MRS. E. BARKLEY PASSED AWAY

Was a Resident of Northville the Past Four Years.

Mrs. Elizabeth Barkley died in the home of her sister, Mrs. G. W. Sinclair, Monday night, aged seventy-five years. She had been gradually failing all winter but only confined to her bed about two weeks. She had been a resident of Northville the past four years and a faithful member of the Methodist church, where, by her quiet and unassuming way, won the love of a host of friends who will sincerely mourn her death.

She is survived by one son who lives in the West, and three sisters, Mrs. Coulter of Milford, Mrs. Green of Pontiac and Mrs. Sinclair of this place. The funeral was held Thursday morning from the home, Rev. R. M. Pierce officiating and the caskets taken to Franklin for interment.

Free Lecture.

Do not forget the lecture at the High school tonight (Friday) Prof. Turner of the U. of M. will speak on "The Morocco Question." The lecture will begin at 8:00 o'clock and as the room is limited to one hundred and twenty only, the early birds will be able to get seats. Take advantage of such an opportunity as is given at this lecture and hear something good.

Somewhat Contradictory.

One of the new books of reference states in its preface that the names received too late for insertion will be found in the appendix. This reminds us of an Australian editor's contemptuous note to a correspondent: "Your letter is so scurrious that we omit any reference to it."

W. B. Africans.

That race in Northern Africa known as the Berbers is white, and if they dressed like our own people and had the habits of Americans or Europeans they could easily pass for such. The Berbers are believed to be descendants of the white inhabitants of ancient Europe. They are Mohammedans. Blue eyes, fair hair, and red cheeks are quite common among them, and many of the women are strikingly handsome.—Harper's Weekly.

Women in Suicide Epidemic.

No fewer than five suicides, all of women, were committed in Paris one recent day. A mother and her daughter took cyanide of potassium because they had had no food for three days. The daughter was a little artist. A young Austrian girl of 18 threw herself onto the rails as a train was entering the Marbeuf station of the Metro. A woman of 40 took arsenic, and the fifth, who was 27, shot herself through the heart.

Inspired Famous Hymn.

"Jesus, Lover of My Soul" is a hymn around which many traditions and sacred associations cling. The story connected with its origin may be legendary, but it is no less beautiful. Its author, Charles Wesley, was sitting at his desk by an open window when a bird pursued by a hawk flew in. The bird was saved, for the hawk feared to follow it. The incident inspired Wesley to write his famous lines.

U. S. TROOPS IN HONDURAS

Marines Land to Protect Property of Americans.

There has been a clash between United States and Honduras authorities over enforcement of a government decree directing representatives of W. S. Valentine to surrender to government authorities the railroad wharf and other properties held under lease by the Valentine syndicate.

Seventy-five marines from the U. S. submarine Petrel landed and seized the wharf and railroad. Honduran troops were then ordered to stop all traffic. The governor had filed a protest.

Retailers Urge for Protection.

Several different lines of trade in Michigan formed the Michigan Federation of Retail Merchants, hoping to unite all state associations of retailers in the state into a strong non-partisan political organization.

Arthur L. Holmes of Detroit, father of the idea, was present and urged that the merchants, like railroad men and others, ought to have the right to meet to discuss the cost of running their business, and to arrange for a fair margin of profit. Mr. Holmes is one of the lumbermen recently indicted in the federal court in Detroit under the Sherman anti-trust law, which he declared should be amended so that retailers cannot be prosecuted under it.

Officers of the Michigan Federation were elected as follows: President, E. S. Ross; Buchanan, vice-president; G. V. Koenig, Detroit, secretary-treasurer; F. M. Whitbeck, Lansing; These with Arthur L. Holmes of Detroit, will control overall affairs.

The company of Saginaw is backed by financial resources totaling commercial interests amounting to many millions of dollars. The Saginaw which are said to be under 200,000, which are seriously handicapping business in the city. In addition, there are other cities and towns. The board of trade and other sources in Michigan help west and south in the road to railroads.

It is claimed that in dependence of the state of Michigan services have been given to the big guns of the New York Stock Exchange, but Arthur L. Holmes says that the company is insolvent and its liability exposure is nil. While the assessed valuation is $100,000,000, the actual assets are represented as being less than $10,000,000. In the last five years no dividends have been paid and the company is believed to be in deficit.

In the last five years no dividends have been paid and the company is believed to be in deficit.

Because of the strong opposition of this sentiment the legislature in Michigan and legislatures in other states have been almost unanimous in their support of the bill.

It is also claimed that there will be $1,500,000 deficit for the current year and that there are 150,000 bonds falling due in total.

People, failure, freight shortage, traffic blockade, injunction, etc., have come to the Rockies upon the management and patrons as matters of course.

Check Forged On Very Last Day.

Checks that were forged by H. M. Dearing, defaulter cashier of the Alton National bank, on the last day on which the bank defied business have turned up. These forgeries took place while the federal examiner was conducting the examination which closed the institution. Several other suits are expected to be started by the bank receiver within the coming weeks.

Assets of Lennon Bank Intact.

With the finding of a receipt for $17,000 worth of notes which were taken by the state banking commissioner on his last visit, and which will be returned and an additional amount of $1,000 in transit, the assets of the E. Dust Jennes's bank are now thought to be intact and will cover all deposits. The total assets are placed at $88,553.21, while the deposits are $84,729.10.

The U. S. Steel Corporation mines at Ishpeming will be operated six days a week instead of four. Five hundred men are affected.

The board of supervisors of Genesee county voted to submit the question of bonding the county for $500,000 to the electors of the county at the spring election. The money will be used for building county roads.

So much agitation has come up over the enforcement of Saginaw's meat ordinance from the farmers throughout the county that it has been suggested to ask the legislature at its next session for a law providing for a state inspection.

A general order has been issued by the state railroad commission demanding that the railroads travel at a low rate of speed over places where there are known to be broken rails. Many rails have been broken lately by the cold weather.

A meeting of Democrats was held in Alpena to perfect plans for the coming campaign. A straw vote resulted as follows: Wilson 27, Hammon 5, A. Wilson 1, club will be organized, leading Democrats being unanimous for the New Jersey man.

OBJECT: EXPRESSION AS TO PRESIDENTIAL PREFERENCE

"That, passing scruples aside, that the rights of those who are living in a subordinate capacity shall not be trespassed upon or in any manner endangered or reasonably directed by the action of a majority of the people."

PLANS NO INTERVENTION

Government Makes Attitude Known to Mexican Agents.

Intervention in Mexico by the United States is not intended by any mobilization of troops that might be made again along the southern border. This was the attitude of the state department telegraphed to various consular and diplomatic representatives in Mexico who had complained that intervention talk there was forcing a dangerous anti-American sentiment.

The state department reiterated emphatically that this government had no interest in Mexico beyond the safety of American lives and interests, but from the same consul agents came reports far from reassuring as to the stability of the Mexican federal government.

Only Three Leave Michigan Faculty.

"No more professors are leaving Michigan this year than leave at the close of every year, and no more than leave any college in the country at the close of each year," said President Hutchins of the University of Michigan, when asked about the story being circulated about the state to the effect that Michigan was losing many of her best men this year.

Factory Burns At 29 Below Zero.

The most costly fire Traverse City has had in years wiped out the factory of the South Side Co. The operating plant is a total loss, including a large quantity of material and completed commodities. The office building and storage shed were saved. The thermometer was 29 degrees below zero and the water froze coming from the fire hose nozzles.

ASK RELIEF FROM PERE MARQUETTE

SAGINAW BOARD OF TRADE ASKS ATTY. GEN. KUHN TO END PRESENT INTOLERABLE CONDITIONS.

BUSINESS IS BEING SERIOUSLY DAMAGED BY POOR SERVICE.

Alleged That State Is Deprived of Proper Service for Benefit of High Financiers of New York City.

Alleging that the Pere Marquette railroad is hopelessly in debt, that its earnings are swallowed up in payment of enormous interest which goes to high financiers instead of into the road, and that the company is unable to serve properly the transportation needs of the state of Michigan, the Saginaw board of trade asks Attorney General Franz C. Kuhn to take action under the laws and rescue the property.

It is said that the action is without parallel in the state. The board of trade really has in mind the seizure of the road by the state, through insolvency proceedings or some other action which will give the state full control over its affairs.

The complaint of Saginaw is backed by financial, manufacturing and commercial interests amounting to many millions of dollars. The Saginaw district wants relief from conditions which are said to be intolerable, and which are seriously handicapping business and advancement in scores of other cities and towns. The board looks to other sources in Michigan to help wrest the grip of the road from Wall street.

It is claimed that in depriving the state of proper service, the harvest goes to the big guns of the New York financial world. The petition says that the company is insolvent, that its liabilities aggregate $125,000,000, while the assessed valuation is $20,000,000 and the funded debt has increased within the last four years until it reaches $20,000,000. This, it is said, is due to the fact that J. P. Morgan & Co. secured control of the road, and that a crisis is due, seems certain. It is asserted that there will be a $1,500,000 deficit for the current year and that there are $5,000,000 bonds falling due July 1 to J. P. Morgan to meet which no provision has been made.

Engine failures, freight shortage, traffic backlog, congestion, etc., have come to be looked upon by the management and patrols as matters of course.

Lumber "Trust" Raises Defense Fund.

A determination to fight unfeared of all suspicion of illegal acts, as charged in the recent federal grand jury indictment of members and officers of various lumber dealers' associations in this country, was the keynote of the opening session of the Illinois lumber dealers' association in Chicago. About 300 dealers and traveling salesmen were present at the initial meeting and the Michigan lumber, $1,450, of the general defense fund of $15,000, was raised without difficulty. Officers of the association were re-elected as follows: President, F. S. McElroy, Detroit; vice-president, Irvin Earle, Detroit; secretary-treasurer, H. M. Jessen, Detroit.

Peach Buds Killed by Cold.

The committee appointed by the local fruit growers' association to examine the orchards in the central section of the state, finds after an investigation of two weeks, during which many orchards in Eaton, Jackson, Clinton and Barry counties have been visited, that the peach buds have been almost completely destroyed by the extreme cold weather. Plums and all varieties of small fruits have shared practically the same fate. The apple orchards visited showed that only small damage has been done to buds of most varieties, but some of the less hardy ones have suffered to a considerable extent.

One Killed; 3 Hurt in Kazoo Wreck.

Alleged misinterpretation of orders is said to have been the cause of a head-on collision between two Grand Rapids & Indiana freight trains, which came together five miles north of Kalamazoo. One man, Fireman Sam, of the southbound freight, was caught between his engine and tender and crushed to death.

GOV. OSBORN CALLS SPECIAL SESSION

LEGISLATURE TO MEET ON MONDAY, FEB. 26, TO ENACT PRIMARY.

OBJECT, EXPRESSION AS TO PRESIDENTIAL PREFERENCE.

The Call Mentions Such Other Matters as May Be Submitted in the Future Messages.

Gov. Osborn is preparing a call for a special session of the legislature to meet Monday, Feb. 26, to take up the question of legislation for presidential preference primaries.

The governor's proclamation says:

"To all whom it may concern:

This is an era in this country designed to give the government function as directly as possible.

"This is in obedience to much of the best thought that is applied to the science of government. It is equally the result of a demand on the part of the people that their actions shall not be subject to embarrassing or harassing scrutiny, and that the action of those who are in office based upon or in any manner en-duced over them and about them.

Any condition that makes for unfair competition in the right of the people to exercise their citizenship cannot be tolerated.

"This is in accordance with the standards of the nation and this state, under God, are to be per-served, as lands of liberty where worthy humanity of all the world can find a place of refuge and of equal rights, which must be provided the fullest and fairest means of expression of those rights. This is necessary if these rights are to exist at all, and to be in any sense meaningful.

"Because of the growing appreciation of the importance of the legislature in Michigan, legislators and other states have improved and are improving methods of election. In Michigan at this moment there exists an extraordinary condition and great action which have never been paralleled.

"Thousands of voters in both of our great political parties and many in minor parties are still voting for the same candidates.

"A great majority of the people are in favor of primaries, but they have not been adopted in Michigan immediately to have a presidential preference primary law. It has lagged behind the rest of the nation in this respect.

"I am sending to you my recommendation to the legislature to adopt an ordinary presidential preference law and for the consideration of such other matters as shall be subsidiary to this measure.

SYNOPSIS

The story opens in a Confederate tent in a cedar forest. Major Brennan, Lee's adjutant to Capt. Wayne, an important messenger to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sergt. Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. They get within sight of the camp of the Federal officers. Wayne is taken care of by a Federal officer and a young lady on horseback is given in his charge. She is a northern girl and attempts to escape. One of the scouts and Craig goes through with the detachment which follows the Lady of the North are left alone. They seek shelter in a hut and enter it. In the dark a huge mastiff attacks Wayne. The girl shoots the brute just in time. Major Brennan, who had been following, appears and soon a party of horsemen approach. They are led by a man claiming to be Red Lowe, but who proves to be Maj. Brennan, a Federal. He is the Union girl's recognized leader. The girl is captured and she is brought before Sheridan, who threatens her with death unless he receives the secret message. Wayne believes Edith to be the wife of Maj. Brennan. He goes to the wife of Maj. Brennan, "Lady of the North," who starts to reach Gen. Lee, while Wayne in disguise penetrates to the ballroom, beneath which he had been imprisoned. He is introduced to a Miss Minor, who is the wife of a Federal. Edith, the girl's mother, comes to Wayne's rescue. She will save him. Securing a pass through the lines, they are confronted by Sheridan, who is infected with disease. Then Edith and Edith's mother, Wayne, takes a cash for liberty. He is released. When they reach the Lee camp and are sent with reinforcements to join Early. In the battle of Shengandoah, the regiment is overwhelmed and Wayne is captured. Edith, Wayne and Buncay are sent on a scouting detail and arriving at the Minor place, Wayne meets Miss Minor and Mrs. Buncay. Wayne is captured. Edith appears. Wayne is detained and held in garrison. Buncay and his men are held in garrison in repelling the invaders until a rescuing party of bluecoats reach the scene. Brennan challenges Wayne to a duel.

"Well, I suppose I shall be compelled to let you and Beezlebub go, but it will prove a serious loss to the cause of the South," I said, my thoughts instantly turned by mention of the mule to masters of more importance. "I expect there will be lively times up your way."

"Ye kin jist bel' thar will," exasperatingly. "I'll be nipp and tuck, I reckon, but I'm mighty hopeful o' Marlar. That dern muel he needs ter be took down a peg."

"Sergeant," I said, "did you send out a party to bring in our horses and the riders?"

"It vas all done already; der horses was found and der swords."

"How many men have we lost?"

"Der you five kill, Captain; dat vés. I you bit mit der ear off; Sande is goin' to die, und maybe Billot vill not get some better; some odder yes buried."

"How many men does that leave us for duty?" I asked doubtfully, pushing back my plate and rising from the table.

"Dere you twelve, Captain, mit me."

"That will do," I said. "In half an hour from now have the men ready for the road," and I turned and left the room.

We must depart at once. More than ever now I realized the necessity for haste. I hoped to meet the officer commanding the Federal detachment who had come to our aid, pay him the customary marks of respect, and get away without again coming in contact with Major Brennan. I felt myself pledged to this course of action.

A centry stationed in the lower hall-way informed me the officers were messing together in the front parlor, and I at once headed that way. I paused, however, to visit the wounded for a moment, spoke cheerily to my own men, and then opening the door quietly, entered the room which I had last left in possession of the guerrillas. With the exception of broken windows and bullet-scarred walls little evidence remained of that contest which had raged here with such fury but a few hours previously. There were numerous dark stains upon the carpet, but much of the furniture had been restored to place, while a cheerful wood fire crackled in the open grate. Before it three men were sitting smoking, while upon a small table close at their elbows rested a flat bottle, flanked by several glasses. A single glance sufficed to tell me they were Federal cavalrymen, one being the red-faced lieutenant whom I had already met.

"I am seeking the commander of this detachment," I explained, as they glanced at me in surprise at my entrance unannounced. "I am Captain Wayne, in charge of the Confederate troop which was engaged in defense of this house."

A portly man with a strong face, and wearing a closely clipped gray beard, arose from a comfortable armchair and advanced with hand extended.

"I am Captain Moorehouse, in command," he answered, cordially, "and am very glad to meet you. Will you not join us? My second lieutenant, who has positive genius in that line, has unearthed a few bottles of rather choice whisky which we will divide most gladly."

"Thank you," I replied, anxious to meet him as pleasantly as possible, "but I am eager to get away upon my duty as early as may be, and have merely intruded upon you to explain my purpose."

"Nonsense," he insisted. "Duty never calls so urgent as to require waste of good liquor. Captain Wayne, permit me to present my officers—Lieutenants Warren and Starr, Second New Hampshire Cavalry."

The constant haunting fear of the Major's possible entrance at any moment rendered me extremely uneasy, and anxious to be away. Undoubtedly this feeling exhibited itself in my manner for Captain Moorehouse said finally:

"I realize your natural anxiety to be off. Captain Wayne, and while we should be very glad to keep you with us indefinitely, yet I trust you will feel perfectly free in the matter."

"I thank you greatly," I answered, rising as I spoke. "My duty is of such a nature, and has already been so long neglected that I feel every moment of unnecessary delay to be a crime. I wish you a pleasant return within your own lines, and an early cessation of hostilities."

I laid shaking hands with them all, and turned toward the door congratulating myself on escaping thus easily, when a new voice broke suddenly in upon my self-satisfaction:

"I trust Captain Wayne is justly inclined to depart without at least a word with me?"

It was Brennan. He had entered unobserved from the second parlor.

"Frankly," I responded, "I hoped I might."

"Have you forgotten, then, our compact, or do you simply elect to ignore it?"

I saw the others exchange quick glances of amazement, but I answered coolly:

"The latter supposition is more nearly the truth. Major Brennan, I felt that after what we have just passed through together, we could both afford to ignore the past, and consequently was hoping to escape without again encountering you."

"Indeed!" he exclaimed, sarcastically. "But I might have expected it. Gentlemen," and he turned toward the expectant group, "this man and I have a personal grievance of long standing unsettled. I have sought him for months in vain. When he came last night to our assistance, before I even congealed to accept his services I insisted that no occurrence of the defense should prevent our meeting. If we both survived, how he endeavors to sneak away like a whipped cur. I demand satisfaction at his hands, and if it is refused I shall denounce him to both armies."

My cheeks blushed, but before I could control myself sufficiently for answer, Moorehouse spoke.

"But, Brennan, never mind," he said, anxiously, "surely Captain Wayne has served you well. Is this trouble between you so serious that no amends are possible?"

"None, short of a personal meeting."

"Captain," and the perplexed federal commander turned toward me, "have you any word of explanation in this unfortunate affair?"

"None, short of a personal meeting."

"Captain," and the perplexed federal commander turned toward me, "have you any word of explanation in this unfortunate affair?"

"Very little," I answered. "I am not even aware that I have done injury to Major Brennan, purposely or otherwise. He has not so much as honored me with information as to his cause of complaint. However, I care very little what it may be. As he has seen fit to denounce me before officers of my own corps, I should be extremely glad to meet him upon that ground alone; but after what we have just passed through together, I am ready to blot out these past differences. Whatever they may have been, they are not liable to occur again, nor we to meet."

"They have occurred again since you have been in this house!" Brennan broke forth excitedly. "You are not a coward, but I brand you here and now as a sneak and liar! Now will you fight?"

We stood for a moment in utter silence, eye to eye, and I knew there was no help for it. These words, publicly spoken, left me no choice.

"I am at your service, Major Brennan," I returned sternly. "Now or at such a meeting must necessarily mean such a meeting must necessarily mean risk my life rather than injure Major Brennan."

Brennan Hurled His Yet Smoking Derringer at His Feet With an Oath.

His troubled eyes studied me intently, and then his face suddenly brightened with a new thought. "Wayne," he asked, placing his hand upon my arm familiarly, "is it Mrs. Brennan?"

For an instant I hesitated, but his manly, honest countenance reassured me. "Between us only it is," I answered gravely; "but not the slightest blame attaches to her."

"I do not wholly understand," he said at last, "yet I do not doubt you may be perfectly right in your decision." He extended his hand impulsively. "I know you to be a good soldier and a true gentleman. I will stand by you, Wayne, but I pledge this—if he takes advantage treacherously, and you fall (as God forbid!) I will face him myself; and when I do, there will be no firing in the air."

I do not remember that we spoke save once; while we passed out through the orchard field where the big tobacco shed stood. Not until we turned the corner of the great ramshackle building, which is other and more prosperous days had been dedicated to the curing of the leaf, did we perceive any signs of the presence of our antagonists. They were standing upon the further side, directly opposite the door, and both bowed slightly as we approached. The Captain came toward us slowly.

"It is to be greatly regretted, gentlemen," he said, with ceremonious politeness, "that we have no surgeon with us. However, neither contestant has any advantage in this respect. Lieutenant Caton, may I ask if the arrangements as already completed have proven satisfactory to your principal?"

"Entirely so." "Then if you will kindly step this way a moment we will confer as to certain details."

Brennan was leaning in negligent attitude against the side of the building, his eyes fastened upon the ground, the blue smoke of a cigar curled lazily above his head. He glanced toward him, and then sought to amuse himself watching the querulousness of a gray cat which had crawled beyond the threshold of the general beyond.

"It will afford me pleasure to act as referee to the combatants," he said, his face brightening at my rejoinder.

Some one hastily pushed us away to the front, and Lieutenant Caton, pale but determined, stood at my shoulder.

"It will afford me pleasure to act as referee to the combatants," he said, his face brightening at my rejoinder.

Booth Tarkington, the American playwright and novelist, is a very early riser, and when the English playwright and novelist, Arnold Bennett, visited him at his charming residence in Indianapolis, Mr. Tarkington said, the first evening at dinner:

"I believe in the simple life. I get up with the sun. Will you take a ten-mile walk with me at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning?"

"Thank you, Mr. Tarkington," the Englishman answered, "but I don't walk in my sleep."

Air Laws.

Wilbur Wright, at a tea in Dayton, said with a laugh:

"Already there are air laws, although there are no roads. Without them we should soon be seeing advertisements like this:

"Two dollars reward will be paid by Mrs. John Doe for information leading to the identification of the aviator who, with some carelessness, but I shall do as I said, nevertheless, it is not any sentiment of cruelty I feel which spares him, but a duty that appeals to me even more strongly than hate."

"By Heaven, I wish it were otherwise."

"Who gives the word?" I questioned.

"I do; are you ready?"

"Perfectly."

I held out my hand, and his fingers closed upon it with warm, friendly grip. The next moment Brennan and I stood, seemingly alone, facing each other, as motionless as two statues. His coat was buttoned to the throat, his cap visor pulled low over his eyes, his pistol hand hanging straight down at his side, his gaze never wavering from me. I knew he was coolly, deliberately measuring the distance between us with as deadly a purpose as any murderer. The almost painful stillness was broken by Caton, and I marked the tremor in his voice.

"Are you both ready, gentlemen?"

"I am," said Brennan.

"Ready," I replied.

"The word will be one, two, three—fire; with a slight pause after the three. A report from either pistol before the final word is spoken I shall take personally. Be prepared now."

"Ready!" said the voice once more; and as I saw Brennan's arm slowly rise, I lifted mine also, and covered him, noting, as I did so, almost in wonder, with what steadiness of nerve and wrist I held the slender gauntlet just beneath the visor of his cap. Deliberately, as though he dreaded the necessity, Caton counted:

"One, two, three—fire!"

My pistol exploded, the charge striking the limb above his, and I staggered backward, my hat torn from my head, a white line cut through my hair and a thin trickle of blood upon my temple. I saw Caton rushing forward, his face filled with anxiety, and then Brennan hurled his yet smoking derringer into the dirt at his feet with an oath.

When Beecher "Hollered."

Coming home from the morning service one Sunday Dr. Beecher threw himself on a lounge and said, in a tone of deep dejection: "I believe that was the worst sermon I ever preached." One of his daughters protested that she had seldom heard him when he was more energetic. "Oh, yes," was the impatient reply, "when I haven't anything to say I always holler."—The Outlook.

Presidential Opposition.

The Republican party in the United States is facing a great crisis, if there are crisis periods in political parties. For the first time in the history of this country—the country of which we proudly boast as being the greatest in the world—a president indubitably as a candidate for renomination for a second term with opposition. To date there are two announced candidates, LaFollette and Cummins, and there are prospects of still another—Roosevelt. Until this time no president has ever had opposition for a second nomination. Just what the result will be is as yet an unsolved problem. One thing certain it means the eventual defeat of the Republican party. Perhaps not this year, but it will certainly come. It may also mean the creation of a new party later on and whether all this tumult will prove of value to the broadest interests of the country cannot yet be foreseen, but one thing is certain and that is that four to eight years of political strife is not likely to aid in the welfare of this United States.

When the Tax-Payers Wake Up.

After a while the tax payers will get tired of paying $30,000 or more a year to maintain a tri-hended county auditors department which is about as much use as a spoon to a tortoise. When Auditors Bahner and Oakman are not mopping the floor and dusting the rugs with Auditor Robertson, then Auditor Bahner is calling "Prosecutor" Shepard a blankety, blanky, bathertite, and Shepard refers back to Charles Ambrose Babcock "a dandy lurking despatch, bulldozing, crunk and a nuisance right."

After long years of suffering and straining on their pocketbooks, the tax payers will rise up long enough to have a live concert providing for one county auditor the same as the city of Detroit has and when they do that those same tax payers will save from fifty to a hundred thousand dollars a year.

"The Principles" of Roosevelt and Tait.

The only honest way to find out where the republicans of Michigan stand as between the principles of Roosevelt and the principles of Tait or Cummins or La Follette is to vote at the polls.—City Clerk Nichols.

It would also be of great value to the republicans of Michigan before voting to have Mr. Nichols, or some other well-informed person, make a brief statement of the difference between "the principles of Roosevelt and Tait." We are bound to confess that it is altogether beyond our capacity for discernment.—Detroit Saturday Night.

Kelly for Congress.

It now looks as if Patrick H. Kelley will have no opposition for the Republican nomination of Congressman-at-Large. The bestowal of such a nomination upon him will be a well deserved compliment and he will do honor to the high office if elected.

The Detroit City Council threatens to tax the Detroit United Railway $10 for each freight car run in and out of the city. That will be a nice thing for the country residents to pay an additional freight charge. Why not tax the dray lines of Detroit for carrying freight to the steam road depots?

The Saginaw board of trade wants the state to take over the P.M. railway and run it. Why not turn it over to the Municipal Ownership department of the Detroit Common Council.

NICKNAMES ON THE OCEAN.

Tradition Governs Them Among American and English Sailors and They Never Alter.

In the American and English navies, as well as in the merchant marines, are found nicknames that have been in use since before men dreamed that there was land on the other side of the Western ocean. Tradition, most inexorable of all rules, governs them, and they never alter, whether the ship clears from the Golden Gate or from London Docks. Some of the nicknames are of obvious origin, others seem to gain force by their apparent lack of reason.

For instance, why should all men named Wright be called "Shiner"? Clark is invariably "Tobby"; Green is "Jimmy"; and a White is a "Knocker." "Spud" Murphy explains itself, does "Dusty" Miller, "Lofty" and "Shorty" do not need to present cards to their mates when they sign on, and it is not worth while for the brunette sailor to resent it when a friendly chap calls him as "Nigger"; he can't whip the entire crew, one after the other.

The rigid forms of the quarterdeck do not hold during the watch below, and the captain is the "Skipper," and the first Lieutenant is familiarly "Jimmy, the One." On fighting ships the gunnery lieutenant is "Gunner Jack," or more briefly "Guns"; the torpedo Lieutenant, "Torpedo Jack" or "Sparks"; and the navigating officer, "The Navy."

Even a landlubber would know that "Tommy Pipe" was the boatswain; "Chips" the carpenter; "Jimmy Bungs" the cooper and "Sailor" the salmakier.—The Sunday Magazine.

Best Form of Prayer.

When the hearts of men and women are filled with heavenly love, a power which makes for righteousness constantly emanates from them. Those who pray with their lives offer the most effective prayer even though they do not utter a word.—Chauncey Giles.

Henry Priest, Mill St., Northville, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with gratifying results and have great confidence in their curative powers. Several years ago I was afflicted by a severe backache which made it hard for me to work. Doan's Kidney Pills had previously been used in my family with great benefit and decided to try them, I procured a supply at Murdock Bros' Drug Store. Soon after finishing their use, my backache disappeared and now I am free from the trouble." (Statement given November 20, 1909.)

THE CURE IS TANTED.

NOT HERE TO BE MISERABLEWe All Have Our Troubles but Should Learn to Keep Them in Background.

If there is anything that is irritating it is the way that some people talk of their troubles, as if they were a kind of treat—not cheerfully, but with a kind of gloomy joy; in a word, they are resigned. It is only mighty big humbugs that will say they are thankful for troubles. We may eventually live to see that they were right and best for us, but at the time it is sheer hypocrisy to waggle our heads solemnly and say: "Happiness is a stare, anyhow; it is foolish for any one to expect happiness in this grisly old world."

People who talk that way don't deserve happiness. We weren't put here to be miserable. The idea that life is for suffering and not enjoyment is fast being shelved. If the Lord approved of lamentations and tears, he would not have put so much in the world to make us hopeful and happy.

There is nothing more common than trouble. We all have our troubles, but it is the wise ones of earth that keep their burdens in the background. It is so common and cheap and selfish to be continually parading one's griefs and disappointments. Whatever our lot, we should all learn the wisdom of that helpful little prayer: "Help me to win, if win I may; but if I may not win, make me a good loser." —Mary Eleanor O'Donnell in Chicago Tribune.

George Washington's Home Town

ACH year finds tens of thousands of American citizens making patriotic pilgrimages to the home and tomb of George Washington at Mount Vernon on the Potowmack river. Almost without exception these tourists "stop over" going or coming at the quaint old town of Alexandria, Va., located about half way between the city of Washington and Mount Vernon. Many of the visitors declare Alexandria almost if not quite as interesting as the far-famed country seat of the Father of His Country—Old Alexandria would be well worthy a visit merely as a fine example of an old colonial town, rich in the architecture of the period, but added to this is the historical significance that it was George Washington's "home town."

Either he came to attend the balls and other social festivities that brought out all the landed gentry of the old Dominion; here he attended church every Sunday when residing at Mount Vernon, and to this place he repaired when business matters connected with his large estate required legal or other adjustment that could not readily be negotiated on the plantation. Alexandria was the meeting place of the Masonic Lodge of which George Washington was so prominent a member and here was located a volunteer fire company that boasted our first president as one of its members. In short, from every standpoint, Alexandria meant more to George Washington than the nearest town or cross-roads community is apt to do to the present-day American farmer in this era of rural free delivery and railroads and trolleys and automobiles.

In George Washington's time Alexandria—or Bellayen as it was at first known along about the middle of the eighteenth century—was one of the most prominent ports in the United States and seemed to let out every promise of extensive development in the future. George Washington himself took a hand in boozing the port, which developed an extensive foreign trade. The docks were crowded with warehouses filled with corn, tobacco and other products, while in the harbor were always to be found many of the largest class of cargo ships of that period loading and discharging a variety of commodities. As the American terminus of a heavy overseas trade Alexandria became well known in shipping circles in England, and it was thought for a time that the port on the Potowmack would overshadow Baltimore. Then came the various influences that combined to bring about the commercial eclipse of the little city so dear to the heart of the nation's liberator. One of the first of these was the establishment only a few miles away of the capital of the nation, which speedily overshadowed Alexandria in various ways. Then came the building of railroads, which diverted much traffic to other channels, and finally the Civil war helped to put a blight upon the community which had long been one of the strongholds of the Lees of Virginia.

But even in this twentieth century neglected Alexandria gets "on the map" as least one day each year—namely, on the 22d of February, when with each recurring anniversary of Washington's birthday there is a big celebration in the little city that is filled with landmarks and objects identified with the private life and public career of the leader of the Revolution. Often the president of the United States goes to Alexandria by boat or trailer to participate in the exercises, and the governors of Virginia and Maryland are invariably invited. On such occasions the town which is located in closer proximity to historic Mount Vernon than is any other community, appears almost too small to accommodate the crowds that invade her public places. For, be it known, for all that there are handsome, well-natured business streets that afford a route of parade for the procession that is an invariable feature of this holiday, there are other highways and byways in the staid, dignified, conservative old town that readily convince the visitor that they have undergone little if any alteration since the days of George Washington.

Old Alexandria is "going on" three hundred years of age, for it was founded as long ago as 1739, although, as previously explained, it was known for some score of years by another name. In 1833 the general assembly of the colony of Virginia formally designated it as Alexandria. The town retains to this day the names of its streets, chosen in the days of long ago from the titles of royalty and nobility. Thus we find as the most conspicuous thoroughfares King, Prince, Duke and Royal streets.

Alexandria was the starting place of General Braddock's famous expedition against the French Indians which resulted though it was, served to bring George Washington, for the first time, conspicuously before his countrymen. Here, in the old Carlisle house, which remains to this day one of the chief "show places" of the historic old town, George Washington and other leading men of the colony had a lengthy conference with the British commander on the night before the expedition set out upon the campaign which was destined to go down in history as "Braddock's defeat."

The old Carlisle house, which is assuredly one of the most interesting structures in the United States, fell sadly into decay some years ago, although a move looking to its complete restoration has latterly been made by a patriotic society. George Washington was a frequent guest at Carlisle house—the mansion of Major Carlisle, and when, after a social function in Alexandria, he returned to Mount Vernon by boat it was almost invariably from the Carlisle house that he set out, the terraced grounds of the mansion sloping down to the river, rendering it convenient for General Washington and his house guests to step into the barge to be rowed to his manor house farther down on the Virginia shore of the Potowmack. It was also General Washington's custom to sup at Carlisle house each 22d of February when he came to Alexandria to attend the "Birth Night Balls," which were instituted in his honor in Alexandria after he rose to fame as the hero of the War for Independence. These balls were held at Claggett's tavern and constituted the supreme height of Alexandria's social glory.

General Washington was most intimately identified with the history of Alexandria from the year 1773, when he purchased considerable property in the town. He showed himself a good citizen by becoming a member of the Friendship Fire Engine company. This was a volunteer organization

Lee Harrison says he was standing at Forty-third street and Broadway when a young man wearing one of those Poughkeepsie looks approached him and said:

"Excuse me, but I want to find my cousin, who lives in New York."

"Very well," replied Lee. "It will be all right this time. What's your cousin's name?"

"Cohen."

"Say," said Lee, grabbing him by the arm, "come out here in the middle of the street and yell 'Cohen.' You'll probably be able to find him in the crowd that answers."

Quite the Contrary.

Being anxious as to his prospects in one of the early attempts to enter parliament, Herbert Samuel consulted his agent, who said this chances were not rosy, because he was a "carpetbagger."

Mr. Samuel thereupon resolved to live in the division if he were unsuccessful, and bills were immediately posted that "If Herbert Samuel is returned next Tuesday he will come to live here."

Some of the other side, however, posted one of these bills on a pigsty.

Mr. Samuel did not win the election—London Telegraph.

Bright Light in Calamity.

Times of general calamity and confusion have ever been productive of the greatest minds. The purest ore is produced from the hottest furnace, and the brightest thunderbolt is elicited from the darkest storm.

You don't give a fellow time to think, Dalbeck grumbled. You are rushing me off at such a rate that I don't get a chance to say a word. It doesn't seem to make any difference to you whether I want to go or not just as you get your own way, I—

"Here's your cap," said Mrs. Delbeck as she opened the inside door, "and if you hurry you can just make the train!"

She watched Dalbeck leap and vanish around the corner, and then she smiled to herself. "I suppose he has to go through all that formula every time to ease his conscience," she said.

"Hello," Dalbeck was saying on the station platform to three other men in golf attire. "I came near missing the train this morning, I tell you—I got so interested making my objections to going as artistic as possible. But they worked beautifully."

Very Convenient.

An enterprising builder was one day in conversation with several friends when he was accused of using inferior materials in the construction of houses which he had recently built.

A hot argument ensued, in the midst of which a gentleman arrived who lived in one of the Jerry-built cottages, and the matter was referred to him.

Preliminary

Talk

"It certainly is going to be a beautiful day," murmured Dalbeck, when the sun shined in his face, awaking him Sunday morning.

"Why don't you go on out to the golf club, then?" inquired Mrs. Dalbeck.

"Oh no—I don't want to do that!"

"Do you want me to go?" inquired Dalbeck, in accents of deep reproach.

"When Sunday is the only day of the week that I can spend with my family, it is pretty hard lines to bid you try to get rid of me!"

"Now, James!" said Mrs. Dalbeck, protestingly. "The idea that you should think such a thing for a minute! You know I'd rather have you at home than anywhere else on earth."

"Then of course I won't go," Dalbeck said with a skillfully revealed sigh. "Not if you don't want me to. I believe it's a man's duty to go as his wife wants, even at the cost of his personal inclinations, and of course I'd rather stay at home with you."

"Why, it would spoil my whole day!" interrupted Mrs. Dalbeck. "If you gave up a beautiful time in the country just because you thought I was selfish enough to make you stay at home, I want you to go!"

"Henryetta," said Dalbeck, "do you suppose for one instant that you can deceive me? I know perfectly well that you are holding your disappointment at the idea of a lonely day, and are urging me to go merely out of the unselfishness of your nature. I'm not going to take advantage of it. Anyhow, I really don't care about playing golf today. I hadn't even thought of it until you spoke, and you see I didn't jump at the idea then. I'd like rather stay at home."

"Nonsense," said Mrs. Dalbeck. "If you stayed at home this beautiful day my conscience would reproach me. James. We may not have any more nice Sunday's this fall, and it will do you good to get outdoors. I am perfectly willing for you to go, because I know you need the exercise. A man of your age doesn't exercise nearly enough; and—"

"Oh, oh you are dissatisfied with my figure, are you?" inquired her husband in tones of deepest reproach. "I know I'm not an Apollo, but I didn't think—"

"James!" cried Mrs. Dalbeck. "You are perfectly stupid. I was just trying to make excuse for you to go."

"Aha!" said her husband. "Your words plainly show that you honestly don't feel that I should go. Your real opinion is that a man is a dub who doesn't pass Sunday with his family, and I agree with you. Where should we find more happiness and pleasure than by the family hearthstone, anyhow? It's lots rather—"

"I know you would," said his wife, "but you must consider your health, James. It is your duty to do so. Please oblige me by doing as I ask and going to the club!"

"I haven't the least desire to go," protested Dalbeck. "Somehow I don't feel up to it. It may rain, anyhow."

"The sun never shone brighter," interrupted Mrs. Dalbeck. "Please, James!"

Dalbeck looked harassed and then resigned. "I don't see why you make such a fuss about it," he mourned.

"And there isn't time to catch the golf special now, anyhow. If I did want to go—"

"Yes there is," insisted his wife. "Here are all your clothes ready to jump into, and I'll bring you up some coffee while you are dressing. That clock is five minutes fast, and if you hurry—here are your shoes and—"
