People in General Regret Mr. Murdock's Leaving.

At the close of the morning service at the Baptist church last Sunday the pastor, Rev. T. J. The church therefore, had no alter native, but to accept his resignation which it did with reluctance.

Many kind words of appreciation were spoken by the members of the congregation concerning the work done by Rev. and Mrs. Murdock and

Choose Neighbors With Home. "The subject of neighbors is one on which we are sensitive," writes Agnes Athol in an article on "Some Things That We Learned by Renting a House in the Suburbs," in which she advocates renting a house before you buy one in Suburban Life Magazine. "It is true that the people directly in our rear are charming in the social sense, but unfortunately, they spend but six months' time at home. On one side of us are some poor but honest neighbors, whose children have taught mine innumerable little phrases with which they startle us from time to time. 'My God! and I ain't got no—', and 'Come on, kids! do not exactly appeal to me. Perhaps I am un-democratic. But even the most altruistic would have to draw the line at a family of seven diagonally across, who never miss a chance to knock the baby down or make off with unwatched toys. Our resolution to surround our own back yard (when we shall own one) with a hedge offers some remedy; but what shall we do about the neighbor on the other corner, who has a rebellious cesspool?"

Why We Are Right-Handed. One of the professors at a well-known agricultural college has figured it out that if you are left-handed it is a sign that your ancestors were not good fighters.

"Most persons are right-handed," says he. "Only one in every twenty is left-handed. Why are people right-handed? They may have been born that way, it is true; but why?"

"Away back in the beginning the chief occupation of man was fighting. In battle he carried a shield in one hand and a weapon in the other. It was not much work to carry the shield, but the quick action required by the hand and arm which did the fighting soon developed that arm. It also developed the nerves and the half of the brain that governed the right side of the body. Those who shielded their left side—thus protecting the heart—were the ones who usually came out victorious. Down through the ages this selection continued, the right hand gradually becoming more proficient."

Ventilation Test. A single way to tell whether your room is properly ventilated is to place a wide-necked bottle of water into which you have put half an ounce of lime water, in the room, letting it remain uncovered over night. If in the morning the lime water is milk the ventilation is bad. If the lime water becomes milk on your covering the bottle mouth with your hand and shaking the vessel, the ventilation is not sufficiently good. If the lime water remains clear, the air of that room is pure.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Cannon Southern railway has issued $40,000,000 in bonds for contemplated improvements. Surgeons operated successfully on Wm. Lotmer, in Chicago, former United States senator for appendicitis. The Ovid branch of the County Y. M. C. A. has been organized and delegates will attend the conference at Grand Rapids. Kalamazoo county road commissioners have purchased a 22-acre farm which will be turned into a tile manufacturing plant. Thousands of hunters for deer in Massachusetts going into the woods wore red coats and caps as a protection against mistletoe on the part of the other hunters. The beginning of the White House round of dinners, given by the president for his official family and by members of the cabinet for President and Mrs. Taft, are planned. Edward Russell, a "lifer" from Otsewa county, an inmate of the prison since 1883, has escaped from Jackson prison. He had long been a "trusty." President Emeritus James B. Aigell will probably resume teaching work in the U. of M. this winter to lecture before the class in the international law. A company manufacturing powdered milk, a product widely used by bakers, has established a plant in Ovid. Skimmed milk is used in the manufacture of the powder, butter being a by-product. Marshall B. Lloyd, of Menominee, has invented a machine for making steel pipes and tubes. He starts a strip of metal into a machine and it is formed into a tube without the intervention of a human hand. The citizens of Utica have decided to form a Sherman association to erect a memorial on the parkway, marking the scene of Mr. Sherman's last public appearance, when he was notified of his renomination as the republican candidate for vice president. This winter the Northwestern Michigan Horticultural society will be formed in Traverse City, embracing the territory north of Baldwin to Petoskey. The new legislature will be asked to divide the present appropriation between the old and new societies. The Boyne City, Garford & Alpena railroad is again tied up with an injunction issued by the court at the request of a property owner, who has not agreed to the amount he shall receive for a right of way. The matter will be taken to the supreme court.

STATE BRIEFS

August 1st is the third time in the history of Kalamazoo to see the same man in a cornfield this season. The U. S. agricultural department sent out 14,000,000 ropes of soda mops the 1st year, free and sold $16,000 worth. John P. Riley, socialist member of the charter commission, of Kalamazoo, presented a minority report protesting against the adoption of the new charter, which he declares makes the mayor a dictator. Nine hundred deer licenses have been issued in Dickinson county to date. State Game Warden Oates estimates that there are 10,000 hunters in the upper peninsula. Governor Glascock declared martial law in the Cabin Creek and Point Creek sections of the Kenawha coal field in West Virginia, to maintain order during a strike. So delighted is David Urquh over the result of the election that he has just announced the gift of one 2-year-old steer to the democrats in the Niles end of Berrien county for a barometer. "Shipper Jim" Cushman, who escaped from Jackson prison so many times, says Gov. Osborn thought he deserved freedom had paroled him, is "in a game" at Marquette for carrying burglars' tools. The good roads commission of Berrien county is considering a way to refund $4,000 of road tax money to three townships which built good roads before the present state reward system became effective. Upper peninsula loggers and jobbers are experiencing great difficulty in securing men to work in the woods. The highest wages ever paid in the history of the logging industry seems to be no inducement to the men. Claud S. Carne, of Kalamazoo, general democratic candidate for congress, has fled a protest against the returns for certain precincts being canvassed, which gave majorities for congressman J. M. C. Smith's republicanism. Some insurance companies furnishing indemnity to employers under the employers' liability act are issuing policies which do not conform to the law and which are extremely detrimental to the employe, declare members of the industrial commission. Suit has been started against the city of Port Huron by the officials of the Port Huron & Northern railway to recover $694 which was paid to the city under protest, it is claimed, to cover the expenses of the special election to submit a proposition to grant the railway company a franchise.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR ARMISTICE BROKEN

TURKEY REJECTS BULGARIANS' CONDITIONS; AND NEGOTIATIONS ARE BROKEN BY THE TURKS.

10,000 CASES OF CHOLERA IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Fifty Thousand Turks and Bulgarians Have Been Killed or Wounded in Fighting Around Constantinople.

There are at least 10,000 cases of cholera in and around Constantinople today. The pestilence is scourging the army and the refugees who continue to flock into the city from the war-raged section north of the city. The mosques, including historic St. Sophia, have been turned into hospitals and hotels for the refugees. Small spaces are reserved for religious ceremonies. In the northern suburbs the sound of booming cannon can be heard all day and night, telling of the fierce battle which is going on at the city's threshold. All negotiations between Turkey and the Balkan league have been broken off, according to dispatches received from Constantinople by a prominent member of the diplomatic corps. It gives no details but intimates that Turkey rejected the conditions set forth by Bulgaria and her allies as the preliminary to the end of hostilities. Fifty thousand Turks and Bulgarians have been killed or wounded in the fighting along the Tebatatja lines outside of Constantinople.

EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS.

Wilson Announces Call for Extra Session Before April 15.

"I shall call congress together in extraordinary session not later than April 15. I shall do this not only because I think that the pledges of the party ought to be redeemed as promptly as possible but also I know it to be in the interest of business that all uncertainty as to what the particular items of tariff legislation to be should be removed as soon as possible." - WOODROW WILSON. President-elect Wilson took the first important step towards carrying out his pledges to the people, when he announced he would call an extra session of congress, not later than April 15, instead of waiting six months for the regular session. The president-elect gave out his statement before embarking on his vacation for two reasons. First, he declared in his statement, he desired to remove any uncertainty that might be injurious to the business interests of the country. The second reason was purely selfish, he remarked. He wants to spend his vacation in quiet and peace. He realized, he said, that unless the question was settled at this time, he would be besieged continually for a definite statement on the subject. Simultaneously with the issuance of his statement the president-elect gave permission to say he is to spend his vacation in Bermuda. He sailed on the steamship Bermudian Saturday afternoon. The Bermudian is booked solidly and the president-elect has been assured that there are no politicians among the passengers. The president-elect will spend four weeks on the island, returning to New York, Dec. 16. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Wilson and the Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson. Miss Margaret Wilson, the elder daughter, will remain in New York to continue her study of music.

Schrank Declared Insane.

John Schrank, the Yavarian who attempted to assassinate Theodore Roosevelt, has been found insane by five alienists appointed to examine him. Their complete report will be made to Judge Backus. The decision of the commission is unanimous and recommends that Schrank be sent to an asylum for the criminal insane.

Suspected Slayer of Boys Is Held.

Chief Reegan, of the Buffalo police department received a telegram from Sheriff Frank Triton of Whitestown, N. J., that he had arrested there J. Frank Hickey, wanted in connection with the death of Joseph Josephs, the 7-year-old Luckawanna boy whose dismembered body was found buried in a sewer vault Saturday.

Returns show that in Osceola county the names of Herbert Baker, county moose candidate for auditor general, and Julius B. Kirby, candidate for attorney general, were reversed. This is the third county in which the same mistake was made.

Jackson Gorgy, an aged resident of Allegan, was seriously burned when a gasoline stove exploded. He lived alone in a portion of the old Allegan house, one of the oldest buildings in the city. The building was badly damaged and a garage was ruined.

STATE BRIEFS.

A jury convicted Chester E. Bricker, a Port Huron druggist, of selling liquor to a minor. It is expected that the druggist will appeal the case to the supreme court.

Circuit Judge Walter H. North is likely to be petitioned to call a grand jury in Calhoun county to investigate an alleged combine of Battle Creek coal dealers.

The list of appointees of Gov.-elect Ferris will probably contain the name of James Melme, of Adrian, for state dairy and food commissioner. Helme has served under Commissioner Dame.

Arthur Fairchild, of Cadillac, was shot while deer hunting near Wolf lake with John Ballard. Ballard was striking a match on the safety device of his rifle when the gun discharged, the shot entering Fairchild's right thigh.

At the school in district No. 3, of Mills township, Midland township, Midland county, a giant buck poked his head through the door of the school room about recess time and put a stop to recitation. He then calmly trotted away to the woods.

Drain Commissioners D. E. Birdsall, of Barry county; Frank O. Miller, of Ionia county; and Jesse Pickett, of Kent county, are seeking to push through the proposed Little Thorzapple drain, which will reclaim for cultivation about 3,000 acres of land.

The SABLE LORCHA

CHAPTER I.

The Vanishing Portrait.

Evelyn Grayson, meeting me on the old Boston Post Road, between Greenwich and Stamford, gave me a message from her uncle. That is the logical beginning of this story; though to make everything quite clear from the start, it may be better to hark back a few months, to the day on which Evelyn Grayson and I first met.

Then, as now, we were each driving our own car; she a great sixty horse-power machine, all glistering pale yellow; and I, a compact six-cylinder racer, of dull, dusty gray. But we were not on any such broad, roomy thoroughfare as the Boston Post Road. On the contrary we were short-cutting through a narrow, rough lane, beset by stone walls and interrupted at intervals by a series of sharp and treacherous angles.

I know I shall never forget the momentary impression I received. Out of the golden sunlight, it seemed to me, there had emerged suddenly a tableau of Queen Titania on a topaz throne—the fairest Queen Titania in imagination ever conjured—and I, in my mad, panting speed was about to crash into the gauzy fabric of that dream creation and read it with brutal, torturing, onrush of relentless, hard-driven nickel steel. I take no credit to myself for what I did. Volition was absent. My hands acted on an impulse above and beyond all tardy mental guidance. For just a flashing instant the gray nose of my car rose before me, as in strenuous assault it mounted half way to the ceiling of the roadside wall. I felt my seat dart away from beneath me, was conscious of my body in swift, unsupported aerial flight, and then—but it is idle to attempt to set down the conglomerate sensations of that small fraction of a second. When I regained consciousness, Queen Titania was kneeling in the dust of the lane beside me—a very distressed and anxious Queen Titania, with wide, startled eyes, and quivering sympathetic lips—and about us were a half dozen or more of the vicinal country folk.

Between that meeting in mid-May and this meeting on the old Boston Post Road in mid-September, there had been others, of course; for Queen Titania, whose every-day name, as I have said, was Evelyn Grayson, was the niece and ward of my nearest neighbor, Mr. Robert Cameron, a gentleman recently come to reside on what for a century and more had been known as the old Townsbury Estate, extending for quite a mile along the Connecticut shore of Long Island Sound in the neighborhood of Greenwich.

The intervening four months had witnessed the gradual growth of us near an approach to intimacy between Cameron and myself as was possible considering the manner of man that Cameron was. By which statement I mean to imply naught to my neighbor's discredit. He was in all respects admirable—a gentleman of education and culture, widely traveled, of exalted ideals and noble principles to which he gave rigid adherence. But—I was about to qualify this by describing him as reserved and taciturn. I fear, though, to give a wrong impression. He was scarcely that. There were moments, however, when he was unresponsive, and he was never demonstrative. He had more poise than any man I know. He allowed you to see just so much of him, and no more. At times he was almost stubbornly reticent. And yet, in spite of these qualities, which appeared to be cultivated rather than inherent, he gave repeated evidence of a nature at once so simple and kindly and sympathetic as to command both confidence and affection.

To the progress of my intimacy with Evelyn there had been no such important impediment. She was fearlessly outspoken, with a frankness born of unspoiled innocence; barely six weeks having elapsed between her graduation from the tiny French convent of Sainte Barbe near Paris and our perilous encounter in that contracted, treacherous, yet blessed little Connecticut lane. And she possessed, moreover, a multiplicity of additional charms, both of person and disposition—charms too numerous indeed to enumerate, and far too sacred to discuss. From which it may rightly be inferred that we understood each other, Evelyn and I, and that we were already considerably beyond the state or condition of mere formal acquaintance.

It was no Queen Titania who now came gliding to a stand beside me on the broad, level, well-oiled highway. Under a double row of arching elms it was no goddess fair, but Hebe, the Goddess of Youth, with creamy skin and red lips and a lilting melody of voice.

"What ho, Sir Philip! We are well met!"

And then she told me that her Uncle Robert had telephoned for me, leaving a message with my maid, bidding me to come to him at my earliest leisure.

"Why not come for dinner?" she added; and her eyes gave accent to her words.

"But you?" I queried, for her car was headed in the opposite direction.

"I am going alone to Norton; I have a hamper in the tonneau for that poor O'Malley family. I shall be back in time. We dine at half-past seven, you know. You'll come?"

"Of course I'll come," I answered her. I think she must have heard more, in my voice than the simple words, for her lids drooped, for just a breath, and the color flamed sudden below her lowered lashes.

"But, after all, I saw very little of her that evening. It is true that she sat on my right at table, pleasantly, youthfully beautiful in the softy tinted light which filtered through the pink and silver, fluted candle-shades; but the atmosphere of the dinner was tinged by a vague, unreasoning constraint as from some ominously brooding yet undefinable influence, which overhung the three of us. And when the coffee and liqueurs were served, employing some slender pretext for her going, she bade us good-night, and left us, not to return.

In justice to Cameron, I must add that he appeared least affected by—and certainly in no wise responsible for—the pervading infestivity. He had been, indeed, rather less demure than was often his wont, chatting with almost glibety concerning Evelyn's new role of Lady Bountiful and of her Norton beneficiaries. As for the subject upon which he desired to consult me, it had not been so much as mentioned; so in looking back, it seems impossible that matters of which neither Evelyn nor I was at the time informed could have exerted an effect, save through Cameron's undetected, subconscious inducement.

Even after his niece had withdrawn, Cameron continued for a while to discuss with me topics of general and public, rather than personal, import. He spoke, I remember, of a series of articles on "The Commercial Resources of the United States," the publication of which had just begun in The Week, of which I am owner and editor; and though I flattered at first that it might be in this connection he wished to consult me, I very soon ascertained that he was merely bringing a statement contained therein as a text for certain views of his own on the conservation and development of the country's timber supply.

Meanwhile my curiosity grew keener. It was natural, I suppose, that I should fancy Evelyn involved in some way. In fact I then attributed the depression during dinner to her knowledge of what her uncle and guardian purposed to say to me. Likewise I found in this conception the reason for her sudden and unusual desertion. Henceforth when I had dined here Evelyn had remained with us while we smoked our cigarettes, leaning us at length to the music room, where for a glad half-hour the rich melody of her youthful sweet contralto voice mingled in pleasing harmony with her own piano accompaniment.

And while I vainly made effort to imagine wherein I might have laid myself open to the disapproval of this most punctilious of guardians—for I expected nothing less than a studiosely polite reference to some shortcoming of which I had been unwittingly guilty—I momentarily lost track of my host's discourse. Emerging from my abstraction it was with a measure of relief that I heard him saying:

"I think you told me once, Clyde, that you rather prided yourself on your ability to get a line on one's character from his handwriting. That's why I telephoned for you this afternoon. I have received an anonymous letter."

He was leaning forward, a little constrainedly, his left hand gripping the arm of his chair, the fingers of his right hand toying with the stem of his gold-rimmed Bohemian liqueur glass.

"An anonymous letter!" I repeated, with a deprecatory smile. "Anonymous letters should be burned and forgotten. Surely, you're not bothering about the writer?"

I wish I could put before you an exact reproduction of Cameron's face as I then saw it; those rugged outlines, the heritage of Scottish ancestry, softened and refaced by a brilliant intellectuality; the sturdy chin and square jaw; the heavy underlip meeting the upper in scarcely perceptible curve; the broad, homely nose; the small, but alert, gray eyes, shining through the round lenses of his spectacles; the high, broad, sloping, white brow and the receding border of dark brown, slightly grizzled hair. That, superficially, was the face. But I saw more than that. In the visage of one naturally brave I saw a battle waged behind a mask—a battle between courage and fear; and I saw fear win.

Then the mask became opaque once more, and Cameron, giving me a smile for a smile, was replying:

"There are anonymous letters and anonymous letters. Ordinarily your method is the one I should pursue. In month, I may say that when, about a month or so ago, I received a communication of that character, I did almost precisely what you now advise. Certainly I followed one-half of your prescription; I forgot the letter; though, for lack of fire in the dog days, I did not burn it, but thrust it into a drawer with an accumulation of advertising circulars."

My apprehension lest Evelyn and I were personally affected had been by now quite dissipated. It was perfectly apparent to me that Cameron alone was involved; yet my anxiety was none the less eager. Already my sympathy and co-operation were enlisted. I could only hope that he had mentally exaggerated the gravity of the situation, yet my judgment of him was that his inclination would be to err in the opposite direction.

"And now something has happened to recall it to your memory?"

"Something happened," very shortly after my receipt, he replied. "Something very puzzling. But in spite of that, I was inclined to treat the matter as a bit of clever chicanery, devised for the purpose, probably, of extortion. As such, I again put it from my thoughts; but today I received a second letter, and I admit I am interested. The affair has features which make it, indeed, uncommonly perplexing."

"I fear my imagination was sluggish. Although, in spite of his dissemblance, I saw that he was strongly moved by these happenings, I could fancy no very terrifying concomitants of the rather commonplace facts he had narrated. For anonymous letters I had ever held scant respect. An unwhispered enemy, I argued, is admittedly a coward. And so I was in danger of growing impatient."

"When the second letter came," he continued, bringing his left hand forward to join his right on the dazzling white ground of the table's damask, "I searched among the circulars for the first, and found it. I want you to see them both. The writing is very curious—I have never seen anything just like it—and the signature, if I may call it that, is still more singular. On the first letter, I took it for a blot. But on the second letter occurs the same black blot or smudge of identical outline."

Of course I thought of the Black Hand. It was the natural corollary, seeing that the newspapers had been giving us a surfeit of Black Hand threats and Black Hand outrages. But, somehow, I did not dare to voice it. To have suggested anything so odd would have been to offer him offense.

And when, at the next moment, he drew from an inner pocket of his evening coat two thin, wax-like sheets of paper and passed them to me, I was glad that I had kept silence. For the letters were no roughe, rude scrawls of an Ulsterite Mafia or Camorra. In phrasology as well as in penmanship they were impressively unique.

"If you don't mind," Cameron was saying, "you might read them aloud."

He rose and switched on a group of electric wall lights at my back, and I marked for the hundredth time his physique—his towering height, his powerful shoulders, his leanness of hip and sturdy straightness of limb. He did not look the forty years to which he confessed.

One of the long French windows which gave upon the terrace stood ajar, and before resuming his seat Cameron paused to close it, dropping over it the looped curtains of silver gray velvet that matched the walls.

In the succeeding moment the room was ghostly silent; and then, breaking against the stillness, was the sound of my voice, reading:

"That which you have wrought shall in turn be wrought upon you. Take warning therefore of what shall happen on the seventh day hence. As sun follows sun, so follows all that is decreed. The ways of our God are many. On the righteous he showers blessings; on the evil he pours misery."

That was the first letter. The second began with the same sentence—"That which you have wrought shall in turn be wrought upon you."

But there, though the similarity of tenor continued, the verbal identity ceased. It went on:

"Once more, as earnest of what is decreed, there will be shown unto you a symbol of our power. Precaution cannot avail. Fine words and a smiling countenance make no virtue."

And beneath each letter was the strange silhouette which Cameron had mentioned.

It is difficult for me to convey the most meager idea of the emotional influence which these two brief communications exerted. They seemed to breathe a grim spirit of implacable Nemesis far in excess of anything to be found in the euphemism of the written words.

When I had finished the reading of them aloud, Cameron, leaning far back in his chair, sat silently thoughtful, his eyes narrowed behind his glasses, but fixed apparently upon the lights behind me. And so, reluctant to interrupt his reverie, I started to read them through again slowly, this time to myself, fixing each sentence indelibly in mind as I proceeded. But before I had quite come to the end, my companion was speaking.

"Well," he said, "and the light cheeriness of his tone was not only in marked contrast with his grave absorption of a moment before, but in jarring discord with my own present mood. 'Well? What do you make of them?'"

My annoyance found voice in my response.

"Cameron," I begged, "for God's sake be serious. This doesn't seem to me exactly a matter to be merry over. I don't want to alarm you, but somehow I feel that these—and I shook the cranking, wax-like sheets, that these cannot be utterly ignored."

"But they are anonymous," he retorted, not unjustly. "Anonymous letters should be burned and forgotten."

"There are anonymous letters and anonymous letters," I gave him back in turn. "These are of an unusually convincing character. Besides, they—"

And then I paused. I wished to tell him of that elusive, encompassing, sinister portent which had so impressed me; of that malign foreboding beyond anything warranted by the words; but I stumbled in the effort at expression. "Besides," I started again, and ended lamely, "I don't like the look and the feel of them."

And now he was as serious as I could wish.

"Ah!" he cried, leaning forward again and reaching for the letters. "You have experienced it, too! And you can't explain it, any more than I? It is something that grips you when you read, like an icy hand, hard as steel, in a glove of velvet. It's always between the lines, reaching out, and nothing you can do will stay it. I thought at first I imagined it, but the other day I have read, the more I have felt its clutch. The letters of themselves are nothing. What do you suppose I care for veiled threats of that sort? I'm big enough to take care of myself. Clyde, I'm not perilled about every possible guile, in every part of the world and I've never really known fear. But this—this is different. And the worst of it is, I don't know why. I can't for the life of me make out what it is in a fright of."

He had gone very pale and his strong, capable hands, which toyed with the two letters, quivered and twitched in excess of nervous tension.

Then, with a finger pointing to the blot-stain at the bottom of one of the sheets, he asked:

"What does that look like to you?"

I took the letter from him, and scrutinizing the wax figure with concentrated attention for a moment, ventured the suggestion that it somewhat resembled a boat.

"A one-masted vessel, square-rigged," he added, in elucidation.

"Exactly."

"Now turn it upside down."

I did so.

"Now what do you see?"

"The head of a man wearing a helmet."

"The resemblance was very marked."

"A straw helmet, apparently," he amplified; "such as is worn in the Orient. And yet the profile is not that of an Oriental. Now look at your vessel again." And once more I reversed the sheet of paper.

"Can it be a Chinese junk?" I asked.

"It might be a sailing proa or banca," he returned, "such as they use in the South Pacific. But whatever it is, I can't understand what it has to do with me or I with it."

I was still studying the black daub, when he said:

"But you haven't told me about the handwriting. What can you read of the character of the writer?"

"Nothing," I answered, promptly.

"It is curious penmanship, as you say—heavy and regular and upright, with some strangely formed letters; especially the f's and the p's; but it tells me nothing."

"But I thought—" he began.

"That I boasted? So I did. When one writes as one habitually writes it is very easy. These letters, however, are not in the writer's ordinary hand. The writing is as artificial as though you, for example, had printed a note in Roman characters—were they addressed in the same hand?"

"Precisely."

"What was the post-mark?"

"They bore no post-mark. That is another strange circumstance. Yet they were with my mail. How they came there I have been unable to ascertain. The people at the post office naturally deny that they delivered anything unstamped, as these were; and Barrie, the lad who fetches the letters, has no recollection of these. Nor has Checkabeedy, who sorts the mail here at the house. But each of them lay beside my plate at breakfast—the first on the fourteenth of August, the second, this morning, the fourteenth of September."

"And they were not delivered by messenger?"

"So far as I can learn, no."

"It is very odd," I commented, with feeble banality.

I took the letters from his hands once more, and held them in turn between my vision and the candle-light, hoping, perchance, to discover a watermark in the paper. But I was not rewarded.

"You examined the envelopes carefully, I presume?" was my query as I returned the sheets to the table.

"More than carefully," he answered. "But you shall see them, if you like. I found no trace of any identifying mark."

Thus far he had made no further mention of the "puzzling happening" which followed the receipt of the first letter, and in the interest provoked by the letters themselves I had foreborne to question him; but now, as the words "seventh day hence" fell again under my eye, standing out, as it were, from the rest of the script which lay upturned on the table before me, I was conscious of a stimulated concern, and so made inquiry.

"I wish you would tell me, first, whether anything really did occur on the seventh day."

"I was coming to that," he replied; but it seemed to me that prompt though his response was, there was a shade of reluctance in his manner.

Then he rose, abruptly, and saying: "Suppose we go into my study, Clyde," led the way from the dining room, across the great imposing, grained and fretted hall to that comparatively small mahogany and green symphony wherein he was wont to spend most of his indoor hours. It was always a rather gloomy room at night, with its high dark ceiling, its heavy and voluminous olive tapestry hangings, wholly out of keeping, it seemed to me, with the season—and its shaded lights confined to the vicinity of the massive, polished, and gilt-ornamented writing table of the period of the First Empire. And it impressed me now, in conjunction with Cameron's promised "revelation," as more than ever grim and awesome.

I remember helping myself to a cigar from the humidor which stood on the antique cabinet in the corner near the door. I was in the act of lighting it when Cameron spoke.

"I want you to sit in this chair," he said, indicating one of sumptuous upholstery which stood beside the writing table, facing the low, long bookcases lining the opposite wall.

I did as he bade me, while he remained standing.

"Do you, by any chance," he asked, "remember a portrait which hung above the bookshelves?"

I remembered it very well. It was a painting of myself, some years back. But now my gaze sought it in vain.

"Certainly," I answered. "It hung there," I replied.

"Quite right. Now I want you to go across the shelf top. You see how crowded it is."

It was indeed crowded. Bionza busts and statuettes, paintings and gilt trophies in silver-framed photographs, a score of cards and ends, were crisscrossed the world over. There was scarcely an inch of space unoccupied. I had frequently observed this plethora of ornament and resented it. It gave to that part of the room the appearance of a curio shop. When I had noted my ascent, he went on:

"On the afternoon of Friday, August twenty-first seven days after the receipt of that first letter, I was sitting where you are sitting now. I was reading, and deep, interested. I had put the letter, as I told you, entirely out of my mind. I had forgotten it, absolutely. That seventh day business I had regarded—if I regarded it at all—as idle vaporing. That this was the afternoon of the seventh day did not occur to me until afterwards. I recall that I paused in reading to ponder a paragraph that was not quite clear to me, and that while in contemplation I fixed my eyes upon that portrait. I remember that, because it struck me, then; that the flesh tints of the face had grown muddy and that the thing would be better for a cleaning. I recall, too, that at that moment, the little clock, yonder, struck three. I resumed my reading; but presently, another statement demanding cogitation, I lowered my book, and once more my eyes rested on the portrait. But now he paused and leaned forward towards me, speaking with impressive emphasis. "Because," he repeated, "there were no flesh tints there. Because there was no need nor face there!"

I sat up suddenly, open-mouthed, speechless. Only my wide eyes made question.

"Cut from the canvas," he went on, in lowered voice, "clean and slarp from crown to collar. And the hands of the clock pointed to twelve minutes past three."

Reindeer in Alaska Increase.

From 1892 to 1902 the United States Bureau of Education introduced 1,280 European reindeer into Alaska at a time when the natives were threatened with starvation. At the present time these herds have increased to a total of 33,629 head. Their meat is in great demand by both whites and natives, and their skins supply the best winter clothing. It is expected that the exportation of reindeer meat will soon become an important industry. Above all, the reindeer has proved a most efficient civilizing agency. The success of the Alaskan reindeer enterprise induced Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, in 1908, to import 300 reindeer from Lapland into Labrador, where they have now increased to about 1,200, and are a great boon to the natives. Last year the Canadian government bought 50 of Dr. Grenfell's herd for introduction into northern Canada.

Spook on Their Black 'Soutcheon.

Mollie, a light-colored mulatto housemaid who has been in the employ of a South Side family for a number of years recently gave up her position to get married, relates the Kansas City Star. A few days ago she returned and asked to have her old place back. The woman of the house was glad to have her return, but surprised that she came so soon after being married, and questioned her as to her reason for wanting to return. In reply the maid said: "My husband's folks is all jealous of me because I'm so light-colored. You know my husband is very dark and all his folks is dark, too; and was mad because he married me. Why, one of his sisters told me, 'You's so bright you make a spot in our family.'"

Counsel of Despair.

"I want a piece of meat without any bone, fat or gristle," said the bride, on her first trip to market. "Yes, ma'am," replied the butcher. "I would suggest that you take an egg."

REGRET WEDEMEYER'S DEFEAT

In the defeat of Congressman W W Wedemeyer of Ann Arbor for re-election this district has lost a most able representative. No district in the whole United States had a more progressive or more capable man in Washington. Two hundred Northville so-called "progressives" voted against Mr. Wedemeyer and thus aided in the election of a democrat, an almost unheard-of man for congressman in his place. Mr. Beaks of Ann Arbor, the successful candidate, did not even secure his nomination until about a week before the election and he made no campaign at all except to stick up his lightning rod and pray that some strange act of providence or freak gyrations on the part of some voters, he might be struck. Struck he was, and no one was more surprised than Mr. Beaks himself. He has won out by about eighty votes and were in recount possible even that small majority might easily be wiped out if even half of the irregularities are true. Mr. Probert, the Bull Moose candidate, was not in it at all except as he aided in the democratic election and the slaughter of Mr. Wedemeyer. What has been gained? Spite and revenge has been partially satisfied and the innocent have gone down with those whom they avenged, but marked for his game but that is all. The Progressive leaders haven't succeeded in securing a single office that they could not have more readily secured on the Republican ticket and their aim total in the state can be confined upon one hand. The democratic party will be in the saddle for some time to come and the office held by the Republicans or Progressives in Michigan will be growing less and less after January 1st and March 4th next. It is generally prophesied that not before 1920 will the Republican party get back in power again as the split in that party will not be healed over by that time and the democracy will have a bigger walk-away in the next general election than they had this year. Now that the Republicans and the Bull Moose have both been spanked, and spanked good and plenty at that, perhaps they will both be better boys but it is still to be regretted that a nice little fellow like Wedy who wasn't doing a naughty thing at all should be allowed to be kicked by the Donkey who wasn't supposed to be allowed in the pasture field of either the Elephant or the Moose.

PASTOR MURDOCK

The people of Northville in general will greatly regret to learn of the final resignation of the Rev. T. J. Murdock of the Baptist church, to take effect the first of the month of December. During his stay in Northville Mr. Murdock has made a host of friends who are loath to part with him and his good wife Mr. Murdock is not only a good pastor but he is also a splendid citizen and a genial good fellow.

But in some large cities, notably Washington, D. C. and Albany, N. Y. they have been successfully conducted for many years. The high cost of living has been the means of establishing many other markets in recent months. The need and success of these is explained by the experience of a workingman's wife, who told me how much more she could get for her money at the market than she ever could at the store, and how the family could enjoy many little things that they could not afford at the old time store price. Previous to the development of the fruit and truck interests and the establishment of a public market in Oklahoma City that place was dependent on outside states for her fruit and vegetable supply. Now farmers bring their wagonloads with fruits, vegetables and other products, and sell out quickly to either retailers or consumers who come with baskets and bags and take home enough for several days' supply. The experience at Waterloo, Ia., a city of 30,000 people, is typical of many others. A farmers' market is maintained where farmers may offer their produce for sale at any price they can get. From 500 to 300 people gather daily to buy these products. They come with baskets and buy from a few quarts to a half bushel at a time. Some farmers drive 16 to 20 miles, but most of them not over seven or eight. There are 30 or 40 store-keepers who are kicking, but 30,000 people are happy, so the success of the plan can be voted as nearly unanimous.

Positive Proof

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Northville. Because it's the evidence of a Northville citizen. Testimony easily investigated. The strongest endorsement of merit. The best proof. Read it: Mrs. George Brown, Northville, Mich., says: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. For almost a year I suffered from kidney complaint. I had acute pains across my back and hips and the kidney secretions were unnatural, showing that my kidneys were disordered. Often at night the muscles in my back contracted and the pain was so terrible that I was obliged to get up and walk the floor. I had often heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and finally I had my husband procure a supply at Murdock Bros. Drug Store. They soon brought relief and I continued taking them until my condition had improved in every way. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other sufferers from kidney complaint. Mayor Lansing simply forgot his last month and when he returned home from Detroit on the 21st, there was the "light and water" man clipping his wares and shutting off the water. The Mayor paid his fine and then set up the cigars for being forgetful. Grand Lecturer F. O. Gilbert of Bay City held a school of instruction for Plymouth, Wayne, Farmington, and Northville F and A. Ashbaugh of Detroit president of the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs gave a talk on the Biennial convention held at San Francisco last June, at which time she represented Michigan as her delegate. Floyd Shafer, manager will open a roller skating entertainment in the Princess Link Thanksgiving day and evening. After that date he will have skating all the fall and winter on Tuesday and Saturday evenings. J. J. Marks of Detroit who was reported last week to be lost in the north woods while hunting, was, in fact, not lost at all. He had enjoyed himself so greatly that he decided to remain a few days longer than he had at first intended, and because of the remoteness of a post or telegraph office he could not inform his wife of his decision. When he did not arrive home at the expected time, Mrs. Marks thought he must have become lost and hurriedly set out to search for him. The crowd at the M. D. Indian chicken pie supper Wednesday evening was beyond all expectations and the seating capacity as well as the children pies were inadequate for the demand. 280 people were served still more were unable to wait. The supper was delicious and the music by the Sunday school orchestra was a splendid feature of the evening. The Ladies appreciate the fact that patrons of the feast were so patient in waiting their turn. The society netted $65.

You kicked them to a straddle. You may slug them in the state. But all this lovely chatter. Has gone to the Liberator. WORKMEN OWN THEIR HOMES Ordinary Rent Pays for Them in a Few Years The best method for enabling working men to own their homes is that afforded by the American system of building and loan associations. In many states it is called the savings and loan bank, the homestead bank, or building society; only in Massachusetts it is called a co-operative bank. It is more successful in America than elsewhere. For 6000 of home ownership exist in the United States, with about 2,250,000 members, and with assets in excess of one billion dollars, says the editor of Farm and Home. With the improved management now in vogue they are rapidly increasing their net assets to nearly $170,000,000 of assets and over 400,000 members. Ohio, New Jersey and Illinois each have over 500 of these banks. Their assets in Ohio are almost as great as in Pennsylvania, while in each of several other states these little but effective institutions have a total of from 50 to 10 millions of dollars in assets. In Northville, money is practically all deposited by local residents in wretched dues and loans for the purpose of paying for homes. The loan is secured by a first mortgage which is taken for as high as 80 per cent of the value of the property. The loan is paid off in weekly installments of principal and interest, which makes even a large proportion of the total value of the mortgaged property at a safe loan. On each $500 borrowed the borrower pays $1.48 weekly upon the principal and interest. The money thus paid in begins to draw interest at once, and this helps gradually reduce the principal owed, so that at 7 per cent the loan is paid off in about 120 months. The system is based on the fundamental fact that the rent paid by the average man is sufficient to buy and pay for his own home in from 10 to 15 years after which he owns it free and clear. Sure? Enough. Her Father—Young man, are you qualified to marry and support my daughter? Adolbert—I hold the record for running my four cylinder roadster 27 miles on a pint of gasoline.

He Was an Obliging Landlord. I read a story in the Hotel Gazette which illustrates the obliging landlord of today. A man was stopping at a little seaside resort kept by a German. One day the guest went into the ocean to bathe and got beyond his depth. He couldn't swim, and as he struggled he gave a loud cry for help. The German landlord, hearing the cry, came out on the veranda, and saw his guest just disappearing beneath the wave, and as he sank he threw up one despairing hand with fingers outstretched. The landlord went back into the house and brought out five beers.—Simeon Ford.

Bird's Nest in Human Skull. A bird has built its nest in a human skull lying in a vault beneath a church at Rothwell, Northamptonshire, England. Apparently the bird entered the vault through the ventilator and after selecting the largest cranium among the rows of skulls on the shelves proceeded to enlarge a hole, which had probably been made originally by a battle-axe.—New York Sun.

Most Costly Wood. Cabole, a beautiful tree that grows on the west coast of Africa, and is also found on the island of St. Thomas, is said to furnish the most costly wood in the world. It somewhat resembles teak, and takes on a very high polish. Its price is quoted as about $3,500 a cubic meter.

Floating Baths Condemned. Floating baths near great cities are now condemned by sanitary authorities. The vast quantities of sewage that are discharged into the waters that usually border such cities are thought to be productive of disease to bathers, and certainly render their abluitions of doubtful value as a cleansing agency.

ROYALTY WELCOMES THE AMERICAN SETTLER

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, WELCOMES AMERICANS TO CANADA.

It was a happy speech, that on that beautiful October day, the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, made at Macleod, Alberta. It was an opportune speech, heartfelt and resonant with good fellowship. And, as it was specially intended for American ears, the audience, comprised largely of so many American settlers in Canada, the time and place could not have been better chosen.

It was in reply to an address of welcome tendered to him at the pretty city of Macleod, with the foothills of the Rockies as a setting, and the great wheat fields between, and in fact all around the place as the foreground, that His Highness, true to the best interests of the country and to those of the Americans who choose to make Canada their home, said in part:

"I am well aware that among those whom I am now addressing, there are a very great proportion who were not born under the British flag. Most of these will have realized by now that residence under that flag implies no disabilities. All we ask is that the laws of Canada should be obeyed."

"With this provision every one is free to come and go, to marry and to die as seems best to him, as it pleases Providence."

"We bring no pressure to bear on anyone to adopt the Canadian nationality, for we do not value citizenship which is obtained under compulsion. Our American cousins are welcome from over the border. Thrice we welcome our Canadian and British brothers, who return to the Union Jack, after living under the Stars and Stripes."

"History is repeating itself. For many years hundreds of young Britishers have sought fortune in the western States. Time has brought about a change, and the tide has set in the other direction, bringing across the frontier numbers of our neighbors to whom we are glad to return hospitably."

"One of the chief dispensers of such hospitality in proportion to its population has, as we have said, changed its character from an important cattle town to a thriving wheat producing area."

"What it has lost from the picturesque point of view, it has gained in the material side, and I wish, in conclusion, to express the hope that the prosperity which has evolved itself here for the past ten years, may continue unabated in the future."

There is no reason why at a hundred places on this extensive frontier and interesting trip of His Royal Highness he might not have expressed himself in the same terms, and on each occasion addressed large gatherings of Americans who are now settled on the prairie of Western Canada—Advertisement.

JUST WHAT THEY EXPECTED

Committee Made No Mistake When They Looked for Almost Inevitable Comment.

A committee of investigating agents this afternoon approached a lady.

"Madam," said Professor Precious, the spokesman, offering her a magnificent chrysanthemum of rare and lovely hue. "Madam, permit me to present this flower to you as a token of our high regard."

She clasped the splendid blossom in her lily white hand.

Breathlessly the committee waited her reply.

"How beautiful it is!" she answered. "What an exquisite shade of purple! I should love to have a dress of that color."

Dr. Precious nodded knowingly to the committee, as if to say, "I told you so."

The committee winked to the professor and whispered, "You win."

Lots of Money Well Spent.

Arthur Blanchard, who spent much of his time traveling over the country for the government, was seated behind a bride and groom in a Pullman car one afternoon when the train went through a long tunnel. As it emerged into the light of day the bride was grabbing desperately at her hat and fighting three fast rounds with one or two hatpins which had become loosened.

In order to relieve the situation and inject some harmless conversation into the gap, Blanchard remarked: "This tunnel cost $12,000,000."

"Well," said the bride judicially, "it was worth it."—Popular Magazine.

Farms for Children.

Perhaps the smallest farms in the world, each four by eight feet, have been devised by Mrs. Henry Parsons for the International Children's School Farm league, and demonstrated in New York. Each child becomes owner of his diminutive farm, in which he works, grows and harvests seven different kinds of vegetables, and these are borne by him in triumph to his family. About each farm is an 18-inch path, which he keeps in order; under his instructor it becomes a tiny object lesson in good roads.

His Suspensions Aroused.

Lecturer—All statistics prove that the blonde woman is more difficult to get along with than the brunette.

Astonished Man in the Audience (starting up)—Are you certain of the lecturer's fact?

Astonished Man—Then I believe my black hair is dyed.

PRETTY THANKSGIVING DAY DINNER TABLE

By ADELE MENDEL.

HOW much easier it is for the hostess of today to prepare for a Thanksgiving dinner than it was for the hostess of a hundred years ago! Then it meant not only hours, but weeks of planning, for the hostess had none of the conveniences or labor-saving devices that we are so familiar with as necessities today.

No indeed, her dinner had to be cooked on an open fire, not on a modern range or gas stove. Electricity would have seemed nothing less than a miracle. The simple utensils used in the home of the present day would have caused the greatest amount of astonishment. A lemon squeezer would have been regarded as a curious object, but then so would have been a food chopper, an egg beater, or a can opener.

The coffee was always roasted and ground at home. There was no prepared mustard, cocoa, vanilla, gelatin or prepared yeast. String beans, lima beans, asparagus or peas were not served in November. Tomatoes were called love apples and were not recognized as a vegetable. Everything was home made, for groceries were not delivered at the house in sealed packages.

There were few household flowers such as we are accustomed to see adorn our tables. The flowers were all of the old-fashioned variety. Orchids were unknown, the chrysanthemums were very small; roses were not like the roses of today, but carnations were used in abundance.

Invitations had to be issued a long time ahead to insure a reply, if the guest resided at any distance.

Verily, we have much to be grateful for, when we consider how many wonderful inventions there have been to lighten the housekeeper's labors. Now, when Thanksgiving is celebrated in every state in the Union, there is no one who hasn't something to be thankful for.

Thanksgiving ever is a day of pleasant reminiscences, a day when the family and friends are gathered around the well laden table in a spirit of rejoicing. Hospitality is the characteristic note of the day and it really ought to be a pleasure and a glad some task to plan a Thanksgiving dinner.

The housewife of 1912 will be wise if she follows the example of her great grandmother and plans her dinner and table decorations in advance so that she will have little to do on Thanksgiving day.

The decorations for a Thanksgiving table would be very effective if it had for its main decorations the turkey. For, what is a Thanksgiving dinner without a turkey? The table cloth around the edge of the table is trimmed with large sized turkeys cut out of crepe paper in realistic coloring. Paper turkeys hold the place cards. The same bird-ornaments the napkins. Small baskets trimmed with chrysanthemums hold the salted almonds. For the center decoration of the table use a large dark red basket filled with ears of corn. The imitation corn and leaves can be made of yellow paper with green paper for leaves. Wheat, oats, fruit, or flowers or anything in keeping with the harvest idea may be used.

A college girl who has taken up the business of making table souvenirs and decorations has gone to America's early history for the appropriate little things used at Thanksgiving. Taking the year 1630 as the proper period for her charming trifles—the year in which the first Thanksgiving was celebrated in Boston—the clever girl has turned out little puppets dressed as the Pilgrim fathers, Indians and many a fair New England maid known in song and story. She has made crude cardboard houses, covered with log-cabin paper, and for the animals used by the first settlers she goes to the toy store, where suitable and cheap trifles are found.

For the finer Thanksgiving tables she arranges her New England scenes of those long ago times as instructive as they are beautiful. The center of the table is always used for the picture she wishes to represent, and there, with her quaint dolls, her Puritan maids and men, her primitive homes, wigwags, wild turkeys, deer, ducks, cannon and what-not, she will turn out pictures as amusing to grown-ups as to children.

Some of this brilliant woman's notions could be copied at home with very little expenditure. The history books give any number of pretty scenes to copy from and by choosing the least elaborate the work would be lessened and the effect be just as good.

For instance, there was always a blockhouse in the olden days, with cannon before it, and turkeys were roasted in the open air, and there were piles of corn when the harvest was in, and so on. In a farm home it would be easy to have dried ears of corn about, shucks and all showing, and in a city ears of pop-corn could be used.

Take the blockhouse scene and prepare the picture for the possible invasion of hostile Indians. Cover a square cardboard box with brown paper for the log house, trace over it with black crayon a rude imitation of logs, cut slit windows, put on a rough chimney and leave the door half open, with a little doll, dressed as a Puritan child, peeping out. About the blockhouse group some toy pine trees, one or two Puritan men, two maids and maybe a friendly Indian with feathered headdress. The maids and child are dressed in gray gowns with white kerchiefs and caps, and the white men wear buff colored knee-breeches, red waistcoats and green or gray tail coats. The good Indian wears war paint and, maybe, drags a cloak of fur behind him. Dolls for the purpose can be had at 10 cents each—four inches high—and they could be dressed in tissue paper. They are held to the table with long black-headed pins, or rather to a board upon which the scene is set and afterward covered over in suitable manner. One of the metal turkeys, sold now in all the candy and toy shops for Thanksgiving, could appear in the scene and also a deer and a fat goose. This birds and animals can be had from five cents up.

All the things mentioned in these dramatic times could be symbolized with pretty trifles bought at the ten cent store or elsewhere, for favors. The following things are seen and are all suitable. Paper mache pumpkins, candy boxes made like ears of corn, kegs, cannon, Indian baskets and tomahawks. The kegs were always a part of the New England Thanksgiving, and they held root beer—made by the Indian women—and molasses, which was used for the pies famous to this day.

CONTENTION WAS ALL RIGHT

Lawyer, However, Qualified Admission With a Remark That Had Unkind Sound.

The jury was hearing the closing arguments in a damage suit before Judge Ben M. Smith, in which slander was alleged. The attorney for the plaintiff had been directing his broad sides against the defendant for his show of ingratitude, when the latter's counsel objected.

"Gratitude is inspiring, but not a constitutional requirement," interposed the objector, who had borrowed several law books from the other lawyer some time before.

"One look at your face convinces me that you are right," said the first lawyer. "If gratitude were a constitutional requirement you couldn't be a citizen."—Chicago Evening Post.

RASH SPREAD TO ARMS

759 Reach Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.—"At first I noticed small eruptions on my face. The trouble began as a rash. It looked like red pimples. In a few days they spread to my arms and back. They itched and burred so badly that I scratched them and of course the result was blood and matter. The eruptions festered, broke, opened and dried up, leaving the skin dry and scaly. I spent many sleepless nights, my back, arms and face burning and itching; sleep was purely and simply out of the question. The trouble also caused disfigurement. My clothing irritated the breaking out."

"By this time I had used several well-known remedies without success. The trouble continued. Then I began to use the sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Within seven or eight days I noticed gratifying results. I purchased a full-sized cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and in about eighteen or twenty days my cure was complete." Calumet Ends "Bad Luck."

Remember when you were a youngster, what a trial baking day was? If Mother was lucky, everything went finely—but if she had "bad luck" her cakes and her pies and her bread were either a success in baking, seemed to depend almost altogether on "luck."

Nowadays there's no such thing as "baking luck." At least, not in the kitchens of the up-to-date cooks. Simply because Calumet Baking Powder has smashed that old time idea. It has made baking sure of success. It has made inexperienced cooks able to bake perfectly, and any after day it is saving hundreds of dollars' worth of time and materials by doing away with costly failures.

Calumet Baking Powder is the purest baking powder made—and guaranteed not only to BE pure, but to STAY pure in the CAN and in the BAKING. Calumet has twice been officially judged the BEST baking powder made—receiving the highest awards at the World's Pure Food Expositions in Chicago (1907) and in Paris (1912). Adv.

The Schrader Bros' Store will have some interesting talks for careful buyers from now until the New Year and then some.

Furniture Talk.

It is Our Purpose to Show Clearly and Beyond Any Possibility of a Doubt that when things for the Home are to be bought, This Store is the place to get them.

We want every person to investigate the claims we make below. We are here to back every assertion, to make good any loss for damage or breakage in delivery and to make good our guarantee of prices and reliability of our goods.

We have a lot of New Goods to offer you. Something new all the time. In fact the big store is so full we wouldn't know where to put in the next lot, only for the fact that our trade is also increasing every day. We invite people to come and see, whether they wish to purchase or not. Even if you have no intention of buying anything, it will be an inducement to you to see how this store merchandises.

FIRST—That Furniture, Rugs, Mattresses and other Home Furnishings are sold as low or at lower prices at Schrader's than at any furniture house or department store in Detroit or elsewhere.

This unqualified statement we place here in cold type and we are prepared to "make good" on it.

SECOND—That we place such advantages at the disposal of the public in the way of stocks and assortments, that, could they be realized by everyone, would bring an avalanche of new business to our store.

THIRD—We are your neighbor and we live right among you and therefore our guarantee is worth all it implies while you take chances at Detroit stores and with catalogue houses. They "don't care" if you never come back!" We do.

Brass Beds in All Kinds of Finish.

Buffets

For example we have some very beautiful ones in Quarter Sawn Oak for $22 and $24 which cannot be duplicated elsewhere for less than $26 and $28 respectively. Just one of many suggestions.
