IRONS IN THE FIRE

JAMES SESSIONS DIED THURSDAY

One of the oldest of Northville citizens, James Sessions, one of Northville's oldest and best known citizens, died Thursday morning at his home in Main street. He had suffered long attacks of paralysis during the early part of the winter, and had been confined to his home since that time.

The deceased was born at Arlington, Berkshire, England, on Dec. 13, 1839. He went to New York state in 1866 and afterward moved to Michigan in 1885 where he has since resided.

In 1851 he was married to Jane L. Blauvelt, to whom he has three daughters, Mrs. William P. Sessions and John A. Sessions, deceased.

The aged couple celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary Sept. 23, 1911.

He was in the shoe business in Northville at one time, having since retired.

The funeral will be held from the home Saturday afternoon at 2:30 standard time. Rev. Wm. S. Jerome will officiate.

DEATH OF A FORMER NORTHVILLE TEACHER.

Word was received this week of the death of Miss Ellen F. Thompson on New Year day in Pasadena. There are many here who will remember her, especially those of her old time pupils, as she was the first principal of the Northville High school, known at that time as the Northville Union school.

She taught English and Latin in

DAVID TOLLS DIED FRIDAY

David Tolls died at his home on First avenue Friday morning at 10:30. The deceased was eighty-two years of age and had lived here nearly all his life. Having been in feeble health the past few years, death came as a welcome release. He leaves a widow and three children.

The funeral was held from the home Sunday afternoon at 2:30. J. Murdoch officiating.

GOOD ROADS FOR MICHIGAN

"Splendid Outlook for 1912" Says Commissioner Hines

The outlook for good roads in Michigan in 1912 is exceedingly bright, said County Road Commissioner Edward N. Hines recently. The total amount of tax levied for county road purposes for 1912 in the 37 counties now under the county road system is $1,270,000, besides proposed bond issues aggregating $1,500,000. Wayne County with $380,000 of the $1,270,000 will be the largest and then some. In case a favorable vote is secured in Washtenaw, Jackson, Calhoun, St. Joseph and Van Buren counties, it will mean the starting of the improvement of the old Chicago Road, or Michigan Avenue clear across the State to Chicago. In Wayne, Kalamazoo and Berrien are now under the county system and have done considerable work on the road. Wayne County will have her end of the road completed through her borders from the city hall in Detroit to the Washtenaw county line by next September.

GILT EDGE NEWS.

This is the weather for the ice man—and the coal man.

Miss Eva Bradley spent Saturday night and Sunday with La Villa Aquino at Farmington.

Miss Delia Gilmer, who has been ill the past month with pneumonia which later terminated in a complication of diseases, died at her home early Friday afternoon. Her death was sudden, as she was thought to be getting much better when a relapse occurred. She was sixteen years of age. Her parents live in the extreme sympathy of the entire community.

THE LOVE STORY OF A GRAY JACKET

By RANDALL PARISH

AUTHOR OF "WHEN WILDERNESS WAS KING"

Illustrations by Arthur T. Williamson

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. General Sherman's forces are in the distance, and the Confederates are in a desperate struggle. A young man, Wayne, is in the tent, and a woman, Celia, is also present. Wayne is a soldier, and Celia is a woman of the North. They are both in the hands of the Confederates. Wayne is a brave and noble man, and Celia is a beautiful and kind woman. They are both in love with each other. The story follows their adventures and the love that grows between them. It is a story of courage, sacrifice, and love.

closed down about us it proved to be an exceedingly black one, although the skies were clear. Sleep was an impossibility for me, as my mind was in constant turmoil. Ebers was lying next me upon the grass, solemnly puffing at his pipe, and I held my watch to the glow in his bowl in order to see the time. It was nearly midnight. "These fellows ought to be at it before this," I said to him. "If they intend to accomplish anything, tonight."

"I say, Cap," he said, jerking the words out to the music of his trot, and grasping his saddle pommel, desperately. "I sorter reckon as how they'll be some fun back there before long, 'less all signs fail."

"What is it, Sands?" I questioned breathlessly, as I came suddenly upon the little group.

"A fellow on horseback," was the answer. "He come up on us like a streak out of that black night, an' he'd a sure got away if Mason hadn't clutched him with his gun. I've got the cuss safe celled now."

what color of cloth we wear those outlaws are our common enemies, to be hunted down like wild beasts. I have seen specimens of their headstirrup cruelty that make my blood run cold to remember. The very thought of those who are now exposed falling into such hands is enough to create a shudder that would be preferable a thousand times to the most fearful men have you?"

"Seven fit for duty," I answered. "Will you ride forward, or go back with us?"

"I've must send word—and the gallant fellow's voice shook—"But God knows, Wayne, I want to go back. If we both live I am to marry Celia Minor."

"I understand," I said gravely. "Ebers, who is your best rider?"

"It 'os dot funny little fellow Glen, Captain."

"Glen, come here."

The trooper, a mere boy, with freckled face and great honest gray eyes, but wiry and tough as steel, pushed his way through the group and faced me.

"Glen," I said, "your Sergeant tells me you are the best rider in the troop. I am going to intrust you with the most important duty of all. The lives of every one of us and of four helpless women depend entirely upon your riding. You take two horses, kill both if necessary, but stop for nothing until your duty is done. You are to carry a note from me, and another from this gentleman, who is an officer in the Federal Army and believe them both to the commandant of the first military post you find. Insist upon reaching him in person. It makes no difference which army the post belongs to, for this is a matter of humanity. The Federal outpost at McMillan is the nearest to us; make for there. You understand?"

situation before us. My own knowledge of the environments of the minor house helped me greatly to appreciate the difficulties to be surmounted. He had succeeded in his escape by dodging among the negro cabins where the attacking line appeared weaker, but expressed the conviction that even this slight gap would be securely closed long before we reached there.

"Have they sufficient men, then, to cover thoroughly all four sides?" I asked.

"To the best of my judgment, there must be fully two hundred and fifty in the gang, and apparently they operate under strict military discipline. It is a revelation to me, Wayne, of the growing power of these desperate fellows. I knew they were becoming numerous and bold, but this surpasses anything I could imagine. More, they are being constantly recruited by new arrivals. A party of at least a dozen came in while I was hiding behind the stables. I heard them asking for the leader."

"What did they call him?"

"Lory, or Laurie, or something like that. They claimed to be deserters from Lee's army, but two or three of them wore our uniforms."

"It's Red Lowrie," I said gravely, more impressed than ever with the seriousness of the situation. "I heard of him two years ago—he killed a man in the Sixth North Carolina, and took to the hills. Since then he has developed into quite a leader for such a scoundrel and has proved himself a merciless and cunning man. You have no suggestion to offer as to how we had better attempt to get in?"

"He shook his head despondently.

"What station does Breunin intend?" I asked.

"The front of the house, the main point of attack has been there."

We could distinguish the sound of firing by this time, and its continuous volume convinced me that Canon's estimate of the number engaged was not greatly overdrawn. As we topped the summit of the hill a great burst of red fire leaped suddenly high into the sky.

"Great God, Wayne, we are too late," he cried sadly. "Those devils have fired the shot."

With fiercely throbbing heart I gazed down at the flames far below in the black valley.

"No," I said with eager relief. "It is the stable which is ablaze! See, the light falls full upon the white side of the house. Thank Heaven, we are not too late."

I could make out but little of him as the light shone, excepting that he wore a high coonskin cap and bore a long life.

"Stop fight that!" he called out hoarsely upon hearing us. "Who are you?"

"As he challenged, a dozen others sprang up from about the flame and, guns in hand, came toward us on a run.

"We was are doggoned tired o' soldierin' an' a gittin' duhlin' fer it," I said in the slow Southern drawl, "an' waster' jus' yer gang, perdition that's any show fer it."

"A right smart heap o' bunch, bin a pickin' o' em up ever since we left Charlotte," I returned bravely. "They be dandies ter fight, an' I reckon as how yer kin use 'em, can't ye?"

"Maybe, who did ye want ter see?"

"Wal, they sed as how a feller named Lowrie was a rummin' this yer gang, so it 's their way o' it, I reckon as how it's Lowrie we're after, yer kin Lowrie?"

"Naw."

The answer was so gruff and short, and the fellow hesitated so long in adding anything to it, I began to think it was all off.

"Wal, he consented to say at last, ungraciously, there's a blame pile o' ye him in later, an' I calculate ye got 'bout enough fer our business, bin I reckon as how Red will use ye some-what. Anyhow ye dis kin come long with me an' andron, but ye'll disover him 'bout ther ornestest man I ever see, an' ye'll see him again. He's plum mad, he is, fer sartin'."

He turned and strode off, without so much as giving us a backward glance, and with a hearty congratulatory kick to the mate, I and my company followed him. A hundred yards further he was passed through the fringe of trees and emerged into an open space from whence we could see plainly the great white house still illuminated by the flames which continued to consume the stables. Shots were flashing like fireflies out of the darkness on every side of us, the crack of firing powder scented the air, and I could distinguish the black forms of men being prone on the grass in some thing resembling a skirmish line.

"That feller that is Captain Wayne, o' My O' Regiment?"

"Ye him in later, an' I calculate ye got 'bout enough fer our business, bin I reckon as how Red will use ye some-what. Anyhow ye dis kin come long with me an' andron, but ye'll disover him 'bout ther ornestest man I ever see, an' ye'll see him again. He's plum mad, he is, fer sartin'."

"Who comes that? What body o' men is that?"

"It's another party o' deserters, as wants ter 'sine us," said the guide, sourly. "They's Johnnies from Lee's Army."

"Oh, they des, dey they? Who's ther boss o' this yer crowd?"

"I swung down from my seat on the mule's back and stood facing him as he advanced.

"We was laidt got no boss," I answered, but ther sooner tell in abind o' me 'cause I was astraddle o' this mule. Be you named Lowrie?"

"I reckon I'm Red Lowrie," I replied. "Spect, maybe, ye've heard o' me, an' if ye her, ye know ye've got ter step damn lively when I howl 'bout was ye in ther army?"

"Corporal."

The flames of the burning barn leaped suddenly upward, as if fed by some fresh combustion, and flung a brighter glare over the rough faces clustered about us. I saw Red Lowrie plainly enough now, as he peered eagerly forward to scan my face, a heavy-set, coarse-featured man, with prominent nose, and thick, matted red beard. He wore a wide-brimmed soft army hat, under which his eyes shone maliciously, and he grasped a long rifle in one big hairy hand. As I gazed at him curiously, some one hastily pushed a way through the group at his back, and the next instant a tall figure stood at his side. I recognized the newcomer at a single glance, and for the moment my heart fairly choked me—it was Craig.

"Lowrie," he said, pointing straight at me, "that's somethin' wrong yer; that feller that is Captain Wayne, o' my o' regiment."

Rhode Island's Small Vote.

Rhode Island says the Providence Journal, casts a smaller vote proportionately to its population, than is polled in any other northern state.

A Golf Story.

There's another story of a man who rang the bell at the gates of Paradise and asked Peter if he might go through.

"What were you on earth?" asked the saint.

"Well," was the response, "during the latter part of my life I didn't do much but play golf."

"Got a golf ball on you?"

"Yes; here's a 'Chauntler."

St. Peter took it, and threw it over his shoulder, where it rolled away.

For a minute or more he looked critically at the applicant, then shut the gate in his face and locked it.

"What's the game?" said the man.

"You are no real golfer," said St. Peter. "You don't even know the first rule of golf—to keep your eye on the ball and follow through."

IN AGONY WITH ITCHING

About four years ago I broke out with sores on my arms like boils. After two months they were all over my body, some coming and some going away. In about six months the boils quit, but my arms, neck and body broke out with an itching, burning rash. It would burn and itch, and come out in pimples like grains of wheat. I was in a terrible condition; I could not sleep or rest. Parts of my flesh were raw, and I could scarcely bear my clothes on. I could not lie in bed in any position and rest. In about a year, the sores extended down to my feet. Then I suffered agony with the burning itching sores. I could hardly walk and for a long time I could not put on socks.

All this time I was trying everything I could hear of, and had the skill of three doctors. They said it was eczema. I got no benefit from all this. I was nearly worn out and had given up in despair of ever being cured when I was advised by a friend to try Cuticura Remedies. I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, and used exactly as directed. I used the Cuticura Remedies constantly for four months, and nothing else, and was perfectly cured. It is now a year, and I have not had the least bit since. I am ready to praise the Cuticura Remedies at any time. (Signed) E. L. Cate, Exile, Ky., Nov. 19, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 22-page book will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

REMEMBER PISO'S for COUGHS & COLDS

"Is it Possible This is You?" He Cried Excitedly.

"Why didn't you tell me this before?" I questioned sternly. "How many were there and what did they look like?"

He scratched the back of his head thoughtfully, and answered with careful deliberation. "Durn it, I didn't see 'em till after you started, an' I reckon as how I took 'em all o' ter rade fer git this yer blame mule up ter what I had talk. That's quite a smart bunch, but they had some 'peck' out, an' I couldn't get close 'nough ter get 'em. Ditchy thought that was what enter two hundred o' 'em, but I just can't know. They wasn't dressed like soldiers of either army, an' I reckon they're out o' ther hills."

I glanced at my little band of men, scarcely knowing what decision it might be wise to make. Undoubtedly they would fight if occasion arose, but the odds were terribly heavy; besides, if Brennan came and his party got away that same evening, as was planned for them to do, then it might not be necessary for us to strike a blow. I was certainly in no mood to expose my small command merely to save the empty house from destruction.

"Ebers," I said, turning toward the Sergeant, who sat his horse with expressionless face, "you were with the guide when he discovered this camp. How many do you think it contained, and who were they?"

"Vel, dere vos more as two companies, Captain, and dere vos some horses, but der vos dressed—not you calls it—all ober not ner same."

"Not in uniform?"

"Dot vos it."

"Have any of the rest of you seen anything that looked suspicious?" I asked, glancing around into the different faces.

"Maybe I did," answered one of the troopers named Earl. "As we rode up the first hill after leaving the house my horse picked up a stone, and I had to stop and get it out. I reckon I hid behind a quarter of a mile or more, and just as I started I looked back, and a party of ten or twelve fellows was just riding in through them big gates onto the front lawn. But them fellows was soldiers for sartin'; they rode regular like, and all of them wore caps. It was so far off I couldn't tell the color of their clothes, but them caps made me think they was Fed's."

I chose my course at once. This undoubtedly must have been Brennan's party.

"Thank you, my man; it would have been better if you had reported that to me at once," I said. "However, I understand the situation much better now. Sergeant, we will go into camp here. Post pickets in both directions, but put your most careful man off that hill yonder. Let them report promptly any signs of fire, to the southeast, or any sound of guns."

We completed all our cooking here, here, and when the night finally was surrounded as soon as it became dark. Those devils supposed it to be unguarded, and advanced without precautions. We fired and drove them back. He had requisited three attacks when I left at eleven, but three of our men were already hit."

"You were after aid?"

"I was striving to reach our advance pickets at McMillan. It seemed the only possible chance, and none of the men would volunteer to make the ride. One was killed trying it before I started. God knows how I hated to leave them, but it had to be done. How many have you?"

"Only twenty; but if we could once get inside along with your fellows, we might hold the house until reinforcements came."

"Thank God! I knew you would," he cried joyfully, grasping me again fervently by the hand. "You are not one to hesitate over the color of a uniform at such a time as this. Only Wayne," and he hesitated an instant, "it is right I should tell you that Brennan is there, and in command."

"I know it, but those women must be saved nevertheless," I answered firmly, my mind settled. "This is no time for personal quarrels, and no, but I had forgotten to mention that the little man sprang into the air and came down with a whoop.

"The bloody devils!" he cried excitedly. "Ye bet I'll go."

"Come, Sergeant, speak up; what do you men say?"

"I like not to fight mit der Yankees," he admitted candidly, "but der women, py-Chiminy, dot vos another thing. I will go, Captain; meit Gott, yaw."

"We go with you, sir," spoke voice after voice gravely around the dark circle, and then Sands added: "We'll show them that Yanks how the Johnny Rebs kin fight, sir."

Two minutes later Glen, bearing his two messages to the Blue and Gray, was speedily recklessly through the black night northward, while my little squad was moving cautiously back over the road we had so lately traversed.

Schools and Systems.

In The Record of last week mention was made of the cost of education as compared with twenty years ago. The Record did not refer to the Northville school or to any particular school. It is the general system in vogue every where that some of the great educators of the country are calling attention to. No village school in the United States has a more efficient board than has Northville and it is safe to say its superintendent and corps of teachers are not excelled any where. The trouble lies with the system—follies and fads—and the contention is made that boys and girls were better educated fifteen and twenty years ago for less money than they are today. The trend of the average village school is to make a college of university out of the High school and to keep the school on the Normal and University list seems to be of more importance than to give the pupils a first-class education in the real essentials, such as arithmetic, spelling, English and writing. The state superintendents say that teachers are not paid, salary enough but that the trouble lies in the fact that there are too many teachers given employment for speech subjects that are not necessary to the village schools in the department or neglect of those which are essential.

Home Trade Advantages.

At this time of the year, the great mail order houses of the cities make unusual efforts to attract trade from the smaller cities and rural communities. For those who are inclined to be tempted by the costly and highly suggestive catalogue of these houses which are to be had for the asking, it would be well to remember that the home merchant is not only in business to secure their trade this fall but next spring and next year; that he has a reputation to maintain and a business standing to live up to that he guarantees of his treatment all the year round. Remember that your home merchant doesn't sell you a fine looking range for $49 that will warp out of shape inside of a year; that he doesn't charge you $20 for a $10 suit of clothes; that his stability in trade is based upon his trustfulness and the satisfaction with which his goods wear and perform the service required of them. His trade is loyal to his immediate neighborhood and he does not have the entire United States to attract customers, changing from one section of the country to another with his attractive advertising as soon as his welcome is worn threadbare.

Miss Olive Matson taught very acceptably for Mrs. Woolley for a couple of hours last week.

The third grade children are very much interested in the story of the "Adventures of a Brownie."

The seventh grade is very grateful for the large dictionary and nice stand which was presented to them.

Willard and Willis Morgan and Percy Jordan have returned to the second grade after a long illness.

We hope next week to be able to give a complete report of the semesters' savings in the school bank.

The multiplication tables are being reviewed in grade four. The little people are working at them in great earnest.

Kathleen Vanatta, Robert Willie and Waldo Elliott are ahead in the contest for good behavior in the third grade.

The seventh grade A class in reading has completed the study of Evangeline and has now taken up the study of "Tales from Shakespeare" by Lamb.

The second grade children are very much interested in the reading of "Ozma of Oz." They were equally interested in the "Wizard of Oz" the first part of the school year.

The schedule for the Mothers' days for next semester is as follows: Feb. 23, Third grade; March 29, Fifth grade; April 5, Sixth grade; May 17, Second grade; May 24, First grade; May 31, Seventh grade; June 7, Kindergarten; June 14, Fourth grade. Cut this out for future reference.

The semester ends next Friday and all promotions will be made Friday forenoon. If the original room of the pupit gets their half-holiday they will not need to come in the afternoon. If otherwise they will spend the afternoon with the old division.

The following pupils of the Fifth grade were excused from spelling Friday: Albert Kinson, Rose Hollis, Helen Lanning, Willard Moushler, Mary Sowles, Lewis Spikes, Elmer Willis, Harriet Carson, Lee Thompson, Les Vanatta, Helen McFarland, Roy Mosher, Carrie Litzemberger.

The Goude Market Team came out to Northville last Friday night to get a little practice before one of their hard games. But when the whistle blew the score stood 32 to 20 in favor of the home team. Many more of the semi-professional teams from Detroit need a little practice, notify the manager.

This (Friday) evening, Jan. 19, the High school basketball team once more goes on the floor with its old rival, Pontiac. The situation certainly looks bright to give this famous bunch one of the hardest times in their lives. The second team will play a preliminary game with Farmington. The admission for both the games is 15c and 20c.

Dr. John F. Shepherd of the Psychology department of the U. of M. will address the teachers of the Northville schools and the Normal class upon "Animal Education and its Influence on Modern Theories of Education." The lecture will be given Monday evening, Jan. 29, in the High school. The teachers of the surrounding towns as well as the general public are invited.

The following lectures will be put on under the auspices of the Senior class at the dates mentioned: Feb. 15, Prof. Turner will speak on "England, France, Germany and Morocco—Issues of 1911." On March 29, Prof. Trueblood will give a recital of Julius Caesar. These men are among the most brilliant speakers in the large University corps of instructors and it will pay all to leave those dates vacant. There will be no admission charged and no collection. The three lectures will be held in the High school assembly room.

The Real Consideration.

The great thing in this world is not so much where we stand as where we are going. —Holmes

Long in One Service.

Seventy years with one firm was the record of an aged cloth worker who has just died at Trowbridge, Wika, England. He began work when he was eight and one-half years old.

Bald Heads Not Wanted

Baldness is too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age

A half-headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employees.

Probably 45 percent of half-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statements no one should scoff, doubt our word, or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want every one in Northville who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair, or baldness to try our Rexall "33" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly—say until three bottles have been used—and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair to its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We are established right here in Northville, and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success entirely depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make the above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at my store—The Rexall Store. A. E. Stanley. 28

Recommends the Candy Girls.

The Candy Girls followed Madame Sherry in several cities down through Ohio and Virginia, and as we all know Madame Sherry is one of the biggest productions on the road and gets $2 prices every where. Following is a telegram sent by one opera house manager to another.

To Mrs. Euleau, Mgr. Opera House, Charleston, W. Va.—The Candy Girls played here last night and is the best popular priced musical show that ever played our city. It is clean and zippy and gives better satisfaction than Madame Sherry. You can safely guarantee it to your patrons for it is safe to please.

(Signed) R. A. Mathews, Mgr. Opera House, Clinton Forge, Va. The Candy Girls will be seen at Northville opera house, Tuesday evening, January 23.

FARMINGTON NEWS.

Mrs. Edith Nauthan returned to Denver last week.

The ice harvest is now in full blast and the crop abundant.

Wednesday occurred the auction sale of James L. Hogie near Powers Station.

Starr Graham and Anna Tolman, both of Farmington, were married Jan. 3. The best wishes of their many friends attend them.

Basket ball is steadily growing in favor with the young folks. There are interesting games played each week, both girls and boys having teams.

J. Morris recently had a birthday and realized it very much when a neighborhood of seven or eight neighbors unloaded at his home and informed him of it by indulging in lots of fun, Pedro and an ample repast.

Richard Tucker was granted a decree of divorce last week from his wife, Mrs. Mabel Tucker. This is the woman whose affection was stolen by Elmer Bromley, for which act he is in the county jail because he refused to pay the judgment which Tucker secured against him. She is ordered not to marry again for a year.

The chicken picnic served by the Myrtle Workers at the home of Clyde Seeley, was a decided success. Mrs. Ellen Bower of Pontiac presided at the business meeting and was also the lucky winner of the quilt which was to be drawn. The society does not meet again until April.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. Is that not better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill? Sold by all dealers.

Doing Their Duty

Scores of Northville Readers are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys duty. When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick. Backache and many kidney ailments follow. Help the kidneys do their work. Doan's Kidney Pills build up weak kidneys. Northville people endorse our claim. Mrs. J. R. Cranston, 3 Center St., Northville, Mich., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in our household and have given entire satisfaction. A member of my family was troubled by a lame back and pains in the loins and when Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended, we decided to give them a trial. A supply was procured from Murdock Bros. Drug Store and they soon brought relief. There has been no return attack of the trouble. I have been convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills are an effective kidney remedy."

OPINIONS HAVE OPTIMISTIC TREND

Dealers Think Trade Conditions Will be Reflected at Auto Show in Detroit Week After Next.

There is an optimistic trend in the opinions of members of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' association, whose show will be held at Wayne Gardens, Jan. 22 to Jan. 27 inclusive, regarding the outlook for the year 1912. All plan to exhibit at the Detroit show their newest and very latest production and many new surprises are promised, especially will this appear in the commercial line, as practically every maker of pleasure cars is now planning to enter the commercial field and announcements are being frequently made. A great many of these new models will be shown for the first time at Detroit and will attract not only the interest of the business men of Detroit, but the interest of the thousands of visitors who will be in the city in the search for new things in the commercial car and also the pleasure car field.

In the opinion of practically every member of the D. A. D. A. the season of 1912 will be the greatest in the history of the automobile industry. The vast increase in orders for the first half of the 1912 season, often times amounting to 50 per cent, to many cases and the regularity with which orders are still being reported for 1912 leads not only the makers but also the agents into their present optimistic opinion.

Reports from the great northwest from the far west from the southwest and from all over the south are all favorable. Apparently there is no slump in the automobile trade in any portion of the country and this fact coupled with the universal demand for cars for exportation every portion of the globe is enough to warrant these optimistic opinions.

One year ago in Detroit, there were opinions expressed freely without hindrance that outputs would be vastly decreased for the 1912 season and optimists were hard to find. This cry of "wool" failed to materialize, for no wool came. New factories sprang up on all sides and are still being constructed and the business increased greatly instead of decreased.

With the general increase of automobiles on the highways and byways of the country and especially on the business streets of every city town and hamlet in the country, the natural supposition is that there will be a continued increase for the automobile today stands as an indispensable addition to the transportation facilities which will never be dispensed with and in fact cannot be dispensed with for any time in the future.

DETROIT AUTO SHOW AT TOP

Now Generally Conceded That the Wayne Garden Exhibition is One of the Four Best Shows in the Country.

The Eleventh Annual Automobile Show of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' association, will be held in the Wayne Gardens and in the Wayne Annex, Jan. 22 to Jan. 27, inclusive. This eleventh annual show will be the greatest ever held in Detroit and will be the leading local show of America. There are three national shows, New York, Chicago and Boston, and ranking next to these is the Detroit show. The prominence of the Detroit exhibit is due to the fact that it requires more floor space and is given at the heart of the automobile industry. The demand for space in Detroit was so large that it was necessary to secure a permit from the city to close Front street, allowing the construction of an additional building known as the "Annex" and covering a space 130 feet long by 65 feet wide. There were forty applicants for space in the Annex, doubling the number of exhibitors at the show. About eighty lines of cars will be shown and the exhibit of automobile accessories will number fully two score. The exhibition of accessories in Detroit for the coming show is something new in Detroit and will bring forth great novelties that will not be exhibited at the national shows. Manager Walter Wilmot has promised something novel in decorations and there is every evidence that the Detroit show will occupy front rank among the automobile shows of America in 1912.

HAS TOO FEW CARS.

Michigan Does Not Use Automobiles in the Proportion to Population that Other States Do.

Michigan, while it makes more cars than any other state, is still less of an auto-using community than many others. Kansas and Nebraska have more cars in proportion to population and in many counties nearly every farm has a car. Much interest is manifested throughout the state in the possibilities of a large use of cars by farmers and it is thought that many dealers and would be dealers will try to make favorable connections during automobile show week at Detroit, Jan. 22 to 27.

Many good cars could use dealers who will work in the smaller cities of this state and live dealers can not do better than to spend a large portion of that week in getting acquainted with automobile types and methods.

Where the Acorns Grow

By CARL JENKINS

Just in time for the acorns, my dear," added Miss Molly Curham to her welcome to her school chum, Miss Cathy Dalton, of the city, as the latter reached the railroad depot at Ravensrest.

"Oh, are there acorns?"

"Pecks and pecks of them—nice, acorns—sweet acorns—acorns falling on your head as you kick around in the dead leaves."

"And I never saw one, except in a picture!"

"You can't mean it!"

"But I do. He's a young man!"

"Better and better!"

"He's a mysterious young man, with black eyes and curly hair."

"Oh, Molly, I'm so glad I came! Go on, quick!"

"I don't know his name. He appeared a week ago in a very mysterious manner."

"How delicious!"

"I was up on the hill after acorns. There's a stream there. I was carrying my hat in my hand and whistling 'Swanee, Swanee,' and I had just jumped over a log, and my hat was down, and I know I looked my very worst, when—"

"When I ran right on him—the mysterious young man—the mysterious young man."

"And he was gathering acorns?"

"No, he wasn't. He was fishing. Yes, he just sat on a log fishing, and I couldn't see just he had caught a thing."

"And you screamed?"

"Not a scream! Cathy Dalton, do you think I'm a child?"

"Well, he raised his cap to you?"

"So, he didn't. I don't believe he ever raised his eyes, though he must have heard me. He just sat there

Then they threw sticks into the water."

"Then they threw clubs at the chipmunks!"

"Then one of them asked us tramps were ever seen in those woods."

"Then the other replied that they hadn't better be seen there if they knew what was good for them. Then both giggled and kicked up the dead leaves and walked away. Dr. Pelham smiled. He was shy, but he knew their actions were girl-like. Ten minutes had passed, and he was smiling indulgently when a fish took his hook. Then a squirrel who had miscalculated his leaping distance fell short and came plump down on his head. He was in the midst of trouble when he heard a scream, and before he could locate it one of the girls came tearing through the bushes and halted before him to exclaim:

"Oh, sir, right out there!"

"Yes. What is it?"

"She—she climbed a tree!"

"Well?"

"I—I told her not to, but she would do it."

"Yes, she climbed?"

"And she's got up I don't know how many hundred feet high, when she thought you were spouting and—"

"Lost her hold and fell?"

"Yes, yes. She's crying and laughing, and I think she has broken her arm. We gig-gig-gled at you, but we want you to come."

"Most certainly."

"It was Miss Cathy Dalton who sat with her back to the oak she had climbed, though there was a tangle of acorns on the ground around her. Yes, it was her right arm that was broken, and that wasn't the worst of it—got with her—not with a good-looking girl. In making her descent she had passed through several scraggly branches, broken down the hazel bushes and bit the ground with a great jolt. Her hair was hanging, her garments torn—face and hands scratched and one pink ear bleeding from a cut. Even her limpid tears were tearing streaks down her cheeks.

"It has to run for help, but I won't be gone long," said Dr. Pelham, who had assured himself of the nature of the injury. And then to Miss Molly, who was also weeping in sympathy:

"Wipe your handkerchief in the creek and rub it over her face and forehead and don't get excited over this thing."

In twenty minutes the doctor was back with first aid, and in thirty there was a farmer with his wagon there to convey the patient to the British hospital. There was considerable trouble before that broken arm was set and strapped, and so it was three or four hours after the accident when Miss Molly had opportunity to say to the girl in bed:

"Thank you, awfully smart, don't you?"

"What do you mean?"

"To go and climb that tree!"

"But you dared me to!"

"Yes, but I didn't dare you to fall head over heels and break your arm and hit a doctor and all that! I'm sorry if it hurts, but I can see your little game."

"Game? Game?"

"Yes, Miss Janet. You are going to marry the doctor?"

"A year later when Miss Cathy told Miss Molly that she and Dr. Pelham were engaged, there was a "kangaroo" followed by the words:

"Of course you are! Don't I know you fell out of that tree on purpose? Well, I don't like doctors, so you can say so!"

And he was gathering acorns?"

"No, he wasn't. He was fishing. Yes, he just sat on a log fishing, and I couldn't see just he had caught a thing."

"And you screamed?"

"Not a scream! Cathy Dalton, do you think I'm a child?"

"Well, he raised his cap to you?"

"So, he didn't. I don't believe he ever raised his eyes, though he must have heard me. He just sat there

Then they threw sticks into the water."

"Then they threw clubs at the chipmunks!"

"Then one of them asked us tramps were ever seen in those woods."

"Then the other replied that they hadn't better be seen there if they knew what was good for them. Then both giggled and kicked up the dead leaves and walked away. Dr. Pelham smiled. He was shy, but he knew their actions were girl-like. Ten minutes had passed, and he was smiling indulgently when a fish took his hook. Then a squirrel who had miscalculated his leaping distance fell short and came plump down on his head. He was in the midst of trouble when he heard a scream, and before he could locate it one of the girls came tearing through the bushes and halted before him to exclaim:

"Oh, sir, right out there!"

"Yes. What is it?"

"She—she climbed a tree!"

"Well?"

"I—I told her not to, but she would do it."

"Yes, she climbed?"

The World's Great Machine.

Women has always done the greater part of the labor of the world and has done it surprisingly even astonishingly well, when we consider the fact that many of her tools are still exceedingly primitive. Man has incessantly devised implements by which his work has been lessened, but woman has plodded on, relying as much as she will, one day the help from inventors and appliances.

It is an encouraging sign if our times that appliances and economy of effort are beginning to be studied by women. It is more difficult to manage the average house with its varying needs, occupations and problems than it is to run an average business enterprise for the housewife does not as a rule, study the science of reducing labor to its minimum. She perfects the output of her hands continually, but does not spare herself, and this is her greatest mistake. The wife and mother is the great machine which keeps the world going, and she deserves no less consideration and care than that which we accord to the mechanical devices of our brains.

No woman would think of running her sewing machine without having properly oiled it, but she will run her own delicate and complicated self without the lubrication of pleasure, or the necessary adjustments of easy work and well poised action.—Armour's Farmer's Almanac.

Welcome.

It was 2 o'clock on a cold and frosty morning, and the weary cyclist had still many miles to go.

Passing through a lonely village he saw a lighted window. Perhaps, he thought, he might be able to get something to eat and drink. So he knocked.

"Who's there," came a gruff voice from within.

"A traveler," the cyclist replied in clear tones.

Back like a shot came the answer. "Then travel."

Mistaken There.

The ethnologist was exclaiming the bumps on Sambo's head.

"Curiosity and acquisitiveness, abnormally large."

Sambo rolled his eyeballs and showed two rows of white ivory.

"Initiative, casualty and conscientiousness small, which with your weak mouth indicates—"

"Don't you be so sure about me habbin' a weak mouth. I kin crack nuts in ma' ear."

Waiting for Nerves.

The nerves suffer from want of pure oxygen. They run like a network all through the skin and when they are overworked the skin is apt to be dry and colorless. Walking is an excellent tonic for the nerves. It gives them strength to control themselves.

If one has means or leisure, there are plenty of other more enjoyable exercises. But few forms are so beneficial as the regular daily jaunt of four or five miles for obtaining a good complexion.

The Boy—The Girl.

He—Crime seems in a pretty low way. Old last week some woman kidnapped a baby—photographs of it in all the newspapers.

She—What did she take it for?

He—Nothing else to take, I suppose. I should have thought myself that anybody who kidnaped a baby would steal an earthquake or borrow an attack of Asiatic cholera.

She—Babies are not so bad as all that. The only thing I have really got against them is that if you leave them long enough they grow up into human beings.

It is the common lot of man not to get an uncommon lot.

TANTALIZING.

What a lovely girl! How could I do that? I don't want to get a good square meal."

Swallowing Glory.

The other daughter of a well-to-do Baltimore physician recently returned from the faculty while at breakfast by suddenly exclaiming:

"I'm full of glory!"

"What on earth do you mean, child?" the father hastened to ask.

"Why," explained the youngster, "a student just gave me a kiss, and I'm awfully glad."

Stop the Pain.

Some people get so accustomed to getting the light side that they don't see the other side of it.

The fellow who is confident the dust doesn't always clear up is a scoundrel.

FISH

A Hold-Up

An Oppressive Trust.

Before the Coffee Roasters' Association, in session at Chicago, on Thursday, Thomas J. Webb, of Chicago, charged that there is in existence a coffee combine which is "the most monstrous imposition in the history of human commerce."

There is very slight exaggeration about this statement. It comes very close to being literally true. There is a coffee combine in Brazil, from which country comes the bulk of the coffee used in the United States, which is backed by the government of Brazil and financed by it, which compels American consumers, as Mr. Webb said, "to pay famine prices for coffee when no famine exists."

The worst thing about this is that the consumers of the United States have been compelled to put up the money through which this combine, to further cinch them, has been made effective. There were formerly revenue duties imposed upon all coffee entering the United States. Those taxes were denounced as an imposition upon the people; as taxing the poor man's breakfast table, and the like. The taxes were removed. Immediately thereafter Brazil imposed an export duty upon coffee up to the full amount of the former customs taxes in this country. The revenue which formerly went into the treasury of the United States was diverted to the treasury of Brazil. The poor man's breakfast coffee continued to cost him the same old price.

But this was only the commencement. The "valorization" plan was evolved in Brazil. Through this plan the government, using the revenues derived from the export duties for the purposes, takes all of the surplus crop in a season of large yields and holds it off the market, thus keeping the supply down to the demands of the market and permitting the planters to receive a much higher price than they would otherwise have done.

The United States consumes more Brazilian coffee than does the rest of the world. We are the best customers of Brazil, and Brazil buys little from us. Now Brazil is promoting, financing and maintaining a trust designed, and working effectively for the purpose, to compel American consumers to pay an exorbitant price for the coffee they use. What is the remedy?—Seattle Post-Intelligencer—Nov. 18, 1911.

Economy to one's purse is not the main reason for using Postum.

It is absolutely free from any harmful substance, such as "caffeine" (the drug in coffee), to which so much of the nervousness, biliousness and indigestion of today are due. Thousands of former coffee drinkers now use Postum because they know from experience the harm that coffee drinking causes.

Keep Your Oil Can Handy

A good farmer takes care to avoid friction in farm machinery. He keeps the oil-can handy and at once applies a good lubricating oil to the spot.

This principle might be applied to the various relations of life in which friction is likely to occur. Be ready with your oil can. By this we mean a heart filled with the common "milk of human kindness."

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally, it goes from the blood and mucous surfaces of the system.
