SCHOOL FOR WIVES.

A school for wives is the latest and it should prove to be a good thing. The institution is located in New York City and its management announces that it will give a four-year course for girls, who upon graduation and marriage, will be qualified to spend their husbands' income to the best and keep an account book that will "come out straight" at the end of the month. Dr. Stuart H. Rowe, principal of the school, says that upon completion of the wives' course, the sweet girl graduates will be able to cook a dinner, converse intelligently on literature, history and equal suffrage, that she will be able to trim her own hair artistically, keep it free from germs and play her part in a social way. Dr. Rowe adds that the course was suggested to him by the reflection that 65 per cent. of the girls now in school will marry sooner or later and that they are being fitted for any vocation rather than that of matrimony.

The advertiser, while benefiting himself, helps his town. A town in which the business men advertise in the newspapers is always a live town. The merchant who uses printer's ink are always the progressive spirits of the place, and deserve the patronage of the community they help support and push forward. Deal with the business man whose advertisement you see in the newspaper and you will make no mistake.

To add to his troubles besides the Mexico situation President Wilson is not averse to taking on another, which may prove much worse, in the shape of Mrs. Bankhurst, the English militant leader. The president will now know what it is to have two women to please instead of one.

After reading the head lines in the Detroit morning papers of the Sunday shooting street car killing, checks broken, knifing, auto smashups, etc., we cannot possibly see how enough men were left alive to start the old town going again Monday.

An automobile manufacturer predicts the coming of machines that can travel 20 miles an hour. If this prediction is fulfilled it will be more necessary than ever for pedestrians to take to the woods.

Fair Exchange

A New Back for an Old One—How a Northville Resident Made a Bad Back Strong.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless, piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame that to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Follow the example of this Northville citizen.

Mrs. E. Cole, Horton Ave., Northville, Mich., says: "Members of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills with fine results. One of us had lame back and soreness across the loins. Doan's Kidney Pills entirely relieved him of the trouble. Another suffered from trouble with the kidney secretions and in this case, Doan's Kidney Pills also gave quick relief. We are all pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills because we know just how good they are."

Sending cardboard models of school buildings by parcel post is the latest device of the United States bureau of education for arousing interest in attractive school buildings at low cost for rural communities. They represent the very latest ideas in school architecture. With one of the new models to work from, Dr.
Dressler, the designer, asserts any carpenter will be able to build a school house for his district, that will meet every modern requirement.

N. H. Caverly, landlord, cobbler and chauffeur, of Brighton, has added one more accomplishment to his many others. The latest is the growing of potatoes. All he does is to simply sit the ground, plant the potatoes and then when they are ripe dig them. He doesn't have to hoe them or spray them or tend them in any way, during the season and the worst of it is he digs the crop and they yield at the rate of 20 bushels to the acre.—South Lyon Herald. Mr. Caverly was formerly a Northville resident.

A Missionary Pro Tem

The night mail pulled into the little station at Walden and the burglar got off, suitcase in hand. He was a tall, slim man with deep-set gray eyes that had a rather shifty expression. He was well-dressed and at a quick glance one would take him to be a professional man.

"That must be Squire Fisher's house, the large yellow one on the left," he mused. "I must make him call a little later." But he did not have time for further thought, for a large, well-dressed man rushed up to him, grasped his hand and said: "Well! How do you do? Glad to see you. You are to come right up to my house; the carriage is waiting out at the corner," and before the burglar knew what had happened, he was riding up the street and his companion was explaining to him that he was Deacon Alken, and that he was not to go to the minister's house, as the children had the measles, and if he could put up with their plain food, he would be very welcome to spend the night at his home. The burglar wondered who they thought he was, but he soon found out, for the deacon began to ask questions about his missionary work in China, which he answered in an offhand way and did not fully understand who he was supposed to be until, they arrived at the house and the deacon's wife greeted him with: "I am so glad to see you, Mr. White. I know you are tired; missionary work must be very trying." At last he concluded that he was, for the time being, a missionary from China.

The deacon was evidently a very well-to-do man, and had furnished his home without regard to cost. The burglar was taken to the guest's chamber where he was to dress for dinner. When the bell rang, he went down stairs and apologized to his host for not having brought his dinner coat with him. He said that he must have left it in New York. The deacon slapped him on the shoulder and said he could eat in his shirt sleeves if he chose.

At dinner the conversation turned to the subject of curios. Here the burglar was at home. He remarked that he had noticed several very rare Egyptian curios in the hall, and was very much interested in the collection of gems and rare pieces of brass work. After dinner the deacon and his wife showed him all their valuable pieces of silver and opened the safe and took out several boxes of gems. One especially that took the burglar's eye was a diamond necklace that must have cost the deacon a large sum of money. After an hour or so the deacon said:

"Well, you probably will want some time to yourself to think out your sermon for tomorrow. Maria, call James and have him show Mr. White up to my study. Good night. I hope you sleep well."

The burglar went up stairs and sank into an easy chair in the good deacon's study which was just across the hall from his own room. He tried to think how he was to get out to rob Squire Fisher's safe of its bonds and jewels, but finally he decided to take the game near at hand and visit the deacon later. He waited till all was still and then crept down the hall. Soon he heard a footstep and turned to meet his host with a glass and a tall bottle on a tray.

The burglar went back to his room and waited another hour then took his suit case and slipped down the stairs and into the library where the safe was kept. He heard a creak of a curtain and saw Maria in the doorway. He was in a dilemma, but his ever ready wit came to his aid and he stood with a wild expression in his eyes. Maria came up to him and shook his arm, saying, "Wake up, Mr. White."

Mr. White, so called, gave a lurch toward her and rubbing his eyes, said: "Where am I? I must have walked in my sleep. It is an old habit of mine." She accepted his excuse and he went back up stairs thoroughly discouraged. It was nearly daylight before he heard the snores of both the deacon and Maria and dared to venture forth. He got down stairs without a mishap and opened the safe, the combination to which the good deacon had so unwittingly shown him in the evening, got the jewels and some valuable silver from the safe, and was just climbing out of the window when he heard a carriage come up the driveway. He put on his hat and went boldly up to the veranda and greeted the man who got out of the hack. In the dim light the stranger thought it was the deacon and began to apologize for coming at that hour of the night, but he had missed his train, he said. The burglar explained that he was not the deacon, but a guest of his and was about to walk to the station to get an early train and as he did not want to disturb the deacon, asked if he might have the hackman take his heavy suit case over for him. The real Mr. White gladly consented to this arrangement, and the burglar got in and rode away chuckling to himself over the joke the deacon had played on himself, while the missionary from China put some cushions into a veranda chair and went to sleep.

The burglar caught the early train and was safe in New York when the deacon discovered his guest on the veranda. The evening papers bore the following headlines: "Robbery—Thief Escaped with Valuable Necklace and Other Valuables." But the deacon was unwilling to discuss the matter with anyone.—PEARL LANCE MEADER.

THE NEGLECTED CARROT.

Without a Friend, Seemingly, in the Hotels and Restaurants.

"If people did but know it," said a man who has made a study of the food question, "carrots are among the most nutritious and delightful vegetables that grow and yet it is almost impossible to get them in the average restaurant."

"Mashed carrots, to my mind, make a delightful dish, tasty and healthful, and yet I have failed to find this dish on any bill of fare so far, and I have examined a good many carefully in the hope of finding the carrot recognized as it should be recognized. You can get mashed turnips almost anywhere you go, but the only use they have for carrots is to flavor soup or stew, although now and then one does strike them served in cream as a delicacy."

"But why not serve them like potatoes and turnips? Carrots are splendid for the blood, good for the complexion and at night are supposed to be quieting. Their digestibility if served mashed surpasses nearly all other vegetables. A delicate stomach will get away with them when other vegetables would work harm."

"And yet the carrot seems to be without a friend in the restaurants and hotels. You can't even find them in a list of vegetables to be cooked to order. It may be different with some other markets but here apparently we have no use for them and the carrot is a neglected vegetable at his own breakfast table."

A CAMP IN A COOLER.

The principle of keeping drinking water cool in hot weather by evaporation has been long familiar to the inhabitants of most of the tropical countries. In India, for example, porous water jars are in common use. The miners in the Kimberley diamond fields, in South Africa, have a device which is so simple that it should commend itself to boys who are planning to camp out.

It takes the form of a canvas bag, made by doubling a strip of canvas two feet long and a foot wide, and sewing the sides and top very closely with waxed cotton cord. When the bag is sewed at the top a small space is left open at one corner. In this is inserted the neck of a good sized bottle, care having been taken to cut the glass as smoothly and evenly as possible, so that there may be no danger from broken particles, and the canvas is sewed tight round it.

It will be found convenient to attach two stout cords to the top corners and tie them to a short pole, which will serve as a handle by which to carry the bag. Fill the cooler with water, cut it lightly and hang it under a tree. There will be a certain amount of leakage and evaporation, and this will keep the water cool with the thermometer well above the hundred mark. — Youth's Companion.

MOVING PICTURES AT HOME.

The moving picture machines now on the market are intended for use in public halls and are necessarily powerful and costly. One recently perfected, however, is intended for use in families, schoolrooms and similar places and can be furnished at a price no greater than is required for a good projecting lantern for ordinary slides.

Since it is now possible to rent films of almost unlimited variety, covering illustrations of animal life, such as insects, birds, reptiles, etc., or studies of physical or optical phenomena, besides the wide range of popular subjects, the opportunities afforded by such a machine from the educational point of view are very great.—Cassier's Magazine.

Too Much Enthusiasm. Hank Dobbs was noted as an "honored" horse trader. He would not lie about a horse. He would merely suppress the truth. Incidentally he always beat the customer who dealt with him. The way he could slay over the defects and buzz about the virtues of an animal amounted to genius.

"Once Hank was trying to sell a neighbor a horse that had an eye which was nearly sightless. The neighbor knew Hank would not lie outright to him, so he questioned the horse trader as to various points of the brute.

"How about his sight? Can he see out of both eyes?"

"Sure," said Hank, "he's got good eyes." Here he leaned forward, his eyes fairly scintillating with suppressed honesty. "One eye is particularly good."

Hank's enthusiasm for the truth had carried him too far. The deal was off.—Tulsa Post.

So Many Trout They Trip Fishermen. Salmon trout fishing in the Sandy River is the leading sport just now. The fish have been running in great schools in such numbers that fishermen wading in the riffles were thrown off their feet.

At the falls, near the mouth of Bull Run River, the fish were so thick that they were pulled out by dozens. George Mouton and Oscar Carlson on Sunday brought home a wagon load which they snaggled by means of a hook on a throw line. At almost every cast fish would be hooked and dragged ashore. Settlers are salting large quantities for winter use.—Portland Oregonian.

Snails boiled in barley water were popular once as a cure for a cough.

THE DEBUT OF SARY LOUISE

The little white schoolhouse at Tunbridge was fairly alive with light. The blackboards had undergone a transformation and presented to the admiring visitors not stolid and brain-racking mathematical problems, neither those tremendously puzzling words, which told of a near impending spelling lesson, nor that unvarying list of kings beginning with William the Conqueror. No, none of these, for all such maddening problems were forgotten for the present, but instead bright red and blue birds sat stiffly on their perches on one board, two American flags were lovingly crossed on another, and a still more attractive decoration was the ship in full sail, and the captain at the helm, the efforts of Johnny, the pride of teacher's heart and the honor of the school when an artistic favor was called for.

The blossoming geraniums and spotted begonias made a very pleasing background on the small platform, and the ivy was lovingly drooped so as to completely cover the defunct plastering behind teacher's chair.

In fact, these yearly performances of Miss Brown's pupils since her installation as mistress of the Tunbridge School, district No. 5, five years previous, had come to be a looked-for social event of the year. Each of the 10 pupils occupied a recognized place on the evening's programme, and the loving parents and neighbors looked admiringly at the pink and white dresses, the flaming neckties and slicked heads on the front row.

"I do hope," whispered Mrs. Spooner to her neighbor, "I do hope that Sary Louise will give us a new piece this year, for it's been the same thing for the past five years. Why I know it by heart myself. 'Half a league! Half a league!' Half a league onward! She is a queer child, poor Sary is, and always was. When she once got her mind set on a thing, nobody can't stop her. I never see such a child. She knows more history than all Tunbridge put together, but that's all she does know, and there she's learned that one piece and says she don't know nor don't want to know no other."

"Yes," answered Mrs. Smith, "Miss Brown's talked and talked to her, but you might as well talk to our old Molly. She'll just learn history, and what good will the stuff do the child? I'd like to know. All the children are saying how she'll just spoil the whole programme. My Mary told her she'd think she'd be ashamed not to know nothing but that stupid half a league affair, but Sary, who said, just tossed her head and said she wasn't a kid, nobody to be ashamed of her, and that if Mary looked out for No. 1 she'd do well and have her hands full. Don't that sound just like her old grandpa?"

At 7.30 sharp Miss Brown arose from her seat, while all the would-be artists felt little shivers coursing up their trembling vertebrae—all but one, for a look of calm resignation predominated on the countenance of the tall, lean, hawk Sary Louise, the history authority of district No. 5. One by one the rosy faces, tossing curls and dancing eyes mounted the platform, one by one the stiff bows were made, the thrilling lines rendered in youthful sobriety the songs sung, and now Miss Brown announced "A selection," by Sary Louise Augusta Bentley.

A titter came from one corner of the seat; a general hum—m—m breathed from the back row, and there was a blowing of noses as Sary, the gray-eyed 16-year-old Sary, her hair smoothly plaited down her back, the pink dress with its scanty folds ornamented by the pocket handkerchief, securely fastened so as to present a very perfect triangle, ascended the steps. There was even an added flush on teacher's face, soon superseded, however, by a look of gained dignity.

Sary mounted the platform with a look of calm determination, and without further ceremony she glanced in the direction of the open window, and, striking an attitude of horror and projecting her skinny arm in the direction of the window, fairly shouted at the top of her country lungs, "Fire! Fire! Fire!" She got no further.

Farmer Jones bounded out of the door like a shot, the audience were on their feet craning their necks towards the direction indicated. "Where?" "Get out the horses!" "Water!" "Help!" "The Town Hall!" "My wedding dress!" exclaimed the newly married Mrs. Farmer Blake. For a minute all else was forgotten, and in imagination every farmer's wife present saw her new butter and fresh preserves disseminating their odors to the breeze, ascending in clouds of smoke, while the youthful portion of the audience sat rigid in their seats.

In the midst of this commotion, teacher's authoritative voice was heard to penetrate to the remotest corner of the room, the result of which was a subdued silence for about a second as Sary Louise Augusta calmly continued.

"Fire away at your guns, Ye brave, unflinching warriors, For look how ever yonder hill Approaches the enemy's forces. See how the smoke of battle curls, Look how the warriors gather, Our side must win; Oh, yes, they will, For they are full of valor!"

There was a hush as the historian, the female orator of Tunbridge, district No. 5, with a stiff bow, walked slowly but triumphantly to her seat.—ALICE M. BARTLETT.

Sanitary Conditions of Paris.

Not for many years have the health returns in Paris shown such a low percentage of deaths as has been the case since the recent flood. This is attributed to the thorough cleaning process which took place after the subsidence of the waters when the accumulated rubbish of years in cellars and other obscure places was either washed out or has since been removed by the health authorities, who now practice a rigid inspection resulting in the greatest cleanliness, and have instituted fresh methods of insuring the purest possible supply of water. Thus the floods may be considered as a blessing in disguise.—New York Tribune.

Frederic D. Lovewell, for 25 years a member of this school board in South Lyon and was one of the best known residents and auctioneers of the county, passed quietly away Friday morning at his home in that village following an attack of apoplexy. He is survived by a widow, four children: Elsie, Lucan and Scott, and one sister, Mrs. William McNamara of Dearfield. The funeral was held from the home Monday afternoon, Rev. Schofield of Manchester and Rev. Bartha of Farmington officiating. Deceased was the father of L. W. Lovewell, widely known auctioneer.

A judgment of double the amount of the verdict given the plaintiff by the jury in the case of Ralph A. Lake against L. M. Cox was entered on the circuit court Saturday morning by Judge Smith. Attorney C. C. York of Northville and J. B. Lynch of Pontiac, counsel for Lake made the motion to fix the verdict doubled in accordance with a statute which provides this may be done in the discretion of the court where a doctor is responsible for an injury to a person. Lake claims he was injured by Cox, a hotelkeeper at Novi and Lake lives in Novi township. The case was heard by Judge Smith.

The 29th annual Sunday school convention was held here on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Cook are the parents of a male and one half pound daughter, born October 17.

Mrs. Anna and Mrs. B. T. Simpson entertained the North Farmington auxiliary society at the home of the former, Tuesday.

This morning returned Tuesday morning from Detroit, where he was called by the death of his father who was 100 years old.

$1,572.75 was estimated as the cost for building two miles of county trunk roads in Farmington township at the October meeting of the Oakland county supervisors.

The twelfth grade students of our high school went to Detroit on Wednesday evening of last week accompanied by Prof. Finch, to see "Machina" at the Garrick Theatre.

Mrs. Tucker who had been making her home with her daughter, Mr. Wedge, Sunday died of heart's disease Saturday morning at the age of 76 years. The funeral was held from the St. Mary home Monday morning.

The Senior class of our high school has issued invitations for a Halloween masquerade ball to be given in the I. O. O. F. hall, next Friday evening, October 25. Music by a six piece orchestra. Refreshments will be served.

Very anxious indeed is the County Fair to be held in the Farmington hall tomorrow, Saturday evening, under the management of the Farmington high school. All sorts of events, such as a Dutch shooting match, pea eating contest, fish pond, kiondika, etc. will furnish entertainment for the guests.

L. W. Sowle, 77, died Tuesday at his home in this village of his incident to old age. His wife passed away September 27 and the husband had rapidly failed since then. Mr. Sowle was a veteran of the Civil war and moved to North Farmington 27 years ago. He moved to Farmington in 1893 where for 17 years he kept a store. Deceased leaves six daughters and one son. The funeral will be held at 9:30 o'clock this Friday morning.

The funeral of Harrison Everett who died Wednesday night was held from the home at 1:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Interment in Oakwood cemetery near the Rev. Miller of Detroit, pastor of the Church of Our Father, officiated. Mr. Everett is survived by one son, Orson. Harrison Everett aged 78 was one of the oldest pioneers of the county. He came to Michigan from his native state, Ohio when but a young boy and resided in Southfield township up to the time of his death.

A Marvelous Escape.
"My little boy had a marvelous escape," writes P. F. Bastians of Prince Albert, Cape of Good Hope. "It occurred in the middle of the night. He got a very severe attack of croup. As luck would have it, I had a large bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. After following the directions for an hour and twenty minutes he was through all danger." OAKLAND COUNTY SUPERVISORS MEET

TWO TOWNS EVIDENTLY HAVE NO POOR AMONG THEM.

It cost Oakland county $27,995.98 to care for its poor and needy, for the year ending September 30, according to the annual report of the superintendents of the poor, made to the board of supervisors last week. Of this amount $15,492.12 was taken from the general fund to maintain the county farm, and $12,503.77 was taken from the temporary relief fund to aid those in distress in the townships and wards of the city of Pontiac. Both funds were drawn on for over $1,000 more than they were for the previous year. The poor commissioner asked the board to appropriate $12,000 for the general poor fund and $11,000 for the temporary relief fund for next year.

Four townships received no temporary relief whatever, which is quite unusual. They were Grove land, Rose, Springfield and White Lake. Brandon township asked the city for but $3. Pontiac city drew the largest amount of assistance.

The following report shows the amount of assistance given each township and the city of Pontiac:

Addison	$ 720.78
Axon	208.68
Bloomfield	907.44
Brandon	3.00
Commerce	178.29
Farmington	342.58
Groveland	742.60
Holly	421.61
Highland	6.50
Independence	222.98
Lyon	628.24
Millford	4.00
Novi	369.37
Oxford	361.64
Orion	53.00
Oakland	115.60
Pontiac township	621.22
Royal Oak
Rose
Springfield	212.73
Southfield	37.27
Troy	105.52
Waterford	202.17
West Bloomfield
White Lake
Pontiac City	$ 1,106.18

It looks now as if Oakland county would also get some good roads next year. The board of supervisors has recommended two miles of roads to be built in each town and it will be conveyed except ball a mile in Royal Oak where concrete will be laid. The estimate included a $197,107.
