A. B. B. VanZandt, publicity agent of the D. U. On the D. J. & C. Ry. the same service will be given between Northville and Detroit except that car will arrive in Northville five minutes earlier than at present.

One of the big innovations on the main line of the D. J. & C. will be the establishment of hourly limited service between Detroit and Ann Arbor.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Alice Postal died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Lyke, last Thursday of heart disease, at the age of fifty one years.

Mrs. Postal had made her home in Northville the past eighteen years, and was a faithful worker in the Methodist church and the societies connected with it. She had been in ill health all summer and was recently taken to Ann Arbor for treatment. However, she showed no improvement and soon returned to her home in Northville. She leaves one daughter and a host of friends to mourn her death.

The funeral was held from the home Sunday afternoon, Rev. R. M. Pierce officiating.

AT REST.

Frances Seeley was the daughter of Charles and Maria Seeley. She was born in Farmington, N. Y., January 17, 1836, and passed peacefully to rest at the home of her daughter in Des Moines, Iowa, September 22, 1912 at the age of seventy seven years.

May 8, 1862, she was united in marriage to Charles Utley. One daughter was born to them, Mrs. William D. Croman, of Des Moines, Iowa.

The deceased lady came to Michigan when a little child and spent her whole remaining life here, living in the township of Salem for twenty-five years, where she was known and greatly loved.

The body was brought to Northville, and the funeral held at the home of her niece, Mrs. F. G. Terrill, last Wednesday afternoon. Rev. W. H. Shannon, of Bancroft, a personal friend of the family, conducted the service. The burial was in the Thayer cemetery.

Besides a daughter, Mrs. Utley leaves a brother, Seymour Seeley, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Hamilton, both of this place.

Funeral Home Opening, Saturday, October 5. Mrs. Belle McCully.

MORE BIG DOINGS AT TWO DAYS' MEET

NERVY NAT OUTLASTS FIELD IN RACE EVENTS

Redford Ate Up the "Circle N" Ball Team

Ideal weather brought a big crowd to the driving park Wednesday afternoon, the opening of the two day's purse meeting in which a number of Detroit horses were named. The sport was first-class, the first event going through five heats and the other one seeing some spied.

In the 2:30 trot Charles Harlow stepped away with a heat, but next time Nervy Nat beat her to the finish. Nervy Nat also won the third with Monte M. trailing, but in the fourth Monte M. was in front when they passed the stand. The fifth heat saw Nervy Nat come back all right, winning the race.

Lou Bullock, who has been racing on the Michigan circuit, was too much for the 2:15 class and won in straight heats, although forced to step in 2:15 by Uncle Dudley.

Redford, aided by a Tiger pitcher, Meyers, won the ball game, 6 to 0. Thursday's program, with the exception of one heat, was postponed on account of rain.

Matteson—Phillips.

Miss Cleo Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Phillips of this place and Earl Matteson of Saginaw were united in marriage at the home of the bride, Monday, September 30. They will be at home to their friends after October fifteenth at Saginaw, Michigan.

Mrs. Matteson was a well known Northville young lady, having lived here all her life. The groom is employed as motorman on the D. U. R.

TRADE AT RYDER'S

The DIAMOND CIPHER

A Baseball Romance

By W. A. PHILON

(COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY W. G. CHAPMAN. COPYRIGHT IN CANADA AND GREAT BRITAIN.)

SYNOPSIS.

Secret Service Chief Watkins, puzzled over the theft of the government's cipher, calls to his aid Detective Pinkwell. They think they have discovered a new cipher when the office boy, Brockett, tells them it's "The Diamond Cipher" and starts for the ball park. Brockett, Chula Lon Kan, a Siamese, Ramon Solano, a Cuban, together with some twenty other youngsters, practice baseball, playing until dark. One of Watkins' stenographers is seen to pass a paper to a mysterious stranger. The outcome of Brockett's cipher, the ball player and Solano are engaged by government for mysterious mission. Yasmoto, mysterious Jap, calls on Brockett. Brockett falls into Yasmoto's trap, a fight follows. Brockett coming out on top. Messenger McKane, coming to the rescue. McKane was dealer of the mysterious cipher, also a ball player. Yasmoto returns to headquarters and reports to Baron Zeller his failure to obtain the cipher. Miss Lawson, the stenographer also reports to the Baron. Brockett and Solano have encounter with the Baron in which the latter comes out second best. Brockett and Solano arrive in Jersey City, make appointment to meet McGuffin, the "Iron Man" baseball manager. Brockett and Solano arrive in New York and run into a Chinese Tong war, rescued by a white man. The place of refuge found to be a trap; find themselves prisoners of Yasmoto. Kelly, rescuee, Kelly turns Brockett and Solano over to Brockett. Brockett and Solano have encounter with tough gang, but are protected by Kelly's men. On sleeper Cleveland-bound the Baron, detected in act of killing Solano's berth, jumps from train. At Detroit the messengers go to ball game, meet hierarchy in mysterious manner and depart for Chicago. Arriving in Chicago, the messengers are robbed by a trio of thieves, the Baron again appears. The Baron agrees to assist in recovering the stolen papers. The messengers find the stolen papers in the possession of a kind negro.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Just what happened between the moment when the big negro brought out the money belt and the moment when a full understanding of every day affairs came back to Brockett and Solano, neither of these young men could fully detail. There had been a cyclone, a noisy followed by an earth quake, after which the roof had fallen in, but they were under the timbers—at least, that was how they figured it all out when they began to sit up and across a few inches of midnight gloom at his companion.

"Somewhat battered on the head; somewhat damaged in the ribs and knees; considerably mused up as to clothing and, apparently, in jail," returned the Cuban. "Otherwise I think I am all right and perfectly happy. Who pushed the building over on us, anyhow?"

"I haven't the slightest idea," ruefully responded Brockett. "All I can remember is making one grab at that negro, while you tried to seize the belt. Then things seemed to go round and round, and I began to look through a big telescope at the evening stars. Did things impress you that way?"

"Pretty much so," Ramon answered. "I distinctly remember having one hand on that belt, and the other hand on that large black man's necktie. Then somebody turned off the lights for an instant, turned them on again, much brighter than before, and then turned them off for keeps. I wonder where we are?"

"Jail, I believe you hinted. Probably the best place for us—or for me, anyway, after scoring such a failure as this has been. I'm sorry I dragged you into such a piece of foolishness."

"I came along entirely of my own accord," said the Cuban, "and I don't think we have made a failure of the expedition—not yet. We didn't get the belt away from that negro—true enough—but we are a great deal nearer to it than we were an hour before we saw him. There can't be many black men like that one; it's almost a certainty that the Chicago police know him and can locate him, and I think that when they find him he will be quite willing to listen to reason."

"Yes—but how about making the police listen to reason first, in regard to ourselves and our affairs?"

"That was a problem which required weighty deliberation, and the unhappy wanderer had just started an animated discussion when there was a

"Rather confused," replied Brockett, instinctively warning to the big Irishman. "Tell us, won't you, how we happen to be here?"

"Have ye no memory at all?" laughed the policeman.

"Almost none, officer. Ye can remember things going 'round in circles and then someone shooting our senses away from us—nothing after that."

"I can believe ye," returned the officer. "I was just walkin' State street, me and Flynn, me partner—I'm Hogan, an' the well-known, well-respected team is Hogan and Flynn, terror to all evil-doers. Well, me lad, be that as it may, we were walkin' State street, not too far from Taylor, when we heard sounds indicatin' that Satan had bruk loose in a coon restaurant nearby. We went over, an' I'm thinkin' we were just in time. Youse two was on the floor, an' half a dozen big niggers was tramin' the stuffin' outa youse. Five minutes more an' ye'd have both been fine subjects for the coroner."

"Tell me," ventured Solano, "was there one great big fellow, twice the size of an ordinary man, among the crowd?"

"Now ye remind me of it," said the policeman, "there surely was—big Sam Cruik, the human elephant. Great big nigger, makes his livin' mostly by distributin' ads for fake doctors and shavin' dentists. He was tryin', as near as we could judge, to keep the crowd off from youse two. Anyhow, he wasn't doin' nothin' to harm either wan of youse, an' when we came in he backed out the rear door, nice an' quiet. Bad nigger is Sam, at times, but he didn't seem specially bad on this occasion."

"Just this same," declared Brockett, the trouble started because he had stolen something of mine—or, rather, had something of mine that another man had stolen. A money belt, containing considerable cash—and, well, anyhow, containing all my money."

"He showed the belt in this restaurant," put in Solano, "and we, recedingly happening to be there at the time, naturally tried to take it away from him. Then, I suppose, they all jumped on us."

"That they did, an' the only thing I'm surprised at," remarked the officer, "is that they didn't use their razors on ye. Had lot of coons hang 'round that place, I'm tellin' ye."

"We fully believe it," said Solano, with a grimace of pain. "But say, officer, how long have we been in here, and how long have we to stay?"

"Ye have been in only a matter of three hours, lads," replied the policeman, "though I suppose it has seemed a week of Sundays. As to how long ye stay—well, ye haven't been booked yet. I'm not a bad judge of people when I see them, an' ye look all right."

Washed and brushed up the boys felt a little more like live human beings. Officer Hogan treated them like younger brothers, assured them that no charge had been entered against them, and that they might consider themselves as simply held for safekeeping. "Better stay right here till evenin'," said the hospitable officer, "an' then we will sally out an' try to get hold of the big nigger. I have a half-idea as to where we can locate him. He's up against the dope-smokes hop regular—an' it won't be hard to find him. Along after supper, lads, we'll go out an' do the best we can."

Neither Brockett nor Solano could find words to fit the case, but the twinkle in the big policeman's eye told that he fully understood their feelings. He shook hands with them reassuringly, brought them a bundle of newspapers to while away the time, and then busied himself with the routine of his report upon the day's events. The boys were buried in the printed columns, when a little packet of paper seemed to wait itself through the window by which they were sitting. The packet fell at Brockett's feet. As he caught it, up Solano sprang for the window, peered eagerly out—and saw no one excepting two blue-clad policemen strolling by.

Brockett opened the packet and found several thicknesses of blank paper, bound together to give weight and accuracy to the throwing of the missile. In the center of the package was a slip of cardboard, and written across this in the hieroglyphs Brockett had himself invented, were these letterings:

"BA SH SH FAT C V HR ZSH HE E Fos Pos FA EA TC HR E TO A SH E TO BH SH PO Pos WP E TC PO E ZSH SH W."

"Keep original appointment. Delay no longer," translated Brockett. "To-night's fortunes then? Will decide whether we can keep faith as promised or have to give it all up and admit ourselves utter failures!"

CHAPTER XIX.

The day passed somewhat draggingly, for time flies with leaden pin-feathers when you are in a hurry. Brockett and Solano knew that they had little time left for action, and that if they failed to recover the messages now in possession of the big negro, their journey would abruptly end; an utter failure. Most of the afternoon and early evening was spent in discussing the giant black, and the chances of finding the documents still in his possession.

"I only hope," said Brockett, "that he hasn't thrown away the envelopes. He might very likely destroy them to make the chance of identifying the belt so much smaller, and to protect him in the possession of the money."

"I hardly think so," Solano encouraged the worried youngster. "When we get the negro, we'll get belt, papers, money and all. And I think Officer Hogan will come pretty near to rounding him up, if anybody can."

"I wonder if the big fellow remembered us from Detroit," mused Brockett. "If so, he might also remember the card he passed us, something of his general appearance, and, if he opened the envelopes in the belt, the duplication of the writing might impress him."

"Hardly probable," dissented Solano. "He was simply told, in Detroit, to hand that card to us, and was paid something to do it. He might remember us, all right, but would not be likely to remember anything about the message that he gave us. Quit fretting about the whole business. I firmly believe everything will work out all right, and that the lost envelopes will come back to you before morning. Then we can hurry towards Mexico as fast as you may desire."

It was about nine that night when Officers Hogan and Flynn—the latter as big as husky and as truly Irish as his partner—summoned the boys for the expedition that should spell absolute failure or a chance to retrieve lost fortunes. Both were in plain the black garbo. Can ye make good? Ye can? Then go to it."

The boys walked through a yard filled with mud, bricks and wreckage of every imaginable kind. At the far end of the yard they brought up against a brick wall. They fumbled along this wall, soon finding the little doorway, and tapped thrice upon the panels. Somewhere in the woodwork of the door a spark of light gleamed, and they were uncomfortably aware that they were under scrutiny. They whistled softly and tapped the door again. It opened and a Chinaman confronted them.

"You want smoke?"

"Of course we do," Solano answered. The yellow man looked them over, and then beckoned them inside the portals, shutting and bolting the door behind them. Cat-footed, noiseless, he conducted them up a hallway damp with mould, noisome with dirt and the smell of many nights of opium "cooking," and guided them into a room of considerable size. A mattress, gray with dirt, lay on the floor and on this mattress three men—two negroes and one white man—were stupidly reclining, while a peanut oil lamp burned on a bit of matting near by, and a bamboo pipe was being passed from hand to hand. The sweet, penetrating, sickish smell of opium thickened the air; roaches ran, fearless and inquisitive, along the floor, and the woeers of the poppy-god, spent, lost in happiness, drowsed, smoked and drowsed again, contented in their horrible surroundings as monarchs in a palace hall.

"Cheap, tella him," said the Chinaman. "You want bunk, yes?"

"Curtains of cheap, drab material masked wide stretches of the wall. From behind these curtains came the hum of subdued conversation and the perfume of the cooking 'hop.' The Chinaman parted two strips of the drab cloth and showed a bunk between the curtains and the wall. Brockett and Solano looked up and down the room. There was no sign of their quarry. The boys quietly entered the bunk which the Chinaman had assigned them, and their host quickly brought them the full para-

Wanted a Bite.

Oh, yes, it was raining—had been all day—but they didn't mind that so much. You see, they were fishermen. All the same, they were trudging home, with weary steps and very weary-looking faces.

Their baskets were empty, and to be candid, they were in a very bad temper.

As they entered the little village a large dog ran at one of the party. The dog had a ferocious look and was barking furiously. But the fisherman did not take much alarm at the animal. He just kicked it away carelessly.

"Aren't you afraid he'll go for you?" inquired another of the party, somewhat anxiously.

The one who had kicked at the dog looked at the companion in a sorrowful manner.

"Only wish he would," he replied. "I'd chance almost anything to be able to go home and eat a hot meal."

The First Toast.

When Mr. and Mrs. William Moore, captain and first mate of the New York boat "The Oceanic," were on the ocean, it was the custom to serve punch with toasted bread. It is said, too, that apples floating in it. These apples were called the toast.

The toast—remember that.

Well, it happened at Bath one day that a celebrated beauty stood in the Cross Bath, surrounded by a throng of admirers, and one of these admirers, intoxicated with admiration, took a glass of the water in which the beauty stood, and drinking it aloft, drank her health, draining the water to the last drop.

Dear Nana, who stood near by, shouted:

"I hate not the punch, but I would I had the toast!"

HARD TO SEE. Even When the Facts About Coffee are Plain.

It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see. Tell the average man or woman that the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffeine, the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh at you if they don't know the facts.

Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of coffee drinkers from the above conditions, and a large per cent of the human family will shrug their shoulders, take some drugs and—keep on drinking coffee or tea.

"Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household," writes a lady. "It enervates, depresses and creates a feeling of languor and heaviness." It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum that we discovered the cause and way out of these ills.

"The only reason, I am sure, why Postum is not used altogether for the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritious beverage. There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes. Then it is delicious." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Well-being," in English, there's a reason."

Read the above letter. A new one appears from time to time. These are genuine, true, and real of human interest. A.C.

Why The Unrest?

There are two times in life when men are dissatisfied. One is when he encounters hard times and the other is when he runs up against extreme prosperity. In 1892 to '96 it was hard times—and such hard times as was thought then that the people of this country would never forget. Today the opposite is the case for grumbling. The whole world is now looking with astonishment at the progress and prosperity of the United States. Not even the tales of the Arabian Nights can compare with it. During the past fifteen years the value of farm property alone, in the United States, has increased in value more than it had for the entire previous period from the time Columbus discovered the continent on which we live. Just think of that for one chunk of progress and prosperity. Why, the wheels of progress in this country are turning so stupendously fast to day that even the Bull Moose have to keep dodging every moment to keep from being run over. Just think of this one—six years ago, Theodore Roosevelt wasn't getting over 5 cents a word for what he said while under the Taft administration he gets $1.50 a word from a New York magazine. Isn't that progress and prosperity for you? That's the trouble today. There's too much prosperity, too much progress, and the Bull Moose are out to elect a free trade, no tariff ticket, so that every thing will be cheaper. In fact things may be so blamed cheap that no one will have any money to buy with. Remember the days of '92 to '96. History repeats itself. The end.

Indian Romance Disclosed.
The story of an Indian romance was revealed the other day in Indianapolis, when Big Chief Red Fox of the Sioux Indians visited the office of the county clerk and obtained a marriage license to wed Miss Evelyn C. Dunn, a girl of English Indian parentage, living in that city. On the marriage application the chief's name is William J. Humes. The name of his father is given as Black Eagle, an Indian chief who is now living in Montana. His mother's name is written as Neawan, and her occupation is given as "squaw." The girl's father is Stitting Bull, Jr., according to the application, and he is said to live in Los Angeles, Cal., and is a retired gold miner. The girl's mother was an English woman, who came to this country and was married to the Indian, Stitting Bull, Jr.

Sterilization of Water by Light.
At the recent hygiene exhibition at Dresden apparatus was shown by means of which water may be purified on a large scale through the use of ultra-violet light. This method is now in use in France on a large scale, and is found to be both practical and economical. The amount of electrical current required to produce the ultra-violet light is small. The efficiency is so great that the water, after treating, is found to contain not more than twenty-five or thirty germs to the ounce, which is far better than anything that has ever been accomplished by a filtering process.—Good Health.

The witness testified that he had been knocked down by a motor-car and that the chauffeur, who was joy riding, had given no warning of his approach. "Do you mean," asked the judge, "that he didn't have a horn?" "No, your honor," replied the witness. "I think he'd had too many."

Bathing in Mexico.
Travelers through Mexico usually are much interested in the queer old time bath tubs which are used in many parts of that country. When the weather is hot the pools and streams absorb some of the general warmth. Therefore, bathers go to the springs where the water is sure to be cool. At these springs one often will find a tub or small bathing pool, hollowed out of the rock. Some of the wealthier Mexicans have these great stone tubs brought into their houses. They are kept cool with running water.

Surely Enough.

Robert Yerkes, Sr.

One of Northville's well known pioneer citizens, who passed his eighty-third birthday last Saturday. At that time he was ill in bed with a severe cold, but is now about the house again as usual.

I've Come to Eighty-three.

(Robert Yerkes, Sr., is suffering from a severe cold and spent his eighty-third birthday in bed. The following are some reflections of the day.)

Another year of wintry months and summer skies
Has passed for me.
And now, in early autumn days
I've come to eighty-three.

What good, what ill, the year has borne
Is scattered on its trail.
The ill will go upon the wind,
The good can never fail.

The "Great Unknown" comes slowly on Its mingled clouds are near;
Never before in the span of life
Has its borders seemed so clear.

The countless ways that take us hence
Are numbered in the Book of Fate
Yet no one knows which one is his
Until the awful words, "too late."

A tiny speck upon the brain
Will make the strongest mortal reel,
Or deep emotion's flash disclose
The glisten of broken wheel.

What time the message comes to me,
"Thy ill and me at my Savior's side,
I live, no other Priest or King
In Him I must abide."

SEP. 5, 1912. ROBERT YERKES.

A Thorough Test

One To Convince the Most Skeptical Northville Reader.

The test of time is the test that counts. Doan's Kidney Pills have made their reputation by effective action. The following case is typical. Northville residents should be convinced.

The testimony is confirmed—the proof complete.

Testimony like this cannot be ignored.

Mrs. Henry Garfield, Northville, Mich., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an excellent remedy and I do not hesitate to recommend them to anyone afflicted with backache and kidney complaint. For a time I suffered from pains in the small of my back and I had no energy or ambition. I tried various remedies but received no permanent benefit from them. Finally, I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and decided to give them a trial. I procured a supply at Murdock Bros. Drug Store. In a short time after I commenced using them, I was entirely relieved."

The above statement was given on November 26, 1906 and was confirmed by Mrs. Garfield on March 6, 1909. She also said that her cure had been permanent.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Earl Sitlington Dead.

Alfred Earl Sitlington, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Sitlington of Novi township was born in Lebanon township, Clinton County, on July 13, 1891. When he was thirteen years of age his parents moved to Novi where they have since made their home. Earl attended the school in that place, graduating in 1910. He was well known and loved by both young and old; which fact was plainly shown by the beautiful flowers sent in remembrance.

It was not even known that he was ill, though his eye-sight had been poorly all summer, until two weeks ago, when a doctor was called to examine him. The verdict was Bright's disease, with little or no hope. He was immediately taken to a sanitarium in Detroit for treatment. However he did not improve, and died early Friday night, September 27. Beside his mother and father he leaves a sister, Francis to mourn his death.

The funeral was held from the home Monday afternoon, Rev. H. A. Huey officiating. Burial in the Novi cemetery.

Scientific Attainment.

The porous lead of Prof. H. T. Hanover of the Danish Polytechnic high school of Copenhagen, is said to be the result of many years of study of the problem of accumulator efficiency. The lead is filled with cavities as small as to be visible only through a powerful microscope, but they diminish weight and they add so much to the surface that it is said storage batteries have their capacity increased five times without addition to their size or weight.

MANAGEMENT OF SANDY SOILS

By J. A. JEFFERY, Professor of Soils Michigan Agricultural College.

After sandy land, such as is found in western and northern Michigan, has been brought under cultivation, great care must still be exercised in its management. The cropping value of these soils will depend more than anything else upon the incorporation and retention of organic matter. To this end, a careful rotation of crops should be adopted. It should be simple and short, something like this:

(1) Clover, one or two years, plowing under as much of the aftergrowth as is possible when preparing for the succeeding crop; (2) a cultivated crop—potatoes, corn or possibly beans, and (3) grain of some kind, seeding again to clover with grain.

This is not the only rotation that could be followed, but the important thing is to introduce clover into the rotation as frequently as possible. No grain or cultivated crop should be planted twice in succession.

The plowing should be shallow, probably never to exceed five inches; and this with a view to keeping the organic matter as near the surface as possible, where it will accomplish the most good, particularly in protecting the soils from the ravages of the winds. It is good practice not to use the plow too frequently. Many farmers use the plow only in breaking the clover sod. The disc harrow is used at all other times in preparing soil for crops.

When cultivated crops occupy the land, the cultivation should be frequent and shallow. Only those who have practiced persistent shallow cultivation can appreciate the importance of this stirring the soil in preserving the moisture and insuring profitable crops.

Use "catch" crops where possible. If a regular crop has been removed fairly early in the fall and the succeeding crop is not to be planted the following spring, it is always worth while to seed the land to oats or rye or vetch. Frequently it will be found desirable and profitable just before the last cultivation of the corn to seed the corn field to winter vetch seed at the rate of 50 pounds per acre. The field may be seeded to oats or rye instead. The benefits to be derived from the catch crop are at least three:

1. In the fall and early spring soil is protected from the winds.
2. During the winter these crops catch and retain the snow upon the ground, from which fact the soil benefits not only from the blanket of snow during the winter, but, also, from the melting of the snow in place in the spring.
3. The discing in of the crop in the spring adds to the soil organic matter, and in the case of vetch, nitrogen as well.

Green Manuring. Green manuring is the practice of growing a crop to plow under before it matures. This is done to increase the amount of organic matter in the soil. The most common crops used for this purpose are:

It is perhaps the most commonly used, and probably chiefly because it can be planted in the fall and makes a considerable growth before the growing season closes. It takes up the growing again early in spring and continues until the farmer is ready to plow. It is sown at the rate of one or one-half bushels to two bushels per acre.

Oats and peas are sometimes used, sown at the rate of one bushel of oats to two bushels of peas to the acre.

Sand vetch is also used, the seeding being at the rate of 30 to 50 pounds per acre. The seeding in all cases is done as early as conditions of soil and air are suitable for the planting of the crop.

The sand, hairy or winter vetch seems to be rapidly growing in favor, both as a catch crop plant and as a green manuring plant. Its value rests upon three things, viz:

1. Because of the size of the seed it may be planted as deep as two inches, thus increasing its chances for moisture supply, and thus insuring germination. The clovers and alfalfa frequently suffer because they may not be planted deep enough to insure moisture and anchorage to preserve the plant from blowing away.
2. The plant makes a very rapid and vigorous growth, producing a large amount of material to plow under or disc in.
3. It is much more valuable than the grains for this purpose because of the amount of nitrogen which it gathers during its growth and leaves for the use of future crops.

On the Miami sandy soils of southern Michigan the cow pea is being much used as a green manuring crop. Peas are sown at the rate of 3 pecks per acre, about the first week in June, and the crop is plowed under from the first to the middle of September. When wheat is sown after cow peas, thus plowed under, the yields of wheat are greatly increased; and when clover is seeded with the wheat the following spring, it seldom fails to make an excellent catch.

A seed test in time saves any number of bushels.

WEED CONTROL IN AUTUMN

By R. J. BALDWIN, Michigan Agricultural College.

After the crop is removed, from new seedings and stubble lands, the weeds which have been kept in check by the growing crop are apt to spring up and make a sufficient growth to produce a crop of seed and crowd the thin seedlings of grass and clover. The number and variety of such weeds will depend upon the locality and the care exercised in the operation of the farm. Ragweed, pigweed, foxtails and Canada thistles are among the most common kinds found. Such weeds can be prevented from seeding to a great extent, by clipping with the cutter bar of the mower tilted high so as to leave the new seedlings. It is objectionable, to attempt to control weeds or new seedlings with sheep for the reason that sheep are almost sure to eat the tender seedlings and leave the coarser weeds.

The practice of clipping with a mower has been used by the Michigan Agricultural College farm, where a constant warfare must be kept up against weeds which are continually being introduced in the purchase of hay, straw and grain for feeding.

Perhaps the most persistent fall weed and the one that is most conspicuous during August and September along roadsides, ditches and grain fields, is the ragweed (shown in illustration). Its ragged, rank growth and long, thin, woody stems, especially in the fall, are very objectionable to the farmer. It is a weed which contains such an abundance of yellow pollen as to be the cause of hay fever. Careful farming with clean cultivation crops, such as corn and soybeans, in the fall, and the use of a system of burning this weed in check.

Care of Stallions. A stallion shut up in a dark stall without the companionship of other horses often becomes moody and savage. Some English stallions ride a pony while leading their horses for exercise and the horses become so attached to these ponies that they become fretful and uneasy when they are not near.

At night the ponies are given a stall next to the horses. Of course, some horses are too savage in nature to permit their being led in company with a pony, but if broken to this treatment when young, stallions can be handled in this way.

Fall Sown Clover. Even last year there was good success with fall-sown clover and the season was none too favorable. There are a great many enemies to spring-sown clover, weeds, grasses and too thick stands of grain, which fall seeding escapes.

When a spring seeding has been scoured out after removal of the grain crop, the land should at once be disked and resseeded the clover on a fine seed bed with a firm subsoil. Even if it is very dry the chances are there will come enough fall rain for the clover.

It is a usual practice in the spring to have what is called a "cleaning up day." There are some things, however, which ought to be cleaned up in the fall, such as weeds which have been missed and are waiting to scatter their seeds far and wide on the snow in winter, and limbs in the orchards which will invite rabbits to live there and nibble the fresh bark of young trees.

The amount of money invested in farm machinery on the average Michigan farm is nearly as great as the money invested in a barn. The barn is always insured against fire, but the machinery is never insured against rust unless a good shed has been made for it. Some machines ought never to be rained on and if the shed is handy they can be run in instead of being left in the field at night.

Some protection should be placed around young trees in the fall to prevent girdling by mice and rabbits during winter. Wire screen, paper, etc., are used for this purpose and often save whole orchards even where these pests were not thought to be numerous.

EXHAUSTION OF THE SOIL

Prof. E. H. Farrington of Wisconsin Agricultural College, in speaking of Soil Exhaustion, made a very interesting statement regarding the selling of dairy products from the farm as compared with selling the grain productions directly off the farm. Here is what he says:

"There is a great difference in the amount of soil fertility removed from the farm by selling crops as compared with the selling of cream and butter. The constituents of the soil that become most easily exhausted by farming operations are the nitrogen, the phosphoric acid and the potash. These each have a market value per pound and can be bought in commercial fertilizers. They are also contained in farm manure."

"An analysis of different crops and of milk, butter and cheese will show how much of these various constituents are removed from the farm when a certain quantity of these products are sold. For instance, by using the same prices per pound for the following crops, etc., we find that the fertilizing constituents taken from the soil when one ton of hay is sold from the farm have a value of $4.34, one ton of corn $5.36, one ton of wheat $6.63, one ton of milk $2.17, one ton of skim milk $2.31, one ton of butter 49 cents, one ton of whey 84 cents, and one ton of cheese $14.19. The value of each ton of these different products is well known. For instance, the ton of hay may be sold for $20.00, while the ton of butter is worth $600.00 and a ton of cheese $200.00. These figures show, however, that if the crops raised on the farm are fed to the cows and either cream or butter only is sold, then for every $600.00 worth of butter only 50 cents worth of fertility is drawn from the farm."

In encouraging the farmers to engage in dairying, Prof. Farrington says:

"Dairying keeps up the fertility of the soil as already explained; 'Skim milk is very valuable to the farmer not only for the reasons given, but because it is profitable for a farmer to become a stock raiser—that is, raise calves, pigs, poultry, etc., rather than a crop producer and a seller of grain."

"Dairy products, butter and cheese, are not bulky to market, being much more concentrated and the cost of transportation less than it is for hay, grain, etc."

"Dairying utilizes waste land, such as stony pastures, timber and swamp land, which may be used for pasturing the cows if these are kept, but which otherwise would give no returns."

"Dairying gives profitable employment during the entire year and idleness is not good for either man or cow."

A visit to the National Dairy Show at Chicago, October 21th to November 2nd next, will give every one a short course in dairying that cannot be equaled anywhere in the world, and all such matters as are discussed by Prof. Farrington will be illustrated by the world's experts in every branch of the dairy industry. Opportunity to see the best representative dairies in America will be the leading feature of the show, and the men who are doing their best to advance the dairy industry will be on hand.

Everything will be shown in a big, broad, open way that all may be enabled to keep abreast of the most modern methods in appliances and the best results in breeding and feeding dairy cattle, and preparing for market and the marketing of all dairy products.

TOWNSEND FOR TAFT

MICHIGAN SENATOR ELOQUENTLY SUPPORTS PRESIDENT AND REPUBLICAN PARTY.

MANY CONVINCING REASONS

In Opening Campaign in Chicago Senator Townsend Says the President Has Redeemed Party Pledges and Has Accomplished Great Results for the American People.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Senator Charles E. Townsend of Michigan opened the Republican campaign in this city with a speech at a mass meeting held under the auspices of the Hamilton Club. The meeting was largely attended and great enthusiasm was manifested, the mention of Taft's name being received with cheers.

Senator Townsend delivered an eloquent address, speaking with great emphasis and creating a most favorable impression upon his audience. He began by repeating the main points of the Republican platform of 1908 and demonstrating, paragraph by paragraph, that President Taft has redeemed every pledge made by the Republican party to the country. "He has come nearer to fulfilling the provisions and promises of that platform," said Senator Townsend, "than has any other president come to fulfilling the promises of the platform upon which he was elected. This is not the careless statement of a friend but is demonstrated by a careful comparison of the record with the platform itself."

Revision of the Tariff.
Senator Townsend said that inasmuch as the revision of the tariff had been the subject of so much misrepresentation he would give extended consideration to this feature. He told at length the story of the extra session of congress, called by the president, world, for signing the bill which gave pension benefits estimated at twenty-five million dollars annually to civil war veterans, for abrogating the treaty with Russia in honorable and peaceful fashion, and for protecting the civil service against the attacks of the Democratic party.

The Insurgent Movement.
Senator Townsend took occasion to remark that the insurgent movement originated in a protest against the rules of the house of representatives. "With the exception of a few," of whom I was one," he said, "none of these insurgents were on friendly relations with President Roosevelt and he took no active part in those early struggles. But insurgency has now grown in many places to be a profession and the professional insurgent has seen fit to antagonize the administration of his own party because he can obtain notoriety in no easier way."

Speaking of the manner in which the Democrats enact tariff laws, Senator Townsend cited the incident of the chemical schedule in the house during the session which has just ended. He said: "This bill was presented as an amendment to the house cotton bill and when it was presented the member who offered it asked that it be considered without reading. When he was questioned he admitted that it had never been referred to any committee, had never been printed, and that no hearings had been had upon it. And yet this bill was adopted as an amendment to the cotton bill. When the president came to consider it he discovered that in many instances the duty had been raised rather than lowered. In other instances the duties, if enacted into law, would have ruined many great industries. The president vetoed it as he did all other abortive attempts at tariff reduction and thus saved a panic which would have certainly fallen upon the people of this country."

Why Townsend is for Taft.
In conclusion, Senator Townsend said that he would vote for President Taft because Mr. Taft was more of a statesman than a politician; because the president was in principle and conduct the most truly safe, sound and honest progressive of all the candidates who had been named; because his administration has conserved the general welfare and prosperity of the American people in all departments of life; because he had changed a deficit of fifty-eight million dollars into a substantial surplus, because during his term there had been no suggestion of a panic; because his administration had been clean and honest; because under him public affairs were never more honestly conducted nor a higher standard of private life maintained, because of some enemies he had made every malefactor of great wealth who has been indicted by his administration being opposed to him, and because he is the duly certified nominee of the Republican party, an honestly nominated and elected opponent and deservingly the support of every Republican.

"Even if I had been disappointed in my personal desires," said Senator Townsend, "I would still remain a Republican from principle. I do not believe that the party which was all right up to the time of the Chicago convention became wrong the next day."

WHY HE WOULD NOT DONATE

A Democrat Afraid to Help His Party Win the Election.

George Lubbers is a wealthy real estate man down in Louisville, Ky. He came to this country some forty years ago from Germany, and by the application of thrift amassed a considerable fortune. He is a stockholder in various enterprises and a director in more than one large manufacturing concern. For a number of years he has been high in the councils of the Democratic party, and a regular contributor to the campaign funds of the organization. Whenever the time came to get the checks in, Mr. Lubbers came usually first.

This year the Democratic managers dropped him the same stereotyped note that in campaigns gone by always brought back a considerable check. Receiving no word from Mr. Lubbers, one of the managers dropped around to see him.

"Well, George, we didn't hear from you concerning your contribution," said the visitor, "and I thought I would come around to see you. How much are you going to give us this time?"

"Not one penny," said Mr. Lubbers with almost violent promptness.

"But, George," expostulated the solicitor, "what's the matter with you? Why, man, we've got a chance to win this time."

"I know," replied the old German, "and that's just the reason I am not going to help you. If I thought you didn't have a chance to win, I would give you some money for the fund. I am a Democrat from sentiment, I guess. I like you fellows in the organization, but I know and I think you ought to know that the Democrats cannot run this government. I have got too much money invested, too many houses rented and too many laborers depending upon me for work to assist the Democrats when they've got a chance to win. Party sentiment is with me one thing and party confidence is another. So, there'll be no check from me this year."

The candidates for office on the Bull Moose tickets around the country are beginning to believe they never will see farther than being allowed to pay the freight.
