TRADE AT RYDER'S

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER XXI.

In that passing second or two there had been no sound—no word from him at the door; no whisper even from her at my side, who, like myself, sat dumb and inert, stricken to stone by the suddenness of the attack. But for a second or two only this silence and inertia lasted.

That which ensued was coincident. As though the step had been prearranged, the three actors moved in concert. The hand which held the weapon advanced a dozen inches or more. Synchronously my foot luffed with all the accuracy and power of my undergraduate football days, met the intruder's proffer, and sent it spinning Poor Evelyn, in spite of an herculean stubborn insistence to be courageous, was as thoroughly frightened as I have ever seen her. When, at length, the stable was cleared, and lamps were lighted, she was still pallid as marble, and her lip quivered with an obstinacy, that no restraining teeth nor healing hand could disguise.

"Oh! Wasn't it exciting!" she exclaimed, with an effort at nonchalance that was almost pathetic. "I wouldn't have missed this experience for anything in the world." And then, discovering a little trickle of blood on my cheek, which a diligently-piled handkerchief had not fully succeeded in keeping out of sight, she was at once all solicitude. "Oh, Philip!" she cried, with wide eyes, squirming. "You're hurt! It was awful. It was threatening. I wish we had never dared, and I wish you had never been hurt."

"Do you know," I said, "it was, if a

But I was in far different mood. Of delicate matters far less shaping themselves, apparently, towards a climatic we had drawn nearer and nearer to the veil which hid the truth.

If there had come to me now the opportunity for another step, it must not be disregarded. My whole inclination was to welcome it. Therefore I smiled, reassuringly, at Evelyn, as I said:—
"Really, my dear girl, you are unnecessarily alarmed. There is not—cannot be, in fact—the slightest possibility of danger. On the contrary wherever they may be, is in all likelihood pacific. But if it would make you any less uneasy, Mr. Cheeka, deed, shall wait near the open door."

A white man would either have insisted or apologized. But the yellow man has a way of his own. Yup Sing remained silent until I had finished. But whether or not he heard me was manifested neither by word nor sign. Without change of facial expression or alteration of tone, he placidly proceeded, choosing his phrases with infinite care and rounding his periods with a faculty that for an Asiatic was little short of marvellous. Had he been any one else in the world I should have admired him. As it was, his cleverness only added to my aversion.

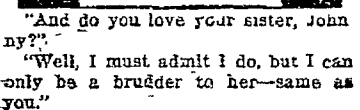

"There is a story," he went on, "a true story familiar to all Chinamen; to some Chinamen especially it is a very bitter, a very pathetic story, because it has to do with the passing of

WORKINGMEN'S
A BIG CAUCUS

VILLAGE HALL NOT BIG ENOUGH TO HOLD THE BIG CROWD.

Took Second Ballot to Make a Decision of the Presidency.

When a village caucus calls out 194 voters it angers well for the affairs of the municipality, and what ever the result, the people are sure they are voting under a representative government. For the Presidency of the village, Superintendent of Schools Wheaton made a splendid dominating speech for Chas. A. Dolph and Jas. Huff told the worth of Nelson Schrader. The first ballot stood 99 for Schrader, 93 for Dolph and 2 scattering. A protest was made that owing to the large crowd present, that the only fair way was to let each individual pass by the hat and drop in own ballot. This was so ordered by chairman Tindham and the result was Schrader 145 Dolph 57. The balance of the ticket, nominated by acclamation was: Trustees Lester Stage, E. Montgomery, D. E. Griswold; C. A. Sciesz, Assessor; T. E. Murdoch, Clerk; Judd Lanning, Treasurer.

Mr. Dolph will undoubtedly be nominated at the Citizens' caucus tonight and two of our splendid types of citizenship will head the tickets for President of Northville.

How About It?

After living in a rented house With leaky roof and broken window panes And cracks in doors through Which the cat crawls in and out

Perhaps you would like a home of your own with these features removed.

It is our business to help people procure homes for themselves, and which you can fix up to suit yourself.

If there is a place in town you would like to own and have about one-third of the purchase price, very likely we can loan you the balance.

The weekly payments would be small, about the same as rent, and before you realize it, the proper, free and clear, would be yours.

Remember that an Equity, however small, in a place is worth more than a bushel of rent receipts.

Northville Citizens Gladly Testify and Confidently Recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

It is testimony like the following that has placed Doan's Kidney Pills so far above competitors. When people right here at home raise their voice in praise there is no room left for doubt. Read the public statement of a Northville citizen:

A. H. Piper, Center St., Northville, Mich., says: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. I had occasion to use this remedy about a year ago when I was suffering from a severe attack of kidney trouble. My back was so lame that I could hardly get around and if I sat down for awhile, it was almost impossible for me to get up. When I stooped or lifted, sharp pains darted through me. The kidney secretions were highly colored, contained sediment and were painful in passage. The contents of three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Murdock Bros. drug store completely cured me and I have been in good health since. I can certainly give this excellent preparation a strong endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

DRIVING CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING

Elects Officers and Received Reports for the Past Year.

The Annual meeting of the Northville Driving club has held in the Connel room Tuesday night.

The board of directors and officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: B. A. Northrop, president; E. M. Starkweather, vice-president; A. C. Balden, treasurer; T. E. Murdock, secretary; L. L. Brooks, J. M. Green, Henry Thomas, C. H. Gorton and Geo. Stanley.

The report of the officers showed the affairs of the association to be in first-class condition, and the outlook good for next season.

METHODIST BASKET BALLERS EASILY BEAT PRESBYTERIANS

Second Game Played in the Rink on Monday Night.

The second basket ball game of the series between the Methodist and the Presbyterian teams was easily won by the former Monday night by a score of 35 to 23.

The first game of some weeks ago was won by the Presbyterians and the final game for the championship to be pulled off at an early date, will certainly be a corker.

The Methodist team looked very nifty in their new maroon Jersey sweaters.

The Methodists were also victorious in the preliminary game, with the Juniors of each church matched up. The score was 24 to 3 in favor of the M. E.'s. Harold White starring in basket throwing.

The door receipts for these games goes into the Methodist piano fund and the Presbyterian improvement fund.

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, seeks a man to intercept his daughter, Molly, who is near for the post an Indian outbreak is threatened. "Brick" Hamilton, a sergeant who had just arrived with messengers to McDonald, volunteers for the mission and starts soon. Molly arrives at Fort Ripley two days ahead of schedule. She decides to push on to Fort Dodge to stage in company with "Sutter" Hill. Molly's Gonzales, a gambler, is also a passenger. Hamilton meets the stage with stories of depredations committed by the Indians. It is decided to return to Ripley. The driver deserts the stage when Indians appear.

CHAPTER V.

The Defense of the Stage.

There were times when Hamilton's mental processes seemed slow, almost sluggish, but this was never true in moments of emergency and peril. Then he became swift, impetuous, seemingly come forward by some inspiring instinct. It was for such experiences as this that he remained in the service—his whole nature responding almost joyously to the bugle-call of action, of imminent danger, his nerves steadying into rock. These were the characteristics which had won him his chevrons in the unwieldy service of the frontier, and when scarcely more than a boy, had put a captain's bars on the gray collar of his Confederate uniform.

Now, as he struggled with his knees, gripping the iron foot-rail with one hand, a single glance gave him a distinct impression of their desperate situation. With that knowledge, there likewise flashed over his mind the only possible means of defense. The Indians, numbering at least thirty, had ridden recklessly out from under the protection of the river bank, spreading to right and left as their ponies' hoofs struck the turf, and were now charging down upon the disabled coach, yelling madly and brandishing their guns. The very reckless abandon of their advance expressed the conception they had of the situation—they had witnessed the flight of the two fugitives, the runaway of the wheelers, and believed the remaining passengers would be helpless victims. They came on, savage and confident, not anticipating a fight, but a massacre—shrieking pitmen, and a glint of revenge.

With one swing of his body, Hamilton was upon the ground, and had jerked open the inside door of the coach, forcing it back against the dirt of the bluff which towered in protection above. His eyes were quick to perceive the peculiar advantage of position; that their assailants would be compelled to advance from only one direction. The three within were hardly struggling to their feet, dazed, bewildered, failing as yet to comprehend fully those distant yells, when he sprang into their midst, uttering his swift orders, and unceremoniously jerking the men into position for defense.

"Here, quick now! Don't waste time! It's a matter of seconds, I tell you! They're coming—a horde of them. Here, Molly, take this rifle barrel and knock a hole through the back there big enough to sight out of. Hit it hard, damn you, it's a case of life or death! What have you got, Gonzales? A revolver? Into that window there, and blaze away; you've got the reputation of a gun man, now let's see you prove it. Get back in the corner, miss, so I can slip past—no, lie down below the fire line!"

"But—but I will not!" and she faced him, her face white, but her eyes shining. "I can shoot! See!" and she flashed a pearl-handled revolver defiantly. The Sergeant thrust her unceremoniously aside and plunged across to the opposite window, gripping his Henry rifle.

"Do as I say," he growled. "This is our fight. Get down! Now, you terrify, let them have it!"

There was a wild skurrying of mounted figures almost at the coach wheels, hair streaming feathers waving, lean, red arms thrown up, the air vocal with shrill outcries—then the dull bark of a Henry, the boom of a Winchester, the sharp spitting of a Colt. The smoke rolled out in a cloud, pungent, concealing, nervous fingers pressing the triggers again and again. They could see reeling horses, men gripping their ponies' manes to get erect, staring, frightened eyes, animals flung back on their haunches, rearing madly in the air. The fierce yell of exultation changed into a savage scream, bullets crashed into the thin sides of the coach; rocked with the contact of a half-naked body flung forward by a plunging horse; the Mexican, swayed wildly in Spanish, and then the smoke blew aside and they saw the dead and dying ponies, three motionless bodies huddled on the grass, a few dismounted stragglers racing on foot for the river bank, and a squad of riders circling beyond the trail. Hamilton swept the mingled sweat and blood out of his eyes, smiled grimly, and glanced back into the coach, instinctively slipping fresh cartridges into his hot rifle.

"That's one time those fellows ran into a hornet's nest," he commented quietly, all traces of excitement vanished. "Better load up, boys, for we're not through yet—they'll only be more careful next time. Anybody hurt?"

"Something creased my back," replied Moylan, complainingly, and trying vainly to put a hand on the spot. "Felt like a streak o' fire." The Sergeant reached across, fingering the torn shirt cautiously.

"Seared the flesh, pardner, but no blood worth mentioning. They've got some heavy artillery out there from the sound—old army muskets likely. It is our repeating rifles that will win out—those red devils don't understand them yet."

"Sergeant, you talk we win out den?" and Gonzales peered up blinking into the other's face. "Acree dey vil fight deefereat de nex' time. Ze Ameri-caine musketeer, eet carry so far—eet eet not so?"

Hamilton patted his brown barrel affectionately as if it were an old friend, and smiled across into the questioning eyes of the girl.

"I'm willing to back this weapon against the best of them for distance," he replied easily, "and it's accurate besides. How about it, Moylan?"

"I'd about as soon be in front as behind one of them cannon," answered the author soberly. "I toted one four years. But say, pardner, what's yer name? Yur a cavalryman, ain't yer?"

"Sergeant—forgot I wasn't properly introduced," and he bent his head slightly, glancing again toward the girl. "Hamilton is the rest of it."

"Brick" Hamilton?

"Sometimes delicate references to my hair, mian," and he took off his hat, his gray eyes laughing. "Born that way, but doesn't seem to interfere with me much, since I was a kid. You've heard of me then, Moylan? So has our little friend, Gonzales, here."

The sober-faced sufferer merely nodded, evidently in no mood for pleasant conversation.

"Oh, yer're all right," he said finally. "I've heard 'em say you was a fighter down round Santa Fe, an' I know it myself now. But what the hell are we goin' to do. This yere stagecoach ain't much of a fort to keep off a bunch o' redskins once they git their mad up. Them musket bullets go through like the sides was paper, an' I reckon we ain't got no oversupply o' ammunition—I know I ain't for this Winchester. How long do yer reckon we kin hold out?"

"Do As I Say," He Growled. "This is Our Fight."

Hamilton's face became grave, his eyes also turning toward the river. The sun was already sinking low in the west, and the Indians, gathered in council out of rifle-shot, were like shadows against the glimmering water beyond.

"They'll try us again just before dark," he affirmed slowly, "but more cautiously. If that attack fails, then they'll endeavor to creep in, and take us by surprise. It's going to be a clear night, and there is small chance for even an Indian to hide in that buffalo-grass with the stars shining. They have got to come up from below, for no buck could climb down this bluff without making a noise. I don't see why, with decent luck, we can't hold out as we are until help gets here; those fellows who rode away will report at Canon Bluff and send a rider on to Dodge for help. There ought to be soldiers out here by noon tomorrow. What troops are at Dodge now?"

"Only a single company—infantry," replied Moylan gloomily. "All the rest are out scouting 'long the Solomon. Damned if I believe they'll send a man. Those two cowards will likely report us all dead—otherwise they wouldn't have any excuse for running away—and the commander will satisfy himself by sending a courier to the fellows in the field."

"Well, then," commented the Sergeant, his eyes gleaming, "we've simply got to fight it out alone, I reckon, and hang on to our last shots. What do you make of those reds?"

The three men stared for some time at the distant group over their rifles, in silence.

"They ain't all Arapahoes, that's certain," said Moylan at last. "Some of 'em are Cheyennes. I've seen that chief before—'at's Roman Nose."

"The big buck humped up on the roan?"

"That's the one, and he is a bad actor; saw him once over at Fort Kearney two years ago. Had a council there. Say!" in surprise, "ain't that an Ogalla Sioux war bonnet bobbin' there to the right, Sergeant?"

Hamilton studied the distant feathered head-dress indicated, shading his eyes with one hand.

"I reckon maybe it is, Moylan," he acknowledged at last gravely. "Those fellows have evidently got together; we're going to have the biggest scrap this summer the old army has had yet. Looks as though it was going to begin right here—and now. See there! The dance is on, boys; there they come; they will try it on foot this time."

He tested his rifle, resting one knee on the seat; Moylan pushed the barrel of his Winchester out through the ragged hole in the back of the coach, and the little Mexican lay flat, his eyes on the level with the window-casing. The girl alone remained motionless, crouched on the floor, her white face uplifted.

The entire field stretching to the river was clear to the view, the short, dry buffalo-grass offering no concealment. To the right of the coach, some fifty feet away, was the daily depression, a shallow gully leading down from the bluff, but this slight advantage was unavailable. The sun had already dropped from view, and the gathering twilight distorted the figures, making them almost grotesque in their savagery. Yet they could be clearly distinguished, stealing silently forward, guns in hand, spreading out in a wide half-circle, obedient to the gestures of Roman Nose, who, still mounted upon his pony, was traversing the river bank, his every motion outlined against the dull gleam of water. Behind him from the black depths of the coach the three men watched in almost breathless silence, gripping their weapons, fascinated, determined not to waste a shot. Gonzales, under the strain, uttered a fierce Spanish curse, but Hamilton crushed his arm between iron fingers.

"Keep still, you fool!" he muttered, never glancing around. "Let your gun talk!"

The assailants came creeping on, snakes rather than men appearing less and less human in the increasing shadows. Twice the Sergeant lifted his Henry, sighting along the brown barrel, lowering the weapon again in doubt of the distance. He was conscious of exultation, of a swifter pulse of the heart, yet his nerves were like steel, his grip steady. Only a dim fleeting memory of the girl, half hidden in the darkness behind, gave him uneasiness—he could not turn and look into her eyes. Roman Nose was advancing now at the center of that creeping half circle, a hulking figure perched on his pony's back, yet well out of rifle range. He spread his hands apart, clasping a blanket, looking like a great bird flapping its wings, and the ground in front flamed, the red flare splitting the gray gloom, the speeding bullets crashed through the leather of the coach, splintering the wood; the Mexican rolled to the floor, uttering one inhuman cry, and lay motionless; a great volume of black smoke wavered in the still air.

"Wait! Wait until they get to their feet!" Hamilton cried eagerly. "Ah! there they come—now unlimber!"

He saw only those black, indistinct figures, leaping out of the smoke, converging on the coach, their naked arms uplifted, their voices mingling in savage yells. Like lightning he worked his rifle, heart throbbing to the excitement, oblivious to all else; almost without realization he heard the deeper bellow of Moylan's Winchester, the sharp bark of a revolver at his very ear. Gonzales was all right, then. Good! He never thought of the girl, never saw her grip the pistol from the Mexican's dead hand, and crawl white-faced, over his body, to that front seat.

been exchanged between the couple. Sometimes a flicker of light will keep a young man waiting a day or two for an answer, but whatever it may be it is considered final.

Sure. How'er the wind of fortune blows, Don't let such trifles hurry you, The less you think about your woes, The less, old chap, they'll worry you.

It takes a mother to explain that if it wasn't for the other, bad boys her "Willie" would be an angel.

All he really knew was that these devils were coming, leaping, crowding through the smoke wreathes, he saw them stumble, and rise again—he saw one leap into the air, and then crash face down; he saw them break, circling to right and left, crouching as they ran. Two reached the stage—only one! One pitched forward, a revolver bullet between his eyes, his head wedged in the spokes of the wheel; the other Hamilton struck with emptied rifle-barrel as his red hand gripped the door, sending him sprawling back into the dirt. It was all the work of a minute, an awful minute, intense, breathless, then silence, the smoke drifting away, the dark night hiding the skulking runners.

CHAPTER VI.

The Condition in the Coach.

Mechanically—scarcely conscious of the action—the Sergeant slipped fresh cartridges into the hot rifle chamber, swept the tumbled hair out of his eyes with his shirt sleeve, and stared into the night. He could hardly comprehend yet that the affair was ended, the second attack repulsed. It was like a delirium of fever; he almost expected to see those motionless bodies outstretched on the grass spring up, yelling defiance. Then he gripped himself firmly, realizing the truth—it was over with for the present; away off there in the haze obscuring the river bank those indistinct black smudges were feeling savages, their voices wailing.

All He Really Knew Was That Those Devils Were Coming, Leaping, Crowding.

ling through the night. Just in front, formless, huddled where they had fallen, were the bodies of dead and dying, smitten ponies and half-naked men. He drew a deep breath through clinched teeth, endeavoring to distinguish his comrades.

The interior of the coach was black, and soundless, except for some one's swift, excited breathing. As he extended his cramped legs to the floor he touched a motionless body. Not until then had he realized the possibility of death also within. He felt downward with one hand; his nerves suddenly throbbing, and his finger touched a cold face—the Mexican. It must have been that last volley, for he could distinctly recall the sharp bark of Gonzales' revolver between his own shots.

"The little devil," he muttered soberly. "It was a squarish death than he deserved. He was a game little cock."

Then he thought of Moylan, wondering why the man did not move, or speak. That was not like Moylan. He bent forward, half afraid in the stillness, endeavoring to discover space on the floor for both his feet. He could perceive now a distant star showing clear through the ragged opening jabbed in the back of the coach, but no outline of the surlier burly shoulders.

"Moylan!" he called, hardly above a whisper. "What is the trouble? Have you been hit, man?"

There was no answer, no responding sound, and he stood up, reaching kindly over across the seat. Then he knew, and felt a shudder run through him from head to foot. Bent double over the iron back of the middle seat, with hands still gripping his hot rifle, the man hung, lump and lifeless. Almost without realizing the act, Hamilton lifted the heavy body, laid it down upon the cushion, and unclasped the dead fingers gripping the Winchester stock.

"Every shot gone," he whispered to himself dazedly, "every shot gone! Ain't that hell!"

Really an Old Term.

"Cheek" in the sense of impudence is an old term. The earliest quotation in Sir James Murray's dictionary is from Captain Marryat (1840). But it has lately been found in the sixteenth century records of Galway, in the west of Ireland. The municipal rulers of that fighting city—the "men from Galway" has become proverbial for pluck and readiness to defend the hottest of corners—decreed that any person giving "cheke" to the mayor should "forfeit 100 shillings and have his body put into prison."

In Ancient India.

A writer on Indian women of 3,000 years ago says that they were "treated with suspicion," and quotes from Kranya Kauda to support his assertion: "Women will continue to like their husbands only so long as they are rich, and influential; but the moment they are reduced in circumstances they will be abandoned by them." Women resemble the lightning in their waywardness, weapons in their sharpness, and the high-gale in their secret haste.

HUSBAND TIRED OF SEEING HER SUFFER

Procured Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which made His Wife a Well Woman.

Middletown, Pa.—"I had headache, backache and such awful bearing down pains that I could not be on my feet at times and I had organic inflammation so badly that I was not able to do my work. I could not get a good meal for my husband and one child. My neighbors said they thought my suffering was terrible. "My husband got tired of seeing me suffer and one night went to the drug store and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me I must take it. I can't tell you all I suffered and I can't tell you all that your medicine has done for me. I was greatly benefited from the first and it has made me a well woman. I can do all my housework and even helped some of my friends as well. I think it is a wonderful help to all suffering women. I have got several to take it after seeing what it has done for me."—Mrs. EMMA SPENGLER, 215 East Main St., Middletown, Pa.

The Pinkham record is a proud and honorable one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that defeat despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Consulting) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

LOBBYISTS ARE NUMEROUS IN SPITE OF RESOLUTION TO BAR THEM OUT.

BIG BILLS HAVE BEEN DELAYED
BUT ARE COMING NOW.

The Question Now Is, Will the Business Be Pushed to Secure an Early Adjournment?

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Never in the history of the Michigan legislature has there been as many lobbyists on hand as during the present session. They are conspicuous on the sidelines, in the galleries and in the halls, and this condition exists, despite the fact that a resolution was passed early in the session barring all lobbyists from the house. Recently infact, there has been so many visitors and "those interested in the progress of legislation" on the sidelines, that the business of the session has been interrupted and Speaker Currie announces that the rule barring guests from the floor will be vigorously enforced during the remainder of the session.

Thus far bills have been introduced covering every subject known to man, and Rep. Martz, of Detroit, has prepared a measure that will be presented soon making a closed season for angleworms. Every organization that is interested in legislation has its representatives in Lansing to work for or against some particular bill.

Promises are being made by leaders in both the house and senate that some of the big bills of the session will be brought out for consideration this week. What results are reached in securing consideration and action will, it is said, determine whether there can be any danger in fixing a date for adjournment now. If the week's work looks good the leaders want the date fixed to have some definite end to work to and begin plans for the end. Steering committees may be resorted to in an effort to aid and get action.

Some of the house leaders are not taking kindly to the advice about an early adjournment that is being handed out by Louis Gov. Ross. They claim that the senate has not accomplished as much as the house and they are sure that Ross has ambitious ambitions and is planning to the galleries instead of pushing along the work of the upper house.

Observers of legislative action are beginning to doubt the wisdom of the constitutional provision which provides for paying the members a lump amount for the session. It was adopted on the theory that it would tend to shorten the session and provide the members better compensation for the time they devote to legislative matters in the years when the old constitution governed and each member received $3 per day sessions sometimes dragged along interminably. It was hoped that the provision of the new constitution would serve as an inducement to push work along and quit.
This result is accomplished but experience indicates that the pushing does not begin soon enough in the session. The old time dilatoriness is prevalent during the early days and then someone is reminded that by quitting there will be a nice bit of money coming in a bunch. If the session is ended shortly, in the hurry following important bills sometimes receive scant consideration and faulty legislation is the consequence.

It has been suggested that if the legislature acted under a provision limiting the session to 3 months, except the governor called a special session following at once, it might better conditions. If the present legislature quits early in April an proposed practically every important bill of the session will have to be taken up, considered and passed in a period of five weeks, or six weeks at the outside.

On this basis, it is said, the members might get into action earlier if they knew at the time of arrival that everything had to be cleared in three months. As it is, log rolling is practiced zealously in the final days and the clerical force has to work night and day to keep in sight of the legislature and defects creep in in spite of the best efforts of legislators over-law construction and the staff handling the business of the house and senate.

One of the most unique bills ever presented to the legislature as applied to the judiciary, has been introduced by Rep. Glasner, of Barry. In order to take the judiciary out of politics which is the prime object of the bill, Glasner would have all circuit and supreme court judges elected at a special judicial election and that no other candidates shall be chosen at that time. There shall be no party definition. The ballots will be absolutely non-partisan and the judges and justices Unquestionably no constitutional question causes the perplexity to legislators, equal to that caused by the constitutional provision relative to local legislation and that against giving bills immediate effect. This feature of the constitution intended to obviate a mass of local legislation and cut down the work of the session has not become effective up to the present at least.

About as many bills go through the hopper, and the only difference is that they are adroitly drafted as general bills to meet a local situation, while the fact that members' attention is freed from the old style local bill, seems to have but given them more time to send up to the clerk's desk, a bigger assortment of local bills.

The immediate prohibition was invoked to prevent the presidential primary law, and otherwise seems to be most generally useful to shut out legislation of this character rather than the purpose for which the constitution makers intended it. Sometimes it is exceedingly elastic and sometimes it is a hard and fast rule. It is suggested that the next generation will have become accustomed to the prohibition and in the abandonment of efforts to get around the embargo with some bills and use it as a bulwark of opposition for others, the practical benefit expected from it will be secured.

Led by Rep. Charles Flowers, of Detroit, the advocates of equal suffrage rallied 72 votes in the house, five more than the required two-thirds majority, and passed the concurrent resolution to submit the constitutional amendment to the voters of Michigan at the April election. There were 21 votes in opposition to the suffrage amendment in the house. Efforts to amend the resolution so as to submit the proposition in 1914 failed.

Supporters of the suffrage amendment claim that they will have the required two-thirds majority when the resolution comes up for consideration in the senate, and then the decision will be left to the people of the state.
Although they were defeated last fall by a narrow margin the suffrage workers are confident that they will win in the contest this spring as they are depending upon a large vote in the rural districts.

Governor Dennis is an enthusiastic supporter of equal suffrage and although it is not expected that he will take the stump in behalf of the women's cause, he has informed the leaders that he will do everything in his power to assist them.

In a bill introduced by Rep. Wm. I.
Baird, of Bay County, is seen a broad legislative plan to put into operation the plan of Senator Alameda for a system of trunk line highways to be built by the state.

The trunk line road idea amended to be in the various districts not included at first seems to have the almost general approval of the legislature and since it is admitted that the cost can and willingly will be borne by the automobilists of the state, a concerted demand is being made for the carrying out of the Alameda plan.

Rep. Baird is one of the most influential members of the house and has taken upon himself the leadership of the plan on that side of the legislature. His bill provides that the state may bond for not exceeding $3,000,000 for the trunk line highway. It carries provisions for a sinking fund to be reimbursed from the automobile tax of the state and experts have figured that the roads may be built at once and paid for by the automobiles using them within a period of not more than three years.

Senator Grace, of Kalamazoo, one of the democratic members of the upper house has opened up the fight against the Michigan Bonding and Surety company of Detroit, by presenting a bill that will enable any incorporated surety company to supply liquor bonds.
Under the present statute no corporation with a capitalization of less than $500,000 may engage in the business of furnishing liquor bonds. It was at this corporation that former Governor Osborn directed his fire in the special sessions a year ago.

Senator Grace is chairman of the liquor committee in the house and his action in starting a fight against the bonding company occasions no little surprise. It is apparent that there will be a fight if the measure comes out of the committee, as the corporation in question is well fortified for a battle and has considerable political strength.

In all probability it will be necessary for the supporters of the uniform text book bill and the free text book bill to compromise on a measure before it is possible to get any sort of a measure through the present legislature. This is the result of a hearing when arguments were advanced in favor of the free text book law.

Sensors say that the rural districts are strongly in favor of the uniform text book scheme while the cities and communities having graded schools are equally firm in their advocacy of the free text book bill. In view of this situation it has been suggested that perhaps a compromise may be arranged under which those communities desiring to maintain or establish a free text book system, could be exempted from the provisions of a uniform text book

Don't Let Catarrh Get the Best of You

If you have catarrh and are neglecting it—you are doing a great wrong to yourself. In time it will undermine your whole constitution. You cannot begin too soon the work of shaking it off. Doesn't require any great effort. Begin today.

"I Feel Like a New Woman"
"I have been a great sufferer from Catarrh of the Bladder and I have tried many remedies but nothing has done me any good until I began to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I feel like a new woman now. I am able to do all my work and enjoy life. I have no more pain and I feel much better. I have lost weight and I feel much stronger. I have no more catarrh and I feel like a new woman."—Mrs. J. M. Smith, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has a curative effect upon all mucous surfaces, and hence removes catarrh. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy.

Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" eradicates catarrhal affections of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs, will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request.

The "Discovery" has been put up and sold in its liquid form for over 40 years and has given great satisfaction. Now it can be obtained of medicine dealers in tablet form as well. A trial box sent prepaid for 50 one-cent stamps.

Direct Hint.
A dirty-looking stranger entered an hotel.
"Where's the bar?" he asked of Pat, who was standing at the door.
"What kind of a bar?" asked the latter.
"Why, a liquor bar, of course. What do you suppose I mean?"
"Well," drawled Pat, with a twinkle, "I didn't know but what you might mean a bar of soap."

HANDS CRACKED AND BLED

St. Clair, Mo.—"My trouble began about fifteen years ago. It was what some called eczema. The form the disease worked under was a breaking out with watery blisters on my hands which would then dry and scale, and then would follow the trouble of cracking and bleeding, also itching and burning. My hands were disfigured at the time, and sore. The trouble was very annoying and disturbed my sleep. This last February it was even so much worse than before. I did not do all my work on account of the condition of my hands. I could not put them in water without making them worse. I tried a lot of home remedies, also salves and liniments that claimed to be a cure for the trouble, but I did not obtain a cure.
At last I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a sample. I thought they would cure, so I sent for a fifty-cent box of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and some Cuticura Soap. A doctor advised me to keep ahead with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they cured me completely. No trace of the trouble remains." (Signed) Mrs. Mary Taylor, Mar. 29, 1912.

Awful Blow.
"Yes," said Slithers, "Mickey was my dearest friend, and I shall never cease to mourn his death. It was a terrible blow from which I shall never recover."
"Why, I thought you married his widow," said Jepson.
"Why—er—ahem—why, yes, I did but—"
Here Slithers subsided into a deep and uncomfortable silence—Harpers

Had None to Spare.

There was a miners' picnic at Butte one Sunday. One of the features was a tug-of-war between a team of Irish miners and a team of Slovaks.
The Slovaks were winning and the Irishmen dropped the rope and began to fight. It was a good fight. One brawny Irishman had an opponent down and was pounding him at his leisure, when a friend came along "Gimme a belt at him," said the friend.
"Gwan," replied the other; "go and get one for yourself."

WHY INCUBATOR CHICKS DIE

ECZEMA 25 YEARS

FACE A MASS OF IT

Says "Resinol Cured Me of One of the Worst Cases Anybody Ever Saw."

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 29, 1912.—"I had eczema for the last twenty-five years and have been afflicted so badly that for weeks I could not go outside the door.
My face was one mass of pimples, and not only the looks of it but the itching and burning pains I experienced were just dreadful. I lost a great deal of sleep and had to keep changing clothes. My face all night to relieve the pain. I had become disgusted with trying different things.
"One day I made up my mind to try Resinol, and after using one jar of Resinol Ointment, and one cake of Resinol Soap, I saw the difference, and how my face is as clear as anybody's, and I certainly don't need to be ashamed to go out. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment cured me of one of the worst cases of eczema, I guess, that anybody ever saw."
