GAS ASSURED FOR NORTHVILLE

E. & N. PLANT AT PLYMOUTH TO BE COMPLETED THIS WINTER.

FOUNDATION IS ALL FINISHED AND CONTRACTS FOR LAYING PIPES MADE.

The new Plymouth-Northville gas plant is assured and the people here will be supplied next summer. The foundation for the new building at Plymouth is all completed and the furnace building and retainers will be constructed right away.

Besides this the iron pipes are all on the ground ready for trenches which are to be dug in time to have everything complete in Plymouth this winter. The main to Northville will be laid in the spring and President Harmon says his company expects to be ready to supply Northville people with gas early next summer. That piece of news will be pleasing indeed to the 300 or more applicants residing here.

The plant at Plymouth is nicely located along the Grand Rapids division track of the P. M. railway west of the depot, where it will be convenient for receiving coal and the shipment of coke.

Gas in Northville will be of material benefit to the business section as well as the residence section and it will add much to Northville's already splendid attractions to Detroiters as an ideal spot for a home.

ELECTION WAS QUIET AFFAIR

GOVERNOR FERRIS WAS GIVEN
BIG REPUBLICAN VOTE.

BALANCE OF TICKET CARRIED
BY USUAL MAJORITIES.

Considering that the farmers were all busy hunting potatoes, the 407 votes cast here Tuesday was a fairly good sized representation.

The regular vote was 212 Republican, 122 Democratic and 60 Progressive.

The big cut was on governor where Pattengill received 55, Osborn 124, Ferris 217.

Kelley for Congress led the state ticket with a 225 vote.

Ed Gayde for representative received 230 to Downing's 126. The Progressives had no candidate and they split their vote up between the two.

Stoll for Register of Deeds and Steen for County Treasurer led the county ticket with a 225 vote each, to 104.

The Fraternal Insurance vote was 60, no 278.

It was an ideal day and the Democrats were awake to their possibilities, keeping the Republican majority to less than 120.

The election was a quiet affair and there was but little to indicate anything unusual was going on.

Up to date the returns show that Ferris has been elected by 40,000 or more and that Kelley for Congress pulled in with about 7,000 plurality.

RELIGIOUS CAMPAIGN GREAT SUCCESS

TABERNACLE MEETINGS CLOSED
MONDAY NIGHT WITH SPLENDID RESULTS.

UPWARDS OF 200 CONVERSIONS
HAIL RESULTED, AND RE-
DAFES RE-ENTHUSED.

The four weeks' tabernacle campaign which closed here with Monday evening's meeting was one of the most successful religious movements in the history of this section of the county. The attendance was large from the first many coming from other places, and on last Sunday evening probably fully 1,200 people were in attendance, the seating capacity of the building being inadequate to the demand.

Evangelist Hicks and his assistants have won golden opinions and hosts of friends during their stay in Northville, as sincere and earnest christian workers.

At Sunday morning's meeting a ministerial appeal was made by Rev. J. E. Webber for the funds needed as compensation for Mr. Hicks, who in turn must pay his own helpers from the money furnished him. The sums necessary for local expenses had been previously collected and turned over to the financial committee.

Mr. Webber, in the course of his talk, referred to the complaint made by some people as to the large amount of money that would be taken out of town by the evangelistic company, and called attention to the fact that $30,000 are put across the bars of the local saloons annually, but of this the complaining parties said nothing. He also asserted that money, like water, was certain to find its level, and when removed from a stated space, would naturally be replaced by more flowing in. He spoke of the incalculable good that must inevitably come to the community from the results of such a movement, and declared, with the obvious approval of his audience, that whatever sum the campaign might cost, it would be indisputably well spent.

About $600 was raised at the morning meeting, and enough at the following services to bring the amount to $700 or more. Alf Allen, the ex-pugilist and Rev. Brown both of Chicago, who assisted during the latter part of the campaign, proved very efficient helpers, and were greatly liked here. The members of the large chorus choir who so faithfully and zealously performed their part in the work, furnished a very important factor in the success of the movement. Approximately 200 persons have signified their desire for better living as a result of the services, while those already enrolled as Christians have been re-awakened and stimulated to new efforts.

Mr. Hicks paid a warm tribute to the people of Northville for the considerate and generous treatment received and the earnest and enthusiastic assistance given him in his work here by Pastors Webber and Pierce, the singers and the members of the three churches and congregations specially interested in obtaining his services. All have put forth almost superhuman efforts, and all should feel amply rewarded by the results already obtained and those yet certain to develop.

EDISON COMPANY'S NEW PROPOSITION

OFFER RENTAL OF 7 PER CENT
ON BASED VALUATION OF $30,000

TERMS TO BE FOUR YEARS AND THEN BUY OR TURN IT BACK TO VILLAGE.

The Edison Electric company, of Detroit have submitted another proposition to the village council which is looked upon with favor by many who were opposed to the former proposition to sell.

The offer is to rent the present plant and equipment at 7 per cent interest on a based valuation of $30,000, making the rental $2,100 per year, for a period of four years. The Edison people agree to maintain the plant and equipment, including wires, poles, and everything connected therewith at its present standard and to replace everything worn or used and at the end of four years to purchase the same for $35,000 or turn it back to the village, as the people may elect.

All new extensions, in the village, if any are made, are at the expense of the Edison company and at the end of four years are to be purchased by the village at actual cost less 5 per cent depreciation, providing the village elects to not sell the plant. Such extensions would only be as the village might extend if it continued to operate its own plant, and none are contemplated at the present time.

The franchise formerly submitted drawn by the village attorney, which includes Detroit rates for all lighting, is to govern in case of rental.

This rental proposition which was secured through the efforts of Councilmen McLean and Stage, it is figured will pay the village 7 per cent interest on a $35,000 valuation whereas the village is now only paying 5 per cent on $27,500 bonded indebtedness for this same plant, or a profit in the village's favor of $1,145.

It is said that the interest amounting to $2,520 a year will be ample to light the streets. At the present time there is raised by taxes for the electric light plant each year, $1,375 interest on bonds and $2,000 for extra maintenance, or $3,375 in all. The new proposition will at least save $2,000 each year in taxes, or if the same amount was raised each year, then at the end of four years the village would have $8,000 on hand to use for such purposes as seems most needed.

Members of the council state that there is now $1,300 electric light bills unpaid and that further expenditures for poles wire, dam repairs, engine setting, etc., now necessary to put the plant in proper shape will increase the amount to $4,000. If that amount is extended over a four year period it will necessitate the raising by taxes $1,000 extra each year or $4,375 per annum for electric light purposes should the village continue to operate its plant instead of leasing to the Edison company on the new proposed basis. Even then the amount might be still larger if the plant operated by the village was still found to be losing money.

TYPHOID FEVER VICTIM.

Ida, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer DeKay living west of town on the Fishery road, died early Tuesday morning of typhoid fever. Mrs. Ida, who was thirteen years of age, was a Freshman in our High School, having graduated last summer from the eighth grade. She was deeply interested in her school work, having been neither absent nor tardy all last year. Her last words while conscious were that she must get up and go to school.

Mr. DeKay and the elder daughter Ida, are also ill with the same disease, the latter being in a particularly critical condition.

A man from Detroit was hired by the DeKays as an apple picker and became ill while in their employ. Going from there, he spent a night at the L. C. Kehrl home in the same neighborhood. In a short length of time, the three DeKays and Kehrl's nineteen year old son, Arnold, came down with typhoid fever. The Kehrl boy's case has not been of sufficient duration to reach a crisis yet.

Mr. and Mrs. DeKay have the sympathy of the entire village in the loss of so bright and loveable a little daughter.

A short prayer service was held at Oakwood cemetery Wednesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. R. M. Pierce. Attending in a body were the eighth graders and Freshmen who scattered carnations on the casket as they filed past. The body was placed in the vault.

DETROIT THEATRES

At the Burlesque Houses.

The burlesque houses are reaping a big business in Detroit these days, as this form of amusement is becoming more popular every day. As already stated in this column, there has been a big change in the policies and bookings of the local burlesque houses, with the result that attractions are better and more varied than ever.

The Folly is running independent shows of a class that attract those who want plenty of spice, oriental dancers—plenty of pretty girls—and the latest music appeal—while smoking with lots of fun makes the Folly the meeting place of the boys who like a show where the entire object is to enjoy the good things of life—this week the bill is far better than the average, with many new faces in the cast and Beeson a strong favorite in the comedy lead. The chorus is well trained and worth while. Next week starting Sunday matinee, the bill will be a medley of fun, music, new dances and a sensational dance production which will make a big hit. Manager James just having arrived from Chicago where he made the bookings for the big doings.

The Cadillac and Gayety are both putting over shows which tickle the tastes of the visitors—and it may safely be asserted that no previous season has seen so much in the way of regal costumes, fine scenery and capable casts as this fall. The Million Dollar Dolls this week at the Gayety is one of the best attractions ever shown at the popular Gayety on Cadillac Square and deserves an attendance beyond the average. The work of the "Two Sams"—Lewis and Dody—is mirth-provoking in the extreme—while the support is wonder fully good. The chorus is numerous, shapely and can sing and dance to the queen's taste. It is well worth seeing and ladies are especially invited to the matinee which are so popular with the fair sex. The show at the Cadillac is rich in fun, spice and gives farther than most burlesque shows in revealing feminine beauty. It is termed the French Models and there are stately girls—tall girls—blondes—brunettes and read haired girls—girls of every nation, with the French type in evidence in dances fresh from gay Paris. It's a big noise show which every chap should make a point of seeing while in town. Manager Levey states that the show starting Sunday matinee will be one of the season's best, and for assurance in this respect will go a long way—like the tip and see the real burlesque of the night land on "tip" at the Cadillac—noisy as permitted 11 times daily.

What the Kidneys Do

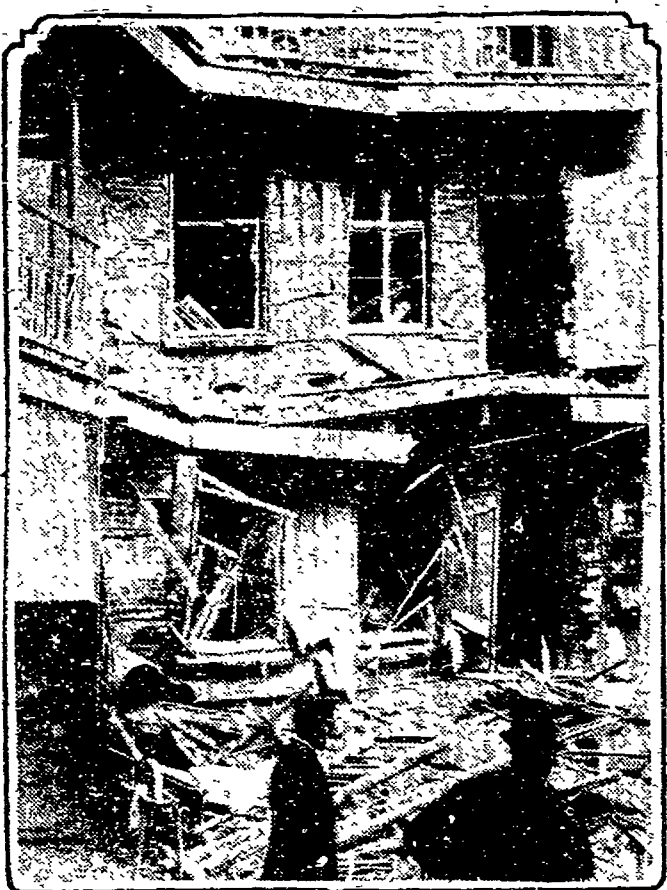

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms— which vary widely but may include pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatic pains, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right the danger is overcome. Doan's Kidney Pills have proven an effective kidney medicine.

Mrs. Lyons, 125 St. Clair St., Marine City, Mich., says: "I suffered for some time from backache and pains in my kidneys and often I was nervous and dizzy. I didn't sleep well and when I got up in the morning I was tired and my back was lame. The kidney secretions also bothered me. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved me at once, so I kept on until I was cured."

EIGHT $30 BILLS.

Org. of Them Turned Up in Chicago and Caused Trouble.

DETROIT.—There are eight perfectly good "$30 bills," printed $10 on one side and $20 on the other in circulation in the United States. Federal authorities here have learned.

Two days ago a man presented what he thought was a $10 bill in payment for a luncheon. When the cashier handed him $19.75 change he pushed a $10 bill back, telling the cashier he was giving too much change. Then there was a dispute as to the denomination of the bill first presented. The cashier took it from the cash register. It was marked $20 on one side and $10 on the other. He summoned the police and both men were taken to Central Station, each charging that the other was the purveyor of the bad bill.

The bill was turned over to the Federal authorities, who wired to Washington and received an answer that owing to a mix-up in plates, eight such bills had been printed and put into circulation. Secret Service is now trying to find them.

Twelve Miles, One Night's Dancing.

Poston, Mass.—A university student, by attaching pedometers to his legs, while executing the modern dances has discovered that a couple travels twelve miles an evening for the dance of ordinary length. Experiments showed that the average for the tango was four-fifths of a mile per single dance and only one-eighth of a mile for the hesitation waltz.

BIRD POPULATION

A Hundred-million Robins in Eastern United States.

Washington, D. C.—Partial returns from the census of birds which, for the first time in its history the United States Government is now undertaking, indicates that there are wide variations in the bird population in different parts of the country.

The most numerous bird life so far reported is the Chevy Chase, Maryland. An average was found there of about 7 pairs per acre. Only a few places report as high a population as four pairs per acre, while it seems probable from the data so far received that the average for the whole United States east of the plains will be not far from a thousand pairs to the square mile after omitting the land in corn and potatoes where there would be small chances for any birds to nest, and after omitting also the land covered entirely with forests. Timber land supports a much smaller bird population than an equal area of farm land. The most extensive census of forest land for birds comes from Montana, where the careful counting of the birds on nearly a thousand acres showed an average of one pair to each three acres.

As would be expected the arid lands of the Southwest show the smallest bird population and large stretches in Arizona and New Mexico do not contain more than one pair of birds to seven acres. Apparently the most abundant bird in the United States east of the Mississippi River is the Robin, with an average of about fifty pairs to the square mile or a hundred million robins in the eastern United States.

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Now, Pete, take this $12 over to Mr. Grant's office. How glad I am that we have this worry off our minds! I was afraid for a while that we would have to skip this month's payment on the little home. We never could have made it if you children had not worked so hard to help, for it takes all father can make to keep up the living expenses, working only half time. I have the finest children in the country," concluded Mrs. Stuart, smiling brightly, as her twelve-year-old boy waved good-by.

She had reason to be proud of the manly little fellow. Working before and after school he had milked the cow and kept her in fresh grass by raking the chippings from the lawn; he mowed. His little sister had done her part by delivering the milk to their customers. The mother had done plain sewing and mending for her well-to-do neighbors. All together they had kept up the payments on the little home during the dull times at the foundry.

"Jake, have you kept all your receipts from Mr. Grant?" asked Mrs. Stuart the moment her husband entered the door that evening. "Pete went down with $12 this morning and Mr. Grant spoke of our beginning again on the payments. We have not skipped any, have we?"

Mr. Grant sank into a chair by the table and buried his face in his hands.

"Why, Jake, what is the matter? Are you sick?" asked his wife anxiously, laying her hand on his shoulder.

"Yes, sick with shame and dread," he replied without looking up. She took his face between her hands and raised it, looking steadily into the shiny eyes. "Tell me all about it," she said tremblingly.

"Polly, you will never want to see me again. I lost all that money gambling."

There was silence for a few minutes. Then she said with an effort: "Do you mean that you gambled with the money the children and I worked so hard to get together? That you gambled with our chance to get a home?"

"Other fellows were making money that way," he said sulkily. "The first money you gave me four months ago I took a chance on and lost. Since then I have been trying to get it back and make the payments before you found it out."

She turned and left the room. A fierce anger burned in her heart. The summer had been so hard on her and the children. They had bought nothing to wear and had had no vacation. To have all the fruits of this sacrifice gambled away was bad enough, but worse than all this was the cruel disappointment in her husband.

As she sat with her head buried in her apron, sobbing convulsively, she felt a hand laid on her shoulder. "Polly, I will live this down if you will give me another try. Can you forgive me?" he asked in a voice shaken with emotion. "On, Jake," she cried, rising and laying her head on his shoulder. "I will bring home my order uncashed and Pete shall make all the payments—after this," he said, putting his arm around her. "No," she replied, "you make them and bring me the receipts. I've got to know I can trust you."

STATE FOOD MEN JOIN WAR ON CATTLE DISEASE

Creameries in Infected District Examined Rigorously.

Niles, Mich.—The state food and dairy department has joined in the war upon the foot and mouth disease epidemic.

C. V. Jones, state dairy inspector, has arrived here from Detroit, and will give special attention to the inspection of creameries and dairies. A large part of the responsibility for spreading the disease is laid, at the door of creameries, which distribute skimmed milk to farmers, who feed the milk to hogs. Milk from infected cows is believed to have been distributed in large quantities.

There are three killing crews, capable of disposing of 12 to 15 average hogs every day, at war in Berrien county.

Many new cases were reported. Two more arrests for violating the quarantine have been made by the state authorities. Dr. Houck, federal officer in charge, stated today that in all likelihood, the campaign will not be relaxed for three months at least.

WILL OPEN OFFICE IN NILES

Lansing, Mich.—The state sanitary livestock commission has completed arrangements to open an office at Niles, to aid the federal government in the war on epidemic of foot and mouth disease among cattle. The office will be in charge of H. H. Halliday, chairman of the board.

VanVleet, whose home was in this city, had started for Augusta to visit his bride of six weeks who was spending a few days with her parents. Whether he killed himself or fell into the mill race by accident, is not known.

BUSHNELL FIRST YOST MAN TO WED; SECRET LET OUT.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Being a benefit is becoming a fad with Wolverine quarterbacks.

When Tommy Hughitt took unto himself a bride last spring he believed that he was setting a precedent. Now comes the news that Thomas H. Bushnell, the veteran Wolverine football player, who was at the pilot job against Syracuse, has Tommy beaten by more than a half a year.

"Hub" was secretly married in Detroit, October 3, 1913. The bride was Miss Adele Johnson, of Colorado Springs, Col., and Mrs. Bushnell is now living with her parents in the west, waiting for the groom to get through with his studies. Bushnell is a senior engineer, and will complete his course in June of the coming year.

Last fall Bushnell did not make his appearance on the varsity squad until after the M. A. C. game, then, in response to the pleas of Yost, he and Craig joined the squad to strengthen the shipping Wolverines.

So Hughitt has lost his honors of being the first benefit to play football for Yost at Michigan.

Reids May Be Ready to Raise Lightship this week.

Port Huron, Mich.—Captain Thos. Reid has received word that wrecking operations on the sunken lightship No. 92 in Lake Erie off Point Abino are progressing favorably. The wrecker Manistique and tug James Reid are expected to begin raising the wreck this week.

The wreckers found that the hull of the lightship was filled with sand and it was necessary to remove it and also to excavate around the hull so operations could proceed. The Reids are confident that they will recover the sunken boat. The lightship went down in Lake Erie in the storm of November 9-11 last year with her crew of six men.

MOTHER SAVES BABY IN RUNAWAY BUT IS HERSELF HURT

Battle Creek, Mich.—Recovering from a surgical operation, Mrs. W. H. Thurston, of Harmonia, went buggy riding with her baby on her lap. A motorcycle scared the horse which ran away and the mother loosened her grip on the reins to save the child. Both were thrown out, the mother still protecting the baby and being hit in the back by the flying buggy seat. Mrs. Thurston, sister of Lucille Dawson, the former New York newspaper writer, was seriously hurt, but the baby escaped without a scratch.

BRIDE TO BE NURSES HIM BACK TO HEALTH.

OWOSSO, Mich.—Thomas Jones, of Detroit, and Miss Jennie Chaffee, of Corunna, were married at the home of the bride despite the fact that the groom was still weak from a serious operation. While visiting Miss Chaffee, Jones was stricken with appendicitis and his condition was such that it was decided to perform an operation at once, without attempting to move him. Jones, nursed by his prospective bride, is rapidly regaining health.

BOY OF FIVE SHOTS TO DEATH HIS SISTER OF TWO

Mt. Clemens, Mich.—Caroline Voh Dem Emcke, two years old, of Armada, was shot to death by her brother, five years old.

The boy had seen his father load a small caliber rifle the night before and hand it on the wall. Today, while the parents of the children were out of the house, the boy climbed on a chair and obtained possession of the weapon. Pointing it at his baby sister he playfully pulled the trigger. The bullet struck the child in the abdomen. Death ensued in a few moments. No inquest will be held.

LITTLE WAR ORPHANS FLEEING FROM ANTWERP; BRITISH NAVAL BRIGADE CARRYING AMMUNITION INTO TRENCHES NEAR CITY

These pictures, taken near Antwerp, have just reached this country. The upper photo is one of the many now coming from Belgium which pull at the heartstrings, showing as it does the innocent little sufferers of the war, fleeing they know not whither. The lower photo shows the British naval brigade carrying cases filled with ammunition into the trenches near Antwerp, the city which they so stubbornly helped to defend, only to be obliged to retreat from their positions with the Belgians.

State Notes

COLDWATER—William Squires, 77 years old, dropped dead. Heart disease was the cause.

HILLSDALE—C. Douglas, aged 76, a local produce dealer, dropped today from heart disease in the meat market of A. J. Mann, while waiting to have some chickens weighed, which he had sold to the market.

OWOSSO—Charles A. Sherman, born in Wayne county 72 years ago, died here. He was a civil war veteran who moved to Saginaw in his youth and enlisted there in Company D, Sixteenth Michigan Infantry, in which he served during the civil war.

LANSING—The attorney general has handed down an opinion in which he holds that funds received from the state by a county for building good roads, cannot be reverted into a sinking fund. In other words, such funds must be used for good roads only.

BAY CITY—Solomon Biggs, 50, a paper hanger, was walking along the Michigan Central right of way and stepped in front of a passenger train which came from behind him, receiving injuries from which he died at the West Side hospital half an hour later.

TRAVERSE CITY—Glen Cheney, 21 years old, and Leonard Sweet, 23, were drowned in Glen Lake, Leelanau county. They started from Miller's bill to Glen Haven, and the lake being rough it is believed they were thrown into the water. The boat was found half filled with water, drifting toward shore.

SAGINAW—William Madison, of Flint, motorman on the Saginaw-Flint division of the D. U. R., was arrested, charged with stealing $60, which was in a satchel belonging to a conductor for the same line. The police recovered $50 from a girl in Bridgeport and found safe on Madison.

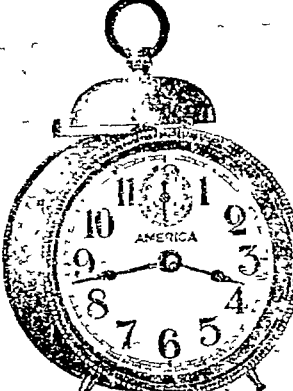

ANN ARBOR—Word was received here of the engagement of Miss Allan Rudd, former private secretary of Prof. Allen S. Whitney, head of the education department of the University of Michigan, to A. E. Brooker, of Chicago. Miss Rudd has been engaged as dean of women in a new Chicago mail order house for the past two years. She is the daughter of Mrs. E. E. Leland, of Whitmore Lake.

KEEPING AWAKE.

There can be no doubt that an as yet immeasurable amount of good has been accomplished for Northville and vicinity by the religious campaign just closed here. The most skeptical person will scarcely attempt to deny a fact universally known—that the communities whose churches are most thoroughly alive are the most progressive and desirable for residence purposes, and that the churchless community is the lawless and undesirable location.

The greatest spiritual awakening known here for many years has taken and is taking place, and every loyal, sensible citizen feels that its results will be good for the community in general; whatever his personal religious belief may be. No man, or woman of even ordinary mental caliber would attempt to deny that any movement that makes for a higher standard of living, for morality and good citizenship is a good movement, though these may aver that they "don't believe in revival meetings." And now it is needful that friendliness, care, counsel, advice—and above all and beyond all, good example—be forthcoming on the part of those to whom these newly awakened ones will look for such helps, to insure the permanence of the good accomplished. The pastors and the people and the churches are certainly to be congratulated on the campaign, but they have now a great responsibility thrust upon them, a responsibility that will permit of no standstill attitudes. The work is just begun, and the flame will have to be fanned if kept ablaze. It's one thing to wake up and it's quite another to keep awake.

A FREE EYE TREATMENT.

In a new novel by a popular writer which has just been put in circulation at the Ladies' Library here, the author very cleverly creates a situation for the obvious purpose of introducing a certain treatment for the eyes. The hero of the story, who tells a friend about the treatment, says it was discovered by a Russian political prisoner, who had read and written in the bad light of his cell until his eyes were so inflamed that he was nearly wild with pain, and with fear that he might lose his sight. He first held his hands against the cold stones at the wall and then upon his eyes to relieve the burning pain. This suggested cooling them with water, at which he was given all he wished to use. In desperation he plunged his forehead and eyes into a basin of cold water, opening the lids while immersed, to aid in the relief of the fever and smarting. The effect was so immediately soothing that he repeated the process several times, and soon was astonished to discover that the inflammation had disappeared and the sight was cleared and strengthened. He kept on until a complete cure was effected. The author of the book makes the hero say that this cold water treatment, faithfully applied, will cure almost any eye trouble, especially affections due to straining and displacement of the focusing muscles and will indefinitely defer the need of glasses. Particular stress is laid upon the necessity of keeping the eyes open under the water, and of not immersing the nose and mouth. And the novel is not, as might naturally be supposed "The Eyes of the World," but is the latest by Florence Barclay, "The Wall of Partition."

ABAS ONE HAND DRIVERS.

The rights and privileges of free-born American citizenship have again been arbitrarily infringed upon by the powers that be. In the city of Detroit a dictum has been issued by the police department that any two-handed fellow seen driving an automobile with one hand shall be summarily arrested—if the other arm is around another occupant of the vehicle.

bicle. Instead of establishing classes for the instruction of amatory youths in single-hand driving of motor cars, the authorities have taken this step, just because folks haven't learned to get out of the way when they see a car "sashaying" from one side of the street to the other or climbing on to the curb or up a pole. And right here is one place where the reliable family horse scores one on the gasoline buggy. The f. h. of pre-motor days often didn't need even one hand driving. He was trained to keep to the middle of the road, and even to turn out properly for other rigs, when the "lines" were wound around the whip and both arms of the supposed driver otherwise engaged. But that's the way it goes. Nothin' aint like it used to be, nohow.

THE "S $" THAT GO AWAY.

Pastor Webber's reference Sunday morning to the thousands of dollars annually paid into the saloons here—at least half of which goes to the wholesale liquor dealers elsewhere—suggests the thought that money "goes out of Northville" in a whole lot of other ways not absolutely necessary, and not half so conducive to public welfare as when paid for up-lift work like that recently done here. For instance, can any one tell, even approximately, how many thousands of dollars are annually paid out over the counters of Detroit's retail stores, especially the dry goods houses? Yet we hear no complaint from the class of people who have been "knocking" about the money paid to Evangelist Hicks. Our local merchants don't complain so very much either, about the trade that goes to Detroit, as they, in turn have a large country patronage, and have apparently resigned themselves to the inevitable, as represented by the easy accessibility of the big city. Then, in the course of the twelvemonth, a good many hundreds of Northville "S $" go into the ticket office of Detroit theaters, and to base ball treasuries. Nobody kicks. And incidentally, there's the D. U. R. taking money "away from Northville" every day in the year. Then the mail order houses—but we are under the impression that some of the anti-evangelist folks are very liberal patrons of these. But the list of outside spending of Northville cash might be made indefinitely long, some unjustifiable, some merely unnecessary and some both justifiable and necessary, in which latter class all right-thinking people must put any outlay for spiritual and moral betterment.

Some men who would be terribly insulted if a person should throw a pan of beer on their mother or wife think it is cute to have a bartender fill them up and then throw both the beer and the drunken man in her face.

Judging from the newspapers, there is nothing being taught at Ann Arbor except football. Pages and pages are devoted to Yost and his students, but there's scarcely a reader who can tell the name of the U. of M.'s president.

With the vest season at hand the men are now more happy with the knowledge that they have four more pockets in their clothes.

"BEN HUR" THE SEASON'S SENSATION.

Beautiful women, men majestic of mien, fiery horses, bedecked in all the opulent splendor of the Orient, will give life and brilliancy to the scenes of General Wallace's "Ben Hur" in the new Panama-Pacific World's Fair staging of that play which Klaw and Erlanger will offer at the Detroit Opera house, Detroit, Michigan, the entire week of November 9 to 14, with special matinee performances on Wednesday and Saturday. Other productions of "Ben Hur" have set the country agape at their pictorial beauty, but all these precedents set by Klaw and Erlanger themselves have been cast into the shadow by the elevation and dignity, the pomp and grandeur of the new production. "Ben Hur" has often been exploited in these columns as a romance of mighty and splendor, that gained accumulated strength and glory in dramatization. So masterly is the preservation of the purpose of the work in scenic settings that the original beauties of the theme, so deftly penned by the late Gen. Lew Wallace, and dramatized by William Young, are reproduced with wonderful correctness in every detail. From a religious standpoint, whence the spectacle is more often viewed than any other, "Ben Hur" is a succession of brilliant pictures regarding the incidents of the time of Christ upon earth, which are a form of instruction. In fact, it is the beautiful religious sentiment which dominates the entire drama, that has made it so popular with the thousands of people who do not attend the theatre as a rule on account of religious scruples. Seats for "Ben Hur" were placed on sale yesterday morning at the Detroit opera house box-office.

A good way to save the fur from the moths is to sprinkle them well with powdered alum, then rub this well into the folds of the furs before packing them away.

PREPARING FOR THE INTERNATIONAL LIVE STOCK SHOW.

Getting ready for the International Live Stock Exposition, held this year from November 28th to December 5th, is a task of vast proportions of which the public has little conception. Each year it has been the policy of the management to provide additional facilities for exhibitors and enlarge accommodation for visitors. This work involves a heavy outlay annually and its only possible reward is public recognition. Steadily increasing attendance and growing magnitude of the display of live stock demonstrates the sagacity of the management in this respect.

This year the expanding disposition of the enterprise has necessitated material increase in the show ground area. The historic Dexter park locality, noted half a century back as the greatest speed track in the world, is to be utilized. A strong force of men is engaged in the conversion process which will be completed a month hence. These improvements and enlargements mean added space for exhibitors and comfort for visitors.

Compared with facilities afforded at the first "International" the housing of that institution this year will be incomparably superior. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended on permanent quarters and although at no period of its career has the exposition lacked accommodation, 1914 provision in this respect will be considerably in anticipation of actual requirement.

Soaking the steak in vinegar and salad oil in equal proportions is said to make it tender, but a joint of beef is best hung for three or four days, when the weather permits. I do not know of any other plan. To beat the steak is to spoil the flavor, although it makes it more tender.

How Bad Backs Have Been Made Strong—Kidney Pills Corrected

All over Northville you hear it. Doan's Kidney Pills are keeping up the good work. Northville people are telling about it—telling of bad backs made sound again. You can believe the testimony of your own townspeople. They tell it for the benefit of you who are suffering. If your back aches, if you feel lame, sore and miserable, if the kidneys act too frequently, or passages are painful, scanty and of color, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has helped so many of your friends and neighbors. Follow this Northville citizen's advice and give Doan's a chance to do the same for you.

Mrs. J. Palmer, Linden Ave., Northville, Mich., says: "My kidneys were out of order and as the result I had terrible headaches. I used Doan's Kidney Pills because I had seen them advertised and they cured me. Another of the family had a great deal of trouble from the kidneys. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage. When Doan's Kidney Pills were used, they gave relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Palmer had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advt.

Health Costs Little.

It requires but a few minutes each day to fortify the system against such dread diseases as Rheumatism or Bright's Disease. Impaired action of the kidneys is a forerunner of the two diseases, and if prompt and effective treatment is not begun it often means either of the two.

The time required to take a few doses of

NYAL'S

STONE ROOT COMPOUND and the cost of a bottle of it are a minor consideration when compared with the misery and expense associated with chronic kidney troubles, Rheumatism and Bright's Disease.

How should you like the job of the man who has been hired by the refugees relief committee to look up a little matter of twenty thousand trunks and other pieces of baggage lost and abandoned in Europe by American tourists in their homeward flight?

On Tuesday evening of this week Mesdames D. B. Henry and E. B. Cavell entertained at a six o'clock dinner at the former's home. The occasion was in the nature of a birthday anniversary of the two husbands. Twenty gentlemen enjoyed the feast and voted it a jolly good time.

A ROMANCE OF PICKLES

By H. S. Harrison

Copyright, 1908, by H. S. Harrison

Born in dinginess, bred to the use of adversity, sharpened by the old plain need of something to eat, he took his apprenticeship in the ways of things and at twelve stood forth a finished and resolute man of his word. Then, having all the facts at his command and the future of his mother to provide for, he made his hard, careful plans for success, and put his determined foot upon the ladder.

There was never anything to do with Tommy except to stand aside and let him rise. This they soon discovered at Hathaway's great factory, where he began by folding circulars and copying letters. When he was sixteen they made him a traveling salesman.

That was the last day that his mother ever did any work. By another week he had moved her uptown. Three years later, when they took him off the road because they needed him in the office, he moved his mother again. By another year they were giving him a salary which he could not think of without blushing.

But Tommy had seen at the start that the way to make money was to save it; and at twenty-three his chance came. Hathaway wanted new capital to enlarge the business, and was discussing the proposed improvements with his partners and Tommy when this latter blurted suddenly, "Why not let me come in?"

The general manager stared. The president, great Hathaway himself, looked out of the window and smiled. "Why, you see, Tommy," he explained, "this is a matter of such a sum."

"Yes," said Tommy, undismayed by the size of the figure, "I know. I could bring a certified check for it on Thursday."

"Why, where on earth did you get so much money, Tommy?"

"I have been drawing a lot of money for the last seven years," said Driscoll calmly. "Then I've been awfully lucky on some investments," and he mentioned one or two.

So Tommy went into the firm as treasurer, but he was much more than that. At the end of his second year the earnings of the firm had nearly doubled. Toward the end of the third they had doubled again. By the end of the fifth when crowding competition had brought progress to a standstill, the lines for the great merger—seven big houses from Jersey City to Los Angeles—had already been laid. By the end of the sixth year the merger was an accomplished fact. It was really Tommy Driscoll of Hathaway's who had put the deal through, though the papers did not say so. Then Driscoll bought a few more gilt-edged securities, a little more choice real estate, did a little further figuring and found that he was in a fair way to become a wealthy young man. But suddenly, just when he was making plans for playing business on a really large scale, his commercial career came to an abrupt close.

"Tommy," said his mother one night, as she sat on the side of his bed and gently stroked his great mop of a head, "I want you to give up the factory—and be a gentleman."

"A what?"

"A gentleman," said his mother softly.

"Yes," said Tommy.

"And marry," added his mother, her cheek against his, "some nice girl—a lady."

"A what?"

"A lady," said his mother still more softly.

"Yes," said Tommy again.

He took an office in a downtown skyscraper, engaged a stenographer, and spent an hour there every day, looking after his affairs which prospered largely.

He was approaching twenty-nine at this time, very big and simple, very pleasant to look at, very full of those eager spirits which all these hard years had not been able to crush out of him.

"I believe I'll start and find a lady," he said to himself—"a lady"—and here he smiled, for this was Hathaway's most famous catchword, which he himself had invented "who's the best thing going?"

Then one day his patience was rewarded. She sat in a Victoria with a maid, while a male attendant and some baggage followed in a hansom.

"Smith," said Tommy to his man, who was behind, "follow that man in the hansom to the ticket window and out where he's going and buy me a ticket to the same place."

"To Oldcourt, sir," murmured Smith at the designated time, handing Tommy the ticket. "The lady and the maid have just gone on. There are two cars, sir, the Læconia and the Lætonia. The lady and the maid are in the Læconia. I have got you seats in both, sir."

"I shall ride in the Lætonia," said Tommy. "Pack me, Smith," he said, "for a week. Say, four trunks. Tell my mother that I have suddenly been called out of town and will write. Come on with the trunks to-night. I shall be at the principal hotel. Report to me there at noon tomorrow. Tell me at that time where I shall and Miss Belden—Miss Vespasia Belden."

"Very good, sir," said Smith. While Tommy driving and Smith silent in the tonneau, they whizzed up the beautiful white road, turned to the left and slowed down at a pretty shingled house with low pillars, and wide, well-furnished porches.

"The club-house, Smith," said Driscoll sagely. "You are sure she is going this morning?"

The man nodded, and, throwing on speed again, Tommy ran along beside the high white wall which surrounded the club-grounds on all sides.

"Wait for me here, Smith," he said. The wall was of such height that a six-foot man might reach with some exertion. Driscoll with apparent ease, laid his hands on the top, pulled himself up and so dropped to the other side.

"Far away on the hillside was a little plodding group—men, boys and clubs. A bare hundred yards away where a little dancing brook widened suddenly into a miniature lake, rose a splendid oak. Beneath the oak reclined a girl."

Whistling a snatch of song, Tommy drew near to the tree, left off whistling abruptly, and stood looking down at the girl, who at a glance had summoned him to Oldcourt. Miss Belden remained quite silent. She neither screamed nor smiled, neither asked him to be seated, nor to begone, neither questioned his presence nor answered his look of eager friendliness; the reason for all these things was that she was fast asleep.

Presently she moved, brought her slender hands to her eyes, made ready to be roused, and they quite suddenly she opened her eyes, met his friendly scrutiny, and straightened up, startled.

"Why," she cried breathlessly, struggling in the mists of sleep—"Why—YOU?"

"Yes," he assured her calmly. "It is I."

"You're a real person then! Why—why—why—who are you? Where could I have seen you before?"

Tommy's face fell a little at that. Really troubled she looked at him, intently striving to speak. And Tommy, because her bewilderment was so enchanting, laughed.

"Oh!" cried Miss Belden, suddenly drawing away a little, but still possessed by the great wonder of it—"Oh! I know you now. I saw you in an advertisement. You are Hathaway's Pickles."

For his picture in a hundred poses, but always with that one delighted smile, had appeared in every magazine in America and upon the vast majority of billboards. He was always shown as a fashionably garbed young man on the point of partaking of a pickles and opposite his public mouth invariably hung the famous slogan:

HATHAWAY'S PICKLES

The Best Thing Going

Thus it happened that Tommy Driscoll, eminent from Bangor to San Francisco, as the Hathaway Pickles man found himself in the most natural way telling the story of his life to perhaps the most coveted girl in America.

"As to those pictures, he ruminated coming back to them, 'I got up that idea myself. Always showing one figure and one catch phrase in our advertisements. They picked me out to sit for them because I looked like a healthy appetite and had the right smile. I used to think it great fun, it was like being a celebrity, you know. I don't mind it now, of course, but my mother does. She wants them to stop using my pictures, but I don't like to make them. It's gotten pretty valuable as a trademark. You see, but mother is quite particular in that way. It was because of her wish that I left the American Condiment Company. She wanted me to give up business and be a gentleman—those are her words. Bless her heart—also to marry a lady."

"Yes," said Miss Belden. "I have been wanting to have you tell me about that. Which?"

"Which?" repeated Tommy.

"Being a gentleman or marrying a lady?"

"Oh, that," he laughed. "Why," he added, as though this would explain everything, "it was to see you that I came to Oldcourt."

"Oh," said Miss Belden, "then I understand that you don't want to marry me?"

"Well—that is," he hesitated, blushing a little. "I hadn't thought of the matter in that light."

"Now tell me," she said, "why you wanted to see me, and what that had to do with being a gentleman."

"The connection isn't close a bit, is it?" laughed Driscoll. "But it's this way. And he told her how it had been his pleasure to hunt for the best of things since he had become a man of leisure, and all about his theory of a type of woman different from any thing he had ever seen, and how he had sought for it as part of his delightful investigations, and how unsuccessfully."

"And now that you have—met me," she said, "I suppose I am merely one more disappointment?"

"You!" cried Tommy. "Well, I should say not. I was certain of that the minute I walked over here and looked down at you. I said to myself at once 'Here she is at last—the best thing going!' and the conviction is strengthened by every word you say."

"I am glad to hear you say that," she said simply. "I should not have liked to know that upon meeting me, you found me disappointing. And I'm glad you came here and talked to me this morning. Now," she said, rising gracefully, "I must say good-bye. You leave Oldcourt this afternoon. I suppose"

"This afternoon!" repeated Tommy, with surprise. "No, I'm here for a week. What're you going to do now?" which surprised her into answering, "I am going home to dress for a luncheon at 2 o'clock."

"What're you going to do this afternoon?" demanded Tommy.

"After luncheon I shall play bridge until six. Then I shall go home and dress again, this time for dinner."

"What're you going to do to-night?" "To-night," said Miss Belden, "I go to a tiresome masquerade at the house of my friends—the Vandervoorts."

"H'm!" said Tommy, "masquerade! Well, I'm awfully sorry you're engaged all day, but I'll see you then, anyway."

"Why—I'm afraid not," she said sadly. "It's—it's really quite a private affair, you see, meant particularly for friends of the family."

"I'll be there," he assured her solemnly. "It'll be all right. I want to see you to-night, and since you're going to the Vandervoorts, why I must be there too."

At 10.10 p. m., his duties apparently ended, the ticket taker, who was entering Harvard next year, was on the point of joining the gay company within the Vandervoort villa, when a tall figure in a black domino stepped upon the berugged veranda and put his foot upon the threshold.

The orchestra was playing. Every one in the great room was dancing except an elderly couple, and a Sister of Charity who sat alone opposite the entrance. Tommy crossed over eagerly and bowed before her.

"Little Sister," he said, "won't you dance?"

She arose gratefully and as they moved off he cheerfully ventured, "You looked a little lonesome, I thought."

"I was," she admitted.

"Maybe," he hazarded, "you're a bit of an outsider like me."

"Yes," she laughed, "I am an outsider." Driscoll laughed. "I don't know a soul in this room, but one, and how to find her I haven't the faintest notion."

"I do," he belonged here either," she replied desperately. "I'm a stenographer from Boston and came here on my vacation. Then this afternoon I picked up an invitation to this on the beach, and I thought I'd come. But oh, I wish I hadn't. I think they suspect me. I'm having—I'm having a perfectly ghastly time."

He glanced next at a gorgeous Princess of the Empire, who knew that she had never met him before and flirted with him outrageously. The third time around his eye fell on the little Sister seated alone in a corner of the room.

He asked the Princess why this should be.

"Haven't you heard?" she replied languidly. "Why we are almost sure that she's one of those Ruthless from Chicago. That's no Mrs. Vandervoort's liberty, is it?"

"Well, isn't she nice, then?" asked Tommy, curiously.

"She's a crack shot," she said, "but she's a crack shot. She's impudent to come here at all. Please tell me who you are!"

"Are you sure you don't recognize me?" parried Tommy, before detaching himself from the Princess and making his way over to the little Sister for their third dance.

You simply mustn't sit there polishing the wall like that," he remonstrated. "You must mix among them. There isn't a thing to be afraid of. Why they all think that you're one of the invited guests—Miss Ruthless of Chicago, whom they are cutting."

"But I can't go about among the people as you say. I can't. I'm afraid to."

"Then," said Tommy earnestly, "you must give me the rest of your dances." "No, no. I'm not so foolish as that. You must not miss such a chance to dance with these rich and distinguished people."

"Are they better to dance with than you?"

"Why," said the little stenographer in her low scared voice, "don't you want to get into society?"

"How do you mean?" asked Tommy, puzzled. "Bless you, I have all the society I want. Give me the next one, anyway, won't you? And let me take you to supper?"

Ladies of quality gorgeously arrayed, danced the fifth and the seventh with him, and he prospered with them famously. During this his troubles began. A short, stout man waltzing with the Princess of the Empire, circled by him and bearded to his chatter.

"Why," he exclaimed, "hang me if that black domino isn't young Driscoll, who made a fortune out of pickles in New York! I'd know that laugh among a thousand. Well! who will we be meeting next?"

"Really?" said the Princess. "That one? Well, I don't care. He's fascinating—ever if he is so taken with that Ruthless girl."

The short, stout man knew Tommy in New York and liked him, but he felt, naturally that the functions of the chosen must be kept unimpaired from the herd. He mentioned this latest instance of Mrs. Vandervoort's jealousy to his aunt. Like wildfire, the scandal spread, the result being that when Tommy presently re-entered the ballroom from the veranda, a giggling suppressed—but violent—sprang up behind him. The orchestra was just starting a new dance—the ninth. He sauntered to the line of people seated in chairs along the left hand wall, tendered his arm to a decorated Bo-Peep, and was emphatically refused.

"She's spotted me for an outsider," he concluded cheerfully—remembering now that he had had some diffity in securing a partner for the eighth—and summoned next an Old Virginia belle of the Colonial Period, who also, pointedly, declined him. Passing on he presently espied the Empress, Princess among the silent group of maskers, and he was quite sure that she would dance with him. And then, behind him, suddenly echoed a note of suppressed laughter. As he turned in the direction from whence it came, a similar, cackling, sprang up from the other side. Then another and another from the elder and sterner upholders of tradition until a score or more were sharing in the unseemly mirth. Tommy felt that every eye in the great room was fastened upon him.

"What's the joke?" he demanded pleasantly. "It seems to be on me, anyway."

He was standing in the middle of the floor, trying absurdly to inspect his own back, the unembarrassed cynosure of a hundred unfriendly eyes.

As his back was turned to the door he did not see the Sister of Charity when she suddenly appeared at the threshold. She stood there a second, taking everything in at a glance before moving swiftly down the room, plucking at her mask as she walked.

"Why!" she cried in a voice very different from the frightened gurgle of the little Boston stenographer. "This is outrageous—insufferable!"

Voices rang out all over the room, "Why, it's—Vespasia!—Miss Belden, upon my soul!"

She came to Tommy with eyes shining, cheeks flaming scarlet, and before them all, knelt down proudly on the polished floor and removed from his shirt a picture—that of a good-looking young man delightfully smiling with a gurgle.

Tommy took it, smiling, and crumpled it in his hand, as he led the way into the dimly lighted conservatory, leaving behind them a roomful of people, astonished, somewhat crestfallen, and even a bit ashamed.

"Thank you for coming to the rescue," Miss Belden, he said as the voices died behind them, "I was frightened," she confessed, "and—indignant. They had meant to unmask in another minute and catch you with Mrs. Vandervoort at hand to say that you wasn't invited. I want you to go now."

"Go!" echoed Tommy. "Why, I'm having a perfectly ripping time!"

"But," she hinted delicately, "there are other things to be considered than that."

"Oh!" he flushed, "I understand. You mean it would embarrass you—my being here without a card, and all that. Of course it would—I never thought of that. I'll go this minute."

"When you go home," she said at last, gently withdrawing her hand, "you tell your mother from me—no from a little stenographer that you were kind to one night—that you already are one."

"Just I already am on 'what?' demanded Tommy.

Miss Belden turned away and began slowly unfastening her Sister of Charity robe.

"I don't want you to go," she said then in a quiet voice. "I've changed my mind. You promised to give me supper, didn't you? Put away your absurd black domino. I am going to take you in and introduce you to Mrs. Vandervoort."

"That would be nice," he said cordially. "I really owe her an apology. I suppose, for coming there uninvited this way."

Oldcourt is a curious community. It runs strongly to fads, to lions. This time, beyond any doubt, it was Tommy Driscoll with his splendid alertness, his magnificent good looks, his gay and wonderful innocence, and, most incredible of all about him the fact that he so obviously did not want to get into society, who was the success of the season.

But while his visit to Oldcourt was prospering, Tommy was not unmindful of his promise to his mother, who was not sharing these pleasant things with him. On the seventh day, at twelve in the morning, his crunks packed and gone, his ticket in his inside pocket, his mission in brief, triumphantly done, he rose for the second time in the Belden drawing-room to tell its single other occupant good-bye.

"Good-bye," said Miss Belden and her voice now was curiously reminiscent of the little Sister of Charity.

"And now," she went on, "that you have done half of—or what your mother wanted of you—for even she must now feel that that part is finished—splendidly—I hope with all my heart that you will prosper as well with the rest of it."

"Marrying a lady?" laughed Tommy. "Oh, pshaw! I never think of that, of course. I've always felt that those things come in their own time and way. Haven't you?"

"I always used to think that I did," said Miss Belden. "I suppose that I think so still."

He took her hand and gazed down at her from his great height, and there was affection in his honest eyes—real, deep, abiding affection—and Miss Belden saw it and smiled.

"What a brick you are!" he said buskily. "And that luck for a chap like me to have you for a friend."

"Good-bye," said Miss Belden once more. And Tommy was off to catch his train.

On the platform, he glanced at his watch, it was still ten minutes to train-time. From his pocket he produced presently a telegram from Hathaway's and read it again with pleasant sensations: the message saying that his offer for the famous trademark was accepted and that his portrait would adorn the billboards no more. He would never have thought of making that offer. She had suggested that, had told him how well-worn doing it was. Then suddenly he was not glad any more, but strangely and kindly depressed, as he had never been before in the wink of an eye, as at a signal heavy gloom, unaccountable, unreasonable, settled down upon him—his despondency wrapped around his being.

He sprang up and began pacing restlessly about. The grizzled baggage agent eyed with some wonder the resplendent young man who strode so frowningly about the platform, muttering strange things to himself. Presently Tommy's eye fell upon him, and he drew near, struck by a sudden thought.

"Have a cigar, my man?" he said striving to speak in an easy conversational tone. "Er—what does it mean, do you suppose, when you're leaving a place where you've only spent a week, and you feel, by George, ha, ha, as though you were going to die?"

"Well, sir," said the agent pleasantly, but privately marveling anew at the odd ways of cottagers, "well, sir, if it was me, I'd say, 'beggin' your pardon, sir, as there was a lady in the case.'"

"A lady in the case?" repeated Tommy. "A lady in the case?"

He went back to his suitcase, sat down again, and fell to thinking deeply. And as when a lamp is flashed sharply into a dark room, so now light, new and wonderful, suddenly flooded the hidden corners of his soul.

The way of life and its utmost meaning rolled out before him, a face framed itself marvelously upon the green hillside where his eye was fastened; and Tommy, face to face with the best of it, his best things, found himself at the end of his explorations at last.

In two minutes—for it took no longer than that—he sprang up, laughing, and laid hold upon his suitcase, and when the train came panting in the baggage agent wondering more than ever, saw the strange young man who had so restlessly waited for it, start hurriedly away.

"Hey, there!" he called good-naturally. "Here's your train, sir—going this minute."

"Train! I don't want a train!" cried Tommy over his shoulder—never checking his swift pace, for it seemed to him that there was not another second to lose—"I want—the best thing going!"

WANT A CURB ON FLIRTS.

Asks Trade Board to Curb East End Pittsburgh Flirts

PITTSBURGH.—In the capacity of censor of morals, the Pittsburgh Board of Trade in Shady Avenue is considering a communication it received condemning the loitering on the curbs along Penn avenue. It asks that the trade organization put an end to the practice which has led to remarks being directed to women who walk along the streets. The loitering is so marked as to be uncomfortable for women who are passing by, either accompanied or alone.

PHILIP STEELE

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

Author of "The Danger Trail", "The Horror of the Big Snows", Etc., Etc.

Copyrighted by BOBBS MERRILL CO.

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD. Author of Philip Steele.

If there is anything in the theory of heredity, it is not surprising that James Oliver Curwood is the author of some of the most notable adventure novels of today. On his father's side he is a direct descendant of Captain Marryat, the author of those immortal tales which three generations have gloated over.

Mr. Curwood has made one quarter of the globe—the vast Canadian northwest—peculiarly his own, and he knows that mighty wilderness as Kipling knows India. Although he is an American, born in Michigan and educated at the State University, he stands high in the esteem of the Canadian government, and every year spends several months in the trackless wastes of the Hudson Bay country, traveling as far north as the sixtieth degree and entering the Arctic Circle. He is the only American ever employed by the Canadian government as an exploratory and descrip-

SHE SEES AGAIN AT 84 YEARS

Woman's Sight is Restored in Miraculous Manner. Stour Falls, S. D.—After having been blind for a period of more than four years, Mrs. Mary Carpenter of Roberts County has had her sight restored in an almost miraculous manner. She is 84 years of age. Her sight left her Dec. 11, 1909, and for more than four years she was totally blind. Recently while she was holding her little grandson on her knee her sight suddenly was restored. She now is able to see as well as at any time during her lifetime.

SECRET RAIDS.

Made on Dens Where Opium Cigarettes Were Manufactured.

CHICAGO.—The invention by a Chinese chemist of an opium cigarette, the enactment of a Federal law making its manufacture or sale a felony, secret raids on dens where the new cigarette was being made, the indictment of seven Chinese and one white man, summarize a story revealed here.

The invention of this chemist was discovered several months ago and the law against it was passed. The chemist escaped, and plans which he had made to spread the opium habit lapsed until recently.

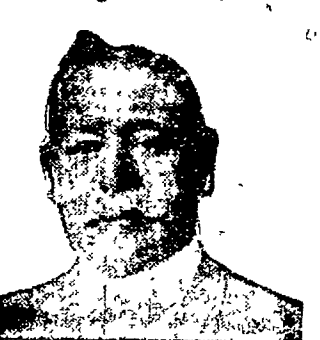

The raid was made several days ago in the greatest secrecy, and the story came out in connection with the return of indictments.

It is claimed that marriage is a lottery, but it can't be true, else the law would take hold of it.

The jacket is the popular three-quarter length and has the equally popular three-quarter length sleeves. One button belt of gray chiffon broadcloth to match. Gray silk stockings and gray silk pumps complete the symphony in gray. The skirt of the model on the left is a one-tier affair. The jacket is the popular three-quarter length and has a high Medici collar of gray velvet. The button of material to match the costume. Considerable attention was attracted by the wearers of these two costumes. The hat worn by each is of black velvet, trimmed with a wreath of roses.

Every person is entitled to a fair, impartial trial, and the one accused may not be in a position to hire an attorney, and if one is furnished by the courts, the effort to clear the innocent party but half-hearted at the best.

Hon. Mayer C. Goldman, a member of the New York City bar, is the leader of the Public Defender movement in the east, and many of the leading magazines and papers of the country are earnestly co-operating in the good work. The Public Defender is needed in every court in this land and with the agitation and influence behind the movement, it is but a question of time until the down-and-out, the friendless and the persecuted will have a fair, square deal and right not might, will prevail.—M. TOLEDO LAND SHOW OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED BY OHIO AND MICHIGAN Agricultural Displays from Two Great States Will Make Unrivaled Exhibit of Produce and Stock. Valuable Souvenirs to Visitors.

The indoor winter fair scheduled for the Terminal Auditorium, November 23 to December 5, now has the official recognition of both Ohio and Michigan. State and county exhibits of the finest live stock are assured, in addition to the displays of 30 Toledo firms thus far booked. Agricultural displays are coming from Fulton, Wood, Sandusky, Allen and Seneca counties, and there will be nursery displays from Monroe. From the fall season's county fairs will come prize-winning sheep, hogs, cows and poultry; also products of farm, orchard, garden and dairy, as well as farming implements. Several railways, including the Ann Arbor, will exhibit in the land show section.

Big Michigan Display.

Twenty Michigan counties, comprising the entire western half of the state, will occupy a section featuring apples and a model farm. Every visitor will be given an apple and every woman a book of official Michigan souvenirs. Prof. Gibson is in charge of the Wolverine exhibit and he is bringing prize cattle here from as far as north of Traverse City.

President A. P. Sandies, of the Ohio State Agricultural Commission, has placed Prof. N. E. Shaw, chief of the charge of the Buckeye state's official exhibit. An entire section, or 16 booths, will be filled with the dairy and food bureau and Wooster experiment station displays. Among other things they will demonstrate that Ohio can grow tobacco and will show a model plantation. Prize horses and cattle will be sent by Ohio State University.

Movies for Farmers.

Illustrated lectures by agricultural college field experts will also feature Ohio's exhibit. There will be moving pictures, depicting insect crop devastation and remedial measures for banishing these parasites.

MAXINE ELLIOT TO BE NURSE IN WAR

Rice and Peaches.

One-half cup rice, two cups crushed peaches, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup milk, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon butter, a little grated nutmeg or a few drops of vanilla. Wash and boil the rice 20 minutes; drain (do not blanch), put in top of double boiler, add the milk, half the sugar, nutmeg or vanilla, and salt; boil slowly 20 minutes without a cover. The rice must absorb all the milk. Push four custard cups with melted butter, fill with the rice and set in refrigerator until very cold. Turn out on saucers and cover with the crushed peaches, to which the balance of the sugar (or sugar to taste) has been added. If decorated with two or three dainty green leaves of any kind it will make a very attractive dessert.

Boils and Carbuncles

Abscesses, felons and boils show that the blood lacks certain mineral elements which nature must have to keep the body healthy. Dr. Choussier reports in the medical work of Drs. Boericke and Dewey, page 141: "Within the last month I cured a young lady, aged sixteen, with slices. Had been suffering for months with right foot. Medical men said foot must be amputated. Fearfully swollen; discharge of matter excessive. Leg was bent almost at a right angle at the knee joint. Stopped all remedies and gave slices. Three months later the patient walked without assistance. With slices I cured a discharge of matter from the ear, which for a long time caused the patient severe pain day and night."

Nutrient Slices contain Silica and other necessary constructive elements. $1.00 a month; six months' supply $5.00, by check or money order. Sold by mail only.

The Public Defender Movement

Timely Agitation of a Momentous Problem Under Way.

Thinking men and women who have studied the question of right and just in the courts of this country, will hail with delight, the present agitation, nation-wide in scope, relative to a Public Defender, this movement having its origin in Los Angeles.

The essential basis of the Public Defender movement is just this—if a Prosecutor is needed to see that the criminal and the guilty are to be punished—then, by the same token a Public Defender is needed to see that those who are unjustly accused shall not be "rail-roaded"—whether justice is served or not.

Court records are replete with cases where innocent parties have been condemned, through merciless "third degree" methods, and the efforts of a Prosecuting Attorney, who strikes to make a record, and who is well supported by the political parties behind him.

Crime should be punished—no gain-saying that fact, and the Prosecutor is necessary—but for the man or woman who, through some vagaries of fate, is ensnared in the coils of the law—without friends, without hope should also have representative at court to see that justice is done.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Unfermented Grape Juice—To one gallon shelled grapes add one quart water. Boil, strain through flannel bag. To one gallon juice add one quart water and one pint sugar. Boil. Seal white hot.

Sweet Pickle Cabbage—Take cabbage enough when it is wilted to fill two-gallon jar. Cut each cabbage into eight pieces, leaving piece of heart to each to hold it together. Make strong salt brine, pour over boiling hot, let stand twenty-four hours, then drain. Cover with cold water, let stand twenty-four hours, drain. Scald with weak vinegar with lump of alum (to make it brittle); let stand twenty-four hours and drain. Then place layer of cabbage in jar, then spices, and so on, till jar is full. Spices: Mustard, cloves, celery, onion, cinnamon and teaspoon of turmeric. Take one gallon best cider vinegar, two pounds sugar; mix and pour over cabbage hot. If kept under vinegar will keep till cabbage comes again. Turmeric may be obtained at drug store; it gives cabbage a fine cream color.

Health Vinegar—Three gallons water, three pounds dark brown sugar. Directions: Boil together until sugar is dissolved. Put in large stone crock, let cool. Take large slice of bread, toast slowly on both sides; when cool, spread one side with two cakes Fleischman's compressed yeast and turn yeast side down on top of water in crock. Cover tightly. Set in warm place and when toast is drawn to bottom of crock, vinegar is done. (Will keep pickles.) Takes about five weeks to make.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

Nosebleed—Although an ordinary nosebleed often alarms, there is no cause for fear, for it does away with surplus blood. However, there are several ways of treating a nosebleed in order to give immediate relief. (1) Roll a piece of brown paper, wet it and press between upper lip and gum. Hold head back. (2) Sit on chair with head back. Press tongue against base of mouth. (3) Snuffle peroxide or salt water. Often merely snuffing cold water will stop a nosebleed. (4) Chew paper or cotton. If these simple remedies do not relieve, a doctor should be consulted.

ENAMEL YOUR BED AT HOME

First rub the marred paint smooth with fine sandpaper. Do this gently, so as not to roughen what paint remains upon the iron. If you can get it all off it will be better, for then you will have a uniform surface.

Thus done, go all over the bedstead with white enamel paint, which is sold at paint shops and by some druggists. Use a broad brush and sweep it smoothly and evenly over the iron until all is covered.

Let the first coat get perfectly dry before applying the second.

Three coats may be necessary to make the whole of the dark iron white.

The advantage of a white enamel apart from the pleasing effect is that it may be renewed when it becomes defaced and that it will be the better for each renewal.

THE TABLE

Bean Chowder—Pick over and wash about two cups of brown beans; soak over night and cook in the same water until thoroughly done, adding more water as necessary. Keep plenty of water in, and when beans are soft add three-generous slices of salt pork or bacon, one large onion, two potatoes, one pint tomatoes, handful of macaroni, and simmer an hour or more. This is a delicious dish for supper on a cold night.

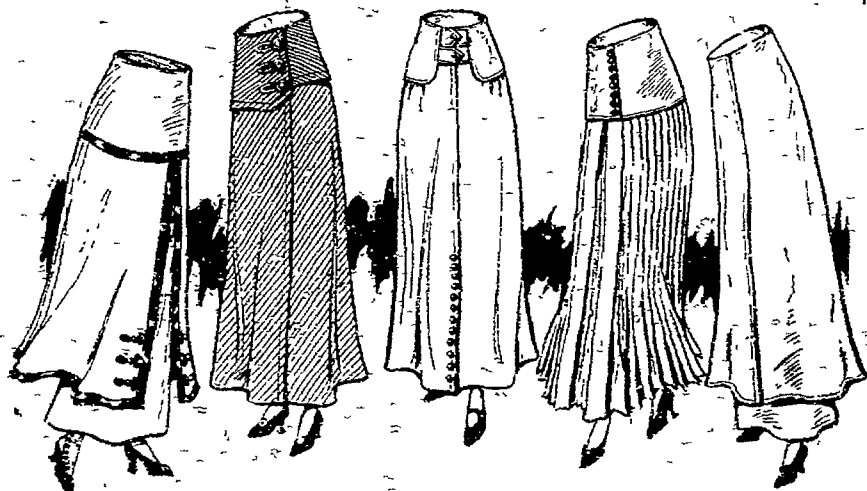

Good Breakfast Dish From Left-Over Mashed Potatoes—Beat together one cup milk, one egg, one-half teaspoon salt and left-over mashed potatoes. Then add one teaspoon baking powder and enough flour to make a good biscuit dough. Roll out one-fourth inch thick, cut into squares, fry in hot lard, serve with syrup or butter.

Bread Omelet—One slice bread soaked in one cup milk, yolks of five eggs, butter size of walnut, salt and pepper. Mix all together, then fold in whites that have been beaten stiff. Pour in hot iron spider and bake on top of stove until set, then put in oven and brown.

English Walnut Cake—One cup chopped walnuts, one cup chopped raisins, three-fourths cup granulated sugar, one-half cup cracker dust, four eggs beaten separately, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon almond extract. Bake in moderate oven forty minutes.

New Lemon Pie—First part: One tablespoon flour (heaping), one cup sugar, rind and juice of one lemon, butter size of large hickorynut (melted). Second part: Yolks of two eggs (beaten), one cup milk. Third part: Whites of the two eggs (beaten stiff). Stir second part into first part, then fold in third part very carefully. This is new and delicious.

Genesee county is celebrating at Flint today, Oct. 29, the cause of the jubilee being the good road vote on Wayne is the only county in the state that has made or is building more good roads than in Genesee county—Fenton Independent.

Here's a potato story that is one Peter Bartholomew, of Thomas, dug from one hill potatoes weighing 7-12 lbs. At this rate per hill the yield would be about 11,000 bushels. If there is no objection, we'll put the blue ribbon on Pete Oxford Leader.

The Oakland county office seekers who advertised in that paper were duly complimented last week in the Rochester Clarion. "With all the various county candidacies in evidence in our advertising columns," the Clarion has much the resemblance of a rogues' gallery.

The Plymouth and Northville Gas Co. have commenced the excavating for the new gas plant here. The new building will be built of brick and will be 35x77 feet. Adrian Anderson has the contract. The laying of gas mains on the streets of the village will commence within a few days—Plymouth Mail.

After being laid up with indigestion mostly in the acute form for over two months, I've resolved never again to get sore at the fellow who answers my pleasant "Good Morning" with a curt nod of the grunt. I know just how he probably feels—Farrington Enterprise.

The Farmington editor's surprising reception, some few months ago, of an article in this paper is now accounted for. We are very glad to know the reason he was so entirely unable to "take a joke." The article related to a nap taken by said editor on a D. C. R. car, and was intended solely as one of those little pleasantries so frequently passed back and forth between newspaper folks. But gracious! How the fur flew! And the lambasting given the Record publisher, was entirely misplaced, after all, as the story was written by a lady employee of the office, from information furnished by some Farmington and ex-Farmington folks, at that.

Sick Headache.

Sick headache is nearly always caused by disorders of the stomach. Correct them and the periodic attacks of sick headache will disappear. Mrs. John Bishop of Bowerville, Ohio, writes: "About a year ago I was troubled with indigestion and had sick headache that lasted for two or three days at a time. I doctored and tried a number of remedies but nothing helped me until I used one of those sick spells a friend advised me to take Chamberlain's Tablets. This medicine relieved me in a short time."
