SATURDAY NIGHT IN NORTHVILLE

LAST SATURDAY NIGHT.

Last Saturday night was, by common opinion, the hottest evening of the season, judging by the size of the crowd of spectators and their very evident appreciation of the classy entertainment put on by manager M. A. Porter and the city band boys. The Adams Bros. & Lewis "Chorus Shouters" proved a decided hit and their music, songs and songs were much enjoyed by the attending public. The numerous encores extended the band boys as well as the "shouters" went to prove that the efforts of the boys were appreciated by the audience. Every one responded freely to the appeal to "please buy a band tag and the money received will be put to a use which will benefit all."

The Universal Motor Truck sales man contributed $7 in cash and besides helping in the general entertainment, gave an instructive talk on the Universal truck, their advantages and many uses. Come again, gentlemen.

Another novel feature of the evening was the taking of a flash light picture of the crowd. It was engineered from the balcony of the Ball studio by Carl Daines, a former Northville boy, who is now official photographer for the U. of M. These pictures will be sold to any one who wishes to keep them as souvenirs of "Saturday Night in Northville."

Taking it all in all, it was a good, enjoyable evening for everybody and while our band will not be with us this Saturday evening, every effort will be made by the committee in charge to entertain the people who come to our town doings. Plans are under way for securing an orchestra to furnish music for the evening. Francis Wilkinson having charge of the matter. Below are a few of the attractions which with as many more as can be found and added between now and the time for the entertainment will be found tomorrow night.

THIS SATURDAY NIGHT.

Johnston Wack & Jewelry Co.—Ladies' fruit paring race—to the ladies who can pare, quarter and core a pan of ordinary apples in best time will be awarded. First prize, $1.00 bar pin; 2nd prize, 50 cent bar pin. Mr. Johnston will furnish his own brand of russet's Ladies, bring your favorite paring knife.

Perrin's Livery—Ladies' driving contest; Alexander's Livery—gentlemen's driving contest. For the best exhibition of good common every day horse driving or fancy driving, if contestants prefer. First prize in ladies', good rawhide whip; 2nd prize, bolt of ribbon. First prize in gentlemen's, as above, 6 1/2 ft. rawhide whip; 2nd prize, hair cut and shave. Here is a chance ladies and gentlemen to show the public that driving is not yet a lost art.

Pearless Laundry—Boys' 5 minute boxing contest. Boys up to 15 yrs of age only, are entitled to partake. First prize, 50 cents cash; 2nd prize, 25 cents cash. Boys may bring their pet boxing tools, if they so wish. Frank Macomber pays all hospital bills.

Leo Shipley—Chris' penny scramble. Pennies will be tossed in the air from our local hard stand and gentlemen are owners. Roughness, or other unfair means are barred and boys will be tied to local hitting posts during this part of the program. Everybody come to Northville and see the doings. Everything free.

A dance in the rink will wind out the evening's fun, and by the way, these dances are very enjoyable affairs, good music, good floor and good crowd.

TAG NIGHT

GREAT SUCCESS

BAND GETS NEAT SUM BY SELLING RED TAGS.

Last Saturday evening was "red tag" night for the Northville city band. Some score or more of this village's estimable young ladies were on hand when the evening's entertainment began, each laden with tags and a coin box. Needless to say at the close of the program it was difficult to find a person in the crowd who was not wearing one or more band tags. The people responded nobly to this call of the band, which was necessary in order to procure music and other needed supplies. The sum realized was $68.

WOODMEN NOTE ON RATES

Present Plan Wins; Only 48,782 of 900,000 Cast Ballot

Count of the advisory vote of the membership of the Modern Woodmen of America, taken as a result of the opposition to the increase in rates ordered by the Chicago convention, has been completed. It shows that out of a total membership of 900,000 only 48,782 expressed their views. The vote was as follows:

For the old plan, under which society is now operating, 26,087; for an increase, 10,733; for Chicago plan rates, 6,613; for adequate rate based on society's own experience, 3,697; for national fraternal rates, 257; for step rate plan, 293.

New Old Curtains.

A little ochre powder dissolved and added to starch will make old white curtains look like new ones.—Home Department, National Magazine.

BIG IMPROVEMENT FOR NORTHVILLE

NEW THREE STORY BLDG. FOR COR. MAIN AND CENTER STS.

James A. Huff Has Purchased the Ambler and Swift Buildings.

The old Northville State Savings bank building, corner Main and Center streets, now occupied by W. E. Ambler and son, and the first Swift office on Main street are to be torn down to make way for the progress of time. They will be replaced with a glazed brick, newly veneered three story building with store basement. James A. Huff, our local hardware merchant, purchased the bank property early in the year and recently acquired the Swift property to make more length to the new store.

Building operations will be commenced at once, with the view of having the work completed by the first of the year. Mr. Ambler, who conducts the restaurant and ice cream business in the corner building, will sell his perishable merchandise and store the balance of his stock until the basement in the new store can be made ready for occupancy. Judd Lanning and Capt. E. A. Noble, who now have offices in the Swift building, will move to the new office building now under construction just south of Schrader's store. Will Lanning has charge of both building contracts.

Such a move on the part of Mr. Huff is of great benefit to our village, as it will add another attractive up-to-date building to our business center. Surely Northville is progressing very favorably.

ODD FELLOWS AT WALLED LAKE.

Washington Lodge No. 54, F. O. O. F., from Detroit are to go to Chapman's grove at Walled Lake for an annual picnic and outing on Aug. 31. This grove is proving a favorite place for picnics and campers and is being continually improved.

Extravagance Wasted. "What's doing?" asked the tall plumber "You're all dolled up." "Had a date with my best girl," explained the short bricklayer. "But aren't you going to keep it?" "I showed up all right, but she wasn't there." "That was pretty tough." "I wouldn't care," said the short bricklayer, "only I went and had my shoes shined all for nothing."—Youngstown Telegram.

Rather Far-Fetched. A scientist, at least he styles himself "Dr.," has been suggesting that young people and children may be cured of bad habits when in a hypnotic sleep. He has a long, long time to wait till parents, or teachers, either, will approve of hypnotic influences being used upon the young.

TIME TO GET BUSY.

With the beginning of the fall trade peeping out, Northville business men should set up and take notice. There is no use expecting the results of this section to go around with a microscope trying to find out whether this or that is sold in town. The only plan that will work is to keep telling them what you have on hand. That is the way merchants get their trade. There is no reason why the people of this vicinity should be expected to adopt any different method in regard to the business men of the cities. Tell them what you have, let them know what it costs, show them you can save them time and money by buying from you—and then they will come to your store.

There are hundreds of people within the surrounding country who scarcely suspect what you have for sale. Let them know where you are. Invite them to your store. Tell them about your bargains. Show that you want their trade just as much as it is wanted by the city merchant—and a little more, by the way—and they will begin coming to you. But if you sit and wait for them, you are going to be very badly disappointed.

It costs more to keep goods a year before selling them—and they get shopworn and out of style. You can't get business without asking for it—and the best way to ask is by attractive advertising. The Record has people who can help you prepare the right kind of ads. That assistance will not cost you a cent. Space is very reasonable—and it touches the very spot you wish to reach. Think it over.

KEEPING HIGHWAYS GOOD.

The present year promises to be the greatest in the history of the movement for the improvement and maintenance of public highways of the United States. A joint committee of congress is engaged in an investigation of the feasibility of federal aid in the construction, improvement and maintenance of public highways, and a number of the state legislatures have passed good roads legislation.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of maintenance in connection with the work of improving the roads. The people in nearly all the states are filled with enthusiasm for road improvement and are spending enormous sums of money in the construction of good roads, and yet almost without exception they are making little provision to care for the roads after they are built. This is true, not only in the various counties, but under many of our state highway departments.

To maintain the roads in good condition, year after year, requires a considerable annual outlay for oil and gravel, but this outlay is infinitely less than the loss which must fall upon people eventually if they allow their roads to go to utter ruin. The thing for all advocates of good roads to do is to urge continuous, systematic maintenance and setting aside every year of an amount per mile estimated by the engineer in charge to be sufficient for the proper maintenance of the road, a course which must make for economy and efficiency.

You can send almost anything by parcel post. There are just a few things you can't ship. You cannot ship a live animal. But you can ship a queen bee. You cannot send a law-bide, an infernal machine, or liquor. But you can send medicine and cured peits. You can send vegetables, fruits, butter, fresh dressed fowls within the limits—that is for a radius of articles quickly recovered

Northville People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Northville who suffer with weak kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. Doan's Kidney Pills is a medicine for the kidneys only, and one that is backed by willing testimony of Northville people. Here's a case:

Mrs. H. Garfield, Randolph St., Northville, Mich., says: "For a long time I suffered from pains in my back and legs which at times were severe and made lifting burdensome. I had no energy or ambition to do anything. I tried different remedies but got no permanent benefit. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box at Mardock's drug store. In a very short time after I commenced using them I was completely relieved. I haven't found it necessary to take Doan's Kidney Pills since."

TOOTH PASTE WE EVER SAW.

Nydena Cream is the most delightful and effective tooth cleanser and preservative you can possibly use.

Nydena enters the crypts and crevices of the teeth—even where the bristles of the brush fail to go—prevents fermentation and in this way the growth of disease germs upon the mucous membranes of the mouth.

Nydena Cream is a prophylactic and preservative—it supplies the cleansing elements necessary to tooth preservation, elements that are found in the normal secretions of every mouth but always absent in the presence of decay. It hardens the gums, protects, whitens and polishes the enamel of the teeth—sweetens and perfumes the breath.

There is absolutely no waste to Nydena—it is clean and economical.

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, seeks a man to intercept the Gauchos, Molly, who is headed for the post. An Indian outbreak is threatened. Sergeant "Buck" Hamlin meets the stage and Molly is traveling. They are attacked by Indians and Hamlin and Molly escape in the darkness. Hamlin tells Molly he was discharged from the Confederate service in disgrace and at the close of the war enlisted in the regular army. He suspects one Captain LeFevre of being responsible. He sees Molly in company with Mrs. Dupont, whom he recognizes as a former sweetheart, who threw him over for LeFevre. Later he overheard Dupont and a soldier hatching up a money-making plot. Molly tells Hamlin her father seems to be in the power of Mrs. Dupont, who claims to be a daughter of McDonald's sister. Molly disappears and Hamlin sets out to trace her. McDonald is ordered to Fort Ripley. Hamlin finds McDonald's murderer, a man named Watson, a gun and two troopers and goes in pursuit of the murderers, who had robbed McDonald of $5000 paymaster's money. Hamlin's father is found murdered. Hamlin's party is caught in a fierce blizzard while heading for the Cimarron. One of the men dies from cold and another almost succumbs. Watson is shot as they come in sight of Cimarron. Hamlin discovers the gauchos hidden in the blizzard. He is shot by a gauchito who is trying for LeFevre, who cheated him in a cattle deal. His description identifies LeFevre and Dupont as the same. The gauchito shot Watson mistaking him for one of LeFevre's party. Hamlin and his men take up the trail of LeFevre, who is carrying a woman and the name of LeFevre. Two days out they sight the fugitives. A fight ensues in which LeFevre is shot by an Indian. Dupont makes a desperate attempt to escape but is killed. Hamlin, while the latter is assuming LeFevre's part, confesses his love for Molly and finds that she reciprocates. Not knowing her father was involved in the money plot, they meet in advance a troop of Custer's command, starting on a winter campaign against the Indians. Hamlin remains as guide. The winter camp of Black Kettle is discovered. Custer plans an attack.

CHAPTER XXXVII.—Continued.

The bugle rang again, and they turned, facing back, and charged once more, no longer in close formation, but every trooper fighting as he could. Complete as the surprise had been, the men of the Seventh rallied, no matter how the odds against them, the desperate nature of the fight. Out from the sheltering crevices poured a flood of warriors, rifles in hand they fought bravely. The screams of women and children, the howling and baying of Indian dogs, the crack of rifles, the wild war cries, all mingled into an indescribable din. Black Kettle was almost the first to fall, but other chiefs rallied their warriors, and fought like fiends, yielding ground only by inches, until they found shelter amid the trees and under the river bank.

In the cessation of hand to hand fighting the detachments came to gather reforming their ranks, and reloading their arms. Squads of troopers fired the tepees, and gathering their prisoners under guard, hastened back to the ranks again at the call of the bugle. By now Custer comprehended his desperate position and the full strength of his Indian foes. Fresh hordes were before him, already threatening attack. Hamlin, bleeding from two flesh wounds, rode in from the left flank, where he had been borne by the impetus of the last charge, with full knowledge of the truth. Their attack had been centered on Black Kettle's village, but below, a mile or two apart, were other villages, representing all the hostile tribes of the southern plains. Already these were hurrying up to join those rallying warriors under the shelter of the river-bank. Even from where Custer stood at the outskirts of the devastated village he could distinguish the war flags of Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Kiowas and Comanches mingled together in display of savagery.

His decision was instant that of the impetuous cavalry leader, knowing well the inherent strength and weakness of his branch of the service. He could not hope to hold his position before such a mass of the enemy, with the little force at his disposal. His only chance of escape, to come off victor, was to strike them so swiftly and with such force as to paralyze pursuit. Already the reinforcing warriors were sweeping forward to attack, two thousand strong, led ferociously by Little Raven, an Arapahoe; Santana, a Kiowa, and Little Rock, a Cheyenne. Dismounting his men he prepared for a desperate resistance, although the troopers' ammunition was running low. Suddenly, crashing through the very Indian lines, came a four-mule wagon. The quartermaster was on the box, driving recklessly. Only Hamlin and a dozen other men were still in saddle. Without orders they dashed forward, spurring maddened horses into the ranks of the Indians, hurling them left and right, firing into infuriated red faces, and slashing about with dripping sabres. Into the lane thus formed sprang the tortured mules, sweeping on with their precious load of ammunition. Behind closed in the squad of rescuers, struggling for their lives amid a horde of savages. Then, with one wild shout, the dismounted troopers leaped to the rescue, hurling back the disorganized Indian mass, and dragging their comrades from the rout. It was hand to hand, clubbed carbine against knife and spear, a fierce, breathless struggle. Behind eager hands ripped open the ammunition cases; cartridges were jammed into empty guns, and a second line of fighting men leaped forward, their front tipped with fire.

Dragged from his horse at the first fierce shock, his revolver empty, his broken sabre a jagged piece of steel, Hamlin hacked his way through the first line of warriors, and found refuge behind a dead horse. Here, with two others, he made a stand, gripping a carbine. It was all the work of a moment. About him were skurrying figures, infuriated faces, threatening weapons, yells of agony, cries of rage. The three fought like fiends, standing back to back and striking blindly at leaping bodies and clutching hands. Out of the mist, the mad confusion of breathless combat, one face alone seemed to confront the Sergeant. At first it was a delirium, then it became a reality. He saw the shaggy nose of a buffalo coat, the gleam of a white face. All else vanished in a fierce desire to kill. He leaped forward, crazed with sudden hate, hurled aside the naked bodies in the path, and sent his whirling carbine stock crashing at Dupont's feet as it struck his leg, clutched by gripping hands, and over all rang out the cheer of the charging troopers. Hamlin staggered to his knees, spent and breathless, and smiled grimly down at the dead white man in that ring of red.

It was over, yet that little body of troopers dared not remain. About them still, although demoralized and defeated, circled an overwhelming mass of savages capable of crushing them to death, when they again rallied and consolidated. Custer did the only thing possible—rallying loose the pony herd, gathering his captives close, he saving his compact command into marching column. Before the scattered tribes could rally for a second and attack, with flankers out, and skirmishers in advance, the cavalrymen rode straight down the valley toward the retreating hostiles. It was a bold and desperate move, the commander's object being to impress upon the Indian chiefs the thought of his utter fearlessness, and to create the impression that the Seventh would never dare such a thing if they did not have a larger force behind. With flags unfurled, and the band playing, the troopers swept on. The very mad audacity of the movement struck terror into the hearts of the warriors, and they broke and fled. As darkness fell the survivors of the Seventh rode alone, amid the silent desolation of the plains.

Halting a moment for rest under shelter of the river bank, Custer hastily wrote his report and sent for Hamlin. The latter approached and stood motionless in the red glare of the single camp-fire. The impetuous commander glanced up inquiringly.

"Sergeant, I must send a messenger to Camp Supply. Are you fit to go?"

"As much as anyone, General Custer," was the quiet response. "I have no wounds of consequence."

"Very well. Take the fastest horse in the command, and an Osage guide. You know the country, but he will be of assistance. I have written a very brief report; you are to tell Sheridan personally the entire story. We shall rest here two hours, and then proceed slowly along the trail. I anticipate no further serious fighting. You will depart at once."

"Very well, sir," the Sergeant saluted, and turned away, halting an instant to ask, "You have reported the losses, I presume?"

"Yes, the dead and wounded. There are some missing, who may yet come in. Major Elliott and fourteen others are still unaccounted for." He paused. "By the way, Sergeant, while you are with Sheridan, explain to him who you are—he may have news for you. Good night, and good luck."

He stood up and held out his hand in surprise, his eyes suddenly filling with tears. Hamlin felt the grip of his fingers. Then he turned, unable to articulate a sentence, and strode away into the night.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

At Camp Supply.

There are yet living in this great Southwest those who will retell the story of Hamlin's ride from the banks of the Washita to Camp Supply. If remains one of the epics of the plains, one of the proud traditions of the army. To the man himself those hours of danger, struggle and weariness were more a dream than a reality. He passed through them almost unconsciously, a soldier performing his duty in utter forgetfulness of self, served by the discipline of years of service, by the importance of his mission, and by memory of Molly McDonald. Love and duty held him reeling in the saddle, brought him safely to the journey's end.

Let the details pass unwritten. Beneath the darkening skies of early evening, the Sergeant and the Osage guide rode forth into the peril and mystery of the shrouded desert. Beyond the outpost picket, moving as silently as two specters, they found at last a conical landing upward from the valley to the plains above. To their left the Indian snow swept in half circles, and between were the dark outlines of savage faces. From rock to rock, colored gullies, and foot by foot, unmoved by the keen eyes, the two crept steadily on through the midnight of that sinister big ravine, dismounted, hands clamping the nostrils of their ponies, feeling through the darkness for each step, halting breathless at every crackle of a twig, every crunch of snow under foot. Again and again they paused, silent motionless, as some apparition of savagery outlined itself between them and the sky yet slowly, steadily, every instinct of the plains corrected, they passed unseen.

In the earliest gray of dawn the two weary men crept out upon the upper plateau dragging their horses. Behind the mists of the night still hung heavy and dark over the valley, yet with a new sense of freedom they swung into their saddles, faced sternly the chill wind of the north and rode forward across the desolate snow fields. It was no boys' play. The tough, half-broken Indian ponies kept steady stride, leaping the drifts, skimming rapidly along the bare hillsides. From dawn to dark scarcely a word was uttered. By turns they slept in the saddle, the one awake gripping the other's rein. Once, in a strip of cottonwood beside a frozen creek, they paused to light a fire and make a hasty meal. Then they were off again, facing the frosty air, riding straight into the north. Before them stretched the barren snow-clad steppes, forlorn and shelterless, with scarcely a mark of guidance anywhere, a dismal wilderness, intersected by gloomy ravines and frozen creeks. Here and there a river, the water icy cold and covered with floating ice, barred their passage; down in the valleys the drifted snow turned them aside. Again and again the struggling ponies floundered to their ears, or slid headlong down some steep declivity. Twice Hamlin was thrown, and once the Osage was crushed between floating cakes and submerged in the icy stream. Across the open barrens swept the wind into their faces, a ceaseless buffeting, chilling to the marrow, their eyes burned in the snow-glare. Yet they rode on and on, voiceless, suffering in the grim silence of despair, fit denizens of that scene of utter desolation.

Plant That Catches Its Food.

The common bladderwort, an aquatic plant, not only defends itself against insects and animals, but catches worms and fish for its food. As it floats underneath the surface of the water its leafy branches spread out in all directions. Its leaves are covered with little oval bladders filled with air, and at one end of each bladder is a cavity which leads into the mouth below. Inside the bladder is a small trap door which opens when pressure is put on it. A small worm or a small fish can enter this door, but can never come out.

In the early days of Arizona, an elderly and pompous chief justice was presiding at the trial of a murder case. An aged negro had been ruthlessly killed, and the only eye witness to the murder was a very small negro boy. When he was called to give his testimony, the lawyer for the defense objected on the ground that he was too young to know the nature of an oath, and in examining him asked:

"What would happen to you if you told a lie?"

"De debil 'ud git me!" the boy replied.

Keep Your Blood Cool

by Right Kind of Food and Enjoy Hot Weather

It's largely a matter of selecting the hot weather diet with reason.

Summer is Nature's season of activity—seed-time, growing-time, harvest-time—a time of expansion, energy—and Man is influenced to do his part—to put forth greater effort because activity is in the very air.

BUT—caution is necessary to avoid excessive heat from combustion (digestion) of heavy, greasy food (Nature's way of generating body-heat in winter), in addition to the heat of the summer atmosphere.

Grape-Nuts

is the Ideal Food for hot weather because, being largely predigested (and concentrated) in the making at the factory, it is quickly absorbed, a small quantity affording great endurance with little effort in digesting it.

Grape-Nuts, made of Whole Wheat and Barley, contains all the natural elements of these cereals, including the phosphate of potash grown in the grain for rebuilding waste tissue cells, especially of brain and nerves.

Try for breakfast, lunch or supper—

A Little Fruit; Saucer of Grape-Nuts and Cream; A Soft Boiled Egg; Slice of Crisp Toast, and a Cup of Postum, hot—or iced with sugar and lemon.

Surprising how cool, yet full of healthy energy and "go" one feels on such a meal no matter what the weather.

At a recent meeting of the Birmingham and Midland Institute Scientific Society, A. W. Knapp gave a lecture on "The Earth's Record in the Rocks." The lecturer took each geological age in turn and gave some idea of the life and animals that lived in it.

how the geography of the world from age to age could be defined from the composition of the rocks. The limestone, he said, proved that the greater part of England was at one time under the sea, and by collecting evidence of this kind, one was able to draw a map representing all the various periods of the world's development. The lecturer went on to show how the land rose and luxuriant vegetation grew to be covered in turn by remains of man were toward the end of the ice age. Would, he asked, the people of today leave any remains. There would be the churchyards and the great cities like London, while the deposits in the Black country, which looked so much like volcanic dust, might mislead the scientists of some future age.

Sure to Be Michigan's Greatest Exposition

This Year's State Fair Bound to Prove the Biggest and Best Ever Staged
In the Wolverine State.

WHEN the portals of the Michigan State Fair roll back on Sept. 15 it will mark the opening of the sixty-fourth annual holiday of the Wolverine State and incidentally usher in the most complete and best balanced exposition ever presented in the west.

With an array of attractions never before exhibited in the west and the show buildings packed to the guards with exhibitors, all previous records will be surpassed, and the 1913 Fair will be known as the nearest approach to a perfect community reunion ever staged. Here will be exhibited the handiwork of Michigan's soil, hands and brains—the agricultural and industrial wealth of the richest commonwealth in the Union, displayed in a highly attractive manner.

Nor only will there be exhibitors, but there will also be actual practical working demonstrations which will aid both the farmer and city man to apply his knowledge more profitably. The aim of the Michigan State Fair of 1913 is not merely to amuse, but to instructively entertain and educate.

More than ever this year the State Fair will be the people's holiday, the state's big educational outing. It has taken a lot of money to bring this about, $100,000 in premiums and prizes being hung up to secure attractions and act as a magnet for exhibitors.

This huge sum has attracted the leading live stock, vehicle and industrial exhibitors in America and abroad, to say nothing of the thousands of people who come to see the fair, to enjoy the amusement, to see the horse racing, auto speed, airplane demonstrations and free outdoor attractions.

In brief, the fair management wishes to eradicate the idea that the Michigan State Fair is a place to come to and gawk around, to see a few things and then go home. It is a place to come to and see the latest and greatest in the world of education and pleasure that we have for.

All these things are inseparably intertwined, that is what we have here for. No one can ever believe in the true meaning of the word "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" until he has seen the Michigan State Fair. It is the combination of education and pleasure that we have for.

This year when you come to the fair take with you the successful men in your special line of endeavor. Ask them what methods they used to produce such fine, sleek stock as they have on exhibition. They will be proud to tell you if you are not able enough to inquire. Talk to the implement men. They will explain the good points of their vehicles.

Look around and see if there isn't something you could add to your house or equipment, which would make the duties of your wife lighter.

We want the Michigan State Fair to be a benefit to the entire family. We want it to be the family convention. When we have accomplished these things we will have the greatest institution for educational good extant. We can only do this with the wholehearted cooperation of the people of the state of Michigan.

These points will be touched to their full and need not their big thousand-hundred coaches. The children may visit the Sheldahl pony tent whenever the little fellows are not performing and give them a few loving pats.

ANIMAL SHOW ENGAGED.

Wortham and Allen's Organization to Give Daily Performances.

Wortham and Allen's Carnival and Animal Shows have been booked at a big cost for this year's Michigan State Fair, Sept. 15-20. This remarkable organization enjoys the full confidence of every big fair man present because it furnishes clean and wholesome amusements.

The Wortham and Allen feature enables patrons to visit the fair and enjoy a circus at the same time. A circus that is instructive as well as interesting. The famous troupe of trained ponies, which always furnish a grand sight for the children, will be more comprehensive than ever.

These ponies will be hitched to their lots and need not their big thousand-hundred coaches. The children may visit the Sheldahl pony tent whenever the little fellows are not performing and give them a few loving pats.

Fair's Policy

By the Hon. D. D. AITKEN,
President of the Michigan State Fair.

EVERY scientist agrees that in order to effectively reduce the cost of living the production must be increased. This being granted, it is obvious that in order to accomplish it measures for increasing the yield must be shown the producers. Every means of effecting this end aside from actual demonstration, have proved failures. Demonstration of ways and means of improved farming has been of immediate benefit in enlarging the annual yield.

Demonstration work is the mission of the Michigan State Fair, and just how well it performs its mission is up to its patrons.

We may secure all the best experts and the most modern devices for self-cultivating farming, give suggestions as to land rotation and its good, analyze soil and do the many other things which we will do from Sept. 15 to 20, and it will be largely thrown to the winds if visitors do not throw off their "you'll convince me over my dead body attitude" and be open to honest conviction.

The idea that the Michigan State Fair is a place to come to and gawk around, to see a few things and then go home is an unproductive one. Don't get me wrong on this.

All these things are inseparably intertwined, that is what we have here for. No one can ever believe in the true meaning of the word "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" until he has seen the Michigan State Fair. It is the combination of education and pleasure that we have for.

This year when you come to the fair take with you the successful men in your special line of endeavor. Ask them what methods they used to produce such fine, sleek stock as they have on exhibition. ## Buy a Mechanical Drudge

ANY a winter day of back breaking labor has the average farmer spent stooping over the old buck saw, z-r-r-p, z-r-r-ping it's way through tough wood for the kitchen stove supply. But the wise ones don't do it now. They have a handy engine to run the saw, while they rest and plan for next summer's work.

That engine is about the busiest and most convenient machine the wise man has on his farm. It pumps water for him, runs the separator, washing machine, feed grinder, corn sheller, and grindstone. Often it runs a hay press, ensilage cutter, small thresher, or a repair shop. The year round it drudges for him, saving the man's strength for more profitable things. And the wisest man has an because it does most for him at least cost. Its simplicity renders it almost trouble-proof. Its construction makes it easy to start and to operate, and it is most economical in fuel consumption. It is made of best material, and when necessary it will deliver 10 to 30 per cent above its rated horse power. I H C responsibility for the engine lasts all the years it is in service.

I H C engines are made in all styles—vertical and horizontal, portable, stationary and skidded, air and water cooled. There are pumping, sawing and spraying outfits. Sizes from 1 to 50-horse power, to operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, distillate, kerosene, and alcohol. Oil tractors, 6-12 to 30-60-horse power for plowing, threshing, etc.
