Special Message to the Forty-sixth Legislature of Michigan, in Extraordinary Session:

Acting under the authority of Sec. 7, Art. 6, of the Constitution of the State of Michigan, I, Chase S. Osborn, Governor in and over the State of Michigan, have called the Forty-sixth Legislature in extraordinary session, for the purpose of giving it opportunity and authority to consider and enact a presidential preference primary law.

This proposition is in the interest of all the people and gives equal rights to all parties and all factions of parties. It is for the purpose of extending the rights of all the people and giving greater insurance that the majority shall rule in the nomination of a presidential candidate, rather than that a minority by power, influence, peculiar strength or other unusual entanglement shall override and overrule.

If it is right and advisable to enact a presidential preference primary law it is proper to give it immediate effect. The Constitution of the State of Michigan empowers the Legislature to give effect at once to acts making appropriations or to acts immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety. I assume that the Legislature is the final judge of these conditions. At its regular session this Legislature gave immediate effect to seventy acts. One-half these seventy acts were not appropriation bills in the ordinary meaning of the term, and twenty-one of them carried no appropriation provision whatever. Some of the acts given immediate effect were so trivial as to make any contention that such an important law as the presidential primary measure cannot be given immediate effect. The Constitution was just as sacred last year as this year.

Any presidential preference primary law which the Legislature may pass can with perfect justice and propriety contain a provision for making an application to pay the expenses of delegates. The presidential primary law of the State of Oregon, I am informed, provides for a payment of $200 to meet the expenses of each delegate from Oregon to a national presidential political convention. In the past common custom in Michigan has been to send no delegation to presidential conventions only delegates who could financially afford to go. This custom has militated against men entirely as wise and worthy, but without means and unable to afford the privilege of attending at such conventions.

This argument might be regarded, however, as such a subterfuge as would be resorted to by those who desire to use the Constitution against the interest of the people. It is not necessary to borrow any device to justify putting a presidential primary law into immediate effect. Whatever is right is constitutional.

In the past there has been an unfortunate tendency on the part of some courts and corporation lawyers to resort to constitutional interpretations, supervenient or otherwise, that would serve the ends of selfishness and stand between the people and their moral rights. Better courts and better lawyers now regard the Constitution as being broad and elastic enough to cover and warrant what is right and especially when there is no dispute as to the right. Abraham Lincoln said, "The life of this nation is greater than any constitution."

I am of the firm belief that there is a grave menace to the peace and safety of Michigan whenever the indicated rights of the people are withheld. The effect of withholding these rights now for the first time, so plainly marked and destroy in Michigan, may not be immediately apparent. The resulting harm is more apt to be cumulative and burst forth in passionate revulsions, in revolutions long delayed and in political upheavals that may be both inwholesome and destructive. Every social cataclysm has been preceded by years of cause in which the strong have oppressed the weak in one way or another. Who knows what the harvest of destruction may be from such seed sowing? The minute bacteria tuberculosis, trachoma, and graver, a module the size of a millet seed comparatively easy of discovery, is the cause of the white plague and a grim terror of civilization. Its presence may be everywhere and unknown. No one would think of inviting it or aggravating it. What then are we to Transcontinental railroads were ordered by the interstate commerce commission to reduce their rates from St. Louis and other Mississippi river transfers to Denver from 1 cent and steel bars from 20 cents to 52 cents a hundred pounds, and iron steel plates and sheets and structural steel (not fabricated) from $2 to $2 cents a hundred. The existing rates were fixed by the Vulcan Iron Works of Denver.

THEO. ROOSEVELT IS A CANDIDATE

SAYS, "I WILL ACCEPT THE NOMINATION IF IT IS TENDERED ME."

ANSWER TO PETITION OF EIGHT GOVERNORS

Announcement Comes Just as Michigan Legislature Is About to Consider Presidential Primary Bill.

Theodore Roosevelt is a candidate for the presidency. He says so himself. His letter replying to that of eight governors who urged him to accept the nomination was made public at the Outlook office Sunday night.

Roosevelt's Letter.
Gentlemen—I deeply appreciate your letter and I realize to the full the heavy responsibility it puts upon me, expressing as it does the carefully considered convictions of the men elected by popular vote to stand as the heads of government in their several states. I fully agree with you that this matter is not one to be decided with any reference to the personal preferences or interests of any man, but purely from the standpoint of the interests of the people as a whole. I will accept the nomination for president if it is tendered to me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference. One of the chief principles for which I have stood and for which I now stand, and for which I have always endeavored and always shall endeavor to rededicate, is the genuine rule of the people, and therefore I hope that as far as possible the people may be given the chance through direct primaries to express their preference as to who shall be the nominee of the Republican presidential convention.

Very truly yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Rebels Trying to Excite the Mexicans.

Declaring that the United States is attempting to get control of Mexico and is behind the abuses going on which they claim to be fighting, the Mexican rebels issued a proclamation addressed to President Taft. The proclamation was seized by Texas rangers before it had been given much publicity. The proclamation is in Spanish and was taken to the printing office by Gonzalo Barreto, said to be the former Mexican consul at Clifton, Ariz. The proclamation is a harangue addressed to the president, but in reality written to excite the habits of the Mexican people, among whom it was to be distributed.

To Widen Scope of State Fair,

The state fair to be held in Detroit beginning September 16 next will be the first one in the country to have an industrial exhibit on a large scale where the various processes of manufacture in many varied lines will be shown in practical way, so that a visitor to the fair will be able to get liberal education in how things like edges, automobiles, shoes, boxes, cloth and other common articles of commerce are made by the most up-to-date methods. The idea was conceived a year ago by Secretary and Manager J. E. Farnon, of the Michigan State Agricultural society, but it was then too late to carry it out in time for the state fair last fall.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Judge William H. Pope, the first district judge of the state of New Mexico, took the oath of office before Chief Justice White, of the supreme court, Washington, and left for Santa Fe.

The navy, for the first time, will assist the revenue cutter service this year in patrolling Pacific waters to prevent pelagic sealing. This has been made necessary by the seal treaty signed by the United States, Great Britain, Russia and Japan.

The new revenue cutter Urala, now nearing completion at Newport News, Va., will sail from the Atlantic coast July 1 by way of the Suez canal for Juneau, Alaska, which will be her station. It will take the Urala three months to make the 15,000-mile voyage.

To promote American export trade, the bureau of manufactures is preparing a bulletin showing the language, currency, weights and measures, post offices and parcel post facilities of all foreign countries offering opportunities for the manufactured products of the United States.

The papal legation received word from the Vatican that a new diocese is to be created in Texas. Headquarters will be at Brownsville and the jurisdiction embraced will be the territory between Laredo and Corpus Christi. A bishop for the new diocese will be named later.

Several Turkish Boats Sink Under Fierce Fire—60 Dead.

A flotilla of Italian warships bombarded Beirut, killed 60 peaceful inhabitants and wounded a large number of others. They also sank a number of small Turkish gunboats anchored in the port.

A appearing suddenly off the port, the commander of the Italian gunboat Volturno and the armored cruiser Giuseppe Garibaldi sent to the authorities a peremptory demand for the surrender of the Turkish gunboats in the harbor.

Before the provincial governor could deliver his reply to the Italian commanders or 25k for time to negotiate the cruisers opened a devastating fire.

In a short time the Turkish gunboats in the harbor were disabled and in a sinking condition. The customs house was greatly damaged and other buildings also suffered severely.

A great number of people who came within the zone of fire while passing along the streets were slaughtered.

A panic set in and the people fled in droves towards the Lebanon hills.

None of the American institutions, including the big Presbyterian college, were harmed by the explosion of shells. The professors, missionaries and students are safe.

Ospina Recalled for His Insult.

Gen. Pedro Nel Ospina, Colombian minister to the United States, was recalled by the Colombian government.

The action of the Colombian government was taken because neither it nor the Colombian people upholds the position taken up by the Colombian minister at Washington in notifying the state department that the visit to Colombia of Sec. SANTA FE The Oldest City in America

DOWNS OF THE OLD MISSION

WHILE many Americans are year after year traveling over Europe gazing in wonderment at ruined churches of another age, at picturesque natural surroundings and at natives in fantastic dress, they seem ignorant or oblivious of the fact that they might find similar attractions here in our own country if they would look for them and go a little out of the "beaten paths" to find them, as they do in the old world. Particularly rich in such elements of the unusual is our great southwest, the scene of the oldest civilization in the United States. It is a region that up to this time has not had the attention it deserves from either colonists or sightseers, but the situation is likely to be changed now that the way o' statehood will give the people of the region a more direct participation in the affairs of the republic.

There are, in the southwest, more "show places" well worthy a visit than could be enumerated within the limits of any newspaper article, but there is one that is perhaps unique in the extent to which it rivals anything abroad in the charm of its alien atmosphere and the unique characteristics of its architecture. This is Santa Fe, the ancient capital of New Mexico, and a community which as the terminus of the famous "Santa Fe Trail" of other days, was well known to history and the minds of western romancers long before many a now prosperous city had emerged from the infant stage. Some of her latter day rivals may have passed Santa Fe in the race for population and commercial standing, but none of them can vie with her in a historical ascendancy or cosmopolitan character.

Indeed, the fascinating old city of Santa Fe not only enjoys the distinction of being the oldest town and the oldest capital on the American continent, but it is probably the quaintest and most picturesque settlement within the borders of the United States. In the centuries in which its interesting history has extended the Villa Real de Santa Fe de San Francisco de Assisi—give its full Spanish name—has been under three flags, each ruling power having left its impress without obliterating the influence of the others. In short, no other city of this hemisphere, not even St. Augustine or New Orleans, so links the past and the present—the old era and the new in American civilization.

To a certain extent Santa Fe may be said to be off the main beaten paths of transcontinental railway travel, being, in fact, the terminus of a branch railroad which forms an offshoot of some 18 miles from the through line to the Pacific coast. However, this circumstance has not prevented a commendable commercial development. In the ancient city and in these days of automobiles and in the future of the aeroplane Santa Fe will be relieved of any sense of isolation. The ancient capital is situated in the middle of a high plain rimmed with mountain peaks, the altitude being more than 7,000 feet above the sea, and as the tourist climbs up on to what appears to be in very truth the roof of the world, there lies spread out on either hand a panorama of far-reaching plains guarded by a close cordon of blue mountains that is simply inspiring in its sublime beauty.

The little city of Santa Fe has a wealth of "show places," any one of which might be expected to make the reputation of a much larger city as a tourist Mecca. One of the most interesting of these historical headliners is the famous Church of San Miguel, the "cradle of Christianity on the American continent." This time-honored place of worship was built in the year 1540, but was partially destroyed in the Indian revolution against the Spaniards in 1680. It was reoccupied by the conquerors in 1692 and was completely restored in 1710. The contents of the church as it stands today, include an ancient copper bell in which the date 1350 is cast, and several valuable old religious paintings pierced with arrow holes—grim reminders of the days when the settlement was attacked by hostile Indians.

Almost in the shadow of the church stands an adobe structure which is claimed to be the "Oldest House in the United States." A considerable portion of this quaint dwelling remains as it has been for centuries, and there seems to be no reason to doubt the claim that it is the most ancient building, continuously inhabited, in this country. On the main road entering the city from the south stand the ruins of the old Spanish fortifications, and within a radius of a few miles are a number of old mission buildings—the churches of the pioneers of Christianity and civilization—which are older than the oldest of the similar ruinas in California, and are in an infinitely better state of preservation.

Among these old landmarks is the Rosario chapel, erected in ploma gratitudo by Diego de Vargas when he, in the year 1692, vanquished the rebellious Indians and recaptured the little city of the Holy Faith from his countrymen who had been excluded for a dozen years.

At the side of the plaza or central square of Santa Fe stands the palace. This is an adobe structure which was built in 1598, and, from

CHANGES IN CHINATOWN.

Residents of New York's Oriental Quarter Dress for Dinner.

A reliable source of big city wheezes seems to have dried up. The Chinks are no longer to be considered funny, the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star writes. Time was when hard working humorists could take a turn through Chinatown and come back with a screamingly funny story about flapping parties and streaming queues and pigeon English. Now the Chinese residents have taken on a different air. They act like regular people ever since their mouldy old country got out of its grave clothes long enough to put up a fight for liberty. They talk straight to you, and their dialect isn't a bit funnier than is the brogue of the newly arrived Irishman or the broken English of the German immigrant or the lingo of the newcomer from Russia or the patois of the French Canadian. They look you right in the eye. They never did cringe any—memory fails to recall any John Chinaman who would rub his hands together to get trade—but they are independent and self respecting now. Maybe the facts are not related, but there has been little disorder in the Chinese quarter since that fever broke out in the Chinese body politic. It may be, of course, due to the fact that other people respect them nowadays. In the old days they broke into the news only as the objects at which wit was aimed, or as mysterious Orientals who liked the black smoke and sold chop suey. Nowadays they are figures in a movement of world importance, and they appreciate the fact.

The other night a reporter went to Chinatown to see one of the prominent residents. The last time the reporter talked to him the Chinaman was garbed a la John Laundryman, although his house was illuminated by gold embroidery. This time the reporter found him wearing a dinner jacket. Two or three guests were similarly attired. "Just a symbol of our new status," said the Chinaman, with a smile. He is a graduate of an American college, by the way. We are no longer to be considered barbarians.

political-historical standpoint, is the most important building in the ancient city. For more than 300 years it served as the home and office of the Spanish, Mexican and American governors. Here, in the seventeenth century, the Holy Inquisition held its functions, and in this building, hundreds of years later, Gen. Lew Wallace, while serving as governor, wrote his novel, "Ben-Hur." In the different eras the rulers who established the seat of authority in the old palace were designated, respectively, as vicar, captain general, political chief, department commander and governor, while the territory over which they held sway was known successively as a kingdom, province, department and territory. Now it advances to the dignity of a sovereign state in the great American sisterhood.

The older portions of Santa Fe are typically Mexican, with squat little adobe houses strung irregularly along narrow, winding streets, and even in what is known as the "new town" on the other side of the little river, the baked mud structures of the same unconventional architectural lines are interspersed with the massive cathedral, modern business blocks and other creations of present-day American enterprise. More than half of the population of the city is Mexican, and many of the women of that race go about with their heads swathed in the inevitable black fringed shawls. Rowdy burros amble along with packs of firewood or garden truck as large as themselves, and Indians from the neighboring pueblos offer the strange pottery of their own manufacture.

Santa Fe rejoices in a wonderful climate. As is to be expected in a locality that is nearer the heavens than the highest mountain peaks east of the Mississippi river, there is a fine, bracing, tonic air, and the sun shines on at least 300 days out of the year. These climatic advantages, combined with the creature comforts brought by the invading Yankees have produced a combination that is attracting to Santa Fe and vicinity many invalids and persons in search of health to whom the dry atmosphere is a boon of priceless value. Some of these health seekers live in tents in the country or in the outskirts of the city, but the leisure folk who have been attracted to Santa Fe merely because of its ideal climate, dwell in cozy cottages which are in striking contrast to the houses of adobe—the "forerunner of concrete."

Although the Mexicans of Santa Fe take life with the traditional ease of their race, it is possible for the American housewife in New Mexico to secure domestic help with perhaps somewhat less difficulty than is encountered by her sister in the average American city. A cool or general housekeeper may be obtained at a wage of from $12 to $20 a month. However a family living in a cozy five or six room cottage seldom requires outside help, or at most, will find their needs in this direction amply served by a young Mexican girl who will act as nurse or household helper, and who can be secured for a wage of from $8 to $12 per month. American residents of Santa Fe who are proud of her progress point with pride to a number of twentieth century residences and business structures, and, incidentally, they direct attention to the handsome capitol building, erected as the territorial capitol of New Mexico, and which from every standpoint compares favorably with many of the capitol buildings throughout the Union.

QUEER FISH HOOKS.

To go back as far as the stone age, we have only to turn to the inhabitants of Oceania, because these natives have never progressed any farther in the art of capturing fish than did their ancestors centuries ago. The Polynesian hooks are generally barbed and some curious specimens have been collected in New Zealand, says the Hawaiian Star. One of these is made from a section of a dog's jawbone, a single tooth, which has been filed to a sharp point, being left for the barb; in this same country a hook that has been pointed with human bone is regarded as possessing exceptionally fine qualities for attracting the best workmanship is exhibited in the hooks which are used without bait and which correspond to our spoons. Pearl or other iridescent shell furnishes the part which attracts the fish, and frequently the shank consists of the ribbed part of a shell, near the hinge of the valve, thereby giving the hook a spinning motion as it is drawn through the water. Many elaborate designs have a wooden shank, neatly carved and inlaid with a sliver of halibut shell, while the barb is of sharpened bone. The extreme delicacy required in accurately piecing together one of these composite hooks may be imagined.

HER PRIVILEGE.
"Have you made a resolution to marry this year, colonel?" asked the determined young person earnestly.

"No," replied the colonel in his preoccupied manner, "have you?"

TWO SOLDIERS KILL THEIR AGED HOSTESS

They Are Sentenced to Death by Court Martial for the Unusually Brutal Murder.

SHOW VICTIM'S SKULL

Wanted Money for Their Amusement, and Finding the Old Woman Alone, Beat Her to Death With a Club, After Struggle for Life.

Paris.—Two young soldiers belonging to an infantry regiment have been sentenced to death by the court martial sitting at Le Mans. On the second Sunday in October these men, whose names are Tisseau and Nolot, murdered under extremely shocking circumstances an old woman, who had treated them in a most hospitable manner.

They wanted money for their amusements, and, arriving about noon at the house, they asked the old woman, who was alone, to give them some refreshment. It did not seem as though she could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman," Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Main St., Peoria, Ill.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let everyone know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters,"—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Main St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman,"—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., MAR. 1, '12

For the President.

The following interview given by Michigan's two senators was published in Tuesday's Daily papers:

Senator Smith: "I will say this: I am very much surprised that Col. Roosevelt is a candidate for the presidency. I had not supposed he would be a candidate, and regret he has involved the party in a sectional fight of such magnitude. It does not alter my view, however, expressed that President Taft deserves a nomination at the hands of the party. I am for William Howard Taft."

Senator Townsend: "Believing as I do that Taft is a real progressive and not a reactionary, that his ideals are as high as those of Mr. Roosevelt, I feel that real reform in government would better serve under Taft as president, and I am profoundly sorry that his friend feels that it is his duty to be a candidate against Mr. Taft."

The outcome is as yet hard to foretell. One thing certain the Republican party is now in for a ride over a rocky road. In any event Michigan as a whole will have nothing but admiration for Michigan senators who come out in the open and let people know just where they stand. We all admit that Roosevelt is popular with the people. It's a name that thrills the hearts of the American people and yet there is seemingly no greater misfortune than that requires a Moses to lead the voters from some dread calamity.

President Taft is entitled to the renomination by precedent and he has apparently committed no great crime to warrant his overthrow. If he is to be dumped now only to meet the political requirements of the hour, then what will the people do in 1916? Will it be Roosevelt again?

The presidential primary bill now before the legislature provides for the payment of the delegates' expenses, a matter of $200 each. That would be $4,000 for the thirty delegates to be elected. The delegates to have the fun of a free trip to Chicago and the comforts of a ten dollar a day hotel and the tax payers will have the fun of footing the bill. Funny isn't it?

Twas Sympathy for the Sub.
Editor, Record:—The boys of the Quality Club wish to apologize very much for delaying the prize to their courteous "sub" as long as they did. After his substituting twice without a prize, it naturally began to open our eyes to the fact that a "play off" was necessary in order to make things straight. Next time we will try and arrange for this earlier in the season and thus not cause hard feelings.

W. R. C. Notes.

(By Press Correspondent.)

Members of the W. R. C. were most royally entertained by the Ladies of the Library Association in the library Friday evening, in acknowledgement of the beautiful gift given them by the Relief Corps. The program consisted of patriotic music and renderings by different members of the association and each piece was rendered in a very pleasing manner and was greatly appreciated by all present.

We should have given Frank Shaefer credit for the good coffee at the K. P. banquet instead of Harry Clark as we stated last week. Well, it was good coffee, anyhow.

Hod Jackson had great luck while fishing at White lake last week, the catch he brought home being the envy of local fishermen—one tipping the scales at fifteen pounds.

The two year old son of A. E. Atch, the fruit merchant here, died Wednesday night of malnutrition. The boy will be taken to Lansing today for interment in the Catholic cemetery.

Special continuation of Northville Lodge No. 180, F. & A. M., Monday evening, March 4. The Past Masters of this Lodge will have charge of the work. The M. M. will be worked. Lodge will be served.

The K. P.s accepted six new members Tuesday night and 25 new applications were received. The contest disclosed that L. L. Bell's side lost, and R. L.'s up to the lower to prepare a banquet for the winners. Something will be doing about March 18.

According to other newspapers, Port Huron is in the grip of a typhoid fever epidemic, 63 cases being reported with nearly as many suspected cases. Three caucuses are offered without any one being proved, namely, the drinking water, the milk and the atmospheric conditions there.

Ding, dong! Ding, dong! Could it be? Yes, it was the fire bell which rang for the first time in two years about ten o'clock Sunday evening. A fire started in the Exchange Hotel, catching from the chimney, without much damage being done, however, owing to the wet condition of the buildings.

Miss Emily Snyder was called to Detroit last week by the sudden death of her mother, Mrs. David Snyder, on Saturday at her home in Detroit. She had been ill only a short time and her death was entirely unexpected. Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Miller and Mrs. George Hills and son George attended the funeral Tuesday.

J. B. Cook, of rural route No. 1, during our heavy snow storm, when the mails were tied up all over the United States and the trains had hard work to even ding, it succeeded in supplying his patrons with mail every day with the exception of five cases where he was unable to catch sleighs for those houses. That's quite a record and was not equalled by any other carrier in Michigan.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS

BY ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

PASQUAL

Pasqual was war-chief of the Yuma Indians (who called themselves "Sons of the River"). The Yuma river, for much of its course, runs through a desert. Vegetation (before irrigating ditches were made) was once to be found only along the river banks. On these banks the Yuma savages lived. For a venture far into the desert was to court starvation.

Yet the desert trails and hiding places were known to the Yumas, and the sands were often reddened with their battles. Pasqual, typical desert warrior, gigantic in height, tall, wiry, stocky—knew every inch of the sand wastes and each strategic advantage offered by them. His father was a chief, and was killed in battle against the Tonto Indians on the Gila river, early in the nineteenth century. Pasqual was chosen in the dead leader's place as Sachem and war-chief of the Yumas.

Then came the Mexican war. And in its wake came soldiers and white settlers. California was conquered, and an era of bustling progress set in. The land on both sides of the Colorado river was invaded by the home-seeking frontiersmen.

Arrow Versus Rifle Bullet.

Pasqual had no idea of letting the white man steal the most fertile parts of his wide domain. So quarrels sprang up between settlers and savages. And, as usual, the pioneers sent a call for help to the soldiers.

Accordingly, in 1845, Capt. Heintzelman (later a general in the civil war) was sent with a force of troops to overtake the Yumas. The conflicts that followed were terribly unequal. The troops were well-trained veterans, armed with the latest and best guns and carrying cannon as well. Pasqual, understanding only Indian warfare, and his wild warriors had no weapons except their bows, arrows and native spears.

Yet the splendid generalship of Pasqual and the fierce courage of his Yuma braves almost made up for these defects. In fight after fight Pasqual hurled his red legions upon

HENDRIK

An Indian whose tank figure was hidden in the padded depths of a British officer's peerless uniform, and whose copper face peeped out from behind the meshes of a coquettish black veil, was standing in conference with Col. Embrath Williams, leader of a body of colonial troops. The velvety man was Hendrik, one of the foremost chieftains of the Mohawk nation.

Williams, with 4,000 soldiers, and Hendrik with 200 Mohawk braves, had been detached from the main body of the English militiamen who had hurried north to meet a large party of French, Canadians, and their Indian allies, who were invading New York. The detachment learned that aanking force of French were approaching.

"Are our numbers sufficient to meet them?" asked Williams.

"If we are to fight," retorted Hendrik, "we are too few. If we are to be killed, we are too many."

The Savage With the Veil.

Williams then proposed a plan to divide his 1,200 men into three detachments for the attack. Hendrik, by way of answer picked up three sticks and bound them together and strove to break them. He could not do it. Then, taking each stick separately, he broke all three with ease.

"Three sticks tied in a fagot," said he, "cannot readily be broken. One by one they are easy to break. So with our forces."

It was by such quaint, common sense phrases that Hendrik had won throughout the colonies a high réputation for shrewd wisdom. By far his chief claim to greatness lies in the important services he was forever rendering to the English colonies, not only in the French and Indian war, but among his own people.

Hendrik was born in 1650. He was the son of Wolf, a Mohawk chief, and of a Mohawk princess. As was often the custom, he became enrolled in his mother's tribe and later strengthened his bonds to it by marrying Hunnis, the beautiful daughter of a Mohawk chieftain. His bravery and wisdom soon raised Hendrik high in the councils of the "Six Nations." He was from the first a loyal friend to the English colonists. To his efforts largely was due the celebrated treaty of 1753 between the Six Nations and the English.

It was a dangerous period for the British colonies in North America, for France was planning to sweep those colonies from the face of the earth, and to claim the whole North American continent as a huge French province. In Canada and in the west, the French were all-powerful. They had made allies of many strong Indian tribes, and were trying to lure to their standard the "Six Nations." Had they succeeded in doing this New York and other colonies would probably have been overrun by local hostile Indians as well as threatened from north and west by the French invaders. It

The Father

The man whose story is here to be told, was the wealthiest and most influential person in his parish; his name was Thord Overas. He appeared in the priest's study one day, tall and earnest.

"I have gotten a son," said he, "and I wish to present him for baptism."

"What shall his name be?"

"John—after my father."

They were mentioned, and proved to be the best men and women of Thord's relations in the parish.

"Is there anything else?" inquired the priest, and looked up.

The peasant hesitated little. "I should like very much to have him baptized by himself," said he, finally.

"That is to say on a week day?"

"Next Saturday, at 12 o'clock noon." "Is there anything else?" inquired the peasant, twirling his cap, as if he were about to go.

Then the priest rose. "There is yet this, however," said he, and walking toward Thord, he took him by the hand and looked gravely into his eyes: "God grant that the child may become a blessing to you!"

One day sixteen years later, Thord stood once more in the priest's study. "I have come this evening about that son of mine who is to be confirmed tomorrow." "I did not wish to pay the priest until I heard what number the boy would have when he takes his place in church tomorrow," said Thord.

"He will stand number one." "So I have heard; and here are $10 for the priest."

"Is there anything else I can do for you?" inquired the priest, fixing his eyes on Thord.

"There is nothing else." Thord went out.

Eight years more rolled by, and then one day a noise was heard outside of the priest's study, for many men were approaching, and at their head was Thord, who entered first.

The priest looked up and recognized him.

"You come well attended this evening, Thord," said he.

"I am here to request that the banus may be published for my son; he is about to marry Karen Storlien, daughter of Gustafund, who stands here beside me."

"Why, that is the richest girl in the parish."

"So they say," replied the peasant, stroking back his hair with one hand.

"This is now the third time," Thord, that you have come here on your son's account."

"That now I am through with him," said Thord, and, folding up his pocket-book, he said farewell, and walked away.

The priest looked up and recognized him.

"You come well attended this evening, Thord," said he.

May Have Been Cook's Cannon.
Much interest has been roused in Australia by the finding of a cannon which is supposed to have been jettisoned from Captain Cook's ship, the Endeavor. The relic was found on the Queensland coast.

A Great Discovery

Certain ingredients that Really Promote Hair Growth when Properly Combined.

Rescrol is one of the most effective germ destroyers ever discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Napthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which robs the hair of its natural nourishment, and also creates a clean, healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Phloroxy, although not a color matter of size, is a well-known ingredient for restoring the hair to its natural color, when the loss of hair has been caused by a disease of the scalp.

These ingredients in proper combination with alcohol added as a stimulant and for its well defined nourishing properties, perfect perhaps the most effective remedy that is known for scalp and hair trouble.

We have a remedy which is chiefly composed of these ingredients, in combination with other extremely invaluable medicinal agents. We guarantee it to positively cure dandruff, and to grow hair, even though the scalp in spots is bare of hair. If there is any vitality left in the roots, it will positively cure baldness; or we will refund your money. If the scalp has a glazed, shiny appearance, it's an indication that baldness is permanent, but in other instances we believe baldness is curable.

We want every one troubled with scalp disease or loss of hair to try Rexall "33" Hair Tonic. If it does not cure dandruff and grow hair to the satisfaction of the user, we will without question or quibble return every cent paid us for it. We print this guarantee on every bottle. It has effected a positive cure in 95 percent of cases where put to practical test.

Rexall "33" Hair Tonic is entirely unlike, and we think, in every particular better than anything else we know of for the purpose for which it is prescribed. We urge you to try this preparation at no entire risk. Certainly we know of no better guarantee to give you. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Northville only at our store—The Rexall Store. Three engines drawing three cars of stock came through from Jackson Thursday last, and about a mile east of town were stalled in the cut where for several rods the drifts were twenty feet high. Nearly all the men in town turned out to help dig them out, driving up the track in sleighs as the roads were blocked with snow. Feed was also taken to the stock, but some of the sheep and one cow died. Friday morning the twenty-four calves were butchered and dressed as they could not be fed. The train crew and section men which had been picked up on the road were lodged and fed in the village and at the neighboring farm homes. Friday afternoon the snow plow from Pontiac came and dug them out, after having been there over twenty-four hours.
