Women of Washington in War on the "Food Trust."

MRS. HENDERSON A LEADER

She is a Vegetarian and Total Abstainer—Question of Sunday Entertaining is Again Being Discussed in National Capital.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—The campaign which is being waged in Washington against the high cost of living has been endorsed here by most of the women's clubs, which include in their membership many women high in official and social life. The Women's Anti-Food Trust League has Mrs. J. B. Henderson, wife of former Senator Henderson of Missouri, as president.

Among other reforms the members of the society pledged themselves to abstain from purchasing meat. This will be no hardship for Mrs. Henderson, who for years has been a vegetarian and an advocate of simple living. Her dinners are among the smartest affairs in Washington, but neither meat nor game is served.

The Henderson home is always spoken of as "boundary castle" as it is just beyond Florida Avenue, the former boundary line of the city, and it perches on top of Sixteenth street hill. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson have built a dozen handsome homes near them, some of which are occupied by representatives of foreign powers as legations and embassies. One of the largest houses is the residence of Sec. of War MacVeagh.

Poured Her Wines into Gutters.

Two or three years ago Mrs. Henderson invited to her residence a tent of the Order of Rechabites, of which she is a member. The guests poured into the gutters of Sixteenth street the precious wines from her cellar, since which time she has stood for total abstinence as well as vegetarianism. Mrs. Henderson has convictions and the courage that should go with them, and in making her the president of the Anti-Food Trust League success for the movement was probable.

Mrs. Henderson several years ago put her ideas into a book which she called "The Aristocracy of Health." The book has been translated into Chinese through the influence of former Minister Wu Ting-fang, who is a great admirer of Mrs. Henderson's views on simple living. Mrs. Belva Lockwood, who at one time was a candidate for the presidency of the United States, is also a member of the organization, as is also Miss Mary G. Lockwood, who is prominent in D.A.R. circles.

Sunday Entertaining Discussed.

The question of Sunday entertaining is being discussed again in Washington. The "white open" Sunday came into the capital with the foreign element and has steadily spread until the Americans who give dinners, breakfasts and parties on the first day of the week outnumber the others.

There was one notable objector in the diplomatic set to the "constitutional Sunday" and that was the wife of the former Norwegian minister, Anne Gude, who established in the Norwegian legation a strict observance of the Sabbath day. She neither accepted nor extended invitations to festive on Sunday.

It is well known that Mrs. Taft deplores the increasing tendency toward Sunday merry-making. She attends regularly either St. John's church or Lafayette square or All Souls' Unitarian church, where the president worshiped.

To Honor Lundy's Lane Hero.

Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of New Hampshire was born in Canada, where his mother and father were born before him. The fact did not prevent Mr. Gallinger from introducing a bill in congress for the erection of the statue to the memory of Gen. James Miller, the hero of Lundy's Lane. In pretty nearly every school history of the United States is told the story of Gen. Miller's charge on a battery, and his capture thereof, if memory serves, Miller at that time was a captain, but the chances are that most Americans remember neither his title nor his first name, but know him only as "I'll try, sir," Miller. When Miller was asked if he could charge and take the battery his answer was "I'll try, sir," and the answer has stood him as a front name ever since.

Organizing the Convention.

The convention is called to order by the national committee's chairman. A temporary organization is effected by the election of a temporary chairman and secretary. Each state selects one member of the committees on resolutions, credentials and permanent organization. The duty of the committee on resolutions is to write the platform, that is, to make recommendations for permanent officers of the convention. It is the duty of the committee on credentials to take testimony concerning the differences existing between contestants, and to declare to the convention the names of the delegates who it thinks are entitled to seats in the convention.

Taft Didn't Care About Wolves.

Since William Howard Taft has been president of the United States there have been no articles on natural history written in the White House. In the days when Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt were close friends and when the legislative policies of one were believed to be absolutely the legislative policies of the other, the great "faunal naturalist" attempted to interest Mr. Taft, who was then secretary of war, as the subject of natural history.

It isn't to be supposed that there is any harm in repeating a conversation which took place between Mr. Roosevelt and his secretary of war shortly after the report from the committee on credentials has been received and approved, the permanent organization committee turns its report and the convention proceeds to elect its permanent officers. The platform comes later.

MANCHUS GETTING READY TO FIGHT

REACTIONARIES IN COMPLETE CONTROL; ALL HOPE OF PEACE IS OVER.

Premier Yuan Shih Kai Has Abandoned His Task.

War Preparations Have Been Actively Resumed by the Throne After Breaking Off of Negotiations for Peace.

The affairs of state at Peking are now in the undisputed possession of the Manchu reactionaries, and Yuan Shih Kai has abandoned his task according to advices received by the American consul at Tientsin and reported from that city by the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company. The dispatch adds:

"The situation at Peking has undergone an extraordinary change. The imperial court has reversed its policy and abandoned all thought of abdication. Yuan Shih Kai has stepped aside and the whole control is in the hands of General Yin Tchang, who was credited a few days ago with recommending a general massacre of the Chinese by the Manchus."

"Yin Tchang assumes an attitude of firmness toward the revolutionary leaders and is said to be preparing to resume hostilities. It is reported that all regulations which have been going on with a view to abdication have been summarily broken off."

"The emperor's dawager, after carefully weighing the opinions expressed by the princes of the imperial clan and leading Manchu officials during conference at the palace, is inclined to think that the restoration of hostilities is the only solution of the present situation."

This statement was made in the North China Daily News, which always is regarded as an organ of the foreign board in Peking.

It is understood that Premier Yuan Shih Kai has agreed to abdicate for the throne. It is believed, however, that he will await an appeal by the rebels.

The foreign nations on the other hand, consider that the abdication of the throne has been deferred only for a time.

Socialists Sweep German Empire.

Much to the chagrin of Emperor Wilhelm, the Socialists, who are against the "living right of kings," gained 27 more seats in the Reichstag.

Great Question Solved.

The French academy has solved a great question, its savants having traced the antipathy for the mother-in-law to the red man. In the sixteenth century the Spaniards brought back with them, besides gold and legends, the story of the hatred of the mother-in-law among the aborigines.

The noble red man would not walk in the footsteps of his squaw's mother till the sea had washed them away, so profound was his detestation of his relation by marriage.

This nation, the academicians think, was a relic of the feeling engendered in the days when man stole his bride by force. Naturally his disposition toward his mother-in-law was not that of an admirer.

We are living down the mother-in-law bogie. Unlike the red man, a good many of us could walk in her footsteps with great benefit to ourselves.

Reginald Hills was out two days from grade four on account of sickness.

The Second grade children are enjoying "Little's Child Rhymes" this week.

Fred and Oliver Raymond of the Sixth grade have moved to Saginaw with their parents.

Some very good stories were handed in by the Seventh grade English history class.

Shirley Harmon has been absent from the Second grade the past week on account of sore eyes.

Many of the First graders who have been absent on account of sickness, are back in school.

The A class of the Third grade is reading at sight and are surprised to find how easily they can do it.

The Eighth grade has been busy this month making stenciled wall patterns and stained-glass windows.

The First grade and Kindergarten had morning exercises together Tuesday morning in the First grade room.

All but four out of thirty in the Seventh grade were excused early Friday for perfect spelling during the week.

The class in pencil drawing in the High school is taking up Rose drawing and the results are more than satisfactory.

The first five grades have just finished some very pretty Japanese pattern drawing and show some careful work.

The Third grade pupils are very much interested in animal stories and are now reading "The Cotton-tail Rabbit."

The High school orchestra gave the closing number for the annual Forestry meeting of the Ladies club last Friday.

Jennie Vanderschot of the Normal class substituted for Mrs. Nash of the Second grade Monday while the latter was absent on account of sickness.

Mrs. Woolley says she can boast of a few negro friends as there are in any room in the school, and they are among the pupils due to progressing to grade Five this week.

The best drawings from each grade are hung in the drawing room for a month and the room will be open to visitors any time from 3 to 5 on Friday afternoons during the term. The room is under the Third grade room.

Work in the new division and subjects will begin promptly on Monday morning Jan. 29. All changes and assignments of lessons will be made this Friday which is the last day of the first semester.

Prof. John P. Shepard of the U. of M. will give a lecture Monday evening, Jan. 29, under the auspices of the Northville teachers. A special invitation is given to the teachers of the surrounding country and any of the patrons who may be interested. No admission at the High school Jan. 29, at 7:30 p.m.

Both first and second teams won basket ball Friday night. The preliminary game between the second team and Farmington was rough, but as the visitors were much heavier and older, that fact helped them. They found it hard to make baskets under the strong guarding of Wilkinson and Montgomery, while Holmes at center had no trouble in getting the ball. The work of Verree and Alexander as forwards was also very surprising to those who had not seen their playing before. In the Pontiac game the locals started out wholly on the defense, but it was soon changed to offensive work and the basket scored were regular. Johnston made good at center against a much taller man and had no difficulty in getting the ball. Dunham on guard was not up to his ordinary good class owing to sickness and Turner was placed in forward in the second half while Capt. Schoultz was shifted to a guard position. With Van and Schoultz on the guard line we were never in much danger, several of the baskets for Pontiac being made by the center while Johnston was hunting him up. We had a generous crowd and since we have demonstrated that we have a still proposition in the way of a team and can make it fairly interesting for the visitors, we expect a larger turnout when we meet Holly here Friday evening, Feb. 2.

Many a woman endures with no patience the daily misery of backache, pain about the hips, blue, burning spells, dizziness and ordinary disorders, hopeless of relief because she doesn't know what's the matter. You can tell if it is kidney trouble. If secretions are dark colored, contain sediment, the passages are too frequent or scanty. Then help the weakened kidneys. They can't get well alone.

Doan's Kidney Pills have brought sound backs and new life and strength to thousands of suffering women. They are endorsed by thousands - endorsed at home. Read this Northville woman's convincing statement:

Some years ago I suffered from backache and pains across my kidneys and at that time I took Doan's Kidney Pills, procuring them from Murdock Bros. Drug Store. They lived up to the claims made for them, relieving the backache and other annoyances and helping me in every way. Another member of the family, who took Doan's Kidney Pills, also received great benefit."

Northville should be very proud of her basket ball boys after last Friday evening's games. Of course we knew they could do it. The second team, with every one of the five men after himself, white-washed the Farmington team with a score of 19 to 10. With this victory, to cheer them, the first team prepared to do the same by the Pauline High boys, the score being 31 to 27.

The Northville Commandery Knights Fraternal entertained the Pinette Knights Templar Tuesday evening. The Templar degree was exemplified upon Mr. Gayle of Plymouth, after which a delightful banquet was served.

Northville people have been very fortunate during the past two years in the way of fire. The fire department has not received a call since February 10.

H. M. Gaebel and his "Candy Girls," a musical comedy in three acts, played here Tuesday evening to a fair sized audience. The girls were certainly "all the Candy" and the singing was exceptionally fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Desautels have moved to Wixom, where the former will assist his father-in-law, H. A. Smith, on the farm. Henry Desautels will take his son's place as clerk in Mr. Parsons' store.

A large "herd of Elk" is reported to have broken loose northeast of this place and will probably reach here some time this evening. Doc Turner and a few others are supposed to corral them in the ring in time for the B. P. O. E. party.

Frank Genewetz, who will be remembered by Northville people as one of the young men who "borrowed" a horse on the streets here without the owner's permission last summer, was found guilty in Judge Murphy's court last week and was remanded to jail for sentence.

The many friends of Miss Emma Woodworth will be pleased to know she still retains her position in Washington, D. C., notwithstanding the fact that nearly 2,000 of the employees in her department have been discharged since the first of January.

Carl Bogle has just been appointed to a position as laborer in the Northville fish hatchery, by the C. S. Fish Commission at Washington. D. C. He begins his labors Feb. 1. Mr. Bogle has been employed as clerk to C. E. Ryders' store for several months past.

Two auto testers were out from Detroit Wednesday, with a 1912 Cadillac. Just for exercise they ran over Buchner's hill a dozen times or more, making a trip from in front of Ed. Lapham's house to the foot of Walnut street hill and back to Lapham's again in less than three minutes.

Bryceps is America's curse. Burdock Blood Bitter conquers bryceps every time. It drives out impurities, tones the stomach, restores perfect digestion, normal weight, and good appetite. For sale by all dealers.

The dancing party given by the Northville members of the Postage Order of Elks, in the ring this evening, promises to be one of the swellest events of the season.

Stone's five piece orchestra will furnish its usual fine music for the dancers. Supper will be served in style in one end of the ring with Messrs. Baldwin and Deyer as head chefs. Two special car loads of Postage people are expected to attend besides the usual goodly number from here who will enjoy the event.

The third number of the Ladies Library entertainment comes, and last but one was held in the Opera House Monday evening. The Dietrich's musical and magical entertainers gave a splendid program, proving that their reputation to such work has in no degree been exaggerated. The entertainment course thus far has been a source of delightful recreation for those fortunate enough to attend. The last number will be given the latter part of February and will consist of Grand and Light Opera. This will be the best one of the whole course and will be a treat to Northville people.

Indian girl is progressing by comparison with the example set by her white sisters. Indeed, it is uncertain whether the Indian girls give birth to many residents, due to their more beauty than their robustness among the palefaces. However, it must not be imagined that the present-day trend of culture and education, and progress among the Indian girls is a parallel to aims and purposes with that which prevails among the less accomplished classes. Quite the contrary, as a matter of fact. For instance, it may be noted that, generally speaking, the Indian girls of the present give far less thought to fashion in dress than do feminine members of the white race. Similarly they are not exercised over marriage and they do not place such stress on the development of musical accomplishments. But, on the contrary, the twentieth century Indian girls are devoting their energies to a mastery of cooking and sewing and the other essentials of successful home-making. In the estimation of some old-fashioned folks, the white girls of the period are giving all too little attention. At the same time, many of the red-skin ladies are not content to ignore the social accomplishments which are supposed to enhance the attractiveness of modern young women. Accordingly all the Indian Street at Carlisle, Pa., and other large institutions of the kind we find the daughters of the forest crowding the classes in music, painting, drawing, dancing, modern etiquette, etc., and even grandiose descendants of the savages developing marked dramatic ability in amateur theatrical entertainments of various kinds.

Every person is forced to admit of the wisdom and benefits of the "white man's education" for some Indians. The remarkable life stories of some of the self-made Indians who have, after acquiring the white man's book learning, adopted the white man's mode of life, amply attest the success of the transformation in individual cases. There is, however, and perhaps always will be a difference of opinion as to the wisdom of attempting to fix the Anglo-Saxon standards, for the entire rising generation of America's native tribes. Oddly enough, there seems to be more widespread belief in such a policy for the Indian girls than for the young men of the tribes.

We say, oddly, because new conditions have confronted an unacculturated semi-civilized people it has usually been the men who have accustomed themselves to the new order of things more readily than the women. In the case of most Indian clans, however, the women have proven more amenable to the emotions of the new life wherein seems to be the only salvation of the entire Indian life. Various reasons have been advanced in explanation of this, one of the most plausible being that it has not been as difficult for the Indian girls to forego such pleasures as she enjoyed in her old life as it has been for the young brave to forsake the excitement of the chase and the care-free gamic life and to settle down in a fixed habitation with the monotony of the white man's life. Also, it is impossible to overlook the influence exerted by the example of the considerable number of Indian women who have married white settlers in Oklahoma and other parts of the west.

Even at the outset of her career in the conventional environment of the age the Indian girl has many advantages over her brother, who completes his education at the same time. It is not infrequently happens that a young man or Indian blood graduate with honors from some Indian school only to find no opportunities awaiting him commensurate with his ability. Still, wonder that in some instances the young men revert to the trees and groves of life of their forefathers. The Indian girl, on the other hand, can assure them through the studies & school course that she is destined to a better future than the awful life. She will never have any difficulty in obtaining a well-paid position in domestic service, for the instructors at our Indian schools have more applications than they can accept from responsible families eager to secure competent Indian girls as household helpers. Some of the applicants even suggest the possibility of adopting a young Indian girl if one be found to fulfill expectations.

Or, if the Indian girl of the present day, upon completing her education, elects to try for a living in some one of the artistic pursuits, she seems to have advantages over her brother fully as marked as under the circumstances above mentioned. The Indian brave, in his native state, does not show aptitude for any form of artistic handicraft unless it be the fashioning of bows and arrows. But the Indian women have traditional skill in bead work, feather work and in leather work, and the Indian women of the southwest have for countless generations excelled in pottery manufacture, in rug weaving and in basket manufacture. When an Indian girl is enabled to use such talents in accordance with the knowledge of modern art ideals which a school education gives her, it goes without saying that she has ready to hand a very agreeable and very remunerative means of livelihood.

School teaching is another vocation which opens to the educated Indian girls a future that is virtually closed to the redskins of the stern past. There are in the United States a large and constantly increasing number of Indian schools—that is, primary grade schools for the education of the younger Indian children on the reservations—and it is coming about that almost all of the teachers in these schools are Indian young women who have qualified for the work at Carlisle or other schools and by courses in normal schools. Indeed, the success of great numbers of these young Indian women school teachers in earning their livelihood by brain work while so many of the Indian young men of the period must depend upon manual labor for their earnings emphasizes as does anything else, the change that has come about in the status of Indian women. It is under such circumstances, a complete reversal of conditions over those that obtained in the long ago when the Indian women were compelled to do all of the hard labor, whereas the men were responsible for the lighter tasks—or, may have devoted themselves exclusively to warfare and the like.

There is little doubt that the explanation of the success which so many Indian school girls girls are making in various fields of endeavor is found in the heritage of good health which has come to them from generations of beatiful ancestors and the influence of their own early training and education. Particularly would this explanation account for the splendid constitutions possessed by so many Indian girls which have stood them in good stead in many exacting vocations, for instance, in nursing. Great numbers of Indian girls have qualified as trained nurses and the services of most of them are in constant demand at $100 a month.

The Indian baby, strapped to a board or securely packed in an elongated basket woven for the purpose, can neither kick nor squirm and this proves an advantage which is far-reaching in its effect in later life. Similarly is there no danger that the child will promptly to walk at an earlier age than is desirable. From earliest childhood the average Indian girl has been subjected to that rigorous, outdoor life which results in making them almost perfect physically. For instance, there may be cited the method followed in giving an Indian child a bath—a weekly event. The mother visits some convenient pool of stream and, the young member of the household, after being loosened from her odd cradle, is placed in shallow water to kick and splash to her heart's content. In due course the dripping youngster is bailed from the water and, instead of being tenderly dried with soft linen, is simply hung to the bough of some convenient tree, by means of a cloth tied around the waist, and there dries in the air and the sunshine, while the mother stands by, looking with approving eyes upon the progress of this heroic hardening process.

In the old days the Indian girls accepted, at tender age the traditional lot of Indian women—that of pack horse, and it was nothing unusual in the average Indian camp to see girls toting along with bundles of wood, etc., almost as large as themselves. This condition yet obtains to a considerable extent, although it is not so universal as formerly. The capacity of the Indian girls for hard work, however, needs daily exemplification in every walk of life which they have entered. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that whatever influence civilization may exert upon the young woman in whose veins courses Indian blood she never seems to lose that love of ornaments and bright colors which characterizes all children of the wilderness and which the Indian girl will let crop out in her latter-day costumes, even though they be fashioned in accordance with the latest modes.

Rostand's Famous "Chanticleer" Has Nothing on an Oregon Man's Pet Rooster.

Hood River, Ore.—Rostand's famous "Chanticleer" has nothing on a rooster, rooster the pet of Howard Harlley, a Hood River business man, which recently learned the dangers of fording in his master's car with a couple of young pullets.

Harlley has been accustomed to place his car in the garage about five o'clock in the evening. Several times recently he has had occasion to use it about nine o'clock. The chickens, roosting on the hood, have refused to leave their night quarters and have accompanied the car on its trips at night, chinking in satisfaction the young pullets strutting under the protecting wings of the rooster.

Lately, however, a great disturbance was created, when some friends of Harlley, who had stopped his car in front of the Novato club tried to eat the chickens. One of the pullets flew over the building and, landing in the rear eaves of the hotel Oregon, struck a telephone wire on the head and knocked itself almost unconscious.

Illustrating the Effect of Food.

The remarkable adaptability of Grape-Nuts food to stomachs so dis-of a woman in Racine, Wis.

Two years ago, she says, "I was attacked by a stomach trouble so se-take much of any sort of food. Even the various kinds prescribed by the doctor produced most acute pain.

We then got some Grape-Nuts food and you can imagine my surprise and delight when I found that I could eat it with a relish and without the slight est distress.

When the doctor heard of it he told me to take several small portions each day, because he feared I would grow tired of it if I had of all other food.

But to his surprise, (and that of everybody else,) I did not tire of Grape-Nuts, and became better day by day, till, after some weeks, my stomach entirely recovered and I was able to eat anything my appetite craved.

My nerves, which had become so weakened that I feared I would be-

Miss Bonnington's Boots

BY JAMES CATHCART

Perhaps at a more fashionable, a more pretentious place, Miss Bonnington's boots would not have created the slightest stir, but at Silver Beach the first question raised by the new-comer on the piazza was, "Have you seen Miss Bonnington's boots?" and a negative reply was admitted a truly regardless of arrival.

There was nothing remarkable about the boots save that they were of Nile green waterproof material placed high upon the calf. At the resort where stockings fit the best, the sort of canvas slipper to be had at the drug store for a quarter were considered sufficient, the appearance of Miss Bonnington on the sands at the bathing hour was the signal for the gathering of a crowd of the curios.

Miss Bonnington professed an indifference to the curious gaze of the hotel patrons and the natives. She could not help being aware of the element she created, yet she did not discard the boots.

Ridley told himself a dozen times that he did not love Miss Bonnington because of her boots. A dozen times he had started to leave the place and was free himself from the web of the enchantress, yet each time he saw Natalie without the boots—and stayed.

In honest truth he could not tell whether or not he loved the girl. Aside from the odd bathing boots, her attire was most dainty. She affected the simplest dresses and looked better in them than the women who wore silks and satins all out of harmony with the weather.

Her manner matched her garments, for she was dainty almost to a point of affectation, and never a roguish twinkle marred the calm serenity of her full, lustrous eyes. Those eyes were Natalie's greatest charm. Ridley loved to lie on the warm sands in the afternoon, sounding the placid depths of her liquid orbs. At such times he was swelled in spite of himself. Her mother was a Russian and at times her odd expressions were delightfully quaint. One might almost believe that she was sincere in her declaration of the new discovery.

The boots are a little individual," he sighed. "I could recognize them anywhere."

Natalie did not observe the ripples upon the last word. "They were very comfortable," she said modestly. "And the people were so disappointed when I did not wear them this morning."

"You did not wear them this morning?"

"They give me the maid who makes the bed. With $1.00 I could not give her as much pleasure. It is not odd; there is no color."

This, then, was the explanation of that sultry kiss. With beaming face he caught her hand.

"Natalie," he cried.

The rest of the scene passed off as he had planned it, even to the white-tipped "Yes" and that reverential first kiss. Miss Bonnington's hours had served their turn.

How a Play is Written.

When Eugene Walter writes a play the tools necessary to the process are one large room, one outfit of furniture and one exceptionally rapid stenographer. Mr. Walter and the stenographer enter the room. The door is locked and work begins by placing the furniture as it is to be placed on the stage; in other words, by setting the scene. Then the young dramatist begins to act. He is all the characters in his play. He rushes about the apartments, quarreling with himself, making love to himself, now standing here as one person and then racing to the opposite end of the apartment to be another. At the time he is speaking the words that come into his mind as natural under the circumstances, and the stenographer is taking them down at top speed. At the end of an hour or two an act is finished, an invisible curtain is rung down, and, if the audience hasn't fainted, is to do so in one day of labor on "Paid in Full." The stage is set for the next act—Channing Pollock in "The Footlights."

Festival of the Flag.

The tenth annual "festival" of the flag has just taken place in the great South American republic of Brazil, with much greater enthusiasm than has ever before attended that event. "What is this festival?" asks L'Etoile du Sud of Rio de Janeiro, and then proceeds to answer its own question: "It is a new national date, a new gay day, especially created for the cult of the flag, the symbol of nationalism, the incarnation of patriotism. Everybody 'en fete,' the administration, the ministers, the barracks, the schools, public and private, the editors of the great papers, the palace of the president, commerce, the military and civilians, everybody great and small, the old men, the women and children, all fraternize and take part in public review. He dressed as rapidly as possible and sought his room. He was too miserable to mix with the others. He wanted to be alone where he could think it all over."

His room seemed blotted with images of the past. He could see the yellow sands and himself beside Natalie questioning the lassitude and the loveliness of the smack-had sickened him, while at the same time his loss told him how truly he had loved the girl. He dressed as rapidly as possible and sought his room. He was too miserable to mix with the others. He wanted to be alone where he could think it all over."

Jester—I don't approve of black garments on solemn occasions.

Lester—Not even for an execution?

Jester—No, he should be dressed to kill.

Method.

Jester—Hokus! Why do you aggravate your husband so?

Mr. Potts—Oh, I always get him good, and mad before I ask him to do the next best thing.

Jester—Pay him back.

Slander is an animal not described in natural history. It is man's birth when it starts out for a journey of destruction. It walks through the slough of despond in search of its victim and its bite is so tickle you cannot shake it, but do not fear it has a cowardly heart, look it squarely in the eye, you will discover how insignificant it is. ## RELIGION IS HIS BUSINESS

Prozcher Knows How It Should Be Transacted and Does It Better Than Others.

In this new movement it is interesting to note the "cavalier" way in which "business men" give the preachers the back seat. It is as if these committees said: "Now you clergymen are the best of fellows; but you are ignorant of business methods. It is high time religion and business principles applied to it." All that is needed is to take right hold of this thing, the employ, pay, and run it, as we run one of our corporations. Business is business, and these pews can be filled. A factory with a good product only needs business skill to get its product on the market. Now watch us do it.

Now the preacher's business is religion. Why not let him transact it? He has transacted it up to this time. For centuries he has been miserably paid. He is often old and pensioned with a pittance, and many of the "business men" seem not to care. The old-fashioned preacher, in his old-fashioned ways, gave this country a good religious result. That is the way we seem to remember our fathers and mothers as we see them in adoring memory, sitting in the faraway pews. We doubt if "business men with business methods," the old-fashioned preacher, in his old-fashioned ways, gave this country a good religious result.

It strikes us that religion applied to business is more the need of the hour than business applied to religion.
