BIG STOCKHOLDER'S MEETING SOON

NORTHVILLE CITIZENS' $800,000 CORPORATION ANNUAL

New Board of Directors Again to Be Chosen.

The time for the annual village election (March 11) is rapidly drawing near. The caucuses for the nomination of officers will be held next week Tuesday and Thursday nights.

Every tax payer interested in the welfare of the village should attend these caucuses. (Both of them) and see to it—at least so far as their vote is concerned—that men are placed on the ticket who will represent the best interests of the whole people.

"Northville is a big business proposition to manage," said a well known tax payer to the Record this week "and to manage it properly, it ought to be looked after just as carefully as a Northville bank or a Northville factory."

I notice that last year the receipts of the village were about $50,000 and about the same amount was paid out. Now that's quite a business, and a private corporation doing that much business would hire a good business manager and pay him a reasonable salary, in an endeavor to lower expenses and increase the profits.

A private corporation would make the electric light and the waterworks plants paying investments for its stockholders, and I believe a good business manager could be found who would make these plants profitable to the village. In this assertion I am casting no reflections upon the present officers or employees of the village. They are doing all that can be expected, but a paid manager with authority to collect every cent due

A GREAT ENTERTAINMENT.

U. of M. Talent to Give a Series Here, Free.

At the High school last Friday evening the second of the University of Michigan Extension Lectures was delivered by Prof. Edward Raymond Turner, of the department of Literature, Science and the Arts, upon the topic, "France, Germany, England, and the Morocco Crisis of 1911." The lecturer gave graphic analysis of the situation existing Europe last fall, and in a most entertaining and fascinating address presented in detail the whole history of the great diplomatic game they played. This lecture was certainly a great treat.

The next lecture of the course will be given on March 8, on the topic

"The Panama Canal as viewed from Two Years' Experience on the Work," by Prof. H. F. French, of the department of Engineering, University of Michigan. This will be illustrated by stereopticon and obviously will be very interesting.

These lectures are given by talented men upon entertaining subjects and no one should overlook them. Admission is free to everyone. Don't miss them.

Masonic Party.

The dashing party given by the orders of Masons and Eastern Stars in the club last night was, as usual, one of Northville's most enjoyable social events. The lavish decorations, the sumptuous supper, the delightful music and the beautifully gowned, and sweet faced women were the features of the occasion there were about twenty couple present.

Postponed Auction Sale.

M. Goodale, living one mile south and one mile west of the Park House, will have an auction sale of live stock and farm tools next Monday, Feb. 26, at one o'clock. Frank Boyle, auctioneer.

Apples.

It is difficult to believe what early writers tell us of the divine honors lavished upon Apples, the sacred bull of Memphis, and upon Minevus, the sacred ox of Hollyspolis. Yet perhaps some of our customs of deeds of today, as handed down by the uninformed, may seem just as incongruously absurd when heard and understood from an equally proportionate future time.

SAGINAW BOARD OF TRADE DIRECTORS EXPLAIN THEIR COMPLAINT AGAINST THE P. M. RAILROAD.

SIMPLY ENDEAVORING TO SECURE BETTER SERVICE.

A Greater Number of Voters Enrolled at the Recent State Enrollment Than Had at First Been Thought.

In a public statement, the directors of the board of trade who filed the complaint with the attorney-general against the Pere Marquette assert there is no reflection on any of the officers and employees, and it was only compiled after a prolonged and thorough investigation; the data used being taken from the annual reports of the Pere Marquette. The statement which was demanded from the board by citizens generally, follows:

"The sole motive of the complaint is to secure the improvement of the transportation service which the Pere Marquette railroad must perform for the city of Saginaw and surrounding territory to which the city is related. The matter is given the careful consideration of the board of directors on a formal request from the committee on transportation.

The inefficiency and unsatisfactory character of the service performed by this railroad has been well known to the shipping interests of Saginaw for a long time and has been the concern of its transportation committee and of the board of directors of the Saginaw board of trade almost continually for years past.

The action of the board of directors in placing this complaint before the attorney-general was taken advisedly, after a careful and prolonged examination of the situation from all of its angles. The statements contained in the complaint are based on official documents filed by the railroad company itself. Since the publication of the complaint the annual report of the Pere Marquette railroad, for the fiscal year ending June 29, 1911, has been made public. This report, dated in October last, substantiates the position taken by the board of directors, and, furthermore, the late proceedings before the state board of trade, when adjourned on the 11th inst., more than substantiate the representations we have made."

Ionia Farmers "Sore" at M. A. C. Five hundred members of the Ionia county farmers' institute, in the ground-up, voted unanimously to sever connections with the Michigan Agricultural college. The connection with the college was on the part that the college advances programs for the institutes, supplying topics and speakers.

President Snyder delivered an address and the farmers have been thinking it over ever since. Loud complaints that the president touched nothing new in his talk crystalized into the action taken. Some of the farmers are saying that he advised them to put in telephones, water systems and such improvements, and one farmer declared that there were telephones in Ionia county because the representations we have made.

The action of the board of directors is in the way an attack upon the Pere Marquette railroad or its subordinate officials and employees; on the other hand, it is an heroic endeavor to treat the bad conditions of the railroad as a journeyman and as a teacher with which the city of Saginaw is really connected. Our policy in the matter has been entirely constructive in its character. We have sought only the best interests of the city of Saginaw and its surrounding territory."

Peach Crop Will Be About One-Third.

George E. Howe, editor of the Fresh Bell, a paper published in Grand Rapids in the interest of fruit growers, and who lectures extensively on fruit culture, estimates that because of the severe winter the peach crop in the entire country will be but about one-third of the normal this year.

Editor Howe says that observations of the past 30 years have demonstrated that if the temperature falls as low as 15 below zero for but a single night peach buds will be more or less seriously damaged. If it drops to 10 or 12 below for several nights the damage will be substantially as great.

The extreme cold weather has been general throughout the country, so the peach buds are damaged in every state. Editor Howe's estimate of the extent of the damage is shared by peach growers quite generally.

R. R. Assessments Are Cut $78,000.

In the final assessment of corporation property by the state board of assessors, given out, a total reduction of $78,000 is made in the valuation of the railroads in the state as compared with the tentative figures announced last month. This cut, however, will be more than overcome in the amount of taxes to be collected through the increase in the average rate. The taxes will amount to $2,723.05 in excess of the amount paid last year.

Resigns, Avoiding Court-martial.

The Ainsworth incident, which for a time promised a sensational court-martial, is generally regarded as closed. With Gen. Ainsworth on the retired list at his own request, and the proposed disciplinary proceedings against him abandoned by the war department, there was little thought that the former adjutant-general's friends in congress would make a further issue of the matter. Gen. Ainsworth asked retirement under the 30 years' service law, having been on the active list 37 years.

Between 50 and 100 counterfeit $5 gold pieces procured by secret service officers to be splendid specimens, are known to have been passed in Portland, Ore. Most of the victims were street car conductors. The coins are double plated with gold on a lead base.

Mayor Ralph S. Moore of Muskegon vetoed the resolution passed by the common council reducing the number of inhabitants requisite for each section to 750 from 1,500. An attempt to carry the resolution over he veto failed.

The golden anniversary of the Saginaw Board of Trade will be observed in September. There are 150 survivors of the regiment in Washington to spend four days in sight-seeing in the American capital. The boys, who range in age from 10 to 19 years, were selected to make the trip to the United States on account of their proficiency in scholarship, music and athletics.

CHARTER DEFEATED

Commission Form of Government Voted Down in Grand Rapids.

By a vote of 6,872 to 5,635, the voters of Grand Rapids turned down the proposed charter and commission form of government and decided to stick to the old plan of a politician-governed city. This makes things look rather dubious for Mayor George E. Ellis, Republican, who espoused the proposed charter and who will be a candidate for renomination at the coming primaries. He is opposed for the nomination by George R. Perry, former mayor, who recently resigned his position as city assessor to seek the nomination. Perry opposed the charter.

The charter was the work of the charter commission which worked over its provisions for several months before submitting it at the special election today. The heavy vote against the charter was at the fifth, sixth and seventh wards, which contain a large foreign element. The fight has been exceedingly bitter. The majority against the charter was 1,187. The normal voting strength of this city is about 22,000.

The proposed charter incorporates the initiative referendum, recall, civil service, control of rates of public utilities and non-partisan elections. The campaign was one of the most bitterly fought in many a day. Every newspaper, both daily and weekly, has lined up in support of the charter.

Large Number of Votes Enrolled.

Information from the secretary of state's office reveals the fact that by far a greater number of voters enrolled at the recent state enrollment than had just been thought. Reports have been received from all but 250 of the 2,100 precincts in the state, and Deputy Mills says these will probably be in within the next few days. The next opportunity for voters to enroll will be April 1. There has, however, apparently been a wrong impression gained by many voters in the state, who are of the opinion that April 1 is the only time in which they can enroll. It must not be lost sight of that voters can enroll at any time with the city or township clerk, for they have the enrollment books and enrollment can be made in person, or by mail, if accompanied by an affidavit.

$10,000,000 FIRE IN DALLAS, TEXAS

SEVENTY-FIVE SQUARES OF HOMES AND FACTORIES WIPE OUT.

HALF-CLAD OCCUPANTS RUSH FROM HOMES.

Flames Finally Checked at Bayou; Heaviest Loss Is in Cotton; Hundreds of Homes Burned.

At least 25 squares in the residence district have been destroyed by a fire which broke out in Dallas, Tex., after midnight.

About 2,500 persons are homeless. Underwriters estimate the loss at between $6,000,000 and $10,000,000.

Starling at midnight among cottages near the Southern Pacific R. R. tracks, the fire was impelled by a fierce wind, and leaped from house to house in a population district while firemen worked without effect.

The heaviest single classification of loss is involved in cotton. The estimate at 9 o'clock on cotton compresses and the stored staple reaches $2,000,000.

Boarding houses where hundreds of workingmen lived were burned. The fire spread so rapidly that firemen for the time abandoned attempts to check the flames. Instead, devoting their energies to warning householders. Possible loss of life was thus avoided.

At the big manufacturing plants and cotton compresses city firemen and volunteers had organized to fight the encroaching flames. Walls and roofs of the plants were water-soaked. This water was picked up in the basin of an eye by the advance guard of sparks, and when the great columns of flames reached the factories they succumbed as easily and with less resistance than the cottages.

An hour after the flames began their irresistible advance the firemen organized for a final stand at Buffalo Bayou, a small stream that divides the eastern part of the city from the main section. Every piece of fire-fighting apparatus was stationed along the banks of this stream which is passed by the fire, meant the destruction of the entire city.

As the advancing column of fire began to hiss toward the high bank, hundreds of streams of water were hurled into them, checking, little by little, their progress. At some of the narrower portions of the stream the flames leaped across, but the more substantial buildings they reached did not afford the timber-like fuel hitherto encountered. The fire was checked.

Thousands of persons were driven from their homes. In the cold of the north they suffered slightly from exposure. Relief work was immediately set under way, however, and food and clothing provided for the refugees.

Many persons were buried during the fight, but so far as can be determined, there were no fatalities.

The burned area is at least a mile and a half long and at points a quarter of a mile wide. The burned area embraces long rows of cottages, and solid streets of manufacturing plants. It was swept clean by the flames. Nothing was saved.

China Will Cut Down on Opium.

China is assured of an early abolition of the Indo-Chinese opium traffic and the prohibition of the importation of morphine or cocaine except for medical use, by the terms of the convention between the powers represented at the international opium conference at The Hague.

The United States, Cuba, France, Germany, Great Britain, Holland, Italy, Japan, Persia, Russia and Siam have signed the convention and all other civilized powers not represented at the conference will be urged to do so.

The subscribing powers agreed to limit the number of ports where prepared opium may be exported, and the powers agree to control the manufacture. Traffic in raw opium will be limited to authorized persons.

Define Evidence in Dynamite Cases.

Three kinds of evidence, it has been learned, are being prepared by the government for its prosecution of the 54 men indicted in the dynamite conspiracy.

The evidence chiefly is:

About 40,000 letters and telegrams taken from the headquarters here of the ironworkers' union.

Stenographic records of the dictaphon which the government had connected with Ryan's headquarters for more than three months and through which it is asserted conversations of the iron workers' officials about the dynamite conspiracy were overheard and transcribed, and Ortiz McManigal's confession.

The evidence chiefly is:

About 40,000 letters and telegrams taken from the headquarters here of the ironworkers' union.

Senator Bryan, of Florida, whom Speaker Clark's boomers have been claiming is out for Woodrow Wilson.

Efforts will be made by city officials to police the city of Lawrence, Mass., with the local officers, thus relieving the state militia of that work.

George G. Thompson, of Detroit, superintendant of rural mails, was appointed chief clerk of the postoffice department, Washington, at a salary of $4,000 a year, in succession to Theodore L. Weed, recently named by Postmaster-General Hitchcock as director of the postal savings system.

After "flicking" faithfully for 10 years, during which period it has accurately kept the time for succeeding generations in one family, a watch belonging to John W. Wright, has just been repaired in Whitesburg, Ky., for the first time in its existence, and started on another century.

Harry E. Hayes, wealthy banker and clubman of Cleveland, who is serving a term of five years in the Ohio penitentiary for embezzlement, was granted a parole by the state board of administration. The parole will take effect July 1. Hayes has served nearly two years in prison.

REBELLION IS GAINING

Rebels Are Causing Trouble for President Madero.

Emilio Vazquez Gomez's frank public declaration that he will accept the provisional presidency of Mexico in case the rebels succeed in forcing Francisco L. Madero from the national palace, has gone far toward convincing unofficial residents of the capital that a general rebellion is in progress. Mexico officials, however, continue to deny that a general rebellion is in progress.

Mexico officials, however, continue to deny that a general rebellion is in progress.

Although rebels now are operating in eighteen states, the department of interior continues to give out news denying trouble in a great part of these.

Dictograph in Office of Iron Workers.

The fact that for weeks the government has had a dictograph in the office of the international headquarters of the Bridge and Structural Iron workers' union, in Indianapolis, has just been made known. Conversations of counsel, President Ryan and other members of the union and their friends, both preceding and following the indictments and arrests, have been heard over the instrument.

MY LADY OF THE NORTH

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. General Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important secret to Longstreet. Accompanying Secret Agent to General Lee, Wayne starts on his mission. They get within the lines of the enemy and in the darkness Wayne is taken for a Federal officer and a young lady on horseback is shown to him. She is Edith Brennan, a Federal spy who attempts to escape. One of the horses succumbs and Craig goes through with the dispatches, while Wayne and My Lady of the North are left alone. They are soon joined by a butler and a maid. The dark and huge mass attacks Wayne. He kills the butler, but is captured. Wayne's wife appears and soon a party of Confederates approach. They are led by Major Brennan, Lee's son. She is Edith's mother, who proves to be Major Brennan, a Federal officer whom the Union girl recognizes. He orders the arrest of Wayne as a spy and is brought before Sherman, who reveals the secret message. Wayne believes Edith Brennan to be the wife of Major Brennan. He is rescued by Jed Bungay, who starts to reach Gen. Lee. Wayne and his wife penetrate the Federal lines, even though they had been imprisoned. He is introduced to a Miss Minor and barely escapes being unmasked. Edith Brennan recognizes Wayne and tries to save him. She is captured through the lines and is confronted by Brennan, who is knocked senseless. Then bidding Edith adieu, Wayne makes a dash for liberty. He encounters Bungay, who reaches the Lee camp and are sent to Major Brennan. The Lee camp is overwhelmed and Wayne while in the hospital is visited by Edith Brennan. Wayne and Bungay are sent on a scouting party to the front. Major Wayne meets Miss Minor and Alice Bungay. Wayne's detachment is besieged by guerrillas. Brennan and his men arrive and repel the invaders but are repulsed. Brennan challenges Wayne to a duel the latter fires in the air and is himself wounded.

"Damn it, Moorehouse," he roared, fairly beside himself, "the charge was too heavy; it overshot."

"Are you much hurt?" panted Caton.

"Merely pricked the skin."

Then Brennan's angry voice rang out once more,

"I demand another shot," he insisted loudly. "I demand it, I tell you, Moorehouse. This settles nothing, and I will not be bullied just because you don't know enough to load gun."

Caton wheeled upon him, his blue eyes blazing dangerously.

"You demand a second shot?" he retorted indignantly. "Are you not aware, sir, that Captain Wayne fired in the air? It would be murder."

"Fired in the air?" he laughed, as if it was "most excellent joke. Of course he did, but it was because my half disconcerted his aim. I fired a second the first, but his derringer was covering me."

Caton strode toward him, his face white with passion.

"Let him have it this way," I called after him, for now my own blood was up. "I shall not be guilty of such neglect again."

He did not heed me, perhaps he did not hear.

"Major Brennan," he said, facing him, his voice trembling with feeling, "I tell you Captain Wayne purposefully shot in the air. He informed me before coming upon the field that he should do so. I positively refuse to permit him to face your fire again."

Brennan's face blazed; chagrin, anger, disappointment fairly infuriated him, and he seemed to lose all self-control.

"This is some cowardly trick!" he roared, glaring about him as if seeking some one upon whom he could vent his wrath! "Damn it, I believe my pistol was fixed to overshoot in order to save that fellow. I never missed such a shot before."

Moorehouse broke in upon his ravings, so astounded at these intemperate words as to stammer in his speech.

"Do you dare to insinuate, Major Brennan," he began, "that I have—"

He paused, his mouth wide open, staring toward the shed. Involuntarily we glanced in that direction also, wondering what he saw. There, in the open doorway, as in a frame, dressed almost entirely in white, her graceful figure and fair young face clearly defined against the dark background, stood Edith Brennan.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The Last Good-by.

She exhibited no outward sign of agitation as she left her position and slowly advanced toward us. Daintily lifting her skirts to keep them from contact with the weeds under foot, her head poised proudly, her eyes a bit disdainful of it all, she paused before Caton.

"Lieutenant," she questioned in a clear tone which seemed to command an answer, "I have always found you an impartial friend. Will you kindly inform me as to the true meaning of all this?"

He hesitated, hardly knowing what to reply, but her imperious eyes were upon him—they insisted, and he stammered lamely:

"Two or the gentlemen, madam, were about to settle a slight disagreement by means of the code."

"Were about?" she echoed, scornful of all deceit. "Surely I heard shots as I came through the orchard."

"One fire has been exchanged," he reluctantly admitted.

And Captain Wayne has been wounded."

It was not rare until that moment that she had ever so much as noticed my presence.

"Very slightly, madam."

"His opponent escaped uninjured?"

Catton bowed, glanced uneasily toward me, and then blurted forth impulsively: "Captain Wayne fired in the air, madam."

"A most delightful situation, surely," she said clearly and sarcastically.

"One would almost suppose we had wholly reverted to barbarism, and that our boasted civilization was but mockery. Think of it," and the proud disdain in her face held us silent, "not six hours ago that house yonder was the scene of a desperate battle. With in its blood-stained rooms men fought and died, cheering in their agony like heroes of romance. I saw there two men battling shoulder to shoulder against a host of infuriated ruffians, seeking to protect helpless women.

People Not Yet Lost Faith in Taft.

The Record believes, with thousands of others, that Ex-President Roosevelt, if nominated, would go into the White House with an unprecedented majority. We also believe he would give the people a splendid administration. But what could he do, or what would he do, that President Taft is not doing or cannot do? Of course in his big majority Roosevelt might pull in with him a few more republican office holders in various states and counties, than Taft would, but might it not be just as well for the affairs of the country to let a few Republicans who have lost favor with their constituency be succeeded by Democrats for at least one term?

The taxpayers would surely not be the losers in that event. Of course President Taft stood for the Republican party with Canada. He was honest in his idea that it would be for the best interest of the whole country, and in that contention he was supported by Roosevelt himself, by Senator Townsend, Governor Odell and hundreds of other prominent men of the nation. The Record does not believe Theodore Roosevelt will permit himself to be dragged into this scheme to help defeat the nomination of President Taft for the purpose of aiding in the election of some county and district clerks in this and other states. The whole people have yet to lost faith in President Taft.

Where the Rain Goes.

All the rain that penetrates down into the earth comes to the surface again somewhere. It goes down until it meets rock, through which it cannot pass, and as more water is coming down and pressing upon it, it has to find a way to escape to the surface. In this underground trip it takes up from rocks the salts, that are useful to the life of plants and animals.

Your Money Back if You are not satisfied with the Medicine.

We Recommend

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxatives or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate, and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthful activity.

We want you to try Rexall Ointment on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels.

Don't Experiment

You Will Make no Mistake if You Follow this Northville Citizen's Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.
If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness, and nervousness, it's time to act and not time to experiment. These are common symptoms of a kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has cured many stubborn cases in Northville. Follow the advice of a Northville citizen.

Mrs. W. M. Frederick, Wing St, Northville, Mich., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been of such great benefit to me that I feel justified in giving them my endorsement. I had considerable trouble from my kidneys for several years and I suffered constantly from dull, aching backache, coupled with pains through my kidneys. I doctor'd and tried many remedies, but found no relief until I purchased Doan's Kidney Pills at Murdock Bros. Drug Store. Since taking this remedy, my condition has improved in every way and backache has not bothered me."

Mrs. Chas. Waterman of Waterford is slowly recovering from a severe attack of peritonitis under the care of Dr. J. M. Burgess and nurse, Florence Eldred.

Mrs. Wm. B. Wilson of South Lyon, sister of N. E. Burkart of this place, died at her home in that village Wednesday afternoon. She was well known in Northville where she attended school some years ago.

Mrs. Katherine Smith, a former old resident of Northville, died at the home of her people at Plymouth yesterday. She was a member of the Presbyterian church here where the funeral will be held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Charles Knapp narrowly escaped choking to death Wednesday night while taking a capsule吞下 into her throat and it seemed for a time that she would die. Mr. Burgess, who had been called, arrived just as she recovered.

The nice maple sugar weather we had Sunday, Monday and Tuesday was kindly gaily weaved by the blizzard which struck town in the early hours of Wednesday and continued all day and all night and was just the biggest sort of blizzard that ever struck this town.

The pupils of the stone school house on the South Lyon road gave a very successful entertainment last Friday evening. The program certainly gave great credit to the teacher, Miss Edith Miller, both in the planning and executing of it. A load which went from here was considerably detained on the way home by the kindness of the parties who moved the team and sleigh from the barn in which they had been placed, as they said for economical reasons.

Mrs. Frances Sillington, who drives from Novi to our school every day had an exciting time on her drive Wednesday morning. The rug came unhooked just as the rig reached the second railroad crossing near Christensen's and the horse broke into a run. Frightful as that would be, nothing happened to the horses.

In Wednesday night's gale, Ed. Gay got lost, not purposely of course, in the snow storm near the Opera House, but later found his way home, but he finally discovered a tan colored Teddy Roosevelt hat which answered the emergency for the completion of his journey. Funny thing about this storm was that Miss Seeger lost her "Theodore" shaped tan colored run-about hat the same night. She did not recover it again until the early hours of Washington's birthday, when it was ruthlessly thrust through the boarding house door on the head of a great big horrid man. Some storm, that!

Mrs. Randall, Mrs. Moffitt and two Plymouth ladies, Cass Benton, Celia McCullough and two other gentlemen were on the D. U. R. car which struck a snow drift near Newburg, where it remained all night Wednesday night. They left Detroit at four o'clock and reached this town by sleigh about seven o'clock yesterday morning. The delay was caused by armatures on the motor burning out. The passengers were rescued early in the morning through the efforts of the motorman in securing a farmer's sled. After a walk of a mile and a half through snow drifts, they were conveyed to Plymouth where another sled was engaged which brought them to this village. Celia McCullough says that is the first time he has been held up since he became deputy sheriff.

STRUGGLERS

By CATHERINE COOPE

Joyce returned from the telephone; excitement, dismay, bubbling enthusiasm all struggling in her piquant face.

The art editor of the Comet had called up to tell her that her illustrations for John Temple's story must be at the office at ten o'clock the next morning.

It was then that dismay cast all other thoughts from Joyce's mind. She had no model and the work must be commenced without a moment's delay. Joyce felt that her career as an illustrator was hanging in the balance. Artists who could not meet the hasty requirements of editors were not going to get a second chance with the big magazines.

Joyce cast a glance about her meager furniture and realized that ambition was not her only inspiration. If she forfeited the check from the Comet she would also have to forego drawings in the middle of the day. Joyce was strong and healthy and she sighed at the prospect of lunchless days.

A model must be found! Joyce went to the window and stood gazing out at the passers by. Perhaps a tramp or a sandwich man might come along. Either might prove her immediate salvation.

The tinkle of a bell sounded in the distance. Joyce craned her head far out of the window.

"A sandwich man!" Joyce drew in her head hastily and without stopping to smooth her riotous hair or to remove her big apron she sped down the stairs.

She stopped after her breathless descent and watched the approach of the sandwich man. Her heart quaked in momentary fear when she saw the head above the sign-board. Fierce whiskers seemed to bristle from the entire face and the raddish slouch had given him all the appearance of a cave dweller of old.

Joyce brayed herself. She must have a male model to be an Apollo or a Cyclops. She gave herself a moment's respite while she read the advertisement on the sign board. She took extra courage. The sign bore the name of John Temple beneath the name of his book. Somehow Joyce felt a certain friendliness toward the man who was carrying about an advertisement for the man whose story she was about to illustrate.

She felt still less fear when, upon approaching the sandwich man, she found that his eyes were clear and frank and that the whiskers were of the Santa Claus variety.

"I will give you two dollars if you will come and pose for me," Joyce told the man.

He looked up at her standing there on the curbstone her long painting-pony blowing about in the wind and her face eager and wistful. Even a sandwich man had an eye for beauty.

Joyce attributed the doubt in the man's eyes to hesitancy about stealing time from his employer.

"You will be doing John Temple more good by posing for me than you will by carrying that signboard about," she said by way of gaping her point. "It is one of his short stories that I have to illustrate."

The sandwich man's eyes were curiously interested. A moment later he motioned her to lead the way.

Within the door of her studio Joyce turned toward her model a trifle exasperated at the man's silence.

"Can't you speak?"

The man shook his head and Joyce regretted her tone.

"Will you please remove that awful beard?" She spoke more softly.

It seemed to Joyce that the man followed her command reluctantly. When the gray beard and shock of straggling hair were removed, he stood revealed, a man of startling physical beauty.

"Joyce caught her breath. "You could make a fortune—as a model," she said in quick appreciation. She went swiftly to the slender wardrobe that she kept for her models and brought forth an evening suit. She glanced hastily at the man's well-knit and generous frame. She laughed with a tinge of doubtfulness.

When the man returned from the dressing room Joyce laughed in sheer delight at her luck. Here's a model to inspire the most sluggish mentality.

Fortunately for Joyce, the only other figure in her illustration was that of a girl painting desperately at her easel. She had felt very like the great Rembrandts and Van Dykes of history when she had used herself as a model. It had saved her purse considerably and Joyce felt proud of her achievement. She was amused in a half-resentful way at the smile of satisfaction that swept her model's face when his eyes traveled from the big canvas to her own face.

You must try to express surprise, anger and resentment all at once," she said a trifle coldly. "You as the hero in John Temple's story have arrived to fulfill an engagement for the opera with your sweetheart and have come in to find her oblivious to anything save her painting." Joyce signified her model platform and turned toward her paints.

"I will need more lamp black," the sandwich man heard her mutter.

Then she turned to him: "I will be back in a moment."

She was gone and the man to the evening clothes moved toward the easel. The smile of satisfaction lit up his eyes again.

"What a strange coincidence," he said, half aloud, and had scarcely turned from the big wash-drawing before Joyce came swiftly back.

"Now we are ready for work!" she cried happily, with the light of inspiration radiating from her.

Then began the completion of the splendid drawing for John Temple's story. So good was the piece of work that Joyce Rundolf's name was soon in many of the magazines. For two years, the sandwich man posed silently for the rising artist and it Joyce knew that her contentment when he was near meant more than the artist's joy in her work she kept her secret well in hand. The dumb appeal in her model's eyes had begun to haunt her waking and sleeping.

She illustrated stories of John Temple's... His name, too, was in all the magazines and Joyce wondered when she would have the pleasure of meeting him. He had written to thank her for her splendid work; that was as far as their relationship went.

Joyce picked up an newest magazine and idly ran her knife through it. A picture among the advertised new books attracted her languid eye. Joyce sat up and stared at the man's face. It was a photograph of the author, John Temple, and the face was that of her model—her sandwich man.

Joyce felt as if a white heat had come from her feet upward and enveloped her entire being.

The knocker on the door sounded. Joyce realized in a half dazed way that it was time for her model. She cast an involuntary glance at the pad and pencil that she kept for the dumb man's convenience. She smiled grimly; he would have much to write now in explanation.

He came into the studio and there was something new in his bearing, a new determination.

Joyce started to rise from her chair, but sank back when she found herself trembling.

"I love you, Joyce," John Temple said, and laughed. "There—those are the words I wanted first to say to you. I never was dumb and if I had to advertise my own book because I didn't have any money two years ago for full-page ads, and now—well—I have everything I want except you."

He laughed again, but uneasily and drew nearer to Joyce. She had only looked up at him, powerless to speak, now that the great moment had come. "Don't tell me you are angry—I was only a struggling author and had to advertise my name. I think I have loved you since the moment you stood on the curb and asked me to pose."

"I wanted you very much," Joyce said in such a way as to find herself in John Temple's arms.

What Did It Profit Her?

At the Fulton street station of the subway the other day a young woman was leading a boy scarce big enough to be out of arms down the narrow stairs in such a way that her slow progress held up a score of people who were following her.

"Let the people get by," suggested the young woman's mother.

"Let 'em wait," snapped back the other.

"But he can walk closer to you," argued the older woman, timidly.

"He'll walk where he chooses," was the retort.

So the surging tide of fares was delayed until the little boy reached the bottom step, but his mother did not look happy.

If the lad walks where he chooses through life, regardless of the rights of others, I remarked an old man, he may make that mother very unhappy, and the state may have to restrain his steps.—New York Daily Mail.

RICE COMBINATIONS.

Rice when well cooked is so easy of digestion, so nourishing and wholesome that some that it seems poor economy to use so much of other starchy foods and neglect the rice, which forms the chief food of so many millions on the globe.

For the main dish of a meal it can be combined with veal, chicken and other meats in the form of croquettes or scalloped dishes, with tomatoes and curry, with cheese. Another is a very nice dish of hard-cooked eggs cut in eighths and put into buttered baking dish with a layer of cold cooked rice first, then a few spoonfuls of thick white sauce, a sprinkling of cheese and seasonings and a layer of eggs. Finish with buttered crumbs, and bake until thoroughly hot. This is a dish sufficiently filling for a main dish. Five hard-boiled eggs, two cups of rice and a cup of white sauce, seasoning and a little grated cheese will be enough to serve five.

For supper or luncheon dishes there is nothing for a light meal more appropriate than plain boiled rice with rich milk.

Desserts of rice with eggs and milk make most appetizing dishes. Rice and milk baked with dates and raisins and served with cream is another good dessert.

A Spanish dish, using red peppers, rice and any bits of cold meat cut in small pieces, a layer of rice and a sprinkling of onion, then a layer of meat and tomatoes made hot with fresh red peppers. Cover all with green peas and serve in the baking dish.

Rice à la Ristori.—Finely chop two thin slices of bacon; add to one-half of a medium-sized cabbage, finely chopped, cover and cook slowly thirty minutes. Add a fourth of a cup of boiled rice, one-half teaspoon of incised parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Moisten with one-half cup of white stock, either chicken or veal broth and cook fifteen minutes.

Turkish pilaf is another dish liked by many. Cook a half cup of well-washed rice in a tablespoonful of butter until it is brown and the water is absorbed. Add three-fourths of a cup of tomatoes and cook until the rice is soft. Season and serve.

There are the cattle, the horses, the roots and the vegetable products of Western Canada farms, all of which individually and collectively deserve special mention, and they are treated of in the literature sent out on application by the Government agents.

Fried boiled potatoes prepared from cold boiled potatoes and a little white sauce and onion juice sprinkled with green peas, also a left-over, makes another appetizing dish.
