NORTHVILLE PEOPLE TAKEN BY DEATH

FOUR HAVE DIED DURING PAST TWO WEEKS.

Fred Olm Was A Victim Of Heart's Disease.

Fred Olm died early Saturday evening of heart's disease at the age of 39 years. He had complained of not feeling well that morning but had gone to work as usual. Returning home from town in the evening he was taken with a severe pain in his heart and was taking off his slippers preparatory to retiring when he fell over dead. The doctor was called at once but he was beyond all earthly help.

Mr. Olm was well known here having made Northville his home for many years. He had been employed as head moulder in the Bell Foundry for the past twenty-three years, which fact attests to the respect in which he was held by all who knew him. Two years ago he married Miss Ellen Gibson, his first wife having died four years previously. Beside the widow, he leaves, by his first marriage, two sons, Charles and Frank who live on their respective farms near this village, and one daughter, Elizabeth, aged fifteen years.

The funeral was held from the home Tuesday afternoon, Rev. J. E. Webber officiating.

MRS. WILLIAM COLE DEAD.

Mrs. William Cole died at her home on Horton avenue Sunday afternoon of heart failure. Her death came as a shock to her family and friends as she had only been ill since Wednesday of last week. She had been a resident of Northville for twenty-five years and was highly respected and loved by all who knew her. Deceased leaves a husband and four sons, Allan of Bailey, Charles of Detroit and Willard and Roy of this place.

The funeral was held from the home Wednesday afternoon, Rev. J. E. Webber officiating.

MRS. L. M. PEARSON DEAD.

Mrs. L. M. Pearson died Monday afternoon at the residence of C. H. LaFever and family, with whom she has made her home for the past ten years. She was sixty-two years old.

The body was shipped to Canada, her old home, on Wednesday, there being no funeral services held here.

GEORGE ARDIA TAKEN

George, aged fifteen years, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Schube Abbey died early Saturday morning of typhoid fever. He had been very ill for two weeks previously, with no hope of recovery.

His childhood days were spent in Novi, where he was a general favorite, being familiarly known as "Too He". Two years ago he moved to Northville with his parents, where they have since made their home. Of a bright and sunny disposition, he also possessed an unusually retentive mind and was a great reader. Had his life been spared, he would undoubtedly have become a very capable man.

He was a member of the seventh grade of our school, where he will be greatly missed by both teacher and classmates. A number of the boys of that grade acted as pall bearers, the entire grade attending the funeral in a body, thus paying a last tribute to one who was loved by them all. The funeral was held from the home Monday afternoon, Rev. J. E. Webber officiating. Interment in the Novi cemetery.

The grief stricken parents have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her husband, for whom she had kept house. Ryan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused. Capt. Ekanah Dan-ids, leader of the Regulars, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet. Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting. Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace, an apothecary for the guardian and Ellery's sister, her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing a packet from port safety through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, including money in response to a demand. She cautiously started when informed of the arrival of Nat. Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Danids demonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI.—(Continued)

"Stand by!" roars Nat. "It's a squall, dead astern and coming abeam!"

"Take her, 'Bije. You look out for them tops!"

"So Nat grabs the wheel and 'Bije tears forward and sends the two masts aloft on the jump. Zach was skipper, but all he done was race around and holler and trip over his own feet. It hit 'em fore they got even one tops! Cleared down. That one, the foretop! 'twas split to rags. The main tops! 'twas set, and when the squall struck, the rotten old topmast went by the board. 'Kerrash of! 'Course splinters flew like all possessed, and one of 'em, about a foot long, sailed past Nat's head, where he stood heavy in his whole weight on the wheel, and it hit right on the binnacle, smashing it to matches.

"Well, there they was, afloat, but with their upper rigging gone and the compass smashed flat. A howlin' no'wester blowin' and fog thick as ever. Zach was a whimpier, 'Bije an' old woman, Lafayette and Lulu was prayin' in the scupper—and that ain't no exercise they're used to, neither—'even 'Bije was might shook up and worried—'he says he was a fool. But Nat Hammond was as cool as a cucumber as the bottom of the sea.

"Then Nat suggests—anchored right in the deep hole inside the breakwater, as sure as I'm knee high to a marin spike!

"'Bije just stared at Hammond with his mouth open."

"'Nat' says he, 'You're a seaman, if I do say it. I thought I was a pretty good bay pilot, but I can't steer a vessel without a compass through a night as black as Pharaoh's Egypt, and in a thick fog besides, and land her square on top of her moorin's. If my hat wa'n't sloshin' around, thirty mile astern, I snuff it I wouldn't take it off to you this minute!"

The minister shut the door behind his departing guests. Then he went out into the kitchen, whither the housekeeper had preceded him. He found her standing on the back step, looking across the fields. The wash bench was unattended.

"'Hain't' mused Ellery thoughtfully, "that was a good story of Captain May's. This man Hammond must be a fine chap. I should like to meet him."

Keziah still looked away over the fields. She did not wish her employer to see her face—just then.

"I thought you would meet him," she said. "He was here a little while ago and I asked him to wait. I guess Ze's yarn was too much for him; he doesn't like to be praised."

"So? Was he here? At the Regular parsonage? I'm surprised."

"He and I have known each other for a long while."

"Well, I'm sorry he's gone. I think I should like him."

Keziah turned from the door.

"I know you would, she said."

CHAPTER VII.

In Which Captain Nat Picks Up a Derelict—

It is probable that John Ellery never fully realized the debt of gratitude he owed to the fog and the squall led to Captain Nat Hammond. Trumet, at ways hungry for a sensation, would have thoroughly enjoyed arguing and quarreling over the minister's visit to the Come-outer meeting, and during the fracas Keziah's parson might have been a good deal less watered. But Captain Nat's "Hain't' mused Ellery thoughtfully, "that was a good story of Captain May's. This man Hammond must be a fine chap. I should like to meet him."

Keziah still looked away over the fields. She did not wish her employer to see her face—just then.

"I thought you would meet him," she said. "He was here a little while ago and I asked him to wait. I guess Ze's yarn was too much for him; he doesn't like to be praised."

"So? Was he here? At the Regular parsonage? I'm surprised."

"He and I have known each other for a long while."

"Well, I'm sorry he's gone. I think I should like him."

Keziah turned from the door.

"I know you would, she said."

Keziah watched anxiously for a hint concerning her parson's visit in the rain with Grace, but she heard nothing, so congratulated herself that the secret had been kept. The tide at Trumet, on the bay side, goes out for a long way, leaving uncovered a mile and a half of flats bare and sandy or plashed on, bound out to where the fish weirs stood like webby fences, in the distance.

A cart, drawn by a plodding horse and with a single individual on its high seat, was moving out from behind the breakwater. Some fisherman driving out his weir, probably. The minister had been on the bar a considerable time before he began to think of returning to the shore. He was hungry, but was enjoying himself too well to mind. The flats were all his that morning. Only the cart and its driver were in sight and they were half a mile off. He looked at his watch, sighed, and reluctantly started to walk toward the town; he mustn't keep Mrs. Coffin's breakfast waiting too long.

The first channel he came to was considerably deeper, than when he forded it on the way out. He noticed this, but only vaguely. The next, however, was so deep that the water splashed in at the top of one of his boots. He did notice that, because though he was not wearing his best clothes, he was not anxious to wet his "other ones." The extent of his wardrobe was in keeping with the size of his salary.

And the third channel was so wide and deep that he saw at once it could not be forded, unless he was willing to plunge above his waist.

He hurried along the edge, looking for a shallower place, but found none. At last he reached the point of the flat, he was on and sat, to his dismay, that here was the deepest spot yet, a hole, scooped out by a current like a mill race. Turning, he saw, creeping rapidly and steadily together over the flat behind him, two lines of foam, one from each channel. His retreat was cut off.

He was in for a wetting, that was sure. However, there was no help for it, so he waded in. The water filled his boots there, it gurgled about his hips, and beyond, as he could see, it seemed to grow deeper and deeper. The current was surprisingly strong, he found it difficult to keep his footing in the soft sand. It looked as though he must swim for it, and to swim in that tide would be no joke.

Then from behind him, came a hail. He turned and saw moving toward him through the shallow water now covering the flat beyond the next channel, the cart he had seen leave the shore by the packet wharf, and later, on the outer bar. The horse was jogging along, miniature geysers spouting beneath its hoofs. The driver waved to him.

"Hold on, mate, he called. "Delay there. Stay where you are. I'll be alongside in a shake. Git dap, Janu-ry!"

Ellery waded back to meet this welcome arrival. The horse plunged into the next channel, splashed through it, and emerged dripping. The driver pulled the animal into a wall.

"Say," he cried, "in ermin' your way, better get aboard, hadn't you? There's kind of a heavy dew this mornin'—Whee, Murr!"

"'Bije or Janu-ry?" stopped with apparent willingness. The driver beamed down and extended a hand. The minister took it and was pulled up to the seat.

"What a," he panted, "I'm much obliged to you, I guess you saved me from a ducking. It nothing worse."

"The horse, a sturdy, red-bellied, set to whom all names seemed to be alike, picked up his feet and pounded them down. "Gum! Showers of spray flew about the heads of the pair on the seat."

"I'm not sure about that duckin'," commented the minister. "Thun! I guess they well be out of soundin' as we tackle that shik hole you was under-takin' to navigate. Let's try it a little further down."

Ellery looked his companion over.

"Well, he observed with a smile, from what I've heard of you, Captain Hammond, I rather guess you could navigate almost any water in this locality and in all sorts of weather."

The driver turned in surprise.

"So?" he exclaimed. "You know me, do you? That's funny. I was tryin' to locate you, but I ain't been able to. You ain't a trumettie, I'd bet on that."

"Yes, I am."

"That's all right, you don't tell me. Say, shipmate, you hurt my pride. I did think there wa'n't a soul that ever tried sand in the village that I couldn't name on sight, and give the port they hailed from and the names of their owners. But you've got me on my beam ends. And yet you knew me."

"Of course I did. Every body knows the man that brought the packet home."

The cart was afloat. The horse, finding wading more difficult than swimming began to swim.

"Now, I'm stripper again, sure enough," remarked Hammond. "Ain't ge'n' in seasick, are you?"

The minister laughed.

"No," he said.

"Good! she sleeps on a fair! even keel, considerin' her build. There she strikes! That'll do, Janu-ry, you needn't try for a record voyage. Walkin' more in your line than plain steamboat. We're over the worst of it now. Say! you and I didn't head for port any too soon, did we?"

"No, I should say not. I ought to have known better than to wait out there so long. I've been warned about this tide. I—"

"Ssh-sh! that's all right. Always glad to pick up a derelict, may be a canoe for salvage, you know. Here's the last channel and it's an easy one. There! now it's plain sailin' for dry ground."

The old horse, breathing heavily from his exertions, trotted over the stretch of yet uncovered flats and soon mounted the slope of the beach. The minister prepared to alight.

"Captain Hammond," he said, "you've been a good deal of help to me."

"No, I seldom do more'n once. There have been times when I'd just as soon cruise without too big letters along-side my figurehead."

"Well, my name is Ellery."

"Hey? What? Oh, ho! ho! ho! ho!"

He rocked back and forth on the seat. The minister's feelings were a bit hurt, though he tried not to show it.

"You mustn't mind my laughin'," explained Nat, still chuckling. "It ain't at you. It's just because I was wonderin' what you'd look like if I should meet you, and now— Ho! ho! You see, Mr. Ellery, I've heard of you, same as you said you'd heard of me."

The minister, who had jumped to the ground, looked up.

"Captain Hammond," he said, "I'm very glad indeed that I met you. Not alone because you helped me out of a bad scrape; I realize how bad it might have been and that—"

"Shsh, shh! Notin' at all. Don't be foolish."

"But I'm glad, too, because I've heard so many good things about you that I was sure you must be worth knowin'. I hope you won't believe I went to your father's meeting with any—"

"No, no! Jumpin' Moses, man! I don't find fault with you for that. I understand, I guess."

"Well, if you don't mind the fact that I am what I am, I'd like to shake hands with you."

Nat reached down a big brown hand.

"Same here," he said. "Always glad to shake with a chap as well recommended as you are. Yes, indeed, I mean it. You see, you've got a friend that's a friend of mine, and when she guarantees a man to be A. B., I'll ship him without any more questions."

Breakfast had waited nearly an hour when the minister reached home. Keziah, also, was waiting and evidently much relieved at his safe arrival.

"Sakes alive!" she exclaimed, as she met him at the back door. "Where in the world have you been, Mr. Ellery? You ain't wet again, are you?"

He told briefly the story of his morning's adventure. The housekeeper listened with growing excitement.

"You're a brave man," she interrupted. "Was the channel you plunged to swim the one at the end of the flat by the longest way leader?"

"Yes."

"My sakes! there's been two men drowned in that very place at half tide. And they were good swimmers. After this I shan't dare let you out of my sight!"

"So? Was it as risky as that? Why, Captain Hammond didn't tell me so. I must owe him more even than I thought."

CHAPTER VIII.

In Which the Parson and Mr. Pepper Declare Their Independence.

That afternoon, when dinner was over, the Reverend John decided to make a few duty calls. The first of these he determined should be on the Peppers.

The Pepper house was situated just off the main road on the lane leading over the dunes to the ocean and the light. It was a small building, its white paint dingy and storm beaten, and its little fenced-in front yard dotted thickly with clumps of silver-leaved saplings. A sign, nailed crookedly on a post, informed those seeking such information that within was to be found "Abishal G. W. Pepper, Tax Collector, Assessor, Boots and Shoes Repaired." And beneath this was fastened a shingle with the chalked notice, "Salt Hay for Sale."

The boot and shoe portion of the first sign was a relic of other days. Kyan had been a cobbler once, but it is discouraging to wait three or four weeks while the pair of boots one has left to be resoled are forgotten in a corner.

The minister walked up the dusty lane, lifted the Pepper gate, swung it back on its one hinge, and knocked at the front door. No one coming in answer to the knock, he tried again. Then from somewhere in the rear of the house came the sound of a human voice.

"Hi!" it called faintly. "Whoever you be, don't bust that door down. Come round here."

Ellery "came along" as far as the angle where the ell joined the main body of the house. So far as he could see every door and window was closed and there were no signs of life. However, he stepped to the door, a green-painted affair of boards, and ventured another knock.

"Don't start that poundin' again!" protested the voice. "Come round to 'other side where I be."

So around went the Reverend John, smiling broadly. But even on "other side" there was no one to be seen, and no door for that matter.

"Why," he exclaimed the voice, "I shan't Mr. Ellery. How'd you do? Glad to see you."

"Here I be at this window."

The Stomach Is the Target

Aim to make that strong—and digestion good—and you will keep well. No chain is stronger than its weakest link. No man is stronger than his stomach. With stomach disordered a train of diseases follow.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

makes the stomach healthy, the liver active and the blood pure. Made from forest roots, and extracted without the use of alcohol. Sold by druggists in liquid form at $1.00 per bottle for over 40 years, giving general satisfaction.

If you prefer tablets as modified by R. V. Pierce, M. D., these can be had of medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50c in stamps.

Probably Prize Grouch. A grouchy butcher, who had watched the price of porterhouse steak climb the ladder of fame, was deep in the throes of an unusually bad grouch when a would-be customer, 5 years old, approached him and handed him a penny.

"Please, mister. I want a cent's worth of sausage."

Turning on the youngster with a growl, he let forth this burst of good salesmanship:

"Go smell o' the hook!"—New Orleans Daily States.

Enterprising. In a section of Wasington, says Harper's Magazine, where there are a number of restaurants, one, enterprising concern has displayed in great illuminating letters, "Open all Night."

Next to it was a restaurant bearing with equal prominence the legend, "We Never Close."

Third in order was a Chinese laundry, in a little, low-framed, tumble-down hovel, and upon the front of this building was the sign in great scrawling letters:

"We Wake, Too."

No Strangers Allowed. Frank H. Hitchcock, the postmaster general of the United States, takes the deepest interest in even the smallest details of the postal service. One evening he was at the Union station in Washington, when he decided to go into one of the railway mail service cars to see how the mail matter was being handled. Being a tall man and very athletic, he easily swung himself from the platform into the car, Newspapers and Literature.

All this over emphasis of the un-meaning surface is due to a confusion of newspaper and literary standards, ends, aims. The word literary has come to suggest an absence of red-blood; spunners and knitters in the sun; the 35 cent magazine crowd; this is nonsensical, of course. In its elemental meaning literature is at least as stern a job as journalism, albeit the intention and function of the latter is merely to present things that happen, of the former to volatilize such material into hovering and potent meanings, to strike the rock and raise a spirit that is life.

Poor Spelling as a Lure.

The critical eye of a conscientious orthographer was attracted by the sign above a Third Avenue luncheon, and he went in to set the proprietor right. "Yes," said the luncheon man, "I know 'luncheon' is wrong, but you see that sign attracts a lot of business. I don't care if it's wrong,
I want to teach me how to spell and after they come they usually stop long enough to order something."

Bathing in Mexico.

Travelers through Mexico usually are much interested in the queer old-time bath tubs which are used in many parts of that country. When the weather is hot the pools and streams absorb some of the general warmth. Therefore, bathers go to the springs where the water is sure to be cool. At these springs one often will find a tub or small bathing pool, hollowed out of the rock. Some of the wealthier Mexicans have these great stone tubs brought into their houses. They are kept cool with running water.

When Men Marry.

That's what a man wants in a wife, mostly; he wants to make sure of one fool as'll tell him he's wise. But there's some men can do without that; they think so much of themselves already—and that's how it is there's old bachelors.—George Elliot.

MADE UP OF MIXED RACES

Similarity Between French and American Nations Is Accounted For in That Way.

A notable French visitor speaks with surprise of the many points of similarity between the French people and the Americans.

He is merely making the obverse of a discovery which has puzzled many thousands of American travelers. The French and American peoples, with all their manifest differences, are oddly like each other in many ways.

Perhaps the explanation lies in the fact that both peoples are compounded of many and distinct races, fused together in a single nationality.

The mixture of races which has gone on in America is known to all. But an American is prone to forget that a similar mixture has been in progress for a much longer time in France.

Three great races, Teutonic, Celtic and Latin, are represented today in the population of France.

Twenty nationalities have fused to make the French nationality. A dozen tribes of Gauls, the Romans, Franks, Burgundians, Normans, and others, literally too numerous to mention, have been mixed and melted together to form France.

Similar mixtures produce similar results. That would appear to be the formula for the resemblances between France and America.

Presumably Hard to Find

If Actions Go for Anything, Young Man Is Still Looking for That Envelope.

This happened in a crowded subway express train the other night.

An old man boarded the train at the Fourteenth street station and clung to a strap in front of a young woman who was seated. As none of the men showed a disposition to let the old man sit down, the young woman arose and offered her seat to him.

Before he could sit down a younger man slid into the vacant seat. The young woman was confused, but only for a minute. She leaned down slightly and said to the man in the seat:

"You dropped an envelope on the platform, sir."

The man jumped up and elbowed his way to the platform. Half a minute's search failed to reveal the supposed envelope. The man returned to where the young woman was standing and said:

"Say, lady, where is that envelope I can't find it out there?"

"That envelope," replied the young woman, "is in the same place your manners are."

The young man understood and faded from view. The old man got the seat, while the people in the vicinity looked, listened and laughed.—New York Times.

German Cures.

In Germany one finds all kinds of cures. Every enterprising town has one. Often the cure house is the finest public building in the city. A German talks of going to his cure as an American of going to his vacation.

There are milk cures and mud cures, wind cures and water cures, mountain cures and surf cures; but my choice is the forest cure.

Not only does it best please my personal taste but I notice that it gets the most serious cases—those where radical and heroic cures are needed. First of all there are the tuberculosis patients strewn about on their cots under the pungent shades of the Black Forest as about Dr. Trudeau's camp in the Adirondacks.

Then there are the devotees of indigestion and the nervous wrecks, bilious, alcoholic and society wrecks, drug fiends, bridge fiends and every body; that is everybody who can spend the time and money to come hither for the forest cure. Naturally in Germany, as in America, folks who have to work and support families cannot afford to be cured. They can't even afford the disease in the first place.—Woman's Home Companion.

Artisan Wells Long Known.

Chinese have obtained water through the means of artisan wells for over a thousand years. One of the most famous wells in existence is that of Grenelle in the outskirts of Paris, where the water is brought from a depth of 1,795 feet. It yields 516 1/2 gallons of water a minute. A well in Pease was sunk to the depth of 3,100 feet in the '70s.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

(By the Pastor.)

The subject for the morning service Sunday, will be "Our Country's Debt to Christ." The evening topic will be, "Units in Making Our Country God's Country."

The preaching services for next Sunday and the Sunday following will have for their central themes, "The Work of Home Missions. These services are in keeping with a program which is being carried on by the various Home Mission Boards, of the Protestant denominations of the country. The week of November 17 to 24 is being observed for the study of the social and religious problems of our land. Under the auspices of the Women's Missionary society three evenings of next week beginning Wednesday, will be given over to the important study of Home Missions. The subjects of these meetings will be as follows: Tuesday, "The Church and the Negro Problem"; Wednesday, "The Church and the Immigrant Question"; Thursday, "Some American Social Problems." These discussions should be both interesting and profitable. They are not only problems of vital importance to the church but of vital interest to the nation at large. Members of the church and community are earnestly invited to attend these meetings.

The Ladies' Missionary Society will hold a supper in the church parlors at a date mentioned in the immediate future.

Friday evening, November 15, promises to be a big night among the young people of the church. A "Young Peoples' Rally and Social" is to be held in the church parlors on that date. Plans are being made to make it a red letter occasion in Presbyterian circles. Committees on entertainment, refreshments, and invitations have been appointed. It is expected that the new Sunday school orchestra and the new Male Quartet together with others, will furnish music. The young people of this church are urged to keep this evening open for this event.

The subject for Sunday, November 24, (morning service) will be "Our Country's Opportunity for Christ." This will conclude the special services on Home Missions.

Most Costly Wood.

Cabole, a beautiful tree that grows on the west coast of Africa, and is also found on the island of St. Thomas, is said to furnish the most costly wood in the world. It somewhat resembles teak, and takes on a very high polish. Its price is quoted as about $3,500 a cubic meter.

Mrs. George Brown, Northville, Mich., says: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. For almost a year I suffered from kidney complaint. I had acute pains across my back and hips and the kidney secretions were unnatural, showing that my kidneys were disordered. Often at night the muscles in my back contracted and the pain was so terrible that I was obliged to get up and walk the floor. I had often heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and finally I had my husband procure a supply at Murdock Bros. Drug Store. They soon brought relief and I continued taking them until my condition had improved in every way. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other sufferers from kidney complaint."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

On the refusal of Spinks to do this, the marshal was called and he was arrested. He was taken to the County Jail in Detroit the first of the week. Undoubtedly he will be given a heavy sentence as he was released from a previous offence on a suspended sentence.

He Was an Obliging Landlord. I read a story in the Hotel Gazette which illustrates the obliging landlord of today. A man was stopping at a little seaside resort kept by a German. One day the guest went into the ocean to bathe and got beyond his depth. He couldn't swim, and as he struggled he gave a loud cry for help. The German landlord, hearing the cry, came out on the veranda, and saw his guest just disappearing beneath the waves, and as he sank he threw up one despairing hand with fingers outstretched. The landlord went back into the house and brought out five beers—Simeon Ford.

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is supposed to have died of a heart attack, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Ryan Rogers, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused. Capt. Elinor, a leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet. Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting. Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace, Ellery's fiancée, for her guardian and Ellery's fiancée, her home in the rain.

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)
Ellery stood still in the rain and watched her. He saw her pass the lighted windows and open a door into the yellow radiance she flashed and disappeared. A minute more and the bulky form of Eben Hammond, lantern in hand, was walking on his head and his shoulders working themselves into an oblique coat, burst out of the door and hurriedly limped down toward the shore. On the threshold, framed in light, stood his ward, gazing after him. And the minister gazed at her. From the bay came the sound of oars in rowlocks. A boat was approaching the wharf. And suddenly from the boat came a hail.
"Halloo! Aloy, dad! Is that you?"
There was an answering shout from the wharf; a shout of joy. Then a rattle of oars and a clamor of talk. And Grace still stood in the doorway, waiting.
The lantern bobbed up the slope. As it reached the tavern gateway, the minister saw that it was now carried by a tall, active man, who walked with a seaman's stride and roll. Captain Eben was close beside him, talking excitedly.

They entered the yard.
"Grace! Grace!" screamed Captain Eben.
"Grace! Grace! look who's come! Look!"
The tall man ran forward.
"Hi, Grace!" he cried in a deep, hearty voice. "Is that you? Ain't you got a word for your old measurer?"
The girl stepped out into the rain.
"Why, why, Nat!" she cried.
The big man picked her up bodily in his arms and carried her into the house. Captain Eben followed and the door closed.

John Ellery picked his way home, ward through the puddles, and the pouring rain.
He found Keziah in the sitting room, seated by the table, evidently writing a letter. She looked tired and grateful for her.

"Well!" she exclaimed as he entered. "I guess you're soaked now, sir. There's a light in your room. Take off your wet things and throw 'em down to me, and I'll dry 'em in the kitchen. Better leave your boots here now and stand that umbrella in the sink. Two kettles on the stove; you'd better have something hot—glugger tea or something. I told you not to go out such a night as this. Where in the world have you been?"

The minister said he would tell her all about it in the morning. Just now he thought he had better go up and take off his wet clothes.
Keziah dipped her pen in the ink and went on with her letter.

"I enclose ten dollars," she wrote. "It is all I can send you now. More than I ought to afford. Goodness knows why I send anything. You don't deserve it. But while I live and you do I can't."
The minister called from the landing.

"Here is my coat," he said. "The cuffs and lower part of the sleeves are pretty wet. By the way, the package came in to-night. They didn't expect her so soon on account of the fog. There was a passenger aboard whom I think must be that Nathaniel Hammond you told me of."

Keziah's pen stopped. The wet coat struck the hall floor with a soft thump. The tick of the clock sounded loud in the room. A sheet of wind-driven rain lashed the windows.

"Did you hear?" called the minister. "I said that Nathaniel Hammond. Captain Eben's son, came on the packet. I didn't meet him, but I'm sure it was he. Er—Mrs. Coffin, are you there? Do you hear me?"
The housekeeper laid the pen down beside the unfinished letter.

"Yes," she said, "I hear you. Good-night."

For minutes she sat there, leaning back in her chair and staring at the wall. Then she rose, went into the hall, picked up the coat, and took it out into the kitchen, where she hung it on the clotheshorse by the back stove. After a while she returned to the table and took up the pen. Her face in the lamplight looked more tired and grave than ever.

CHAPTER V.

In Which Old Friends Meet.
When Ellery came down to breakfast the rain was over, the wind had gone down, and the morning sunshine was pouring in at the dining-room windows. Outside the lilacs were in bud, the bluebirds were singing, and there was a sniff of real spring in the air. The storm was at an end and yet the young minister was conscious of a troublesome feeling that, for him, it was just beginning.

However, he had determined, while dressing to make a clean breast of it to his housekeeper—a nominally clean breast, that is. So, as they sat opposite each other at the table, he began his confession. The muffins scorched in the oven and the coffeepot boiled over as he told his story, for Keziah was too much interested to think of trifles. Interested and astounded, for, since Come-Outers had been Come-Outers and the split in the society took place, no Regular minister had crossed the threshold of a seceder's dwelling, much less attended their services and walked home with a member of their congregation. She knew what this amazing procedure was likely to mean, if her parish did not.

"Well!" she exclaimed when the recital was finished. "Well!"
"I—I'm afraid I was too hasty," observed Mr. Ellery thoughtfully. "Perhaps it would have been wiser not to have done it."

"Perhaps 'twould. Yes, I wouldn't wonder a mite."
"It will be talked about some, I suppose. Don't you think so?"
At this moment one half of Trumet is talking about it and running out to tell the other half. I guess I'd better hurry up with this breakfast. We're going to have callers."

Strange to say, however, this prophecy of early morning visitors did not prove true. Nine o'clock, then, and no visitor came to the parsonage. Mrs. Coffin affirmed that she did not understand it. Where was Didama? Where Lavinia Pepper? Had the "Trumet Daily Advertiser" suspended publication?

At half past ten the gate slammed. Keziah peered from the window.
"Humph!" she ejaculated. "Here comes Elkanah and he's got storm signals set, by the looks. He's coming after you, Mr. Ellery."

"Very well," was the calm reply; "let him come."

"All right. Say, Mr. Ellery, it's none of my business, but I wouldn't say anything about your seeing Grace home. That's none of his business, either, or anybody else's."

The head of the parish committee stalked into the study and the door closed behind him. A rumble of voices in animated conversation succeeded.

Mrs. Coffin went out into the kitchen and resumed her business of making a dried apple pie.

She was looking down below the door, which opened outward and was swung partly back on its hinges from under the door projected a boot, a man's boot and one of ample size.

Keziah's cheeks, already red from the heat of the stove, reddened still more. Her lips twitched and her eyes sparkled.

"Humph!" she said. "They say you can tell the Old Scratch by his foot prints, even if you can't smell the sulphur. Anyhow, you can tell a Hammond by the size of his boots. Come out from behind that door this minute. Ain't you ashamed of yourself?"

The owner of the boot stepped forth from behind the door and seized her by both hands.

"Halloo, Keziah!" he cried joyfully. "My, but it's good to see you!"
"Halloo, Nat!" said Keziah heartily. "It's kind of good to see you, too."

The rest of him was in keeping with his boots. He was big and broad-shouldered and bearded. His face, above the beard, was tanned to a deep reddish brown, and the corners of his eyes were marked with dozens of tiny wrinkles. He was dressed in blue cloth and wore a wide-brimmed, soft felt hat. He entered the kitchen and tossed the hat into a corner.

"Hello, Keziah!" He cried, joyfully.

"Well!" he exclaimed. "Why don't you get surprised to see a feller? Here I've been cruisin' from the Horn to Barnegat and back again, and you act as if I'd just dropped in to fetch the cup of molasses I borrowed yesterday. What do you mean by it?"
"Oh, I heard you'd made port."

"Did, hey? That's Trumet, save pop. You ain't the only one I sneaked off across lots so to dodge the gang of neighbors that I know would be sailin' into our yard, the whole fleet loaded to the gunwale with questions. Wanted to see you first, Keziah."

Mrs. Coffin pulled forward one of the kitchen chairs. He seated himself on it and it groaned under his weight.

"Whew!" he whistled. "Never made to stand rough weather, was it? Well, ain't you glad?"
Keziah looked at him gravely.

"You know I'm glad, Nat," she said. "So? I hoped you would be, but I did want to hear you say it. Now you come to anchor yourself and let's have a talk. I've been countin' on it ever since we set tops'ls of Surinam."

The housekeeper took the other chair.

"I beg four, pardon, Keziah," he said. "I'm a dough head, that's a fact. I hadn't forgot about Sol, but I was so glad to be home again and to see dad and Grace and the old town and you that everything else flew out of my mind. Poor Sol! I liked him."

"He liked you, too. No wonder, considering what you did to—"

"Belay! Never mind that. Poor chap! Well, he's rid of his sufferin' at last. Tell me about it, if you can without bringin' all the trouble back too plain."

So she told him of her brother's sickness and death, of having to give up the old home, and, finally, of her acceptance of the housekeeper's position. He listened, at first with sympathy and then with suppressed indignation.

"By the jumpin' Moses!" he exclaimed. "And Elkanah was going to turn you out of house and home. The mean, pompous old—"

"Hush! hush, he's in there with Mr. Ellery."

"Who? Elkanah?"
"Yes; they're in the study."

"So he's talkin' to the new parson, hey? Bossin' him, too, I'll bet."

"I ain't so sure. Mr. Ellery's young, but he's got a mind of his own."

Captain Hammond chuckled and slapped his knee.

"Ho, ho!" he laughed. "I've been hearin' somethin' about that mind. Went to the chapel last night, I understand, and he had a set to Oh. I heard about it! Wish I might have been there."

"How does your father act about it?"
"Bout the way a red hot stove acts when you spill water on it, every time he thinks of the minister he sizzles. Ho, ho! I do wish I could have been there."

"What does Grace say?"
"Oh, she doesn't say much. I wouldn't wonder if she felt the way I do, though we both keep quiet. I'll tell you, between ourselves and the ship's pump, that I sort of glory in the young chap's punk."

"Good! So do I. I like him."

Her friend leaned forward.

"Keziah," he said earnestly, "there's no sense in your slavin' yourself to death here. I can think of a good deal pleasanter berth than that. Pleasant for me, anyhow, and I'd do my best to make it pleasant for you. You've only got to say the word and—"

"Well, then, if I can do it through another voyage?"
"Please don't. Not you know."

"No, I don't know."

"Well, perhaps you don't. But I know I like you, Nat. I count on you as the straightest, truest friend I've got, and I want to keep on countin' on you just that way. Mayn't I?"

"Course you can, Keziah. But—"

"Then don't say another word, please."

"Keziah, when you set your foot down you're pretty stubborn; but I've got somethin' of a foot myself. You remember you said so a few minutes ago. Hi, hum! Well, speakin' of old reminds me that I'm kind of worried about him."

"You are? Why? Isn't he well?"
"Pretty well, but he ain't strong, and he gets too excited over things like last night's foolishness. Grace tells me that the doctor says he must be careful or he'll drop off some of these days. He had a shock five or six years ago, a little one, and I've been anxious about him ever since."

"You mustn't worry. How did Grace look to you?"
"Like the harbor light on a stormy night. She's a brick, that girl, and gets prettier every minute. Wonder to me some of the young chaps down here don't carry her off by main strength. She'll make somebody a good wife."

"Um-hum. Have—have you ever thought of her that way yourself?"
"Keziah, that's enough of that. Are you and dad in partnership to get me spliced and out of the way? He was at me this mornin' along the same line. Don't say anything like that again, even in fun. You know why?"

"All right, all right. Now tell me about yourself. Have you had a good voyage? How do you like your owners? How did Zach Foster ever get the packet in through yesterday's fog?"

Zebedee Mayo, who was panting, and the exertion of his walk.
"Whew!" puffed Captain Zeb mopping his forehead. "How be you, Keziah? What? You ain't all alone? Thought you'd have a cabin full of gab machines by this time. Have they been and gone?"

"No, they haven't been. I—My land, my pie!"

She rushed into the kitchen and snatched the pastry from the oven. Her new caller followed her.

"So they ain't been, hey?" he said. "That's queer."

"Elkanah's here. He's in there with the minister now."

"He is? Givin' the young feller Har-Columnby, I cal'late. Well, how's the shant? He, he! When they told me how the minister passed old hop-and-go-fetich what was due him, at the chapel last night I zizz up and hoorayed tell my wife shift the windows. She said the neighbors all thought I was loony, anyhow, and I heedin't prove it. I got any funny bone. He's as solemn as a stuffed owl, and he'll—Well, I'm going to put my ear in. I'm parish committee, too, I cal'late, and I've got somethin' to say, even if I wa'n't christened Daniels Here goes!"

He headed for the study, but before he crossed the threshold of the kitchen, Ellery and his visitor came out into the dining room. Captain Elkanah's face was flushed, and he fledged the minister looked determined but calm.

"Aboy there, Elkanah!" hailed Zebedee cheerfully. "Mornin', Mr. Ellery. Been havin' officers' counsel, have you?"

"Good mornin', Captain Mayo," said the minister.

"Mornin', Zebedee," grunted Elkanah. "I have—hum—been discussin' the regrettable affair of last night with Mr. Ellery. I have tried—hum—um—to show him that respectable people of our society don't associate with Come-Outers, and that for a Regular minister to go to their meetings is something neither the congregation nor the parish committee approve of. No—er—hum—um—"

"Aboy there, Elkanah!" hailed Zebedee cheerfully.

"And I explained to Captain Daniels," observed the minister, "that I went there for what seemed to me good reasons, and as they did seem to me good at the time, I'm not ashamed of having gone. It was an honest mistake on my part and I may make more."

But the society—"began Elkanah. Captain Zeb interrupted him.

"Don't worry about the society, Mr. Ellery," he said with emphasis. "Nor about the parish committee, either. Great fishhook! the most of us are tickled to death over what you said to Eben Hammond. We think it's a mighty good joke. You didn't know of course, and what you did was done innocent. He! he! he! Did you lay him out, hey?"

"I think you'll find a good many of the society feel as I do, shocked and—hum—ha!—sorry. I'm surprised they haven't been here to say so."

"I expected them," remarked the minister.

"So did I," chimed in Captain Zeb. "But I cal'late to know why they ain't been. They're all too busy crownin' over the way Nat Hammond fetched the packet home last night. You ain't heard, Keziah, have you? Nor you Mr. Ellery? Well, I must tell you. Here's where I gain a lap on Didama Rogers. Seems the Deborah S.—that's the packet's name. Mr. Ellery—she hailed out of Boston night after last on the ebb, with a fair wind and sky clear as a bell. But they hadn't much more'n got outside of Minor's fore the fog shut down, thicker'n gruel for a sick man. The wind held till long toward mornin'; then she flattened to a dead calm. 'Bie Perry, the mate, he spun the yarn to me, and he said 'twas thick and flat as ever he se and kept gettin' no better fast."

They drifted along till noon time and then they was somewhere out in the bay, but that's about all you could say. Zach, he was stevin' and sputterin' like a pair of fired cels and La Fayette Gage and Emulous Peters—they're Denboro folks. Mr. Ellery, and about sixteen pints t'other side of account—they was the only passengers aboard except Nat Hammond, and they put in their time playin' high-low jack in the cabin. The lookout was forward tootin' a tin horn and his belterin' was the most excitin' thing going. After dinner—corned beef and cabbage—trust Zach for that, though it's next door to cannibalism to put cabbage in his mouth—after dinner all hands was on deck when Nat says: 'Hush!' he says. 'Don't I hear somethin'?"

"They listened, and then they all heard it—all 'cept Zach, who's deaf in his leftboard ear."

WESTERN CANADA'S PROSPERITY

NOT A BOOM, BUT DUE TO NATURAL DEVELOPMENT.

One of the largest banks in Holland has been doing a big business in Western Canada, and Mr. W. Westerman, the President, on a recent visit into the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, expressed himself as being much impressed with present conditions and prospects, and was convinced that the great prosperity of the Dominion was not a boom, but merely the outcome of natural developments.

Nor only has money been invested largely in Western Canada by the Holland Banks, but by those of Germany, France, as well as Great Britain. Not only are these countries contributing money, but they are also contributing people, hard headed, industrious farmers, who are helping to produce the two hundred million bushels of wheat and the three hundred million bushels of the other small grains that the Provinces of the West have harvested this season.

During the past fiscal year there came into Canada from the United States 133,710; from Austria Hungary 21,651; from Belgium 1,661; Holland 1,077; France 2,094; Germany 4,664; Sweden 2,394; Norway 1,692; and from all countries the immigration to Canada in that year was 354,237. From the United States and foreign countries the figures will be increased during the present year.

Most of these people have gone to the farms, and it is no far look to the time when the prophecy will be fulfilled of half a billion bushel crop of wheat in Western Canada. Advertisement.

Built Her Own Home.

Miss Frances Lyon of Westwood has the distinction of being the only woman in New England who lives in a house literally built with her own hands. Miss Lyon belongs to a club whose members are practicing the doctrine of going back to the farm. The club is limited to 40 members and owns property to the amount of $1,500 and about 75 acres of farming land not far from Westwood. Each member holds a deed to one acre and the balance of the land is held in common to be rented to any member who wishes to try farming on a larger scale.

House Plans Important.

The care in the home and all other forms of household work are greatly facilitated by right planning and the use of suitable materials for the construction and furnishing of the home. An adequate and convenient water supply and other conveniences are essential not only for comfort and for saving labor, but also from the standpoint of home hygiene.
