OIL INSPECTION SHOWS BIG GAIN

LARGEST BUSINESS IN HISTORY OF DEPARTMENT.

Over Twenty-Thousand Dollars Netted for State Treasury.

State Oil Inspector Neal has issued his annual report for the past year and it shows the inspection during 1911 of 25,372,705 gallons of kerosene, of which 9,300 gallons were rejected as unsafe for illuminating purposes. The total tax collected was $34,157 and interest received was $227,750. Salaries and expenses paid deputies, $25,649.54; total salaries of the state inspectors' office, $2,631.75, leaving a net balance to turn into the state treasury of $20,050.17. This is the largest inspection of oil made in Michigan and the largest amount of net fees turned into the state treasury by $2,500.

Of the fifteen deaths reported, as the result of using gasoline, six were from filling stoves while they were lighted, two from defective stove burners, three from cleaning clothing, two in starting fires in stores with it and one was burned to death in a house which took fire from a defective gasoline torch.

Of the seventeen deaths from the use of kerosene, twelve resulted from its use in hurrying up fires in cook and heating stoves, three from filling lamps when they were lighted, one from falling over a lighted oil stove and one as a result of clothing catching fire when a lamp was broken by being knocked off the table.

The state inspector again calls the attention to the great danger in using kerosene oil for the purpose of starting or "hurrying up" fires in cooking and heating stoves.

As to the "Dogdays."

The "dogdays" are so called because the Greeks on first beholding the star Sirius with the naked eye were wont to sacrifice a brown dog to appease his wrath, the general belief being that Sirius was the cause of the hot, sultry weather usually attendant upon its appearance, and that on the first morning of its rising the sea boiled, wine turned sour, dogs grew mad and man became afflicted with all manner of burning fevers, hysterics and frenzies. At Argos a festival was held during the dogdays known as "Cynophantes," which means that dogs were killed on sight.

ECHO OF CIVIL WAR

Swanson's Bill to Recompense Southern Officers.

"BLOODY SHIRT" DAYS OVER

Measure Makes Charges of Cruelty Against Federal General That Would Have Raised Storm in Congress Some Years Ago.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—Occasionally in congress echoes are heard coming from Civil War days. Once on a time troubles growing out of the war between the states were a constant theme of oratory in congress. Those were what are known as the "bloody shirt" days, and old timers here say that it took only the mention of the previous sectional strife to stir things up and to put Northern Republicans and Southern Democrats into the ring to fight it out with bitter speeches as weapons. Now everything is changed, and it is not once in two years that anything approaching bitterness growing out of the Civil War is shown either in the house or in the senate.

During the war days there were Northern charges of extreme cruelty to Federal captives in Southern prisons. There was retort from the South that in a good many cases the North did not treat Confederate prisoners in accordance with the dictates of humanity and in the spirit of civilized warfare.

A day or two ago Senator Swanson of Virginia introduced a bill which, if it had been brought to public attention thirty years ago, would have raised a row. The Swanson measure was read twice and referred to the committee on claims, and its reading carved barely a ripple, although it had in its subject matter which years ago would have started the Northern and Southern brigadiers in congress on oratorical warfare.

Senator Swanson's bill asks that there be paid to certain surviving officers of the Confederate service the sum of $5,000 each as "damages and reparation." The Swanson bill sets forth that when Major General J. G. Foster of the Union forces heard that some Federal officers held in prison were in danger of being killed by shells fired from the batteries he for the purpose of retaliation was instrumental in causing some six hundred Confederate officers who were prisoners to be placed in the line of battle in the hope that they would be in danger of death from shot and shell.

Charges of Harsh Treatment.—The Swanson measure goes a great deal further than this in its charges when it says that the six hundred officers for forty-two days were given no daily rations except fromhardtack, crackers, "frequently wormy," one ounce of fat pickled pork and half a pint of brown soup, alternated at times with half a pint of mush made from meal that was old and wormy, while the only drinking water was impure.

More than this, the bill sets forth that the same six hundred Confederate soldiers were confined in cold, damp casemates without fire or blankets and that for sixty-five consecutive days at one time they were forced to live on a daily ration of ten ounces of rotten corn meal to which was added "an ample supply of cucumber and onion pickle which if eaten only increased the pangs of hunger."

Congress is told in this bill that such treatment of persons was "unjustifiable and contrary to all the acknowledged rights of belligerents, and without precedent as an established principle in civilized warfare."

Gardner and Smith Happy.—In the senate of the United States a place on the committee of agriculture is held in the highest esteem. Membership in the committee occasionally is much sought after by senators who have to know edge whatsoever of farming. It has been whispered in the past on one or two occasions that some of the senators have sought a place on agriculture in order to give the people of their states an idea that they are interested particularly in things which concern the farmer.

Recently there came into the senate membership two men, both Democrats, and both really deeply interested in agriculture. One of them was Hoke Smith of Georgia, who, while governor of that state, showed a lively interest in agricultural matters, and the other was Obadiah Gardner of Maine, who is a farmer and who for a long time was the chief officer of the Maine State Grange.

When these two new Democratic senators arrived it was found that they both wanted positions on the committee on agriculture, and both wanted them badly. There was only one vacancy on the committee, and as the committee on committees did not want to disappoint either Mr. Gardner or Mr. Smith an attempt was made to fix things. Finally Senator Percy of Mississippi said that he was willing for his service runs little more than a year to change the condition of a farmer for that of a sailor, and so he was transferred to the committee on naval affairs, thus creating two agricultural vacancies which promptly were filled by the appointment of Obadiah Gardner and Hoke Smith.

Army Bill in Peril.

Representative Hay of Virginia, chairman of the house committee on military affairs, has introduced a bill together to the liking of officers and enlisted men, and which, it is said, also, is not altogether to the liking of the administration. Of course no one knows what change of mind may come to the army and to President Taft, but Mr. Hay and his colleagues in the house, in order to give the bill an additional chance for passage and signature, have attached it as a "rider" to the army appropriation bill.

This means that if it passes, the president in signing the appropriation bill must sign the other bill also. He cannot separate the two, and if he wishes to veto the Hay bill as "vicious legislation," he must also veto the measure which provides sustenance and pay for officers and enlisted men of the army.

Way back in the time of President Hayes, congress passed an army appropriation bill with a "rider" attached which was objectionable to the Republican party and the Republican administration. The president did not hesitate a minute to veto the bill, and as a consequence the army found itself without pay for a considerable period of time. Warren Leland, one of the hotel keeping brothers, who were in their day as good hosts and providers, had been given a good share of army patronage, officers seeking out the Leland hotels in whatever cities they could be found. The old Sturtevant house in New York, which stood at Broadway and Twenty-eighth street, and which long ago disappeared, was one of the Leland hostilities. There was another in Chicago, and some others elsewhere.

Warren Leland's Big Offer.—When President Hayes vetoed the army appropriation bill in order to get rid of its "rider," Warren Leland wrote a personal letter to every army and navy officer in the United States and to the members of the furlough and graduating classes at West Point and Annapolis. In the letter he said that his hotels and all that was in them, were at the command of the officers of the army and navy, and that he was perfectly willing to wait till doom's day for his pay, knowing that if at any period this side of that day congress should pass the army bill the money recompense for board and lodging furnished would be forthcoming. Mr. Leland lost nothing by this word of welcome to officers of the service, who faced temporary conditions of pauperism.

Mr. Merriam's New Position.—Dr. C. Hart Merriam, who until recently was the chief of the government's biological survey, which is a bureau of the department of agriculture, is now the head of what is known as the Harriman Zoological Foundation with headquarters in this city. Dr. Merriam is perhaps the highest authority in America on subjects pertaining to the life of mammals and birds, and he is one of the chief authorities on American Indian history, tradition and folk lore.

The Harriman Zoological Foundation was provided for in the will of Edward H. Harriman, the railroad magnate who died less than two years ago. The headquarters of research and have been established in Washington, and here Mr. Merriam, in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Harriman, as expressed in his will, is to carry forward the work of extending knowledge of natural history.

Few people knew that Edward H. Harriman, one of the richest men in the United States, and one whose time seemingly was almost wholly given over to the extension of railroad lines and the securing of railroad holdings, had any other heart interest than that of business.

Discovering His Other Side.—If one may be forgiven for speaking personally, the story of how I found out that Mr. Harriman cared for other things than his family and stocks and bonds, may not be uninteresting. Not long before Mr. Harriman's death, newspaper business called me to Augusta, Ga. My companion on the trip knew Edward H. Harriman personally. Just as the train was leaving Washington, Mr. Harriman's private car was attached to it, for the railroad man was going on a visit to his brother in the south.

My companion was invited to dine with Mr. Harriman in his private car, and I was included in the invitation out of politeness. I never had seen Mr. Harriman before. I sat in the first seat at his left at the dinner table. The other guests were three men of huge business affairs, one of them the head of the greatest railroad organization in the United States and the others proportionately great in the world of business. Nothing but business was talked at the dinner table, the extension of this line and that line; and stocks and bonds and other things floated around until I felt utterly shut out because of these things. I did not know much, and cared less.

Finally, in order to let my host know I was alive, I turned to him and said: "I have all the journals of the Harriman Alaskan expedition thus far issued, and what is more, I have read them." His interest in Natural History, Mr. Harriman's eye lighted. He turned to me with a sort of surprised enthusiasm, and he said in a voice that was almost an exclamation: "I seldom find anyone outside of the circles of the strict scientists who have more than a sort of a hazy recollection that once on a time there was such a thing as a Harriman Alaskan expedition." So far as this man of huge and perhaps overpowering commercial operations was concerned, there was precious little else in the conversation for the next hour except his journey to Alaska taken ten years before in the company of men known all over the world for their scientific attainments. The man of huge business affairs and of the Harriman Alaskan expedition, business and science were combined in him.

33 INDICTMENTS IN DYNAMITING CASES

ARRESTS ARE TO BE MADE IN 20 CITIES AS SOON AS MARCH 15 IS NOTIFIED.

LABOR UNIONISTS ARE HELD BY U. S. GRAND JURY.

Jury Acts Secretly—Men to Be in Clutches of Law Before Names Are Made Public.

Thirty-three secret indictments, most of them thought to be against labor union leaders, were returned by the federal grand jury in Indianapolis in the grand dynamite conspiracy investigation carried on after the McNamara outrages.

An arrest or arrests will follow in Detroit.

Former associates of J. J. McNamara in the office of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, received the news of the indictments without surprise.

Both Frank M. Ryan, the president, and Herbert S. Hocking, formerly of Detroit, the secretary-treasurer, said they knew the direction of the investigation because the association's records were evidence before the grand jury.

Part of the indictments are known to be against men who met Orrie McManigal in Detroit in June, 1907, and induced him, because of his familiarity with explosives, gained while working in a stone quarry, to become a regular member of McNamara's "dynamiting crew."

Other indictments are believed to be against men who met McManigal in Boston and showed him where to put the explosives which blew up part of an opera house there March 27, 1909, and who afterwards went with him to Springfield, Mass., and showed him where to blow up part of a municipal building.

District Attorney Miller announced that only 22 of the indictments pertained to the dynamiting conspiracy, one true bill being in another case not made known.

ELOPING PAIR DIE.

Divorced Wife of Millionaire Slaydahl and Lover Fulfill Pact.

Death self-sought, but the final drama played out, the romance of Frederick William Slaydahl, plumber, and his wife, who, while still divorced, were found in a rooming house in New York city, both dead.

Clashed in 1907 over other aims, they were found lifeless in a rooming house in New York city, both dead. The cause of death was not known, but it was believed that they had entered into a pact to die together.

The pair is believed to have been married within a few years of their marriage a month ago.

TROOPS TO MEXICAN LINE

U. S. Hustles Troops to Prevent Firing into This Country.

The United States, again took a hand in the Mexican question by rushing troops to the Texas border.

A concerted movement of soldiers began from the Gulf and Pacific departments and the Texas coast will be lined with U. S. regulars to prevent Mexicans from firing into this country or using U. S. points as supply bases.

If the Mexicans do not obey the edict the U. S. will declare war on Mexico.

Republic Shapes Terms With Yuan.

A complete armistice has been arranged, but bargaining between Premier Yuan Shi Kai and the republic leaders is likely to continue for several weeks before the court finally settles.

Chinese papers publish the terms laid down by the emperor's daughter, which include the perpetuation of the titles of the entire court, retention by the imperial family of the palaces in Peking, continuation of the imperial guard at the expense of the republicans and the right of the court to exact regal homage from the nation.

Bandits Hold Up Arkansas Train

Five men plucked the mail and express cars of Rock Island train No. 47 near Hubball, Ark., and made away with their booty long before an alarm was spread and posses could seek their trail. The hold-up was so cleverly planned and executed with such precision that none of the train employees could offer resistance and few of the passengers knew anything had happened until they awoke to find their train stalled.

St. Joseph's Academy, a historic Catholic institution in Binghamton, N. Y., was destroyed by fire.

Adverse conditions marked the first trade during the year 1911. The 1911 receipts totaled $5,000,000 pounds compared with 140,000,000 pounds in 1910.

Fire, which for a time threatened to destroy a large part of the state hospital for the insane at Danvers, Mass., caused a loss that will reach $15,000. There were 1,200 male and female inmates in the buildings, but it was necessary to remove only about 150 men from one section of the men's ward where the flames were confined. The time was one of the most serious in the history of the institution.

ASK HIGHER WAGE SCALE

Locomotive Engineers Have Made Demand for Increase.

Managers of all the railroads entering Detroit, as well as all those east of Chicago and north of the line of the Norfolk & Western railway and the Ohio river, have been presented with a demand by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, demanding a general increase of wages. The increase asked is said to range from 15 to 25 per cent. The object is said to be to standardize the wage scale on all lines in this territory, as was done by the trainmen and conductors in 1910.

The General Managers' association has been asked to appoint a committee to negotiate with a committee of the Brotherhood in order that the question can be dealt with collectively. In 1910 the trainmen and conductors made a similar demand, which was refused by the General Managers' association. It then became necessary for the unions to negotiate with each road individually. Although this was done, it developed that all of the railroads finally granted the standard scale demanded.

Doubly Proven

Northville Readers can no Longer Doubt the Evidence.

This Northville citizen testified long ago.
Told of quick relief of lasting benefit.
The facts are now confirmed.
Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.
It forms convincing proof of merit.
Henry Priest, Mill St., Northville, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with gratifying results and have great confidence in their curative powers. Several years ago I was annoyed by a severe backache which made it hard for me to work. Doan's Kidney Pills had previously been used in my family with great benefit and deciding to try them, I procured a supply at Murdock Bros' Drug Store. Soon after finishing their use, my backache disappeared and now I am free from the trouble." (Statement given November 20, 1906.)

THE CURE LASTED.
On March 1, 1909, Mr. Priest was interviewed and he said: "I am pleased to confirm the statement I gave for publication three years ago, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. Since that remedy cured me I have had no need of a kidney medicine."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Miss Olive Dixon went to Detroit Tuesday attending the play, "Little Women," with her sister Irene, in evening.

While a bell was being loaded on a dray Wednesday at the Bell Foundry it slipped off the crane hook, striking Charles Hulse on the forehead and nose. This was a pretty close call but it is Mr. Hulse's belief, though still confined to the house.

The "Circle X" boys, effected a very neat surprise on Earl and Earl Simpson last Thursday evening. The three boys were being entertained by Miss Smith when they received a phone message to the effect that there were two baseball men waiting to see them at their home. Down they came to find the house full of ball boys and girls. When they recovered, a very pleasant time was had by all present.

PARROT AS GERM CARRIER

Physician Finds the Bird is Subject to Disease Human Beings May Contract.

Better not keep a parrot. A physician has discovered that birds of this species are subject to a disease called psittacosis, which is peculiarly contagious, and may easily be contracted by human beings. As a germ carrier, in fact, the parrot is unrivaled.

Now the Office Window is not particularly afraid of germs. They may be quite as bad, quite as dangerous, as they are represented. But what is the use of trying to get away from them? We cannot eat, drink or breathe without taking in germs. We associate with them from morning till night. They are bound to work their will with us anyway—so we may as well ignore them and have as good a time as we can, before they get us.

But the Office Window is perfectly willing to take advantage of the germs as an ally against the parrot. This preposterous bird has nothing to recommend him except his likeness to the bird species. He does not sing, but squawks. He is regarded as worthless unless he can "talk," in a kind of harsh resemblance to human speech. He is neither bird nor human; he is a disorderly episode in creation. He grates on the poetic soul. He is a nuisance—New York Mail.

Opportunity at West Point.

Deeply fixed in the thought of the more well-to-do, is the belief that anything like equality of opportunity or condition would be incompatible with their own enjoyment and with efficiency of work in the lower classes. The dignity of self-sustained leadership on the one hand, and the spur of necessity on the other, seems to them the only forces which can keep the world moving. But this belief has really no higher authority than that of tradition and long-established custom. West Point, and in only a few degrees the service outside, demonstrates the impotence of wealth or privilege as a necessary spur to endeavor. Equality of opportunity, privileges, and pecuniary rewards are found to be in no sense incompatible with individual initiative, with efficiency in work and with the general happiness. No less results—rather, the reverse—from the absence of all extraneous advantages, and from compelling every one to stand on his own merit, performing the work for which he is fitted without any reference to the pecuniary compensation which he receives.—The Atlantic.

An Iconoclast.

"All over Europe my wife has made enemies by boldly doubting cherished traditions," said the traveler, "but her skepticism respecting Alfred the great embroiled her in the most serious difficulty. An old gentleman who sat with this, blue fingers spread above the feeble blaze from which my wife, red-nosed and shivering, endeavored to extract a little warmth, expatiated on the cake-burning episode. Said my wife abruptly: 'Don't tell me that old yarn again, please. I don't believe a word of it.'"

"Why not?" he demanded.

"Because," she said, "there never was a fire in England hot enough to burn cakes."

"Her retort did for the old gentleman what the first had failed to do, it made him hot, but even so, he never forgave her."

Incumbrance.

"No," said Mr. Cumrox; "I don't in the least disapprove of my daughter's marrying a title."

"But you seem dissatisfied."

"I am. What I object to is the fellow that goes with it."

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says: "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other for croup there is nothing that excels it. For sale by all dealers."

Lawson Puts Asunder

By M. J. PHILLIPS

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Let's go to Mr. Grievé," urged a voice outside Edward Lawson's door. It was a very humble door, since he was junior partner in the great law firm of Grievé, Field & Morrison.

"No," replied another voice, which he was sure he recognized, "we'll go in here. Edwy Lawson will know as well as anyone."

Lawson rose precipitately to greet Jean Melbourne, her mother, and Ferd Van Sluyck. Jean was frowning, though her eyes showed evidences of recent tears.

"Oh, Edwy," began Jean, plaintively, "we're in the worst trouble! And we want you to help us out."

Van Sluyck moved stiffly in his chair. Mrs. Melbourne did not seem desolated.

"We've been such sillies," continued the girl, "I can't see why we didn't think—"

"What is it?" Anxiety sharpened Edwy's voice a bit.

"You tell, mother," urged Jean.

Mrs. Melbourne smiled. "No, Jean; you must tell him yourself."

"Well, Edwy," began Jean, plaiting her handkerchief. "I have a house party of girls. There are eight of us and last night we decided to put on a play—impromptu, you know."

"We borrowed a paper-backed novel from the cook, 'A Wild Wedding Morn,' and Nell Chatters assigned the parts. Really, it was funny. We didn't know what any character was going to say, and we had to think up answers on the spur of the moment to keep things going."

"I was the persecuted heroine because I have light hair; persecuted heroines are always blonde. The 'wild wedding morn' was the climax of the third act; so of course we had to have a wedding."

"Ferd had been up to see papa on business and was going through the hall just as we were setting the stage sure the law called it a marriage."

Mrs. Melbourne rose. She was positively beaming. "Thank you so much, Mr. Lawson. Mr. Melbourne will send you a check. Come, dear."

Ferd, caressing an insufferable little mustache, was also beaming. Edwy felt like biting him.

"Mind, I don't say positively this ceremony is binding," he said wickily. "I would have to know all the circumstances; and, come to think of it, there is a supreme court decision of 1878 that has a bearing on certain mock marriages. I will look that up and call tonight to let you know," he finished, boldly.

"There's no hurry," began Mrs. Melbourne, quickly.

"Oh, yes there is!" assured Jean, who had been dashing her eyes with her handkerchief. "Do come up, Edwy."

That evening the attorney was striding back and forth like a menagerie exhibit. He and Jean were alone in the cozy back parlor. The light-hearted house party was making merry elsewhere.

Edwy sat down as far as possible from Jean. He did not dare go near; there was a subdued persistency about her altogether unaccustomed and charming. He wanted to cuddle and to comfort her, and he hadn't the right or the money to give him the right.

"Well," he began, as cheerfully as possible, "the '78 decision has nothing to do with your case. The ceremony is legal and binding."

Jean sighed and looked down at her interlarded fingers. "Oh, well," she said, gently, "I don't know that it makes much difference. Everybody's delighted—Ferd and his mother and my mother—"

"I thought your mother was," remarked Lawson.

"You did?"

"Yes, I did; Van Sluyck hasn't anything to do with money. He's a catch."

"Why, Edwy?" There was an in-jured look in her dewy eyes.

"And so are you delighted," he charged, harshly. "He can give you a flock of automobiles, and a forty-room house. Balm, money, money, money! It's the only thing that counts nowadays."

She smiled. "You shouldn't talk so, Mr. Lawson. I have a perfect right to abide by the law."

"You haven't?" Edwy's voice was harsh with irony. "That marriage must be annulled."

"Must be annulled why?"

"Because I want you myself—and I'm going to have you."

He thrust her hands to his breast, and kissed the pink palms.

Jean swayed toward him. "Oh, Edwy," she whispered, "I was afraid you were never going to say it!"

After a while, some minutes—or maybe hours—later, Jean remarked demurely, "I really don't think an annulment is necessary, Edwy. You see, when I told you I'd love, honor and obey Ferd, I didn't say 'Yes'."

"You didn't?" cried Edwy excitedly.

"I said, 'No, never.' I wouldn't promise to obey any man."

Affectionate mirthfulness bubbled up in Edwy's eyes. "You little sea lawyer, you! That really does put the whole thing in the catalogue of jokes."

"But," he continued, shrewdly, "why didn't you tell me that in the office this afternoon?"

Her burrowing movement fixed a few more grains of rice powder in the shoulder of his coat. "Because I wanted to tell you—here!" she whispered.

"Everybody's delighted"

In the parlor. The girls dragged him in; they said it would be much more realistic to have a man for that scene. She paused and looked at Lawson.

"I see," the young attorney smiled, "we had the ceremony, with Ferd as bridegroom—"

"And now some one has told you that a mock wedding, properly witnessed, is binding in this state."

"Why, yes," agreed the girl in surprise.

"I've heard of such cases before."

"What we want to know, Mr. Lawson," asked the complacent Mrs. Melbourne, "is whether the ceremony is really binding."

"I don't know—yet," sighed Edwy. He turned to Jean. "What sort of rigmorale did you go through with?"

"Polly Pearson acted as the minister," replied the girl, "and what she said sounded natural."

Lawson's heart swooped down through limitless depths of despair, like a broken aeroplane. Polly Pearson was the sister of the Episcopal minister and had been witness at a hundred weddings. Doubtless she had the wedding service letter-perfect.

"You made the proper answers, Van Sluyck?" asked the attorney.

"I did," returned that young man.

"It was a very foolish thing to do," remarked Lawson.

Van Sluyck colored hotly. "We are not all lawyers," he retorted, loftily, and Edwy hated him.

"Then it's legal?" queried Jean, anxiously.

"I'm afraid it is; the law is joke-proof. It takes no account of the spirit in which the words of the marriage service are uttered—so long as they are uttered."

Jean was pale. She looked from her mother to Ferd and back again. "What a bother!" she sighed. "And we'll have to go into court, and all that!"

The complacent Mrs. Melbourne glanced keenly at her daughter for a moment. "Is it such a terrible thing, Jean—the ceremony, I mean? Another formal one—"

Van Sluyck leaned forward eagerly in his chair. "I don't think it's a calamity, Jean. You know how I feel—how I've always felt."

Jean stole a peep at Edwy Lawson from under her long eyelashes. He was digging vicious holes in his desk blotter.

"I don't know," she sighed. "I couldn't think what to do, until—"

Guillotine for Soldier Murderers.

The senate yesterday passed a bill under which soldiers or sailors sentenced to death by a court martial will henceforth be guillotined instead of being shot, except in cases where the offense is one which comes directly under military law. This bill was brought in after the murder some months ago of Mme. Gouin by soldiers, one of whom, Graby, was sentenced to death. His sentence was eventually committed to one of life imprisonment, it being deemed inadvisable to ask men doing compulsory military service to form a firing party. The chamber of deputies passed the bill.

HOUSEWORK IS A HEAVY BURDEN

When Kidney Troubles Keep You in Misery Day and Night

The woman who "keeps house" has enough to do when she is in good, sound health, but if she is weak, tired all the time, and suffering from morn to night with an aching back, house-work becomes a heavy burden.

Many women who were afflicted in this way say that Doan's Kidney Pills have made life easier for them.

Women are subject to kidney disease. The clothing they wear, the work they do, the worry and strain of bearing and rearing children, the lack of proper exercise, all tend to it.

Backache, bearing-down pains, headache, dizzy spells, faintness, fits of "blues," and other troubles often thought to be peculiar to the sex, are found frequently in kidney disease. When any one of these ailments appears, together with a discolored condition of the kidney secretions, with passages too frequent, scanty or burning, just make up your mind that your kidneys are weak, and be quick to help them.

Doan's Kidney Pills have helped a great many weak women through the trying times when kidney disease means so much added misery. They do not disturb the stomach or bowels and contain no poisonous, dangerous nor habit-forming drugs. Doan's are harmless for children too.

"I just can't get up!"

The following case is typical of the cures effected by Doan's Kidney Pills. Grateful testimony is the best evidence.

SAVED HER LIFE

Mrs. F. M. Hill, 188 W. 10 St., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "I enjoyed the best of health until the winter of 1905, when I was seized with kidney trouble. I gradually grew worse until I was devoid of all energy and ambition. There was a stinging pain through my kidneys, followed by a dull, grinding ache across my loins. The whites of my eyes changed color and the eyeballs bulged. My hands puffed and my feet became so swollen I could not wear my shoes. The kidney secretions caused great pain and also annoyed by their too frequent passage. I got so I could not eat, lost weight and was gradually growing weaker and weaker, when my father advised Doan's Kidney Pills. I obtained so much benefit from them that I continued and by the end of the first week the backaches and headaches had disappeared. I grew steadily better, and was at last completely cured. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life when I was so sick that I did not care whether I lived or died. The doctors as well as myself and your hope of my ever getting well. I am so grateful that I cannot recommend Doan's Kidney Pills too highly."

JUST A LITTLE TOO HASTY

Mr. Newlywed Resented What He Considered Impertinence, but the Joke Was on Him.

They were on their wedding tour, and imagined that every civility given them related to their new condition of servitude.

Having stopped at a way station, the bridegroom was approached by the station agent, who asked: "Are you going to take the next train?"

"It's none of your business," retorted the bridegroom, indignantly, as he guided the bride up the platform, where they condescended with each other over the impertinence of some of the natives.

Onward came the train, its vapor curling from afar. It was the last to their destination that day—an express. Neater and nearer it came at full speed, then in a moment it whizzed past and was gone.

"Why a thunder didn't that train stop!" yelled the bridegroom.

"Cos you said 'twasn't none of my business. I has to signal if that train's to stop."

A DRAW.

PIMPLES COVERED HIS BACK

"My troubles began along in the summer in the hottest weather and took the form of small eruptions and itching and a kind of smarting pain. It took me mostly all over my back and kept getting worse until finally my back was covered with a mass of pimples which would burn and itch at night so that I could hardly stand it. This condition kept getting worse and worse until my back was a solid mass of big sores which would break open and run. My underclothing would be a clot of blood."

"I tried various remedies and salves for nearly three years and I was not getting any benefit. It seemed I was in eternal misery and could not sleep on my back or lean on a chair. I was finally given a set of the Cuticura Remedies and inside of two weeks I could see and feel a great relief. I kept on using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and also the Resolvent, and in about three or four months' time my back was nearly cured and I felt like a new being. Now I am in good health and no sign of any skin diseases and I am fully satisfied that Cuticura Remedies are the best ever made for skin diseases. I would not be without them." (Signed) W. A. Armstrong, Carlin, Kan., May 26, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Smoke was seen coming from the hotel Sunday morning and it was found that the partition between the office and the hall was on fire. An alarm was given and it was soon extinguished. ## Confidence

We Back up Our Statements with Our Personal Reputation and Money

We are so positive that we can relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine free of all cost if we fail.

We think that it is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartics. Cathartics may do much harm. They may cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels, and make constipation more chronic.

Constipation is often accompanied and may be caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or colon. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those parts and restore them to healthier activity.

The discovery of the active principle of our remedy involved the labor of skillful research chemists. This remedy produces results such as are expected from the best-known intestinal tonics, and it is particularly prompt in its results.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are exceedingly pleasant to take and are ideal for children. They apparently act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels, having, it would seem, a neutral action on other organs or glands. They do not purge or cause laxation. If they do not positively cure chronic or habitual constipation and thus relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, your money will be refunded. Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes of packages, 10c, 25c and 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at my store, The Retail Store, 401 E. Main St., Northville.

Just Among Friends

"Well, well, look who's here!" cried Miss Connelly, gayly, as she teetered across the luncheon room toward the table about which sat her particular circle of friends. "Merry over, kiddo," she adjoined little Miss Hoffman. "Make room for your aunt."

"Make room for your aunt," Miss Hoffman obeyed, giggling.

"Say, Huffy," said Miss Connelly, warningly, as she set down her tray, which contained a hygienically paralyzing collection of foodstuffs, "you better be careful with them ingrowing wheezes of yours. One of 'em's liable to strike in. Well, Mame, 'she continued after she had begun a determined attack on a large piece of roast pork, 'how's the pink crepe de chair and the blue messaline coming on?"

"They're all right," replied Miss Peterson. "I was to the dressmaker's last evening. The crepe de chair fits elegant, but the messaline kinda buckles around the waist."

"Say, ain't that too bad?" cried Miss Connelly. "Don't let goodness sake, tell me there's anything wrong with the pink net tunic with the jewel embroidery. With my weak heart I don't believe I could stand the shock."

Miss Peterson looked at her suspiciously. "I don't know's you need to bother about it."

Miss Connelly included the group in a comprehensive wink.

"Girls," she said, "ain't it funny how bein' in love makes some folks get sore so easy? Now, I thought when Mame really got her hooks on Joe she'd be so tickled that she'd be sweeter'n pie. My! I'm disappointed."

Miss Peterson hit her lip angrily. Miss Frizkie broke into the conversation with the laudable object of smoothing the troubled waters.

"Say, girls," she cried eagerly, "wouldn't it be swell if Mame got off the sale up in the millinery today. Peachy, eh?"

"Willow plumes!" ejaculated Miss Larson, who up to this time had been giving her undivided attention to her luncheon. "Say, you are gold! some, ain't you, Mame? Who's going to get her supper while you're out?"

"Why, ain't you ashamed of yourself, Stet Larson?" broke in Miss Connelly. "Where did you get such common ideas? Didn't you know Joe took a suite at the swellest hotel in town for the winter? You don't suppose he expects Mame to do anything so unbecomingly as her own cooking? You'd better confine yourself to making noise like a deaf and dumb party if you don't know no better'n that."

"Oh, pucker!" sniffed Miss Larson. "You talk like a fish, Nell Connelly. But, on the square, Mame, I should think you'd rather wait a while on the chance of locatin' a fellow who could, maybe buy you some clothes after twenty years or so, instead of stockin' up for the rest of your life."

"Well, if it comes to that, Stet Larson," said Miss Peterson, tensely, "I don't know as that pinhead I see you comin' down on the car with ever day looks like he was goin' to be able to buy swell clothes any more than other folks' friends."

"Oh, cut it, folks," interrupted Miss Frizkie. "Seems like this bunchin' ought to be able to get together once in a while without scappin'."

Miss Connelly nodded approvingly. "That's where you soaked the tack on the bean, Jen," she said. "Merry little sunbeams like us ought to be able to have a quiet, friendly meet without endin' up in a sluggin' match. But on the level, Mame," she added, turning to Miss Peterson, "when are you and Joe plannin' to pull off that little matrimonial celebration?"

"I don't know's you need worry about it," snapped Miss Peterson.

"Oh, I ain't goin' to bother none," returned Miss Connelly. "But it hurts me to see a nice, industrious girl like you work so hard to land a fellow and have such awful poor luck. There ain't anything I wouldn't do to help you. Now, if you get a strange hold on him some time and don't dare let go for fear he'll ditch you, you send me a hurry up call and I'll be tickled to come around and hang on to him while you run and get the preacher."

Miss Peterson rose so suddenly that her chair fell over with a crash.

"Look here, Nell Connelly," she said, furiously, "some day you'll find you're altogether too smart. I want you to understand that I don't pick fights with nobody, because that ain't my nature, but when I do scrap I scrap to a finish. It's about time for you to quit this funny business. I suppose you think you make a terrible hit with your smart remarks, but I could tell you some different!"

"Anyway, when I get as old as some folks maybe I'll have to call in somebody to help me land a fellow. When I get as old as some folks I hope I'll know enough to mind my own business."

With this luminous speech Miss Peterson gave the prostrate chair a kick and bounced away.

"Meanin' everybody excepted except present company," remarked Miss Connelly, calmly. "Girls, pass me Mame's plate that she forgot to eat."

WHAT HORSE-POWER MEANS

Example of Great Liner's Turbine Engines Given to Explain the Common Phrase.

In connection with steamship propulsion the average man is apt to speak very glibly of so many hundred or thousand horse-power. But it is extremely doubtful if one person in a hundred really has a due appreciation of what the phrase actually means.

On this point some very interesting remarks were made by John Heck, the Glasgow engineer surveyor.

He said that, calculating the strength of twelve men to be equal to "one horse-power," it would require 340,000 men to produce as much energy as the 70,000 horse-power developed by the turbine machinery of the express Cunarder Lusitania. Then if the men were to work on the eight hour day system those figures would give a total of 2,720,000, that being the number of men whose strength would be necessary to drive the vessel across the Atlantic ocean. So it would take all the men in Scotland to supply the energy produced all the day round by the wonderful turbine machinery of this great ship.—Railway and Locomotive Engineer.
