.

Dangerous.
Mrs. Newbridge—Boo, hoo! Henry threw a cake at me. One that I made myself, too!
Mother—The monster! He might have killed you.

A Poor Recommendation.
"Well," her friend said, "he seems to be able to make an honest living."
"Yes," she replied, "but, heavens, who wants to marry a man of that kind nowadays?"

Backache Means Dying Kidneys

A Remarkable Treatment That Saves the Kidneys. How You May Cure Yourself Quickly and Thoroughly.

With the progress of science comes one remarkable treatment for kidney disease. It has been so thoroughly tested and its results have proven so revolutionary that a well-known firm in Michigan has undertaken its distribution into every part of the country. Those who suffer from kidney trouble and the diseases resulting from it will be pleased to know that every package of this treatment is thoroughly guaranteed. This should assure at least a positive cure to every sufferer.

Every man and woman should know that backache is usually a well-defined symptom of advancing kidney disease which may end fatally unless treated in time. That rheumatism and bladder trouble are caused from nothing more nor less than kidneys that do not filter the poison from the blood; that dropsy, Bright's disease, diabetes and bladder stones are caused by bad kidneys. Once they are made to work properly, these diseases should quickly disappear.

This is done by the new treatment, Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills.

We are aware of one who has pain in the small of the back, profuse or scanty urination, pain in the bladder, cloudy or foul urine, not to fail to get a package today of Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills, and drop all other kidney treatments.

Senator Stevenson of Washington writes from Olympia: "There is no question about the efficacy of Dr. Derby's Pure Kidney Pills in curing kidney and bladder trouble. I know whereof I speak."

Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills are now sold at all drug stores, 25 and 50 cents. If you would like to try them first, ask your druggist for a free sample package. Then buy a package; you will not regret it. Derby Medicine Co., Egan, Rapid, Mich.

Robin's new home?

The Sparrow—It looks very nice, but I've only taken a bird's eye view of it.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

There are two ways to tell if you have weak kidneys. The first is through pain in the back. The second by examining the kidney secretions. If you suspect your kidneys, begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. Mrs. J. L. Warren, 106 W. Mulberry St., Lehigh, Ohio, says: "No longer can I tell the age when I suffered. My feet and limbs were lifeless and there were weeks when I could not put my feet to the floor or stand alone. As a last resort, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was as free from kidney trouble as if I had never had it."

"When Your Back Is Lame, He member the Name—DOAN'S." 50c a box at all stores. Foster-McLure Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Aerial Scout Work.

As an example of what German military airmen are already able to do, the performance of Lieutenant Mackenthum recently is cited. In a space of 35 minutes Lieutenant Mackenthum, who was acting for the Red force, rose and flew along the enemy's front and was back on the ground at his headquarters ready to report. To obtain the same results would have taken a strong force of forty-four hours.

It's all right to help others, but it doesn't pay to be too busy to stop and help yourself.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutritious food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.
