CHAPTER X.

A Wornan's Tenderness

Youth is never largely given to reflection, which is the gift of years; and although my life had in a measure rendered me more thoughtful than I might have proven under ordinary conditions, yet it is to be frankly conissed, by one des.rous of writing merely the truth, that I generally acted more upon mpulse than reason As I stood forth in the sunlight of that Tonely, mound; ro, 1, my hands securely bound behind my back, the end of the rope held by one of my captors, while his fellow leaned lazily upon his gun and watched is,- I thought somewhat deeply over the sitjuation and those peculiar circumstances leading up to "

Under other conditions I might have felt tempted to enter into conversa tion with my guards, who, as I now perceived, were far from being the rough banditti I had at first imagined ludging from their faces and language they were intelligent enough young fellows such as I had often found in the ranks of the Federal army. But realized they could aid me little, if any, in the one thing I most desired to know, and even if they could, a sense of delicacy would have caused to hesitate in asking those personal questions that burned upon my lips My deep and abiding respect for this woman whom I had so strangely met, and with whom I had attained some degree of intimacy, would never permit of my discussing her, even in directly, with private soldiers behind the back of their officer, a Every sense of honor revolted at such a though! Not through any curiosity of mine however justified by the depth of my own feeling, should she be niede the guilest or the calma

The vigilance of the guard, as well as the thorough manner in which I was bound, rendered any such attempt the merest

Then it was that other thoughts came surging upon me in a series of interrogatories, which no knowledge I possessed could possibly answer. Who the regular service this proud, womanly woman who called herself Edith Brennan? She had been at some pains to inform me that she was married, yet there was that about her-her bearing, her manwhich I could not in the least reconcile with that thought. Her extreme youthfulness made me feel ît improbable, and the impression re mained with me that she intended to make some explanation of her words, when the coming of Bungay interrupted us. How they might be explained I could not imagine; I merely struggled against accepting what longed to believe untrue. And this man? this Federal major, bearing the same same, whom she called Frank, who was he? What manner of relationship existed between them? It may be fashionable nowadays to sneer at love, yet certain is the rare personality of this Edith Brennar had reached and influenced me in those few hours we had been thrown together as that of no other woman had ever done. My life has ever been one of action, of thow not; am content to give intense feeling; and there in the road that day, standing bareheaded in the aun, I was clearly conscious of but one changeless fact, that I loved Edith Brennan with every throb of my heart, and that there was enmity, bitter and unforgiving, between me and the man within who bore her name Whatever be might be to her I re-folced to know that he hated me with all the unreasoning hatred of jealousy. I had read it in his eyes, in his words, in his manner; and the memory of its open manifestation caused me to smile, as I hoped for an hour when we should meet alone and face to

Her companion appeared to ignore my presence utterly, and gazed anxiously up and down the road as though searching for comething.

The big coffee trust, made up of Brazilian growers and American importers, has been trying various treties to boost the price of coffee and get more money from the people,

Amaya the man who is trying to dig ortra money out of the public potkets on a combination, bates the man who blocks the game

Now comes a plaintine blent from the "cxas-... perated" ones.

The Journal of Commerce lately seid . "A stirring circular has just been issued to the coffee trade." The article further says:

"The coffice world is discussing what is to ! the future of coffee as a resulf of the campaign of miseducation carried on by the ecreal coffee people. We have before us a letter from one-of the largest roasters in the South asking what can be done to counteract the work of the enemies

"The matter sliould have been taken up by the Brazilian Gov't when they were completing their beautiful valorization scheme."

Then the article proceeds to denounce Postum and works into a article. fine frenzy, because we have pub. "Noty lished facts regarding the effect of coffee on some people.

The harrowing tale goes on.

"Where a few years ago everybody drank coffee, several cups a day, now we find in every walk in life people who imagine they cannot drink it. (The underscoring is ours.) Burly blacksmiths, carpenters, laborers and athletes have discontinued or cut down the use of coffee: as there is not a person who reads this and will not be able to find the same conditions existing among his own circle of acquaintances is if not well for the Brazilian's to sit up and take notice?'

Isn't it curious these "burly" strong men should pick out cof-fee to "imagine" about? Why not "imagine" that regular doses whiskey are harmful, or daily slugs

If "imagination" makes the caffeine in coffee clog the liver, cepress the heart, and steadily tear down the nervous system, bringing on one or more of the dozens of types of diseases which follow broken-down nervous systems many people don't know it.

But it remained for the man who has coffee, morphine or whiskey to sell, to have the supreme nerve "You only imagine your to say. disorders Keep on buying from me.

Let us continue to quote from his "Notwithstanding the enormous increase in population during the past three years, coffee shows an appalling decrease in consumption." * ** ** *

Then follows a thresome lot, of statistics which wind up by showing a decrease of consumption in two years of, in round figures, two hundred million pounds.

Here we see the cause for the attacks on us and the Brazilian sneers at Americans whe prefer to use a healthful, home-made breakfast drink and incidentally keep the money in America, rather than send the millions to Brazel and pay for an article that chemists class among the drugs and not among the foods.

Will the reader please remember, we never announce that coffee pared to which is added about ten "hurts all people."

-Some persons seem to have excess vitality enough to use coffee. tobacco and whiskey for years and apparently be none the worse, but the number is small, and when a sensible man or woman finds an article acts harmfully ther exercise some degree of intelligence by dropping it.

We quote again from the article: "These figures are paralyzing but correct, being taken from Leech's statistics, recognized as the most reliable"

This is one of the highest compliments ever paid to the level-headed common sense of Americans who cui off about two hundred million pounds of coffee when they found by actual experiment (in the majority of cases) that the subtle drug caffelne, in coffee, worked discomfort and varying forms of dis-

Some people haven't the characer to stop a habit when they know it is killing them, but it is easy to shift from coffee to Postum, for, when made according to directions, it comes to table a cup of heverage, seal brown color, which turns to rich golden brown when cream is added, and the taste is very like the milder grades of Old Gov't Java.

Postum is a veritable food-drink and highly neurishing, containing all the parts of wheat carefully preper cent of New Orleans molasses, and that is absolutely all that Postum is made of.

Thousands of visitors to the pure food factories see the ingredients and how prepared. Every nook and corner is open for every visitor to carefully inspect. Crowds come daily and seem to enjoy it. -

TELLS WHAT SAVED HER LIFE INVOICING OF STOCK ON HAND IN FARM WOOD LOT

By J. FRED BAKER,
Professor of Forestry, Michigan Agricultural College

"Taking Invoice of Farm Weodlet."

There are a great many farms during the last few years that have changed hands, and the purchaser paid a greater share of the price by cutting off the stock on hand in the woodlot. Saying or holding a farm crop is growing. There are many ways of ascertaining the volume of any given stand; one of the simplest may be described as follows: 🧵

Measure the diameter of the tree's breast (four and one-half feet from the ground), and record on a blank taily sheet under the proper headings.

In taking these measurements, it is best that two or three persons work together. One person carries the tally sheet, tacked on a light board or placed in a notebook. The other two measure the diameter of the trees at breast height, and cr'l out the measurements to the tall, man. For example, one white out has been measared and found to t. four unches in diameter. The tally man records it by making a dot under the tour-inch column and opposite the specieswhite oak If it had been two white oaks, he would have made two dots; four, four dots, five, four dots and a single bar; six, four dots and two bars, cto, until ten is reading, which completes the box with the two drag onals across it

The trees are measured by the use of calipers, which simply consist of a rule with one solid arm and an ad justable one, as seen in figure "1. The page between the two arms as lead on the tulo is the diameter of the tree in question. Home made calipote, which will answer i drly well, may be made by adjusting a movalde armoun a square. Any carpenfer will make in the stand at four and one half-feet from its base and record the result on your tally sheet, making two columns, one containing the different diameter classes and the other the number of trees of each diameter. Thus, ten sixwoodlot, it is well to know the amount sinch trees, twenty live eight inch trees and value of what you have on hand, etc. Multiply the number of trees in and the rate at which your forest each diameter class by the diameter class itseif; add the results and divide the total number of trees in seach stand. This will give you, approxi-mately, the diameter of the average tree in the stand, Mamely, 10x6 equals 60, 25x8 equals 200. Sum equals 260 Two hundred and sixty divided by 35 Two hundred and sixty divided by 35 (number of trees) would give the average free a diameter of 7.4 inches. Go into the woodlot and cut down a tree having this diameter. Ascertain the volume of this tree, and multiply the volume of this tree, and multiply the volume by the total number of trees and multiply the volume of the average tree, cut one tree into one-foot sections. Take the diameter at the center of cach section, ascertain the basal area, and multiply the length by wall of the tree. These sections thould be cat off to a limit of one lack. Nothing below one inth in diameter is considered.

We will review the fundamental steps in the process of correct can-ning and the reasons why these details are necessary. It has been demonstrated that there are three forms of life, bacteria, molds and yeasts, that cause the decay of canned goods. Of these yeasts are easily killed and as molds are more likely to attack fellies and preserves, we will leave them out of consideration. This places the burden upon bacteria. The seeds of bacteria are resistant to short boiling processes and will live and germinate even when no air is present. Two things, then, are absolutely necessary in canning vegetables, complete steri-lization and the exclusion of air from

Complete Sterilization.

The room in which the work is to be done should be as free from dust as possible, the clothing, hands and everything to be used should be thor oughly clean. The cans and tops should be placed top down in a kettle of cold water and boiled for about ten minutes. All utensils should be sterilized in the same way. The water to be used in filling the cans should be boiled for a half hour in a teakettle and then cooled. The cans must be taken one at a time from the boiling water just as they are to be the boiling water and placed directly on the cans. The rubbers must also be put into the boiling water for a few minutes. The boiling point is usually sufficient to kill the parent bacteria, but the seeds will live and war. minate after the vegetable has cooled and so the destructive work is only arrested, not completely checked by the cans, add one teaspoonful of salt, this process. Repeating Shotguns

USED IN THE U. S. ARMY. The U. S. Army authorities know a gun; that is why, when they decided to equip some troops with repeating shotguns, they selected the Winchester in preference to all other makes. The experts of the U.S. Ordnance Board also know a gun; that's why, after submitting a Winches-ter Repeating Shorgun to all sorts of tests, they pronounced it safe, sure, strong and simple. If you want a shotgun buy, the one whose strength and reliability led the U. S. Army authorities to so cot it and the U. S. Ordnance Board to endorse ni-tnat's the Winchester.
