

AUSTRIA MOVING TROOPS TO FRONT

EUROPE IS THREATENED WITH GRAVE POSSIBILITY OF WAR.

POWER DECLARES IT WILL TAKE INDEPENDENT ACTION.

Great Activity at Naval Depot Indicates That Austria is Preparing to Take Scutari From Montenegro.

Threatened with the gravest possibility of war, or at least by political disruption, Europe's attention is centered on Austria, the firebrand power in whose grasp is the torch which would set the conflagration. Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, held a long conference with Emperor Francis Joseph, following a special meeting of the cabinet.

Afterward it was announced that unless the ambassadorial high court, which is sitting in the foreign office in London, decides on energetic and definite action at once, Austria will take independent steps to enforce the decision of the powers that Montenegro must not possess Scutari.

But while this announcement was being made, Austria was busily engaged in independent war preparations. There was great activity at the Trieste naval depot, it being reported from there that an Austrian naval division with 10,000 troops had left there for Antivari, the Montenegrin seaport.

Loose Heads Through City.

Mr. Munster, Cook, who owns a summer home near the mouth of the Kalamazoo river, had there in a peculiar predicament. When the government straightened the channel of the river near Saugatuck, she donated a considerable amount of land for the purpose. As soon as the river was in the new channel it began to eat her property away and she asked the government to build a revetment, but failed to get it. She finally built 400 feet of protection wall herself at a cost of about $4,000, and she had to buy more land to protect her property at a further expense of $1,000.

WILL DEplete GENERAL FUND

Failure of Legislature to Include Sums Appropriated in Tax Budget Makes Drain on the General Fund.

Auditor General Fuller says the state tax for this year will be approximately $8,000,000, with about $1,352,000 standing appropriation, and a tax for 1914 of about $6,000,000.

That the general fund of the state treasury will be in a depleted condition before the close of the year is also the opinion of the auditor general. When bills carrying appropriations are passed by the legislature it is customary to include in the last section a clause providing that the sums appropriated shall be incorporated by the auditor general in the tax budget, but failure to do this will mean these amounts will have to be drawn from the general fund of the state.

Button Workers on Strike.

A general strike of pearl button workers went into effect in New York, involving 56 factories to enforce demands for higher wages and a shorter work day. About 14 per cent of the strikers are women and the strike has received the sanction of the American Federation of Labor. The strikers demand recognition of their union, a nine-hour work day, 20 per cent advance to all who have been earning under $14 a week and 10 per cent increase to all earning $14 and over last amount.

The strike has ended in most of the industrial towns of the province.

FINDS VESSELS IN A COMBINATION

CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE READY TO REPORT ON GREAT LAKES.

LITTLE COMPETITION FOUND BY INVESTIGATION.

Statement Will Contain Charts of Lakes—Lines Have Mutual Interests Through Interlocking Directorates Is Claimed.

That the vessels on the great lakes are for the most part in a steamship combination which virtually eliminates competition over the cheap water routes, will be asserted in the report to be made by the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries. The committee has made an exhaustive study of ocean as well as great lakes traffic to determine whether a shipping trust exists. Weeks were spent in taking oral testimony, and then blanks were sent to the various steamship lines for statements as to any affiliation with rail and water carriers. "Our statement," said Chairman J. W. Alexander, "will contain charts showing the conditions on the great lakes. Most of the lines there have mutual interests through interlocking directorates."

CONGRESSMAN WOULD STAND BEHIND CALIFORNIA LAW WITH ARMY.

"A war speech" in support of the proposed California alien law was delivered in the house by Rep. Thomas Clayton Sisson, of Mississippi.

He declared he would not have Japan telling this nation what laws it might pass.

"If we must have war or submit to this indignity, I am for war," cried Mr. Sisson. "I am with the people of California in their efforts to prevent these aliens from acquiring land."

"I believe," said Mr. Sisson, "that no non-resident alien should be allowed to hold a single foot of land in the territory of the United States."

"I resent the efforts of Japan to force us to submit to her demands. Mr. Sisson took the position that the Japanese government in protesting against alien land legislation was endeavoring to exempt its citizens from the operation of the laws at this time."

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Potoskey.—Rev. George S. Barnes, after several months' illness due to jaundice, is dead at his Potoskey home, at the age of eighty-three years. He was born on a Vermont farm, and entered the ministry when a young man. At the close of the Civil war, during which he served as chaplain in the northern ranks, he was called to Michigan, becoming the pastor of the Iowa Methodist church in 1866. Since that time he had charge at Miles, Quincy, Greenville, Sturgis, Reading, St. Joseph, Jackson, White Pigeon, Harbor Springs and Charlevoix, retiring twenty years ago to reside in Potoskey.

Grayling.—In an interview here, Rasmus Hanson states that he is glad that the state has decided to locate the permanent National Guard site here and hopes that the people of the state will take advantage of the privilege of making this a public recreation park. "Living here in this delightful climate among the pine trees and upon the shores of beautiful Portage lake would make an ideal summer outing," says Mr. Hanson.

White Pigeon.—Ned, the nine-year-old son of William Wordelman, farmer, was fatally injured in a runaway here. Mrs. Wordelman brought a can of cream to the White Pigeon creamery, the boy holding the horse while she was inside. The horse became frightened by a dog and ran into the cemetery. The boy was thrown out, striking his head against a tombstone, crushing his skull.

Saginaw.—Mrs. Frank Balore and seventeen-year-old daughter, Linze, were arrested by Sheriff Ryan of Midland on the charge of assault and battery. The trouble is the result of Mrs. Balore's son Sam, twenty-four years old, running away from home and being located in Midland.

Grand Rapids.—Twice divorced from the same husband within ten days is the record established here by Mrs. Edith Winsman. She was granted a decree from James Winsman, the court clerk lost it, and last Friday in special chambers she was granted another, so she may wed.

Lansing.—A bill carrying an appropriation of $100,000 for Michigan participation in the Panama-Pacific exposition was killed in the senate. This probably means Michigan will have no exhibit at the fair.

Port Huron.—Mrs. Grace Shipchar, aged fifty-two, committed to her husband which she received a few days ago in a bundle. The deceased came here also some time ago from Detroit, where she was married in 1910.

Flint.—A patrol of boy scouts on a hike discovered the body of James Holman floating in the river. Holman was drowned a month ago and his body was swept away over the Hamilton dam.

Grand Rapids.—Inability to secure employment is given as the cause of the death of Miss Gertrude Schengle, twenty-five, who committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid.

Lansing.—Charles Morgan, a middle-aged farmer, committed suicide by drinking laudanum. Domestic troubles are said to have caused despondency on his part. He left an incoherent letter in which he alternately reproached his wife, Lottie, and assured her of his love.

Ann Arbor.—An unidentified man, believed to be a negro, was shot by C. W. Benjamin here after being detected in the act of peeping into the windows of Hilary house, one of the co-ed's boarding houses at the university. The man ran after being shot, but is believed to be badly wounded.

Alpena.—Frank Herhold, who dropped dead at Tower, was a well known lumberman of this city, having been employed in camps in this vicinity for many years.

Montrose.—The man who wounded Frank Lento, an Italian, with a stiletto, was found by Sheriff Renner, and is held awaiting the result of Lento's injuries.

Pontiac.—No warrants have been issued as yet for the arrest of 13 students of the Polish seminary at Orchard Lake for alleged illegal voting at the April election. The students have retained an attorney, who asserts they have a perfect right to vote if they so desire. Justice Stockwell still has the complaint, sworn to by Henry Kyle, of West Bloomfield township under advisement.

Hastings.—Miss Ethel Lee, daughter of Albert Lee, prominent resident of Johntown township, is in a critical condition, unable to speak and suffering convulsion of the brain received when she leaped from a buggy when the horse ran away. When her companion, Frank Granger, attempted to get into the vehicle, the horse previously frightened by the discharge of a shotgun, made a mad dash, knocking Granger down and dragging the buggy over two fences into the water, where it was seen to sink.

Making Things Even. "Well, Ikey, my boy," said Sol to his son, "I've made my will and left it all to you."

"That's very good of you, father," remarked Ikey, eying him suspiciously. "But bless you, it cost a lot of money for the lawyer, and fees and things!"

"Ye-es," said Ikey, more suspiciously. "Well, it ain't fair I should pay all that, is it? So I'll shuck take it off your next month's salary."

Joy of Neighborliness. With the aid of the waves of ether, transmuted or translated into waves of sound for those who have not eyes, or into light for those who have not ears, we may find neighbors where there is greatest need or where our noblest need is best fulfilled. Mobility, transmissibility, are they not to bring mankind nearer, if not into the higher kingdom, even as they brought the vegetable to be an animal, to approach, and then to enter its next kingdom? John H. Diller, in the Atlantic.

"THE GRANARY OF NORTH AMERICA."

GOVERNOR SULZER SAYS THAT OF WESTERN CANADA.

The close ties of friendship existing between the United States and Canada were dwelt upon in addresses by Premier Robert L. Borden, of Canada, and Governor Sulzer, at the annual dinner of the University Club of Albany.

"Canada and the United States," said Premier Borden, "have a common heritage in the language, the literature, the laws, the institutions and the traditions which have come down to them from the men of bygone days."

"Perhaps no more instructive object lesson ever has been given to the world than the four thousand miles of undefended boundary line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which bears silent but eloquent testimony to the mutual confidence and respect of the two nations. Time will shortly place upon the brow of each nation the laurel of one hundred years of peace, it matters not so much as to the form of the outward celebration, but let us hope that its full significance may sink deep into the hearts of both nations, and that whether north or south of the boundary, we may stand with bowed and reverent heads, offering grateful thanks for the Divine blessing of peace, and earnest prayers that in the century to come, mutual confidence, good-will and respect may truly animate the ideals and aspirations of both nations."

Referring to the natural resources possessed by the United States and Canada, particularly along the St. Lawrence River, the premier urged that they be "preserved and developed for the people."

Governor Sulzer predicted that the "Great Canadian Northwest is designed to become, before long, the granary of North America."

"Many of our best citizens, I regret to say," said the governor, "are leaving the States of the west and going into the Canadian northwest, because of the fertility of its soil; the liberality of the Canadian government and the ability of those people to better their conditions here."

"We should extend to them a helping hand in their onward march of progress. Instead of closing our doors by tariff barriers against these countries and their products, in my opinion, we should open them wider and do everything in our power to facilitate closer commercial relations. We want their products and they want our products, and all restrictions to prevent a freer and freer exchange of goods, wares and merchandise should, in so far as possible, be eliminated."—Advertisement.

MONEY HIS SECOND THOUGHT

Artist Accepted Destitution in Preference to Sale of His Precious Works of Art.

Institute in a house full of masterpieces, penurious and unknown, an old man who began life as a chimney sweep and eventually became a sculptor, has died in a sordid lodging at Juvy, a Paris suburb. "Faher Fraissard," as he was familiarly known, was born in Savoy and as a boy was employed as a sweep. Later he was apprenticed to a mason in Paris. His genius manifested itself and he became a sculptor. If he had consented to sell his works of art he would have been a rich man, but he would not part with them and died destitute. His two humble rooms were full of examples of exquisite workmanship. One, a table in black marble, has on it a chess board in African onyx, and half a dozen cups and glasses, all beautifully carved. Mr. Fraissard was eight years in executing this piece of work. But his greatest triumph took him twenty-two years to finish. It is a black marble table, inlaid with squares of lighter colored marble, and is covered with the accessories of various games. In the center is a chess-board; to the right and left are cards arranged in the shape of a fan. In the corners are dominoes and the cigars and cigarettes of the players, with several gold and silver coins. The materials used are porphyry, agate, onyx, malachite and lapis lazuli, and the combination of rich tones—red, black, orange, white and azure blue—produces a delicate effect. Ninety different kinds of marble were employed.

Eyes, Ears—and Nose.

"Intemperance is the chief cause of marital unhappiness," said Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth reformer.

"It was a wise young bride who recognized this fact. Her mother on her wedding day said to her with a sad smile:

"Now, darling, if you wish to avoid conflicts, you will have neither eyes nor ears when your husband returns home in small hours."

"But, mother," said the bride, "what shall I do with my nose?"

And the Audience Smiled.

An Irish lecturer, expatiating on the nature of man, remarked that one point of distinction between human beings and lower animals consisted in capacity for progress.

"Man," exclaimed the lecturer, "is a progressive being; other creatures are stationary. Take, for example, the ass. Always and everywhere it is the same creature. You never have seen, and never will see, a more perfect ass than you see at the present moment."

They are gladdening souls who mean what they say and expect you to say exactly when you mean. Sheppard.

The Lady of the Mount

SYNOPSIS.

Countess Elise, daughter of the governor of the northwestern coast of France, and a small, red-haired, blue-eyed, and very beautiful girl, during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of a nobleman, a nobleman, young Desbarras, determined to secure an education and become a gentleman, sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many notions.

"Is it wise," he had asked, "to court the attention of the people?"
"Oh, I am not afraid," she had answered. "And they are going to dance, too!"
"They?" He frowned.
"Why not? It is the queen's own idea. Let the people dance," she had said, "and they will keep out of mischief. Besides," with a prouder poise of the bright head, "why shouldn't they see, and like me?"
"They like nothing except themselves, and, dryly, 'to attempt to evade their social obligations.'"
"Can you blame them?" She made a light gesture. "Obligations, mon pere, are so tiresome!"
"Well, well," he said, "have your own way." Although he spoke rather shortly, on the whole he was not displeased with his daughter; her betrothal with the Marquis de Beauvilliers, a nobleman of large estates, arranged while she was yet a child, promised a brilliant marriage and in a measure offered to his Excellency some compensation for that old and long-cherished disappointment, the birth of a girl when his ambition had looked so strongly for an heir to his name as well as to his estate.
And so my lady, and her guests danced and made merry on the sands below, and the people came out from the mainland, or down from the houses in the town at the base of the rock, to watch a varied assemblage of gaunt-looking men and bent, low-browed women, for the most part they stood sullen and silent, though exchanging meaning glances now and then as if to say: "Do you note all this ostentation—all this glitter and display? Yes, and some day!" Upon broadening brows, in deep-set eyes, on furrowed faces a question and an answer seemed to gleam and pass. Endowed with natural optimism and a vivacity somewhat heedless, my lady appeared unconscious of all this latent enmity until an unlooked for incident, justifying in a measure the governor's demer, broke in upon the evening's festivities and claimed her attention.

On the beach, lighted by torches, a dainty minuet was proceeding gaily, when through the throng of onlookers, a young man with dark head set on a frame tall and powerful, worked his way carefully to a point where he was afforded at least a restricted view of the animated spectacle. Absorbed each in his or her way in the scene before them, no one noticed him, and, with hat drawn over his brow, and standing in the shadow of the towering head-dresses of several peasant women, he seemed content to attract as little attention to himself as possible. His look, at first quick and alert, that of a man taking stock of his surroundings, suddenly became intent and piercing, as, passing in survey over the lowly spectators to the glittering company, it centered itself on the young mistress of festivities.

In costume white and shining, the Lady Elise moved through the graceful numbers, her slender supple figure now poised, now swaying, from head to foot responsive to the rhythm of that "pastime of little steps." Her lips, too, were busy, but such was the witchery of her motion—all fire and life!—the silk-stockinged cavaliers whom she thus regaled, with wit, mockery, or jest, could, for the most part, respond only with admiring glances or weakly protesting words.

"That pretty fellow, her partner," with a contemptuous accent on the adjective, "is the Marquis de Beauvilliers, a kinsman of the king!" said one of the women in the throng.
"Ma foi! They're well matched. A darning doll for a popinjay!"
The young man behind the head-dresses, now nodding viciously, moved nearer the front. Dressed in the rough though not picturesque fashion of the northern fishermen, a touch of color in his apparel lent to his bearing a note of romance the bold expression of his swarthy face did not belie. For a few moments he watched the girl; the changing eyes and lips, shadowed by hair that shone and flashed like bright burnished gold; then catching her gaze, the black eyes gleamed. An instant their eyes lingered; hers startled, puzzled.

"Where have I seen him?" My lady, in turning, pushed to swing over her shoulders a glance.
"Whom?" asked her companion in the dance—a fair, handsome nobleman of slim figure and elegant bearing.

"That's just what I can't tell you," she answered, sweeping a courtesy that fitted the rhythm of the music. "Only a face I should remember."

But the subject of their conversation, as if divining the trend of their talk, had drawn back.
"Oh, he is gone now," she answered. "A malcontent, perhaps! One meets them nowadays."
"No, no! He did not look—"
"Some poor fellow, then, your beauty has enraptured?" he insinuated. "Humble admirer!"
"Then I would remember him!" she laughed as the dance came to an end. Now in a tented pavilion, servants, richly garbed in festive costume, passed among the guests, circulating trays, bright with golden dishes and goblets, stamped with the ancient insignia of the Mount, and once the property of the affluent monks, early rulers of the place. Other attendants followed, bearing light-delicacies, confections and marvelous frosted towers and structures from the castle kitchen.

"The patron saint in sugar!" Merry exclamations greeted these examples of skill and cunning. "Are we to devour the saint?"
"Ah, no! he is only to look at!"
"But the Mount in cake?"
"You may cut into that—though beware!—not so deep as the dungeons!"
"A piece of the colander!"
"A bit of the abbey!"
"And you, Elise?"
The girl reached gaily. "A little of the froth of the sea!"
Meanwhile, not far distant, a barrel had been broached and wine was being circulated among the people. There, master of ceremonies, Reppo dispensed advice with the beverage, his grumbling talk heard above the light laughter and chatter of the lords and ladies.

"Drink to his Excellency!" As he spoke the governor's man, from the elevated stand upon which he stood, gazed arrogantly around him. "Glads! Spouses that sop without a word of thanks! Who only think of your stomachs! Drink to the governor, I say!"

"To the governor!" exclaimed a few, but it might have been noticed they were men from the town, directly beneath the shadow of his Excellency's castle, and now close within reach of the fat tactician's arm.
"O'er more! Had I the ordering of wine, the barrels would all be empty once, but her ladyship would be generous, and—"
Reppo broke suddenly off, his wandering glance, on a sudden, arrested. "Hoin!" he exclaimed, with eyes protruding.

His jaw which had dropped grew suddenly firm.

"Clear a space for the dance!" he called out in tones impatient, excited. "It's her ladyship's command—so see you step blithely! And you fellows there, with the tambourin and hautbois, come forward!"

Two men, clad in sheepskin and carrying rude instruments, obediently advanced, and at once, in marked contrast to the recent tinkling measures of the orchestra, a wild, half-barbaric cecord rang out.

But the governor's man, having thus far executed the orders he had received, did not linger to see whether or not his own injunction, "to step blithely," was observed; some concern, remote from galliard, gavotte or bourree of the people, caused him hastily to dismount from his stand and make his way from the throng. As he started at a rapid pace across the sands, his eyes, now shining with anticipation, looked back.

"What could have brought him here? Him!" he repeated. "Ah, my fine fellow, this should prove a lucky stroke for me!" And quickening his step, until he almost ran, Reppo hurried toward the tower gate of the Mount.

CHAPTER V.

An Interruption.

"They seem not to appreciate your fete champetre, my Lady!" At the verge of the group of peasant dancers, the Lady Elise and the Marquis de Beauvilliers, who had left the other guests to the enjoyment of fresh culinary surprises, paused to survey a scene, intended, yet failing, to be festive. For whether these people were too sodden to avail themselves of the opportunity for merry-making, or liked not the notion of tipping together at Reppo's command, their movements, which should have been free and untrammelled as the vigorous swing of the music, were characterized only by painful monotony and lagging. In the half-gloom they came together like shadows; separated aimlessly and cast misshapen silhouettes—caricatures of frolicking peasants—on the broad surface of the sands beyond. These bobbing, black spots my lady disapprovingly regarded.

"They seem not in the mood, truly!" tapping her foot on the beach.
"Here—and elsewhere!" he laughed. But the governor's daughter made an impatient movement, memories of the dance, as she had often seen it, when she was a child at the Mount, recurred to her. "They seem to have forgotten!" Her eyes flashed. "I should like to show them!"

"You? My Lady!"
She did not answer, pressing her red lips, she glanced sharply around. "Stupid people! Half of them are only looking on! When they can dance, they won't, and—"
She gave a slight start, for near her, almost at her elbow, stood the young seaman who had observed only a short time before, when the minuet was in progress, his dark eyes were bent on her and she surprised on his face an a flicker of amusement returning to his face.

"Fantoccini!" spoke the girl impatiently. "What do you know of them?" "We Breton seamen sail far, on occasion."

"Far enough to gain in assurance!" cried my lady, with golden head high, surveying him disdainfully through half-closed, sweeping lashes. "But you shall prove your right!"

"Right?" asked the fellow, his eyes fixed intently upon her.

"The right of one who does not dance—to criticize those who do!" she said pointedly, and made, on the sudden, an imperious gesture.

He gave a start of surprise, audacious though he was, he looked as if he would draw back. "What? With you, my Lady?"

A gleam of satisfaction, a little cold and scornful, shone from the girl's eyes at this evidence of his discomfiture. "Unless," she added maliciously, "you fear you—can not?"

"Fear?" His look shot around; a moment he seemed to hesitate; then a more reckless expression swept suddenly over his dark features and he sprang to her side.

"At your Ladyship's command!"

My lady's white chin lifted. The presumptuous fellow knew the dance of the Mount—danced it well, no doubt; else why such ease and assurance? Her lids veiled a look of disappointment; she was half-minded curiously to dismiss him, when a few words of low remonstrance and the sight of my lady's face decided her. She drew aside her skirts swiftly, flashed back at the nobleman a smile, capricious and wilful.

"They," indicating the peasants, "must have an example, my Lord!" she exclaimed, and stood, with eyes sparkling, waiting the instant to catch up the rhythm.

But the marquis, not finding the reason sufficient to warrant such condescension, gazed with mute protest and disapproval on the two figures, so ill-assorted: my lady, in robe of satin, fastened with tassels of silver—the sleeves, wide and short, trimmed at the elbow with fine lace of Brussels and drawn up at the shoulder with glistening knots of diamonds; the other, clad in the rough raiment of a seaman! The nice, critical sense of the marquis suffered from this spectacle of the incongruous; his eyes, stood so well this song in the soil; its wild symbolism; the ancient music of the hardy Scandinavians who first brought the dance to these shores.

More stirring, the melodies resounded—faster—faster. In a rapid turn, the golden hair just brushed the dark, glowing face. He bent lower; as if she had been but a peasant maid, the bold eyes looked now down into hers; nay, more—in their depths she might fancy almost a warmer sparkle—of mute admiration! And her face, on a sudden, grew cold.

"Curses, your Ladyship sets them an example!" murmured the audacious fellow. "Though, pardon!—one not easy to imitate!"

She threw back her head, proudly, imperiously; the brown eyes gleamed, and certain sharp words of reproof were about to spring from her lips, when abruptly, above the sound of the music, a trumpet call, afar, rang out. My lady—not sorry perhaps of the pretext—at once stopped.

"I thank your Ladyship," said the man, and bowed low.

But the governor's daughter seemed, or affected, not to hear, regarding the other dancers, who likewise had come to a standstill—the two musicians looking up from instruments now silent. A moment yet the young fisherman lingered; seemed about once more to voice his acknowledgments, but, catching the dull eye of a peasant, stepped back instead.

"Sapristi! They might, at least, have waited until the end of the dance!" he muttered, and with a final look over his shoulder and a low laugh, disappeared in the crowd.

"Where are the enemy?" It was the marquis who spoke—in accents he strove to make light and thereby conceal, perhaps, possible annoyance. Coming forward, he looked around toward the point whence the sound had proceeded. "If I mistake not," a note of inquiry in his tone, "it means—a call to arms!"

My lady bit her lips; her eyes still gleamed with the bright cold light of a topaz. "Why—a call to arms?" she asked somewhat petulantly, raising her hand to her hair, a little disarranged in the dance.

THEY SIDESTEP FOR MOTORS

Filipinos Heed the Signal and Give the "Devil Machine" Plenty of Road.

Manila may now be said to be up-to-the-minute in things metropolitan. The latest adjunct to its activities calling attention to progress in this direction was the recent appearance upon the streets of a motor car washed in mud and powdered with fine dust of various grades of colors produced between here and Baguio. It had made a new record between the summer capital and Manila.

The machine was stripped to adaptation almost immodest, fenders and top were superfluous to requirements and no windshield protected the driver's face against the hot winds that blow at midday across the plain.

The friendliest feeling exists for the motor car. The barrios become a chorus of children with the ready "hello," even the dogs and chickens get the inspiration.

It may be due to the machine's being a stranger in this new section, but it is a fact that pedestrians and people in vehicles do respect the warning signal and give plenty of road.—Manila Bulletin.

K. C. M. G.

A pompous British politician who was proceeding to take over a governorship in one of the overseas dominions was approached on the promenade deck by an innocent-looking fellow-passenger, who, raising his hat, humbly inquired: "Would you mind telling me what 'K. C. M. G.' means at the end of your name, sir? It has puzzled one or two of us."

"Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George, of course," said the pompous one, as he inflated his chest. "Oh!" said the innocent, "I thought it meant 'Kindly Call Me Governor!'"

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 9, 1912. "I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling gone down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Stenstrom, 34 Willoughby Ave.

If you are suffering from itching, burning skin troubles, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, stubborn sores or piles, it will cost you nothing to try Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. Just send to Dept. 19-K, Resinol, Baltimore Md., for a free sample of each. Every druggist sells Resinol.

"Why—a Call to Arms?"

A moment he stammered a few words of surprise and incredulity, the while he continued to search eagerly—but now in vain. The object of his startled attention, illuminated, for an instant, on the outskirts of the throng, by the glare of a torch, was no more to be described. As questioning the reality of a fleeting impression, his gaze fixed itself again near the edge of the flickering lights; shifted uncertainly to the pavilion where servants from the Mount hurried to and fro; then back to the scene around him.

expression half-derisive, half quizzical. Her look changed to one of displeasure.

"You are not dancing?" severely. "No, my Lady." Too late, perhaps, he regretted his temerity—that too unvelled and open regard.

"Why not?" more imperiously. "I—be began and stopped. "You can dance?"

"A little, perhaps." As well as they were looking at the people.

In the gaze of only a few did that first stupid impression suffer any change, then it varied to one of vague wonder, half-apathetic inquiry!

"Is he mad?" whispered a croud of this class to a neighbor.

"Not so loud!" breathed the other in a low tone.

"But he," regarding with dull awe the young fisherman, "doesn't care! Look! What foolhardiness!" He's going to dance with her!"

"Witchcraft! That's what I call it!"

"Hush!"

My lady extended the tips of her fingers. "Attack well!" runs the old Gallic injunction to dancers, the partner she had chosen apparently understood its significance. A lithic muscular hand closed on the small

Then, obeying the mad rhythm of movement, she yielded to the infectious measure. An arm quickly encircled her waist, swept the slender form here, there.

BOY WANTED.

A big business house in Chicago wants a young man who is willing to start at the bottom and work up. Some of the requirements are that if the elevator has stopped he will not wait but climb the stairs. They want him to know how to spell, punctuate and know the meaning of words.

Not a fellow who merely looks ahead to help build up the business, work overtime if necessary and become a real, active part of the business—not a girl, because if she is a good one some fellow will want to marry her. But a boy who wants to be a man in all that the term means—who can be a stenographer, a clerk, a real honest, earnest boy who can make good and is willing to do so. A thousand places are now open to such boys, but only one in a thousand for a boy who is only a salary hunter. Where are all the boys who want to make good and are willing to work to make good? The best places in the United States want them.

LOVE THY TEACHER AS THYSELF.

It has often occurred to us that children would get on so much better at school if parents would only cultivate the friendship of the teacher more, and win her confidence. We are quite sure that if mothers would let the teachers see that they have an interest in them and the children too, it would stimulate the teachers and their pupils. It stands to reason that if the teacher knows that the parents are co-operating with her efforts which she puts forth are more likely to result in greater progress being made by the children. There is no need whatever to make a great friend of the teacher, but it would certainly help matters a great deal if say, the teachers were asked to come and take tea, at a definite time, on spend a certain evening with the children and parents. Such little matters are worth thinking about and we feel convinced that mothers who try what we have suggested will be not wiser at the suggestion of any teacher either.

A good country road is always to be desired and is a source of comfort and convenience to every traveler. Good roads attract population, as well as good schools and churches. Good roads improve the value of the property, so that it is said a farm lying five miles from market, connected by a bad road is of less value than an equally good farm lying ten miles away from market connected by a good road. A larger load can be drawn by one horse over a good road than by two over a bad one. Good roads encourage the greater exchange of commodities between one section and another.

Detroit newspapers have been settling the street car problem in that city for fifteen years but the people continue to pay 5 cents fare for the good service they are getting and appear perfectly satisfied at that. The D. U. R. has repeatedly offered a much lower fare but upon advice of the newspapers the people have shown a preference to paying the nickel. It's straight, but true.

The 9th of May is Arbor Day. Our trees need guardians and tree planting in this country needs special attention. Arbor Day helps this not so much directly, since the actual tree planting is significant compared with the annual destruction, but in awakening an interest in the care, the worth and beauty of trees and the actual tree culture. The children of today cannot be enlisted to a better cause.

AN ACHING TOOTH.

We heard one of our subscribers, after an oath the other day, who never before broke the commandment, that we know or when he explained to us that the cause was an aching tooth we felt that he would have but little trouble in receiving forgiveness, for the tooth that means to come out has conquered all men and all women. It has been soothed and coaxed. It has been held near fires until the cheek aching it was nearly roasted. It has been chloroformed. It has been fed on essence of juniper and essence of peppermint and essence of cloves. It has been filled. Its nerve has been killed. Its miserable prisoner has been inured from fresh air like a prisoner. This tooth sometimes sleeps, but it never forgets. It is most treacherous when it seems tranquil. It ulcerates at the roots when its possessor is about to indite a poem, take a journey or get married. It longs for a release and lingers for the forceps. It may seem to compromise, but it merely lodes its time. Its favorable recreation hour is just after midnight, when druggists and dentists have retired. If all the ground is covered with snow and the winds piercing, it is fairly diabolical with activity.

There is no use in contesting issues with this mutinous and molesting molar. Fight rheumatism if you will but throw up the sponge at this altercation. You have blistered your mouth and ruined your digestive organs and quarreled with your family and friends long enough. Tell the dentist to pull your head off and the accursed grinder with it, and live on soup, if need be, but have peace once more.

There are some things that a level headed human being should never do. Among these is to kindle a fire with kerosene oil, to walk on a railroad, to attempt to get on a moving train, to point a gun or a revolver at another, to put his name on another man's note, to keep his savings in an old stocking under the bed, to play a game of chance with a prepossessing stranger, to run for office when he has a paying position in private life, or to call a bigger man than himself a liar.

"Why did you shoot the man's dog," asked the justice. "He says he was perfectly quiet and never disturbed any one."

"Well, no," the prisoner admitted. "I never heard him howl in all my life, but he always looked as tho he was going to."

He came out into the front yard a dozen times a night, squat down, look at the moon if there was one, draw his breath open his mouth and fix himself for a howl from here to Jericho, and then change his mind and crawl under the porch and go to sleep. THE VERNAL BREEZE.

Vanished the gloomy season far away, His cloudy face and mournful wady sway

Chill hearts no more. The earth rejoicing, welcome sunny rays.

And birds with singing fill the glad-some dais.

That life restore. A gentle breeze—the harbinger of cheer,

Boreas his master, Spring, who follows near.

In green attire? To all the joy proclaims, through leafless trees,

And whispers softly promise of renewal.

From barrenness dire, Hush! hear his silent voice that hope doth bring.

To anxious souls—a message from the spring.

Of flowery lot. Some heart of love bereft—some long ang heart.

Stirred, moved, half-waking, to take active part.

It once forgot. Hail! gentle courier—I too, welcome thee;

Oft have I sighed for thy fond coming's glaze.

A New Back for an Old One—New a Northville Resident Made a Bad Back Strong.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the pains are so lame that to stoop is agony. No one to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Follow the example of this Northville citizen.

Mrs. R. Oble, Horton Ave., Northville, Mich., says: "Members of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills with fine results. One of us had lame back and soreness across the joints. Doan's Kidney Pills entirely relieved him of the trouble. Another suffered from trouble with the kidney secretions, and in this case, Doan's Kidney Pills also gave quick relief. We are all pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills because we know just how good they are."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE "WHITEWASH" SEASON.

The "whitewash season" is approaching and a receipt to make whitewash that will not crumble off may be of use to someone who reads this. It is the formula used by Uncle Sam at various government works. Ten parts fresh slacked lime and one part hydraulic cement. Mix well with salt water and apply thin.

You'd scarcely expect one of my age, in merchandising to engage and hope to get a paying trade without the local paper's aid. And yet I did that very thing; I opened up a store last spring—this month the sheriff took my stock and sold it at the auction block. Don't view me with a scornful eye, but simply say as I pass by "there goes a fool who seemed to think he had no use for printer's ink." There is a truth as broad as earth and business men should know its worth; 'tis simply this, the public buys as goods from those who advertise.

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army scout near Fort Dodge, seeks a man to whom he can entrust his daughter, Molly, who is threatened by a hostile Indian. He finds a man named Hamlin, a former soldier, who is a good shot and a brave man. Molly is a beautiful girl, and Hamlin is a man of many virtues. They are both of the frontier, and their story is a tale of love and adventure.

CHAPTER XV.—Continued. Hamlin stood a moment silent, half inclined to ask another question, but he checked himself. He was in the presence of a man of rank, and he was not to be disrespectful. He was a scout, and he was a man of many virtues. He was a man of many virtues, and he was a man of many virtues.

CHAPTER XVI.—The Meeting. Hamlin's first impulse was to ignore the man who was standing before him. He was a scout, and he was a man of many virtues. He was a man of many virtues, and he was a man of many virtues.

CHAPTER XVII.—At Cross-Purposes. She sat for a moment silent, gazing up at the man who was standing before her. He was a scout, and he was a man of many virtues. He was a man of many virtues, and he was a man of many virtues.

fer a taste of it." He got up, and peered through his glasses across the room. "Here, Molly; damn that slapping head. Will one of yer gents wake the lad—that's it. Now come here, Molly. You run over to the Palace an' tell Mrs. Dupont the feller is here waitin'." Hold on now, not so fast; wait till I'm done tellin' yer. Say that to her alone—do yer mind that, ye sap-head; nobody else is to hear what yer say; stay there till yer get a chance ter whisper it to her. Now skip."

Hamlin hesitated, watching the boy disappear. "At the Palace—the dance hall across the street?" he asked incredulously.

"Sure," indifferently, relighting his pipe. "Officers' ball; couldn't break in with a can-opener unless you had a invite. Guards at both ends, sergeant taking tickets, an' Third Regiment Band makin' music. Hell of a swell affair; got guests from Leavenworth, Wallace, and all around. Every room I got is full an' runnin' over—say, there are fellows over there in them fool swallow coats; damned if there ain't. If the boys ever get sight of 'em on the street there'll be a hot time. Say, ain't that the limit? Injuns out-thar thick as fleas on a dog, an' them swells 'dangin' here in swaller-tails like this yer was Boston."

He was still talking when Hamlin crossed the narrow hall and entered the dimly-lighted, unoccupied parlor. The side window was open, a slight breeze rustled the heavy curtain, and the Sergeant stepped outside on to the dark porch. There was a bench close to the rail and he sat down to wait. A gleam of light from the Palace fell across the western end, but the remainder of the porch lay in shadow, although he could look up the street, and see the people jostling back and forth in front of the Poodle Dog. The sound of mingled voices was continuous, occasionally punctuated by laughter, or an unrestrained outburst of profanity. Once shots echoed from out the din, but created no apparent excitement, and a little later a dozen horsemen spurred recklessly through the street, scattering the crowd, their revolvers spattering. Some altercation arose opposite and a voice called loudly for the guard, but the trouble soon ceased with the clump of boots, dying away in the distance, the regimental band noisily blaring out a waltz. Hamlin, immersed in his own thoughts, scarcely observed the turmoil, but leaned arms on railing, gazing out into the darkness. Something mysterious from out the past had gripped him, he was wondering how he should greet her when she came, speculating on her purpose in sending for him.

It seemed as though he waited a long time before the curtain at the window was thrust aside and the lady emerged, the slight rustling of her dress apprising him of her presence. The curtain still held slightly back by her hand, it admitted the light from the Palace, and was a picture of high noon. By daylight all was squabbling and dirt, dingy, and the air was thick with the dust of the city. The air was thick with the dust of the city, and the air was thick with the dust of the city.

"My Name is Hamlin; I Am Here on the Lady's Invitation."

within to reflect over her figure, revealing in softened outline the beauty of her features, the glossy brightness of her hair. She was in evening dress, a light shawl draped her shoulders.

An instant she paused in uncertainty, striving to distinguish his face, then stepped impulsively forward, and held out her hands.

"I have kept you waiting, but you must forgive that, as I came as soon as I could manufacture an excuse. Won't you even shake hands with me?"

"Is it necessary?" he asked, almost wearily. "You have come to me for some purpose surely, but it can hardly be friendship."

"Why should you say that?" reproachfully. "I have deserted a rather brilliant party to meet you here."

"That, perhaps, is why I say it, Mrs. Dupont. If my memory serves, you would not be inclined to leave such friends as you have for a rendezvous with a common soldier, unless you had some special object in view. If you will inform me what it is, we can very quickly terminate the interview."

She laughed a little touch of nervousness in the voice, but drew her skirts aside, and sat down on the bench.

"Do you think you can deceive me by such play-acting?" she asked eagerly. "You are no man of words. Tell me, is there nothing you care to ask me, after—after all these years?"

Hamlin lifted his eyes and looked at her, stirred into sudden interest by the almost caressing sound of the soft voice.

"Yes," he said slowly, "there are some things I should like to know, if I thought you would answer frankly."

"Try me and see."

"Then why are you Mrs. Dupont, instead of Mrs. Le Fevre?"

"Then my guess is true, and you are not so devoid of curiosity," she laughed. "My answer? Why, it is simplicity itself—because I was never Mrs. Le Fevre, but am rightfully Mrs. Dupont."

"Do you mean you were never married to Le Fevre?"

"What else could I mean?"

"Then he lied."

She shrugged her white shoulders. "That would not surprise me in the least. 'Twas a characteristic of the man you had ample reason to know."

"How came you to believe so easily?"

"Believe? What else could I believe? Everything served to substantiate his boast. I was in disgrace, practically drowned out of camp. There was nothing left for me to live for, or strive for. I was practically dead. Then your letter confessing came."

"Wait," she interrupted, "that letter was untrue, false; it was penned under compulsion. I wrote you again, later, but you had gone. Disappeared utterly. I wanted to explain, but your own people even did not know where you were—do not know yet."

He leaned his body against the rail, and looked at her in the dim light. Her face retained much of its girlish attractiveness, yet its undoubted charms no longer held the man captive. He smiled coldly.

"The explanation comes somewhat late," he replied deliberately. "When it might have served me it was not offered. Indeed, you had conveniently disappeared. But I am not here to criticize; that is all over with, practically forgotten. I came at your request, and presume you had a reason. May I again ask what it was?"

CHAPTER XVII.

At Cross-Purposes. She sat for a moment silent, gazing up at the man who was standing before her. He was a scout, and he was a man of many virtues. He was a man of many virtues, and he was a man of many virtues.

CHAPTER XVIII.—The Artist. Who is the fellow who just expressed himself? I have never before seen a man who attached so much importance to his professional duties.

"His name in private life is Hamlin, I think. He dances as a French man in a cabaret show."

"Liquid blue is a weak solution. Avoid it. Buy Red or Half Blue, the blue that is all blue. Ask your grocer. Adv."

Clumsy Enough. "Stooging waltzes like a camel." "I don't know how a camel waltzes, but judging from Stoogins' movements out there on the floor, he would make a first class turkey trotter."

Auburn, N. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."—Mrs. WILLIAM E. GILL, 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

"Doctor's Daughter Took It" St. Cloud, Minn.—"I was so run down by overwork and worry that I could not stand it to have my children talk about or walk heavy on the floor. "I sent for the Compound at once and kept on taking it until I was all right."—Mrs. BERTHA M. GUNSTADT, 727 1/2 Avenue S., St. Cloud, Minn.

Hesitated Between Courses.

James, writing a letter, was unlucky enough to spill the ink upon a new rug. Remembering that his mother had used milk in a similar case, he was working renewed havoc when the maternal presence appeared.

His progress was somewhat impeded by the determination of the kitten to enjoy the cleaning fluid.

James, "and the shocked mother, sternly 'what on earth are you doing?'"

James considered before replying. Then: "I wonder if you'd be most angry if I said I'd spilled the ink or was feeding the cat on the rug?"

Good Evidence.

Katherine had been brought up to believe that tale-bearing was respectable but there were times when her greedy twin strained her principles to the snapping point.

"Katherine," said her mother one day, "is it possible that you and Howard have eaten that whole bag of peppermints that I meant to take to grandmother, just because I left the bag on the table?"

"I didn't take one of them, mother," said Katherine, indignantly, "but Howard—well, I shan't tell tales, but you just smell him!"—Yonah's Companion.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

ANTI-CIGARETTE BILL MEETS ITS USUAL BIENNIAL DEFEAT IN SENATE.

RE-APPORTIONMENT OF STATE IS ASSURED.

Some of the Important Measures Put Up to Governor by Legislature During the Last Hours of Session.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Although the house passed Rep. Dun's anti-cigarette bill the measure did not survive the senate. Although Lucius Page Caston, president of the National Anti-Cigarette League was here distributing literature and working for the measure the senate committee on state affairs refused to report the bill out. Even had it been placed on final reading, less than half a dozen votes could have been mustered in its favor.

Congressional and representative re-apportionments are assured. The house concurred in the senate amendments to these bills and Gov. Ferris says that he will sign them. The committee of Montcalm to which almost every district in the state objected strenuously because of the advertising congress from Greenville, Francis Lindquist, was put in with the eighth. This will mean that Con. Joseph Fordney, of Saginaw, and Con. Lindquist, of Greenville, will battle for the republican nomination in the eighth district at the primary election in 1914. As the result of the congressional re-apportionment Congressman-at-Large Patrick H. Kelley, will be out of a job as the thirteenth congressman goes to the city of Detroit. This will probably mean that Con. Kelley and Con. Samuel W. Smith will fight it out in the sixth, as both men are residents of that district. Kelley resides at Lansing and Smith at Port Huron.

Rep. Taylor, of Kent, Bricker, of Janes, and McBride, of Ottawa, registered strenuous opposition to the arrangement by which the fifth district is limited to Kent and Ottawa. McBride wanted Ottawa separated from Kent and Taylor, democrat, wanted Janes and Barry with Kent instead of Ottawa. Bricker objected to putting his county with Saginaw and Montcalm in the eighth. Glasner, of Barry, also objected. He wanted to work Barry into the fifth to give the democrats a better chance to control. No other serious objection was made in the house. Some of the upper peninsula members didn't like the arrangement by which the lower peninsula gained the balance of power in the eleventh. The districts as they will be under the new law are:

First—First, third, fifth, seventh, ninth, eleventh, thirteenth and fifteenth wards of the city of Detroit.

Second—Jackson, Monroe, Lenawee, Washtenaw and ten townships in Wayne county together with the city of Wyandotte.

Third—Eaton, Calhoun, Kalamazoo, Branch and Hillsdale.

Fourth—Barry, Allegan, Van Buren, Berrien, Cass and St. Joseph.

Fifth—Kent and Ottawa.

Sixth—Ingham, Livingston, Genesee, Oakland and nine townships in Wayne county.

Seventh—Huron, Tuscola, Sanilac, Lapeer, St. Clair and Macomb.

Eighth—Gratiot, Saginaw, Montcalm, Ionia, Clinton and Montcalm.

Ninth—Leelanau, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Manistee, Wexford, Mason, Lake, Oceana, Newaygo, Muskegon and Missaukee.

Tenth—Crawford, Oscoda, Alcona, Roscommon, Ogemaw, Isosco, Osceola, Clare, Gladwin, Arenac, Mecosta, Isabella, Midland and Bay.

Eleventh—Alger, Delta, Menominee, Schoolcraft, Luce, Mackinac, Chippewa, Emmet, Cheboygan, Presque Isle, Charlevoix, Antrim, Otsego, Montmorency, Alpena and Kalkaska.

Twelfth—Keewenaw, Houghton, Ontonagon, Gogebic, Baraga, Iron, Marquette and Dickinson.

fourth and eighteenth wards of the city of Detroit.

The bill to legalize good roads bonds issued by the counties of the state which was pending in the senate for some time, came to the house with amendments making it even broader in its effect. It now corrects bonds even in case of failure on the part of administration officials, as well as to extend the limit for the term of county bonds from 15 to 20 as needed to legalize bonds already issued under an act of the legislature. Rep. Clark objected to its covering so much ground, but would not get in the way of its passage because the counties needed the correction originally provided and he did not desire to put anything in the way of this proposal. The house then concurred and it will become a law as soon as it is signed by Gov. Ferris.

The bill introduced by Senator G. G. Scott making the law relative to vagrancy much more far reaching stringent and giving police authorities great power in such cases, was defeated in the house. Rep. Kappler offered an amendment exempting from its provisions workmen on strike and persons seeking work but out of employment. This started a battle on the floor. It was demonstrated that such an amendment would render ineffective the entire act relative to vagrancy. After a short debate the bill was killed.

The public domain commission bill which carries the abolition of the land office and calls for a new regime in the handling of state lands and the exploitation of the vacant lands of the state through an intelligent campaign of advertising, has passed the house. This bill went to a conference between the house and the senate and in the agreement the appropriation was cut from $100,000 to $60,000 annually.

In the original bill there was a provision for the spending of $25,500 on an advertising campaign in which the improvement bureaus of the state would co-operate. This was cut to $10,000. The senate had cut the appropriation to $75,000 and in the conference another $15,000 was tacked off.

The Oil Stove With a Dandy Cabinet Top!

Note this picture! Was ever gas stove or coal range more complete—or better designed to make cooking pleasurable and easy?

Note the NEW PERFECTION'S Cabinet Top which gives it both the appearance and the usefulness of a coal range. Note the drop shelves, the towel racks, the special oven.

And then consider that in the NEW PERFECTION we have a cool stove that does away with the coal range's feverish heat, its dirt, its ashes, its draughts, its uncertainties, its labor in carrying fuel and its delay in starting fires.

Consider, too, that it is cheaper to operate than either gas or gasoline stove. And much cleaner and safer in the bargain.

It's Safe, Saving, Sane and Satisfying.

No Odor, Smoke, Ashes or Delays.

Do you wonder that over a half million NEW PERFECTIONS are now in use? Ask your nearby dealer to demonstrate this stove to you. Have him show you its splendid equipment; the endless broiler, the special toaster, etc. Have him explain how the NEW PERFECTION'S White Blue Flame produces the maximum intensity of heat—how the construction of the burner serves to concentrate that heat, and to prevent the over-heating of the kitchen. See our exclusive Oil Reservoir with indicator and observe how the NEW PERFECTION'S Oil supply can be replenished without extinguishing its fire. See for yourself and then judge if you have seen its equal.
