THE POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK

SEEMINGLY NO NEED FOR ONE IN NORTHVILLE.

Village Already Supplied With Two Good Banks.

During the publisher's absence last week, an item got in these columns relative to the establishing of a postal savings bank in connection with the postoffice here, and closed by saying: "This will be a fine thing for Northville citizens," etc.

This statement on the news part of the item was unintentional and made under a misapprehension by one of the Record's reporters. The Record has always argued against the policy of postal savings banks. There was never a real demand for them and never will be except in small towns where no local banks are established. In Northville there are two flourishing banks that are as safe and sound as the Bank of England and money deposited in either of them is as safe as if placed with the U. S. Government.

Why should any local American citizen patronize a postal savings bank operated by the department down at Washington? In the first place local pride and home enterprise should make the local banks the preferable under even equal conditions. But in addition to that the two local banks pay the depositors three per cent interest compounded twice a year while the postal savings bank by the U. S. government only offers two per cent per year. There is no good reason why a depositor should lose one per cent to accommodate Uncle Sam. The banks have less red tape and complications and can be more accommodating and besides that when people want loans, they rest assured that the postal savings bank will not loan them a single penny while the local banks are always ready to extend such favors. Then patronize the home banks. They are just as safe and they will pay more interest and give better service, all things considered, and will take smaller and larger deposits than the postal banks.

SUDDEN DEATH OF W. B. PREDMORE

W. B. Predmore died at his home on Lady street Saturday afternoon, at the age of fifty-nine years. His death was very sudden, he having been up town a short time before it is that his death was due to injuries caused by a runaway accident about three years ago, resulting in apoplexy.

The deceased leaves a widow, one brother who lives in Mason and a sister residing in Idaho. He had been a resident of Northville for ten years and his many friends are sorry to learn of his death.

The funeral was held in the Methodist church Monday afternoon, Rev. R. M. Pierce officiating.

Notice.

WOULD-BE ROBBERS. HOLD UP JACKSON

H. F. Jackson, night watch at the Northville U. S. Club buttery, while on duty one night this week, it to be exact, Monday night, just before the government bell was striking twelve when in there walked two, statel, but, bold burglars, who like the heroes of the thrilling "Dead-wood" "Dick" tales, had their faces masked in black and from the peep holes therein could only be seen the dangerous looking eyes of the midnight intruders. From either hand extended a wicked looking revolver, which Mr. Jackson says, they placed close to his head and demanded his "money or his life."

After going through all his pockets and finding less than thirty cents they made a hurried departure, leaving only with Jackson a warning that his head would be blown off if he left his post of duty inside of thirty minutes.

When they had gone Jackson made a hike toward the village after the "hold-uppers" but did not succeed in finding them.

Trade at Home.

The building up of a community depends to a large extent upon the successful establishment and patronage of stores and tradespeople to supply the residents with the conveniences which have now become an indispensable part of modern life. By supporting the local stores, those who have invested in homes enhance the value of their own properties by advancing general prosperity. The shortsighted policy of spending money with the big advertising concerns which do not contribute an iota to the taxes of the town or city is neither wise from a general or personal economic point. As a rule things are often bought at a sale which are not actually needed and therefore would be dear under any circumstance. The home store as a rule gives prompt service, and, when necessary, convenient credit-factors which more than offsets an occasional bargain secured at the cost of a trip to a city and added expenses, which more than offsets the difference of cost. A prosperous mercantile community is one of the healthiest factors in a city or town. Help to build in your own vicinity.

Card of Thanks

We sincerely thank our friends for their great kindness in our time of sorrow, for neighborly assistance, the many lovely flowers, the sympathy, and Mr. Waltz for his beautiful and comforting music. MRS. MARY PREDMORE, AND FAMILY.

TO NULLIFY ALASKA COAL CLAIMS

GOVERNMENT MAY ALSO PROCEED AGAINST CLAIMANTS UNDER CRIMINAL STATUTES.

ATTORNEYS ARE READY FOR LEGAL BATTLE.

Secretary Fisher Trying to End Tie up That Keeps Fuel in Ground—Mar Arrange to Lease Land.

Repudiation of all Alaskan coal and land claims is said by claimants to be the plan of Secretary Fisher, of the department of the interior.

Fraud in making entries, violation of existing laws and illegal associations, it is declared, will be made the basis on which the government will proceed. And the $500,000 already in the hands of the government, as deposits of the coal land claims, will be declared forfeit because of illegal proceedings.

Furthermore, legal proceedings are said to be planned against the various claimants on the ground that they have made themselves criminally liable. The only hope the claimants have is that they may be permitted, under Secretary Fisher's plan, to lease the lands they have filed claims on.

CUTS HEADS OFF TWO.

Italian Slays Wife and Lover, With Hand Ax.

Tormented by the mental picture of his headless wife and her paramour, whom he slew Saturday, Pasquale Marchese, 27 years old, a merchant of Kenosha, Wis., Sunday went to a priest and confessed the double crime, which had theretofore not been discovered. He was turned over to the police, who are closely guarding him for fear of mob violence.

According to Marchese, he went home Saturday and found his wife Roxana, and his cousin and namesake, the younger Marchese, who was not of age, had been a favorite of the husband and the cousin drove him mad, he said. Without allowing his presence to become known, Marchese went to the woodshed, picked up a hand ax, crept to the room and chopped off the heads of the two.

In the darkness of the church basement, he said he hid the bodies of his wife and saw how the forms floated in the darkness.

As the morning of the morning he came into his room from the basement, he said he found the bodies of his wife and the younger Marchese, who was not of age, had been a favorite of the husband and the cousin drove him mad, he said. Without allowing his presence to become known, Marchese went to the woodshed, picked up a hand ax, crept to the room and chopped off the heads of the two.

Decrease in Births and Deaths. The monthly mortality report is said by the secretary of state shows that in the month of November there was a decrease of 92 deaths as compared with the preceding month, while the number of births decreased 223.

There were 1,076 deaths in the state during October, due to influenza, paratyphoid and the same number from typhoid.

As there were 237 deaths of infants under one year of age; 164 deaths of children aged 1 to 4 years; 1,076 deaths of children aged 5 years and over. A slight decrease is noted in the number of deaths of infants and children, as compared with September, while a slight increase is shown in the number of deaths of elderly persons.

Important causes of death were as follows: Tuberculosis of lungs, 147; other forms of tuberculosis, 32; typhoid fever, 61; diphtheria and croup, 61; scarlet fever, 12; measles, 3; whooping cough, 11; pneumonia, broncho-pneumonia, 130; diarrhoea, enteritis, under 2 years, 143; meningitis, 37; influenza, 173; violence, 173.

Cave-In Kills Two.

Two miners lost their lives and a third barely escaped the same fate when a cave-in occurred in the Yale mine near Bessemer. Stanley Curran and Charles Donli were caught under the falling rock and entombed alive. After several hours' hard digging the two men were reached. Curran was dead when taken out. Donli was still alive but terribly crushed. He died later. It is claimed the mine was declared unsafe a long time ago and the authorities will make an investigation.

Cornelius Seociesky, 23, an inmate of the Michigan State Hospital for Criminal Insane, at Ionia, escaped. He was employed in the boiler room as a truss.

The Anti-Saloon forces of Oakland county met in Pontiac to talk over plans for the coming fight to be waged in that county against the saloons. Committees were appointed to circulate petitions, and over $1,100 was raised to push the fight.

BEATTIE EXECUTED

Prisoner Walks to Death Chair With Firm Steps.

Henry Clay Beattie, Jr. was electrocuted in the state penitentiary at Richmond, Va., Friday at 7:23 a. m. One minute after the first shock he was pronounced dead.

He went to the death chair unshaken, and, although entreated by his spiritual adviser to confess to killing his wife last July, smiled in silent. He did not acknowledge his guilt.

There was no delay in preparing for the end. Beattie took his place, the prison surgeon and the electrician adjusted the straps, a half dozen clamps were quickly thrown into place, and snapped. The cap, resembling a leather football head-harness, was adjusted and the men stepped back.

The warden raised his hand. Instantly Beattie's body stiffened with such violence that the straps creaked as though they were cast-iron. In the hands of death and then that which once had been Henry Clay Beattie, Jr. relaxed.

One minute after the current was applied Beattie was dead.

It was announced in Richmond that the first confession of Henry Clay Beattie was made Nov. 9 to his ministers, Rev. Messrs. Fox and Dennis, but not reduced to writing until the day before his execution.

220 WOMEN ARRESTED.

London Police Make Wholesale Arrests of Suffragettes.

The militant section of the suffragettes have made good their promise to resume their old tactics. They were arrested last week, and between 8 and 11 o'clock, Tuesday, 220 marchers to the female cause were marched by Lily London, "bobbies" to various police stations in the neighborhood of the house of commons.

The suffragettes, unable to approach in force could not make a very imposing show. The usual method of securing arrest was for two or three to run up behind a solid line of bobbies, who would gently push them back into the crowd. If the course of action was persisted in often enough it would secure an arrest. Three policemen would be brought out from the reserves and they would take the suffragette to the police station, a mounted policeman making way for them through the crowd. In this manner 223 suffragettes, including three men, were taken to the police stations.

CHINESE REBELS CAPTURE NANKIN

FORCE ENTRANCE AFTER SILENCING BATTERIES OF THE IMPERIALISTS.

REBELS LOST 300 MEN AND THE IMPERIALISTS 2,000.

Both the Land and Sea Batteries Concentrated Their Fire—Warships Did Great Havoc With Heavy Guns.

Storming the gates under cover of a fierce bombardment from their artillery, the rebel force which has been besieging Nankin for a fortnight gained entrance to the city and, it is reported, the rebels are in full possession. The battle was one of the fiercest of the revolt, the rebels losing about 300 men while the imperialists' casualties were placed at 2,000.

Rebel artillery on Tiger hill silenced the batteries of Lion and Purple hills, which were pouring a heavy fire into the ranks of the forces advancing at the Tah Chang Men gate. With this entrance to the city captured, the rebels swung their guns against Pei Che Kao fortress.

Warships Work Havoc. Both the land and sea batteries concentrated their fire on this work, the warships doing great havoc with the heavier guns.

The heaviest firing was about the Mingtombs gates. Four thousand rebel soldiers with a battery of 12 3-inch guns were there. The rebel artillery was opposed by the imperialists with eight 6-inch guns and the guns on Purple hill. Despite the fact that the government guns outnumbered those of the anti-Manchu forces, the rebel aim was so superior that the Manchua battery was soon out of commission.

It is reported that desperate fighting has taken place between the revolutionists and bandits in Hsai-Yuan, Anwei province, and that a thousand robbers were killed.

At Wuchow the revolutionary soldiers are avenging the recent massacre. They have already beheaded 50 prisoners, some of them the sons of aristocrats. Afterwards they held an orgy, cutting off the heads of victims which they roasted and ate.

Some of the missionaries from upriver stations have sought refuge at Hong Kong.

Companies of troops patrolled the streets of Hong Kong and Kowloon on Sunday with fixed bayonets. This was done with a view to preventing the recurrence of recent disturbances. Some shooting and stone throwing occurred and 12 persons were injured.

Yuan Fails as Chinese Leader. Premier Yuan Shi Kai's position is becoming more intolerable daily. Neither Manchus nor Chinese trust him and the Manchus are becoming more suspicious all the time.

The moderates do not hesitate to say that if Yuan had remained at Chang Te Fu the court would now be at Jehol and the rebellion ended. Many Chinese believe that while Yuan is reassuring foreigners with a view to obtaining a loan and pacifying measures, he is in reality intent upon crushing the rebellion with force.

The continued fighting at Hankow and vicinity of Nanking is taken as lending color to this belief. The imperialists after an attack upon Hankow that lasted for 36 hours were repulsed and driven back across the Han river with great loss.

White-Hanged for Killing Negro.

For the murder of a negro woman and her daughter near Kingsland, Ga., J. A. O'Berry, a white man, has been hanged in St. Marys, Ga. This, it is believed, is the first time in the history of the state that a white man has been executed for killing a negro.

The Muskegon Traction & Lighting Company and the Grand Rapids & Muskegon Power Company are in a fight to see which shall furnish the gas for the city. Saturday the Grand Rapids & Muskegon Company closed a deal with the city whereby they are to furnish gas for much less than the other company. Monday the Muskegon company cut their price for gas from $1.20 to $1 per thousand.

FISCAL ESTIMATES IN

President Will Favor Government Economy in His Message.

Estimates of the sums to run the government machine for the fiscal year, 1913, have been submitted to Secretary of the Treasury MacVeigh, to be placed in the hands of President Taft.

The president expects to devote some space in his message to government economy, and several months ago gave instructions to department heads to prepare this year's estimates as much as possible. Mr. Taft's message is expected to be complete Monday, and final corrections will be made on it at Tuesday's cabinet meeting.

Happy Results

Have made many Northville Residents Enthusiastic.

No wonder scores of Northville citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Northville by Doan's Kidney Pills.

A. M. Piper, Center St., Northville, Mich., says: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. I had occasion to use this remedy about a year ago when I was suffering from a severe attack of kidney trouble."

My back was so lame that I could hardly get around and it took down for a while, it was almost impossible for me to get up. When I stooped or lifted, sharp pains darted through me. The kidney secretions were highly colored, contained sediment and were painful in passage. The contents of three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Murdoch Bros' Drug Store completely cured me and I have been in good health since. I can certainly give this excellent preparation a strong endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Centenary Grave Deed.

Asken was the bravest deed he had ever seen. Lord Roberts said the centenary of the battle of Marston was on his way to be the last of the world. A little soldier, a Puritan, a Mohammedan, seeing the difficulty and tried to open the door which barred their way. When he tried that he drew the bolt one of his hands was cut off by one of the enemy; then he managed to unlatch the bolt with his other hand which was subsequently nearly severed from the wrist.

GUARANTY OF HIS SILENCE

Presence of Masterful Wife in Church Stopped Objectionable Noise Man Thought Was Singing.

Unexpectedly a city pastor who encouraged congregational singing gained a new parishioner. Keen though his delight in hearing his people sing, there was one member of his flock whose endeavors he never encouraged. But the man sang without encouragement much to the discomfort of pewholders anywhere near him, who claimed that his loud, unmusical voice threw them out of time and tune.

Repeated complaints convinced the minister that somebody would have to assume the responsibility of silencing the ambitious singer. He decided that the man's wife was best fitted for the job. Owing to a difference in religious views husband and wife attended different churches, but the minister knew her, so he called and explained his predicament. She was genuinely surprised.

"Do you mean to say she sings?" she said.

"Tries to," amended the pastor.

She thought a minute. "I shall have to come there to church," she said.

"I shall be glad to see you," said the minister, "but what effect will that have on your husband's singing?"

"The look she gave him was more significant than words, and they meant a good deal."

"John will never open his mouth when I am around," she said.

And John never has.

For Those Who Hear Not.

The halibut had fairly split his throat shouting directions to deaf persons who had called to see Mr. Schwartz. Mr. Schwartz lived in the fourth floor rear, right-hand apartment, through the long hall and up the back stairs. It took a good deal of shouting to make some folks understand that.

"Never saw so many deaf people in my life," said the boy. "What on earth are they all running up to Schwartz's for?"

"Mr. Schwartz has advertised a deaf man's phonograph for sale," said a neighbor. "He is very hard of hearing. The phonograph was made especially for him. It has an unusually loud tone. Nobody but the hard of hearing can hear with such entertainment." Mr. Schwartz, to save trouble, is advertised for a deaf purchaser.

Her Mind Relieved.

"Charles, dear," said young Mrs. Jenkins "what is a jackpot?"

"Why—er—a jackpot is a general contribution for purposes of charitable donation."

"Oh! Do you know I was afraid it had something to do with the wickedness of piffles?"

His Criticism.

An old man stood on the street corner in Cherryvale when the trolley stopped and let off a woman passenger. She had on a linen dress, a Panama hat, champagne-colored hose and strapped pumps. "Gosh!" exclaimed the old man. "I'd spend less money on my bonnet and buy some socks."—Cherryvale (Kan.) Journal.

Can You Ask More?

Your Money Back for the Asking. You Promise Nothing.

We are so confident that we can furnish relief for indigestion and dyspepsia that we promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to every one who uses it according to directions who is not perfectly satisfied with the results. We exact no promises and put no one under any obligation whatever. Surely nothing could be fairer. We are located right here where you live, and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one who is troubled with indigestion or dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. If they don't please you, tell us and we will quickly return your money. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowels, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. MY LADY OF THE NORTH

The Love Story of a Gray Jacket

SYNOPSIS.

The story is set in a Confederate camp at a critical stage of the Civil War. Gen. Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important message to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sgt. Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. They get within the lines of the enemy and in the darkness Wayne is taken for a Federal officer and a young lady on horseback is given in his charge. She is a northern girl and attempts to escape. One of the horses succumbs and Craig, who goes through with the dispatch, while Wayne and My Lady of the North are left alone. They seek shelter in a hut and entering it in the dark a burst of light strikes Wayne. The girl shoots the brute just in time. The owner of the hut, Jed Bunker, and his wife appear and soon a party of horsemen approach. They are led by a man claiming to be Red Lowrie, but who proves to be Maj. Brennan, a Federal officer, whom the Union girl recognizes. He orders the arrest of Wayne as a spy and he is brought before Sheridan, who threatens him with death unless he reveals the secret message. Wayne, who is Edith Brennan to be the wife of Maj. Brennan, is rescued by Jed Bunker, who starts to reach Gen. Lee while Wayne in disguise penetrates to the ball room beneath which he had been imprisoned.

For a moment, as I responded to the hearty cordiality of his welcome, I was enabled to take my first glance at the ballroom, and found it to my unaccustomed soldier eyes an inspiring spectacle. The room was magnificently large, a surprising apartment, indeed, even in so superb a Southern home as this had evidently been and its proportions were magnified by numerous mirrors extending from floor to ceiling, causing the more distant dancers to appear circling in space. Brilliantly illuminated by means of hanging chandeliers that oscillated slightly to the merry feet; decorated lavishly everywhere with festooned flags and tastefully arranged munitions of war; gay with the dress uniforms of the men and the handsome gowns of the women it composed a scene so different from any I had looked upon in years as to hold me fascinated. The constant clatter of toasters, the merry laughter, the flashing of bright eyes, and the gleam of snowy shoulders, the good humored repartees caught as the various couples circled swiftly past the quick, musical gliding of flying feet over the waxen floor, the continuous whirl of the intoxicating waltz and over all the inspiring strains of Strauss, caused my heart to bound and brought with it an insatiable desire to participate.

Yet gazing, entranced, upon the animated scene, and feeling deeply the intoxication of the moment, my eyes were eagerly searching that happy throng for sight of one fair woman's face. Strange as it must seem to others, in spite of the fact that to meet her might mean betrayal and death, my heart even now in the destruction of an army—in my weakness I secretly longed for just such a happening, felt, indeed, that I must at once see her, have speech with her, before I went forth alone into the manifold dangers of the night. It was foolishness, insanity in very truth; yet such was the secret yearning of my heart. If I could only once know from her own truthful lips that she already belonged to another, I could, I believe, tear her image from my memory; but while I yet doubted (and in spite of all I had heard I doubted still), no desperate case should ever prevent my seeking her with all the mad ardor of love, no faintness of heart should intervene between us. That she was present I knew from those chance words overheard in the chimney, and my one deep hope ever since I donned that Federal uniform and ventured down the stairs (a hope most oddly mingled with dread) was that we might in some manner be brought together. I was yet vainly seeking a glimpse of her among the many who circled past, when I was suddenly recalled to the extreme delicacy of my situation by the deep voice of the Major asking me a direct question:

"Do you ever dance, Colonel?"

Exactly what I may have replied I know not, but it was evidently translated as an affirmative, for in another moment I was being piloted down the side of the long room, while he gossiped in my rather inattentive ear.

"As you have doubtless remarked, Colonel, we are extremely fortunate in our ladies to-night. By Jove, they would grace an inauguration ball at Washington. So many officers' wives have joined us lately, supposing we would make permanent camp here, and besides there are more loyal families in this neighborhood than we find usually. At least, their loyalty is quite apparent while we remain. Then the General Hospital nurses are not especially busy,—no battle lately, you know,—and there are some deuced pretty girls among them. Ball-room looks nice, don't you think?"

"Extremely well, the decorations are in most excellent taste."

"Entirely the work of the staff. Great pity so many were compelled to be absent, but a soldier can never tell. Here upon special duty, Colonel?"

"I brought despatches from the President to General Sheridan?"

"Wish you might remain with us permanently. Your command, I believe, is not connected with our Eastern army?"

"No, with Thomas in the Cumberland." "Ah, yes," said some very pretty fighting out there. I understand—oh, pardon me, Miss Minor, permit me to present to you Colonel Curran, of General Halleck's staff. The Colonel, I believe, is as able a dancer as he is a soldier, and no higher compliment to his abilities could possibly be paid. Miss Minor, Colonel, is a native Virginian, who is present under protest, hoping doubtless to capture some young officer, and thus weaken the enemy."

I bowed pleasantly to the bright-eyed young woman facing me, and not sorry to escape the Major's inquisitiveness, at once begged for the remainder of the waltz. The request was laughingly granted, and in another moment we were threading our way amid the numerous couples upon the floor. She proved so delightful a dancer that I simply yielded myself up to full enjoyment of the measure, and conversation lapsed, until a sudden cessation of the music left us stranded so close to the fireplace that the very sight of it brought a vivid realization of my perilous position. If it had not, my companion's chance remark, most assuredly would.

"How easily you waltz!" she said enthusiastically, her sparkling eyes and flushed cheeks testifying to her keen enjoyment. "So many find me difficult to keep step with that I have become fearful of venturing upon the floor with a stranger. However, I shall always be glad to give you a character to any of my friends."

"I sincerely thank you," I returned in the same spirit, "and I can certainly return the compliment most heartily. It is so long since I was privileged to dance with a lady that I confess to having felt decidedly awkward at the start, but your step proved so accommodating that I became at once at home, and enjoyed the waltz immensely. I fall to disagree any seats in the room, or I should endeavor to find one vacant for you."

"Oh I am not in the least tired." She was in luck at me with so deep an expression of interest in her eyes that I didn't wonder at it.

"Did I understand rightly," she asked, playing idly with her fan, "that Major Monroon introduced you to me as Colonel Curran of General Halleck's staff?"

What the dance am I up against now? I thought, and my heart beat quickly. Yet retreat was impossible, and I answered with assumed carelessness:

"I am, most assuredly, Colonel Curran."

"From Ohio?"

"This was certainly coming after me with a vengeance, and I stole one quick glance at the girl's face. It was devoid of suspicion, merely evincing a polite interest."

"I have the honor of commanding the Sixth Artillery Regiment from that State."

You must pardon me, Colonel, for my seeming inquisitiveness," and her eyes sparkled with demure mischief. Yet I cannot quite understand, I was at school in Connecticut with a Miss Curran whose father was an officer of artillery from Ohio, and, naturally, I at once thought of her when the Major pronounced your name; yet it certainly cannot be you—you are altogether too young, for Myrtle must be eighteen."

I laughed, decidedly told her from what I feared might prove a most awkward situation.

"Well, yes, Miss Minor, I am, indeed, somewhat youthful to be Myrtle's father," I said at a venture, "but I might serve as her brother, you know, and not stretch the point of age over-much."

She clasped her hands on my arm with a gesture of delight.

"Oh, I am so glad; I knew Myrtle had a brother, but never heard he also was in the army. Did you know, Colonel, she was intending to come down here with me when I returned South, at the close of our school year, but from some cause was disappointed. How delighted she would have been to meet you! I shall certainly write and tell her what a splendidly romantic time we had together. You look so much like Myrtle I wonder I failed to recognize you at once."

She was rattling on without affording me the slightest opportunity to slip in a word explanatory, when her glance chanced to fall upon some one who was approaching us through the throng.

"Oh, by the way, Colonel, there is another of Myrtle's old schoolmates present to-night—a most intimate friend, indeed, who would never forgive me if I permitted you to go without meeting her."

She drew me back hastily. "Edith," she said, touching the sleeve of a young woman, who was slowly passing, "Edith, wait just a moment, dear, this is Colonel Curran—Myrtle Curran's brother, you know, Colonel, Curran's Brennan."

CHAPTER XVI.

The Woman I Loved.

The crucial moment had arrived, and I think my heart actually stopped beating as I stood gazing helplessly into her face. I saw her eyes open wide in astonished recognition, and then a deep flush swept over throat and cheek. For the instant I believed she would not speak, or that she would give way to her excitement and betray everything. I durst give no signal of warning for there existed no tie between us to warrant my expecting any consideration from her. It was an instant so tense that her silence seemed like a blow. Yet it was only an instant. Then her eyes smiled into mine most frankly, and her hand was extended.

"I am more than delighted to meet you, Colonel Curran," she said calmly, although, I could feel her lips tremble to the words, while the fingers I held were like ice. "Myrtle was one of my dearest friends, and she chanced to be in my mind even as we met."

"I Am, Most Assuredly, Colonel Curran."

That was why," she added, turning toward Miss Minor, as though she felt her momentary agitation had not passed unobserved. "I was so surprised when you first presented Colonel Curran."

"I confess to having felt strangely myself," returned the other, archly. "Although I believe I concealed my feelings far better than you did, Edith. Really, I thought you were going to faint. It must be that Colonel Curran exercises some strange occult influence over the weaker sex. Perhaps he is the seventh son of a seventh son; are you, Colonel? However, dear, I am safe for the present from his mysterious spell, and you will be compelled to face the danger alone, as here comes Lieutenant Hamersmith to claim the dance I've promised him."

Before Mrs. Brennan could interfere, the laughing girl had placed her hand on the Lieutenant's blue sleeve, and with a mocking good-bye flung backward over her shoulder, vanished in the crowd, leaving us standing there alone.

The lady waited in much apparent indifference, gently tapping the floor with her neatly shod foot.

"Would you be exceedingly angry if I were to ask you to dance?" I questioned, stealing surreptitiously a glance at her proudly averted face.

"Angry? Most assuredly not," in apparent surprise. "Yet I trust you will not ask me. I have been upon the floor only once to-night. I am not at all in the mood."

"If there were chairs here I should venture to ask even a greater favor—that you would consent to sit out this set with me."

She turned slightly, lifted her eyes inquiringly to mine, and her face lightened.

"No doubt we might discover seats without difficulty in the anteroom," she answered, indicating the direction by a glance. "There do not appear to be many 'sitters' at this ball, and the few who do are not crowded."

The apartment contained, as she prophesied, but few occupants; and I conducted her to the farther end of it, where we found a comfortable divan and no troublesome neighbors. As I glanced at her now, I marked a distinct change in her face. The old indifference, so well assumed while we were in the presence of others, had utterly vanished as by magic, and she sat looking at me in anxious yet impetuous questioning.

"Captain Wayne," she exclaimed, her eyes never once leaving my face, "what does this mean? This masquerade? This wearing of the Federal uniform? This taking of another's name? This being here at all?"

"If I should say that I came hoping to see you again," I answered, scarce knowing how best to proceed or how far to put confidence in her, "what would you think?"

"If that is true, that you were extremely foolish to take such a risk for so small a reward," she returned calmly. "Nor, under these circumstances, would I remain here so much as a moment to encourage you. But it is not true. This is no light act; your very life must lie in the balance, or you could never assume such risk."

"I would trust you gladly, with my life or my honor," I replied soberly. "If I had less faith in you I should not be here now. I understand that I am condemned to be shot as a spy at daybreak."

"Shoot? On what authority? Who told you?"

"On the order of General Sheridan. My informant was Lieutenant Catton, of his staff."

"Shoot? As a spy? Why, it surely cannot be! Frank said—Captain Wayne, believe me, I knew absolutely nothing of all this. Do you think I should ever have resided if I had dreamed that you were held under so false a charge? I promised you I would see General Sheridan on your behalf. Frank—she bit her lip impatiently, and those of his staff who would surely recognize you were expected back before this, and may appear at any moment—yet how can you get away? How is it possible for me to assist you?"

"There was an eager anxiety in her face that pierced me. Like most lovers I chose to give it a wrong interpretation."

"You are anxious to be rid of me?" I asked, ashamed of the words even as I uttered them.

"That remark is unworthy of you," and she arose to her feet almost haughtily. "My sole thought in this is the terrible risk you incur in remaining here."

"Your interest then is personal to me, may I believe?"

"I am a loyal woman," proudly, "and would do nothing whatever to imperil the cause of my country; but your condemnation is unjust, and I am, in a measure, responsible for it. I assist you, Captain Wayne, for your own sake, and in response to my individual sense of honor."

"Have you formulated any plan?" she asked quickly, and her rising color made me feel that she had deciphered my struggle in my eyes.

"Only to walk out under protection of this uniform, and when once safe, in the open to trust that same good fortune which has thus far befriended me."

She shook her head doubtfully, and stood a moment in silence, looking thoughtfully at the moving figures in the room beyond.

"I fear it cannot be done without arousing suspicion," she said at last, slowly. "I chance to know there are unusual precautions being taken to-night, and the entire camp is doubly patrolled. Even this house has a cordon of guards about it, but for what reason I have not learned. No," she spoke decisively, "there is no other way. Captain Wayne, I am going to try to save you tonight, but in doing so I must trust my reputation in your keeping."

"I will protect it with my life," I vowed in this, she interrupted, "and I know you to be a gentleman, or I should never attempt to carry out the only means of escape which seems at all feasible. Discovery would place me in an extremely embarrassing position, and I must rely upon you to protect me from such a possibility."

"I beg you," I began, "do not compromise yourself in any way for my sake."

"But I am myself already deeply involved in this, she interrupted, "and I could retain no peace of mind were I to do otherwise. Now listen. Make your way back to the ballroom, and in fifteen minutes from now be engaged in conversation with General Carlton near the main entrance. I shall join you there, and you will take your cue from me. You understand?"

"Perfectly, but—"

"There is no 'but,' Captain Wayne, only do not fail me."

Our eyes met for an instant, what she read in mine God knows—in hers was determination, with a daring strange to woman. The next moment she had vanished through a side door, and I was alone.

CHAPTER XVII

Through the Carr of the Enemy.

A glance at my watch told me it was already within a few moments of midnight. There was, however, no diminution in the activities, and I waited in silence until I heard the sentries calling the hour, and then pressed my way back into the noisy, crowded ballroom.

It was stopped twice by well meaning officers whom I had met earlier in the evening, but breaking away from them after the exchange of a sentence or two, I urged my course as directly as possible toward where the spectacled brigadier yet held his post as master of ceremonies.

We had been conversing pleasantly for several minutes when Mrs. Brennan appeared. Standing so as to face the stairs, I saw her first coming down, and noted that she wore a hat, and had a light walking-cloak thrown over her shoulders. My heart beat faster as I realized for the first time that she intended to be my companion.

"Oh, General, I am exceedingly glad to find you yet here," she exclaimed as she came up, and extended a neatly gloved hand to him. "I have a favor to ask which I am told you alone have the authority to grant."

He bowed gallantly.

"I am very sure, he returned smilingly, 'that Mrs. Brennan will never request anything which I would not gladly yield.'"

She flashed her eyes brightly into his face.

"Most assuredly not. The fact is, General, Colonel Curran, with whom I see you are already acquainted, was to pass the night at the Major's quarters, and as he has not yet returned, the duty has naturally devolved upon me to see our guest safely deposited. We are at the Mitchell House, you remember, which is beyond the main lines, and while, of course, I have been furnished with a pass," she held up the paper for his inspection, "and have been also instructed as to the countersign, I fear this will scarcely suffice for the safe passage of the Colonel."

The General laughed good-humoredly, evidently pleased with her assumption of military knowledge.

BABY'S ECZEMA AND BOILS

"My son was about three weeks old when I noticed a breaking out on his cheeks, from which a watery substance oozed. A short time after his arms, shoulders and back broke out also, and in a few days became a solid scab. I became alarmed, and called our family physician who at once pronounced the disease eczema. The little fellow was under treatment for about three months. By the end of that time, he seemed no better. I became discouraged. I dropped the doctor's treatment, and commenced the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a few days noticed a marked change. The eruption on his cheeks was almost healed, and his shoulders, arms and breast were decidedly better. When he was about seven months old, all trace of the eczema was gone."

"During his teething period, his head and face were broken out in boils which I cured with Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Surely he must have been a great sufferer. During the time of teething and from the time I dropped the doctor's treatment, I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, nothing else, and when two years old he was the picture of health. His complexion was soft and beautiful, and his head a mass of silky curls. I had been afraid that he would never be well, and I feel that I owe a great deal to the 'Cuticura Remedies'."

(Signed) Mrs. Mary W. Ramsey, 224 E. Jackson St., Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 24, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 5 L, Boston.

The GENEVIEVES I KNOW

(Also their JAMES)

BY HELEN HELP

The Genevieve Who Was Just Dimples

Genevieve was the dearest little blue-eyed beauty that you ever saw. She was sweet enough to give a man spasms of joy, just to look at her. Her curls were as twinkling beautiful as an average beauty's eyes, and her dear little hands clung to a man's arm like—oh well, just like dear little dimpled hands. You can't beat that, any way.

Her smile was a beam of sunshine, and as for her figure, James felt for her with the maddest enthusiasm, and it being a slack season in proposals and thus James having clear, grey eyes and a set, determined chin, as well as a good salary, he married Genevieve. And she lived happy ever after.

James was awfully happy, too, on his honeymoon. He saw life through a rosy mist. He was sure—sure—that heaven can come to earth, and even more sure that he settled down into the coziest corner of the sky-parlor. And he put Genevieve and her dimples on a pedestal and worshiped them.

James had prepared out of his salary, which was good, but not princely, a home for his bride, and thither they went when his leave of absence was over. He was paying for the house on installments, and it was charmingly furnished with furniture, not purchased on installments.

Genevieve flitted from room to room—there were eight rooms to it at about in—and "How perfectly sweet!" exclaimed Genevieve. "I think the reception room will be lovely for card parties."

"I am sure you will love the little bit of a library," whispered James. "The furniture here I had, myself, and though we haven't many books yet, it doesn't look so bare after all. I had a couple of really good etchings, too."

"Those brown, spotted things?" queried Genevieve. "Why, how perfectly awful! I thought from the way people raved over them that etchings were pretty! Well, never mind, I'll put up some Gibson girls and that'll help some. You don't really like them, James?"

"I Don't See What You Keep Those Old Things For."

Well, James did. But this was the home-coming of his bride and what on earth could etchings matter? Sweetheart would soon learn little things like that. So he said to himself with his lips down on sweet-heart's golden hair.

"Goodness, where on earth did you get so many books?" inquired that dimpled darling, who was all tangled up in James heartstrings. "It always makes me dizzy to try to read a book. Mamma said it didn't matter anyway. What were you saying? Get more books? I should say not! I did not think you were so extravagant, James!"

"The piano is lovely," she remarked later, "and we must get Kitty to come out and play for us. She knows all the latest rags. I always hated to go to practice. Kitty's simply great on music!"

James remembered Kitty. She was great. Even James gasped a bit.

"I think I will go upstairs and unpack," said Genevieve, slipping from James' arms as he was showing her the pictures of his own family—a perfectly nice family down in the country. The portrait of his mother was a very old portrait, taken shortly before her death. He had missed his mother. "I don't see what you keep those old things for," said his Genevieve.

There was a blank in James' heart for a minute—a perfect blank where he had dreamed—in those rosy, misty dreams of his—that his wife's sweet womanly sympathy and affection would be. "She is just a petted baby," said James hastily to himself. "She didn't think that's all."

Well we do not usually expect to measure delicacy of feeling by intellectual power. And yet, when you come to think of it, a very silly person is apt to be obtuse, too.

So Genevieve went upstairs to unpack her trousseau. When she was called down to dinner by the one maid she came in a pique and with a spot of dust on her nose.

The little home of James was in a nice suburb and all the nice neighbors came to call. Then Genevieve returned their calls and gave dear little card parties. Every week she gave them, which, when you come to think of it, is rather often. They played bridge, too.

It took real money, because Genevieve would have things nice. She said: "All that lovely cut-glass and silver go to waste? I should say not!" So James' money went to waste on caterers. For Genevieve knew nothing about housekeeping, and it made her dizzy to learn. It made James dizzy to look at the bills, but James had no dimples and his eyes were plain, gray, so what did it matter?

Then James took Genevieve on his knee one evening and explained to her about the bills. She listened meekly, and when he finished she murmured: "Oh, I forgot to tell you there's a love of awful bracelet coming out tomorrow—nobody here has anything like it. I'm so pleased about it." And the poor man found she had not even been listening much.

He was startled and he may have been a bit harsh. At least, he got up rather suddenly and said, in queer words. But Genevieve's dimples were in full play. She said: "Why, Jim, don't you want your wife to make a proper appearance?"

This happened several times and perhaps more. And Genevieve went to the matinee every week, too. White love notes to the matinee hero. Why, certainly not! She was a young matron, you perfectly horrid thing! The most she ever dreamed of writing was just a line to tell him how she appreciated him.

The rosy mists were shredding away and the pedestal was melting just like the merest clay. When baby Genevieve came the pedestal got firmer. But only for a little, little while. Then they had a nurse and Genevieve attended to her social duties as usual.

They gave up housekeeping years ago and are staying at a family hotel, where Genevieve is much admired. Genevieve the Lovers is also becoming, without the shadow of a doubt, the image of her charming mother and yet James doesn't seem pleased about it.

He is struggling along, rather, because his salary means about eat-up when he pays the hotel bills. He owns no property, of course. They sold their house when they moved to the hotel. It was mortgaged anyway.

Genevieve the Elder often says to her husband that if she had known how limited his salary would keep her she never would have married him. To her friends she admits that she might have done better, and states that she is going to see, at least, that Genevieve the Younger does not throw her self away.

To Genevieve the Younger she says in the presence of James, "I'm sure I do all I can for you socially, but your father never seems to appreciate the need for money. Though I'm sure that other men manage to make plenty to keep their families in comfort." And Genevieve the Younger—it is not fair to anything so lovely to call her merely "little Jenny"—Genevieve the Younger thinks, "Poor papa is getting old anyway. I do hope that when I marry—"

When Twentieth Century Began.

The twentieth century began on the first day of January, 1901. In common usage the first century means the years A. D. 1-100; the second century the years A. D. 101-200; and the nineteenth century the years A. D. 1801-1900. The fifth century before Christ was 500-401 B. C. A century begins with the beginning of the first day in its first year, and does not end until the close of the last in its hundredth year. This mode of reckoning is often confused with the common mode of stating the age of a person. A person born at the beginning of the Christian era would be called one year old during his second year, that is during the course of the year two; he would be called two during the years three, and forty during the year forty-one, etc.

The English Accent.

"The English like to find fault with our American accent," said Prof. Harry Thurston Peck, at a dinner in New York, "but now and then a story crops up that shows how far from faultless the English accent itself is. A Chicago millionaire, at a dance in Cadogan square during the recent London season, said to an elderly duchess: 'Duchess, may I have this dance?' 'I'm sorry,' the duchess answered, 'but I'm so tired I must rest. I am, in fact, danced out.' 'Oh, not darned stout,' said the Chicagoan politely, 'only pleasantly so.'"

The KITCHEN CABINET

TAKE your needle, my friend, and work at your pattern. It will come out a rose by and by. Life is like that—once sufficed at a time taken patiently, and the pattern will come out all right, like embroidery.

DISHES FOR INVALIDS.

The following are dishes liked by invalids and are refreshing and nourishing. The manner of serving even a glass of lemonade is most important in a sick room. Attractiveness counts for more here than any other quality.

Hot Lemonade.—Shave the rind from a lemon using only the thin outer rind, pour over it one and a half cups of boiling water and let steep while the juice is extracted from the lemon; add this to the water with two table-spoonfuls of sugar, strain and serve at once. If allowed to cool it makes a strong lemonade.

Quick Beef Tea.—Put a half pound of lean round steak through the meat chopper and then into frying pan, heat slowly to extract the juice; turn into a potato ricer and squeeze out all the juice. This extract will need to be diluted before being served. If heated care should be taken not to overcook the albumen. Add salt to make it palatable. This meat may be used for croquettes or any dish with high seasoning.

Bread Gruel.—Take a cup of dried bread crumbs, simmer in a pint of water until smooth. Rub through a strainer, season lightly with salt and serve either hot or cold. For variety the crumbs may be browned first or flavor with extract of beef, or reduce the water to one-half and fill the cup with cream or milk.

Spanish Cream.—Soak a half teaspoon of granulated gelatin in a cup of milk. After it is dissolved add a cup of sugar and a beaten egg yolk. Cook until the egg is thick, stirring constantly, add fifteen drops of vanilla and strain into a mold to cool.

Ice Cream.—Ball together five minutes a tablespoonful of sugar and two of water, add a cup of thin cream and a half teaspoonful of vanilla, mix well and pour into a pound baking powder can. Plunge into salt and ice in a large pail or bowl and open and beat well every five minutes. It will be frozen in fifteen minutes. For those suffering from gastric inflammation, beef tea and soups are often tolerated if frozen like ice cream.

APRIL indeed is the best time when the weather is just what you need. The weather is just what you need. The weather is just what you need.

HOT DISHES.

Here is a nice breakfast dish. In a skillet fry cut two slices of fat salt pork cut into cubes. In this brown a cup of bread cut in cubes, add an equal amount of cold cooked potatoes cut in dice, when brown add two eggs slightly beaten, beat slowly stirring until the egg is cooked. Season with salt and pepper and serve.

Mixed Meat on Toast.—Put any cold cooked meat through the grinder and into the saucepan with gravy or stock and seasonings to taste. Let simmer while making fresh toast. Butter the toast after moistening it with a little of the stock. Thicken the meat with cream and a little flour mixed to a smooth paste, cook until well done, then pour over the toast.

Luncheon Dish.—Fry the fat from six slices of good bacon, remove it from the pan; pour six thick slices of ripe tomatoes and fry them in the bacon fat; while they cook make six round slices of golden toast, and poach six eggs; put the toast on a hot platter and a slice of tomato and an egg, then a piece of cooked bacon; dust lightly with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Another which is a great favorite.—Prepare a white sauce as follows: A tablespoonful each of butter and flour. When the butter is bubbling hot add the flour and when mixed a cup of rich milk and seasonings to taste. When well cooked add a cup of finely grated cheese, drop in gently four eggs; as soon as the eggs are set remove them and place on a slice of toast, pour the sauce over it and serve at once.

A bean or potato soup is one of the most palatable dishes to serve on a cold night for supper. Oyster stew or cream of tomato soup are both prime favorites. A dish of hot well made cream or milk toast, seasoned with a sprinkling of grated cheese, is a dish that nearly everybody likes.

Professional Pride.

"What were the last words of the undertaker?" asks the friend of the departed.

"They were," says the sorrowing relative, "I wish that I could have charge of my own funeral."

"Just like him," comments the friend. "If he could have superintended the services he simply would have laid himself out on them."

LASSEES A MAD DOG WITH A CLOTHESLINE

Boy Scout Captures Animal Chased by Police and a Big Crowd.

New York.—Several hundred men and women on the Williamsburg plaza of the Williamsburg bridge had a terrifying experience when a big, yellow and white mongrel dog ran yelping and snapping into the crowd, followed by two policemen with revolvers who stopped every few feet, took aim and seemed about to fire. The crowd was uncertain which was the more dangerous, the dog or the armed cops chasing it. Three persons were bitten before the animal was killed.

The dog first appeared in the high-class neighborhood of Ross street and Bedford avenue, where it did a whirling dervish stunt, indicating that it might be mad or at least a keen sufferer from fleas or any one of a hundred fits neglected canines get. A man told the Chymic street police that if they wanted to save Williamsburg from an epidemic of hydrophobia they had better get on the job and corral the dangerous beast.

Lieutenant Lyman picked two of his best pistol shots, Policemen Geo. Bender and John Stantovitz. They chased their quarry to Ross street and Lee avenue. Soon 100 men were chasing the dog, the policeman trying hard to get a shot at the beast but not daring to fire for fear of hitting somebody.

The dog wound up in a doorway at 173 Division avenue. A crowd of war was held and while it was on four boys were approached. One of them had his mother's collared blouse into a lasso.

"Give me that rope, mount," said Policeman Bender.

"What for?" asked the boy, drawing back.

"I want to lasso that dog," said the cop.

"Want him lassoed, said," asked the scout, at once coiling his rope. Then before the astonished officer could say a word he skillfully whirled the line and dropped it neatly over the yelping dog.

The police finished the job.

KILLS BEAR ON LONELY TRAIL

Girl in Her Teens Has a Battle With Bruin and Comes Off Victorious.

Port Townsend, Wash.—On a lonely mountain trail in Clallam county, Miss Mary Schmitz, a girl in her teens, had a battle with a bear, in which she came out victorious. Miss Schmitz was employed at the Hotel Merrimere, and decided to visit her parents who lived 30 miles away.

She started out on the journey foot armed with a revolver, loaned by one of the guests. She had proceeded 15 miles when she sighted a bear in the trail coming toward her. She shouted, thinking that the animal would take to the bushes, but instead it continued to advance. She opened fire.

After several shots the bear left the trail, giving her the right of way. When she reached the place where the bear took to the bushes she found blood and on investigation she found the animal a few yards from the trail lying dead as a result of one of her shots.

Bucolic Music.—Little Willie, being a city boy, had never seen a cow. While on a visit to his grandmother he walked out across the fields with his cousin John. A cow was grazing there, and Willie's curiosity was greatly excited.

"Oh, Cousin John, what is that?" he asked.

"Why, that is only a cow," John replied.

"And what are those things on her head?"

"Horns," answered John.

Before they had gone far the cow moaned long and loud.

Willie was astonished. Looking back, he demanded in a very fever of interest:

"Which horn did she blow?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Wednesday Misadventure.

A Broadway actor got carried away by the spirit of the times and remained carried away for several days. He came to himself in his own room without knowing exactly how he got there. A friend sat beside him.

"Hello," he said, as he opened his eyes, "what day is this?"

"This," said his friend, "is Thursday."

The invalid thought it over a minute.

"What became of Wednesday?" he asked.—Saturday Evening Post.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better. But if you are thinking of the cure not the profit, there is nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.
