MRS. J. M. SHANK PASSED AWAY

Wife of a former Northville Pastor.

The sad news of the death of Mrs. John M. Shank, which occurred in Cuba, N. Y., last Wednesday, reached us this week. The deceased was the wife of Rev. John M. Shank, a former beloved pastor of the Northville Methodist church for three years. Mrs. Shank was a woman of wonderfully sweet disposition and much loved by Northville people who will grieve to learn of her death.

The loss of their only child, Guy, who died in 1895 at the age of ten years, was the beginning of the breaking of Mrs. Shank's health.

A telegram of condolence was sent to Mrs. Shank from his former congregation here.

D. U. R. LIMITED.

For the benefit of those working, visiting or shopping in Detroit and residing in Redford, Farmington and Northville, the D. U. R. commenced on Thursday of this week to operate a 5:00 p.m. fast car between Detroit and Northville.

This car, which runs daily except Sunday, now runs as a local following the regular 4:45 p.m. local. It will be converted into a limited as far as Farmington Junction, stopping only at Redford, and from the Junction will run local making all local stops. This will be an accommodation that will be appreciated.

Card Of Thanks.

We wish to extend our thanks to the cheerful workers of Novi for the quilt. Your kindness and help is greatly appreciated.

Methodist Church Notes.

By the Pastor. Sunday evening, Feb. 4, special music—large chorus. Rev. Charles Lee of Salem will play several violin solos. He will also give the address.

The Board of Stewards wish to make the following report under this caption: Total membership of our church, 225, & net increase of 55 during the past year. Of the above number 212 are members in full standing and 14 are probationers.

Through the kindness of James Clark, W. A. Pfannenstiel and Edward Sessions to furnish rigs, The King's Own Bible Club enjoyed a fine sled ride and oyster supper at the home of the latter Wednesday evening. Those who did not go missed a good time.

The Ladies' Aid will give a leap year social in Appleby's hall, Feb. 21. Serve self lunch and good program. Full particulars later.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

By Pres. Com. exponent I. The annual election of officers of the W. C. T. U. will occur at the next meeting, Feb. 5.

It is intended that the meeting will be held in Amble's hall and that a box luncheon will be served. No notice has been unable to learn any further particulars. Anyone desiring to know more about the matter may find out by calling up the president, Mrs. Brock, or some one of the following committee on program: Mrs. Charles Dingman, Mrs. Mary Cook or Mrs. Bertha Grant.

G. A. R. Notes.

It is desired that we have a full attendance at the Post meeting on Saturday, Feb. 3, as important business will come before the meeting, and also other matters of interest.

FEBRUARY FURNITURE SALEAN EVENT MADE FAMOUS BY THE CROWLEY-MILNER STORE

As February rolls around people who keep in touch with the great calendar merchandise events of this store have learned to associate this month with Furniture—FEBRUARY FURNITURE—the two go hand in hand.

To those who have bought furniture at Crowley-Milner's during this month, no word of ours is necessary to convey the meaning of the February Furniture Sale. For these people have lived with the furniture that came from this sale, and THEY KNOW its worth—and the economy it brought home to them.

But to strangers and others to whom the February Furniture Sale is as yet only a name, we send this invitation with the request that they spend an hour or a half day on our furniture floor on their most convenient day.

$60,000 WORTH OF NEW FURNITURE HAS BEEN BROUGHT HERE TO SELL THIS MONTH AT APPROXIMATELY $40,000

Making a $20,000 saving to be divided among the people who buy this furniture. These are large figures, but this is a large event. As we have made clear in previous announcements and repeat again today this furniture is the reserve stocks, the surplus lines, the overproduction, etc., etc., which the furniture makers have on hand at the close of their half year's business. It is the same grade of furniture we find other good furniture stores sell the whole year round at regular prices. So there is no question about the quality. And we warrant it all as fully as though we were asking full price for it.

We welcome the public to this event. Come and inspect the furniture at your leisure and ask questions about the prices.

Out-of-town people in whose home towns such a sale as this is an impossibility will find it to their advantage to come to the February Furniture Sale, for we put the shipping charges on all purchases of $5 and over.

Sale starts Monday and will run the entire month of February.

Charge Accounts

Will be opened with or part payments accepted from all responsible persons who would like to take advantage of this Furniture Sale, but who find it inconvenient to pay for the Furniture now.

A Word With Women

Valuable Advice for Northville Readers.

Many a woman endures with noble patience the daily misery of backache, pains about the hips, blue, nervous spells, dizziness and urinary disorders, hopeless of relief because she doesn't know what is the matter.

It is not true that every pain in the back or hips is trouble "peculiar to the sex." When the kidneys get congested and inflamed, there are many such aches and pains and the whole body suffers.

You can tell it is kidney trouble if secretions are dark colored, certain sediment; the passages are too frequent or scanty. Then help the weakened kidneys. They can't get well alone.

Dolan's Kidney Pills have brought sound backs and new life and strength to thousands of suffering women. They are endorsed at home-thousands endorsed at home. Read the Northville woman's convincing statement:

Mrs. J. H. Taylor, Center St., Northville, Mich., says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dolan's Kidney Pills. Some years ago I suffered from backache and pains across my kidneys and at that time, I took Dolan's Kidney Pills, procuring them from Mardock Bros' Drug Store. They lived up to the claims made for them, relieving the backache and other annoyances and helping me in every way. Another member of the family, who took Dolan's Kidney Pills, also received great benefit."

is "Faust," the second, "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

There is a certain saying which runs, "The best, the best of all the game." This applies to the last number of the Ladies' Literary Entertainment course to be held in the Open House next Tuesday evening, Feb. 6. The Philadelphia Opera and Concert Company will give two parts. The first part of the opera

is "Faust," the second, "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

The Conquerors

"Yes," said one of the three women who sat on the summer hotel porch. "I can hardly wait now to see Mr. Bascom. He's coming tonight to take me home. I hardly know how I've ever managed to remain away from James all this time! Really, James and I are a ridiculously devoted couple."

A little self-conscious laugh rippled over the full face and gently shook her plump shoulders. "I'm awfully dependent upon Mr. Bascom," she went on. "Indeed, he quite makes a baby of me. It's really beautiful, isn't it, how a great, strong man loves to pet the little woman who belongs to him?"

She glanced at Miss Winters, the only unmarried woman in the group, who, being thus appealed to, said: "Yes, I suppose it is beautiful." Her tone was not one of conviction.

"Dear me, Mrs. Bascom, you shouldn't complain of your brief separation from Mr. Bascom," remarked the woman with a little girl in her lap. "You've been here only two weeks, and I've been away from home nearly all summer. I never would have done it if Mr. Collins hadn't just insisted that baby and I needed the country air. But, thank goodness, he's coming tonight, too."

"Edward's the most unselfish man that ever lived, I do believe. I know he's been absolutely desolate this summer. I really think the loneliness of our apartment has affected his health. He expected to take a vacation and come up in August, but he simply couldn't get away. He's a remarkable business man. No one in the office can take his place."

She hugged her little girl and turned to Miss Winters with a smile. "Isn't it wonderful how some men will work for their wives and children?"

"It certainly is," responded Miss Winters mechanically.

"I often say to Edward that I can't understand why some rich girl didn't marry him for his good looks. He's the handsomest man, Miss Winters! Sows I wonder how he ever happened to pick out poor little me."

"My husband is extremely fine looking, too," said Mrs. Bascom, "and he has a brilliant mind. Indeed, his intelligence overshadows mine, and, to tell you the truth, he's a bit masterful in his way now and then. But we women need some one to lean on. We realize that our husbands know better than we do about many important matters, so we ought to defer to them. Don't you think so, Miss Winters?"

"I do," agreed Mrs. Ceiling, before Miss Winters had come to frame an answer. "I say to Edward that he does everything for baby and me. He's the captain of our little family craft." Dear me, Miss Winters, it must be hard for you sometimes to have a man to assume responsibility for a baby girl—an unmarried woman who is quite independent nowadays," she added, with patronizing kindness.

"Oh, I used to rub along," returned Miss Winters, but the resumption of her seat and strolled away. Although she seemed to be busy and happy woman, she was, in reality, a widow, in the presence of which she flushed crimson.

A brief tramp around the lake brought back her usual good spirits, and it was only with a mild envy that she saw, as she neared the hotel at dusk, one of her companions of an hour or two earlier hurrying down the driveway to meet the village bus. She paused in the shadow of a tree in order not to intrude upon what she felt would be the reunion between husband and wife.

She was startled to see a fat, bald-headed man, alight from the bus and give Mrs. Ceiling a most casual kiss.

"Well, I got here at last," he said jovially. "I thought I'd run up and see if you'd like to stay during the autumn. You can just as well not be getting along top."

Was this the devoted husband who was pining away in the city for the wife of his

Tim Molony—Brute

By M. J. PHILLIPS.

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press)

"You're a brute, Tim Molony," said Sheila O'Brien, her blue eyes flashing, "to whip Danny Cassidy!"

"Poor little Danny," mocked Big Tim. "Sure, he weighs two hundred."

"But he isn't as big as you are," returned Sheila, with a glance of admiration, sternly repressed. "You had no business to strike him."

"He danced five times with you last night," accused Big Tim. "Every time he does that, and brags about it, I'll thump him."

"Tod have no thought of a poor girl's reputation," rejoined Sheila, on the verge of tears. "Sur, what will folks say, when they know two big badmams were fighting about me?"

"Being unused to the ways of women, Tim blundered then. "If you didn't dance but once with Cassidy," he pointed out triumphantly, "there'd be no fighting and no talking."

"I'll dance with who I please," urged Sheila, white and angry. "Here's your ring, Tim Moloney; you can't poison me!"

It was a rueful Big Tim who found himself in the street soon after his modest diamond ring, in his pocket and desolation in his heart. That the hammering of the bumptious Cassidy would bring any such result he had never for a moment dreamed, or he might have been slower about going into action.

But the damage was done. He assumed himself sternly that if Cassidy didn't keep a civil tongue in his head another beating would be his portion.

Big Tim, lately promoted to the "runaway" squad, governed the busiest corner in the city with a rod of iron. Six feet over six feet with shoulders as broad as a door, he carried his bulk like a willow wisp. He was a handsome chap, with ruspish brown eyes. His brown hair showed an unusual desire to curl behind, though it was clipped short. He was always clean shaven, with a tinge of health red in his firm cheeks.

Cheerleaders, motormen and tempters were at their best behavior at his instance. He had a singular gift-like for an current and a red-blooded love, too. The man who did not need the white-gloved hand was likely to find himself jerked aside to the pavements by a blood-clad giant with a red face a catamount.

The next day after his quarrel with Sheila he tried his little kingdom with the impartial exchequer of Solomon, where it was all rose successively. The waiting whistle blew and traffic stopped. With one hand he held three converging strands; a gesture of the other and the forth hand worked its way through. Then he started the others back and forth with the calm confidence of the west wind, so far he'd design ever before him.

His thoughts were not on his work. Everywhere he looked he saw Sheila's blue eyes glazing with anger, clouded with tears. Every sound resolved itself into Sheila's voice. "You're a brute, Tim Molony!"

Again and again he rehearsed their quarrel, or thought of the seven hundred dollars saved up with which to start housekeeping. The poor little spritely thing tarried and waited against his heart.

He did not know that, midafternoon, Sheila, lips compressed and head held high, came down the avenue. She was on a wholly unnecessary errand, which she assured herself, was very important. Nor did he know that on pretense of walking for a car she was watching him with a betraying wistfulness.

Despite his preoccupation Tim saw the little old lady on the curb as soon as she arrived there. She had silver hair, it shone, around the delicate face, beneath the bonnet, which was fashion's last word in the seventies. She was bent and carried a cane. She wore a shawl; her gown was pitifully shabby. In her faded blue eyes was a look almost of terror. The streets were slippery with new fallen snow.

She was a whale shrilled. Both hands were clasped decisively. All the trucks, motors, trolleys—stopped. The living stream, pouring in from four directions, was dammed. Motormen banged their gongs peevishly, chauffeurs barked inquiringly. But Tim looked neither to the right nor the left; he hastened to the old lady on the curb.

"You want to cross, ma'am?" he asked, with his sunny smile, and offered his arm.

The old lady took it gratefully. "I suppose a lame old woman has no business on this busy street," she said a little breathlessly.

"Sure, and you have, ma'am," returned Tim, stoutly. "Take your time and don't stop." This bad footing.

"Thank you, young man; you're the first person I've met since I left home that wasn't in a hurry. The city's a dreadful place."

"It is, ma'am," agreed Tim, soberly.

When their slow journey was half completed, the old lady realized that the lane of six feet which they were traversing was banked on every side by impatient hundreds who wanted on her footsteps.

She halted and withdrew her hand from the policeman's arm, the better to raise a chiding forefinger. "All these people waiting just for me? You shouldn't have done it. They're more important than I am."

"They think they are, but they're not, ma'am," assured Big Tim. "Waiting is good for them."

He gave the nearest motorman a level glance that stopped him in mid-bang. A grim, contemptuous stare, sweeping over a befurred chauffeur and significant to his license number "brought the fellow's gauntleted hand quickly from the horn."

The chauffeur was won at last, and the old lady turned for a final word. "You're real good," she said, earnestly. "The city can't be such a dreadful place when there are boys like you in it. Is your mother living?"

"Yes, ma'am—in Ireland," returned Big Tim.

"I like you write to her?"

"Twice a month, ma'am." "Keep on writing. Don't ever miss Mother's set store by letters." She smiled fondly. "Good by, Mr. Policeman."

Big Tim半闭着眼睛，他的手在空中划了一个圈，然后松开了。他转过身来，继续他的巡逻。

To Sheila it was like a scene from a play. The snow was clean and fresh. The glittering glass windows, picked out by thin myriad lights, were the background. The old lady and Tim, unconscious, graceful and innocent, held the center of the stage. The hushing crowd on the walk lined in.

The tempo of the audience in the street changed at the little, impudent, impudent smile, the place to studies.

Big Tim dove into the tangle and zigzagged his way to the middle of the street, again. His white-gloved hand was likely to find himself jerked aside to the pavements by a blood-clad giant with a red face a catamount.

The next day after his quarrel with Sheila he tried his little kingdom with the impartial exchequer of Solomon, where it was all rose successively. The waiting whistle blew and traffic stopped. With one hand he held three converging strands; a gesture of the other and the forth hand worked its way through. Then he started the others back and forth with the calm confidence of the west wind, so far he'd design ever before him.

Success in Life.

The service in philosophy or speculative culture towards the human spirit is to rouse to stirle it into sharp and eager observation. Every moment some form grows perfect in hand or face, some tone on the ear's or sea is chosen than the rest; some mood of passion or insight or intellectual exertion is irresistibly real and attractive to us—for that moment only. Not the fruit of experience, but experience itself is the seed. A counted number of pulses only is given to us of a variegated, dramatic life. How may we see in them all that is to be seen in them other causes? How shall we pass most swiftly from point to point, and be present always at the focus where the greatest number of vital forces unite in their purest energy?

To burn always with this hard, gem-like flame, to maintain this ecstasy, is success in life—Walter Pater's Conclusion in "The Renaissance."

Managing

Willie

"I was over at Mrs. Kershaw's the other day," said the woman, with the little boy who was calling on her next door neighbor, "and I must say that she has changed of late years! Why, when I knew her as a girl she had such ability and was such a manager and you ought to see the way that house is run and the perfectly dreadful way she has with her children!"

"I don't believe in the old fashioned way of frightening children to pieces and making them obey you because they are afraid. I never have the least trouble with my Willie, because I treat him like a human being. Darnit, don't handle the fern, for Mrs.

Janes may not like it. Everybody isn't like mother, who understands how interested little boys are in nature. Stop bending the leaf dearest—oh, now, see! You've broken the whole stalk off! There, Willie, you see what happens when you don't obey mother!"

"It's perfectly wonderful, Mrs. Janes, the reasoning power displayed by that child! You wouldn't think it, but he understands cause and effect perfectly.

He bent the leaf—and it broke—an act and a result, you see! Willie, why did you break all those other leaves, too? Oh, so the plant would be even all around! Now, did you ever hear anything cleverer than that, Mrs. Janes? Willie has such an eye for form I am sure he is going to be something wonderful, aren't you?"

"I always believe in encouraging a child when he shows any signs of developing a particular faculty."

"There! Willie is investigating your cuckoo clock now. He has a passion for finding out the reason for things.

Willie, darling, you mustn't swing on the weights of the clock, you really mustn't!

"There! What did mother tell you?"

You swung on the weights and now you've pulled the whole clock down off the wall! You are likely to give people headaches when you make a big noise like that. Every one hasn't the perfect control of her nerves that mother has."

"There's everything in control, don't outthink me, Mrs. Janes! I never at any time let external fact upset me.

Oh, is the clock broken? Well, I don't believe it is a very big break and a clever clock can easily fix, you can't buy it from Switzerland and it has a complicated mechanism? Well, it does seem to me that Americans ought to be able to find enough good manufacturers in this country without encouraging the anarchists and paupers abroad.
I often heard my husband talk about political affairs, so I suppose I am better informed than most women.

"The way Mrs. Kershaw lets her children run over her is perfectly dreadful. She didn't seem to have the least control of them at all!"

"Willie, you mustn't scratch the minions with that pin. Mother means what she says, darling, and I expect you to obey! Not another scratch after that one you are making! I've no doubt if your furniture polish is the right kind, Mrs. Janes, it will rub the scratches off perfectly and, anyhow, they are such delicate ones. Willie has such a dandy touch with every thing that sometimes I think he is going to be an artist."

"Wh—Wil—lie—e! Didn't you hear me say not another scratch? And you've made at least six more! Now,

I simply will not be disturbed that way and you may go sit in the green velvet chair. Climb back and sit there! You see, Mrs. Janes, I always punish promptly when Willie doesn't mind me."

"If you had children yourself you'd understand how it warms a mother's heart to feel the little things depending on one and taking one's word as gospel law. Why, Willie would no sooner think of going contrary to my wishes than he would think of lying,
would you, dear?"

"My goodness, where is Willie? He isn't in the green velvet chair. You haven't a cellar door or anything open, have you, Mrs. Janes, that he might fall down? I can't understand—oh, you say he is on the other side of the plane; scratching it with another pin?

"Willie, come here—at once! Don't you know you grieve mother terribly when she finds that she can't trust you? Oh, you say you wanted to see if a black pin would make the same kind of a scratch as a white one! Did you ever—that investigating mind again! It makes me feel terribly responsible, Mrs. Janes, to think that it rests with me whether that shall all be mistakenly crushed out or encouraged."

"I've so enjoyed this little visit with you—it rests one to get a change from one's usual thoughts, you know. Come over soon—it will brighten you up and interest you to be where there is a child, and Willie is such a lovable little fellow."

"Kiss Mrs. Janes, darling. Why, what are you sticking out your tongue for?

You say because you hate her? Oh, Willie, it is wrong to hate any one! Hasn't he a cunning, pink little tongue, Mrs. Janes?"

"Some day when I'm going out I'll let you take him and keep him for a whole afternoon."
