THREE TICKETS IN THE FIELD

TOWNSHIP ELECTION PROMISES TO BE FULL OF GINGER.

Bull Moosers Will Put Up Candidates for Every Office.

The coming Northville township election promises to be very spirited one with three real live tickets in the field.

The Republicans and Progressives (Moosers) hold a caucus Saturday afternoon of this week, the former in the village hall and the latter in Ambler's hall. The Democrats will pull theirs off next Monday evening.

W. Judd Lanning will again be a candidate on the Republican ticket. He has held that office for a number of years and has made a splendid official. He is a good vote getter and even with the loss of the Bull Moose Republican vote, the Democrats can hardly expect to get dangerously near him.

The Democrats are counting on C. A. Sessions to again make the run at the head of their ticket and point to his vote as assessor at the recent village election as an illustration that Charlie is still some gatherer of counts. The Democrats say they stand a show this year if the Progressives will stick to their ticket as they claim they will.

The Progressives have in mind the nomination of Nathan Clapp as their standard bearer. They say they hardly expect to elect only a part of their ticket but believe by holding their strength intact they will compel the other parties to put up the best available men for all offices. They still claim 125 voters on their list and more to be heard from.

AMBLER'S NEW ICE CREAM PARLOR OPENED.

W. E. Ambler & Son, opened their new ice cream and confectionery store, yesterday evening and it was a great success. The firm occupies the basement in the new Huff building especially fitted up for their occupancy. The mosaic floor, paneled walls, new counters, polished sanitary soda fountain stand, together with the floral and electric decorations made the place very attractive. Many customers and visitors made the opening night a great success and Mr. and Mrs. Ambler and Roy were recipients of many congratulations on the attractiveness of their handsome new quarters.

BUYING AND ADVERTISING AT HOME.

An exchange makes the following pertinent comment. "A farmer who was carrying an express package from a city mail order house, was accosted by a local merchant. 'Why don't you buy that bill of goods from me? I could have saved you the express and besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay the taxes and build up this locality.' With characteristic frankness, the farmer asked: 'Why don't you patronize your home paper? I read it and didn't know you had the goods I have here, nor do I ever see your name in the paper inviting one to come to your store.'

SOME VARIOLOID CASES.

There have recently been a number of cases in Northville of a mild form of varioloid. Roy and Thelma Ambler, Clyde Schoutz and Dr. D. B. Henry and some others all had a slight attack of it about two weeks ago, but have now fully recovered. Sherrill Ambler, who had been visiting here, came down with it on returning to his home in Detroit and last Saturday evening was taken to the smallpox hospital of that city. He is getting along nicely and will probably be out of detention next week.

A REVISAL.

It used to be told
In slang words of old,
If in angry dispute folks were seen,
That, from such falling out,
Without any doubt
There were going to be "wigs on the green."
Now days, they say
In a casual way
Referring to fashion's weird rig—
Some are fools enough, quite,
Without any fight,
To demonstrate green on the wig.

March 28 is opening day at Mrs. Ambler's millinery store.

MRS. JOHN DENNIS DEAD.

Mrs. John Dennis of Owendale died very suddenly last Sunday night. She had been taken about two weeks before to the Bad Axe hospital to undergo what was thought to be a slight operation. She improved very nicely until Sunday, when complications set in and she sank rapidly, dying that night.

Mrs. Dennis, who was a member of the First Baptist church, was a highly respected woman, she and her husband having lived for years at Power's station, where Mr. Dennis had charge of the Warner cheese factory. A year ago they moved to Owendale, where he managed the work of the Warner-Smith factory and farm.

The body was brought to the home of Mr. Dennis' brother, Ben, at Power's station, where the funeral was held Wednesday afternoon.

Care should be taken to place the pan so air can circulate under it while cooling.

DETROIT KNIGHTS WERE ROYALLY ENTERTAINED.

Detroit Commandery, K. T., 75 strong, came out from Detroit Tuesday night in three special cars and were guests of the Northville Commandery at a 6:00 o'clock banquet and for initiatory work later in the evening. They were met at the D. U. R. depot by the Northville knights and headed by the city band marched up to the Masonic Temple.

A large crowd had collected on the street, expecting to witness a drill, but owing to the muddy condition of Northville's pavements, the visiting Commandery found the drill impossible, greatly to the grope's disappointment.

Both the Northville and Detroit Commanderies made splendid appearances and the band boys, in their natty new uniforms, together with the spirited music, added much to the splendor of the occasion.

The Detroiters expressed themselves as more than pleased with the delightful manner in which they were entertained here.

As a fitting climax to the delightful occasion, the Northville Knights presented a V. M. Kimms with a very beautiful Past Eminent Commander's Jewel. The jewel is set with diamonds and is handsomely engraved. Sir Knight Marion Porter made the presentation in behalf of Northville Knights and V. M. Kimms responded as best a man can when laid low with an unexpected surprise party.

ALMA COLLEGE GLEE CLUB.

The Alma College Glee club of sixteen members was the star attraction at the Presbyterian church Saturday night and Sunday, last. On the former evening a program of classical selections with violin solos, two humorous readings and for the second half, a comic opera, delighted a large audience. The young men also assisted in all the services on Sunday, adding much to the interest and enjoyment of each. In the evening a beautiful sacred concert was given where, by earnestness of manner and charm in rendition the old hymns seemed to bear a new significance. Northville was indeed fortunate to secure the glee club for an entertainment.

May Omit "Obey" in England

Omission of the word "obey" from the marriage service in the Church of England appeared to find considerable support among bishops attending the house of convocation of the province of Canterbury, in session in London.

The archbishop of Canterbury emphasized the opinion that the Church of England had to face this proposed change and other questions of a far-reaching character arising out of it.

Will in Single Sentence

Trenton, N. J.—The late Judge G. D. W. Vroom, of the New Jersey court of errors and appeals used only 10 words to dispose of his estate, valued at between $75,000 and $100,000. His will, filed in the office of the surrogate yesterday, is a single sentence:

"I give all my property, whatsoever kind, to my wife."

Favors Four-Year Term.

Representative orland of Missouri, has introduced in the house a proposed constitutional amendment to make the election of congress occur every four years instead of every two years. He also provides for the recall of congressmen.

Lambs Developed in Transit.

In a suit brought by Frederick Kling and Lee Simonson, Colorado ranchmen, against the Rock Island railroad, the plaintiffs allege that a shipment of a trainload of lambs grew into sheep before they were placed on the market. The lambs were delivered to the railroad in May, 1908, but the road did not market them until they had fleeced. The sheep numbered 22,334, and the amount involved is $533,926.22.

Kissing as Divorce Cure

"My cure for divorce is to kiss your wife every day as an act of good faith," Vice President Marshall said, addressing the Young Men's Christian Association in Brooklyn. He spoke on "The New Puritan."

Contrasting the old Puritan and the new, Marshall said the latter lacked the austerity of the old. "He smiles because he thinks God smiles. He believes in carrying his honeymoon through all the years of his married life."

Does Beer Promote Sobriety?

It is commonly said that one who is drunk is in Germany, and beer is given the credit. But when facts are obtained from behind the scenes, the view is not so favorable. According to statistics compiled by Johannes Lomhardt, M. D., in a recent book, one hundred convicts in Berlin, the offense was found to have been committed during intoxication. In Charleston, in 1901, one case in every five received in the hospital was alcoholism. Ken spends annually about $300,000 for relief of poverty, and a full third has been found to be due to alcohol.

Hired to Spend Fortune

Hammond, Ind.—Receiving a letter from Greece that he is heir to a $7,000,000 estate, Mathias Constante, steel worker here, has hired five close friends, each at $5,000 a year, to help him spend his money.

Word of the inheritance came to Constante Saturday. He exclaimed: "What will I ever do with so much money?"

When he went to work for $1.75 a day yesterday he told his five friends of his luck. They accepted his offer to go all over the world and help him spend his money. Today the six went to Chicago to celebrate.

Denies Tobacco Charge

Akron—Rev. G. M. Griffith, former Akron minister reported to have been ousted from the First Congregational church at Portland, Ind., because he refused to give up the use of tobacco, is in Akron and denies the charges.

Rev. Mr. Griffin declares he resigned in Portland on account of his wife's poor health. He admitted, however, that members of the church had asked him not to smoke.

Tennessee Stays Wet.

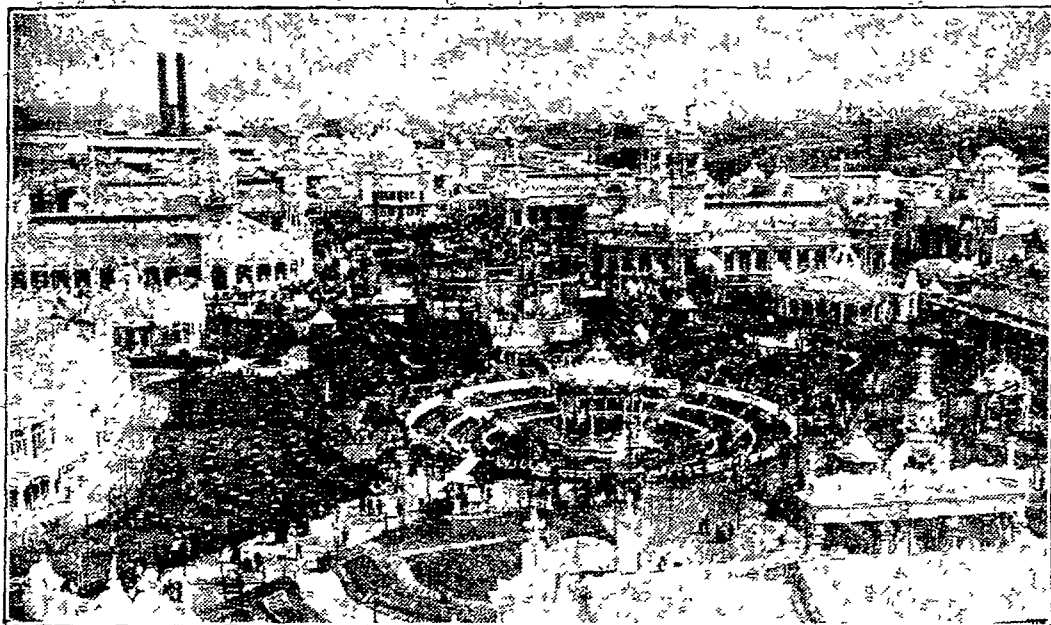

Although the saloons closed and the breweries and distilleries shut down when Tennessee's new law went into effect, the supreme court rendered a decision on the state law limiting the shipment of liquor into the state to one gallon for personal use. The court ruled that the law affected interstate commerce and was invalid, consequently persons can bring in unlimited quantities.

Vassar Girls Break Records

Two records were broken by Vassar girls in the annual indoor track meet at Poughkeepsie. Miss Elizabeth Harding threw the basketball 75 feet, eclipsing the former record by fifteen feet. Miss Smith, 14, was second, Miss B. Goss, 16, third. Miss Harding also was one of three who smashed the long jump record. The three who went the greatest distance in this event were: Miss A. Swan, 17, 9 ft. 1 1/2 in.; Miss E. Harding, 17, 8 ft. 1 1/2 in.; and Miss E. Lester, 14, 8 ft. 6 1/2 in. The former record was 8 ft. 1 in.

UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN WILL CELEBRATE THE CENTENNIAL OF THE SIGNING OF THE TREATY OF GHENT

The Exposition will demonstrate in a practical manner, the progress made by the British and American people in every-branch of civilization and will unfold the rich treasures of a hundred years of American and British Art.

In London next summer will be held one of the most notable international expositions ever held in any country so far at least as concerns the English speaking people.

This year marks the centennial anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent, which ended the War of 1812, and which has resulted in one hundred years of peaceful relations between the United States and the United Kingdom.

It is proposed to recognize this anniversary in a way that shall fittingly commemorate its importance as well as illustrate in a definite way just how influential the two countries have been in the material progress of the world. The big feature of the celebration will be the Anglo-American Exposition, which will open the early part of May and continue until the end of October.

The aim of the exposition is to demonstrate in a practical manner the progress which has been made by the British and American people in every branch of civilization during the past century, and to place on view in chronological order the great achievements of that epoch from inception to perfection, showing not only how each nation has improved on its own inventions but also where both have worked hand in hand to perfect the creations of the other. There will be unfolded the rich treasures of a hundred years of American and British art.

The undertaking is popular in origin, and the promotion has enlisted the co-operation of hundreds of public spirited men foremost in the affairs of Great Britain and this country. Organized under the auspices of H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught as patron, and H. R. H. the Duke of York, brother of the Queen, as honorary president, the list of vice-presidents and members of the several committees includes many of the most prominent men of the British Empire. Inure Kralley, who has been identified with many successful expositions, is the director general.

In view of the fact that permanent exposition grounds had been established at Shepherd's Bush, where a tract of more than 150 acres with an imposing group of fire-proof buildings had been laid out, it was decided to lease these grounds for the exposition next summer, thereby saving the very large item of expense for the construction of buildings, and also guaranteeing that everything would be in readiness for the installation of exhibits at the time fixed for opening in May.

These grounds are in the western, residential section of London, readily accessible from the center of the city and only about four miles from the heart of London proper. The main entrance is connected directly with the terminus of, or is in close proximity to the leading railways, tramways and center tubes, and in the midst of a network of transportation lines affording easy means of communication with all parts of London and England.

The American vice-presidents of the exposition are Nicholas Murray Butler, Joseph H. Choate, James B. Fernald, David R. Francis, Alva B. Johnson, Abbott L. Lowell, Samuel Mather of Cleveland; Frederick P. Fish, of Boston, and J. G. Smidupp, of Cincinnati. As members of the American general committee are Senators, Congressmen, Governors, Mayors and others to the number of 100 or more. In thirty cities local executive committees have been formed with appropriate members as chairmen, and the active co-operation has been secured of 300 chambers of commerce and boards of trade throughout the country.

The history alone of the two nations for the last hundred years would make a fascinating exposition all by itself. The story of the famous statesmen, authors, artists, inventors, philosophers, financiers, merchants, and manufacturers, it is proposed to show with such objects of historical interest as are associated with them and their times. The pre-eminence of the progress made in education, science, literature, inventions, production, improvements and comfort in social life and the betterment of conditions of work for men and women is in itself a huge undertaking. The projects of the exposition, however, have planned to do it.

It is proposed to make a practical showing of the advancement in navigation, railway transport, girder suspension and cantilever bridges, as well as the use of steel in architecture, the boring of tunnels, underground and overhead railways, aerodromes, light-houses, the work of the Panama Canal; printing, from the simple hand press to the modern rotary press and linotype, lithography, electrotype, and hydraulic power, coal gas and electricity, the storage of power, pneumatic despatch, the telegraph, telephone and wireless, cinematograph and gramophone, photography from the daguerreotype to colored with automatic photography; the invention and creation of new metals, the advancement in mining, the utilization of rubber, calculating and recording instruments, the great advance in agricultural machinery and all kinds of labor saving devices, the marvelous achievements in chemistry, in fact the harnessing of the very elements for the use and comfort of the nations.

The imposing exposition palaces, most decorative in architectural design, containing 1,000,000 square feet of floor space and entirely fireproof, nothing but steel and concrete having been used in their construction, have been erected in beautifully laid out grounds with gardens, lakes and lagoons. These buildings are now ready for the reception and installation of American and British exhibits.

The Fine Art Palace, which has been pronounced the largest and best equipped building of its kind in Europe, containing thirty galleries for paintings in addition to the superb central Sculpture Hall, covering 10,000 square feet, will be devoted to a collection of American and British modern and retrospective art.

The Congress Hall, situated in the center of the exposition grounds, will be devoted to congresses and conferences on subjects of interest to America and the British Empire.

A letter addressed to the public signed by the American president, and a similar one by the British king, will be the first exhibits.

The organization of the Anglo-American Exposition, to be held in the year 1914 at London, under the most distinguished patronage, deserves to receive the hearty and interested support of the people of the United States. The object of the exposition is to celebrate the centenary of peace and progress in the arts, science, and industry of the United States of America and the British Empire. This purpose is of exceptional significance, for it is not signing of the Treaty of Ghent alone that with nations will unite in celebrating, but a so the development and spread among the masses of the people of both countries of that spirit of mutual understanding and good-will which makes the idea of armed conflict between them as unthinkable as its existence is unthinkable.

The exposition being as much of an American undertaking as it is British, the responsibility for organization work is equally divided between the two countries. Headquarters in this country are maintained in the Woolworth Building, New York City, and executive details are considered in co-operation with the Philadelphia Centennial Museum which is organizing the American industrial section of the exposition in recognition of its important relation to the commercial progress of the country.

Appeals have been made therefore to the enterprise as well as to the patriotism of the industrial interests of this country to make such a comprehensive showing, as will worthily represent the United States at large and definitely present the various lines of manufacturing progress. The occurrence of the centenary which the exposition will celebrate is fortunate in the occasion it presents for a demonstration at a time in the affairs of the world when permanent peace among nations is looked upon as a question of the most vital concern to the welfare of humanity.

Cork Varnish for Ships.

In order to protect the interior of ships from the humidity caused by condensation upon the metallic walls during sudden changes of temperature, the Italian marine has experimented with a kind of hygroscopic varnish or coating, the essential compound of which is ground cork, which is consolidated by pressure with copal and litharge, and applied to the walls. It has been found that the cork varnish absorbs the watery vapor of the atmosphere to the extent of eight or nine grammes for every square meter of surface exposed.

Carbonic Acid.

W. H. G.—The amount of carbonic acid in the atmosphere is from 3 to 4 parts by bulk in 10,000 parts of air. A fairly well ventilated room will contain 6 parts in the like quantity of air. There is an easy method for ascertaining the extent to which the air in rooms is vitiated by carbonic acid. If less than 6 parts of carbonic acid are contained in 10,000 parts of air, a bottle holding about 10 ounces, filled with such air would give no precipitate with half an ounce of lime-water.

At 71 Has Fifty Grandchildren. Mrs. Susie Peek of near Eufaula, Okla., visiting one of her sons near Muskogee, claimed the distinction of being the youngest "grandmother of fifty grandchildren" in the United States. Mrs. Peek was 71 years of age. She had five children and she has fifty grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.—Kansas City Journal.

Longest Steel Bridge. The great steel bridge across the Columbia River at Vancouver, Wash., said to be the longest structure of its kind in the world, was completed in June, 1908. It was built for the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railroad at a cost of $2,000,000.

Costly Sea Warfare. It is estimated that, for ammunition alone, the cost of a big sea battle would work out at well over $5,000,000 an hour.

Canadian fruit men in Ontario are going out of pear growing, and, especially in the Niagara region are substituting a peach tree wherever a pear tree fails.

CYCLONIC GALE IN ENGLAND.

London—A cyclonic gale swept over the United Kingdom yesterday from west to east. The wind reached a velocity of 70 miles an hour and the gale lasted 11 hours. Many vessels were driven ashore and the Channel packet service was partially suspended.

A tug foundered in the Thames with the loss of five lives. The big Dutch steamer Noodwijk is disabled off the Isle of Wight. Much damage to property inland has resulted from the storm.

Changes Hen Into Rooster

That the sexes are not so definitely separated as has been assumed, was demonstrated by Professor Pesard of Paris, who, by means of grafting, succeeded in changing the characteristics of a rooster and a hen. The rooster, which is now living a normal existence, has lost his brilliant plumage, spurs and comb, while the hen has developed all those features.

Scientists say the Pesard experiments go far toward proving the theory of initial hermaphroditism, and that if animals higher in the biological scale register the same changed characteristics as the rooster and hen biology will be placed on an entirely new basis.

Autos Just Like Dogs.

Therefore Their Owners Should Be Held Responsible.

Washington, March 20. — Because the owners of dogs are responsible for the damage they do, so the owners of automobiles should be responsible for damages they inflict.

Such was the argument on which the supreme court was asked today to hold constitutional the Michigan motor law making automobile owners liable for damage inflicted by their automobiles.

The case was brought up by the Metzger Motor Car Co., whose tester injured two men and a boy in a car one night while he was out "joy riding."

THE LADY MARSHAL OF CHESANING.

Some little time ago, the editor of the Chesaning Monitor—Who by the way, is a woman—published some rather severe comments on the manner and methods of the municipal government of that burg. The village dads, evidently poked in a sore fering the editor lady the position of fering the editor lady the position of village marshal. She (Miss Blanche Ingalls), immediately took all the wind out of their sails by accepting the office, and before they had recovered from their surprise she was "doing things" in accordance with her previously expressed opinions as to how things ought to be done. Manifestly, the very ungentlemanly gentlemen of the council don't want the local laws administered in so lawful a manner, since, failing to find a legal flaw in their feminine officer's conduct of public duties, they are trying to force her out of office by cutting her salary in half, on the contention that she doesn't put in all her time on the job. She, however, refuses to quit, and asserts that she earns her wages and is going to have 'em. Good for the lady.

Not only the capability of her sex, but the honor of the profession is at stake. Gallantly and fraternal spirit demand that we do all stand by her with words and weapons.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

BIBLE STUDY ON

WHAT DOETH JEHOVAH REQUIRE?

Matthew 7:24-25—March 29.

"What doeth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?"—Micah 6:8.

JESUS sought to impress upon His hearers that it was not sufficient to hear that a Kingdom of God was coming to bring blessings to the world, and that a Kingdom class was being called to be Messiah's joint-heirs in that Kingdom. Action would be necessary on their part if they would attain this high privilege which God had granted them.

Jesus gave an illustration, saying that those who heard His message and obeyed it would be like a wise man who built upon the rock, where rains would not wash away the foundation. The storms of life and the great crisis, death, are sure to come. A midst these trials there will be calmness, security and confidence for such as have accepted the Lord's arrangement and have walked to the best of their ability in Jesus' footsteps.

"Other Foundation Can No Man Lay." On the other hand, Jesus intimated that many who heard His words and expressed great appreciation of them, would fail to take the proper steps to attain the glorious Kingdom privileges which He presented. They would allow custom, habit, love of pleasure, love of ease, the spirit of the world, to hinder them, from making full devotion of themselves to God. Such did not build their faith upon the proper foundation.

Perhaps some built upon the Law, and thought to commend themselves to God by their own endeavors, without the imputation of Christ's merit. Such would be greatly mistaken. Other foundation can no man lay than that which God has laid—Jesus Christ. His death is our redemption-price, and His appearance in glory as our Advocate is to make good our unintentional shortcomings.

With all such, the day of trial will surely come; and their faith structure, being without proper foundation, will give way. They will suffer loss of all their hopes. This, however, does not signify as many once supposed, that they will go to eternal torment. Evidently nearly all Christians, misled by the creeds of the Dark Ages, have read into God's Word things which it does not contain.

Compare St. Paul's Parable.

The Apostle Paul used a similar illustration. Those building upon that foundation, with the gold, silver and precious stones of Divine Truth—their faith and character in harmony with the Divine requirements—will suffer no loss in the great trial day at the end of this Age. But others who build with the wood, hay and stubble of human tradition and self-complacency will have their entire faith structure consumed—1 Corinthians 3:10-15.

Nevertheless the Apostle tells us that even these, if they have built upon Christ, will themselves be saved yet so as by fire. They will be what is termed a tribulation class, described in Revelation 7:14. The class building with gold, silver and precious stones, will be a Little Flock, a Royal Priesthood. But the class building upon the rock without proper materials will be the Great Company, the multitude of the servants. They will serve God through the patiently class.

"The People Were Astonished." No wonder the people were astonished at such doctrines as Jesus set forth! His teachings had a powerfulness quite different from the speculations and wonderings of the scribes and Pharisees. So it is always with the Truth. Wherever there is confusion and mystery, we may be sure that there is error and ignorance. Hence the necessity that all who preach Christ should have the anointing, or ordination to preach, which God alone gives through the begetting of the Holy Spirit.

Our Golden Text.

The Prophet Micah addressed our Golden Text to the people of Israel, and therefore his message was given from the standpoint of the Law. Nevertheless no Jew ever fulfilled the Law except Jesus, because all except Him were fallen and imperfect. He alone was "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners."

During Messiah's Millennial Kingdom, this same Law given to Israel through Moses will be given to the whole world of mankind through Messiah. The requirements will be to do justly, to love kindness, to walk humbly with God. The reason why Messiah's ministrations of this Law will be a success, while Moses' ministrations were a failure so far as bringing any one to perfection was concerned, is that Messiah's Kingdom will be fully prepared and authorized to forgive sinners and to help them back to the image and likeness of God, originally represented in Father Adam. The right to thus forgive sin and lift the sinner out of degradation, belongs to Messiah, by virtue of His sacrifice.

The Interference of Pa.

"When a fellow takes to wearing a shirt with a bosom like a skating rink and matching his tie with his complexion, it is a sure sign he is courting; and that is what John Wilcox, Jr., is up to, as sure as I am on this chair."

John Wilcox, Sr., twisted his legs in a congratulatory embrace at his own powers of discernment.

"What makes you think so, pa?" asked his wife.

"I don't think; I know. What's more, I can lay my finger on the gal."

"Who is it?" questioned his wife, eagerly.

"Nobody in this town. Junior has run through the hull list, and there ain't none of 'em to his liking; so he has struck a new trail."

"Do tell me, pa," pleaded Mrs. Wilcox.

"Well, I'll tell you as far as I know, which to my thinking is far enough. I heard the fellows in town most had hydrophobia over a gal from the city, who is elocuting in the town hall of an evening. Soon as I heard it, that slippery shirt bosom of Junior's popped into my head. I put it parallel with that gal in my mind and it didn't take me long to see they was bound to meet up with each other sooner or later."

"When I got that point of view I strolled down to the town hall to get another. I sneaked in and took a back seat. The first thing I knew the little elocutor come walking across the platform nodding her yellow head like a tassel of corn in the breeze."

She talked like she was haunted, kind of scary and mysterious. I'll be darned if it didn't give me the creeps to listen."

"I looked to see how Junior was taking it in and, ma, that boy's heart was beating right in his eyes. Any gal with a grain of sense, who seen him looking at her like that, would know he was head over heels in love with her. Now the question is what's to be done about it?"

"Done about it?" repeated his wife inquiringly.

"That's what I told. I ain't going to have no son of mine marry a public speaker. The woman folks in my family has always had a back seat, and it's the place for 'em."

"Ma, if you had the gumption of a plucked chicken you would go to her and say you would be much obliged if she would light out again."

"She?" gasped Mrs. Wilcox in horror. "I couldn't do such a thing for a thousand dollars."

"Then I will. I have always noticed, declared Mr. Wilcox bitterly, that I'm the one to cut all the drum sticks and do all the mud slinging in this family, but thank the Lord, I'm equal to it."

"Ma, whispered Mr. Wilcox aggressively as he thrust his head into the sitting-room a few evenings later, "where is Junior?"

He is upstairs."

Mr. Wilcox inserted his whole body into the room and closed the door softly.

"How did he get, ma?"

"He didn't get at all. Just went quietly to his room. What do you mean?"

"His gal is dead," announced Mr. Wilcox tragically, "and I killed her!"

Mrs. Wilcox gave a suppressed scream.

"There ain't nothing left for me but to have a private hanging of myself," groaned Mr. Wilcox, mopping his forehead excitedly. "Junior don't know I had a hand in it; but he knows she's dead and he's most crazy. I'll never be able to look that boy in the face again."

"How did it happen, pa?" breathed his wife, enviously.

"Well, I went to her as I said I would, and told her in so many words that Junior was the pride of my life. I had my plans all laid for his advancement and I didn't want them upset by her."

"She didn't say much but managed to convey the impression that she considered a polecat an honorable member of society compared to me. She said she thought too much of Junior to stand in his way, and that she would leave at once, though she had intended to stop longer. The trap she went on was wrecked, and she's lying this minute as dead as a mackerel."

"But, pa, it wasn't your fault," asserted his wife with visible relief.

"If it hadn't been for me she would be in the town hall right now, and that poor boy upstairs would not be lying there with his heart broken. It is of no use, ma. I broke off irritably as some one knocked at the door and went to see who it was."

A telegram was handed in addressed simply to "J. Wilcox." Mr. Wilcox wrenched it from the envelope and read: "Lady in question not seriously injured." He gave a wild whoop and throwing the message at his astonished wife, dashed upstairs. "Junior," he shouted, bursting into the room, "what do you mean by laying there like a carved figure on a monument when your gal is needing you? She ain't much hurt, son. Go and fetch her here and let your ma nurse her up. You might kind of throw in that your pa sent you."

"I'll be willing to bet my best hat," reflected Wilcox, in a moment of momentary calmness, "that if I'd had sense enough to keep my tongue out of this snarl, things would never have come to this."

When it was first put before the public, the filament of the Tungsten lamp was so delicate that it would be often shattered by careless handling and it was impossible to place them where they were subject to vibration, for the life of a lamp under such circumstances was necessarily short. The improvements made, in the manufacture of filaments of this character have been very rapid, and at an electrical show all sorts of stunts were done with the tiny wire made for use in the lamp. Heavy pieces of furniture were suspended by one of these threadlike cords, and they were subjected to other tests of this character and equally severe.

It is claimed that a wire of Tungsten may be made with from three to five times the strength of that of the best steel, and has shown a strength of 500,000 pounds to the square inch.

A Filipino Fairy Tale

It happened a long time ago that there dwelt on the side of the mountain Tongui, a man named Nantoneka. Now he was a famous hunter, and the strongest man in those parts, so that he was very well thought of and much respected. He could scale cliffs such as few others dared to attempt. But it was in the use of the bow that he far surpassed all others whomsoever. His bow, which was named Ulu-meet, meaning the treestump, was the stiffest ever known, and no other man could make shift to bend it in the very least. But he drew it back till it looked like the new moon, the neck of the arrow touching his ear, which he then sent whistling away like the stems of tosse grass driven before the hurricane.

Nantoneka had a daughter, Koko, named for Koko, the wind-bell, which grows on the mountain and blooms when the rains come. She was the most beautiful creature for leagues around, more beautiful than a tongue can tell. Her hair was very long and fine, and her eyes like small suns. Her teeth were also beautiful, and she was as graceful as the young reeds waving by the pool in the moonlight. Of lovers she got of course had more than enough, since no young man could look upon her without straightway coming to love her past all reason. Old Nantoneka counted no less than three scores who had asked leave to pay court to her, and he declared the thing had become a great nuisance.

So one day he went outside his door with Ulu-meet in his hand, and an arrow with a gold tip, and taking his stand he drew the neck of the arrow to his ear and then it whistled in the wind across a level field before his house farther than any arrow had ever been shot before. Finally it came down and stuck up straight in the ground, and Nantoneka said:

"There, the man who can stand with his knee against that arrow and land another within three paces of my door shall have Koko for his wife, and none other shall." And his word went forth and you may well believe that the sixty lovers hung their heads like the windblows when the drought is upon them.

But the mountain folk, as you know are brave, and the lovers were not slow to try the shot, and the most of them many times. But it was like dining on the south wind. Their arrows fell far short, and every night the old wife of Nantoneka went out and gathered up an armful of them for firewood.

Now it happened that each day one arrow was shot far before the others, though even this fell short. Koko did not fail to remark this arrow as her mother brought them in every night, and she readily knew it to be that of Nahsig, a tall, handsome youth, who dwelt down the valley a way. Now the girl favored Nahsig of all her lovers, in fact, she cared no more than the stone that trips you for any of the others. So one night as the old woman came back Koko said to her father:

"Well, it seems that I shall never have a husband at this rate," and she tossed her head and pouted her red lips.

"Just so," answered her father, chuckling; "just so."

"That doesn't fit my notions at all," she said.

But her father only chuckled again. In truth, it fitted his notions all well enough, since he wanted to keep Koko to wait on him when the old woman fell sick, as she did every now and then.

"For my part I think that that arrow which is shot farthest is quite near enough—it can't be over ten paces," went on Koko.

"Twenty, twenty," answered the old man, "I measured it. The other side of the sail bush—never nearer."

"No doubt he could shoot it nearer but he is afraid of hitting you as you sit there," said the girl.

"Ho, ho," cried the old man, "I'd like to see him do it."

"Well, twenty is near enough—I'm willing to throw off the other seven-teen," answered the girl.

Her words aroused the old man's suspicions. "If that Nahsig who shoots that arrow to the bush?" he asked.

"How should I know," answered the girl. "Besides, what do I care? It's my duty to take the husband that my father chooses like a good daughter."

"Then you don't care for Nahsig?" "Not in the least."

"And he doesn't care for you?" "I suppose not."

"Then he can't be taking the trouble to shoot."

"Of course he is shooting every day."

The truth is that the old man didn't like Nahsig, since he knew that the other could shoot almost as well as he could himself, and that some day he would shoot better.

It happened the next day that Nahsig said to himself (for it was really he who was shooting to the sail bush). "Well, it's no use for me to try any longer to plant an arrow within three paces of that old fascal's door. I must get help." So he went to the cave of old Songo, the bear, who had been condemned by the king of the mountain to take the form of a very misshapen bear for being, while a demon, no better than he ought to be, but no one knew this. Nahsig told the whole case before Songo and implored his help. "Go and make a boy twice as stiff as the one you now have," answered the bear.

"But I could never draw it," answered Nahsig. "Did you come here for my help or to tell me what I already know?" growled the bear.

So Nahsig went off and did as the bear told him.

Now it happened that old Songo was just as much in love with Koko as any of the rest of them, but, being only a bear at the best, and a demon who was no better than he should be at the worst, he knew he could never hope to win her. So what should enter his heart, which was not so much unlike the heart of a devil, but this; that if he could not have her himself no one else ever should.

Well, that same day what should happen but that Koko should say to herself: "He's truly the dearest and the handsomest and the best man in the world, but the truly dearest and the handsomest and the best man in the world can shoot no farther than he can. It seems to me that it would be very proper to get help." So she went to a pool hard by and laid the whole case before the head stork of the place and implored assistance.

"The matter is simple as eels," answered the old stork. "I will take my place behind the sail bush, and when his arrow comes down swift as the wind, I will catch it in my beak before it strikes the ground and cast it over at your door. Ho, ho; you did quite right to come to me, quite right. I'm the sharpest creature hereabout."

For the stork also loved Koko, but having a good heart, he was willing to help her.

So the stork went and took his place behind the sail bush when old Nantoneka wasn't looking, and cocked up one eye for the arrow, but with the other on Koko, who stood in front of her door, more beautiful than ever before, so that the winds turned from their course in order to touch her cheek.

Nahsig came up to where the gold-tipped arrow stood in the ground. Songo started out from some bushes and began creeping close behind him so that he could not be seen from old Nantoneka's house. The young man placed his knee against the arrow in the ground. Then Songo rose up and put his paw against Nahsig's left elbow and seized the other with his right claws and drew the arrow back to Nahsig's left ear. Twining, went the cord, and the arrow shot away faster than the light when it comes over the mountain in the morning after rain; and the wicked bear made off, even with his demon heart unable to look upon what he had done.

For the arrow going like the sunbeam, was speeding straight for the bosom of Koko, standing there too beautiful to tell. Over the old stork it whizzed like lightning. This old grandpa made a mighty leap for it, but his great bill clapped together on itself like the snapping of the bamboo. The cruel arrow found its mark, and Koko fell down as one whom her friends would bear out to the grave.

Nahsig had seen what would happen when it was too late. He had thrown down his bow and followed it like the less swift than the arrow itself. When he came up and saw the very terrible thing which was done he stood and cried out: "Nantoneka, take Ulu-meet, and shoot me through!"

The old man leaped up and seized Ulu-meet and drew an arrow to his ear. But just then the stork, getting his poor wits together at last, rushed forward and cried in his own language, which they all understood: "Hold," and he seized the arrow in the bosom of Koko and plucked it out, and then snapped off a windmill blossom and said:

"The koko is her own flower, and must love her more than any of us," and he clapped it over the wound, and the blood was stanching and the girl opened her eyes and sat up. Nahsig rushed up and knelt beside her and clasped her in his arms.

"Ha," cried the old man, "why did you never shoot so well before?"

"I have always been afraid to let myself out," said Nahsig.

"But didn't I see old Songo standing behind you?" asked Nantoneka, with a scowl on his face.

"Yes, he tripped me as I drew back the arrow to my ear, otherwise it had gone over the house and harmed no one."

So they were married, and the old stork came and danced a tiao on the green before the house, very awkwardly, and his bill clattering a good deal; but he meant well enough. Then the wedding company went, with Nahsig at the head, and hunted out the bear who was really the demon less good than he should be, and shot him with a flight of arrows like grass stems driven before the wind; and he was as a man is when no longer alive.

It's queer how planes in flat houses won't play till after midnight. Sometimes a man can learn to understand his family or trying to understand himself.

All a woman's female relatives are mad with her if she doesn't take them along when she goes to buy a gown.

It doesn't take a woman more than a second to make up her mind not to like another who is better looking than she is.

After the marriage altar begins the cure.

Women might vote less on principles than men, but they'd be pretty sure to vote more on conscience.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

A man is willing his wife, should have some of the bed covers till cold nights come.

You can hate a man good and hard for liking to get up early so that he is held up to you as an example.

A girl doesn't have to fool her mother, about how she can't crave over men, her mother feels herself about it.

If the baby never stopped yelling its mother would say it was just envy that made the neighbors mention it.

It's easier for your lawyer to get money out of a law suit for you than for any of it to be left over for you to get out of him.

Anyhow a girl would rather go to school than help her mother at home.

WOMEN SOCIETY DRUNKS WORST

Those in Social Life Who Tipple Hopeless Because of Temptations and Swift Pace

CHAMPAGNE BILL $100-A WEEK

Girls in Teens Indulge Publicly With Men Companions—The Abstemious, Unobtrusive Young Woman of the Past Generation Now Bon-Vivant

New York—The society woman of all persons in the world, is most difficult to cure of drunkenness. Indeed, the task of getting her on the water wagon is nearly hopeless. Not of her can it be said in the words of a moral and deservedly popular melody:

"She was drunk last night, dear mother."

She was drunker the night before; But if she ever gets sober again She'll never get drunk any more!

She will, almost invariably, if she's a society souse.

Such, at least, has been the experience of Dr. John Duncan Quackenbos, who has treated more than 1,000 alcoholic patients by mental suggestion. While I have been able to cure 75 per cent of other cases," he told the Society for the Study of Alcohol and Other Narcotics the other day, "I have found that society women were almost without the pale of hope."

"In the name of logic, why?" I asked Dr. Quackenbos. "I should think that a woman of wealth and position would have quite special incentives for overcoming a disgusting vice of which she would presumably be an inadvertent victim."

"The woman drunkard of society can so rarely be cured because she can so rarely be induced to keep out of temptation," he explained. "It is nearly impossible to persuade her to give up the elaborate luncheons and dinners, the balls and theatre suppers, which make up most of her life. And not on all these occasions she will meet with temptation in its most insidious form. Just one cocktail, just a sip of punch," that will have a shattering effect. For as these will be her last on every hand and her yielding is practically foredoomed."

"Then you believe that women drink more copiously and more frequently than men?" I questioned.

"The notable increase in the consumption of stimulants, especially among the upper classes, has been estimated at 50 per cent during the last decade in the case of men. Among women the percentage is much larger, and is especially alarming."

"When the American woman gives herself up to anything, she pushes her devotion to the utmost limits. If she affects a habit she affects it in the superlative degree. I have treated one lady whose weekly bill for champagne alone exceeded $100. The punch bowl figures at all functions, and proud women sip freely thereon, 10 drinking today were once drunk a dozen years ago."

"School misses and college girls are conspicuous among the throng of debauchees, not necessarily of the last and unblushingly assert a right to drink wine and smoke cigarettes at luncheons and levees to say nothing of private indulgence. Not a few of this class, as well as young married women have been brought to my office in a state of intoxication. Such has become the vogue."

"Worse than this girls in their teens see no impropriety in drinking publicly with men companions. Flushed with alcohol, they are likely to forget the restraints of modesty. The conversation tends to subjects which should not be named in decent society. Profanity is tolerated, and when constraints of self respect break down with the moral elements of the brain cell's gross and secretions are a natural consequence."

"The abstemious, unobtrusive young woman of the past generation is giving place to a coarse and boisterous bon-vivant, controlled by unworthy impulses, and wholly unfit to fulfill her function in society as an inspirer to meritorious action, or her function in the home as a character former, a wife and a mother."

Dr. Quackenbos' indictment is particularly severe because it is leveled by a man who expressly declares that he
