

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

XLIV. NO. 34.

THE RECORD: NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, MARCH 27, 1913.

$1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

LAST OF THE SNOW MAN

BIG CROWD AT K. P. BARN DANCE

NEAR 400 PEOPLE AND MANY MORE THAN THAT WERE IN ATTENDANCE.

Appropriate Decorations and Unique Costumes Were Features of the Occasion.

The second K. P. barn dance has been added to the list of the most popular events in the history of the village.

The supper committee fed 600 persons. That by no means represented the entire attendance, for at least 100 persons were in the rink who did not partake of the sumptuous and appetizing New England supper, so splendidly prepared and served by the able "Eating" committee under the direction of Harry B. Clark.

The decorations at the rink were elaborate and appropriate to the occasion. The seats which were holes of straw, surrounded the entire interior, barked with corn and walls were decorated with ears of corn, forks, shovels, scoops, harness, blankets and in fact every conceivable thing that was ever used on a farm, and then some.

In each end of the hall was a left, containing hay and stalks while underneath in the seats which were let out at each other in the middle of the floor at midnight, with their spurs encased in "soft gloves."

The music was first-class and everybody had a good time, even though the crowd was so large that every dancer was stepped on, kicked and jammed from one to a dozen times in from one to a dozen different places.

Those in attendance were attired in keeping with the occasion and every sort of a costume was in vogue from a regular "rube" farmer to a wild Irishman and from a milkmaid to an Indian maiden and Irish peasant girl.

While the K. P. gave the party for the social and entertaining feature, at the same time the society will net a nice little sum as the result of their efforts.

DECORATIONS AND DONORS

The decorations and donors for the barn dance in part were as follows:

60 bales straw—Charlie Hamilton, Frank Mills, Fred Simmons, E. K. Starkweather.

60 bundles corn stalks—bought Hay—N. Neylon.

Sheep and lambs, harness, collars, forks, scoops, shovels, ox yoke, 20 bu. corn—Chas. Whipple.

Set double harness—W. H. Cattermole.

Blankets, etc.—Frank Perrin, L. L. Brooks, et al.

Holstein calves and rail fence—Floyd Northrop.

Pony, goat, sow and pigs, dogs, mice and rats—E. K. Starkweather.

Pony—Mr. Lisenberger.

Forks, rakes, shovels, water tank, etc.—Jas. Huff.

Lumber—C. L. Dublar.

Carpenter work—Ed. Thompson and J. Slater.

Lettering—L. L. Ball.

The work is over, the dance is done; the lights, the music, the fun, and going home in the morning and on yawns out sleepily, "Did it pay?"

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the board of registration for the Township of Northville, County of Wayne, Michigan, will meet in Murdock's drug store, in the village of Northville, in said county on Saturday, March 29, 1913, from 9:00 o'clock a. m. to 5:00 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of registering the electors of said township.

Dated Northville, March 15, 1913.

FRED H. TOUSEY,

Township Clerk.

NORTHVILLE TOWN'S GOOD ROADS

NOT MANY IN STATE HAS MORE MILES OF THEM

Less than Three Miles Yet to Build to Practically Complete the Work

Not many towns in the state have a larger mileage of good roads than has Northville. Under the supervision of Highway Commissioner Jesse Clark there has been completed in this township 16 miles of good roads and 13 steel and cement bridges.

This comprises the essential roads of the town except a half mile on the house line by Harry Clark's place and a half mile at Hiram Holmes', and a mile on the Fishery road to George Whipple's corner.

This would leave only the Centre street road for future consideration but for the present the people who live on that road can reach the good roads by driving half a mile in either direction.

Mr. Clark has made a splendid official and has made roads for this township that have been declared by the State Highway Commission as first class and the state has turned over to the town an award of $1,033. No more has been spread for taxes in all this "Good Roads" period than was spread under the old system for the past 25 years, the only difference being that people have paid the tax in cash instead of a bluff at "working it out."

Just what will be appropriated this year is not known. That will depend on what is done by the voters on election day, but to appropriate less than has been the custom for three years past, would seemingly be unwise.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.

By the Pastor:
Easter Sunday March 23 Morning service, 10 o'clock Subject: "The Immortality of the Soul" Mr. Don Nagle will sing.

Evening service, 7:00 o'clock. A chorus of 16 voices will give a cantata entitled, "The Holy Night." An orchestra of six pieces will accompany the chorus. Mr. Don Nagle of Albion will be present and assist.

The annual men's supper will be held next Wednesday night in the parlors of the church. Remember the date, March 26.

Consolation.
The deaf man may yet console himself that his ears serve many purposes, including the supporting of his spectacles and pencil.

OAK GROVE.

ANOTHER SUBDIVISION AT REDFORD SAID TO BE THE BEST OF ALL.

The phenomenal sale of village lots in Redford during the past few months is keeping up and it has been necessary to secure more to meet the demand. We have now purchased, and will immediately put on sale, the Basevorth property, consisting of 28 acres. This land lies on the south side of Grand River avenue and extends from the center of the village west to, and including, the beautiful Oak Grove of 12 acres.

This plot of land is the most desirable in the village and is called the cream for residents' purposes.

It will be sold under restrictions that will forever make it the best. The prices will be low for a starter, but will be increased as the sales are made.

Those who purchased lots during the past few months on the north side of Grand River have made money. One Northville lady has refused $500 for a lot that she purchased for $275 in November.

The object of this announcement is to appraise the people of Northville of the opportunity to secure some of these lots at the first price for they will be sure to advance rapidly. You can see me any day of the week at Redford.

SYNOPSIS

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, sends a man to intercept his daughter, Molly, who is headed for the post. An Indian outbreak is threatened. "Brick" Hamilton, a sergeant who had just arrived with messages to McDonald, volunteers for the mission and starts alone. Molly arrives at Fort Ripley two days ahead of schedule. She decides to push on to Fort Dodge by stage in company with "Sutler" Bill Moylan, Gonzales, a gambler, is also a passenger. Hamilton meets the stage with stories of depredations committed by the Indians. It is decided to return to Ripley. The driver deserts the stage when Indians appear. The Indians are repulsed in attack on the stage by Hamilton, Moylan and Gonzales. The latter is killed. Moylan is killed in next attack. Indians retreat, and Hamilton and Molly wait for the next move.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

Certain facts were clear—to remain meant death, torture for him if they were taken alive, and worse than death for her. Perspiration burst out upon his face at the thought. No! Great God! not that! he would kill her himself first. Yet this was the truth, the truth to be faced. The nearest available troops were at Dodge, a company of infantry. If they started at once they could never arrive in time to prevent an attack at daybreak. The Indians undoubtedly knew this, realized the utter helplessness of their victims, and were acting accordingly. Otherwise they would never have lighted that fire her remained on guard. Moreover if the two of them should succeed in stealing forth from the shelter of the coach, should skulk unseen amid the dense blackness of the overhanging bluff, eluding the watchers, what would it profit in the end? Their trail would be clear; with the first gray of dawn those savage trackers would be at work, and they would be trapped in the open, on foot, utterly helpless even to fight.

The man's hands clenched and undimmed about his rifle barrel in an agony of indignation, his eyes, peering in the silhouette of the girl against the lighter fire of sky. No, not that! Not that! They must do their trail, leave behind no faintest trace of pursuit for those hounds to follow. Yet how could the miracle be accomplished? Out from the mists of tortured memory came, as a faint hope, a dim recollection of that narrow gully cutting straight down across the trail over which the runaway had crawled in full gallop. That surely could not be far back, and was of sufficient depth to hide them in the darkness. He was uncertain how far it extended, but at some time it had been a water course and must have reached the river. And the river would hide their trail! A new hope sprang into his eyes. He felt the sudden straightening up of his body.

What was it? she questioned startled. "Do you see anything? Are they coming?"

"No, no! almost imperceptibly. It is still as death out there, but I almost believe I have discovered a means of escape. Do you remember a gully we ran over while I was on top of the stage?"

"I am not sure, was it when that awful jolt came?"

"Yes, it hung me to the foot-board just when I had untangled the lines. We could not have traveled a dozen yards farther before we struck this bluff—could we?"

"I hardly think so," yet evidently bewildered by his rapid questioning. "Only I was so confused and frightened I can scarcely remember. Why are you so anxious to know?"

"Because," he returned earnestly, bending toward her. "I believe that gash in the earth is going to get us out of here. Anyhow it is the only chance I can figure. If we can creep through to the river, undiscovered, I'll agree to leave Mister Indian guessing as to where we've gone."

The new note of animation in the man's voice aroused her, but she grasped his arm tighter.

"But—but, oh, can we? Won't they be hiding there too?"

"It's a chance, that's all—but better than waiting here for a certainty. See here, Miss McDonald, and he caught her hand in his own, forgetful of all save his own purpose and the necessity of strengthening her to play out the game, "the trend of that gully is to the west; except up here close to the bluff it runs too far away for a guard line. The Indians will be lying out here on the open prairie; they will creep as close as they dare under cover of darkness. I'll bet there are twenty red snakes now within a hundred feet of us—oh, don't shiver and lose your nerve! They'll not try to close that gap yet; it's too dangerous with us on guard and only one side of the coach exposed. That fellow was trying to get a while ago, and they've kept quiet ever since I let drive at him. They know the limits of the safety zone, and will keep there until just before daylight. That is when they'll try to creep up upon us. Have you got the time?"

"She opened her watch, feeling for the hands with her fingers, wondering vaguely at her own calmness. The cool resoluteness of Hamilton was like a tonic.

"It is a little after one o'clock," she said slowly, "although I am not sure my watch is exactly right."

"Near enough; there are signs of daylight at four—three hours left, that ought to be sufficient, but with no darkness to spare. Will you go with me?—Will you do exactly as I say?"

She drew a swift breath, holding her hand to her side.

"Oh, yes," her voice catching, "what—what else can I do? I cannot stay here with those dead men!"

"But I want you to go, because—well, because you trust me," he urged, a new trace of tenderness in his lowered voice. "Because you know I would give my life to defend you."

He was not sure, but he thought her face was suddenly uplifted, her eyes seeking to see him in the darkness.

"I do," she answered gratefully. "You must believe I do; but I have never been in such peril before, in such a situation of horror, and I am all unnerved. There doesn't seem to be anything left me but to trust you."

"That is good, all I can ask I know you are all right, but I want you to keep your nerve. We're going to take a big chance; we've got to do it—a single misstep, a slip of the foot, an incontinent breath may cost our lives."

"Are you going to try to go away?" To elude the Indians?

"Yes, and there is not one possibility of facing—no, creep the length of the gully, there, and to reach the river. Here is Gonzales, but don't be afraid of it, it is not dead men who are going to hurt us. Saving the strap over your shoulder this way, and slip the revolver into the holster. That is right, wait until you are as close as we can, and have our hands free." His lips tightened, stilling about in the darkness, softly deciding what to take. "Do you happen to know if either of the passengers carried my gun?"

"Gib?"

"Pardon me for it?" he inquired, "raters; something for lunch en route?"

"Oh, yes, Mr. Moylan did, said he never took chances on having to go hungry. It was in a flat leather pouch."

"Haversack. I have it. That will be enough to carry with the canteen. Now there is only one thing more before we leave. We must impress those fellows with the notion that we are wide-awake, and on guard yet. See any movement out there?"

"I am not sure," she answered doubtfully. "There is a black smudge beyond that dead pony; lean forward here and you can see what I mean—on the ground I imagined it moved just then." She pointed into the darkness. "It is the merest shadow, but seemed to wiggle along, and then stop, it is still now."

Hamilton focused his keen eyes on the spot indicated shading them with one hand.

"Slide back further on the seat," he whispered softly, "and let me in next to you."

"There was a moment's silence, the only sound the wind. The girl gripped the back of the seat nervously with both hands, holding her breath; the Sergeant, the outline of his face silhouetted against the sky, stared motionless into the night without. Suddenly, not making a sound, he lifted the rifle to his shoulder.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Way to the River.

She waited in agony as he sighted carefully, striving to gauge the distance. It seemed an interminable time before his finger pressed the trigger. Then came the report, a flash of flame, and the powder smoke blown back in her face. Kalf-blunder by the discharge, she yet saw that black smudge leap upright; again the Henry blazed, and the dim figure went down. There was a cry—a mad yell of rage in which scattered voices joined, spits of fire cleaving the darkness, the barking of guns of different caliber. A bit of flying lead tore through the leather back of the coach with an odd rip; another struck the casing of the door, sending the wooden splinters flying like arrows. Hawk-eyed, Hamilton fired twice more, aiming at the sparks, grimly certain that a responding howl from the left evidenced a hit. Then, as quickly, all was still, intensely black once more. The Sergeant drew back from the window, leaning his gun against the casing.

"That will hold them for a while," he said cheerfully. "Two less out there, I reckon, and the others won't get careless again right away. Now is our time; are you ready?"

"There was no response, the stillness so profound he could hear the faint ticking of the girl's watch. He reached out, almost alarmed, and touched her dress.

"What is the trouble?" he questioned anxiously. "Didn't you hear me speak?"

He waited breathless, but there was no movement, no sound, and his hand, trembling, in spite of his iron nerve, groped its way upward. She was lying back against the opposite window, her head bent sideways.

"My God," he thought, "did those devils get her?"

She lifted her slight figure, up on one arm, all else blotted out, all other memory vanished through this instant dread. His cheek stung where flying splinters had struck him, but that was nothing. She was warm, her flesh was warm; then his searching fingers felt the moist blood trickling down from the edge of her hair. He let out his breath slowly, the sudden relief almost choking him. It was bad enough surely, but not what he had first feared, not death. She had been struck hard—a flying splinter of wood, perhaps, or a deflected bullet—her hair matted with blood, yet it was no more than a flesh wound, although leaving her unconscious. If he hesitated it was but for an instant. The entire situation recurred to him in a flash; he must change his plans, but dare waste no time. If they were to escape it must be accomplished now, shadowed by darkness, while savage watchers were safely beyond round his lean jaws set with fierce determination, and he grimly hitched his belt forward, one snowy hand fingering the revolver. He would have to trust to that weapon entirely for defense, he could not carry both the rifle and the girl.

Moving slowly, cautiously, fearful lest some creaking of the old stage might betray his motion to those keen eyes below, he backed through the open door. Once feeling the ground firm beneath his feet, and making sure that both canteen and haversack were secure, he reached back into the darkness, grasping the form of the unconscious girl. He stood erect with her held securely in his arms, strands of hair blowing around his cheek, listening intently, striving with keen eyes to penetrate the black curtain. He was so fortunate and farther along a foot slipped on a treacherous stone, but the slight noise did unnoticed in the night. It was farther to the gully than he had supposed; his heart was in his throat, fearing he had missed in half-believing the depression failed to extend to the base of the bluff. Then his foot, exploring blindly, touched the edge of the bank. Carefully, he laid his burden down, placing his battered campaign hat beneath her head. He bent over her again, assuring himself that she breathed regularly, and then crept down alone into the stalky ravine.

"His nerves were like steel now, his hand steady, his heart beating without an accelerated throb. He knew the work, and rejoiced in it. This was why he was a soldier. Silently, swiftly, he unbuckled his belt, refastening it across the straps so as to hold canteen and haversack noiseless, and then, revolver in hand, began creeping down under cover of the low banks. He must explore the path first before attempting to bear her along in his arms; must be sure the passage was unguarded. After it swerved to the right there would be little danger, but while it ran straight, some cautious savage might have chosen it to skulk in. To deal with such he needed to be alone, and free.

He must have crawled thus for thirty yards, hands and knees aching horribly, his eyes ever peering over the edge of the bank, his ears tingling to the slightest noise. The tiny glow of the fire far away to the left was alone visible in the intense blackness; the wind brought to him no sound of movement. The stillness was profound, almost uncanny; as he paused and listened he could distinguish the throb of his heart. He was across the trail at last, for he felt and traced the ruts of wheels, and where the banks had been worked down almost to a level with the prairie. He crossed this opening like a snake, and then arose to his knees beyond, where the gully deepened. He remained poised, motionless, scarcely daring to breathe. Surely that was something else—that shapeless blotch of shadow, barely topping the line of bank. Was it ten feet away? Or five? He could not tell. He staved; there was no movement, and yet his eyes began to discern dimly the outlines—the head and shoulders of a man. The Sergeant crept forward—on inch, two inches, a foot. The figure did not stir. Now he was sure the fellow's head was lying flat on the turf, oddly distorted by a feathered war bonnet. The straggled posture, the utter lack of movement, seemed proof that the third warrior had fallen asleep on watch. Like a cat Hamilton crept up slowly, low and low, poised for a spring.

Some sense of the wild must have stirred the savage into momentary consciousness. Suddenly he sat up, gripping the gun in his hands. Yet even as his opening eye saw dimly the Sergeant peering shadow, before he could scream his alarm, or spring upright, the revolver butt struck with dull thud, and he went tumbling backward into the ditch, a library of dark ending in a hoarse groan. From somewhere, out of the dense darkness in front a voice, called, sharp and guttural, as if its owner had been startled by the mystic round of the blow. It was the language of the Apaches and out of his vague memory of the tongue, spurred to recollection by the swift emergency, Hamilton growled a hoarse answer, hanging breathlessly above the motionless body upon the "rock" of the fellow's response proved him without suspicion. He waited, counting the seconds, every muscle strained with expectation, listening. He had a feeling that some one was crawling over the short grass, wiggling along like a snake, but the faint sound, if sound it was, grew less distinct. Finally he lifted his head above the edge of the bank, but saw nothing, not even a dim shadow.

"They are closing in, I reckon," he thought soberly, "and it isn't likely there will be any more of these gentry as far back as this: looks as though this gully turned west just beyond anyhow I've got to risk it."

He returned more rapidly, knowing the passage, yet with no less caution, finding the unconscious girl lying exactly as he had left her. As he clasped her form in his arms, her lips uttered some incoherent words, but otherwise she gave no sign of life.

"Yes, yes," he whispered close to her ear, hoping thus to hold her silent. "It is all right now; only keep still."

Queen Elizabeth Opened It.

In connection with Granville Barker's production of "Twelfth Night," it is interesting to recall that we have still standing in London one of the halls in which the play was performed during Shakespeare's lifetime. In the hall of the Middle Temple, opened by Queen Elizabeth in person in 1576, "Twelfth Night" was acted at Christmas, 1601, and there is a strong probability that Shakespeare himself played a part in that performance. In the early days the Inns of court were patrons of the drama, and the hall of Gray's Inn can also claim to have witnessed a contemporary Shakespeare production, "A Comedy of Errors" having been given there in 1594.—London Chronicle.

THE MONEY ASKED FOR THE M. A. C. MAY BE GIVEN DESPITE A HOSTILITY TO SNYDER.

STATE GRANGE DEFENDS THE COLLEGE PRESIDENT.

The Short Ballot Bill Stands Little Chance of Going Through, and the Recall Cannot Be Submitted at the Spring Election.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Despite the fact that a majority of the senate committee on the agricultural college are personally opposed to President J. L. Snyder, of the Michigan Agricultural College, and some of the members of the house committee believe that a change in the management of the institution would be desirable, every effort will be made by the two committees to secure the increase of appropriation asked for by the state board of agriculture.

In order to get a line on the sentiment, Senator Fred Woodworth, chairman of the senate committee, called a conference between the two committees and the state board of agriculture. At the outset Woodworth informed the board that the prejudice against President Snyder was so strong that he did not believe it possible to get the appropriation of the institution increased. Senator Odell, who is also a member of the committee, said that the students at the college were unanimously opposed to the president and he declared that there was little sentiment in his favor among the alumni. He claimed also that the farmers of the state were not in sympathy with the institution.

N. P. Hull, former master of the state grange, and the various members of the state board of agriculture rose to the defense of the president, and all of the members of the board declared that they had been over the state and had heard nothing of the sentiment against the college which Odell and Woodworth claimed existed. In the end it was decided that the members of the board and the house and senate committees should push forth their best efforts to secure the needed appropriation. Every one agreed that the institution was growing and that more money was needed to carry on the work.

Although the Odell short ballot bill passed the house by unanimous vote it has been filibustered in the senate and stands in the chair of geyser through the legislative this session. Rep. Baird, one of the progressive republicans, who led the fight against the measure pointed out that it was not only a waste of time, but that the primary and then take that right away from them by allowing the chief executive to name all of the state officers below lieutenant governor.

Rep. Baird is a strong adherent of the primary system and he believes with many others that it will be a step in the wrong direction to increase the governor's appointive power and take from the people the right of deciding for themselves as to their candidates for attorney general, secretary of state and other administrative officers. It is pointed out that the taking of three or four names from the ballot would not shorten it to any great extent and that it is the long county tickets that causes the voters so much confusion.

All chance of submitting the recall amendment at the spring election has gone glimmering and it is doubtful whether the amendments providing for the initiative and referendum will leave the printers in time for certification by the secretary of state to the county clerks.

Sixty-seven members of the house locked themselves in under a call, in an effort to correct an error made in the resolution providing for submitting the constitutional amendments relative to the recall, and failed because two members were opposed, and 67 votes were required. The senate had sent back the recall resolution amended to require more than 55 per cent on petitions. The house refused to concur and changed the proposition back to its original form which read "less than 25 per cent."

Inadvertently the necessity of making the changes in two places in the bill, was overlooked. When the error was discovered the resolution was recalled from the senate. A count of noses developed that just the required two-thirds number of members were present. During the interim necessary for sending after the resolution, it was discovered that two members would not vote to amend the resolution, and the plan had to be abandoned.

The senate has agreed to the semi-monthly pay bill. This is a compromise between the monthly pay day request of employers and the weekly pay day demands of employees. The Murtha bill making it a misdemeanor for any public official to fail in carrying out pre-election pledges was agreed to in committee by the senate.

Senator Allswede's horse power tax on automobiles which is a preliminary or auxiliary measure to the trunk line highway now pending in the senate has been passed by the senate on third reading. This carries a tax of 50 cents per horse power on pleasure vehicles and 25 cents per horse power on commercial cars. The difference is accounted for by the fact that commercial vehicles practically are limited to the use of streets in cities and do not travel on highways.

ing the standards of purity of drugs, foods, etc., was agreed to. The Amerson measure prohibiting the misbranding of foods and drinks was favored. Senator Woodworth gained agreement on the part of the committee of the whole for the amendment to the druggist bill which has to do with the authority to revoke licenses in cases of the unauthorized sale of drugs or poisons.

Senator Robert Walter, chairman of the fish committee appointed to meet with the Wisconsin legislature to frame uniform fish legislation for Lake Michigan, has just received word from the game warden of Wisconsin, commending the Clark commercial fisheries bill which just passed the house. The Wisconsin expert says it is the best measure of its kind he has ever seen bearing on lake fisheries and will ask the Wisconsin legislature to adopt it for that state as the basis for uniform fish laws.

Michigan and Wisconsin never before have been able to agree absolutely on the commercial fisheries legislation and the difference has been a source of no little trouble to the game wardens of the two states and the commercial fishing interests representing the two sides of Lake Michigan. The complications have been so numerous and troublesome that Senator Walter determined this year to make a fight for uniformity.

With but little opposition the house committee on revision and amendment of the constitution reported out the resolution to submit state wide prohibition to the people of Michigan. It cannot be said that the members of the house received the measure with great glee for many have asserted their personal disinclination to support such a measure but adding thereto a statement that probably they would vote for the bill if the committee turned it loose and the indications now are better for success for the resolution than in any previous session, in both houses.

The action of the committee this session comes as something of a surprise, observers point out, in view of the fact that such other measures such as equal suffrage, the initiative, referendum and recall, have the call on public attention, while in other years deliberation after deliberation came here to fight for such a measure, and petitions by the thousand were filed with out effect. This year with little or no agitation the resolution is placed in position where it is generally admitted there is a chance for its passage.

The committee was not agreed on the matter, and the report is without favorable recommendation for the resolution by the committee. On the question of reporting out the bill the following members voted in favor, Reps. Skyles, Hulse, Flowers, Middleton, Pray, Wiel and H. H. McElroy, Stevens, Rice, while Chairman Ashley and Reps. Sutton, Freeman and Poole favored definitely postponing consideration of the matter.

Butler and cream must hereafter be above reproach as the result of a bill passed in the house. The Rayburn measure which requires that butter must contain at least 81 per cent of butter fat and cream at least 18 per cent of milk fat, was passed by a vote of 27 to 2 and sent to the senate. Advocates of the measure asserted the standards required are those adopted by the general government, and it is declared the bill will bring prestige to Michigan butter as well as to protect the buyer from purchasing a large quantity of water in his butter.

All doubts as to the progressive nature of the senate were dispelled when the upper house in a single afternoon passed the resolutions providing for the submission of constitutional amendments that would give the people of the state the initiative and referendum on legislation, the recall, the initiative and referendum on constitutional amendments and the short ballot.

Five years ago these measures would have been considered fit only for the discussion of statesmen of socialistic tendencies. And yet, such changes have been wrought that all these measures hardly brought out an antagonistic comment from the floor. In this day of primaries when every aspirant to public office must explain his action and his vote to the folks at home, the people really have come to rule. "The people want it," is excuse enough for anything in this progressive day.

Old legislators who had in the house and senate of five and ten years ago fairly gasped at the initiative and referendum slipped through the senate. There was no further discussion of the short ballot proposal of Senator Odell. Some of the members of the senate did not want it, but they were of the opinion that it would be killed in the house.

Senator Allswede's horse power tax on automobiles which is a preliminary or auxiliary measure to the trunk line highway now pending in the senate has been passed by the senate on third reading. This carries a tax of 50 cents per horse power on pleasure vehicles and 25 cents per horse power on commercial cars. The difference is accounted for by the fact that commercial vehicles practically are limited to the use of streets in cities and do not travel on highways.

MAKE SOMETHING OF LIFE

Not Without Reason Should Any Pass Through the Joys and Troubles of the World.

Thousands of men breathe, move and live; pass on the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They did not a particle of good in the world; and none were best by them, none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke, could be recalled, and so they perished—their light went out in darkness and they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die? O man immortal! Live for something. Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. No your name, your deed, will be a legend on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as bright on earth as the stars of heaven.—Thomas Chalmers.

SPRING HAS COME.

Spring is here without a doubt; the small boy doffed his shoes and stockings, donned his last year's straw hat and with his pockets full of marbles can be seen down on his knees in the dirt deep in the mysteries of knuckle and taw. A few days later when tired of marbles you will find him on the banks of a creek with a can full of worms, a hickory pole and a fish line, having a glorious time. The buds on the trees will hardly show a tint of green before he will be swimming, taking cramps and just missed being drowned, having oceans of fun, had colds and sore throat. Oh, halcyon days of youth, oh spring time of life, oh days of mumps, measles and stonebruses, all too quickly you fly; the boy grows to manhood; old age grows on pace, a few more years and he totters on the brink of the grave; yet a map never grows so old but that in the spring when the boys first get out their marbles he will stop a moment to watch the game and philosophy will recall days long since past.

It frequently happens that a stranger coming into a community and putting on airs, is taken up at once and almost boozed, though nothing whatever is known of him or her. The old friends whom we have known all our lives and whose characters are firm and established as the everlasting hills, are too apt to become commonplace to us, but we know they will do the up, and it is not best to give them to for those whom we do not know. The man or woman who builds up a character and maintains it for years in the same community deserves some consideration, and the friendship of such people is to be preferred at all times to the showy attention of strangers.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES.

Morning service at 10:00 o'clock. Subject: "The Resurrection's Aftermath." Special Easter music by the choir.

The members of the church and congregation are urged to be present at this Easter service. A vote is to be taken on the question of changing the time of the morning service from 10:30 to 10:00. The presence of the entire congregation is necessary so that the sentiment of the majority may be ascertained.

The Sunday school meets immediately after the morning service.

The improved condition of the church has increased the attendance and efficiency of the Sabbath school. Members of the church and congregation are urged to join the Sunday school.

The Christian Endeavor will meet at six o'clock. These meetings are of special interest and influence to the young people. A hearty welcome to all.

There will be no evening service. An Easter Cantata will be given at the Methodist church, to which members of the Presbyterian congregation will be welcomed.

One week from next Sunday evening the Sacred Cantata, "The Holy City," given during dedication week and which was so enthusiastically received will be repeated. No admission will be charged, but an offering will be taken. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend this concert.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES.

A regular meeting of the ladies of the Baptist church will be held at the home of Mrs. Alvin Matson Wednesday afternoon, at 2:00 o'clock. Will you be there?

Services will be held Sunday morning and evening as usual, at this writing it is impossible to tell who the speaker will be.

We hope the scholars belonging to our Sunday school will be found in their place next Sunday. We need your presence.

B. Y. P. U. will be held one hour before evening service, and the leader is James VanDyne. Come and we will do you good.

Mid-week prayer services on Thursday evening.

The Farmington girls defeated the Holy Basket ball team of the Army in Pontiac Thursday evening, thus winning the county title. The superior basket throwing of Miss Warner from the field and the foul baskets of Miss Schroeder won the game for Farmington, though the guarding was such good work that the Holy girls found it well nigh impossible to score. Result, 10 to 9. Now it's up to our girls to play with New Baltimore for the championship, inasmuch as they were defeated by the latter team in a previous game.

Chauncey M. Noble, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of this township, passed away early Sunday morning at his home, two and one-half miles northwest of this village. The weather being mild Saturday afternoon Mr. Noble took a walk to his barn. A little later he was found lying in the yard where he had fallen with a stroke a few moments before. Mr. Noble lived on the same farm for 63 years, arriving there from the state of New York when but 21 years of age and had he lived until next month would have been 84 years old. He retained a sound mind until within a few months. Besides his aged widow he leaves four children: Sheldon Noble, of Midland; Adelbert Noble, Miss Harriet Noble and Miss Carrie Noble of this village. He also leaves a large circle of friends and relatives, having been a prosperous farmer in this township for many years. The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the house, conducted by Rev. George E. Gullen, of Detroit. Burial in East Farmington.

Light Delivery Trucks

Men Must Adopt Trucks.

Men who make deliveries, large or small, are bound to do it by motor. In business the methods which are cheapest and best are bound to win out, you know. And the difference here is so enormous that the change from the horse to the motor truck is coming as fast as good trucks can be made. Men have only been waiting for a simple, trouble-proof truck, which stands use, abuse and jar.

There are men who need trucks of two or three tons' capacity. There are several good trucks for them—trucks of 1500 pounds capacity. For such men there is no truck which compares with the Reo. We have at this writing not a single real competitor in strength or power, in simplicity, economy or price. One can prove this almost at a glance.

Pays For Itself.

THE REO Truck pays for itself in short order. Any man who can keep it busy will save its price in one year. When it isn't busy the cost is stopped.

You need no new employees. Any man who can drive a horse can drive a Reo truck.

DETROIT HAS

Most New Cars.

About 500 New Motors Have Been Added to Street Railway Since 1910.

The first section of the company's new car shop located in Highland Park will be completed within the next few days, and when placed in operation will afford much relief to the cramped condition of the Monroe avenue shops," said publicly agent, Van Zant of the Detroit United railway.

"The relief will come in the form of a more rapid handling of cars in for repairs and alterations.

"The second section of the shops will be started just as soon as the weather permits and when done the company will have a big enough to permit the complete building of cars.

"Speaking of cars, figures were recently published giving the number of new cars ordered for the Cleveland and street railway lines. Commencing with 1910, there have been ordered for Cleveland 76 cars with motors and 200-trail cars, these figures including the very last orders, delivery of which will not be completed before June of this year.

"The Detroit United railway has one much better than that, for commencing in 1910, this company has placed orders for 325 double truck motor cars for city use and 30 for interurban purposes, together with 50 single truck motor cars for city purposes. This does not include the 100 single truck cars besides ordered for replacement of the old side-door cars on the so-called three-cent lines.

"It may be interesting to know that, although the Cleveland railway system has 100 miles more of track than has Detroit, it does not operate as many street cars as are operated here, and thus cannot give anywhere near the service the Detroit public receives."

PRACTICAL HORSESHOEER

Dr. W. J. Burrows' farm house caught fire yesterday afternoon, probably from an incubator and was practically all destroyed. The family was away at the time but the neighbors did all they could to save the property.

There was a large crowd out at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening for the Union services. Splendid addresses were given by Rev. R. M. Pierce of the Methodist and Rev. J. E. Webber of the Presbyterian churches, a fitting final to the dedication week.

Walter J. Parle and M. R. Lemaux of Pontiac, acting as a committee for that city's order of Knights of Columbus, were in Northville Monday for the purpose of inspecting the new lodge furniture which is being built by our Globe Furniture Co. The furniture will be ready for installation in the new club rooms of the order April 1st.

Three progressives from the state of Washington will stump Michigan in behalf of the bull Moose party during the spring campaign. They will leave the national capital for Detroit Saturday, and purpose to spend a week out in the state, returning to Detroit the following Saturday to hear Col. Roosevelt's address. The trio of Washington progressives is composed of Congressman A. J. Fairbank, Congressman J. W. Bryan, and former Congressman Stanton Washington.

Garry Deal was the hero of a runaway accident Tuesday afternoon. One of H. Holmes' horses, which the boys had down town, started at a breakneck speed down the street and when it reached Pettibone's garage Garry leaped out and captured the frightened steed just like a Detroit traffic policeman. Of course there were no women in the rig to be rescued, but had there been, Garry would have landed them safely upon Mother Earth. Anyhow, Garry made a nice stop and up-to-date is entitled to the first medal for runaway stopping.

Keep this date in mind—Saturday, March 29—the new spring hats at Mrs. McCully's.

WOULDN'T TAKE ANY CHANCES

Woman Surely Could Not Be Accused of Having Any Lack of Caution.

One day a very nervous, timid-looking woman, accompanied by a robust farmer, appeared on the platform of a little railway at a remote country town. For a time she devoted her attention to the time table, but she did not find there the information she sought, and she stepped up to the station master as he came out of the office.

"Will you please tell me if the three-fifteen train has gone yet?" she asked, in apparent concern.

"Yes, about twenty minutes ago," he replied.

"And when will the four-thirty be along, do you think?"

"Why, not for some time yet, of course."

"Are there any expresses before then?"

"Not one."

"Any freight trains?"

"No."

"Nothing at all?"

"Nothing whatever."

"Are you quite sure?"

"Certainly I am, or I wouldn't have said so."

"Then," said the timid woman, turning to her husband, "I think we'll cross the tracks, William."—Youth's Companion.

CONFIDENCE STRENGTHENED.

"I have great confidence in him."

"That so?"

"Yes; I had a good 10-cent cigar exposed in my vest pocket the other day, and he didn't reach over and take it."

Illustrative Case.

"What are those two smiling?"

"I don't know unless it is because she is convinced and he is pigeon-toed."

"A Sunday school teacher in the middle west asked all of her pupils who wished to go to heaven to hold up their right hands. All did but one little girl."

"Why, Mary," said the teacher, "why don't you hold up your hand today, just as you did last Sunday when I asked the same question?"

"I know," said Mary, "but papa has just got tickets for Los Angeles."

They Got Left.

John and Betty, aged five and four years, had started on a railway journey with their parents on Monday, but reached the station just in time to hear the engineer ring his bell and see the train pull out of the station, leaving the family behind.

Next Sunday John and Betty were started out on the way to Sunday school. When they were half way there the bell rang, and presently they came regretfully back.

"We got left," they announced.

Member of the Union.

Man who worked under a former city editor of the Washington Post vouches for the truth of this story about him.

The telegraph editor, so the story goes, "got a flash one night that John La Farge, the painter, was dead. He called the news out to the city editor, who, catching only the name and profession, yelled to a reporter."

"Willoughby! A painter by the name of La Farge is dead. Rush down to the Central Labor union and see what you can dig up about him!"

Efficacious Spanking.

Little Martha was obstinate and just would not go to sleep, notwithstanding frequent orders from father and mother, who were anxious to get to sleep themselves. Finally, after many threats, the mother arose, and went through the motions of giving Martha a spanking. There was hearty snuffling for a few minutes, then quiet. The father and mother, relieved, were dozing off again, when a little voice piped up:

"Mamma."

No answer.

"Mamma, w't 'd you 'pank me for?"

IN A SHADOW.

Inveterate Tea Drinker Feared Paralysis.

Steady use of either tea or coffee often produces alarming symptoms as the poison (caffeine) contained in these beverages acts with more potency in some persons than in others.

"I was never a coffee drinker," writes an ill woman, "but a tea drinker. I was very nervous, had frequent spells of sick headache and heart trouble, and was subject at times to severe attacks of bilious colic."

"No end of sleepless nights—would have spells at night when my right side would get numb and tingle like a thousand needles were pricking my flesh. At times I could hardly put my tongue out of my mouth and my right eye and ear were affected."

"The doctors told me I was liable to become paralyzed at any time, so I was in constant dread. I took no end of medicine—all to no good."

"The doctors told me to quit using tea, but I thought I could not live without it—that it was my only stay. I had been a tea drinker for twenty-five years; was under the doctor's care for fifteen."

"About six months ago, I finally quit tea and commenced to drink Postum."

"I have never had one spell of sick headache since and only one light attack of bilious colic. Have quit having those numb spells at night, sleep well and my heart is getting stronger all the time." Name given upon request.

Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavor is always uniform. Sold by grocers everywhere.

KING OF GREECE ASSASSINATED

DEGENERATE TAKES KING'S LIFE AS LATTER SAUNTERS ALONG STREET

HE DIES IN HALF AN HOUR AFTER BEING SHOT DOWN

Officials Take Oath of Allegiance to Prince Constantine; Queen on Way. Perfect Order Maintained Throughout.

SALONIKA, March 18.—King George of Greece, was assassinated while walking in the streets of Salonika this afternoon. The assassin was a Greek of low mental type, who gave his name as Aleko Schinas. He shot the king through the heart.

The king was accompanied only by an aide de camp, Lieut. Col. Francoulis. The assassin came suddenly at the king and fired one shot from a seven-chamber revolver. The tragedy caused intense excitement. Schinas was seized immediately and overpowered.

Dies in Few Minutes.

The king fell into the arms of his aide when shot. Two soldiers ran up, on hearing the firing, and helped to support him. He was placed in a carriage and efforts were made to stop the bleeding, but he breathed his last on the way to the hospital nearby.

When Prince Nicholas bade the officers swear fealty to Constantine, they shouted "Long Live the King."

Prince Nicholas is the only member of the royal family in Salonika. Mourning emblems are displayed everywhere. The Greek government has issued a proclamation announcing that the oath of fealty to King Constantine has been taken.

Prince Nicholas, the king's third son, and other officers hurried to the hospital arriving first. Prince Nicholas summoned the officers and, speaking in a voice choked with sobs, said:

"It is my deep grief to have to announce to you the death of our beloved king, and I have you to swear fealty to your new sovereign, King Constantine."

Progressives First on Ballot.

The electors of Michigan will have an opportunity of voting on four amendments to the constitution this coming April election.

Secretary of State Marshall this morning certified to the faithful amendment as applied to constitutional amendments and the initiative and referendum as applied to laws, also the amendment proposing prohibition of alcohol. The equal suffrage amendment has already been certified.

There is no chance now for the recall, as the time limit is not long enough to allow certification to be made to county clerks and sent to the time to place the amendment on the ballot.

County clerks are wiring or telephoning the secretary of state to ascertain the order in which the various tickets shall appear on the ballot. Here is the proper way, and the only one that will be legal. National progress, i.e. republican, democrat, socialist, prohibitionist, socialist labor.

Thus for the first time in years the republican ticket will not appear first.

Cleveland's Chief of Police Guilty.

The civil service commission announced that it had found Chief of Police Fred Kohler guilty of "gross immorality, conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman and conduct subversive to good order and discipline in the police department," and immediately discharged him from office.

The foregoing charges were filed by Mayor Baker and the trial of the chief occupied the whole of last week.

Gov. Ferris Signs Home Rule.

Gov. Ferris signed the Verdier home rule bill immediately after the engraved copy of the measure was placed on his desk. The bill gives to cities the immediate right to amend their charters piecemeal, and the signature of the governor finally makes it into law.

Charles DeYoung, of Grand Rapids, was arrested for the tenth time on a charge of fraud. In each case he has been convicted of circulating petitions for subscriptions based on falsifications that his family was sick and that his home had been burned, leaving him destitute.

Standing on a street corner in Grand Rapids, Fred Wirth, 25, drunk person and died before he could be sent to a hospital. He leaves a widow and three children, one only a week old. Despondency was the cause.

Neighbors becoming alarmed at not having seen signs of life at the home of Miss Dora Stewart, who lived alone on a farm three miles east of Eaton Rapids, forced an entrance to the house and found Miss Stewart dead on the floor. Indications were that death resulted from natural causes.

Universal Hero.

For America, at least, there is the one universal hero. No one questions his greatness. None names him but to praise.

Who is that universal hero? Is it Napoleon? Many condemn him as ingersoll did, as the "imperial personification of force and murder." No, it is not Napoleon.

Washington? Then Wendell Phillips said: "But the great Virginian held slaves." So even Washington had his detractors.

Lincoln? Perhaps later on, but not yet.

Well, who is this universal hero of America?

John Hampden, of course. He objected to paying taxes.—Kansas City Times.

BURNED AND ITCHED BADLY

529 Lincoln Park Bld., Chicago, Ill.

"A year ago I received a very severe burn on my left arm. I caught cold in it and it was all sore and ulcerated. The sore was as large as a silver dollar. It was all red and inflamed and had pus running out of it. I suffered terribly from burning pain; could not sleep for two weeks. I burned and itched so badly. I applied—Silva—Silva and a salve, my druggist recommended as his own, but got no relief. I then commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed the burned parts with Cuticura Soap and applied the Cuticura Ointment on a piece of lint. I got relief from the first, and my arm healed nicely. I was again able to be at work again. Had I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment at first, I would have avoided lots of suffering." (Signed) Harry Jones, Mar. 5, 1912.
