PRESBYTERIAN EASTER FAIR

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church will hold an Easter Fair in the church parlors next Wednesday and Thursday, where aprons, dusting caps, homemade candy, popcorn and Easter novelties will be sold. There will also be a little Japanese tea room where tea will be served at all hours by young ladies in Oriental costumes.

On Wednesday evening an Operetta will be given by the primary department of the Sunday school, entitled "Fete in Flowerland." To this an admission of 15 cents will be charged.

On Thursday evening beginning at 5:30, a menu consisting of all kinds of articles made of Eggs, will be served for 20 cents.

An invitation is extended to the public.

Registration Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Registration for the Township of Northville, County of Wayne, Michigan, will meet in Will L. Tingham's shoe store, in the Village of Northville, in said county and state, on Saturday, March 30, 1912, from 9:00 o'clock a. m. to 5:00 p. m. for the purpose of Registering the Electors of said Township.

WILL L. TINGHAM,
Township Clerk.

Dated, Northville, Mich., March 16, 1912. 34w2

Christensen—Roberts

Miss Lulu Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Roberts, and Alex Christensen, one of our well known citizens, were married at the home of the bride, on Wednesday evening of this week. Rev. Wm. S. Jerome officiated, only relatives of the happy couple being present. They will reside on what is known as the old Pinkerton farm two miles north and east of this village. Their best of friends unite in wishing the bridal couple a long and happy life.

Bitten by Mad Dog.

Mrs. Mary Palmer has been sent to Ann Arbor for treatment, having been bitten by her dog which was afflicted with rabies. This dog was bitten by another dog some time ago, the latter dying shortly of rabies. Mrs. Palmer was playing with her dog when it bit her, good naturedly Dr. Patterson of Detroit who was called in, declared the dog had the "dumb rabies," which is very prevalent just at present. The dog was killed Wednesday.

The Board of Health and the Village President have ordered all dogs either muzzled or chained to avoid further danger.

MRS. CHAS. WEDOW DIED MONDAY

Mrs. Charles Wedow died early Monday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Luke Hake. She had been ill since last Tuesday having suffered a severe stroke of paralysis. For the past three years she had made her home with Mrs. Hake, who is the only surviving child. She is also survived by an aged husband.

The funeral was held from the German church at Clarencerville Wednesday.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to extend my heartfelt thanks to the Ladies' Aid, King's Daughters, St. Patrick's committee and neighbors for flowers, and all friends who have contributed to make my short hours so pleasant; also the Record for words of sympathy and cheer.

MRS. HATTIE CLARK.

Christmas Makes Demand.

The German demand for apples and nuts to hang on Christmas trees is always very great. The inland production of apples, even in a favorable year, although large, is far too small for the demand, in spite of the fact that thousands of acres of new trees are planted each year. In order to supply the inland market, large quantities of apples and nuts must be imported from abroad each year.

Cannot Eliminate Love.

A periodical devoted to the drama pleads for plays based on some emotion other than love. The difficulty in producing such plays is that every play must have a hero, and in making a hero the playwright, as well as his audience, almost inevitably adopts the view expressed two thousand years ago by a scribe on one of the dead walls of Pompeii: "He who has never loved a woman is not a gentleman."

MONDAY NEXT ENROLLMENT DAY

The Secretary of State Explains the New Law.

I do not believe too much publicity can be given the voters of the importance of proper enrollment.

The opinion seems to prevail that voters will be afforded the opportunity to enroll only on an enrollment day, which is Monday, April 1st, 1912.

No elector shall be deemed a qualified enrolled elector who has not enrolled since August 1st, 1911.

In many cases it will not be convenient for an elector to appear before the board in person on April 1st, and the law provides that an elector may enroll at any time by delivering, in person or by mail, to the city or township clerk, or the officer in charge of the enrollment book, a written request for such enrollment, accompanied by affidavit setting forth that he is a qualified elector and that it is his bona fide intention to affiliate with the political party with which he seeks to enroll. If a voter enrolls by affidavit on or before June 25, he will have the right to vote at the August Primary. A voter who has not enrolled either by application and affidavit or on an enrollment day (except as specifically provided) cannot participate in and will not be permitted to vote at a primary election.

If the voter neglects or refuses to give the name of his party, or if he has none he shall not be enrolled by the enrollment board.

In some sections, owing to local conditions, voters have enrolled as "Independent," "Citizens," "Socialist," etc., who affiliate in state elections with some other political party. If such enrolled voter desires to change party affiliation to Republican, Democrat, Prohibition, etc., in order to participate in the August Primary, he can only do so by personally making application on April 1st, and not by written application and affidavit.

FREDERICK C. MARTINDALE,
Secretary of State.

WHERE THE TIGERS PLAY THIS YEAR

Detroit United Lines Has Issued Its 1912 Base Ball Calendar.

The Detroit United Lines, through Publicity Agent A. D. B. Van Zandt, has issued the 1912 edition of its copyrighted base ball calendar, showing when and where the Detroit "Tigers" play. As long as the supply lasts these calendars may be had from the station agents of the company, or they will be mailed by Mr. Van Zandt, from 12 Woodward avenue, Detroit, on receipt of two cents postage.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens at Monte Carlo with Col. Terence O'Rourke, a military free lance and something of a gambler, in his hotel. Looking on the balcony he sees a beautiful girl who suddenly enters the elevator and passes from sight. At the same time O'Rourke notices two men watching him. One is the Hon. Bertie Glynn, while his companion is Viscount Des Trebes, a duelist. The viscount tells him the French government has directed him to O'Rourke as a man who would undertake a secret mission.

CHAPTER III.

As he stepped out of the lift Colonel O'Rourke remarked a light in his room, visible through the transom over the door.

"The femme de chambre," he thought. "Sure and the poor thing's still busy trying to clear up."

To the contrary, he found the door fast. "This careless she was to leave the light on," he observed, sitting his key in the lock.

If thoughtless in that one way, the woman had fulfilled the letter of her word in the other. It was with comprehensive relief (since he anticipated a call) that he found the room once again preceptable.

But one thing surprised him, and more surprising still was the fact that his ordinarily indifferent eye should have detected it at the first glance. He had indeed half entered before he became aware of a square of white paper tucked in the corner of the bureau mirror.

"The devil, now!" he greeted it. "That's curious. Could one of my many admirers have bribed the femme de chambre to bring a note to me?" He chuckled, holding to the light a much soiled envelope, grimy with the marks of many fingers, plastered with stamps and black with postmark marks and substitute addresses, having evidently been forwarded over half the world before it reached the addressee, who was, in a bold hand, "Colonel Terence O'Rourke."

He whitened low over this examining it intently, infinitely less concerned with its contents than with the manner by which it had reached him. The first postmark seemed to be that of Rangoon, the original address, the Cercle Militaire, his club in Paris. Hence, apparently, it had sought him in Galway, Ireland, Dublin, Paris again, and finally—after half a dozen other addresses—"C. of Mme. O'Rourke, Hotel Carlton, London." The London postmark was undecipherable.

He found himself trembling violently. By one hand alone could this have reached him, since the post had not brought it to Monte Carlo.

He recalled that woman's voice which had so stirred him, the woman of the Casino whose bearing had seemed to him so familiar.

Some one tapped on the door; he smothered a curse of annoyance, and went to answer, thrusting the letter into his pocket.

A page announced Monsieur le Comte des Trebes.

"Show the gentleman up," snapped O'Rourke. He was about to add, "in five minutes," when Des Trebes himself appeared.

"Anticipating that message, monsieur," he said, moving into view from one side of the door, "I took the liberty of accompanying this boy. I am late, I fear."

O'Rourke forced a nod and smile of welcome. "Not to my knowledge," said he.

The Frenchman consulted his watch. "Ten minutes late, monsieur; it is ten past midnight."

"Then," said O'Rourke, "the top of the morning to ye, Enter, monsieur." He stood aside, closing the door behind him. "This no matter; if I thought ye punctual, 'tis so ye are to all intents and purposes."

A chair, monsieur. He established Des Trebes by a window. "And a cigarette?—A drop to drink?—As ye will. And since 'tis to talk secret business that we're here—would ye like the door locked?"

"That is hardly essential!" Des Trebes reviewed his surroundings with swift, searching glance. "We are at least secure from interruption; one could ask little more."

"True for ye," laughed O'Rourke. He moved toward the alcove. "Now first of all I'm to submit proofs of my identity, I believe," he added, intending to dig out of his trunk a dispatch-box containing his passports and other papers of a private nature.

But Des Trebes had changed his mind. "That is unnecessary," monsieur. Your very willingness is sufficient proof. I have your word and am content."

"That's the way of doing business that I like," assented O'Rourke heartily, warming a little to the man as he turned back a chair-facing the viscount.

"Besides, I quarrel with no man's right to be reasonable. And now I'm at your service, monsieur."

Des Trebes, lounging back, knees crossed, thin white fingers interlacing, black eyes narrowing, regarded the Irishman thoughtfully for a moment. "Abruptly he sat up and removed from an inner pocket a long thin white envelope, thrice sealed with red wax and innocent of any super-scription whatever."

"Are you prepared, monsieur," he demanded incisively, "to play blind-man's bluff?"

"Am I what?" asked O'Rourke, startled. Then he smiled. "Pardon, perhaps I fail to follow ye."

"I mean," explained the viscount patiently, "that I have to offer you a commission to act under sealed orders"—he tapped the envelope—"the orders contained herein."

"And when would I be free to open that?"

"As soon as you are at sea—away from France, monsieur."

O'Rourke considered the envelope doubtfully. "From you, monsieur—from the Government of France, which you represent," he said at length, "yes; I will accept such a commission. France," he averred simply, "knows me, it wouldn't be asking me to do anything a gentleman shouldn't."

"You may feel assured of that," agreed Des Trebes gravely. "Indeed, I venture to assert you will find this—let us say—adventure much to your liking. Then you accept?"

"One moment—a dozen questions by your leave. When must I start?"

"Tomorrow morning by the Cote d'Azur Rapid, at ten minutes to eight."

"And where will I be going?"

"First to Paris, thence to Havre; thence by the first available steamer, to New York; finally, it may be to Venezuela, monsieur."

"Venezuela?"

"I will myself furnish you with funds sufficient to finance you as far as New York. There our consular general will provide you with what more you may require. It is essential that you maintain contact with this affair shall be kept secret; should you draw on the government in this country, it would expose you to grave suspicions, perhaps to danger."

"I understand that," assented the Irishman. "But to obliterate all danger of mistake, would it not be well to have one of your trusted agents meet me on the steamer and provide me with whatever ye figure I might require?"

"This barely possible; your consular general might not recognize me in New York. Why should he? I never heard his name, even."

Des Trebes meditated this briefly. "It shall be as you desire, monsieur. It shall be arranged as you suggest."

"Finally, then, what is to be my recompense?"

"That must depend I am authorized to assure you that in no case will you receive less than twenty-five thousand francs; in event of a successful termination of your mission, the reward will be doubled."

"Tis enough," said O'Rourke with a sigh; "I accept."

The Frenchman rose, offering him the envelope. "You must pledge yourself, monsieur, not to break these seals until you are at sea."

"Absolutely—of course," O'Rourke took the packet, weighed it curiously in his hand and scrutinized the seals. He remarked that they were yet soft and fresh; the wax had been hot with in the half hour.

"I will do myself the honor of meeting you at the train to see you off, monsieur," said Des Trebes. "At that time, also, will I provide you with the funds you require."

"Thank ye."

"Their hands met."

"Good night, Monsieur O'Rourke."

"Good night."

Half way to the door, Des Trebes paused. "Oh, by the way," he exclaimed carelessly. "I believe you are a friend of my old school-fellow, Chamberlain—mon cher Adolph?"

"Tis so," assented the Irishman warmly. "The best of men—Chamberlain!"

"Odd!" commented the viscount; "only this afternoon I was thinking of him, wondering what had become of the man."

"The last I heard of him, he was in Algeria, monsieur—with some French force in the desert."

"Thank you."

On the point of leaving the viscount snapped, his teeth on a second "Good night," and swore beneath his breath.

O'Rourke, surprised, stared. The Frenchman was standing stiffly at attention, as if alarmed. His pallor was, if possible, increased; livid—his close-laid shaven beard showing blue-black on his heavy brow and prominent chin.

His eyes blazed, shifting from the alcove to O'Rourke.

"Monsieur," he demanded harshly, "what does this mean?"

"Mean, sir?" O'Rourke smiled. "Faith, ye have me there!"

Speechless with rage Des Trebes gestured violently toward the alcove; and O'Rourke became aware that the curtains were shaking—waving as though a draught stirred them. But there was no draught. And beneath their edge he saw two feet—two small, bewitching feet in the daintiest and most absurd of evening slippers, with an inch or so of silken stockings showing above each.

Des Trebes' eyes, filled with an expression unspeakably offensive, met the Irishman's blank, wondering gaze. "It is, no doubt," the Frenchman stammered, "sanctioned by your code to have me spied upon by the partner of your passions."

"But, monsieur—"

"I compliment the lady upon the smallness of her feet, as well as upon ankles so charming that I cannot bring myself to leave without a glimpse of their mistress' features."

Des Trebes moved toward the alcove. Thunderstruck, O'Rourke rapped out a stifled oath, then in a stride forestalled the man. With him it was as if suddenly a circuit had closed in his intelligence, establishing a definite connection between the three—now four—most mystifying incidents of the evening.

"Monsieur, Your Nose Annoys Me!"

did there remain any trace of his magnificent and unquenchable hatred.

"I am unfortunately," he sneered, "incapable of participating in such bravado as you prefer, Colonel O'Rourke. But I am not content to warn you."

"My rank prevents me from punishing you personally. I am obliged to fight gentlemen only."

O'Rourke laughed openly.

"But I advise you to leave Monte Carlo before morning. Should you remain, or should you come within my neighborhood another time—at whatever time—I will kill you as I would a rabid cur—or cause you to be shot."

"There's always the coward's alternative," returned the Irishman. "But ye mustn't forget ye've only the one leg to stand upon in society—your notoriety as a duelist. And I shall take steps to see that ye fight me before sunset. Else shall all Europe know ye for a coward."

Behind the viscount the lift shot up, paused, and discharged a single passenger. As swiftly the cage disappeared.

Out of the corner of his eye, O'Rourke recognized the newcomer as an old acquaintance, and his heart swelled with gratitude while a smile of rare pleasure shaped itself upon his lips. He had now the Frenchman absolutely at his mercy.

"Captain von Einem," he said quickly, "by your leave, a moment of your time."

The man paused stiffly, with the square-set and erect pose of an officer of the German army. "At your service, Colonel O'Rourke," he said in impeccable French.

But the Irishman had returned undivided attention to Des Trebes. "Monsieur," he announced, "your nose annoys me." And with that he shot out a hand and seized the offensive member between a strong and capable thumb and forefinger. "It has annoyed me," he explained in parenthesis, "ever since I first clapped me two eyes upon ye, scum of the earth that ye are."

And he tweaked the nose of Monsieur le Viscount des Trebes, tweaked it with a will and great pleasure, tweaked it for glory and the Saints; carefully, methodically, even painstakingly, he kneaded and pulled and twisted it from side to side, ere releasing it.

Then stepping back and wiping his fingers upon a handkerchief, he cocked his head to one side and admired the result of his handiwork. "Tis an amazingly happy effect," he observed critically—"the crimson blotch it makes against the chalky complexion ye affect, Monsieur des Trebes."

And now I fancy ye'll fight. Your friends may call upon mine here—Captain von Einem, with your permission."

"Most happy, Colonel O'Rourke," assented the German, blue eyes sparkling

in an immobile countenance. "I shall wait the seconds of Monsieur des Trebes in my rooms."

The Frenchman essayed to speak choked with passion, and turning abruptly, somewhat unsteadily, descended the staircase.

O'Rourke laughed briefly offering the German his hand. "Twas wonder fully opportune, your appearance, captain dear," said he. "Thank ye from the bottom of my heart."

And now will ye forgive me excusing myself until I hear from ye about the affair of the morning? I've a friend waiting in me room here. . . . Pardon the rudeness."

CHAPTER IV.

It would be difficult to designate precisely just what O'Rourke thought of the discovery, when after a punctilious return of Captain von Einem's salute, he reopened his door and, closing it quickly as he entered, turned the key in the lock.

His mood was exalted, his imagination excited; the swift succession of events which had made memorable the night, culminating with his open invitation to a challenge from the most desperate duelist in Europe, had inspired a volatile vivacity such as not even the excitement of the Casino had been potent to create in him. Of all mad conjectures imaginable the maddest was too weird for him to credit in his humor of that hour. Eliminating all else that had happened, in the course of that short evening, his heart had been stirred, his emotions played upon by a recrudescence of a passion which he had striven with all his strength to put behind him for a time; he had first heard the voice of the one woman to whom his love and faith and honor were irrevocably pledged, he had then seen her (or another who remarkably resembled her) for the scantiest of instants; and finally he had mysteriously received a letter which could, he believed, have been conveyed to him by no other hand but hers. And now he was persuaded beyond a doubt that the person of the alcove, the eavesdropper for whose fair repute he had chosen to risk his life, was no body in the world but that same one woman.

But more than all else, perhaps, he expected and feared to find the room deserted; for the balcony, outside the windows afforded a means of escape too facile to be neglected by one who wished not to be discovered.

His first definite impression was of consternation and despair, for the lights had been shut off in his absence. Then quickly he descended, with eyes dazzled by the change from the lighted hallway to the lightless chamber, the shadowy shape of a woman, motionless between him and the window, waiting.

An electric switch was at his elbow. With a single motion he could have drenched the place with light. For an instant tempted, some strange scruple of delicacy, abated it may be by his native love of romantic mystery, stayed his hand.

"Madame," said he, "or mademoiselle, whichever ye may be, the windows are open, myself not detaching ye. If ye choose, ye may go, but ye'd favor me by going quick."

I have, he continued, seeing that she neither moved nor replied, "this one chance. In thirty seconds I turn on the lights."

The woman did not stir, but he thought he could detect in the stillness her quickened breathing.

"What ye've taken," he amended. "I thank ye to leave as ye go—if ye came to steal, 'tis little I have to lose."

There was no answer.

He touched the switch with an impatient hand, stepped forward a single pace, caught himself up and stopped short, now pale and trembling who had a moment gone been flushed with calm.

"Beatrice!" he cried, thickly. Dumbly his wife lifted her arms and offered herself to him, unutterably lovely, unspeakably radiant.

It were worse than a waste of time to attempt a portrait of her as she seemed to him. Seen through her husband's eyes, her beauty was incomparable, immaculate, too rare and fine, too delicate a thing to be bodied forth in words, dependent upon the perfection of no single feature. Not in her hair, fair as sunlight on the sea, not in her eyes of autumnal brown, not in the wonderful fineness of her skin or in the daintiness of her features, not in the graciousness of her body, did he find the beauty of her that surpassed expression, but in the love she bore him, in the sweetness of her inviolate soul, in the steadfastness of her impregnable heart.

But it's doubtful if ever he had analyzed his passion for her so minutely. Mostly, I think, at that moment of her abrupt disclosure to him, he longed unutterably for her lips and the proffered wreath round his neck of her slim, round, white arms.

Yet he would not. Trembling though he was, with every instinct and every fiber of his being straining toward her, with the hunger for her a keen pain in his heart, he held himself back; or his conception of honor held him back. That which he had voluntarily forfeited and put away from him for his honor's sake, he would not take back though it were offered freely to him.

"So," he said, after a bit, shakily, then pulled himself together, and controlling his voice—"So 'twas yourself, after all, Beatrice! Me heart told me no other woman could have sung that song as ye did."

The woman dropped her arms. "Your heart, Terence?" she asked a little bitterly.

"What else? Do ye doubt it?"

And now I fancy ye'll fight. Your friends may call upon mine here—Captain von Einem, with your permission."

"Most happy, Colonel O'Rourke," assented the German, blue eyes sparkling

in an immobile countenance. "I shall wait the seconds of Monsieur des Trebes in my rooms."

Eliminating all else that had happened, in the course of that short evening, his heart had been stirred, his emotions played upon by a recrudescence of a passion which he had striven with all his strength to put behind him for a time; he had first heard the voice of the one woman to whom his love and faith and honor were irrevocably pledged, he had then seen her (or another who remarkably resembled her) for the scantiest of instants; and finally he had mysteriously received a letter which could, he believed, have been conveyed to him by no other hand but hers. And now he was persuaded beyond a doubt that the person of the alcove, the eavesdropper for whose fair repute he had chosen to risk his life, was no body in the world but that same one woman.

But more than all else, perhaps, he expected and feared to find the room deserted; for the balcony, outside the windows afforded a means of escape too facile to be neglected by one who wished not to be discovered.

His first definite impression was of consternation and despair, for the lights had been shut off in his absence. Then quickly he descended, with eyes dazzled by the change from the lighted hallway to the lightless chamber, the shadowy shape of a woman, motionless between him and the window, waiting.

An electric switch was at his elbow. With a single motion he could have drenched the place with light. For an instant tempted, some strange scruple of delicacy, abated it may be by his native love of romantic mystery, stayed his hand.

"Madame," said he, "or mademoiselle, whichever ye may be, the windows are open, myself not detaching ye. If ye choose, ye may go, but ye'd favor me by going quick."

I have, he continued, seeing that she neither moved nor replied, "this one chance. In thirty seconds I turn on the lights."

The woman did not stir, but he thought he could detect in the stillness her quickened breathing.

"What ye've taken," he amended. "I thank ye to leave as ye go—if ye came to steal, 'tis little I have to lose."

There was no answer.

He touched the switch with an impatient hand, stepped forward a single pace, caught himself up and stopped short, now pale and trembling who had a moment gone been flushed with calm.

"Beatrice!" he cried, thickly. Dumbly his wife lifted her arms and offered herself to him, unutterably lovely, unspeakably radiant.

It were worse than a waste of time to attempt a portrait of her as she seemed to him. Seen through her husband's eyes, her beauty was incomparable, immaculate, too rare and fine, too delicate a thing to be bodied forth in words, dependent upon the perfection of no single feature. Not in her hair, fair as sunlight on the sea, not in her eyes of autumnal brown, not in the wonderful fineness of her skin or in the daintiness of her features, not in the graciousness of her body, did he find the beauty of her that surpassed expression, but in the love she bore him, in the sweetness of her inviolate soul, in the steadfastness of her impregnable heart.

But it's doubtful if ever he had analyzed his passion for her so minutely. Mostly, I think, at that moment of her abrupt disclosure to him, he longed unutterably for her lips and the proffered wreath round his neck of her slim, round, white arms.

Yet he would not. Trembling though he was, with every instinct and every fiber of his being straining toward her, with the hunger for her a keen pain in his heart, he held himself back; or his conception of honor held him back. That which he had voluntarily forfeited and put away from him for his honor's sake, he would not take back though it were offered freely to him.

"So," he said, after a bit, shakily, then pulled himself together, and controlling his voice—"So 'twas yourself, after all, Beatrice! Me heart told me no other woman could have sung that song as ye did."

The woman dropped her arms. "Your heart, Terence?" she asked a little bitterly.

"What else? Do ye doubt it?"

Relieves Backache Instantly

Sloan's Liniment is a great remedy for backache. It penetrates and relieves the pain instantly—no rubbing necessary—just lay it on lightly.

Here's Proof.

"I had my back hurt in the Boer War and in San Francisco two years ago I was hit by a street car in the same place. I tried all kinds of dope without success. Two weeks ago I saw your liniment in a drug store and got a bottle to try. The first application caused instant relief, and now, except for a little stiffness, I am almost well."

"Why won't you never married again, Aunt Sallie?" inquired Mrs. McClane of an old colored woman in West Virginia.

His Coming Out.

A fond Chicago mother is to give a coming-out party for her son. Of course, we have no means of knowing the youth but we fancy he must be exactly that kind of son—and we await with bated anxiety a full description of his coming-out costume.

What will he do with the gentle youth after this severe social ordeal isn't stated, but it can be believed that he is to be rushed around to all sorts of society functions—and, of course, carefully guarded against the matrimonial designs of fortune-hunting females.

Modern Journalism.

Arthur Brisbane, the editor, praised at a dinner in New York the educative value of moving pictures.

"But, of course," he said afterwards, "the moving picture will never equal the newspaper as an educative force."

"The newspaper not only reports news—in full seasons it makes news as well. A famous editor put this news-making feature very neatly before a cub reporter when he said:

"If a dog bites a man it isn't news. But, if a man bites a dog it is. Wherever you can't find a man biting a dog, go and bite one yourself!"

NO WORDS WASTED

A Swift Transformation Briefly Described.

About food, the following brief but emphatic letter from a Georgia woman goes straight to the point and is convincing.

"My frequent attacks of indigestion and palpitation of the heart culminated in a sudden and desperate illness, from which I arose enfeebled in mind and body. The doctor advised me to live on cereals, but none of them agreed with me until I tried Grape-Nuts food and Postum."

"The more I used of them the more I felt convinced that they were just what I needed, and in a short time they made a different woman of me. My stomach and heart troubles disappeared as if by magic, and my mind was restored and is as clear as it ever was."

"I gained flesh and strength so rapidly that my friends were astonished. Postum and Grape-Nuts have benefited me so greatly that I am glad to bear this testimony." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The "Reciprocity" Bobs Up

Colonel Roosevelt, as contributing editor of the Outlook, publisher, ex-president and under the spell of "Under no circumstances will I accept another nomination," must not be confused with the Colonel Roosevelt, who now announces his willingness to make the run. Speaking before the republican club of New York, on Feb. 12, 1911, at the Waldorf hotel, Colonel Roosevelt said: "I want to say how glad I am at the way in which the members of the club here tonight responded to the two appeals made to them to uphold the hands of President Taft, both in his effort to secure reciprocity with Canada, and in his effort to secure the fortification of the Panama Canal."

"And in addition to what has been said about reciprocity with Canada I would like to make this point: It should always be a cardinal point in our foreign policy to establish the closest and most friendly relation of equal respect and advantage with our great neighbor on the north. And I shall the reciprocity arrangement because it represents an effort to bring about a closer, a more intimate, a more friendly relationship of mutual advantage on equal terms between Canada and the United States."

This then makes it a big game for Sen. 9 and 9 and no one out on the reciprocity question.

The Second grade has three new pupils, Eva Hilbert, Ethel and Henry Elley.

Judith Green and Edward Johnson of grade six earned 100 in arithmetic last month.

Friday is Mothers' day in the Fifth grade at 2 p. m. All mothers are invited.

There were fifteen in grade Seven who did not miss any words in spelling last week.

Sickness has invaded the High school again in the form of measles and has made a little exodus.

The Misses Hazel Perkins and Irene Dixon of the class of 1911, were High school visitors Monday.

Harold Kelley has left his work in the High school for this year. Work needing him at home is the cause.

We are all sorry to lose Martie Bishop, one of our brightest little pupils, from our Fourth grade. He left for Sault Lake Tuesday.

On Friday of last week Marion Montgomery, one of our little Fourth graders, gave a treat to her schoolmates, it being her ninth birthday. After enjoying the feast of cake and candy, her schoolmates joined in wishing her ten times as many birthdays.

Arrangements have been made for a High school-base ball team and games have already been scheduled with Wayne and Milford while one with Eastern is assured. Harold Turner is captain elect of the new team, and plans are being made for suits and apparatus.

Do not forget Prof. Trueblood at the High school this (Friday) evening March 29. He will give a Shakespearean recital of "Ingomar" which is one of the most fascinating of Shakespeare's stories. This is the last one of the free extension lectures given by members of the University of Michigan staff, and will be well worth the time. Begin at 7:45.

Think This Over

This Offer Should Gain the Confidence of the Most Skeptical

We pay for all the medicine used during the trial, if our remedy fails to completely relieve you of constipation. We take all the risk. You are not obligated to us in any way whatever. If you accept our offer. That's a mighty broad statement, but we mean every word of it. Could anything be more fair for you?

A most scientific, common-sense treatment is Rexall Orderlies, which are eaten like candy. Their active principal is a recent scientific discovery that is odorless, colorless, and tasteless, very pronounced, gentle and pleasant in action, and particularly agreeable in every way. It is a food ingredient does not cause diarrhoea, nausea, flatulence, griping or other inconvenience. Rexall Orderlies are particularly good for children, aged and delicate persons.

If you suffer from chronic or habitual constipation, or the associate or dependent chronic ailments, we urge you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Remember, you can get them in Northville only at our store, 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Sold only at our store—The Record Store, A. E. Stanley, 47

EDWARD N. HINES.

FOR RE-ELECTION.

At the August primaries, Edward N. Hines of Detroit, will be a candidate to succeed himself as county road commissioner.

Mr. Hines is standing on his record during the four years he has been commissioner, and will make a dignified campaign. He is no politician, and will stoop to none of the ward heeler's methods, which might militate against him in some parts of the county, but will surely have weight with citizens who care for efficiency in public office. On the quality of the roads the commission has built, and the efficiency and economy of its office management, Mr. Hines is ready to make his stand. That is his attitude at present, and it is one that should be enough for any intelligent voter.

The Wolverine Automobile Club, which has never heretofore taken a stand for or against any candidate for nomination or election, has decided to advocate Mr. Hines' nomination and election and will send out a letter to every car owner in the county urging its reasons for this course. As a matter of fact, this is not "mixing in politics." The office is not a political one, Mr. Hines is not a politician, and none of the employees of the commission holds his place because of ability to deliver votes. Mr. Hines says himself that in this latter capacity he fears the staff would fall down woefully.

Wayne county has made great progress in road building during the past half decade, and the work should be kept up. Mr. Hines ranks the country over us an expert in this line. The experience he has gained during his incumbency is worth much to Wayne, and at the present time there is probably no man in Michigan who could take his place without lowering the efficiency of the commission. There should be no backward step.

Cyclic Well Answered.

A cynic once observed: "It does not matter whom you take as a bride, because you always find out next day that you have married some one else." To which every happy husband will confidently reply: "It is better to love the real woman you have married than to marry the ideal girl you have loved."

Live Telegraph Poles.

In Nevada the telegraph poles in damp, low-lying situations have taken root and flourished. They are of cottonwood, and planted with the bark upon them. In some parts of Java too, a native tree is used for the poles, and this also takes root, thereby resisting the attacks of the white ants or the inroads of natural decay.

Plenty of them in Northville, and Good Reason for it.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, after years of backache suffering, days of misery, nights of unrest, the distress of urinary troubles, when she finds freedom?

Many readers will profit by the following:
Mrs. W. H. Frederick, Wing St., Northville, Mich., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been of such great benefit to me that I feel justified in giving them my endorsement. I had considerable trouble from my kidneys for several years, and suffered constantly from dull, nagging backache, coupled with pains through my kidneys. I doctored and tried many remedies, but found no relief until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Murdock Bros. Drug Store. Since taking this remedy, my condition has improved in every way and backache has not bothered me."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBride Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Mayor Lansing says he heartily agrees with the ideas advocated by Aid. Schirner relative to the collection of the electric light and water rentals. He believes there should be two sets of books and that the treasurer should do the collecting.

This Mr. Lansing believes can be done, with practically no increase in expenses. Mr. Lansing's ideas are good and if followed out will undoubtedly prove beneficial to the village and will meet with general approval.

The High school basket ball boys went to Holly last Friday for a return game with that team. Holly sought revenge for its defeat on the Northville floor, but got it by only three points, the score being 24 to 23 in their favor.

By a strange coincidence this was also the score with which the Central High boys beat us Saturday evening in this town.

These games, close the basket ball season for Northville, the teams having made an unexpected record in our high school athletics which will not be soon forgotten.

F. B. Woodworth has purchased the Covert house on Dunlap street which has been occupied by C. A. Ponsford and family the past year, and will move there as soon as vacated.

F. B. Van Atta and wife expect to reside in the house now occupied by the Woodworths. Mr. Ponsford and family will move into the E. A. Nortonop house, corner of Dunlap and West streets, and Mr. Northrop will go to Lansing, where he will make his home on a farm with his sister.

Thursday evening of last week the Criterion 500 club gave a six o'clock dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Pepper, in honor of Mrs. Florence VanValkenburgh and Mrs. Zella Meserault for winning the most games during the series of meetings.

The club also surprised Mrs. E. A. Kohler by having her sister and husband present to enjoy the festivities of the evening. Mrs. Kohler was presented with a silver gravy spoon, and Mr. Kohler with a stick pin. The evening was a very enjoyable one.

Unwelcome Guest at Funeral.

A five foot long snake was the unwelcome guest at a funeral at Katzi, Victoria, Australia, a few days ago, and its appearance caused the wildest confusion and panic amongst the mourners. It was only after great difficulty that the reptile was killed. The funeral service proceeded without further interruption.

Why He Was Late.

"What made you so late?" "I met Smithson."

"Well, that is no reason why you should be an hour late getting home to supper."

"I know, but I asked him how he was feeling, and he insisted on telling me about his stomach trouble."

"Did you tell him to take Chamberlain's Tablets?"

"Sure, that is what he needs." Sold by all dealers.

SYNOPSIS.

The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Bladen. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Carringtons, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Carrington, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wagon, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER III. (Continued.)

The next day Yancy had occasion to visit Balaam's Cross Roads. Carrington gave him a disquieting opinion as to the probable contents of his letter, for he himself had heard from Bladen that he had decided to assume the care of the boy.

"I reckon Bladen will have the law on his side, Bob."

"The law be damned! I got what's far on mine I don't wish to better than that," exclaimed Yancy, over his shoulder. He strode from the store and started down the sandy road at a brisk run. Miserable forebodings of an impending tragedy leaped up within him, and the miles were many that lay between him and the Hill.

As he breasted the slope he came within sight of a little group in his own doorway. Saving only Uncle Sammy Bladen, the group consisted of the women and children of the Hill, but there was one small figure he missed. The patriarch hurried toward him, leaning on his cane.

"They're took your revvy, Bob?" he cried, in a high thin voice.

"Whos took him?" asked Yancy hoarsely.

"He were Dave Blount. Got your son, Bob, and go after him—kill the miserable meddling cuss!" cried Uncle Sammy. "He the Fayetteville Road, Bob, not ten miles ago—you can get him off at Ox Road forks."

Yancy breathed a sigh of relief. A rifle was placed in Yancy's hands.

"Thank you kindly," said Yancy, and turning away he strode off through the pine woods. A brisk walk of twenty minutes brought him to the Ox Road forks.

He had not long to wait for presently the buggy drove to a halt. As the buggy came nearer he recognized his ancient enemy in the person of the man who sat at Hannibal's side, and stepping into the road, seized the horses by their bits. At night of him Hannibal shook his name in delight.

Uncle Bob! he cried. He cried, yes, it was Uncle Bob. You can fight now, Bob."

"A Largo them horses," said Mr. Blount.

Light down, Nelly," said Yancy, and pleasantly.

Hannibal instantly alighted himself of the invitation. At the same moment Blount struck at Yancy with his whip, and his horses reared wildly, thinking the blow meant for them, seeing that the boy had reached the ground in safety, Yancy relaxed his hold on the team, which instantly plunged forward. Then as the buggy swept past him he made a grab at Blount and dragged him out over the wheels into the road, where he proceeded to fetch Mr. Blount a smack on the jaw. Then with a final skilful kick he sent Mr. Blount sprawling.

"Don't let me catch you around these doggings again, Dave Blount, or I swear to God I'll be the death of you!"

Hannibal rode home, through the pine woods in triumph on his Uncle Bob's mighty shoulders.

CHAPTER IV.

Law at Balaam's Cross Roads.

But Mr. Yancy was only at the beginning of his trouble. Three days later there appeared on the borders of Scratch Hill a gentleman armed with a rifle. It was Charley Balaam, old Squire Balaam's nephew.

"Can I see you friendly, Bob Yancy?" Balaam demanded with the lungs of a stealer, sheltering himself behind the thick coils of a sweet gum, or he observed that Yancy held his rifle in the crook of his arm.

"I reckon you can, Charley Balaam, if you're friendly," said Yancy.

"I'm a going to trust you, Bob," said Balaam. And forsaking the shelter of the sweet gum, he shuffled up the slope.

"How are you, Charley?" asked Yancy, as they shook hands.

"Only just tolerable, Bob. You've been warranted—Dave Blount swore hit on you?" He displayed a sheet of paper covered with much writing and decorated with a large seal.

"Read it," he said mildly. Balaam scratched his head.

"I don't know that hits my duty to do that Bob. Hits my duty to serve it on to you."

At this juncture Uncle Sammy's faint form emerged from the path that led on through the woods in the direction of the Delany cabin. With the porch was a stranger.

"Howd, Charley, here, Bob Yancy, you shake hands with Bruce Carrington."

ton," commanded Uncle Sammy. At the name both Yancy and Balaam manifested interest. They saw a man in the early twenties, clean-shaven and broad-shouldered, with a handsome face and shapely head. Yes, sir, hit's a grandson of Tom Carrington that used to own the grist-mill down at the Forks.

"Where you located at, Mr. Carrington?" asked Yancy. But Carrington was not given a chance to reply. Uncle Sammy saved him the trouble.

"Back in Kentucky. He takes raft down the river to New Orleans, then he comes back on ships to Baltimore, or else he hops it north overland. He wants to visit the Forks," he added.

"I'm shortly going that way myself, Mr. Carrington, and I'll be pleased of your company—but first I got to get through with Bob Yancy," said Balaam, and again he produced the warrant. "If agreeable to you, Bob, I'll ask Uncle Sammy to read this here warrant."

"Who's been a warrantin' Bob Yancy?" cried Uncle Sammy.

"Dave Blount has."

"I knowed hit—I knowed he'd try to get even. What's the charge agin you, Bob?"

"Read hit," said Balaam. "Why, who—can't you read plain writin'?" Uncle Sammy? for the patriarch was showing signs of embarrassment.

"If you gentlemen will let me—said Carrington pleasantly. After a moment's scrutiny of the paper that Balaam had thrust in his hand, Carrington began:

"Whereas, it is alleged that a murderous assault has been committed on one David Blount, of Fayetteville, by Robert Yancy, of Scratch Hill, said Blount, sustaining numerous bruises and contusions, to his great injury of body and mind, and whereas, it is further alleged that said murderous assault was wholly unprovoked and without cause, you will forthwith take into custody the person of said Yancy of Scratch Hill, charged with having inflicted the bruises and contusions herein set forth in the complaint of said Blount, and instantly bring him into our presence to answer to these and several crimes and misdemeanors, you are empowered to seize said Yancy wherever he may be at, whether on the hillside or in the valley, sitting or sleeping, or at rest."

OF LANCY BALAM, Magistrate, Fourth District, Court, of Cumberland, State of North Carolina. Done this twenty-fourth day of May, 1912.

"P—Dear Bob Dave Blount says he ain't able to chew his meat. I thought you'd be glad to know."

Smilingly Carrington folded the warrant and handed it to Yancy.

"Well, what are you going to do about it, Bob?" inquired Balaam.

"Maybe I'd ought to go. I'd like to oblige the squire," said Yancy.

"Suppose, I come to the Cross Roads this evening."

"That's agreeable," said the deputy, who presently departed in company with Carrington.

Some hours later the male population of Scratch Hill, with a gravity befitting the occasion, prepared itself to descend on the Cross Roads and give its support to Mr. Yancy in his hour of need. Even Uncle Sammy, who had not been off the Hill in years, announced that no consideration of fatigue would keep him away from the scene of action, and Yancy loaned him his mule and cart for the occasion. Yancy led the straggling procession with the boy trotting at his side, his little sunburned fist clasped in the man's great hand.

The squire's court held its infrequent sittings in the best room of the Balaam homestead, a double cabin of hewn logs. Here Scratch Hill was gratified with a view of Mr. Blount's battered visage.

"What's all this here fuss between you and Bob Yancy?" demanded the squire when he had administered the oath to Blount. Mr. Blount's statement was brief and very much to the point.

"He done give me the order from the judge of the court—I was to show it to Bob Yancy."

"Got that order?" demanded the squire sharply. With a smile, damaged, but clearly a smile, Blount produced the order. "Hm—appointed guardian of the boy—the squire was presently heard to mutmur. The crowded room was very still now, and more than one pair of eyes were turned pityingly in Yancy's direction. When the long arm of the law reached out from Fayetteville, where there was a real judge and a real sheriff, it clothed itself with terrors.

"Well, Mr. Blount, what did you do with this here order?" asked the squire.

"I showed Yancy the order—"

"You he, Dave Blount, you didn't?" said Yancy. "But I can't say as it would have made no difference."

squire. "He'd have taken his licking just the same and I'd have had my merry out of that buggy!"

"Didn't he say nothing about this here order from the court, Bob?"

"There wa'n't much conversation, squire. I invited my nerry to light down, and then I snaked Dave Blount out over the wheel."

"Who struck the first blow?"

"He did. He struck at me with his buggy whip."

Squire Balaam removed his spectacles and leaned back in his chair.

"It's the opinion of this here court that the whole question of assault rests on whether Bob Yancy saw the order. Bob Yancy swears he didn't see it, while Dave Blount swears he showed it to him. If Bob Yancy didn't know of the existence of the order he was clearly acting on the idea that Blount was stealing his nerry, and he done what any one would have done under the circumstances. If, on the other hand, he knew of this order from the court, he was not only guilty of assault, but he was guilty of resisting an officer of the court. The squire paused impressively. His audience drew a long breath.

"Can a body drop a word here?"

It was Uncle Sammy's thin voice that cut into the silence.

"Certainly," Uncle Sammy. "This here court will always admire to listen to you."

"Well, I'd like to say that I consider that Fayetteville got a mighty oficious with its cavers. This part of the county won't take nothin' off Fayetteville. We don't interfere with Fayetteville, and I'll let Fayetteville interfere with us."

There was a murmur of approval. Scratch Hill remembered the times in its hands and took comfort.

"The Fayetteville got air a higher cot than this, Uncle Sammy," explained the squire indignantly.

"I'm aware of that," snapped the patriarch. "I've seen his receipt."

Mr. Yancy, Uncle Sammy, asked the squire deferentially.

"I low I am. But I low that if this here case is going again Bob Yancy I'd recommend him to go home and not listen to no no fooleries."

Mr. Yancy will oblige this court by settling still while I finish this case, said the squire with dignity.

"Mr. Yancy has sworn to one thing, Mr. Blount to another. Now the Yancys air an old family in these parts, Mr. Blount's folks air strangers. Consequently, I'll give the squire, somewhat reluctantly, we won't have any time in which to form an opinion of."

He had not long to wait, for presently a Buggy Hove In Sight.

the Blounts; but for myself, I'm suspicious of folks that keep moyn' about and who don't seem able to get located permanent nowhere, who air here today and away tomorrow. But you can't say that of the Yancys. They air an old family in the country, and naturally this court feels obliged to accept a Yancy's word before the word of a stranger. And in view of the fact that the defendant did not seek litigation, but was perfectly satisfied to let matters rest where they was, it is right and just that all costs should fall on the plaintiff."

mustn't forget me!" And touching her horse lightly with the whip she rode away at a gallop.

"She sho'ly is a lady," said Yancy, staring after her. "And we musn't forget Memphis or Belle Plain, Nev."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Trouble.

"What was the matter concerning the collapse of the official thermometer?"

"I don't know," unless somebody took its temperature."

There is nothing else in the world of mechanics quite like the gigantic locks in the Panama canal, and the engineers are so proud of their work that they have prepared a perfect working model. This will be exhibited at the international navigation congress in Philadelphia, May 2, to 28, and later at the Panama Pacific exposition in San Francisco. The model is 6 feet 4 inches long and 2 feet 6 inches wide, and contains every detail of valves and tracks, electric locomotives, and even the decorative lamp along the coping.

Three Men Killed and Nine Wounded in Political Riot.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to assassinate Mayor Schriver, who is blamed for the political riot in Rock Island, Ill., in which three men were killed.

The would-be assassin fired a rifle bullet from the top of a high building, two squares away, into the window of Mayor Schriver's office. The bullet went wide of its mark.

The rioting continued practically unchecked for three hours. The police said there were more than 5,000 persons in the mob which surged through the downtown streets, pulling car trolleys from the wires, overturning wagons and in other ways seeking to block public thoroughfares resulting in the death of three men and the wounding of nine persons.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., departed from San Francisco for New York Friday to take up his duties with a brokerage firm with which he has been associated.

RIOT IN ROCK ISLAND

Three Men Killed and Nine Wounded in Political Riot.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to assassinate Mayor Schriver, who is blamed for the political riot in Rock Island, Ill., in which three men were killed.

The would-be assassin fired a rifle bullet from the top of a high building, two squares away, into the window of Mayor Schriver's office. The bullet went wide of its mark.

The situation is ominous. The political animosities that are at the bottom of the rioting have broken out afresh in the circulation of recall petitions directed against the mayor and Police Commissioner Hart and the friends of the men and those opposed to them engaged in heated controversies throughout the day. A report sent to the governor says threats of further rioting had been made.

The rioting continued practically unchecked for three hours. The police said there were more than 5,000 persons in the mob which surged through the downtown streets, pulling car trolleys from the wires, overturning wagons and in other ways seeking to block public thoroughfares resulting in the death of three men and the wounding of nine persons.

Boy Had Noticed Things.

The dear little office boy had been detected in a lie. It was not one of the ordinary preparations of the everyday world, and, moreover, to make this crime more grievous, he had persisted in adhering to his original mendacious statement.

"Do you know, my lad," asked a grizzled clerk, in a kindly fashion, "what becomes of young lads who trifle with the truth?"

"Aye," was the assured reply; "the boss often sends them out as travelers when they grow up."

Chilly.

A certain member of a Boston club habitually evinces such a frigid demeanor that many of his acquaintances have facetiously averred that "it gives one a cold to shake hands with him."

One evening a group at the club were discussing the disposition of the said member, when a newcomer ventured this:

"Why, gentlemen, I understand that it is the custom in this club when that chap attends a dinner here to ice the claret in order that it may be at the same temperature as the dining room."—Harper's Magazine

AN EASTER MYSTERY

My Happiest Easter

By H. B. Sonneborn

Distinguished for sweet simplicity it drew me nearer to the large and kindly side of human life.

It was a happy thought, to ask me to relate the story of the Easter story, which I passed at Justin's not so many years since. In my unskilled way I can trace the faces, note some of the central utterances, and bring the effect which came to me at the low red cottage near the hill, in April in May, 'till I made me joyful of heart, and with my soul with thine, and with my soul with thine, and with my soul with thine.

Building after a winter of worldly life, and each Easter we blossom forth anew with a desire for more spirituality, it is comforting that in thought, at least, I may turn to the scene which unfolded my aims and ambitions. It is because of this that I try to coax back to mind the incidents of genial good-fellowship which humanized the occasion of which I am about to speak.

Right after sunrise there assembled in the crowded combination room in the low frame dwelling, known for miles as Justin's, thirteen of us, eight children and five adults. It was a rare company. The old grandfather, slightly bent—a luxury of bushy hair turned white—lands thin and knotty, always outstretched in welcome, and Janie, the dearest little manx that ever reigned, at his side, coaching him if he should fail to discern the speaker, graciously acted as hosts, and made us all feel very much at home. The atmosphere was so peaceful there that one could not help but be drawn to the others present. Like an enchanted fairy's, Janie's golden locks shed a splendor, all about the room, but with this glimmer was outshone by the illuminated countenance of the grandfather which radiated the light from within.

Weeks ahead, Janie had confided to me her design to get all the really poor children to come up to her place for some Easter joy. To use her own phrase, "I want to give all the poor kids a lot of fun on Easter morn'." In this I consented to act as procurer to the extent of inducing one little cripple to promise for my sake—that was the way I put it—to accompany me to Justin's. This little child of a girl, Agnes, was weary of heart because of the thought that her own widowed mother, whose life's blood was going out fast, could not muster enough strength to attend, but she did not evince any sign of agitation for fear that it might cause a gloom to settle on the enthusiasm of the others. I have always believed that one of the happy moments in Agnes' life was when Janie embraced her in her arms, and literally smothered her in her small bosom with all the warmth that she could exude.

Hardly had the word been given that all was ready for the egg hunt, when I offered my arm to Grandpa, who, with his eyes always turned in my direction, from habit, nodded a gracious acceptance as he, suited action to the word and hitched his arm into mine. Off we strode. The whole company, divided off in twos, threes and fours, scampered over the ground, and I was the first to find the egg.

the nest's of colored eggs, chocolate bunnies and other goodies which had been secreted the day before by John Choppe, who alone did not join in the search. One moon-faced, round, chubby boy of a boy, falling to extract any information from John Choppe as to the whereabouts of some of the "plants," was wandering off by himself, sickeningly, when there suddenly was great rejoicing and shouting.

Far away—yonder by the sharp elbow in the stream where the enormous chestnut tree branches hang low—in that secluded spot, Janie carrying a little cot in her arms and leading cutters in my crippled friend, Agnes was seen holding high over her head what looked as a particularly rich find. It was a huge rooster in chocolate immediately from every part of the field came groups of children who wanted to examine the find at close range. There was great glee.

After all the eggs that had been hidden by John Choppe had been recovered, and there had been a generous distribution of the plunder, the company started to return to the cottage through the blossoming plum trees and peach trees, along an alley where the foliage by its sympathy of green adorned the group of merry Easter children. It was here that Grandpa Justin drew us all nearer to him. He stood up in the center, all done and asked us to surround him, and be seated on the soft turf. His voice was like a song in a softer key.

"I have long yearned for this opportunity to say a word to you, and this occasion is most favorable to thought and meditation." He was not preachy. He spoke in that gentle tone for which he was known all his life. "I want to converse with myself and with you," he continued, "and make it possible for us to live closer to the inner life. I want to be more conscious that I am worshipping right, that I am using the God-given grace for silencing suffering and sorrow, and strengthening the weak and the meek." His state of soul was of that delicate softness. To my great wonder I noted a tear course down the tanned and swarthy cheeks of John Choppe. The appeal seemed to penetrate into the inner consciousness of Miss Quix.

I can not give you a powerful analysis of this grandest and best of all Easter sermons to which I ever gave ear. I do know it was full of feeling. There was a kind word for every one of us. There was a wealth of hope, a richness of promise beckoning and calling to our natures of which we had an incomplete understanding. I found myself carried nearer the risen Christ. I saw the resurrection of the spirit, and the old deadened flesh in the tomb.

There was doubtless a similar picture floating before Miss Quix, who had sunk down on her knees, being secretly where she wanted to be so that she could give vent to the touching confession, "to embrace in essence the teachings of old-fashioned Christianity." A few minutes afterward, when the old man had finishing singing the beautiful refrain, "Earth Has No Sorrow That Heaven Cannot Heal," John Choppe came over to me and said: "I had missed something in my life. It was the large canvas of the ideal as we find it in Christ. From this hour I will worship it, because it will draw me from out of the sordid imperfection in this world."

As it is difficult to be happy and be away from divine justice, is it not best to creep up as close to the fountain head of the precious love of the Master and Savior of Man? It was this thought that I have carried with me since, that sermon of Grandpa Justin's on that memorable Easter morn'.

Once More the Eastertide.

Once more to life and love
The buds and leaves of Spring
Come forth and bear above
The birds and bees and bees.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age.
How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va. "I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the change of life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

"Now I can do as much work as any woman of my age in the county, thanks to the benefit I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I recommend your remedies to all suffering women."—Mrs. MARTHA L. HOLLOWAY, Odd, Va.

"No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and qualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills."

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. Purely vegetable—act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner—digest—improve the complexion, brighten the eyes. SMALL, FULL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE. Genuine must bear Signature.

W. & W. WALKER, PITTSBURGH, PA.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. A French TheraPion.

No End to His Bad Luck. John D. Shoop, of an Anti-Catholic League, explained his feelings in the story of the colored man. "How are you getting along, Lazarus?" asked the master, interestedly. "I get along poorly," replied Lazarus, who complained of his misfortune at length. "Master John I have such bad luck," says he, "that when I die and am laid away in the tomb and the good Lord says to me, 'Lazarus, come forth,' I pray I am shot to come forth."

W. & W. WALKER, PITTSBURGH, PA. The hurt of a burn or a cut stops with Carter's Carbolic Acid. It heals quickly and prevents scars. Use and see by druggists. For free sample write to W. & W. Walker, Pittsburg, Pa.

He Shut the Shutter. "Willie, didn't I tell you to shut that shutter?" said Mrs. Boggs. "The shutter's shut," replied Willie, "and I can't shut it any shutter."

Stop the Pain. The hurt of a burn or a cut stops with Carter's Carbolic Acid. It heals quickly and prevents scars. Use and see by druggists. For free sample write to W. & W. Walker, Pittsburg, Pa.

Regret for the mistakes of our youth doesn't always prevent us from making them in our old age.

24-PAGE MERCHANDISE BOOK NO. 106. Free showing over three thousand articles of clothing, furniture, etc., given free with orders for choice of over five hundred daily household necessities. W. & W. Walker, Pittsburg, Pa.

Memories. "My lad, I was a newsboy once." "Aw, what cha tryin' to do—gum me downhearted?"

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY. Take LAXATIVE BROMO Quinine Tablets. Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature is on each box.

A man is apt to get so rattled when a leap year girl proposes to him that she can make him believe he did it.

Constipation can be cured without drugs. Nature's own remedy is Garfield Tea.

It's difficult to discourage a girl who can't sing.

Pleasing Irregularities. There are wild irregularities that are pleasing. In the north station a boy tripped while running toward his father and mother who were on the back platform of the car just starting.

The Mother—Little Johnny fell down.
The Father—Leave him lay.
This was wholly admirable.

HANDS BURNED LIKE FIRE

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have cured me of four long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. If I would have them in water for a long time, they would burn like fire and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all the salves I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching."

"So after hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased one complete set, and after using them three days my hands were much better. Today my hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Ella Barber, R. F. D. 2, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Happiness Postponed. An awkward predicament in which a sailor bridegroom and his bride were placed in St. Mary's church, Exeter, Devonshire, England, recently, caused the postponement of their wedding. The banns had been duly called at the church, but when the parties presented themselves at the altar the bridegroom, who had been recently paid off from his ship at Portsmouth, was unable to produce the necessary permission from his commander. The bride, swooned, and eventually returned home, while the bridegroom, left for Plymouth to get the required document.

Costly Necessities. A woman who says alimony says her face powder costs her $100 a year. We shudder to think what she must spend for tooth paste.

Or hairbrush.
There is one thing certain. The husband with a wife like that should deal directly with the factories and cut out the middleman.

Spendsrift. "Lazzy Young! Do you think the money you're hoarding made down in New York will last long?" "I don't know. You bet it won't! He's going to get a new car. I was down in the General Store last night, and young Lazzy was spending $100 on clothes and lighting his cigars with them—Puck."

Important to Mothers. Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years. Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria.

All of That. "Who is Nat Goodwin?" "He's the center on the All America marriage team."

The way to get a reputation for goodness is to be good.

A remedy that has stood the test of time is worth trying. Garfield Tea relieves liver, kidney and stomach troubles.

A man is known by the company he keeps, and by the conversation he hands out.

Mrs. Winslow's Sooling Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, etc. a bottle.

If a man is honest he doesn't have to use a megaphone to advertise the fact.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

HIS UNKNOWN GOOD POINTS

Widow Found it Hard to Reconcile Eulogy With Her Knowledge of Dead Husband.

An old Irishman who had made a good deal of money, but who wasn't very particular about his habits or conduct, lived in Chicago. His custom was to go downtown about once a month on a spree, and then come back home and beat up his family and break the furniture. His aged wife, who had stood him for many years, was blind.

Finally he died, and his children gave him a fine funeral. They had plenty of money now that the old man was dead, and so they spread themselves. At the church there was elaborate ceremony. The blind widow was dissolved in woe. She cried and cried all through the services, paying scant heed to what was going on until the eulogy was pronounced. She listened. The priest referred to the dead man in glowing terms. After about ten minutes of this, the aged widow nudged her son and whispered: "Daddy, do they be havin' two funerals here today?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Possibly Willing to Assist at It. At a little party John T. McCutcheon consented to do a little impromptu chalk talking, with the presidential possibilities for his subject. McCutcheon had made several hits. One of the party, chuckling, leaned over to another, a Democrat. "Pretty good, isn't it?" he asked. "What do you think of his execution?" "I think it would be a damned good thing," replied the Democrat.

Ought to Be All Right. Mr. Bacon—Something wrong with this hash this morning, dear. Mrs. Bacon—Why? "I don't know. It needs something." "I can't think what it can be. I put in everything I could find."

Instead of liquid antiseptics, tablets and peroxide, for toilet and medicinal uses, many people prefer Paxline, which is cheaper and better. At drug stores, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Appeal. Stella—What is the matter? Cholly—I wish you'd tell your father he's got a quit kickin' me around. New York Sun.

For constipation, use a natural remedy. Garfield Tea is composed of carefully selected herbs only. At all drug stores.

It doesn't require much inventive genius for a man to make a fool of himself.
