HAS NORTHVILLE A HOE GHOST?

SOME SPOOK OR SLEEP WALKER DOING BIZ ON CADY STREET.

Lot of Other Gardens that Need Visiting if it's Spook.

Northville has a mystery. A deep, dark green-some mystery! It is connected with the "earthly" affairs of a certain worthy resident of Cady street who shall, for the purpose of this article, be nameless. Here 'tis. The c w r has a garden, same's many other thrifty citizens of Northville. Among the vegetable denizens of that garden are sixty hills of beans, trying their beany best to attain the nephel-ultra of bean ambition. On a recent day, the gentlemen in question went out, in the natural course of events, to look over—and possibly to hoe—the said garden. What was his surprise to find those five dozen hills of beans all thoroughly and neatly hoed!

He was astonished some more on learning that his wife knew nothing about it, and then some when he could find nobody who did. So, here is the opportunity of a lifetime for any local incipient Sherlock Holmeses who are anxious to develop their detective abilities.

The writer has not ventured to inquire if the owner of that bean patch has ever been known to walk in his sleep, but if he hasn't, and the perpetrator of the deed was a really-truly ghostly gardener, it surely should be encouraged to keep on exercising instead of being exorcised. If a joke was intended, lots of other garden owners would like to be similarly victimized, and hoes humorist of that sort, or for any one will probably be found ready for any who chances to be prone to somnambulist stunts along agricultural lines. If it's neither sell or sleep-walking it must be ghosts, and it's a sure guess that any old spook that wants to hoe gardens as his ghostly pastime is safe not to be interfered with to any extent. Nobody would even holler "Ho taero!" at him, for fear it might scare him back to spook-land.

MERRITT-DICKINSON.

Miss Carrie Merritt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Merritt, and Mr. Ivan Dickinson were united in marriage at the bride's home near this village Saturday afternoon, June 7.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Early of Salem Baptist church in the presence of 70 guests. The bride wore a very pretty gown of white crepe and carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by Miss Norma Hayne of Detroit. Curries Beebe of Detroit was best man, and a cousin of the bride, Miss Florence Westby, was very cute as ring bearer. The presents were numerous and the luncheon was both sumptuous and enjoyable.

THE WEST NOVI DEBATING CLUB

FOURTH ANNUAL REUNION HELD LAST SATURDAY.

"Annihilated" the Republican Party After a Lengthy Debate.

The fourth annual reunion of the West Novi Debating club was held last Saturday as scheduled and proved, as expected, to be another of those enjoyable occasions that linger long in memory's pleasant places, the large attendance, the sumptuous dinner and the interesting program all combining to the desirable result.

The debate, as of yore, was the prominent feature, and was preceded by a miscellaneous program of music, recitations and brief talks on stated topics, as well as the impromptu speeches for which the old club's members were justly celebrated in the days gone by, the exercises making up a real, old-time session of the society. The question, "Resolved that the Republican party should be annihilated," was discussed with all sorts of vigor and enthusiasm, furnishing a good deal of fun as well as much food for thought, and, as usual, excellent arguments were advanced by all the disputants, whether the speaker was talking on the side of his own convictions or not. After some difficulty in deciding, the resolution was adopted.

The officers and committees were all retained in their positions, viz: N. A. Clapp, Northville, president; T. E. Johns, Mullington, vice president; Mrs. A. C. Harmon, Northville, secretary; J. A. Richardson, Novi, treasurer; Mrs. David Page, Novi, committee on arrangements; Mrs. J. A. Richardson, Novi, program. The secretary, who tried to escape re-election, was given the privilege of choosing an assistant to act in her place if necessary, and Mrs. J. E. Cook, Northville, was named for that position. Old members and visitors were in attendance from Saginaw, Detroit, Ypsilanti, South Lyon, Walled Lake, New Hudson, Milford, Northville and other points, Chicago furnishing one visitor who expressed himself as hugely enjoying the meeting.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

Pupils in our common schools are sadly deficient in the power of practical application. This must be evident to every teacher and parent who has ever tested the matter by asking practical questions. The pupil who, with the book before him, can readily "get the answers" to the difficult problems in profit and loss is wholly at a loss to determine the profit his father receives on cloth bought for 29 cents and sold for 25 cents per yard. He learns in school that Columbus and Springfield are in the same latitude, and is not sure at home that Columbus is not between Springfield and the north pole. He learns that every proper noun should commence with a capital, and then directs his first love letter to miss Jennie Smith. He can say with accuracy that there are 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 48 seconds in a year, but has no idea of how many times the sun will rise and set between two Christmases. He can give correctly the principal parts of see and go, and immediately after be guilty of saying, "I seen Mrs. but now he has went away."

A GOOD PAPER.

The best general daily newspaper that comes to our desk—outside the Detroit papers which are best because they are really home paper—is the Science Monitor published at Boston. There are from 12 or more pages of splendid news reading matter every day and not an item of scandal or fight or any kind, or any accounts of murders, or of suicides. The average daily paper of now days has little else than a call for news excepting these four articles.

The Milford Times says the streets of that village are well greased. Judging from what we have seen of the Northville streets since they were oiled the Milford paper and it right—they are well greased—South Tenth Herald. Doubtless the Herald men saw the Northville streets the next day after they were oiled when they looked like South Tenth on a rainy day. They are in the condition now, without a particle of dust and are as clean and slippery as a Duroi-boulevard.

Now that big, noisy dual Moose Charlie O'Neil and Alderman McCarthy, all of Detroit, have announced their jump, from what they thought was the great and only, over backwards into the "corrupt and rotten" Republican party, whither Charlie Nichols had already tumbled, lighting on a soft job, there aren't very many more big noises left in the town of Detroit.

At least Senator Townsend has the Democratic Press doing the explaining act in a lively manner just now as the "insidious" lobby which the senator has been informed the president might be using to force some of the Democratic senators to see the new tariff from his standpoint.

In other words an "insidious lobby," according to President Wilson, is one which is opposed to the president's free trade tariff law now before congress.

While the West Nov debating club annihilated the Republican party, they failed to produce anything to take its place.

It is now apparently up to the Detroit Charter Commission to prove it isn't what Henry Elkhoff said it was.

A woman tells of the good time she has, but usually when a man has a good time he has to pay for it.

City's Charter Centuries Old.

A 609-year old charter granted by King Edward I to Aberystwyth, (Cardigan), Wales, has been discovered by Dr. Lewis of the University College of Wales, in a search for documents for the town council. It was granted to Llanbadarn, the name of the ancient church and parish. In consequence of the direction in the charter that markets should be held on Monday, Aberystwyth keeps bank holidays on Tuesdays.

Musical Prodigy.

A seven-year-old boy of Rennes, France, is the latest musical prodigy to burst upon the world. He is an admirable, even a brilliant, pianist, but has genius for composition, and sonatas, symphonies, piano pieces of all kinds flow from his pen. It is said to be pretty good stuff, too. A number of the great composers have begun to invent melodies before the age of seven.

Meredith on French Criticism.

I hold strongly to the value of French criticism, whether in praise or blame. The latter is done (by the masters in the art) with so fine an irony that it instructs without wounding any but the vainglorious person; and the eulogy confers green laurels instead of gilt. England has little criticism beyond the expression of likes or dislikes, the stout vindication of an old conservatism of taste.—Meredith's Letters in Scribner's Magazine.

that one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, more to him than the cost of his entire stock of these medicines. For sale by all dealers.

Answer the Call

Northville People Have Found That This is Necessary.

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench. A little cause may often hurt the kidneys. Spasms of backache often follow. Or some irregularity of the urine. A splendid remedy for such attacks. A medicine that has satisfied thousands. Is Dean's Kidney Pills, a special kidney remedy. Many Northville people rely on it. Here is Northville proof.

Mrs. L. Charter, Dunlap St., Northville, Mich., says: "My experience with Dean's Kidney Pills has been such that I highly recommend them. When my kidneys were out of order and I had backache. I used Dean's Kidney Pills and they greatly relieved me."

Mrs. Charter is only one of the many who have gratefully endorsed Dean's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy ask distinctly for Dean's Kidney Pills the same that Mrs. Charter had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50 cents all stores. ## Test of Sobriety.

Many shibboleths have been devised for testing sobriety. George Meredith, who doubtless could have evolved some wonderful examples, had he chosen, calls them "onometers," or methods of determining the condition of man, according to the degrees of wine or beer in him. One of the most snareful of these is the sentence, "Give James Grimes' gilt gig-whip, and a cup of coffee from a copper coffee pot."—London Chronicle.

Eggnog for Invalids.

Separate the yolk from the white of an egg, beat the yolk thoroughly and then beat the white to a froth, add a heaping teaspoonful of sugar, a trifle of salt. # The Lady of the Mount

by FREDERIC S. ISHAM
AUTHOR OF "THE STROLLERS," "UNDER THE ROSE," ETC.
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WATERS

SYNOPSIS.

Countess Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has a chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small, rocky island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Selkour, a nobleman. Young Countess determines to secure an education and become a lady. She departs for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and enters a convent. Her Ladyship dances with strange fishermen, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a traitorous Selkour. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" and the Black Seigneur captures and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that the sailor was the boy with the red hair, the Seigneur's servant. Is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles."

CHAPTER XIII.—(Continued.)

Outside, the wind, blowing sharper, whistled about the eaves, beat at the window and shook the blinds angrily; far below, a steady monotone to those other sounds, could be heard the rush and breaking of the surf.

"Why did I cross myself that day on the island, when I saw her—behind you?" Sanchez's tactfulness—the confidence of years—suddenly burst its bonds. "Because she made me think of the former lady of the Mount—the governor's wife—who betrayed the Seigneur, your father! I promised him to keep the secret—he would save it for the sake of the lady; but now to you! Your father was stabbed at the foot of the Mount by the Governor!"

"Stabbed! By him!"

"It was given out," sourly, "by rogues—again to shield her!"

"But—"

"That same day he had a letter—from her. An evening fell he walked near the Mount—was followed by the Governor, who sprang, struck in the back and left him for dead! I found him and took him home. But before he recovered, it was reported my lady had died—"

"How?"

"I know not; a great many, perhaps! She was always delicate—or liked to be considered such—a white, cool, pretty, smiling thing whose beauty and grace—like other one—this daughter, indeed! It was the shadow of herself leaning over your shoulder that day on the island, with the same bright, peridot eyes—"

"Enough!" Angerily the Black Seigneur brought down his hand. "I will say no more!"

"Because she has caught you here! Because you—"

"No more, I say! Thank you! I would not avenge your wrongs at all—were it possible! That I would not strike for you, on the instant! But now? My hands are—" one who has not tasted food for many hours. The other, for his part, showed no immediate desire to disturb that occupation; for some time waited; and it was not until the servant stopped, reached out his arm for a glass, to drink, that the young man again spoke.

Another

"The palace? The plan of the Mount? Did you notice? Tell me something of it—how it is laid out—"

Sanchez swallowed; set down the glass. "Yes, yes! I saw much—a great deal!" he answered with eager zest. "Oh, I kept my eyes open, although I seemed not to, and was mindful of learning all I could!"

"Here!" From his pocket the young man took a note-book; pencil. Set it down, everything! I know something, already, from the old monks—the rough diagrams in their books. You entered? Where? Take the pencil and—"

The minutes passed and still Sanchez traced; seemed almost to forget his injuries in his interest in the labor. Plan after plan was made; torn up, one finally remained in the hand of the Black Seigneur.

"You think—" Anxiously the servant watched his master's face, but the latter, straight, erect, with keen eyes fixed, did not answer.

"You think—" again began the man when the ancient time-piece, beating harshly the hour, interrupted.

"Eleven o'clock! High tide!" The Black Seigneur pushed back his chair and rose.

"Good!" Sanchez's alacrity indicated a quick comprehension of what the movement portended.

"You—had better—remain—here!" shortly.

"Me?" said the servant with a harsh laugh. "Me?"

"Have you not had enough of my family—my services?" the young Seigneur demanded bitterly.

"Bahi!" muttered the other. "The dog that's better springs at the chance to bite! You go to rescue your comrades! I will go with you!"

"In which case, death—not you—will most likely be your reward!"

"I care not!" stubbornly.

A moment the Black Seigneur regarded him then made a gesture.

"Well, have your way!" he hissed. "The end is in the west!"

A little south of west, answered the man.

A rough night for your boat to have crossed!"

"Oh, I was bound to come! And if you hadn't been here, I'd have gone on—!"

The hand of the young man touched the other's shoulder. "Come!" he said, and drew open the door.

"I shall be glad when it's all over!" Standing at the window of her chamber the Lady Elise had passed in dressing to look out upon the throng—a thousand dots upon the sand, dark moving masses in the narrow ways, and motionless ones near the temporary altars.

"Oh, my Lady!" Her companion, and former nurse, a woman about fifty years of age, ventured this mild exhortation.

"There, Marie! You can go!"

"Yes, your Ladyship—"

"One moment!" The slender figure turned. "This fastening—"

In an instant the woman was by her side.

"Have you heard anything more about the prisoners, Marie?" abruptly. "Those who were tried, I mean?"

"Nothing—only Beppo said they are to be hanged day after tomorrow—when the pilgrimage is over."

"Day after tomorrow!" The brown eyes looked hard and bright, the small white teeth pressed her lip.

"And the man my father—the Governor—had whipped from the Mount—you have heard nothing more of him—where he has gone?"

"No, my Lady, he seems to have disappeared completely, fed this country, perhaps, for those islands there so many like him, half-bitterly have gone before!"

The girl looked up in a preoccupied manner. "Poor Marie! Your only sister died there, didn't she?"

"Yes, my Lady, I never saw her after she left France with her husband and baby girl. He was an un-patriotic fellow—Pierre Laroche!"

"No doubt," said the Governor's daughter absently, as the other prepared to leave the room.

Alone, the girl remained for several moments motionless before the great Venetian mirror, then mechanically, hardly looking at the reflection, the glass towered back at her, she finished her toilet. This task accomplished, still she stood with brows closely drawn, afar the firelike voices of the choir boys arose from different parts of the Mount, but she did not seem to hear them, made a sudden quick gesture and walked toward the door—in the manner of one who has arrived at some resolution.

Passing down a corridor, she reached an arched opening whose massive door swung easily to her touch.

"You are going in the storm?" The girl, Nanette, intercepted them.

The Black Seigneur nodded shortly. "It must be an important mission to take you to sea on such a night. Why don't you stay where it's warm and comfortable?" Or, with a light, "at least until Monsieur Gabelle's lady carving the corpulent figure intrrenched behind a barricade of dishes and porties on a small table near the fire; "has finished the little puppet play he is writing."

"It is finished!" As he spoke, the poet rose. "I had but written 'certain' when you spoke. Your wine, fair Nanette, hath a rarely inspiring quality!"

"Oh, I am not for your compliments!" she returned. "Your captain, again studying the Black Seigneur with dark sedulous eyes, 'has not found it so much to his liking! He has hither asked for more, nor drunk what he ordered; and now would venture out—"

Unmindful of her words the young man called to old Pierre.

"Well," she went on, throwing back her head, "if you lose your ship, come to me, and—I'll see you have another!"

Above in his chamber at the inn, not long thereafter, the priest, looking out of the window, saw a line of men file down the narrow stairs; embark in the small boats from the sheltered nook where they lay, and later, in the light of the moon, breaking from between scudding clouds and angry vapors, a ship that got under way—glided like a phantom craft from the heaven and set seaward through the foam.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Pilgrimage. From far and near the peasants and the people of the towns and villages, joined in the customary annual descent upon—or ascent to—the Mount. None was too poor, few too miserable, to undertake the journey. A pilgrimage, was the occasion called; but although certain religious ceremonies were duly observed and entered into by some with fanatical warmth, many there were, who, obliged to pay tithes, nourished the ogerous recollection of the enforced "ecclesiastical tenth" to the exclusion of any great desire to avail themselves of the compensating privilege of beholding and bowing before the sacred relics. To these recalcitrant spirits, license and a rough sort of merry-making became, the order of the hour.

Early in the morning the multitude began to arrive—in every manner of dilapidated vehicle, astride starved-looking donkeys and bony horses, or on foot. Many who had camped out the night before, by wayside or in forest, brought with them certain scanty provisions and a kitchen pot in which to boil thin soup, or some poor makeshift mess, others came empty-handed, "pilgrims" out at the clove and shoeless, trusting to fortune for their sustenance, and looking capable even of having poached in one of the wide bays they had traversed, despite a popular, naive and disproportionate to the offense for laying hand on any lands and birds or rabbits.

Savage men, hidden men, and all and sundry! Life and thought hung about the hill they straightway streamed to the Mount, took possession of it, or as much as lay open to them, for around the top, chosen abode of the Governor, extended a well, grim, dark and ominous, brilliant with holes which seemed to look blackly down, to watch, to listen and to frown. Without that prepotent line of encircling masonry, the usual din, accompaniment to the day and the presence of so many people, prevailed, within, reigned silence, a solemn hum, unbroken by even a neat note tread.

"I shall be glad when it's all over!" Standing at the window of her chamber the Lady Elise had passed in dressing to look out upon the throng—a thousand dots upon the sand, dark moving masses in the narrow ways, and motionless ones near the temporary altars.

"Oh, my Lady!" Her companion, and former nurse, a woman about fifty years of age, ventured this mild exhortation.

"It is finished!" As he spoke, the poet rose. "I had but written 'certain' when you spoke. Your wine, fair Nanette, hath a rarely inspiring quality!"

"Oh, I am not for your compliments!" she returned. "Your captain, again studying the Black Seigneur with dark sedulous eyes, 'has not found it so much to his liking! He has hither asked for more, nor drunk what he ordered; and now would venture out—" and set herself out by a private way, which had once been the ancient abbot's way, to an isolated corner of a small secluded platform. From this point a stairway led up to a passage spanning a great gulf. Below and aside, where the red-tiled houses clung to the steep slope of the rock, fluttered many flags; yet the girl did not pause either to contemplate or admire. Only when her glance passed seaward and rested on the far-away ocean's rim of light, did she stop for an instant—mid-way on the bridge—then, compressing her lips, moved on the faster; down the incline on the other side; up winding stairs between giant columns, reaching, at length, that bright and grateful opening, the cloister. With an unvarying air of resolution, she stepped forward; looked in; the place was empty—silent save for the tinkling of the tiny fountain in the center.

Unmindful of her words the young man called to old Pierre.

"Are you looking for some one, my Lady?"

The voice was that of Beppo, who was regarding her from an angle in the cloister walk.

"I am looking for his Excellency. I suppose he is—"

"In the apartments of state, my Lady. But—" The girl frowned.

"But?" she said. "But what?"

"His Excellency has left word—he was expecting a minister from Paris—that no one else was to be admitted; the matter was so important that he wished no interruptions."

She had already turned, however;

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Just a Bit Mixed. London is laughing over a story which has recently come out concerning Lord George. It appears that shortly after the death of King Edward an Englishman traveling in Wales got into talk with an elderly Welshman and happened to be the first to tell him of the king's demise. "And who might he be king now?" asked the Welshman. "Why, George is king now." "George?" he exclaimed in surprise. "Well, how he has got on, to be sure—and me to remember him as a little fellow in Greenwich!"

RASH ON FACE FOR 2 YEARS

Stony Point, N. H.—"My trouble at first was a rash on my face, but it grew and kept getting worse until large scales would form, fester and break. This was just on the one side of my face, but it soon scattered to the other side. I suffered a great deal, especially at night, on account of its itching and burning. I would scratch it and of course that irritated it very much. This rash was on my face for about two years, sometimes breaking out into sores and forming larger sores. It kept me from sleeping day or night for a couple of months. My face looked disfigured and I was almost ashamed to be seen by my friends. A friend asked me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I would bathe my face with hot water and a lot of Cuticura Soap, then I would put on the Cuticura Ointment. In less than two days' time, the soreness and inflammation had almost entirely disappeared, and in four weeks' time you could not see any of the rash. Now my face is without a spot of any kind. I also use them for my scalp and hair. They cured me completely." (Signed) Miss Pansy Hutchins, Feb. 6, 1912.

Five men were arrested in Detroit by Sheriff Green of Pontiac on suspicion of being the ones who took a crack at the post office here last Thursday night. The yegman were supposed to be old hands at the business and hailed from various parts of the United States.

The affair was beautifully decorated with ferns and the lodge colors. Over two hundred guests were present, all of whom were graduates of various years from our school. A splendid program of toasts, speeches and music was given. The members of the 1913 class are Harry Adams, Wilmer Johnson, Eason Schaeper, Ione Chamberlain, Mable Roediger and Blanche Angelini.

Woman's Bank Account.

Women in the habit of deducting some checks four or five times and others not at all, of adding fictitious deposits and skipping real ones while keeping their bank account crooked—these women may find consolation in the tale of a local housewife. ## Wholesale Bathing.

At Kumbakonam, the Indian Oxford, the biggest religious festival in Hindostan takes place every 12 years. On the last occasion 400,000 people bathed in the tank, or pond, attached to the principal temple. As among the pilgrims there were those who had washed but seldom since the previous occasion, what the water looked like at the finish, says the Railway Magazine, may be imagined.

It's Dangerous, Being a Songster.

"I notice," said Mrs. Pozzole, "that a choir soloist in Greenwich, Conn., broke an artery while singing a high note. I never heard of an accident such as that before, but I have often feared Mr. Pozzole might rupture himself singing the low notes in 'Rocked in the Cradle of the Peep.'"

J., writes, "For over a month past I have been troubled with my stomach. Everything I ate upset it terribly. One of Chamberlain's advertising booklets came to me. After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets, I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three-fourths of a package of them and can now eat almost everything that I want." For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.
