GREAT DOINS' 'GAIN SAT. NIGHT

PIE EATING CONTEST WAS HIT
OF EVENING'S EVENT

Neither Lot Big Stunts Tomorrow,
Saturday, Evening.

Saturday evening last, was again celebrated with a good band concert and some amusing sports.

Nelson's pie-eating contest proved a good drawing card with the boys. Harold Merrithew captured first prize, a large box of choice candy, devouring his pie in just two minutes and eight seconds. Johnnie Floyd ate off the second prize in an even three minutes.

Ryder's bean-picking bee, developed some real workers. Laura White won first prize, six sunburst tumbler. Mrs. Chas. Payne picked the second prize, a Bavarian China tea pot. This contest as well as the pie-eating was held on the city band wagon.

Hill-Hotellings' men's tug-of-war stirred up some dust, or rather the contestants did. Fred Ward, A. Latschberger, Emil Sommers, Chas. Hamilton, and Frank Broegman constituted the losing side, and Fred Lyke, Willard Cole, Stewart Montgomery, Frank Lyons and William Strauss divided the prize, a box of cigars, which, they all agree, was well earned.

The business men and band boys will contribute the following program for this Saturday evening. Come and partake of the fun. Usual band concert. Everything free. T. E. Murdock's boys' three-legged race. Each pair of contestants to be bound together in such a manner as to allow free use of their respective propellers. First prize, each boy receives a fine hair brush and comb; second prize, each boy a clothes brush.

Stark Bros' ladies' potato paring contest, to the ladies who can pare a batch of potatoes in shortest order, will be given as first prize a ladies' umbrella; second, pair ladies' black hose. S. W. Knapp's grocery will furnish the mutton for this slaughter and ladies should be sure to bring their favorite paring knife along, as no tomahawks will be allowed.

James Ford's men's 100 yard dash open to all, offers to the winner, a box containing 25 Ben Hur cigars and as the second prize, if not too far behind, a corn cob pipe.

Be in town with us this Saturday evening. You will help swell the crowd and at the same time, be well entertained.

SATURDAY'S MATINEE WAS GOOD ONE.

The horse races at the Athletic grounds Saturday were among the best ever on this half-mile course. "Shin McGregor" owned by Millage of Milan easily won out in the Free-for-all and made one of the halves in 1.05 1/4.

Tinham's "Loretta Woodcliff" showed a 2 28 clip, being rather fast for a colt.

"Director C" owned by George Stanley won the colt race and showed a remarkable endurance gait. The attendance was not so large as was expected but those who were present got the worth of their money.

The weather conditions couldn't have been better for the matinee held at Athletic park Saturday afternoon. The horse races were interesting as usual and the ball game with Northville vs the M. A. C. of Detroit resulted in a victory for the home team 11 to 10. Another matinee will be given July 4.

LOUIS COOK DEAD.

Louis Cook died at the home of his parents, Mr and Mrs. Lester Cook, Tuesday after an illness of years. He had been confined to his bed for about two months past, with pernicious anaemia, which finally resulted in his death. Louis was only 20 years old, and had always made Northville his home, though he had traveled extensively in hopes of benefiting his health. The community extends its sympathy to the parents in their bereavement.

The funeral was held from the late home Thursday, Rev. J. E. Webber officiating.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for flowers and kindness to us during Vera's recent illness. Special thanks to Miss Winkler and pupils and Miss Corder.

The invocation was given by Rev. R. M. Pierce. Peter Perkins delivered the president's address and Wendell Miller the class history in a very nice manner. Supt. Wheaton, with a few well chosen words, presented to the twenty-four students the diplomas for which they had labored the past eight years.

"The Old School at Hickory Hollow" was revealed to the audience when the curtain went up the second time. A day's session was in progress and the antics of the scholars, remarks of the visitors and music (?) by the Hickory Hollow band made up a very pleasing little entertainment.

Following is a list of the graduates: Peter Perkins, president; Scott Montgomery, vice-president; Dorothy Hubbar, secretary; Ruth Brown, treasurer; Thelma Bennett, Ruth Clapp, Howard Cole, Tracy Elv, Russell Fuller, Doris Haddock, Garret Grant, Gladys Heenev, Harry Hunt, Marcella Latschberger, Dillard Miles, Flora Miller, Wendell Miller, Ida Morris, Bertie Mosbier, Fern Simpson, Jay Stimpson, Louis Voigt, Willie White and Altha Yerkes. When the passenger train collided with the truck, the latter was carried more than 100 feet on the pilot of the engine, and the driver saved his life by jumping before the engine struck.

It Would Seem So. "What do you consider the most important even in the history of Paris?" asked the obsequious landlord of the American tourist. "Well," replied the tourist, who had grown weary of distributing tips, "so far as financial prosperity is concerned, I should say the discovery of America was the making of this town."

To Identify the Corpse. In the blanks, which life insurance companies provide their medical examiners for use in recording the data of the examination of the applicant for insurance, they provide a space for personal marks which may be used to identify the insured after death. A western company recently received a report from an examining physician with the following in the identification blank. "He has a strong Cornish accent"—Lippincott's.

Broken Heart Caused Death. A broken heart, caused by violent beating due to sudden emotion, was said by a doctor to be responsible for the death of Alexander Burgess, 21-year-old, a master tailor, at a London inequest. Burgess fell and died during an altercation with a foreman cutter as to the ownership of certain articles which he was about to remove from his former premises to new ones.

Meteorite Falls Near Woman. A meteorite weighing 37 pounds was recently the subject of discussion in chemical circles in Johannesburg, South Africa. The stone fell in Zululand a few months ago, and was not only noted by an eye witness some 15 miles away, but fell within a few feet of a native woman, who gave information which led to its discovery. The meteorite cannot so far be broken. It is known, however, to contain platinum.

A Relic of History. A nearly rich woman, who was anxious to make a favorable impression in her neighborhood decided to show her collection of antiques to the high school when it called. The time came, and one by one she displayed the whole collection, giving him the history of each piece. "There," she said, pointing impressively to an old yellow teapot, "that teapot was used in the Boston tea party."

Unique Suicide. A safe was used by a man named Jacob Rabinswiz, fifty-four years old, of Philadelphia, Penn., to commit suicide, a few days ago. First he jacked up an 800 pound safe with a block of wood. Placing his head beneath it he drew a strap as tightly as he could around his neck. Then he knocked the block from under the safe and the heavy weight fell upon his head. He was found by his wife, but died before a physician arrived. He had been despondent for several weeks because he lost a lawsuit.

BEGAN YOUNG. Had "Coffee Nerve" From Youth. "When very young I began using coffee and continued up to the last six months," writes a Texas girl. "I had been exceedingly nervous, thin and very yellow. After quitting coffee and drinking Postum about a month my nervousness disappeared and has never returned. This is the more remarkable as I am a primary teacher and have kept right on with my work."

"My complexion now is clear and rosy, my skin soft and smooth. As a good complexion was something I had greatly desired, I feel amply repaid ever though this were the only benefit derived from drinking Postum."

"Before beginning its use I had suffered greatly from indigestion and headache; these troubles are now unknown."

"I changed from coffee to Postum without the slightest inconvenience, did not even have a headache. Have known coffee drinkers, who were visiting me, to use Postum a week without being aware that they were not drinking coffee."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Regular (must be boiled). Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment, until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future. There's a Reason for Postum.

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has a chance encounter with a peasant boy. The Mount is a small rock-bound island in the bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Legend has it that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman, Young Desaurac determined to secure an education and become a gentleman. He was the governor's daughter, Lady Elise, who was to be married to a nobleman. Her ladyship danced with strange fishermen and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes Lady Elise in a boat. "Grand" is the Black Seigneur, Jesu's and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish. Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Sanchez, a priest at the "Cockles," is charged with the task of releasing the Seigneur's plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners.

CHAPTER XIV. (Continued.)

"No, no!" she cried. "I didn't mean I didn't imply that. Of course not! Only, putting out her hands, 'I try to understand, and you have never taken me into your confidence, mon pere! You have been indulgent; denied me nothing, but I don't want to feel the way I have felt the last week, as if I were a prisoner.' 'No doubt there are reasons—although I have puzzled, and if I knew! Can't you?' abruptly, 'treat me as one worthy of your confidence!'"

"You!" he said with quiet irony. "Who?—Hasten!"

The girl flushed. "I had to, because—"

"And who misrepresented facts, as in the case of—Saladin?"

"But—"

"How long," standing over her, were you on the island?"

"I don't know."

"You don't?" His voice implied disbelief.

"Part of the time I was unconscious."

"In the watch tower with him?"

"She made a gesture. 'Would you rather—'"

"What did he say?"

The girl's eyes that had been so steadfast, on a sudden wavered. "Nothing—much."

"And you? Nothing, too? Then how was the deception devised—the pact entered into?"

Her figure stiffened. "There was no pact."

"Treason, then? The law holds it treason to—"

"You are cruel; unjust!" she cried. "To me, as you were to him. That old man who had whipped! I wonder, imperiously, 'if you are so to all of them, the people, the peasants. And if that is the reason they have only black looks for me—and hatred? As if they would like to curse us?'"

He turned away. "I am very busy."

"Mon pere!"

He walked to the door.

"Then you won't—won't spare them?"

He opened wide the door. Still she did not move, until the sight of the commandant without, the curious glance he cast in their direction, decided her. Drawing herself up, she walked toward the threshold, and, bowing respectfully, with head held high, crossed it.

CHAPTER XV.

The Voice from the Group

"No one from the household is allowed through without an order!"

"You will, however, let me pass."

"Because you have a pretty face?"

The sentinel at the great gate separating the upper part of the Mount from the town, answered roughly. "Not you, my girl, or—"

But she who importuned raised the sides of the ample linen head-dress and revealed fully her countenance.

"My Lady!" Half convinced, half incredulous, the soldier looked; stared, at features, familiar, yet seeming different, with the rebellious golden hair smoothed down severely above the figure garbed in a Norman peasant dress, made for a costume dance when the nobles and court ladies had visited the Mount.

"You do not doubt: who I am?" Imperiously regarding him.

"No, my Lady; only—"

"Then open the gate!" she commanded.

The man pushed back the ponderous bolts; passed outward the mass of oak and iron, and, puzzled, surprised, watched the girl slip through. Of course it was none of his affair, my lady's caprice, and if she chose to go masquerading among the people on such a day, when all the idle vagabonds made pretext to visit the Mount, her right to do so remained unquestioned; but, as he closed the heavy door, he shook his head. Think of the risk! Who knew what might happen in the event of her identity being revealed to certain of those, in that heterogeneous concourse, without?

Even at the moment, through an aperture for observation in the framework to which he relied upon adjusting the fastenings, he could see approaching a procession of noisy fanatics.

The apprehension of the soldier was, however, not shared by the girl, who, glad she had found a means to get away from the chilling atmosphere of her own world, experienced now only a sense of freedom and relief. In her tense mood, the din—the shouting and unwelcome sounds—were not calculated to alarm; on the contrary, after the oppressive stillness in the great halls and chambers of the summit, they seemed welcome. Her pulses throbbed and her face still burned with the remembrance of the interview with her father, as she eyed unseeingly the approaching band, led by censer and banner-bearers.

"Vierge notre esperance—" Caught up as they swept along, she found herself without warning suddenly a part of that human stream. A natural desire to get clear from the multitude led her at first to struggle, but as well contend with the inevitable. "Faces fierce, half-crazed, encompassed her; eyes that looked starved, spiritually and physically, gleamed on every side. Held as in a vise, she soon ceased to resist; suddenly deposited on a ledge, like a shell tossed up from the sea, she next became aware she was looking up toward a temporary altar, garish with bright colors.

"Blends sur nous—" Louder rose the voices; more uncontrollable became the demeanor of the people, and quickly, before the unveiling of the sacred relics had completely maddened them, she managed to extricate herself from the kneeling or prostrate throng, breathless, she fled the vicinity.

Down, down! Into the heart of the village, through tortuous footpaths, where the pandering, not pietistic element held sway; where, instead of shrines and altars, had been erected booths and stands before which vendors of nondescript wares or poor trumpery, vented their loquacity on the pilgrims.

"All hot! All hot!"

"A la barque! A la barque!"

"La vie! Two drinks for a hard!"

"Volez le plaisir des dames!"

The Mount, in older times a glorious and sacred place for royal pilgrim ages, where kings came to pray and seek absolution, seemed now more a mart than holy spot. But those whom the petty traders sought to entice—sullen-looking peasants, or poorly clad fishermen and their families—for the most part listened indifferently, or with stupid derision.

"Bah!" scoffed one of them, a woman dressed in worn-out costume of inherited holiday finery. "Where think you we can get souls for gewgaws?"

"Or full stomachs with empty pockets?" said another. "The foul fiend take your Portugals!"

The nomadic merchants replied and a rough altercation seemed impending, when, pushing through the crowd, the girl hurried on.

Down, down, she continued; to the base of the rock where the sand's shining surface had attracted and yet held many of the people. Thither they still continued to come—in hands, processions, little streams that trickling in, mingled with and augmented the rabble. An encampment for the hour—until the "petite" tide should break it up, and drive it piecemeal to the shore or up the sides of the Mount—it spread out and almost around the foundations of the great rock. Only the shadows it avoided—the chilling outlines of pinnacles and towers; the cold impress of the saint, holding close to the sunlit strand and basking in its warmth.

Some, following the example of their sea-faring fellows, dug half-heartedly in the sands in the hope of eking out the meager evening meal with a coarse, salt-stored, oysters, abandoning themselves to lighter employment, made merry in heavy or riotous fashion, but the effect of these holiday efforts was only depressing and incongruous.

"Won't you join?" Some one's arm abruptly seized my lady.

"No, no!"

Unceremoniously he still would have drawn her into the ring, but with a sudden swift movement, she escaped from his grasp.

"My child!" The voice was that of a wolfish false friar who, seeing her pass quickly near by, broke off in threat, solicitation and appeal for souls, to intercept her. "Aren't you in a hurry, my child?"

"It may be," she answered steadily, with no effort to conceal her aversion at sight of the gleaming eyes and teeth. "Too much so, to speak with you, who are no friar!"

"What mean you?" His expression, lagging before, had darkened, and from his mean eyes shot a malignant look; she met it with fearless disdain.

"That you make pretext of this."

They are not poor enough!"

"Ban you with bell, book and candle! Your tongue is too sharp, my girl!" he snarled, but did not linger long, finding the flashing glance, the contemptuous mien, or the truth of her words, little to his liking. That he profited not by the last, however, was soon evident, as with amulets and talismans for a bargain, again he moved among the crowd, conjuring by a full calendar of saints, real and imaginary, and professing to excommunicate, in an "excellent" confusion of monkish gibberish, where the people could, not, or would not comply with his demands.

"So they are—poor enough!" Leaning on a stick, an aged fishwife who had drawn near and overheard part of the dialogue between the thrifty rogue and the girl, now shook her withered head. "Yet still to be cozened! Never too poor to be cozened!" she repeated in shrill false tones.

"And why," sharply my lady turned to the crone, "why are they so poor? The lands are rich—the soil fertile?"

"Why?" more shrilly. "You must come from some far-off place not to know. Why? Don't you, also, have side, Held as in a vise, she soon ceased to resist; suddenly deposited on a ledge, like a shell tossed up from the sea, she next became aware she was looking up toward a temporary altar, garish with bright colors.

"But surely, if you applied to your great lord, your Governor, if you told

"If we told him!" Brokenly the woman laughed. "Yes, yes, of course; if—"

"I don't understand," said the Governor's daughter coldly.

Muttering and chuckling, the woman did not seem to hear, had started to hobble on, when abruptly the girl stopped her.

"Where do you live?"

"There!" A claw-like finger pointed. "On the old Seigneur's lands—a little distance from the woods—"

"The old Seigneur? You knew him?"

"Knew him? Who better? The whitened head wagged. "And the Black Seigneur? Wasn't he left, as a child, with me, when the old Seigneur went to America? And, pursuing her thin lips, 'didn't I care for him, and bring him up as one of my own?'"

"But I thought—I heard that he, the Black Seigneur, when a boy, fled in the woods?"

"That," answered the old creature, of course," in a tone of disappointment at her oversight, "he couldn't very well forget or desert; one who had so generously befriended him."

"There are those now among his friends he must needs desert," the crone cackled, wagging her head.

A shadow crossed the girl's brow. "Must needs?" she repeated.

"Aye, forsooth! His comrades—taken prisoners near the island of Casque? His Excellency will hang them till they're dead—dead, like some I've seen dangling from the branches in the wood. He, the Black Seigneur, may wish to save them; but what can he do?"

"What, indeed?" The girl regarded the Mount almost bitterly. "It is impregnable."

"Way there!" At that moment, a deep, strong voice from a little group of people, moving toward them, interrupted

CHAPTER XVI.

The Mountbank and the People.

In the center walked a man, dressed as a mountbank, who bent forward, laden with various properties—a bag that contained a miscellany of spurious medicines and trinkets, to be sold from a stand, and various dolls for a small puppet theater he carried on his back. It was not for the Governor's daughter, or the old woman, however, his call had been intended. "Way there!" he repeated to those in front of him.

But they, yet seeking to detain, called out: "Give the piece here!"

Like a person not lightly turned from his purpose, he, striding-player as well as charlatan, pointed to the Mount, and, unceremoniously thrusting one person to this side and another to that, sublimely pushed on. As long as they were in sight the girl watched, but when with shouts and laughter they had vanished, swallowed by the shifting host, once more she turned to the crone. That person, however, had walked on toward the shore, and indiscreetly the Governor's daughter gazed after the woman's name she had not inquired, but could find out later; that would not be difficult, she felt sure.

Soon, with no definite thought of where she was going, she began to retrace her steps, no longer experiencing that earlier over-sensitive perception for details, but seeing the picture as a whole—a vague impression of faces, in the background, the Mount—its golden saint ever threatening to strike!—until she drew closer; when abruptly the uplifted blade, a dominant note, above color and movement, vanished, and she looked about to find herself in the shadow of one of the rock's bulwarks. Near by, a scattering approach of pilgrims from the sands narrowed into a compact stream directed toward a lower gate, and, remembering her experience above, she would have avoided the general current, but no choice remained. At the portals she was jostled sharply, no respecters of persons, these men made her once more feel what it was to be one of the great community; an atom in the rank and file. At length reaching the tower's little square, many of them stopped, and she was suffered to escape—to the stone steps swinging sharply upward. She had not gone far, however, when looking down, she

"Rub-a-dub-dub! 'Don't crowd 'no close!' Rub-a-dub-dub! 'Keep order and you will see—'"

"Some trumpery miracle mystery!" called out a jeering voice.

"Or the martyrdom of some saint!" cried another.

"I don't know anything about any saint," answered the man, "unless—rub-a-dub-dub!—you mean my lord's lady!"

And truly the piece, as they were to discover, was quite barren of that antique religious flavor to which they objected and which still pervaded many of the puppet plays of the day. The Petit Masque of the Wicked Peasant and the Good Noble, it was called; and odd designation that at once interested the Lady Elise, bending over the stone balustrade the better to see. It interested, also, those official guardians of the peace, a number of soldiers and a few officers from the garrison standing near, who unimpressed by the girl, directed their attention between the pastebord center of interest and the people gathered around it.

Circumspectly the little play opened, a scene in which my lord, in a waistcoat somewhat frayed for one of his station, commands the lazy peasant to beat the marsh with a stick that the croaking of the frogs may not disturb at night the rest of his noble spouse, seemed designed principally to show that obedience, submission and unquestioning fealty were the great lord's due. On the one hand, was the patrician born to rule; on the other the peasant, to serve; and no task, however onerous, but should be gladly welcomed in behalf of the master, or his equally illustrious lady. The dialogue, showing the disinclination of the bad peasant for this simple employment and the good lord's noble solicitude for the nerves of his high-born spouse, was both numbing and witty; especially those bits unacted by a cane, and the sentiment: "Thus all bad peasants deserve to fare!" and culminating in an excellent climax to the lesson—a tattoo on the peasant's head that sent him simultaneously, and felicitously, down with the curtain.

"What think you of it?" At my lady's elbow, one of the officers turned to a companion.

"Amusing, but—" And his glance turned dubiously toward the people.

Certainly they did not show proper appreciation either for the literary merits of the little piece or the precepts it promulgated in fairly sounding verse.

"The mountbank!" From the crowd a number of discontented voices rose. "Come out, Monsieur Mountbank!"

"Yes, Monsieur Mountbank! Come out; come out!"

With fast beating heart the Lady Elise gazed, as in a dream, had she listened—not to the lines of the puppet play, but to a voice—strangely familiar, yet different—hoarse, scolding, laughing! She drew her breath quickly, once more avoided the head, in its white, close-fitting crown's covering, the heavy, painted face, with red lips, laughing! Then, the next moment as he bowed himself back—apparently, unimpressed of a mischievous one threw and which struck his little theater—the half closed, dull eyes met hers, pressed, without sign or expression—and she gave a nervous little laugh. What a fancy!

"Act second!" the tinkling of a bell prefaced the announcement, and once more was the curtain drawn, this time revealing a marsh and the bad peasant at work, reluctantly beating the water to the Song of the Stick.

"That's best!"

At his lordship's command, for if there's a trial for you'll be the stroke I can no longer wait!"

A merry little tune, it threaded the act, it was soon interrupted, however, during a scene where a comical-looking devil on a broomstick, useful both for transportation and persuasion, came for something which he called the peasant's soul. Again the bad peasant protested, would cheat even the devil of his due but his satanic Majesty would not be set aside.

World That Was New to Her.

Tommy Conovan, a property man in Cleveland, possesses among his personal "props" a number of amusing stories. This is one of them:

"I used to be on the door at the Lyceum. One night when Joseph Murphy was playing there an old Irish lady approached with a 'tickle' in her hand. Evidently she had never been in a playhouse before and was somewhat bewildered. She watched the 'tickle' passing by me and 'heaved' as I called our upstairs or downstairs according to the tickets handed me. Finally she slowly approached and gave me her coupon."

"Upstairs," I called.

"Whisper, she said, as she leaned toward me, 'can you tell me on what door I can see Joseph Murphy?'"

Bird Slaughter Condemned.

A strong protest is being made in South Australia against the continual slaughter of such rare birds as the ibis, the egret, cranes and spoonbills to supply the demands of milliners. The slaughter is objectionable not only as destroying some of the most beautiful and interesting creatures of nature, but, according to the Journal of Agriculture, also as rendering South Australia ever more prone to plagues of grasshoppers, and is a prime cause of the decline of its fish resources. As the wandering birds disappear the crustaceans that destroy fish spawn increase the multitude.

An Expert.

"Is he much of an after dinner speaker?"

"Much? I should say he is. He's good for an hour and a half any time."

London and Its Lumber.

London is the most conservative city in Europe, if not in the world. It loves its lumber. You may still see those notices attached to lamp posts which announce Standing for Four Hackney Carriages, or whatever the number may be, though for ten years (in one case, to my own knowledge for twenty-five) no vehicles of any kind have stood there. Perhaps it is as well that these relics should remain, they are a tiny part of our social history. They will probably remain when we are flying to dinner or the theater in omnibuses. By that time people won't know what "hackney carriage" meant, and there will be discussions in the "Notes and Queries" of the period. For each generation hands down to the next certain puts to crack.

Regulating Weight.

There is only one way to regulate body weight and that is by the natural method—by diet, exercise, bathing, etc.—by alimentation and elimination. The nostrums advertised to take off flesh without change of diet are all dangerous. Be sure of that, and avoid them. The same diet that will put flesh on a thin man will take flesh off a fat one. In other words, a natural diet produces a natural condition of the body.

In the shadow of the Tower of the King stood the mountbank she had seen but a short time before on the sands. Friends of Miss Aline Smith of Detroit have received invitations to the commencement exercises of the Smith college in Massachusetts. Miss Smith being a graduate this year. She is a graduate of the Northville High school.

During the week past the Record's job printing department has finished school commencement work for Northville, Novi and Farmington and the Northville Woman's club annual program, besides all the regular work and the getting out of the newspaper. Some busy, that.

During this month thousands of young people will graduate, will step out of school into life's school. Our school life is indeed the golden link that binds youth to age and he is still but a child, however time may have furrowed his cheek or silvered his brow, who can yet recall with a softened heart, the happy school days passed in this village.

Surprising Cure of Stomach Trouble.
When you have trouble with your stomach or chronic constipation, don't imagine that your case is beyond help just because your doctor fails to give you relief. Mrs. G. Stenge, Plainfield, N. J., writes, "For over a month past I have been troubled with my stomach. Everything I ate upset it terribly. One of Chamberlain's advertising booklets came to me. After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets, I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three-fourths of a package of them and can now eat almost everything that I want. For sale by all dealers."—Advertisement.

"MEN, MAIDS AND MATCHMAKERS"

THAT COMEDY PRESENTED BY SENIOR CLASS LAST FRIDAY EVENING.

Was Fine, Bubbling Over With Humor and Fun.

"Men, Maids and Match-Makers" as played by the members of the Senior class last Friday night furnished a most delightful evening's entertainment. The play was full of humorous situations from beginning to end and to all appearances the actors enjoyed it as much as the audience. Harold Wheaton as Gay Richards, Ross Van Valkenburg as Charles Brewster, and Donald Baker as Roy Vincent made a capital start as bachelor men, but like most others, turned bachelors at the last. And no wonder, with the four charming bachelor maids, played by the Misses Myrtle Ward, Sadie Bentley, Madeline Barnum and Gladys Morse, as inducements. As a joke on her room-mates the latter young lady impersonated the former's aunt Selma Winthrop, a very deaf old lady and a regular matchmaker. She caused no end of trouble by her efforts to bring about an engagement between her nephew, Gay, and her niece, Lillian (Myrtle Ward), who were hardly on speaking terms. Succeeding at length, she was fity punished by having Dr. Imhoff (Carroll Dubuay) an old Dutch doctor and a veritable Beau Brummel, fall in love with her. What with her efforts in repulsing his attempts at love making and the numerous quarrels of the engaged couples the audience was furnished with many hearty laughs. As usual, everything turned out right and they all lived happily ever afterward.

The presentation of the comedy was so favorably received that the class is planning to repeat it at an early date. They were coached in their parts by L. L. Ball.

WHIPPLE-NOLLAR

There were about fifty guests present, who enjoyed the delicious five course dinner immediately after the ceremony. After a trip to Niagara Falls Mr. and Mrs. Nollar will be at home to their many friends, at Dearborn, Mich.

Books for the Children.

Care must be taken in the stories we give to growing children that they always overcome. Book friends are very real to boys and girls and influence their character. There should be effort and conflict in their stories and daring endurance and steadfast purpose. Stories in which the child hero acts rightly are particularly valuable, because what a boy or girl has done appeals more directly to the child's own power. He feels that he may not express it even to himself that what other children have done he can do.

"Improved" Bull Fight.

A bull fight in Tokio is quite as much excuse for a gulf day as a full fight in Madrid. Business men leave their offices, and women and children their homes, to hurry to the arena. Stripped of all the less exciting, or less horrible, preliminaries, which characterize the Spanish bull fight, the animals are brought in and sent at each other at once. So the battle is shorter, and two or three more fights will follow in quick succession during the course of an afternoon's entertainment.

Memory Games for Children.

Children learn readily of right thinking and right doing through anecdote and memory game. We cannot give them too many memory games, provided they are suited to their age and intelligence. Every thought will not affect every child, but every thought will affect some child. Robert Louis Stevenson said he was brought up on poetry and stories, and these poems and stories were the source of his later inspiration.

Directing Children Aright.

The young need to be taught that although there is sometimes a pleasure of the senses in committing sin, it is inevitably followed by remorse and punishment. Crime, remorse, punishment form an inseparable trio. On the other hand, while it is often hard to do right, the sense of self-control, self-respect and self-control that follows right action is worth all the effort made.

Canada's Oyster Industry.

There are no oysters on the coast of New England north of Cape Cod, but there are numerous in certain parts of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and adjacent Canadian waters. Efforts are being made by the Dominion government to develop the oyster industry to much larger proportions than its present comparatively small size.

Australian Justice.

Recently after hearing his first case an Australian justice of the peace delivered himself thus: "There's been a lot of lies told in this case, and I don't know who's been telling 'em. So I'm going to fine you £2. If yer guilty yer better 'out very light, an' if yer not guilty it'll teach yer to be more pertickler about the company yer keep."

Test of Sobriety.

Many shibboleths have been devised for testing sobriety. George Meredith, who doubtless could have evolved some wonderful examples, had he chosen, call them "obmeters," or methods of determining the condition of man, according to the degrees of wine or beer in him. One of the most snarful of these is the sentence, "Give James Grimes' gilt gig whip, and a cup of coffee from a copper coffee pot."—London Chronicle

Meredith on French Criticism.

I hold strongly to the value of French criticism, whether in praise or blame. The latter is done (by the masters in the art) with so fine an irony that it instructs without wounding any but the vain person; and the eulogy confers green laurels instead of gilt. England has little criticism beyond the expression of likes or dislikes, the stout vindication of an old conservatism of taste.—Meredith's Letters in Scribner's Magazine.
