PAST 3 SCORE YEARS AND TEN

MANY NORTHVILLE CITIZENS ACTIVE AT MORE THAN 80 YEARS.

Joseph Leadbeater Working at the Remarkable Age of 88.

"The days of man are three score years and ten, but if by reason of strength they be four score years then is their strength, labor and sorrow, for it is soon cut off; and fly away."—Psa. 90 10

The above quotation from Holy Writ may, in a general sense, demonstrate the wisdom of the great Oriental royal philosopher of long ago—who certainly knew what he was talking about in most instances—but the exceptions which prove the rule are not absent in the application to a number of Northville citizens who have long ago reached and passed the so-called "allotted time."

In our village and vicinity are at this time more than a dozen men who have even passed the four-score mark and the majority of these are remarkably well preserved and active. As to "the three score and ten" list, it is too long for detailed mention, but about another dozen may be listed who have reached the three-score and fifteen milestone, and several of these are still doing active service as citizens in various ways.

These men all of whom are at present or have lately been residents of Northville or its neighborhood, are certainly a good advertisement for the healthfulness of our local climate.

Those who are eighty or more years old—or young, as the case may be—are as follows, beginning with the eldest:

Joseph Leadbeater—born in 1825
Leonard Charter—1826
Amos Northrop—1828
Pat Connelley—1828
A. M. VanTassel—1828
Asa Randolph—1829
Robert Yerkes—1829
Wm. Clark—1829
L. W. Simmons—1829
C. J. Ball—1830
Henry Priest—1830
Wm. Fry—1832
D. W. Brigham—1832
George Brown—1832
The seventy-five or more years list includes:

Fred Fry—1834
Hiram Holmes—1834
James Merritt—1834
V. O. Whipple—1835
F. R. Beal—1836
Henry Dennis—1836
Leonard Cornwell—1836
Chas. Benton—1837
Norman Collins—1837
Samuel Dolph—1838
William Eckles—1838
H. O. Waite—1838
Andrew Houck—1838
Gerrit Nichols—1838

It B Waterman—1832
The oldest man of them all, Joseph Leadbeater, (88) is regularly employed at the Entherly place, and seldom misses a day. The next younger, Leonard Charter, is as lively as a cricket when occasion demands. Henry Priest has put in considerable time during the past summer in his trade as a stone mason and at other work, while many of the younger "old boys" have been active in various capacities, mental and physical. A notable example of long extended business capacity is found in L. W. Simmons, who, at eighty-four is president of and an active officer in the affairs of the Northville State Savings bank.

HUFF'S PENNY CONTEST.

Some Lively Times Are Promised in Next Seven Weeks

Huff's penny vote "contest" is growing real exciting these days. The three protestant churches sit in the lead with the Methodist at a slight advantage in today's count. By next week this may be all changed. The Catholic people are a close third, while the K. P. lodge the German church and the Novi M. E. church are not so far down on the list as to be not counted dangerous. The King's Daughters have made quite a jump since last week and will be contenders for one of the smaller prizes with the local High school and the Novi Baptist church society.

The contest closes the night before Christmas, about 49 days yet, and during the next seven weeks some lively times may be expected.

SITLINGTON—ERWIN.

Miss Frances Sitlington, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Sitlington and James Erwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Erwin, both of near Novi, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents on Tuesday afternoon of last week. Only the immediate relatives were present. The newly married couple left the same day for Lansing where they visited the bride's cousin, former, Mrs. Marion Nash of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin are graduates of the Northville High, the former in 1909 and the latter in 1912. Mr. Erwin also attended the M. A. C. one year. Both have many warm friends in Northville and Novi who wish them the very happiest of futures.

AUCTION SALES.

Nov. 14—Chas. H. Banks & Son, 1 1/2 miles east and one-half mile south of Farmington, or one-half mile south of Tuck's corners, cows, milks, farm tools, fodder, etc. John E. Wedow, auctioneer.

On Life's Memories.

Appreciating somewhat the sense of humor, we are still unable to figure out why girls giggle.—Atchison Globe.

METHODIST'S ANNUAL CHICKEN PIE DINNER AND MARKET

The Methodist market and annual chicken pie dinner will be held in the rink November 11.

The market will be open at 2 o'clock. A good assortment of articles will be on sale. Come in and look, even if you do not buy. The menu for the dinner will be as follows:

Chicken Pie Mashed Potatoes
Cranberry Jelly Pickles
Cabbage Salad Celery
Bread and Butter Cake
Caramel Pudding Coffee

Music will be furnished during the supper hour. Bill for supper 25c.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Bethel Brown is absent on account of illness.

Vernie Austin is out of school on account of sickness.

The Seniors cleared $6.00 from their Halloween social.

Theo Myers, formerly of the Toledo schools has entered the Seventh grade.

Prof Chamberlain of the Detroit Business Institute visited school Wednesday.

The High school chorus is working on "The Gipsy Chorus" arranged from "The Bohemian Girl."

Marguerite Laffity spelled down the Eighth grade last week. The contest now is two to two.

Miss Holt visited the Kindergarten Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Holt was formerly a Primary teacher in Pennsylvania.

Charlie Alger has entered the Fifth grade once more. We are all glad to have him back for he is a thorough student.

Some of the teachers say they would not take $25 for the educational benefits and inspiration they received at Ann Arbor.

Everyone in grade five noticed the freshness and cleanly appearance of their school room when they came back to school after Halloween.

Grade Eight is hard at work on the study of the Civil war. Miss Water told them about Mr. Chapin's monologue of Lincoln which was given at Ann Arbor Saturday.

The following new books have been added to the library: Hardings' Greek Gods, Heroes and Men; Baldwin's American Book of Golden Deeds; Otis' Ten Weeks with a Circus; Candere's Adventures of Goulo; Starr's Story of Matka; Wade's Pure Little Cousin from Porto Rico; Price's Lads and Lassies of Other Days; Thomsen's East of the Sun; Gulliver's Friendship of Nations; Morris' Home Life in All Lands; Mendovercraft's Boys' Life of Edison; Ser's Biography of a Silver Fox; Powers' Stories of Famous Pictures; Wiggins' Bird's Christmas Carol; Zollinger's Widow O'Callaghan's Boys; Wallie's Daughter of the Rich; Radford's King Arthur and His Knights; Ellis's Children of the Tenement; Sindel

NEW POSITIONS BARRED AFTER 40

Man With a Few Gray Hairs Cannot Get Back When he Loses Job

COMPENSATION FOR DEATH

Testimony Heard by Employers Liability Commission — Benefits Not Less than $5,000—Injury Awards $1 a Day.

Washington, D. C.—That a man cannot get a new position after he is 40 years old was asserted before the Employers Liability and Workmen's Compensation Commission by Arthur E. Holder of the American Federation of Labor. He had been speaking of the satisfactory operation of the British compensation act of 1906, which recently he had investigated, when a question was asked as to its effect on the employment of men of advanced age.

In reply Mr. Holder said that, regardless of this law, there was a marked discrimination against the aged, not in Great Britain, but throughout the industrial world.

"The man who is over 40 and who has a few gray hairs cannot get back when he once loses his job," he said. "This condition was not due," said Mr. Holder, to any legislation, but came of the determination to get the greatest possible product out of the human beings employed by others.

With reference to the extent of the compensation for death or injury, Mr. Holder said he thought the law should grant "all that the traffic will bear." He declared no death benefits should be less than $5,000 and no injury award less than $1 a day, regardless of the ordinary compensation of the injured employee.

Mr. Holder was the last of the representatives of the railroad workers to be heard. Half a dozen or more spoke. All of them endorsed the general plan of the commission.

The railroad attorneys were then invited to give their views. The first of them to respond was Robert J. Carey of the New York Central, who made an appeal for a moderate law, which would not require a large aggregate insurance fund should now be expended by the railroads of the country.

He did not believe, he said, that the Interstate Commerce Commission would permit an increase of rates to meet any increased expense on account of disability compensation.

Gardner Lathrop of the Atchafalaya, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad advocated the extension of the terms of the proposed law to industries other than the railroads.

He declared the railroads had been made the object of so much legislative attack as to render it difficult for them to pay necessary operating expenses and run dividends and he said he saw no reason why the law should not cover other industries as well.

Mr. Lathrop advocated the elective rather than the compulsory plan saying that such an important experiment as the proposed law contemplates should be entered upon cautiously. He declared that a large majority of the roads prefer the elective system.

EGG'S MESSAGE REACHES GIRL

Twelve Years After Writing on Shell

Terre Haute, Ind.—John Zenor of Bowling Green received a letter from a girl in Brooklyn asking him to start correspondence with matrimony in view.

She says she found his address and a similar request on an egg bought in a grocery.

Zenor, who has been married nearly ten years, says it was more than twelve years ago he wrote his name on that egg.

It evidently had more than served its time in cold storage.

Uses Snake to Cure Cows.

Boston, Mass.—John McDonald, an officer on the steamship Kalama, just in from Calcutta has an unusual remedy for coughs and colds. He brought with him a red, white and blue snake, about five feet long, which, he says, he winds around his neck at night when a cold threatens. An Indian doctor told him the title to McDonald.

Poisoned by Cherry Sundae

Philipsburg, N. J.—Thomas J. Trefl, a member of the High School football eleven, was in a critical condition at his home from pneumonia poison, contracted from eating a cherry sundae a short time after a game. The physicians say that if he had gone without medical attendance, a half hour longer he would have died.

Name Baby for Heroine.

Newport, R. I.—In memory of the late Ida Lewis, heroine of Lime Rock Light, the first baby ever born on the little rock was christened with her name. The child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hansen keepers of the light, and her arrival brings the total population of the rock to seven.

INDIANS WOULD FORGET.

Want Their Young Braves to Drop Aboriginal Tongue.

Carlisle, Pa.—The first Indian pow-wow for years at the Indian School here was conducted recently, while four ducky giant Cheyenne chiefs from the Tongue River reservation in Montana visited the children of the tribe at the Government's educational institution, and later showed the marks of civilizing influence when they quietly slipped into a drug store and silently sipped chocolate milkshakes.

At the pow-wow the four chiefs, together with the 30 Cheyenne students at the school, considered the advantages the white men are giving them. Through an interpreter they talked to Superintendent Friedman, and declared themselves more than ever converted to education, and that they would go back to their people and talk and send them to school. These same old fellows have been strong opponents in the past of the white man's education. More amazing than anything else, the four chiefs agreed that it would be best that their children should speak no Indian language; that they should forget the past and seek citizenship in the future.

The Cheyenne chiefs who stopped off on their return to Montana from Washington, were Charles Nonyak, Charles Hoe Ball, William Bighorn and Little Son. Accompanying them was an interpreter and Red Water, a former Indian School student and member of the football eleven of 1898, but who is now a prosperous farmer. Chief Little Son was one of General Nelson A. Miles' scouts during the Indian uprising at the time of the Custer massacre.

WIFE WON'T LET HIM PAY.

Debtor's Explanation Why Benefaction Remains Unsettled.

Pittsburg, Pa.—An interesting suit was filed in Court here by John Ross, a small contractor, against Joseph C. Trees, millionaire oil operator and philanthropist, for the recovery of $372, which, he alleges, he loaned Trees in 1896, when the present millionaire was poor and had just been married. In his bill of complaint Ross says that after repeated attempts to collect the debt he met Trees on the street recently, and that Trees made the following statement:

"I know I owe you the money and I would pay you John because you befriended me when I had nothing; I would pay you, but Claude, my wife, won't let me."

Ross recites that Trees, when poor, boarded with him. When Trees was married he says he loaned him $400 toward building a small house and paid $22 to have the gas connected from the street to the house. In 1897 Trees paid him $50 on account. Ross states, but he has since been unable to collect any portion of the balance of $372.

FIRST AT LAST.

St. Paul Man Appears for Entrance to "Jag Farm"

St. Paul, Minn.—The first applicant for admission to the state "jag farm," technically known as the hospital for inebriates, K. W. Willmar, has been received at the governor's office from a St. Paul man who said he could qualify for a place at the new institution.

"I want to be the first to enter its portals and I want you to give heed to this request for it has been the one ambition of my life to be first in something, and the jag farm offers the one hope of realization," he says. "In everything else I have tried to be first I have failed."

Lunn's Expenses $30.

Schenectady, N. Y.—The majority of Schenectady came cheap, according to the statement of election expenses filed by Dr. George R. Lunn, Socialist. He says that he spent $30 of this he contributed ten dollars to the general campaign fund and spent $20 for printing and personal cards. Comptroller Charles H. Benedict, the Democratic nominee for mayor, spent $608.91 of which $250 went to the county committee.

$9,000 Paid for Three Foxes.

Moncton, N. B.—Probably the highest price ever paid for fur-bearing foves was recorded in the purchase by Charles Dalton, a millionaire fur ranch owner of Timpana Prince Edward Island, from J. C. Calhoun of Gaspé, Quebec, of three black foxes for breeding purposes the price being more than $9,000. The sale was made after several fox ranch owners had bid for the animals.

Wife Dies: Weds Double.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Because of the resemblance of Miss Katherine Edwards Baldwin to his late wife, whose sister she was, Howard Adams of Little Rock, Ark., a banker, married Miss Baldwin here. Forty years ago, Adams married the elder sister of Miss Baldwin. Adams became wealthy and established a bank in Little Rock. Recently Baldwin met in Europe the sister of the deceased wife.

Girl Lassoes Coyote.

Gillette, Wyo.—Miss Alta Scott, a school teacher, while riding in the country lassoed a coyote which her dog had scared off. The noose had caught the foot of the animal and she held it until the dog attacked the animal. Then she dismounted and, seizing a big stone, threw it, killing the coyote.

WOMEN COULD NOT AGREE IN COURT

Judge Had to Discharge Suffragette Jurors at Trial in Los Angeles

MEANTIME DINNERS COOLED

They Could Neither Reach a Verdict Nor Decide Where to Go for Luncheon—First Effort in History of City.

Los Angeles, Cal.—When the fifth and final ballot, an open one, was taken by the first woman jury in the city's history in a speeding case in Justice Forbes' court, the court stood eleven for conviction and one for acquittal. Mrs. Nora Danford, foreman of the jury, refused to assist in convicting L. H. Magor, the youthful motorcycle rider, and when the information was sent to Justice Forbes he called the jury before him and discharged it.

After luncheon at a restaurant, the selection of which the twelve women discussed for more than half an hour and which was finally named by the constable, Henry G. Hayes, after the women could not agree, they were again locked up.

Mrs. Danford was chosen foreman at the first session, and she reported when the women filed in from the jury room at 1 p. m. that the jury could not agree.

Some of the women started to gather up their wraps, preparatory to going home, but the judge dashed their hopes by saying:

"I shall be obliged to give the jury more time in which to reach a verdict."

With a sigh which was audible each looked up at the clock and back at the judge with appealing glances.

"Can't I phone home and let my husband know why dinner is not ready?" asked one.

"Yes," said the judge. "Can I send home for a coat to keep me warm in that jury room?" asked another.

"Yes," said the judge. "Send for anything you want."

"Constable Hayes, you will now take the jury to luncheon," ordered the court.

The jury deliberated individually for a few minutes and then collectively over the problem. Then it divided into two sections, one of which went to luncheon and one which said it did not.

"I can't go to luncheon," said one. "I left my pocketbook at home."

The matter was put up to Judge Forbes.

"You don't need to go to lunch," he said. "I will lock those who wish in the jury room."

This caused another rebellion.

"That is worse than going to lunch," said the reluctant ones.

Constable Hayes proved to be a clever defender of the secret of their reluctance and he finally passed through the standing women who were debating the problem, whispering:

"You better all go to lunch. The county pays for it, anyhow."

In a flash the objection vanished.

The jury in this case was novel in that not one of the twelve women was challenged by either prosecution or defense.

Before retiring after luncheon for further deliberation, the judge instructed the jury further concerning the meaning of preponderance of evidence in the case. In criminal cases, he said it meant evidence which convinced beyond a reasonable doubt. He was asked the value of expert testimony in such cases and informed the women that it was good.

LEGAL TERM SCARES WOMAN.

"No! Prossed" Drives Her to Attempt Suicide in Lawyer's Office. Atlanta, Ga.—The words "no! prossed" coming from the lips of her attorney who was telling her of the outcome of a case against her, so terrified Mrs. Therese Bates, a young Hungarian woman that she tried to commit suicide. The woman thought a terrible calamity was about to come to her.

She dashed for an open window in the attorney's office on the fourth floor, and on prompt action by several men prevented her from jumping to the pavement.

Has the Choice of 500 Women.

Grand Tunnel Pa.—W. J. Thomas, sixty years of age and well-to-do has received 500 proposals of marriage since he advertised for a wife. His only conditions were that the bride be about fifty-six, not red-headed and a good cook. All the 500 are up to specifications.

Moved 26 Times in Two Years.

Columbus, Ohio.—Ella May Masters in a divorce suit filed against William Masters, alleges that they moved twenty-six times in the last two years. She says they might have been more permanent had he paid the rent.

Good News for Mosquitoes.

Jamaica, N. Y. C.—A decision handed down by Justice Cragen, says the Health Department cannot compel owners of meadow land to dig ditches through their property in order to exterminate mosquitoes.

FAMOUS WILD COW DEAD.

Had Led Farmers Merry Chase for More Than a Year.

Cromwell, Conn.—The famous wild cow of Cromwell is no more. After "luring the life of Riley" for over a year, successfully evading the pitchforks and the bullets of the farmers, whose fields she ravaged in all four seasons, the cow fell a victim to a masterfully arranged trap, and was skinned and torn into quarters at the home of Jesse Canfield in Rocky Hill.

Where the wild cow came from no one knows. It was a brown and white animal, half-way to her teens, and even the ghostly horses that thundered down the road in Washington Irving's stories could show her no tricks. She could trot, she could pace; she could jump fences like a deer and she had an uncanny way of escaping from traps that were set for her capture. All the while scraping a living from the farm-yards of Cromwell and Rocky Hill and making her abode in a great swamp, just west of the Cromwell line.

Connecticut huntersmen are forbidden to go after deer until 1917, according to the statutes, but the shooting of wild cow was not among the things forbidden by the late reluctant Legislature. So a hunting party was organized to go after the Cromwell specimen. There were sixteen in the party, many coming from Rocky Hill and Middletown to help in the hunt.

The hunt at night was unsuccessful, but the next day another posse got into action and a single ball did the business. The carcass was said to weigh 1,200 pounds.

KEEPS LIFE UNDER TRAIN.

Man Run Over by Engine and Cars Merely Says "Whew!"

Sandusky, Ohio.—Fred Jesse, 35, section hand was knocked down and run over by an engine and thirty-one freight cars on the Nickel Plate near Kimball, Ind. and is again at work. A gash was cut in his scalp behind the right ear, but he does not appear to have been injured otherwise.

Several men and boys standing on the station platform at Kimball saw the engine strike Jesse, who was walking down the middle of the track, apparently unaware of the danger. They ran to the man, expecting after the train passed to gather up his mangled body.

"Whew!" was Jesse's only utterance as he got up and commenced rubbing the dust out of his eyes. His clothing was torn to shreds.

TO BUY IN POSTAL BONDS.

Banks Decide to Help Keep Up Their Price.

Washington, D. C.—As the result of the first sale of postal savings bonds in New York recently at the low rate of 97 1/2 cents the trustees of the postal savings banks are considering the adoption of prompt methods to maintain the securities at their face value. They will guarantee their willingness to accept in those bonds at par the 30 per cent of postal savings deposits which the banks place at their disposal for investment in bonds or other securities of the United States.

This is pointed out, would virtually assure one hundred cents on the dollar to the holders of these bonds at any time during the twenty years' life of the securities.

WHY BUSINESS FAILURES.

The somewhat startling record of three business failures in Northville during so short a time recently, added to those that have occurred at previous times, leads the thoughtful citizen who is interested in the welfare of the community to seek for some light as to the causes that have led to such effects.

The first solution that naturally presents itself is "too much competition." This might seem, at first glance to be a valid reason, at least in regard to the growing trade, but the amount of help required in all the local stores devoted to this business, the constant shipping in of supplies and the busy delivery men, to say nothing of the many farmers' rigs laden with packages going out of town, and economy in management would seem to tell a different story.

Is it not more reasonable to believe that an ill-judged system of promiscuous credit is at the bottom of the trouble? Does not the eagerness of merchants to sell their goods lead to a disastrous carelessness in giving credit to irresponsible parties? If this is the solution, as seems very reasonable, there must be a remedy. Of course, in a community of working people, some kind of a limited credit system is often necessary although it would be a benefit to many families if there were nothing of the kind. It is unquestionably true that persons buying on percent, do not use the same amount of economy as when restricted to a stated amount of money to spend, but there are of course instances where it is impossible for people to pay cash for absolute necessities as they must wait for their own pay day to come. It would not be impossible, however, for merchants in any town to form some sort of protective plan whereby habitual dead beats might be listed with all the stores for mutual benefit of dealers in the necessities of family life, and still leave honest folk the benefit of a reasonable degree of credit.

THE STATE EQUALIZATION

The Wayne county board of supervisors has appropriated $5,000 for use in securing information to protect Wayne's interests before the State Board of Equalization which meets next year. Editorially the Free Press thought it too big a job for Mr. Benton to handle and suggested to the board the appointment of George Lord or some one else. We do not agree with the Free Press at all. Mr. Benton is as competent to handle the matter as is Mr. Lord or any other man in Wayne county and we believe he will do it quite as well. It is necessary to spend money every time the equalization board meets to get a square deal for Wayne. Mr. Benton will spend it as judiciously as any one else. However, the ordinary citizen would not understand why it is necessary to spend any money for this purpose, providing the State Board of Equalization is fair and honest. The board is composed of Secretary of State Martindale, of Detroit; the State Treasurer; Auditor General; and Commissioner; and the chairman of the State Board of Tax Commissioners. These gentlemen are but one elected by the people, come from all parts of the state and some of them have served on the equalization board in previous years and they ought to understand their work by this time. Does the Free Press infer that the above board is incompetent or unfair and that there is danger that Wayne county will not get a square deal when the equalization matter is taken up next August? If it is necessary for Wayne county, with a Detroit man on the State Board, to spend money to get fair play then it ought to be necessary for every other county in Michigan to do likewise or some county will get the short end of the measure.

Isn't it about time for the Detroit police department to search every person in the city and find out how many more crazy or sane people there are lugging around loaded revolvers with which they are long, unwise themselves by killing some one.

Any how it is some consolation to find that the 30 horsepower automobile you were bragging about, is only listed as 25 h. p. by the auto license department.

And we told Mr. Pierce that the Syracuse men weren't going to play foot ball Saturday.

WEEK'S CALENDAR

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.
(By the Pastor.)

Sunday morning service at 10:00 o'clock. Subject of sermon "The No-fault Attitude."

Evening service at 7:00 o'clock. Fifteen minutes of popular song service. Sermon topic, "An Expensive Day."

This week closed the Covenant Series at the prayer services. Beginning next Thursday a new series will open. General subject, "On Spiritual Economy." The topic for the first of these meetings will be "Jesus Christ, the Son of God." Who say you that Jesus was and is? An Important Question.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES.
(By the Pastor.)

Morning service at 10:00 o'clock. Subject, "The Yigist for God." Sunday school at 9:00 a. m. place to be dedicated in religion.

Christian Endeavor. A profitable place for the young people.

Evening service at 7:00 o'clock. Subject, "The Need of Leadership." This is the first of a series of three discourses on the subject of Leadership.

A cordial invitation to these Sabbath services.

The regular monthly meeting of the Missionary society, followed by the Annual Missionary tea, will be held in the church parlors on Wednesday, Nov. 12, meeting to begin at 2:30. Leader, Mrs. D. P. Yerkes. The supper will be held at 5:30 to which everyone is invited. Price 25 cents. Following the supper there will be a short address with special music by the young men's chorus. This supper is not a scheme to make money, but to develop a better social spirit and create a greater interest in the work of the church. A cordial invitation is extended to the members of the church and congregation.

A very active spirit of co-operation is being manifested in the approaching enterprise to be undertaken during the first week of December. This institution will be known as "The Poinsetta Department Store." The above name we believe is of French origin, which indicates that the store will be beautifully decorated with poinsettia flowers and that many of the articles for sale will be imported from France(?)

Remember the mass meeting for ladies to be held in the church Sunday afternoon, to be addressed by Mrs. R. A. Allen. Also the men's meeting to be addressed by Mr. Allen. Home Missions is the theme.

Better Word.

Banks (who has invited his friend home)—"Well, what do you think of my cozy little apartment?" Banks—"Apartment, old chap? I should call it a compartment."

Philosophy in Rhyme.

This world with promise richly stored is like a train of cars, they say. If you don't want to get on board, you mustn't try to block the way.

DIED SUDDENLY.

Geo. S. Ladd, aged 55 years, died very suddenly at the home of his sister, Mrs. Wm. Kay, Wednesday evening. Mr. Ladd, whose home was in Arbor, had been here but a short time. Assisting John McCully in his shoe repairing shop. After supper on the evening mentioned, he sat talking with Mr. and Mrs. Kay, when he fell from his chair, dead.

It is believed that death was caused by apoplexy, the result of an accident which occurred some years ago. While walking along the street in another town, he was hit on the head by a piece of ice, which fell from the roof of a house, and in all probability caused a clot of blood to form resulting in his sudden death.

The funeral will be held at Chelsea Saturday morning and the burial also will be there.

The widow, who had been staying on in their home at Ann Arbor, arrived here Thursday.

Self-Confidence.

Lack of self-confidence ever makes you fall back in the ranks, weak, helpless, despairing. It shuts from you the revelation of power that is born only of action. Feel in every fiber of your being, feel with the heat and glow of conviction that you have infinite possibilities, you must yourself make realities, or you will do nothing truly great.—Herbert Knowles.

W. R. C. NOTES.
(by the president.)

The regular meeting occurs next Wednesday evening. There was an interval of three weeks between meetings this time, as sometimes happens when the month comes in right—or wrong.

Only a few more meetings before the time to elect officers for another year. Are you ready to select your candidates?

Reports of convention committees due next Wednesday night.

By an error on the part of somebody, the Department Junior v. p. who aided in the installation of the convention officers was credited to Milford. The lady is Mrs. Elsie Hancock of Pontiac.

The new candidates have been favorably balloted upon, to be initiated whenever they are ready.

Mrs. Gertrude Wilkinson Wade has been granted a transfer, to unite with the Pontiac Corps.

Our Corp. treasurer has not yet been able to report that "one hundred" membership to which we have been so near for a long time past. More than two hundred are included in our list, but cannot be reported in good standing if six months in arrears for dues. This is in most instances only a matter of carelessness. Let us try to have our "century" number before this year closes.

CEMENT—Fresh lot on hand. Also fresh load SALT. W. H. Tattarino.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. It cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedatives. For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.

Kidney Trouble Attacks Northville Men and Women, Old and Young.

Kidney ills seize young and old. Often come with little warning. Children suffer in their early years. Can't control the kidney secretions. Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain.

Women worry, can't do daily work. Men have lame and aching backs. If you have any form of kidney ills

You must reach the cause—the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys. Have brought relief to Northville people.

Northville testimony proves it. Mrs. H. Des Autels, Dunlap St., Northville, Mich., says: "One of my family complained of severe pains in his back and the kidneys were out of order. Doan's Kidney Pills brought complete relief. The kidneys became normal and the pains left."

The Indians certainly do pick out good weather for their Indian summer every year.

A lot more jurymen have been selected for the November term of the circuit court. Those from Northville this time are Earl Woodmansee and Will Lewis.

Square the diameter of the auto cylinder a few times and multiply by a couple and a half and then write to the manufacturers. That will give you the horse power and then ask the Secretary of state how much money you have left.

It is reported on what now appears to be good authority, that next spring, another saloon will open up for business here. It is said that the population will now permit an additional place for the dispensing of thirst quenchers and it is figured that there is plenty enough patronage to support a fourth business of this kind in town.

Word has been received here that George Dole a formerly well known young man of this place, is in a sanitarium at Asheville, North Carolina, taking treatment for tuberculosis. Mr. Dole and his wife, who was Miss Mary Ringle and who also lived in Northville for several years, went south a year or two ago, hoping the climate would restore his health.

O. E. Ryder has three exhibitions of prize gardening products in the window of his grocery store. One is a mammoth squash, which tips the scales at 104 pounds, another is a potato which weighs 2½ pounds and the third is a radish with a 17½ inch circumference. Guess that's a "going some" trio. Mr. Ryder intends to cut the squash up the day before Thanksgiving and will divide it among such of his customers as are on hand for the event.

Will Frost is the new tuba player in the local band to succeed L. L. Ball, who, at last week's regular band meeting, tendered his resignation and Mr. Frost was engaged to take hold of the big horn. Everything is running along smooth again and the band is getting in condition to make things hum next spring. Frost is a very likable fellow and the band teacher, Mr. Clauffers and Manager Porter, both speaking very highly of his abilities as a player.

About 25 young people were royally entertained at a Halloween party given by Miss Elizabeth Tourey at her parental home last Friday evening. The house and guests were decorated in keeping with the occasion and appropriate stunts made a merry evening. Halloween refreshments were served, together with a birthday cake, the fact that it was Miss Elizabeth's birthday being announced as a surprise to the guests. A ride in an auto truck to Plymouth and back, capped the evening's pleasure.

The little two-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ringle of South Wing street, who was so seriously injured by an explosion of gas from a coal stove some time ago, is recovering nicely. It is supposed that the child leaned down to look into the stove and a blast of flame struck him across the eyes and forehead. He was so terribly burned that for some time it was feared he would lose his sight, but it is now probable that he will grow out of the scars caused by the burns. Dr. Turner is attending him.

Did we say that Halloween passed off very quietly here? Well we forgot about the O. E. S. cap social when we said that. Ghosts were present in great numbers, showing up to advantage in the gloom of the hall. A short program was followed by the liveliest band that ever struck these parts. All were costumed in a way to provoke mirth and the instruments stretched one's imagination to the utmost, as to what they were supposed to represent. Caps were auctioned off, in order to find partners for the delicious supper which was served the Stars and their guests at the close of the evening.

Not for That Reason.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

Dorrierson, in dire need of money, goes to Broadstone and finds his cousin in the same fix. He conceives the idea of getting rid of Eva's brother, Jack, whose money will go to Eva.

Sadie, the first wife, discovers her husband is Lord Broadstone. Under the name of Margaret Hutchinson she gets a position as Eva's maid.

Jack, while visiting Eva, goes sailing with Dorrierson. Sadie, through a field-glass, sees the boat capsizing.

CHAPTER XI

ACCIDENT OR MURDER.

The news of the accident on the lake threw the whole household into a fever of excitement and confusion, and in a few minutes the gardeners, grooms and men servants were on the spot eager to attempt a rescue.

But that was no easy matter. There were no other boats except an old rowing-boat, which had not been used that year, and a big fishing punt moored in the farthest corner of the lake. The boat leaked like a sieve and sank almost as soon as it was launched. The punt had to be used, and a heavy cumbersome thing that blundered along against the wind at a snail's crawl, in a race where seconds might decide the issue between life and death.

The lake covered several hundred acres and the accident occurred in the middle of a very broad bay. The boat had to be rowed down, and every stroke was aimed on the spot to catch the boat in the two occupants.

Master Jack had to be pulled out of the water in Dorrierson's arms. He was unconscious, and his head was back, and his eyes were closed. He was taken back to the house, and his clothes were changed. But Dorrierson knew that his life was in danger.

A boat for help came over the water in Dorrierson's arms. He was unconscious, and his head was back, and his eyes were closed. He was taken back to the house, and his clothes were changed. But Dorrierson knew that his life was in danger.

A boat for help came over the water in Dorrierson's arms. He was unconscious, and his head was back, and his eyes were closed. He was taken back to the house, and his clothes were changed. But Dorrierson knew that his life was in danger.

"How can I stop her?" he cried, weakly, ringing his hands.

"You must, my lord. Get her back to the house by force if need be," cried Sadie, greedily daring.

"Say that her presence will injure her brother. Anything!"

Her will and insistence conquered him. He ran to intercept Eva, and, to Sadie's relief, she saw him lead her back to the house.

Then in her strong resourceful practical way, she took command of things. She sent one man hurrying to the house to have all preparations made; others improvised a rough litter, and herself helped to lift the boy out of the punt and felt for his pulse.

Then she made a discovery. Fastened to the left wrist, with a dangling end, about a foot in length, was a white silken cord, slight, but yet strong enough to have held down a boy five times the weight of Jack Petherby.

Without a moment's hesitation she freed it from the wrist as he lay on the litter, and as she rose with it in her hand, Dorrierson's white face was turned toward her. He was staggering along with a man supporting him under each arm.

He had fastened the cord to his wrist, he stammered, his teeth chattering between his livid lips, from the chill which set his whole frame shivering and quivering as in an ague. He was exhausted almost to the point of collapse.

Sadie made no reply, but made the men hurry with Jack to the house with all possible speed. On the way Dr. Bradford met them and took charge.

Sadie hurried to her room, taking the cord with her. Like the rest, she was drenched to the skin and she made haste to take off her wet things. All the while she was conscious of a curious detachment of mind. For a moment even Eva herself was forgotten in the all-absorbing problem of that piece of white silken cord, it oppressed and half-terrified her, starting wild thoughts harrowing and fear-compelling in their grim suggestiveness.

Only with a desperate effort could she break the gruesome fascination which the thing had for her, and then he locked the cord away and went in search of Eva.

Lord Broadstone had succeeded in getting Eva to return to the house, on the pretext that she could do more good by seeing that all preparations were made for Jack, but for all her brotherly and sympathetic, she was able to get of much use.

She gave some directions to the housekeeper and then hurried to her own room for purpose to do more.

Sadie found her along there with a look of terror on her face. She was looking at the cord which she had fastened to her wrist and her husband had held to her.

"What had she entered the started up wildly. And how came to tell me back to the house, my lord?"

No, Eva had not. I have come to tell you what I know. The cord was fastened to her wrist and her husband had held to her.

"But you think she will die?" Oh, Margaret, I will kill her.

"The cord is fastened to her wrist and her husband had held to her. I will kill her."

"The cord is fastened to her wrist and her husband had held to her. I will kill her."

but almost harder for the other to say. Yet it was best said.

"You have known it all the time," cried Eva, wrathfully; and tearing her hand from Sadie's and covering her face, she turned away and burst into a passion of tears.

Sadie let her weep—they were the first tears she had shed—and just waited for the storm to pass. She had known the time in her life when she would have given untold wealth for the relief of tears.

The storm was long in passing, but it spent itself at length. She sat up, trembling violently, and as weak as a little child. "Come with me, Margaret. Let us go and find out," she said. "I can bear it now, I think." Her lips quivered pitifully as she spoke.

She stood up, clinging for support to Sadie, who urged her. "Let me go and I will bring you word."

"No, no, no, don't leave me," cried Eva, piteously.

How cold it is, and dark! The twilight had faded quickly for the storm had turned, and the sky was dark and heavy with clouds.

They were half-way to the door when it was opened and Lord Broadstone entered. His face was flushed and Sadie saw that he had been drinking to drown those disquieting thoughts which had agitated him at the water-side.

He paused a second, and then uttered the words he was waiting for. "It's all up, Jack's dead," he blurted out, without a word of preface.

Eva reeled at the words, stood a moment gazing at him in horror and then with a moan, threw up her hands and would have fallen to the ground had not Sadie caught her.

Had his object been to kill her with the brutal bluntness with which he told the news he could not have dealt a more disastrous blow. More merciful refinement indeed, had he taken a bludgeon and felled her with it.

He declared afterward that in the dusk of the room he had seen only Sadie and had believed her to be alone. But he had spoken of the boy by his name, and he would not have done that to a servant who had so recently arrived at the Towers.

Only with great difficulty could Sadie restrain herself sufficiently to remember to play her part. She laid Eva on the couch. "Will your lordship send the doctor here?" she said.

In the end had as all that Sadie made reply, and he added solemnly. "Why did you have her brought here?"

The room was so dark I could not see.

There is light enough to see that the lady is very ill, my lord, and much to his surprise she crossed the room and rang the bell.

He murmured something about informal impertinence and added, "You had better go and fetch the doctor."

My lady made me promise not to leave her my lord. There was no mistaking the distinct note of open antagonism and he looked at her in angry surprise.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked, going toward her.

I am my lady's maid and have to obey her orders my lord.

But not to disobey mine. Go and fetch the doctor, my lord. Sadie did not reply, but continued her efforts to restore Eva. Do you hear what I say? Who do you suppose is master of this house?

The angry tone made not the least impression upon her. I will not disobey my lady's orders my lord, she said firmly.

Bradstone, severe under his beauty, lost here for a moment, said: "I have already told her, was the answer."

In such away that this is the result, Sir," declared Sadie in a tone which brought the doctor in a hurry to Eva's side. It sounded like an accusation in Broadstone's ears.

"Remember, you are discharged, you!" he cried angrily. "Come with me and I'll give you your wages," and he left the room angrily.

"Had we not better let her to bed, Doctor?" asked Sadie calmly passing over Lord Broadstone's words as if they had not been spoken.

CHAPTER XII

A HAZARDOUS EXPERIMENT

For two days Eva lay dangerously ill. The shock of Jack's death and the brutal bluntness with which Lord Broadstone had told her of it caused a complete collapse with a high temperature, and the doctor feared brain fever.

She would have no one near her but Sadie, and thus all thought of the latter's leaving the Towers was out of the question. Dr. Bradford, a man of precision and force, put his foot down and forbade it absolutely.

In the long hours of her tireless watch, Sadie had ample time to think over the embarrassing and dangerous perplexities of the situation, and to piece together many of the loose threads of the tangled web.

She had no opportunity to make further inquiries, care for the living excluded all thought of avenging the dead. But she came to the firm conclusion that Jack's death was no accident, and that what had appeared to be a struggle for the tiller of the boat had been in reality a struggle caused by Dorrierson fastening the piece of cord to the boy's wrist, in order that when the boat overturned Jack should be held under and drowned.

Then, too, was the reason for Dorrierson's apparently frantic efforts to save the boy. It was no heroism, but rather the desperate efforts of a guilty man to prevent the evidences of his guilt coming to light.

Dorrierson's story was that to get better command of the craft Jack had fastened the sheet of the mainsail round his wrist—and he declared at the inquest that he had often seen him do this before. The result was that when the boat sank, Jack was held down by it.

But the cord which Sadie had taken from his wrist was quite different in texture from any that would ever be used for the sheet of a main-sail. If the boat were to be raised the knot which lay in the deepest part of the lake, and as no one thought of questioning the word of a member of Parliament who had nearly lost his life in his efforts to save his young friend, not a suggestion was made to raise the boat.

Sadie held her tongue. She could not leave Eva's bedside to attend the inquest, and although the question was raised whether or not any cord was brought ashore—a point of dispute at the time—the marks on the linen were taken as sufficient proof, and a verdict of accidental death was returned.

But when she had decided in her own mind that there had been foul play, Sadie found herself confronted by the question as to what she ought to do. Long and carefully she pondered this and the terrible problem it suggested as to Dorrierson's next action.

Broadstone was old enough, but Dorrierson a hundred times more dangerous. She believed she could see his ultimate object. He was a shrewd, far-seeing man, and utterly reckless of the means by which he secured any desired end. And his end now was to succeed to the title and estates. And not those alone, but the immense fortune also which might now go with them.

Jack's wealth would now go to Eva. Her will left everything to Broadstone, and these two lives would stand between Dorrierson and his coveted purpose.

It was probably at his suggestion that Broadstone had announced Jack's death as he had to make the shock as terrible as possible. He would use Broadstone as a tool to get Eva out of his way, and there the turn of the "camp sponge" himself would come.

So long as Eva's death was worth a million and a half of money to Broadstone, directly and to Dorrierson indirectly, her life would be in hourly danger.

There was but one means by which her safety could be secured. Sadie must avow herself Broadstone's wife.

But then came the question of Eva's happiness. That Don Stuart would gladly welcome the chance of making her his wife Sadie did not doubt, any more than that Eva loved him.

Both in her delirium and in the intervals of consciousness, she spoke constantly of Don. At times she forgot altogether her marriage and was happy with her old lover. Sadie came to believe, indeed, that the loss of her lover had so preyed secretly upon her mind that it was but little less responsible for her collapse than her brother's death.

But whether she would ever consent to marry Don after the tragedy of her marriage, which was no marriage, with Lord Broadstone was a question Sadie could not answer. Of this she must first convince herself, and to do this she resolved upon the hazardous step of bringing Don Stuart to the Towers.

The means for this were readily found. She secured one of the cards of invitation to Jack's funeral and sent it to Don.

Two days before the funeral Eva was better, and her first words confirmed Sadie in the prudence of the step she had taken.

"Have I been very ill, Margaret?" she asked.

"Yes, but you will soon be well again, now."

"I wish I had died. I don't want to live. Oh, I wish I had died!"

"Why?"

"Because Jack is dead and—"

She broke off. Was I delirious and was anyone here?" she asked wistfully.

"No one but me."

"I won't mind you, Margaret."

late little piteous cry that made Sadie's heart ache.

"Is that how Don Stuart would have you speak?" she ventured.

Eva did not answer for some moments. "I am very wicked, Margaret," she said then very slowly. "But I have tried so hard, oh so hard, to forget him, and—and I cannot. It nearly killed me then; and now that Jack is dead—"

"She faltered and burst into tears."

"It is time for your medicine and then you must sleep. You must make an effort or you will not get better."

"There is hope in that," she waited. "I would rather die."

Later in the day Eva asked: "When is the—the Jack to be buried?"

"The day after to-morrow."

"I shall go to it," she said.

"We will see what Dr. Bradford says," replied Sadie.

"I don't care what he says; I shall go. You'll help me, Margaret?"

"If you are strong enough, yes; if not, I will do my utmost to prevent you."

"I shall be strong enough. I must see the last of Jack. Oh, dear—the last. I want to see the grave, too—I shall soon lie in the same grave with him," she added. "Just Jack and I together—at peace."

It was useless to argue with this morbid melancholy; so Sadie fetched a book and read to her. That the illness was mental was shown by the fact that after the resolve to get strong she gained in strength every hour. The next day she was up for some hours, and on the day of the funeral, she was so well that Dr. Bradford readily declared her strong enough for the ordeal.

All this time her husband's name had not passed her lips; and when he had asked to see her she had refused. He took the refusal with a laugh. He had expressed the wish out of a sense of duty, and much preferred to spend his time with Gertrude Hamlyn, who had remained at the Towers.

"Let me go down with you at the last moment," Eva said to Margaret. "I am the only one who really cares, and I cannot bear to look into the faces of the rest and see through the mask of pretended grief."

As the two reached the hall, Lord Broadstone came forward and offered his arm, and Sadie noticed the shrinking reluctance with which Eva took it.

"I am so glad you are better, Eva," he said as he led her to the carriage. She made no reply; but as he was about to step in after her, she said: "No, Bertram, please. I would rather ride alone with my friend. Come, Margaret."

"Your maid, you mean," he said frowning angrily.

No, not even my companion in that sense, but my dear friend."

"People will think it very strange."

"If you were to come with me I would be thinking of how you told me Jack was dead. And at such a time, better not Bertram. Come, Margaret, dear."

"He does not really care," said Eva, as the carriage moved off. Except of course for what people may say."

At the preliminary service in the chapel, although all eyes were upon her, she did not look at them. She seemed almost unconscious of the presence of others, and she followed the bearers, her self next to the bearers, with steady step and firm mind.

At the grave the only sign of her suffering was given at that supreme moment of mourning when the coffin was lowered and the handfuls of earth scattered upon it. She closed her eyes, her hands clenched tight upon Sadie's arm, and she swayed slightly. But in a moment she had recovered and from then to the end gave no other outward sign of emotion.

Other eyes were moist in pity for them, but her own were tearless. Tearless even when it was all over and she lingered, looking down into the grave as if unable to drag herself away. Instead of tears there was a smile on her face.

Good-bye Jack. Good-bye, dear. I shall soon be with you," she murmured. "If God will, very soon, Jack. When she turned to Sadie, I am ready, Margaret. Ah, there are tears in your eyes. Tears are no use to me."

All those around had held aloof while Eva had stood looking into the grave, but as she moved away some others pressed forward. Among them was Don Stuart, and Sadie so contrived that Eva could not fail to see him, and he came to her.

"Of course I should have looked for you to be here, Don," said Eva, as calmly as though they parted but a few weeks before. I said just now that no one would really care except me. But you care, Don. We both loved him. I am glad you came."

"Of course I came, he answered, as much at a loss what to say as most men are at such a moment. Sadie moved a few paces away. Eva's calmness as the sudden meeting almost frightened her. Don was deeply moved, and his eyes were full of yearning sympathy as he looked at her.

"I know Jack would have liked you to be here, Don."

"Poor old Jack! I can't tell you how the news cut me."

"I am getting reconciled to it now, I think. I was ill at first, but I have hope now."

"Hope?" he said bewildered.

"I suppose you can't understand. I mean hope to join him soon."

"Eva!"

"It's not the first time I have wished to die," she said, simply, with a smile.

Lord Broadstone came up to them then.

"You shouldn't stand about, Eva."

"This is Don Stuart, Bertram. My husband, Don. Both acknowledge the introduction stiffly. "You will not go away, wherever it is you are going, Don, without seeing me again. I may never have another chance of talking to anyone who was really Jack's friend. Come to the Towers some time this evening."

"I am going back to London—I live there now—but I do not go until late."

"Please come, then. Are you ready, Margaret?" Don looked at Sadie curiously, but did not recognize her; and Eva said: "This is my friend, Margaret Hutchinson—almost my only friend, Don. He raised his hat and Sadie bowed. She was afraid to speak lest her voice should betray her."

"Are you going back as you came, Eva?" asked Lord Broadstone. He had given her his arm.

"Yes, Bertram, please." He shrugged his shoulders.

Sadie was following when Don said "She is very ill, madam?" His eyes were full of anguish and his face drawn.

"Yes," replied Sadie, disguising her voice as best she could. "Unless someone can rouse her she will die."

"Can I see you at the Towers?" he asked, frowning.

"I will try," she answered hurriedly.

"I shall stay until I can," he said, and raised his hat as she passed on. In the carriage Eva sat back, not saying a word until they had entered the drive and were nearing the house.

"Oh, God, if it could have been! If it only could!" she burst out vehemently.

Sadie understood and was satisfied with the result of her experiment.

Misrepresented.

Much has been said of the dirt of the peasants of Brittany, and the well-known proverb, "Britany-nine lips and one Breton make a hundred Bretons," and the Bretons are something saying, "The Bretons and the pigs sleep together—I should not have thought the pigs so filthy," will serve to keep up this reputation though the land should be scourged with soap. The farmers of the homes of the people are by no means always dirty, and the brass ornaments upon the cupboards, the pots and pans are invariably scrupulously clean. The caps of the women are always snowy white upon Sundays and week days alike.

A Fortified Monastery.

At Solovetsk, in Russia, is a remarkable fortified monastery. It is enclosed on every side by a wall of granite boulders nearly a mile in circumference. The monastery itself is very strongly fortified, being supported by round and square towers about thirty feet in height, with walls twenty feet in thickness. The monastery, built in reality of six churches which are completely filled with statues of all kinds and precious stones. Upon the walls and the towers surrounding, these churches are mounted huge guns which in the time of the Crimean War were directed against the British White Squadron.

Wives By Purchase.

Wives are still obtained by purchase in some parts of Russia. In the district of Kamyshev, on the Volga, for example, this is practically the only way in which marriages are brought about. The price of a pretty girl from a well-to-do family ranges from twenty to forty pounds, and in special cases a much higher sum is obtained. In the villages the lowest price is about five pounds. A young farmer whose father cannot afford to pay for a wife for him need not think of getting married.

Honoring Family Trades.

A singular illustration of the persistence with which the Japanese adhere to their family vocations is seen in an announcement in a Japanese newspaper that a celebrated dancing-master was to hold a service in honor of the one-thousandth anniversary of the death of his ancestor, who was the first of the family to take up the profession.

Keeping the Air Cool.

By a somewhat primitive system the town of Tholap on Fuli, Mont. manages in the hottest weather to keep rooms at a temperature of 55 degrees. Wells are covered at the top and large pipes tap the current of cold air a few feet below the surface of the ground, conveying it to different rooms in nearby buildings.

Native Tortoise Shell.

Tortoise shell, as it comes to market from the West Indies, is coarse, dirty, and lusterless, and only the most skillful and patient manipulation makes it the rich and beautiful material it eventually becomes.

Owns 35,000 Dogs.

Probably the owner of the largest number of dogs in the world is a Russian cattle king, who has 35,000 shepherd dogs to look after 1,500,000 cattle.

After Dark Chores are Easy for Jones

Jones has a big enclosed Acetylene light in his barn.

A big, round, brilliant, white light.

A light he calls "the sun's little brother."

This big light is solidly fastened to a heavy timber, and unlike Jones' old oil lantern, it can't be tipped over.

Jones turns this high candle power light on without a match, by simply pulling a little wire rod that hangs from the light.

On cold winter nights when it's dark at 4:30.

When he gets home from town late—

Or when he has a sick "critter" to look after, Jones finds his big barn light a great convenience.

He says he wouldn't take $1,000 for it.

Mrs. Jones too, shares in the good thing.

She has acetylene light in every room in her house, and her light fixtures are handsome ornaments of brass and bronze.

Mrs. Jones cooks also on a big gas range—an acetylene range that furnishes heat on tap—just like millions of gas ranges in big cities.

The acetylene which feeds this range and the lights on the Jones place is, of course, home made.

Jones makes it himself with the aid of a Pilot Lighting Plant.

He fills the light machine with UNION CARBIDE and plain water, once a month.

This Pilot Lighting Plant gives Jones the safest and most practical light and cooking fuel available for country home use.

These Pilot Lighting Plants

Are not storage tanks.

They make Acetylene very little at a time—as it burns use it.

The Pilot is one of hundreds of patented Acetylene machines.

All built on different principles to do the same work.

The test of time has brought "The Pilot" out on top.

The principle on which it works has proved to be the correct one.

Today we sell more Light machines than all other manufacturers in this country put together.

We sell these Pilot plants complete—through three factories and 3,000 local representatives.

We have a big eastern factory in Newark—a big central factory in Chicago and a Western Warehouse in Los Angeles.

A complete plant includes the machine, gas pipes, light fixtures and the cooking range.

Such a plant costs much less than a water or heating system. It is as permanent as a cher, and as necessary to make your home modern.

Our 3,000 representatives are residents in the districts they serve.

Each one established in a permanent growing business.

They are on the grounds to see to it personally that purchasers of Pilot plants get "value received" for their money.

DON'T COUGH YOURSELF INTO A SERIOUS CONDITION.

To neglect a cough or cold is always a hazardous act. A cold so often goes down on the lungs, and the cough that follows may easily be a symptom of bronchitis, pleurisy, or even pneumonia. Coughing frequently follows attacks of la grippe, and if severe and persistent, is a tax on the system that weakens the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is an effective medicine for coughs and colds, is a perfect demulcent that may be relied upon for quick relief. A man named A. R. Ellison, Taylor, Wis., writes "I make a point of recommending Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to all those needing a certain and safe cure from coughs and colds—Adv. 1. For Sale by all Druggists."

Chronic Dyspepsia.

The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia. "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all the medicine I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else," says W. G. Mattison, No. 7 Sherman St., Hornellville, N. Y. For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.

Long French Fishing Grounds.

It is an established historical fact that for more than 400 years French fishermen have come each season to the shores of Newfoundland and the neighboring banks, except during the wars with England, when French ships were temporarily driven from these seas.

A Marvelous Escape.

"My little boy had a marvelous escape," writes P. F. Bastians of Prince Albert, Cape of Good Hope. "It occurred in the middle of the night. He got a very severe attack of cramp. As luck would have it, I had a large bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. After following the directions for an hour and twenty minutes he was through all danger." Butcher Shop for Cats.

There is a butcher shop in New York city that is unique in one way at least. It has been there more than 30 years. From the very beginning its proprietor, in addition to his regular business has made a specialty of furnishing appetizing meals for cats. Every morning there is set forth on a long counter about 150 trays of cats' meat.

In Chancery.

Emma Roesser, Mary E. Brown and William Earl, Complainants.

vs.

Jose Moraga, the heirs and legal representatives of Joseph Casano also styled Casano, his or their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, or any person holding under them or any of them Defendants.

At a session of said court, held at the court house, in the City of Detroit, October 24th, 1913.

Present: John Henry A. Mandell, Circuit Judge.

On reading the Bill of Complaint filed in this cause from which it satisfactorily appears to the court that the above named defendants and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns are necessary and proper parties and necessary parties in this cause, and that said defendants cannot be by reason of their residence, if alive, being unknown and cannot be ascertained after diligent search and inquiry, and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns being unnamed, be personally served with process in this cause.

On motion of Alexander Brown, solicitor for Complainants, it is ordered that said Defendants enter their appearance in said cause on or before the 15th day of November, 1913, and before the month of the date of this order, or on a default thereof the Bill of Complaint in this cause be taken as confessed by said Defendants. It is further ordered that this order be published within twenty days after the date hereof in the Northville Record, a newspaper printed and circulating in Wayne County, Michigan, once in each week for six weeks in succession and that each publication of this order shall be followed by a description of the lands described in the Bill of Complaint.

HENRY A. MANDELL, Circuit Judge.
