REMODELING OF YERKES' MILL

WEEKS OF WORK TEARING OUT AND REBUILDING

Big Lot of Costly Machinery Has Been Added.

For weeks and weeks the big Yerkes Flouring Mill has been under the supervision of an expert millwright who, with a force of assistants, has nearly completed a thorough overhauling of the interior of that bread product factory.

The repairs and additional machinery will cost upwards of $4,000 and Proprietor D. F. Yerkes, says he expects to have everything in apple-pie-crust order in another week.

Three new rolls, the latest product of the Ypsilanti Machinery works, have been added, as well two new Maragon square bolters or sifters. In addition to this, one of the latest makes revolving dusters takes the place of one not quite so near up-to-date. Then there is the new attachment for the crusher and for the packer, besides all sorts of new conveyor boxes and flour chutes.

These improvements will bring the Yerkes mill to as near perfection as it is possible to make them in this day and age and it will enable the company to turn out more and better flour than ever before and with much less work. The mill capacity when it is finished will be about one hundred barrels per day and "the quality of every product from bran and feed to the snow white diamond crystal breadmakers delight will not be exceeded by any other flour mill in Michigan," says Mr. Yerkes.

GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP

No Medicine So Beneficial to Brain and Nerves.

Lying awake nights makes it hard to keep awake and do things in day time. To take "tonics and stimulants" under such circumstances is like setting the house on fire to see if you can put it out.

The right kind of food promotes refreshing sleep at night and a wide awake individual during the day.

A lady changed from her old way of eating Grape-Nuts, and says: "For about three years I had been a great sufferer from indigestion. After trying several kinds of medicine, the doctor would ask me to drop off potatoes, then meat, and so on, but in a few days that craving, gnawing feeling would start up, and I would vomit everything I ate and drank."

"When I started on Grape-Nuts, vomiting stopped, and the cloated feeling which was so distressing disappeared entirely."

"My mother was very much bothered with diarrhoea before commencing the Grape-Nuts, because her stomach was so weak she could not digest her food. Since using Grape-Nuts food she is well, and says she don't think she could do without it."

"It is a great brain restorer and nerve builder, for I can sleep as sound and undisturbed after a supper of Grape-Nuts as in the old days when I could not realize what they meant by a 'bad stomach.' There is no medicine so beneficial to nerves and brain as a good night's sleep, such as you can enjoy after eating Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens at Monte Carlo with Des Trebes, a military man, and a gambler, in his hotel. Learning on the balcony he sees a beautiful girl who suddenly enters the elevator and passes from sight. At the gaming table O'Rourke notices two men watching him. One is the Hon. Berrie Glynn, while his companion is Vincent Des Trebes, a detective. The detective tells him the French government has directed him to O'Rourke as a man who would undertake a secret mission. At his apartment O'Rourke, who has agreed to undertake the mission, finds a mysterious letter. The package arrives, hands a sealed package to O'Rourke, who is not to open it until on the coast. A pair of dainty slippers are seen protruding from under a doorway curtain. The Irishman finds the owner of the mysterious feet to be his wife, Berrie, from whom he had run away a year previous. They are reconciled, and opening the letter he finds that a European law firm offers him 100,000 pounds for a jewel known as the Pool of Flame and left to him by a dying friend, but now in keeping of one named O'Rourke, a general away. Des Trebes makes the nobleman in a duel. The wife bids O'Rourke farewell and he promises to soon return with the reward. He discovers both O'Rourke and the victor on board the ship. As he finds O'Rourke there is an attack by bandits and his friend dies telling O'Rourke that he has left the Pool of Flame in the hands of a general, who at sight of a signal ring given the colonel will deliver over the jewel. Arriving at Algeria the Irishman finds the general, a general away. Des Trebes makes a mysterious appointment, and tells O'Rourke that he has gained possession of the jewel by stealing it. In a duel O'Rourke masters the victor, securing possession of the Pool of Flame and starts by ship for Rangoon. He finds the captain to be a smuggler who tries to steal the jewel. It is finally secured by the captain and O'Rourke escapes to land. With the aid of one Danny and his wife, O'Rourke secures the Pool of Flame. On board ship once more, bound for Rangoon, a mysterious lady appears. O'Rourke comes upon a lazar house to attack the lady, who is a Mrs. Prynn, and kills the man into the hold. Mrs. Prynn claims she is en route for India on a mission for Sir King. O'Rourke is told by the doctor, who secures the Pool of Flame, the captain is shot and the lazar jumps into the sea. The ship arrives in port. Danny hands O'Rourke the Pool of Flame which he has stolen from Mrs. Prynn. It is the real jewel, the one lost at sea being a counterfeit. O'Rourke goes to a club and meets Des Trebes disguised. He now knows that Mrs. Prynn was an accomplice. Finally he goes to the lawyer who has offered the reward, delivers the jewel and gets the money. Going to the residence of the lawyer, O'Rourke finds him murdered and Des Trebes is found dying.

With each development the mystery was assuming more fantastic proportions, becoming still more impetuous and unresolvable. But he had no leisure in which to ponder it now. If Des Trebes was to be restored, and O'Rourke worked over the man as tenderly as though they had been life long friends with skilful fingers estimating the nature and extent of his wounds, with sound knowledge of rough and ready surgery doing all that could be done to bring him back to consciousness.

At last Des Trebes sighed feebly, a spot of color, feeble, flicker, evanescent, dyed his cheeks; his breath rattled harshly in his gullet; his eyelids twitched and opened wide. He gazed blankly at the face above.

"Des Trebes!" cried O'Rourke. "Des Trebes!"

His voice quickened the intelligence of that moribund brain. A flash of recognition lighted the staring eyes. The lips moved without sound.

"Des Trebes!"

"Ah, yes," the Irishman.

The whisper was barely articulate. O'Rourke put to his lips a cup of brandy diluted with a little water. "Drink," he pleaded, "and try to tell me what's happened to ye. Who gave ye these wounds? Try to speak."

"But, no, I shall not tell."

"But—good God, man! ye've been murdered!"

The white lips moved again; the adventurer bent his ear low to them.

"We have both—lost—but you—your wife."

"My wife!"

In a frenzy O'Rourke resumed his efforts to strengthen the dying man with spirits and water, but Des Trebes, with a final effort, obstinately shut his teeth, moving his head imperceptibly from side to side in token of his stubborn refusal.

So he died, implacable. In death the chiselled features remained set in a smile sardonic and triumphant. Dying, he gave no comfort to his foe.

For a little time longer O'Rourke knelt at Des Trebes' side, watching and wondering. Eventually he sighed heavily, shook his head, shrugged his shoulders and rose. And, rising, he perceived for the first time that he was no longer alone with the dead in that place.

Knelling in silence by the vicomte's side he had till then been hidden from the inner doorway to the room by the drapery of the center table. And evidently it was this circumstance which had emboldened a man to slip in from the main hall and approach Sypher's dead at the back of the room.

As O'Rourke appeared he was conscious of something moving in the room—a movement caught vaguely from the corner of his eyes. Then he heard a stifled cry of fright. He had already his revolver in his hand, so instant had been the obedience of his brain and body to the admonition of instinct.

He swung about, with the weapon poised, crying: "Stop!" The other man was apparently trying to escape by the door to the hall, but was much too far from it to escape the threatened bullet. A jet of fire spouted from his hand, O'Rourke heard a crash, and clatter of broken window-glass behind him. Without delay or conscious aim he fired and saw, still indistinctly through pungent wreaths of smoke, the figure reel and collapse upon itself.

The man had hardly fallen ere O'Rourke stood over him, with a foot firm upon one arm, while he bent and wrestled a revolver from relaxing fingers. Then, stepping back, he took stock of the murderous-minded intruder, and saw at his feet, writhing, coughing and spitting, a Chinese coolie—a type of the lowest class, his face a set yellow, mask, stolid, unemotional, brutalized. Even then it betrayed little feeling; only the slant-set black eyes burned with unquenchable hatred as they glared up at the conqueror.

O'Rourke's bullet had penetrated the man's chest, and as he squirmed and groaned through his sharpened teeth of a rat, a crimson stain spread on the bosom of his coarse white blouse.

Wholly confounded, O'Rourke shook an amazed head. A third element had been added to the mystery with no effect other than to render it more opaque and dense than before.

The telephone, its raucous voice now long since stilled, came into his mind, and he was minded to leave the room and find it to summon aid.

Before he could move, however, a footfall on the veranda startled him, and his ears were ringing with a command couched in terse, curt English: "Hands up!"

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"Faith!" cried O'Rourke with genuine relief, "you're more welcome than a snowfall in Hades. Good evening to ye, and many of them!"

"Hands up!"

"With all the pleasure in the world," O'Rourke elevated his hands. "I've two revolvers on me person," he volunteered amiably, "before ye go any further ye'll be wanting to take 'em away from me, I'm not doubting."

"From what I see, I quite believe I shall," agreed the Englishman, without relaxing his unprejudiced attitude. "At all events, keep your hands where they are, for the time being. What the deuce does this mean?"

"Tell me yourself and I'll make ye a handsome present," returned the O'Rourke compositely. "I've been adding me wits over it for the last thirty minutes, but neither rhyme nor reason can I read into it. But, see now: would ye mind telling me about the arsenal I've been relieving ye about, that I may rest me arms without fear of being punctured?"

The other laughed shortly and entered the room—a clean-limbed, sturdy, well-set-up boy of four or five-and-twenty, or thereabouts. He possessed, aside from an emphatic and capable manner, good looks enhanced by a wide good-humored mouth.

"You might help me out a bit, you know," said the boy briskly. "You've been so free with your information that I don't doubt you will place me still further under obligation to you by turning your back and depositing your weapons on that table. Of course, I needn't bore you by remarks upon the folly of false moves."

"'Twould be quite superfluous," replied O'Rourke, obeying with a fair and easy grace. "There now—What else may be your pleasure?"

"Move back three paces and stand still."

"Right-O, me lord." O'Rourke executed the prescribed evolution and, at rest, heard footsteps behind him; a thought later he felt the Englishman's hands rapidly going through his pockets. Then, with a "very good," the latter stepped between the table and O'Rourke and faced him.

"You've apparently told the truth thus far," he said. "Now what do you know about this? He waved a hand round the room. "Be careful what you say, I may as well inform you

I'm, Couch, Lieutenant sub-chief of police for this district."

"Saint Patrick would be no more welcome," declared O'Rourke. "I was on the point of trying to get ye by telephone when ye saved me the trouble. How the devil did ye happen to drop in so opportunely?"

"I was coming upstream in the police launch, on the night tour of inspection, and stopped at the landing just below this—the grounds here run down to the river, you know—to telephone back to headquarters on business. The exchange operator suggested I look in here and see if everything was all right—said he'd been unable to get any response since nightfall."

Now? Carefully and concisely O'Rourke wove the events of the day into a straight narrative, starting with the delivery to Sypher of the Pool of Flame, touching briefly upon Des Trebes' part—so far as he understood it—and concluding with the death of the coolie.

The sub-chief of police eyed him throughout with gravely concentrated interest, nodding his understanding.

"I see," he said slowly. "You make it clear enough. Moreover, you've convinced me. I didn't really believe from the first you'd had any hand in this ghastly mess, but I couldn't take chances, of course. You're at liberty to take up these pistols as soon as you please; in fact, I advise you to do so immediately. From what's taken place already, you may have need of 'em within the next ten seconds."

Now for this coolie. If he's able to speak, I'll get some information out of him.

"'Tis too far gone he is, I'm fearing."

"We'll soon find out." The Englishman bent over the man, who was now very quiet, but by the constant flicker of his cunning eyes, still conscious of a hasty examination told the investigator all he needed to know about the nature of the wound. "He'll not last long," said Lieutenant Couch, and began to converse with the local vernacular of Pléin-English, about one word in leg of which was intelligible

"Stubborn brute," growled Couch. "Most of these animals here belong to some devilish tong or other, and they'd rather die than say anything touching on the business of the society or affecting the interests of a brother-member. But I think I know a way to bring him to reason. Hand me that knife, please."

Wondering, O'Rourke tendered him the weapon that had brought death to Sypher. The lieutenant wiped it carefully on a corner of the coolie's blouse and held the keen shining blade before his eyes, accompanying the action with a few emphatic phrases. A curious expression, compounded of sullen fury and abject fright, showed in the Chinaman's eyes, and his lips were as if by magic unsealed. "However reluctant," he began to chatter and spoke at length, delivering himself of a long statement which Couch punctured now and again, with pertinent, leading questions.

At length, throwing aside the knife, he jumped up, strong excitement burning in his eyes. "I've got enough from him," he said rapidly. "I'll explain later. You'll help of course; your wife's involved as well as Miss Prynn. But I don't think you need fear; we'll be in time. Are you ready?"

Half a minute; I've got to use that telephone."

He ran out into the hall, rang up and shunted a number into the receiver and for a few moments spoke rapidly in a Burmese dialect.

O'Rourke gathered that he was speaking with a native subordinate at the police headquarters in Rangoon.

Couch swung back into the study. "Got those revolvers, sir? Then come along, we'll have to run for it. Fortunately our launch is handy, otherwise—"

He sprang across the veranda and down to the lawn, O'Rourke following after him.

A night of velvet blackness, softly opaque lay upon land and water. The police launch, shuddering with the vito O'Rourke. As he continued to speak the coolie's scowl darkened and he interrupted with a negative motion of his head. The sub-chief repeated his remarks with emphasis. For reply he got a monosyllable that sounded, as much as anything else, like an oath. Couch looked up. "He says he wants water, and I suspect he won't speak until he gets it. Can you—"

O'Rourke fetched the half-empty carafe and Couch put it to the coolie's lips, permitting him to drink as much as he liked. But as soon as the bottle was removed, the fellow shut his mouth like a trap and refused a word in answer to the lieutenant's demands and persuasions.

was accomplishing the feat without a discernable trace of fear or tremor of uncertainty.

O'Rourke sat beside him. In the stern, a police orderly acted as mechanic, attending to the motor. These three, no more, made up the rescue party.

Though devoured by impatience and anxiety, O'Rourke forbore to question Couch, hesitating to divert his attention from his task and knowing that as soon as he could the young lieutenant would speak. From the time when the coolie had yielded, there had been not a second's rest for either; neither had had time to confer save on questions of the most immediate moment; and control of these Couch had voluntarily and naturally assumed, deciding, acting and directing in the same thought, apparently.

"Your wife, with Miss Prynn," said Couch abruptly, without looking round—"at least I presume it's Miss O'Rourke, from what you say—have been kidnapped by a gang of highlanders and are now aboard a junk in the lower river, which will sail for God-knows-where at the turn of the tide. That's the only thing that saves 'em. We'll be on 'em before they're able to force a way down the river."

O'Rourke groaned, holding his head with both hands. "My wife . . .!" he said brokenly.

"I know," Couch interrupted grimly. "I know how you feel. Miss Prynn is there, too, you see."

"Oh," said O'Rourke. "I didn't understand that. I'm sorry." He dropped a hand on the younger man's shoulder and let it rest there briefly. "Please God," he said reverently, "there'll be many another polluted yellow soul hammering at the gates of hell this night!"

"Amen!" said Couch. "We shan't be long now."

Silently O'Rourke removed his coat and waistcoat, his collar and lawn tie, and turned back his cuffs. "Evening clothes are hardly the thing to fight in," he said, "but I'm thinking 'mon' make a deal of difference to me. (Not any cartridges for a Wadley mark IV.)"

"Wheeler" had given Colonel O'Rourke a few "Wheeler," said Couch, addressing the orderly.

The latter rummaged in a locker and pressed into O'Rourke's hand half a dozen cartridges, with which the adventurer proceeded to replenish the empty chamber in his revolver.

"I'd only discharged one," he explained, "but this likely we'll need that even, with only the three of us against a junk load."

"Oh, I telephoned for reinforcements, of course," returned Couch. "They ought to be there ahead of us."

"What did the coolie tell ye if ye've time to talk?"

Couch laughed. "I daresay you're wondering how I made him speak at all."

"That's the true word for ye."

"I threatened to cut off his silly pigtail and send him naked and dishonored to the ghostly halls of his ancestors. It's wonderful how much those callous brutes dote on that decoration. I told him further, that if he hed, when I found it out I'd return and shave him bald as an egg, even if he were dead by that time. So I persuaded the truth from him, the whole story—from his side of it."

"I'm listening."

Mr. J. B. Duke's Plea.

In spite of the distractions of the Tobacco company's reorganization, Mr. James B. Duke bestows much attention upon the work of developing and beautifying his three thousand acre estate, Duke's Park, near Somerville, N. J. Not infrequently on his tours of inspection he personally directs the laborers. One day he took the plough from the hands of a slow, awkward foreigner, saying:

"Here, let me show you how to plough a furrow. I've not forgotten how I did that when I was a boy in South Carolina."

Another day he took the place of the boss of a gang of workmen and before he got through he dismissed five for inefficiency.

Laos Object to Profanity.

The woman golfers of New York have made objections to swearing on the links and have discussed the matter in their clubs. The men who play over the links are all supposed to be gentlemen, but sometimes they are not careful of their language, and ladies have been made very indignant by some speeches. It has been suggested that notices be placed in the clubhouse, but the fact that the ladies have discussed the subject, will, no doubt, be all that is necessary.

Saloons Open Sunday.

In asserting that some country saloons were open last Sunday, the Detroit Free Press puts up this screed:

"Leaving out everything else, Detroit has a right to demand that its people be protected from the conscienceless and demoralizing influence of the country people. Why not fence in the country so that Detroit innocents cannot get out of the city on Sunday? Call on the governor to surround the city with the state militia and then if a single pure and unadulterated Detroit citizen breaks forth into the 'demoralizing' suburbs all out the United States troops, and if need be the entire navy to protect those spotless Detroiters who ever thought they were in a safe place in the city, should be protected from the 'conscienceless' country neighbors on Sunday and after what the rest of the world really really over the 'demoralizing' part of it or over the fact that some money is pocketed by the saloonkeepers in the suburbs that should be fought to get the cash to be used in Detroit saloon repairs."

Ye gods! To think of it! By all means, protect the innocent and spotless Detroiters from the "conscienceless" and demoralizing influence of the country people. Why not fence in the country so that Detroit innocents cannot get out of the city on Sunday? Call on the governor to surround the city with the state militia and then if a single pure and unadulterated Detroit citizen breaks forth into the "demoralizing" suburbs all out the United States troops, and if need be the entire navy to protect those spotless Detroiters who ever thought they were in a safe place in the city, should be protected from the "conscienceless" country neighbors on Sunday and after what the rest of the world really really over the "demoralizing" part of it or over the fact that some money is pocketed by the saloonkeepers in the suburbs that should be fought to get the cash to be used in Detroit saloon repairs."

What Is Wrong?

What is wrong with this country anyhow? What is this unsatisfied progressive longing that keeps some people "wondering" about wages too low? Is the price of farm products too high? Are the laboring men out of work? Are the factories shut down? Well then, what is the trouble? The fact is the country is in a too prosperous and progressive condition. Things are too good. The dinner pails are too full. There is too great a demand for labor money. After a while there will come a dull thud and we will wake up with hard times and a panic staring us in the face and then we will sigh for the good old times before the fanatic self-named and so called progressives got in their work of fooling the people.

What Is A "Progressive?"

The answer to the question of what is a political "progressive" depends where one is sitting when the question is up for answer. For instance:
The farmer—makes the price of labor go down and the price of farm products go up.
The laborer—makes the price go higher and the price of milk, butter, flour, grain and vegetables go down.
The manufacturer—makes the price of labor go down and the price of manufactured goods go up.
The newspaper—makes the price of paper go down and the price of advertising and subscriptions go up.
Jobholders and jobgetters—makes the job I have more secure or else I get the other fellows job.
In other words it all depends on whose ox is being gored.
By all means shut up all saloons on Sunday but don't make us laugh about the city of Detroit having the lid on so tight that people are rushing to the country on Sunday to prevent dying of thirst.

Why Not Talk Straight Wilson.

If republican county and state office holders are going to bolt Taft and vote for Wilson, then of course the Taft republicans will be justified in voting for Wilson county and state candidates. Hurrah for the Wilson candidate for sheriff! Hurrah for the Wilson candidate for treasurer, for county clerk, for registrar of deeds, for auditor, for coroner, for circuit court commissioner, for probate judge, for congressman, for U. S. senator and governor to pathmaster. If we are to have Wilson, why not go the whole length. If the Wilson high ball is good for the republicans who don't like Taft, then they ought to vote the Wilson ticket right down the line. The Wilson candidates for all the state and county officers will more than likely be splendid men, and in keeping with the head of the ticket, Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey. Why not take straight Wilson? That's all.

Sheehan Opera Company Presenting
"The Chimes of Normandy."

This week the Sheehan Opera Company have selected what is without question the most popular of all operas, namely, "The Chimes of Normandy."

In the production to be given this week, Mr. Sheehan himself will be heard as Henri, Marquis of Cornville, a part usually sung by a high baritone but which, with his tremendous range, lies easily within Mr. Sheehan's ability. It is a much stronger role than Grenicheux and one which shows Mr. Sheehan to much better advantage. The role of Grenicheux will be taken by Mr. Thomas S. Perry—As Gaspard, the miser, Mr. Boyle will have the greatest role in which he has been heard in this city since his opening performance of Mephisto; in fact, it is said that the promise that "The Chimes of Normandy" was to be presented later in the season and that he was to have "this great role" was a prime factor in inducing Mr. Boyle to remain after his opening week as he was only engaged for the one week originally. Germaine will be sung by Miss Gladys Caldwell and Serpolette by Miss Anna Stetler. Mr. McElhern will be seen in a character typically suited to his style of comedy, namely, the Bailiff, with Mr. Jorgensen as the Notary Detroit opera house.

If you are a housewife you cannot reasonably hope to be healthy or beautiful by washing dishes, sweeping and doing housework all day, and crawling into bed dead tired at night. Save Your Money

You may need it to buy coal with. If you should borrow $400 at 6 per cent interest, and pay the interest and $100 on the principal each year, the total cost of the loan would be $460, or an average weekly cost of $2.21.

Naturally this would be considered a very cheap, easy way to borrow, but perhaps you do not know that this amount (the $2.21) if paid each week to the association, would at the end of four years amount to enough to pay off the loan and also go quite a long way towards paying for a load of coal.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicines to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

HILLES CHOSEN AS G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

J. B. REYNOLDS CHOSEN SECRETARY; HEADQUARTERS BOTH EAST AND WEST PLANNED.

HILLES SELECTION DUE TO PROGRESSIVES' WISHES.

Headquarters of the National Committee Are to Be Opened in New York City the First of Next Week.

Charles D. Hilles, President, Taft's secretary, was chosen chairman of the Republican National Committee. James B. Reynolds, of Massachusetts, a member of the tariff board, was chosen secretary. These selections were made in Washington by the nine members of the national committee, acting as a subcommittee, after conferences with President Taft.

Chairman Hilles and the full national committee will meet on Friday, July 19, at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York, to appoint a treasurer, other officers, an executive committee and an advisory committee. Mr. Hilles will resign as secretary of the president, if he thought unlikely that Mr. Taft will appoint a successor. Headquarters of the national committee are to be opened in New York the first of next week. The opening of a middle western headquarters at Chicago and a Pacific coast headquarters at Portland, Ore., was practically decided on.

Ralph E. Williams, former Republican national committeeman for Oregon, was practically selected to take charge of the far western offices.

U. S. Begins Year With $3,640,407,621. The American government and people began the new fiscal year with $3,640,407,621, of which all but $365,621,008 is in circulation and the balance held in the treasury vaults as the assets of the federal government. This vast volume of real money breaks all records so far as the treasury statements show, for the winding up of a fiscal year, and it beats a year ago by $4,500,000.

The treasury officials, estimating that the population has grown to $5,656,000 up to last Monday, say that a pro rata distribution of this money would give each person $31.26, or six cents more than a year ago.

The total stock of gold in the United States is $1,813,498,140. Of this amount $697,541,191 is in circulation, an increase of $17,500,000 during the year. The country has $742,161,173 in silver.

New Design for Five Cent Coin.

The design of the five-cent piece which has been pending in the pockets of American citizens for many years does not coincide with the treasury department's conception of art and it will be changed in its entirety. Secretary MacVeagh has decided to replace the goddess of liberty on the face of the nickel with a buffalo. The reverse side of the new coin will contain the head of an Indian. J. W. Fraser, of New York, is making the design.

Big Liner Strikes Warship.

The big passenger laden Fall River liner Commonwealth, Capt. B. W. Appleby, soon after leaving Newport, R. I., for Fall River today, rammed the big U. S. battleship New Hampshire, Capt. James H. Oliver, in Narragansett bay, inflicting damage to both that will necessitate their going to drydock. Luckily there were no casualties.

Mexican Rebels Reduced to 3,500.

Only 3,500 men are estimated as comprising the remnant of the Mexican rebel army. Desertions because of lack of food and money, and federal triumphs have greatly reduced the insurrecto columns within the last week.

Lansing's city council adopted the assessed valuation as determined by the state tax commission, which raised the valuation of $18,500,000 as determined by the local assessor, to $17,500,000 or more than double what it was last year. This does not mean an increase in city taxes, but rather will help out the resident taxpayers as the corporations have been bogged down more than double what they were formerly taxed at.

ARCHBALD INDICTED

13 Articles of Impeachment Filed With House of Representatives.

Chairman Henry D. Clayton of the committee on judiciary of the house of representatives presented the 13 articles of impeachment against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the U. S. court of commerce. Mr. Clayton's report was unanimous from his committee. Republicans as well as Democrats voting for bringing the judge to trial.

It constitutes the ninth impeachment of a judicial or civil official of the U. S. since the foundation of the government, and is the first since the impeachment of Judge Charles Swayne of the northern district of Florida, who was acquitted on Feb. 27, 1905.

The conduct of this judge has been exceedingly reprehensible and in marked contrast with the high sense of judicial ethics and probity that generally characterize the federal judiciary, the committee said in summing up its findings of misbehavior in office against Judge Archbald.

SYNOPSIS

The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject for discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer when Hannibal Wayne Haxard, a mysterious child of the old southern family makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy, Nathaniel Perry, who was the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal, Captain Murrell, a friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony. Trouble at Scratch Hill, when Hannibal is kidnapped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent, and Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy. In a stroke Betty takes with Hannibal, they meet Bess Hicks, daughter of the overseer, who warns Betty of danger and counsels her to leave Betty. Betty and Carrington flee. Betty and Carrington are made prisoners. The pair are taken to Hicks cabin, in an almost invisible spot, and there Murrell visits Betty and reveals his part in the plot and his object. Betty spurs her professed love and Lee interrupts in anger by the arrival of Ware, terrified at possible outcome of the crime. Judge Price, hearing of the situation, plans action.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Judge Takes Charge.

All work on the plantation had stopped, and the hundreds of slaves, men, women and children, were gathered about the house. Among these were the members of the household. The judge would have attended himself to the first group, but he heard a whispered question, and then answered:

"Miss Malroy's lawyer."

Clearly it was not for him to mix with these outsiders, these curiosity seekers. He crossed the lawn to the house, and mounted the steps. In the doorway was big Steve, white groom of men stood about in the hall, the hum of busy purposeless talk pervading the place. The judge frowned. This was all wrong.

"Has Mr. Ware returned from Memphis?" he asked of Steve.

"No, sah; not yet."

"Then show me into the library," said the judge with bland authority, surrendering his hat to the butler. "Come along, Mahaffy," he added. They entered the library, and the judge motioned Steve to close the door. "Now, boy, you'll kindly ask those people to withdraw—you may say it is Judge Price's orders. Allow no one to enter the house unless they have business with me, or as I send for them—you understand? After you have cleared the house, you may bring me a decanter of corn whiskey—stop a bit—you may ask the sheriff to step here."

"Yes, sah." And Steve withdrew.

The judge drew an easy chair up to the fat-topped desk that stood in the center of the room, and seated himself.

"Are you going to make this the excuse for another drunk, Price? If so, I feel the greatest contempt for you," said Mahaffy sternly.

The judge winced at this.

"You have made a regrettable choice of words, Solomon," he urged gently.

"Where's your feeling for the boy?"

"Here!" said the judge, with an eloquent gesture, resting his hand on his heart.

"If you let whisky alone, I'll believe you; otherwise what I have said must stand."

The door opened, and the sheriff stooped into the room. He was chewing a long wheat straw, and his whole appearance was one of troubled weakness.

"Morning," he said briefly.

"Sit down, sheriff," and the judge indicated a meek seat for the official in a distant corner. "Have you learned anything?" he asked.

The sheriff shook his head.

"What you turning all these neighbors out of doors?" he questioned.

"We don't want people tracking in and out the house, sheriff. Important evidence may be destroyed. I propose examining the slaves first—does that meet with your approval?"

"Oh, I've talked with them; they don't know nothing," said the sheriff. "No one don't know nothing."

"Hicks Says Miss Malroy's Been Acting Queer Since Charley Norton Was Shot."

"I'll see the overseer—what's his name?—Hicks? Suppose you go for him!" said the judge, addressing the sheriff.

The sheriff was gone from the room only a few moments, and returned with the information that Hicks was down at the bayou, which was to be dragged.

"Why?" inquired the judge.

"Hicks says Miss Malroy's been acting mighty queer ever since Charley Norton was shot—distracted like! He says he noticed it, and that Tom Ware noticed it."

"How does he explain the boy's disappearance?"

"He reckons she threw herself in, and the boy tried to drag her out, like he naturally would, and got drawn in."

"Humph! I'll trouble Mr. Hicks to step here," said the judge quietly.

"There's Mr. Carrington and a couple of strangers outside who've been asking about Miss Malroy and the boy; seems like the strangers knowed her and him back yonder in North Carolina," said the sheriff as he turned away.

"I'll see them." The sheriff went from the room and the judge dismissed the servants.

"Well, what do you think, Price?" asked Mahaffy anxiously when they were alone.

"Rightish. Take my word for it, Solomon, this blow is leveled at me. I have been too forward in my attempts to suppress the carnival of crime that is raging through west Tennessee. You'll observe that Miss Malroy disappeared at a moment when the public is disposed to think she has retained me as her legal adviser; probably she will be set at liberty when she agrees to drop the matter of Norton's murder. As for the boy, they'll use him to compel my silence and inaction." The judge took a long breath. "Yet there remains one point where the boy is concerned that completely baffles me. If we knew just a little more of his antecedents it might cause me to make a startling and radical move."

Mahaffy was clearly not impressed by the vague generalities in which the judge was dealing.

"There you go, Price, as usual, trying to convince yourself that you are the center of everything!" he said, in a tone of much exasperation. "Let's get down to business! What does this man Hicks mean by hinting at suicide? You saw Miss Malroy yesterday?"

"You have put your finger on a point of some significance," said the judge. "She bore evidence of the shock and loss she had sustained; aside from that she was quite as she has always been."

"Well, what do you want to see Hicks for? What do you expect to learn from him?"

"I don't like his insistence on the idea that Miss Malroy is mentally unbalanced. It's a question of some where he had said good-by to Betty scarcely a week before.

The two men had paused by the door. They now advanced. One was gaunt and haggard, his face disfigured by a great red scar; the other was a shock-headed individual who moved with a shambling gait. Both carried rifles and both were dressed in coarse homespun.

"Morning, sir," said the man with the scar. "Yancy's my name, and this gentleman 'lows he'd rather be known now as Mr. Cavendish."

The judge started to his feet.

"Bob Yancy?" he cried.

"Yes, sir, that's me." The judge passed nimbly around the desk and shook the Scratch Hiller warmly by the hand. "Where's my heavy, sir?—What's all this about him and Miss Betty?" Yancy's soft drawl was suddenly eager.

"Please God we'll recover him soon!" said the judge.

By the window Carrington moved impatiently. No harm could come to the boy, but Betty—a shudder went through him.

"They've stolen him," Yancy spoke with conviction. "I reckon they've started back to North Carolina with him—only that don't explain what's come of Miss Betty, does it?" and he dropped rather helplessly into a chair.

"Bob are just getting off a sick bed. He's been powerful porely in consequence of having his head laid open and then being thrown into the Elk river, where I fished him out," explained Cavendish, who still continued to regard the judge with unaltered astonishment, first cocking his shaggy head on one side and then on the other, his bleached eyes narrowed to a slit. Now and then he favored the austere Mahaffy with a frowning glance. He seemed intuitively to understand the comradeship of their degradation.

"Mr. Cavendish fetched me here on his raft. We tried up to the whole this morning. It was there we met Mr. Carrington—I'd known him slightly back yonder in North Carolina," continued Yancy. "He said to find him in jail with you I was counting a heap on seeing him in a jiffy."

Carrington, no longer able to control himself, swung about on his heel.

"What's been done?" he asked, with hope of depression. "What's going to be done? Don't you know that every second is precious?"

"I am about to conclude my lives tonight, sir," said the judge with dignity.

Carrington stepped to the door. After all, what was there to expect of these men? Whatever their interest it was plainly centered in the boy. He passed out into the hall.

As the door closed on him the judge turned again to the Scratch Hiller.

"Mr. Yancy, Mr. Mahaffy and I hold your nephew in the tenderest regard; he has been our constant companion ever since you were lost to him. In this crisis you may rely upon us; we are committed to his recovery, no matter what it involves." The judge's tone was one of unalterable resolution.

"I reckon you-all have been mighty good and kind to him," said Yancy huskily.

"We have endeavored to be, Mr. Yancy—indeed I had formed the resolution legally to adopt him should you not come to claim him. I should have given him my name, and made him my heir. His education has already begun under my supervision," and the judge, remembering the high use to which he had dedicated one of Peggie's trade labels, fairly glowed with philanthropic fervor.

"Think of that!" murmured Yancy softly. He was deeply moved. So was Mr. Cavendish, who was gifted with a wealth of ready sympathy. He thrust out a hardened hand to the judge.

"Shake!" he said. "You're a heap better than you look." A thin ripple of laughter escaped Mahaffy, but the judge accepted Chills and Fever's proffered hand. He understood that here was a simple genuine soul.

"Price, isn't it important for us to know why Mr. Yancy thinks the boy has been taken back to North Carolina?" said Mahaffy.

"Just what I'm in Hannibal to you, Mr. Yancy?" asked the judge resuming his seat.

"Strictly speaking, he ain't none. That he come to live with me is all owing to Mr. Crenshaw, who's a good man when left to himself, but he's got a wife, so a body may say he never is left to himself," began Yancy; and then briefly he told the story of the woman and the child much as he had told it to Bladen at the Barony the day of General Quintard's funeral.

The judge, his back to the light and his face in shadow, rested his left elbow on the desk and with his chin sunk in his palm, followed the Scratch Hiller's narrative with the closest attention.

Singing and the Lungs.

It is well known that singing, like whistling, is a fine exercise for the lungs, and some doctors advise those who fear consumption to go in for singing for this reason.

At the same time, they, of course, do not advance the claim that singing alone will save anyone from of cure consumption. Acquire the habit of taking the big deep breath, which is a primary requisite of any kind of singing, bad or good, and the physical joy derived from it will never allow you to relapse into lazy breathing.

SKIN ERUPTION ON CHEEK

Klossley, Mich.—"Last May, my thirteen-month-old baby had a sore coming on her cheek. It started in four or five small pimples and in two or three hours' time spread to the size of a silver dollar. It spread to her eye. Then water would run from the pimples and wherever that touched it caused more sores until nearly all one cheek and up her nostrils were one solid sore. She was very fretful. She certainly was a terrible looking child, and nothing seemed to be of any use.

"Then I got some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. She tried to rub off everything we put on so that we would sit and hold her hands for two hours at a time, trying to give the medicine a chance to help her but after I washed it with Cuticura Soap and then put on the Cuticura Ointment they seemed to soothe her and she did not try to rub them off. It was only a few days before her face was all healed up, and there has been no return of the trouble since. We thought that baby's face would surely be scarred, but it is not." (Signed) Mrs. W. J. Cleland, Jan. 5, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 23-p. Skin-Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Cherished Outlook.

"Father, dear," said Amaranth. "Willie Smithers is going to call at your office this morning to ask you for my hand isn't there some little hint I can give him before he goes so as to make it easier for him?"

"Yes," said Mr. Blinks, "tell him to take either before he comes. It will save him much pain."—Harper's Weekly.
