COMMENCEMENT EXS. JUST BEGINNING

JUNIORS BANQUET THE SENIORS
IN M. E. CHURCH PARLORS
TODAY.

CLASS OF 18 HOLD GRADUATING EXERCISES JUNE 17.

Junior Banquet.

Commencement exercises for 1915 begin this, Friday, evening with the annual Junior banquet given for the pleasure of the seniors. It will be served in the dining room of the M. E. church by the Ladies' Aid society. There are to be four delicious courses, with table decorations in the class colors, red and white, with red roses, the class flower. Those of the Sophomore class who were honored by being chosen for waiters are Dorothy Dubuay, Aletha Yerkes, Thelma Bennett, Gladys Heener, Scott Montgomery, Peter Perkins, Wendell Miller and Frank Hedge.

The guests of the class of 1915 which numbers 22, will be the 18 seniors, the high school teachers and members of the school board and their wives.

Rev. Bachelor of Ann Arbor will be present and deliver a short address, while toasts are to be given by the teachers and presidents of the Junior and Senior classes. Rev. J. E. Webber will act as toastmaster.

Baccalaureate Sermon.

Sunday, June 13 will be Baccalaureate day. Rev. R. M. Pierce will preach the sermon in the Methodist church that evening. The class, eighteen in number, will occupy the seats of honor.

Eighth Grade.

The eighth grade graduating exercises will be held Wednesday evening, June 10, in the Alseum theatre. Most of the program will be given by the eighth graders themselves. Clement Cullen will give the salutatory, and Helen Lanning the class history. Albert Kenyon will give a short talk on "The School Year Is Over" and Cornelia Mueller on "Looking Back." Ernest Lawrence will recite the class poem. A number of musical numbers by students will intersperse the addresses. The diplomas will be presented by C. A. Delph.

Following these will come a short play with the graduates in the cast. The class motto is "Be Square" and the class flower is a pink rose, pink and white being the class colors. The class roll includes Clement Cullen, president, Carl Alexander, vice-president, Helen Cunningham, secretary, Carrie Linschberger, treasurer, and Hilda Blunk, Glenn Charter, Halsey Cole, Pearl Cole, Ruth Crawford, Lera Dickerson, Percival Edwards, Nellie Freydl, Rose Hollis, Charles Hutton, Charles Johnson, Albert Kenyon, Helen Lanning, Ernest Lawrence, Elvord Martin, Helen McFarlin, Willard Moshmer, Cornelia Mueller, Edith Ross, Walter Ryder, Mary Sowles, Raymond Thompson, Claude Van Valkenburg.

Lee Vanatta, Harold Voight, Blanche Walker and Eleanor Willis.

Graduating Exercises.

The graduating exercises will take place Thursday evening, June 17 in the Alseum theatre.

Thomas C. Blaisdell, president of Alma college, has been engaged to deliver the address to the graduates and their friends. Guy Filkins will play the marches and vocal solos will be given by Miss Gertrude Odien. The invocation and benediction will be given by Revs. Brass and Webber respectively, while Mr. C. L. Dubuay will present the diplomas as he has for several years back. The stage of the Alseum theatre will likely prove a splendid place for the assemblage of the seniors, while their parents and friends may view them from the comfortable audience seats. The class colors and the class flower will be in evidence, along with the motto "Nothing succeeds so well as success."

For economy's sake, the class has planned a new departure. Every Senior girl will wear on this, one of the most memorable occasions of her life, a simple white, serge sailor suit, each made in the same style from the same kind of material. The boys will also enter into this new scheme by discarding the conventional dark suit for white trousers and blue serge coats. The seniors are to be congratulated in adopting this plan for eliminating some of the expenses of graduation, as this does away with the expensive white dress, suit, gloves, etc., usually deemed necessary at this time.

Following is the class roll: Lisle Alexander, president, Donald Yerkes, vice-president, Mable Benton, secretary; Stanley Kestell, treasurer, and Thelma Ambler, Genevieve Durfee, Louis Fair, Esther Prantz, June Filkins, Mae French, Elmer Holthe, Alene McCully, Lydella Murdock, Marion Power, Paul Sprunk, Thomas Thompson, Lawrence Van Valkenburg and Alene Yerkes.

DECORATION DAY FITTINGLY OBSERVED

LARGE AUDIENCE LISTENED TO PROGRAM IN ALSEUM THEATRE
SATURDAY.

The Decoration day observances last Saturday afternoon, May 29, under the auspices of Allen M. Huffman Post were very interesting and successful. The Alseum theatre, where the exercises were held, was filled to capacity, the W. R. C., as usual, attending in a body, and with the veterans occupying seats designated by the national colors. The stage decorations, in flags, flowers and bunting, with the pretty scene background, were very effective and the committee of W. R. C. ladies who did the work received many compliments therefor.

The program was especially good, including patriotic selections by the Northville band, songs by the men's choir of the M. E. church, charming vocal numbers by a girls' chorus from the school, under the efficient direction of Miss Wartman, and solos by Ray Van Valkenburg and a prettily rendered recitation by little Miss Hemple. The Post commander, George Goodell of Novi, gave an interesting history of the origin of the phrase, "Old Glory," and Gov. Ferris' memorial day proclamation was read by Rev. J. E. Webber, these two numbers coming soon after the opening invocation by Rev. R. M. Pierce. The principal speaker was Rev. Frank Brass of the local Baptist church, who gave an excellent and appropriate address, which was frequently applauded and very favorably commented on later.

The march to Oakwood cemetery and the services there were carried out in the customary manner, after which the veterans, the W. R. C. and invited guests—the latter including the pastors and their wives, the band, press representatives and others, to the number of about one hundred, were served with a delicious supper in the dining room at the Cattermole hall.

A group picture of the Post and Corps was taken by Photographer Wisdom before the march to the theatre.

The veterans and the ladies of the auxiliary order thoroughly appreciate the assistance given them, the flowers furnished and the many expressions of commendation received on the success of the entire observance in honor of our patriotic dead and their surviving comrades.

SPECIAL SERMONS.

"Preacher and People" will be the subject of the next two Sunday sermons at the Presbyterian church. Criticism of the preacher and the independence of the people will make a discussion of this question very interesting.

"The Authority of the Preacher" will be the theme for Sunday, June 6. This will be a consideration of the right of the preacher to speak with authority on the great questions of religion and morality. The lessened authority of the preacher as compared with that of the priest, and the fact that some even in Northville, question the right of a minister to engage in politics even though moral matters are involved, will make this topic one of practical interest.

On the following Sunday (June 13), the subject will be "The Mind of the People." This will be a consideration of the right of the people to hold their own moral and religious views regardless of the preacher or the church. The growing independence of men, their rebellion against restraint, and the numerous defections from the church regardless of the authority of the preacher even among the people, all will be touched upon. The discussion of a question of such importance to the church and community should create a great deal of interest, and will without doubt, bring out a large attendance both Sundays.

NORTHVILLE-DETROIT REUNION.

The Northville-Detroit reunion will take the form of a basket picnic on Belle Isle, Saturday, June 26th.

Take the bus at the dock, get out at the Aquarium and walk a short distance north to the pavilion where the reunion was held last year.

All present and former dwellers in Northville who are interested are invited and urged to attend. Dinner at one o'clock, Eastern time.

Bring your lunch, come early and stay all day, if you can—but come anyway.

309 Ferry Ave., Detroit.

Mrs. PRUDA PIERCE TOWER, vice-president, 192 Cameron Yve, Detroit.

HALE-SOWLES.

Miss Anna Sowles, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Sowles, and Mr. Glenn Hale were united in marriage Sunday, May 23. Rev. J. E. Webber performed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on Griswold street. Only the immediate relatives were present, including the Misses Anna and Mary Stark of Detroit, aunts of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Hale will make their home in Northville with the best wishes of their many friends.

NOTICE.

I will pay a reward of ten dollars ($10) for the arrest and conviction of the parties stealing from my asparagus garden.

WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

In the days of "Forty-nine" a message crossed the continent by stage coach in 5 months. The voice now will travel from New York to San Francisco in 1-15 of a second.

As the modern long distance phone is to the old stage coach message; so is Modern Electric Lighting to the old methods of lighting.

Candles are cheap, but Electricity is cheaper. An ordinary "wax" candle costing 2 cents will burn 5 hours, or at the rate of 2-5 cents per candle power hour.

Current (at 8c) for a 60 Candle Power Edison Mazda Lamp will cost about 1-2 cent an hour or one-hundredth cent per candle power hour.

And still we used to think that whale-oil and candles and kerosene were cheap! Besides think of the danger, and bad air, and injury to eyesight!

PIETY AND PROSPERITY.

One Helps Not Hinder Others, Says the Rev. H. A. Hanson.

"Can a Man Be Prosperous in Business and Be a Good Christian?" was the subject of the Rev. H. A. Hanson's sermon at St. Paul's Lutheran church yesterday. He said a strange misconception was prevalent regarding the relation between piety and prosperity. Not all was success that seemed such, as not all was failure that seemed failure. He illustrated Nebuchadnezzar at the height of his power, still far from the heights to which he might have obtained had, on the other hand, Moses dying in a sight of the promised land, the prophet Isaiah, and others who died with all their desires unfulfilled. Christ never among the crowd of men in all the history of the world, but only to die for the world. The true religion of the world is not upon what we can get, but upon what we can give.

He said that the man who is not willing to give up the things of this world for the things of the next world is not a Christian. He said that the man who is not willing to give up the things of this world for the things of the next world is not a Christian.

A man who is engaged in a business, directed by a religious faith, can do better than those who are not. He said that the man who is not willing to give up the things of this world for the things of the next world is not a Christian.

He said that the man who is not willing to give up the things of this world for the things of the next world is not a Christian. He said that the man who is not willing to give up the things of this world for the things of the next world is not a Christian.

It is possible to bring these ideals into our business life and achieve success. Even in the eyes of the world, honesty, morality and Christian virtue are the essential ingredients of success. There has never been an age when piety and high Christian honor have had greater opportunity available than now. No matter what the state of the world, to make the best use of the things of this world, to make the best use of the things of this world, to make the best use of the things of this world.

I see no reason why one's piety should be an obstacle to one's prosperity, but I see many reasons why true piety should bring the highest prosperity. Piety and goodness are not a weight or a power—they do not hinder but they lift men high.

Smoked 62,713 Cigars.

At Vienna there is dead in his seventy-third year an old man. From his twenty-seventh year he kept an exact count of his consumption of beer and tobacco. In his fifty-fourth year he became a teetotaler, after having drunk 28,780 glasses of ale—a very moderate tally, working out at but three a day. But it is of his immoderate smoking, which he continued till his death, that we have to speak, says London Tid-bits.

In forty-five years he smoked no fewer than 62,713 cigars, or 13,971 a year, giving an average of 38 a day. Out of this gigantic total 43,500 were given him at various times, leaving 19,213, which, although this American devotee at the shrine of "My Lady Nicotine" never paid more than a penny for each one, cost nearly $10,300.

But even this marvelous record is beaten by that of Mynheer Van Klies, known by the nickname of the "King of the Smokers." He was 81 at the time of his death, and sometimes smoked as much as ten pounds of tobacco in a week.

What was probably one of the largest cargoes of fruit ever carried from any port in the world in cool chambers recently left Hobart in the State of Tasmania for England. The shipment exceeded 125,000 bushel crates.

CRIMINALS SHOULD BE TREATED AS ILL

HEAD OF AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION WOULD ABOLISH JURY SYSTEM AS FAILURE.

THE JUDGE A "CRIME PHYSICIAN"

Calls Prisons "Hospitals" and Would Abolish Pardon Boards and Segregate Alcoholics.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Treatment of like sick persons, with the trial judges acting as physicians, abolition of the jury system, elimination of pardon boards and segregation of alcoholics, are some of the reforms in criminology proposed by Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, dean of the Medical School of the University of Michigan and president of the American medical Association.

Dr. Vaughan was one of the first to advance the idea that the criminal is a sick man and he has more ideas along the same line. Among other things he would make a trial judge responsible in every case for the cure and return to society of the man sentenced to a prison or a reformatory.

"Did you ever hear of a doctor sending a sick man to a hospital with instructions that he be kept there six months or ten years and then discharged as cured?" says Dr. Vaughan. "What would you think of a doctor who would send a patient to a hospital for one, 10 or 25 years without medical attention from him or any other doctor?"

"Then why should judges send men to prison for from one to 50 years and immediately feel at liberty to wash their hands of the whole thing? The criminal is a sick man, the prison is his hospital and the judge who sentenced him is his physician. A judge has no more right to hold himself unaccountable for a criminal's recovery than a physician has a right to send a patient to a hospital for a certain length of time, and then completely neglect him."

When the criminal judge is off the bench his place is in the prison studying the sickness and its effect upon the patient of the treatment he has ordered. It should be within the province of this judge physician to change the treatment when he considers it advisable.

In the end of criminals the jury system has proved a failure. Instead of a jury committee should be created by a bunch of three expert criminologists. There should be special institutions where criminology is taught, and where the lawyers, desiring to fit themselves for criminal judgeships would be compelled to spend sufficient time in study to become expert modern criminologists. They must regard the criminal as a sick man. He must be studied psychologically.

I would have all prison pardon boards abolished. It is the man who has sentenced the prisoner, who is the best judge as to whether the prisoner is sufficiently recovered to merit a parole or a pardon. I would have all prison sentences indeterminate. A prisoner should be kept in the penitentiary until the trained criminologist says he is ready to be released.

In Great Britain there were 165,000 human beings sentenced to prison in 1910. Out of that number 164,000 were not first offenders, and some had received as many as 20 previous prison sentences. In more than 100,000 cases that came before the criminal judges of Great Britain in one year, prison sentences had not effected cures in the criminality at all.

In this country when a man commits a crime we send him to the penitentiary. He behaves well, wins the confidence of the warden and other prison officials, somebody pleads for him, and he is paroled by the pardon board. In a large percentage of cases criminal record begins immediately afterwards and he may commit many crimes before he is caught again. He has been allowed to leave the hospital for criminals before a cure has been effected.

"Dr. Vaughan blames criminality on hereditary or environment, or both. "It is like the old days in medicine," he says "when the physician spent all his time discovering what treatment to use in curing disease. Medicine made very little progress till the profession turned its attention to the prevention of disease."

"It is safe to say that alcohol is the cause of criminality in large proportion of cases. If that is true, then the alcoholic should be segregated before he commits crime. He is a sick man, needing kindly but firm treatment. There are hundreds of thousands of potential criminals in the United States today, alcoholics and feeble-minded. Under present conditions, nothing can be done with these people till they have committed some crime. But something should be done. The law should provide for their segregation. Society should be protected from them."

Dr. Vaughan insists that the criminal is the excrement and not the product of civilization.

CITY OF MAPLES.

It is Macon, Mo., and the Stranger Invariably Notices the Trees.

The stranger in Macon, Mo., invariably notes the large number of magnificent shade trees that border the streets of the town. The place has come to be known as "The City of Maples," and the inhabitants take pleasure in telling of how these fine trees were acquired. In 1872 John W. Beaumont, a real estate man, "went broke" and could not pay his taxes, which amounted to $116. He offered the city council in lieu of the cash 10,000 young maple trees, from one to two inches in diameter, all ready to set out. It was that or nothing, so the council took the trees. By public proclamation the Mayor "fixed up" "arbor day" and everybody who would agree to set them out and care for them received from six to ten trees. At that time the town was almost bare of trees of every kind. Almost in a day Mr. Beaumont's legal tender for taxes was in the hands of the inhabitants, and they so faithfully carried out the mayor's injunction that today there is hardly a street in town which is not beautifully shaded by thick leaved trees, suggesting a town in the tropics.

USED AUTOMOBILES I SELL

I am enthusiastic about them, I just can't help it. I know what I say is true, that I give the best value in Detroit. I sell the cream of used cars, many of them not driven over 500 miles. I sell them for 30% to 75% of the list price. I have now a bunch of 1913-14-15 cars with not a broken or badly worn piece in them. They all have electric self starters and will give as good service as a new car. Your neighbor will think you have bought a new car. Yet you have saved enough on the purchase price to run it a year. You can't get a new car with it but you can pay more. I deal in bargains. I turned down over ten cars Friday because they were "shot." Some one gets them. Do you?

NORTHVILLE, MICH., JUNE 4, 1915.

THE MEMORIAL DAY THAT'S GONE

A few days ago, in hamlet and city, on pavement and greensward, far and wide across our loved land was heard the tramp of many feet—the measured tread of the armies of peace, in solemn, subdued echoes sounding across a half century, of the tramp of marching millions that once shook this land from center to circumference. Under vaulted dome or humbler roof orators of varying power addressed the throngs who gathered to pay annual tribute to the soldier dead and the living veteran. But through it all this year ran an under-current that made every thing wear a different aspect. War, at a distance of fifty years, had taken on almost an aspect of romance. Its terrible memories had felt the softening effects of time, its hardships had lost some of their vividness, its animosities had faded. Its reminiscences, its results, could ordinarily furnish the orators all over the land with illustrations, humorous, pathetic, instructive. But this year! Across the ever-narrowing seas that divide us from the other world powers, falls the shadow of a Juggernaut absolutely unparalleled in its relentless crushing of human beings. Through air and under ocean sound from afar the groans of the dying, the cries of the widow and the fatherless, the terrible, under that awful shadow, with a sound of those voices of horror, no orator could eulogize war or large its dread meanings. And so, the voice of almost every speaker all over the land—in Northville as elsewhere—spoke to and of the one who had made peace possible, was raised in an unisoned plea for peace and in denunciation of war.

And out of it all comes one wonderful thought—the truth that to those men who fought and bled in that war that ended fifty years ago, we owe even more than we have ever before realized. To their victory then in due the fact that today we are a nation might in its undivided power, a nation great enough, strong enough, brave enough to maintain its principles of peace in the face of all efforts to involve it in the horrors of the unspeakable modern warfare.

Even our most recent large phrases aren't safe from the research hand who takes everything to pieces to see how it's made. It has lately been discovered that "nobody home" and "good night," in their slangy sense are to be found in Shakespeare's writings. "Why Bill! Who'd ever thought it of you?" Tut, tut! Says the Wayne County Aider.

It seems a little odd to those who used central time to roll over to eastern, but not quite so much for those using local time.

But listen. The back-number folks who have stuck to sun time all these years won't "roll over" now any more than they did when central came.

It is announced (privately, of course—milliners and husbands please skip this item) that a woman can "do over" her last year's hat into a this year's style by simply tearing off the brim.

Under the heading "Fiction" in a recent paper, the first title listed is "Empty Pocket." A whole lot of people can testify that there is no fiction about that.

A hint in Tuesday's Detroit News reads thusly: "We kill bugs, back from the south." Obviously, the bugs that haven't been south are in no danger.

Mrs. Lizzie Kelly and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. S. Kelly, were Detroit visitors last Tuesday.

Mrs. Stanley Kelly of Flint who has been visiting at the home of Bert Brown, returned home Tuesday.

Mrs. H. Creeger and Mrs. Thos. Gleason of Northville were Detroit visitors last week Wednesday.

Chas. Seebault and family and Mrs. Carl Selger motored out to Walter Coates' Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Waits and little son of Pontiac called on Mr. and Mrs. Herman Creeger, Monday.

Archie Krut and family have moved into the J. J. Smith house, and Mrs. Esther Gruber has rented two rooms of them.

Miss Grace Jones of Orionville visited Novi friends last week. She is a daughter of Will Jones, who formerly lived here.

Mrs. Carl Schultze and little daughter, Marjorie, visited her sister, Mrs. Mollie and mother, Mrs. Della Schultze, last week.

Mrs. Walter Coates entertained her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. G. Warren Urdge and little daughter, Caroline, of Detroit from Saturday till Monday.

Archie Krut is building a new blacksmith shop between the hotel and Mrs. Jennie Bloomer's store and it soon will be ready to serve the public in that line of work.

Miss Cora Banks leaves Tuesday for Centralia, Washington, to visit her brother, Dr. Rosh Banks. She will be accompanied as far as Grand Junction, Colo., by Mrs. Seymour Brown, who goes to visit Miss Inez Bryant in the latter city.

The Ladies Aid recently went in a body to call on the new landlady of the Hotel Novi, Mrs. Will Allen. After being shown all thru the hotel which has been repainted and redecorated and arranged in very nice order, they were treated to a cream and told that they had been royally entertained. We might mention that since entering the hotel Mrs. Allen has had such improvements made that there is a very marked difference in the appearance both inside and out and when painted on the outside the hotel will look very neat and tidy, a decided contrast to what it has been for several years.

Wixom Whisperings

Pearl Gillick went to Durand Wednesday to visit her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Beasley.

Mrs. J. H. Abrams has been quite sick for the past week, but is slowly improving.

Miss H. Leah Furman entertained a young lady friend from Detroit for the week-end.

LET THE RED LIGHTS ALONE.

They Shouldn't Be Taken from Construction Work to Signal Cars.

On several occasions patrons of the Pontiac division have signalled passing cars by means of the red lights that are used to warn people of the goods roads construction work being carried on. These red lights should not be so used. They are placed for a definite purpose and are likely to be misplaced if indiscriminately handled by our patrons. Red lights are a signal of danger; use white lights in the form of lanterns, paper, matches or torches as a signal you desire to board an "interurban" car.—D. U. R. News.

dampness as a result.

Children's day will be observed by the Methodist Sunday school next Sunday evening, June 6. A splendid program of songs and recitations has been prepared and the children have been practicing hard. A good attendance of parents and friends should greet the performers.

that day. Sue was born in Rigo, N. Y.,
and has lived in and near Orion
for seventy years.

Millford has made arrangement for a series of evangelistic tabernacle services, to begin next Sunday evening.
Evangelist H. H. Pitzer, who has been assisting in the McConnell meetings at Pontiac, and who formerly worked with Billy Sunday, will be in charge, with three others of the McConnell party to help him. A tabernacle is in process of erection at Millford this week.

FARMINGTON GIRL NAMES SUB-DIVISION.

Miss Alma Ely, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ely of Farmington was declared the winner in the $50 prize contest, for the most appropriate name for the Czenkusch subdivision at Walled Lake formerly known as the Randall Chapman farm.

Henceforth the subdivision will be known as "Czenaqua Shores," the name offered by Miss Ely, and which was decided as the most fitting by the judges.

The name was selected out of a total of 146 replies containing as many suggestions.

Suggestions were received from Northville, Redford, Plymouth and Farmington.

The contest closed Monday night at midnight, and the prize winner announced Wednesday morning.

WEEK'S CALENDAR

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES.

(By the Pastor.)

Morning topic: "The Authority of the Preacher." This is the first sermon of a series of two to be preached on the subject "Preacher and People." The second on "The Rights of the People" will be preached next Sunday morning. These two should prove of local as well as general interest. A goodly attendance is anticipated.

Sunday school and Christian Endeavor as usual.

Mrs. Perkins of Ann Arbor, representing the W. C. T. U. will speak at the evening service. This address should be stimulating. Friends and members of the congregation are invited to be present.

The Woman's Missionary society will meet at the home of Mrs. J. A.
Dubuar Wednesday afternoon.

The Workers Together' class will meet with Mrs. Curtis this Friday afternoon. Please take the three thirty-five car if possible.

The Children's Day exercises will be held on Sunday, June 7. Both services that day will be devoted to the thought of the day.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES.

(By the Pastor.)

The subject for Sunday morning will be "A Great Man With a Great Theme."

The evening topic will be announced from the pulpit.

Don't forget the B. Y. P. U. Sunday evening.

The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was an indication of increasing interest. Let us better it next Sunday.

Don't give all your energy to business, keep a little for Sunday services. Be diligent in business and fervent in spirit.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.

(By the Pastor.)

By invitation from the Foresters of America the pastor of this church will preach a sermon to this body of men this Sunday morning at the regular church hour. The lodge will occupy the middle portion of the auditorium.
The subject of the sermon will be:
"Bound Under An Oath."

At the evening service we will enjoy the Children's Day exercises.
This is an annual affair with our children and much effort is being given to make this an outstanding event.

The Ladies' Aid will hold its next regular meeting in the church parlors Tuesday afternoon, June 8. A social hour and good time follows the business session. All are cordially invited.

The Queen Esther circle will hold its June meeting next Tuesday evening, with Miss Mattie Mosher. The election of officers for the coming year will be one important item of business.

Beginning this Sunday morning a nursery will be provided in the parsonage for all mothers who desire to leave their children during the morning services. At least one adult and two girls will be in attendance.
Mothers can feel safe in leaving their children. The nursery will be open to all children from the infant up to 8 years of age.

- THAT you will keep so busy boosting that you won't have time to knock.
- THAT you will vote, talk and work for a bigger, better, brighter town.
- THAT you will help to make this a good town so the town can make good.
- THAT you will increase the value of your property by buying your mer-

- THAT you say something good about the town every time you have a chance.
- THAT you will spend your money here where you make it.
- THAT you will brag about this town so much that you will have to work for this town in order to keep from being a liar.

"THE WEARER BE SERVED."

You buy something. Then you try it out; you remember the claims made for it by the merchant who sold it to you; and you find he told you the truth. It is a good article. You are glad you went to that man.

WHY?

- The merchant believed in serving you.
- The manufacturer who supplied the article to him also believed in serving you.
- The Merchant Knew it was the only way to get your steady trade.
- The manufacturer knew it was the only way to get the merchant's steady trade.
- Maybe you will buy a KIRSCHBAUM SUIT this Spring. If you do you will find that we tailored a principle into it—

"THE WEARER BE SERVED."

What does this mean to you?—

This: An All-Wool Fabric, Shrunk by the original London cold water process, tailored by hand and sewn with silk thread. You'll wear that suit many months longer than you expect.

You'll find its shape will always hold true, for all the "shrink" is gone.

You'll find the color fast.

Some Luck

The car was practically on end; and the little smoking room in which he sat was the uppermost portion of it. And all at once he realized that at its other extremity was the drawing-room, into which the only other passenger had so closely closed herself. For all he knew, since it was evident that the train had gone either through or off a bridge into the water, that the drawing-room was submerged, and the young lady had been drowned in her trap. The urgency of the situation spurred him to immediate action. With the sickening pain in his shoulder and a supreme effort of will, he succeeded in climbing through the doorway, with its hampering curtain, and thus gaining the narrow passage, down which he allowed himself to slide until his feet bumped against the aisle, he let himself down slowly, foot by foot, checking too rapid progress by gripping the sides and curtains of the berths with the hand of the uninjured arm.

In this wise he came at length, not to water, as he had momentarily expected, but to the drawing-room's closed door. Upon this, so perpendicularly was the car standing or hanging—he did not know which—he might have stood upright. As it was, he worked himself to a kneeling position in the angle, knocked sharply, and called loudly. Then he listened with straining ears, to which there came no voice, but startlingly unmistakably, the sound of lapping waters, just beneath him.

With feverish haste he groped for the door-knob; found it, turned it and with some relief discovered the door was not jammed, as he feared it might be. On the contrary, it opened easily, escaped his clutch, swung inward, down on a with a crashing crash. And still there was no apparent resistance.

In some agitation, Governor, expecting a spectacle of death to come to him, tried to flume his feet on the floor, but found them slipping. He fell, and landed, motionless, on the floor, some feet below the door.

Could he move? He tried to rise, but his legs were numb. He tried to crawl, but his arms were numb. He tried to call, but his voice was gone. He was alone in the dark, and he was alone in the water.

Another moment and her whole body seemed to quiver; and at the next she sprang to a sitting posture, with a shrill cry of terror. Governor had a hand softly, reassuringly, on her shoulder.

"Don't—don't be alarmed," he soothed. "The danger, now, is past."

"Thank goodness, I have broken no bones," she assured him, "nothing worse than a few bruises." And stoically he hid his suspicion that his own right shoulder was dislocated. Stoically too he forbore telling her, upon his return, that the danger he had pronounced "over," was still very present and real.

So far as he could discover, the car in which they were prisoners was maintaining its position solely by grace of a bent and treacherous coupling at one end, and the unstable support of a nine-tenths submerged sister sleeper at the other. At any moment either of these might give way and precipitate them into the flood which eddied around the forward platform. In a word, they were hanging to the car behind them, the fore trucks of which were a mid-air over the bridge-side, at an angle of less than a hundred degrees hanging there by a hair.

What he did tell her, however, was this: "We've supped off a bridge that crosses the Patuxent River, and are so supported that they can't very well get at us from above. But they know we're here, and boats are already on the way to our rescue. I could see their lights; but the wind and tide are against them, and it's still pouring rain; so it may still be some little time before they take us off."

The news cheered her to a sort of exhilaration. She began an eager, excited conversation; and the charm of her voice, together with her utter unconsciousness of peril, robbed Governor in a measure of the sense of what threatened. In a little while he found himself joining more and more spiritedly in an exchange of experiences. He had been in a railroad wreck in England, and she had been on a liner that ran on the rocks of the Irish coast. But this had been more terrifying, because she was alone.

Gouverneur remembered what the porter had told him.

"Is your home in Louisville?" he flung at her across the dark. He sat on the floor in the doorway, one foot pressed against the door-knob to keep him from sliding.

"Oh, no, I live in New York. I'm going to Louisville to visit a school friend."

"I don't suppose you have any idea where your belongings are," he suggested. "Perhaps I had better feel about for them; since when the boats come, we'll not wish to lose any time."

"There are only my coat and hat," she confessed, naively. "I have no luggage."

He let himself slide a few feet nearer to her, and with his good left arm reached into the berth and then under it, while he observed. "I fancy you must have left New York in some haste. I hope the delay will not seriously inconvenience you."

"No it will not make the least difference," he declared. "My friend isn't expecting me. My coming, indeed, will be a great surprise. She fancies I am very much engaged just now at home. In fact she was to come to me; but illness in her family prevented her."

He found her things on the other side of the little room, beneath the sofa; the coat rolled into a ball, and the hat apparently no better for its recent ricocheting.

"I too left the city on the spur of the moment," he told her. "I'm running away from a wedding." And he fancied he heard her laugh, lightly.

"That's odd," she said, "because I am running from a wedding, too." aloud, "whether, by any chance, it might be the same one! Mine is what they call an international alliance."

"The O'Connell affair?" she asked, in surprise. "Why, that's the one I'm flying from. But I don't understand why you—"

"I happen to know what a real Shevlin is," he interrupted. "And once upon a time Sheila Brown was engaged to me."

"Really?" The exclamation came before an instant's pause. "I never heard he was engaged before."

"Oh, yes," he said, smiling. "I heard the fact. It was years ago, though. I don't know if you know her, but she was very nice."

The young lady on the floor was silent this time for some seconds. "After all, you couldn't have come away, for there isn't going to be any wedding."

"You mean it's postponed because of Sheila's sickness?"

"I mean it's off altogether because Sheila's blood rebelled and ran away."

"Relieved?" he asked. "It seems a little better, but it's impossible, too good to be true."

"Yes," she emphasized. "To-day, this afternoon, just dropped—she, you might say, out of it all, and not a soul knows where she is."

A possibility assailed him; then a suspicion, which grew, developed into full-blown to a conviction.

"You—you—" he began. The light of a lantern flashed through a broken pane glared on a mirror, was reflected back, swept her face, and was gone.

"Sheila," he cried, and there was a little catch in his breath. "Sheila the coats are here! If you'll manage to put your arms about my waist, I'll get you up to the door. After that, it will be just a matter of sliding."

And so it proved. In the four hours that intervened between the rescue and the arrival of the survivors in the National Capitol, Sheila Diod and Lawrence Gouverneur slid into fond and fast renewal of the old, youthful, interrupted friendship. They had much to say to each other, and the congeniality of childhood kindled to a warmer, mature attachment.

So amazingly fast did the time pass, spurred by the rare mutual delights of this oddly restored companionship, and in spite of minor physical discomforts, that it was not until the relief train was about to cross the Potomac River, that Sheila touched upon the reason for her abrupt repugnance and precipitate flight.

"I never cared for him in the least," she said, "but mother's heart and soul were set on making me a marchioness; and just for the sake of peace I finally gave in. He was to have lunched at our house to-day; but at the last minute that odious little Torrington called up to say that the poor man had taken a heavy cold, and thought it wisest not to risk going out in such wretched weather. I was both relieved and vexed. However, it happened in the afternoon, that I had to go down to Twenty-fourth Street, on an errand that no one could have attested to for me. Of course I wasn't supposed to be seen outside the house at this time; so I put on a frock and hat of my maid's, covered my face with a black veil called a taxa, instead of taking one of the motors, and off I went. I had to wait a few minutes in the place—it was a tailor's—and to pass the time I picked up an evening paper that was lying there. I'm sure you know what I saw. Shevlin had been beaten by thugs, at three o'clock in the morning. I don't know just why it should, but the whole thing nauseated me. I suppose the right kind of a fiancée would have rushed to his bedside. But I didn't. I felt that I could never look at the creature again. And so I rushed the other way."

Gouverneur reached for her hand and his own closed warmly over it. "They'll try to find you and bring you back, little girl. And then—"

She checked him with a look, the meaning of which was an interpretation of her added words.

"But you won't let them; will you, Lorry?"

"There is just one way to make it impossible," he smiled at her for an instant, and then, like a cloud crossing the sun, a look of gravity, of pain indeed, succeeded. "But no, I had almost forgotten. The paper says Shevlin may die. Then you—"

But again she interrupted him.

"No," she said, "he won't die. I almost forgot something, too. At the station I had time only to buy a ticket or call up my hotel. So I chose the latter. Little Torrington said that carrying a black eye and a damaged lip, he was quite all right."

And at his Gouverneur's smile returned. "You've lifted a load from my mind," he told her. "He wasn't fit to die. I certainly didn't mean to kill him."

He thought that Sheila could never have looked more beautiful than at that minute, when from under her maid's hat, she bent wide, perplexed, blue eyes upon him.

"You!" she exclaimed. "I was the 'thug'!" he confessed, with a chuckle.

"Because I loved you," he answered, boldly. "Because I must have loved you ever since the day I gave you the daisies and dandelions, and you loved me for them."

Delicate, blue veined lips veiled the blue eyes, which were no longer peevish, and presently a small voice asked:

"How do you propose to make it impossible, Lorry?"

"By having you marry the 'thugs' here, to-morrow—to-day, in Washington. Will you, darling?"

The lights of the station were in view, the brake was grating, the other passengers were on their feet, were crowding into the sister train, which was waiting. Sheila sprang up, too, waving, lost her balance, and slid into Gouverneur's outstretched arm, her lips falling warmly against his own.

"And you save my life, and then you make it worth living," she murmured, softly.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS.

Queer Notions About the Stormy Petrel Among Sailors.

The stormy petrel, alias Mother Carey's chicken (Porcellaria pelagica), or (Oceanites oceanicus), according as we have reference to the species of the eastern or western Atlantic, has not got the epithet of "stormy" for nothing, says Forest and Stream. As already stated, the bird appears to revel in a tumult of the winds and waves and actually does so for a good and sufficient reason. This is that its food supply is very much more abundant when the ocean is agitated than when it is at rest. Then, the petrel has a decided habit of following ships, which has really nothing to do with impending storm. No, it seeks the ship, not because it is afraid or lonely, but simply because the ship agitates the waters. Very likely as it follows a storm may spring up and then, seeing the bird so obviously delighted, poor superstitious Jack not unreasonably thought there was some connection between them. From this to a belief in a companionship in evil was only a step.

The queer notions about the stormy petrel did not end here. It was believed (and the naive of this belief is decidedly racy of poor Jack) that it carried its eggs under its wing and hatched them on the water. It was also believed that it could appear at will in the neighborhood of a ship anywhere about the ocean. All this certainly pointed to necromantic or uncanny power, and if is not to be wondered at that the bird became such an object of fear and aversion to the poor man before the mast. The poet Coleridge has left us a fine picture of the terrifying influence of the albatross on the Ancient Mariner, but no poet seems to have awakened to the possibilities of the stormy petrel as a theme. However, we read much about it off and on in old chronicles or tales of the sea. In one of these it is recorded that the sailors, seeing the herald of storm join the ship too near land as they supposed, mistook and referred to it as "Mother Carey's chickens."

JUST KICKED A CAT.

Cure for Rheumatism Discovered by a Jersey Freight Clerk.

A clerk in the Pennsylvania Railroad freight office in Jersey City, suffered from spasmodic twinges in his right leg, which he attributed to rheumatism. He consulted a physician and spent a good deal for medicine, but continued to grow worse.

One morning recently, his office turned in a spirit of friendliness, and he took his leg and rubbed it against the cat's back. The cat gave a violent kick with his hind leg, and a violent spasm followed. He rubbed the leg with a towel and a few stirring rubs and the leg and rheumatism.

A few minutes later he rubbed his teeth hard and alone. He shook his leg and finally spat. Then he walked like a drum major across the floor and, mysteriously, shook hands with himself. The sharp twinges had disappeared and there has been no recurrence of pain.

The clerk's doctor corrected his diagnosis, when asked for an explanation of the sudden cure and said that what he mistook for rheumatism was probably caused by a twisted ligament. The kick at the cat straightened out the twist and removed the cause of the trouble.

What Gum Arabic Really Is.

Gum arabic, which forms one of the more important minor exports of Egypt, is really the sap from a species of tree which grows from three to five yards in height, whose forests of which are found in the Kordofan Province, and also near Gowa, in the White Nile Province. The natives are free to collect the gum. The season during which the trees yield their sap runs from December to May. Prior to gathering the crop the natives prepare the trees by slightly cutting the bark in numerous places. The sap then exudes, solidifies in the shape of large and small lumps and is afterward gathered by hand, such gathering being done before the rainy season commences. There are two main classes of gum—amber-like and bleached. In the latter the gum is merely exposed to the strong action of the sun—generally in Omdurman—while in the former instance it is allowed to retain its natural amber color. The confectionery trade is perhaps the principal purchaser of gum arabic, though a very large number of other industries—chemical works, printing and dyeing mills, letterpress printers and so on—are interested in this product of the Sudan.

Dead Bacteria Dangerous.

One result of bacteriological research is the distinction between infective and intoxicative diseases. In the former the general multiplication of micro-organisms in the body of the patient is the salient feature, while in the latter poisoning is the cause of the malady.

Thus, states a well-known authority, the dead bodies of typhoid bacilli, although destitute of all infective properties, are yet toxic when introduced into animals in virtue of the intracellular poisons they contain. Accordingly, in the case of many diseases formerly regarded as purely infective, it has now become apparent that, in addition to the infective, the poisonous properties of the invading bacterial cells must be taken into account.

THE HIDDEN SIDE OF CASTE

Founded on the Belief of Reincarnation—Four Classes Recognized.

The hidden side of the oriental caste system, as originally conceived reveals a colossal scheme for the ordering of society in such manner that the normal operation of the national functions should contribute to the culture of the individual souls which constituted the population. Duty and responsibility were regulated in precise correspondence to education and privileges, strict accountability was imposed upon all.

There are divisions and subdivisions in the order of caste and national variations varying with national idiosyncrasies, but the scheme as a whole corresponds with the four grand natural divisions of so many inevitable the world over; first the producing class who are engaged in supplying food, clothing and shelter and the other physical necessities of men, second, the distributing class, third the guardians of the nation, the army, police, judges, rulers and kings under whose protection the producers and distributors labor in peace, fourth the teachers of the nation, the scientists, philosophers, priests who guide and develop the higher nature of the citizens.

Should a soul, according to an ancient caste system, by reason of its inexperience and youth, enter the lowest caste in society, the Shudra in the Indian tongue the producer, the servers. His first lesson would naturally

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Strawberry Jelly—Wash, hull, mash berries, and drain them over night in a jelly bag. To each pint juice use one pound sugar. Bring juice quickly to a boil, boil fifteen minutes, add sugar, stir until sugar is dissolved; boil ten minutes. Put a little in a saucer and stand on the ice; if it forms a jellylike crust quickly, it is done. If not, boil longer. When done put in tumblers, cool and cover with paraffin.

Fruit Juices—After making jelly, put into sauce pan the fruit left in your jelly bag after the juice has dripped through, cover with water, boil. Then strain it through the bag again, boil it a second time with sugar, and put it in a preserve jar. It can be used in making cold drinks. This is a great economy when lemons are high, as you need only two lemons in a large pitcher of punch.

In planting cucumbers, scatter a little tobacco in the hills and you will not be bothered with bugs; the large black bugs which are so destructive will not bother them. Also, plant late cucumber pickles when blackberries are in bloom and you will not be bothered with any bugs.

TEMPTING SALADS

Here are submitted some salad recipes which are appetizing for both summer and winter:

Pineapple Salad—Drain the slices of canned pineapple, and arrange each slice on a bed of lettuce; over this, put a tablespoonful of boiled dressing, in which plain cream of whipped cream has been added to give a mild flavor for a fruit salad. Now sprinkle grated cream cheese over this, add a dash of paprika and one has a very delicious salad.

Boiled Dressing—One tablespoonful of butter melted slowly, one tablespoonful of flour, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of paprika; mix into a smooth paste, then add one-half cup of water and one-half cup of vinegar, stirring all the time it cooks to prevent lumps. When thick remove from fire, add yolks of two eggs and one-fourth teaspoonful of prepared mustard, beating all the time, then set on the fire again; about two minutes to heat the eggs through. This may be kept in a jar in a cool place indefinitely.

Tomato Salad for Four People—Select four smooth tomatoes, the same size, scoop out the inside and place the shells on ice to cool; dice the insides of the tomatoes; add one mango diced, one bunch celery diced and, if desired, for one cucumber; drain in a colander to remove juice; then marinate in a French dressing, using two tablespoonfuls olive oil to three of vinegar, salt and pepper to taste, and one-fourth teaspoonful of prepared mustard. Fill the tomato cups with the above mixture when ready to serve. Garnish with parsley.

THE TABLE

Ham Soup—When boiling ham, save the water in which it was boiled; when cool, skin off fat and add rice and sliced vegetables. Boil well and you will have a delicious soup which also will prove a saving.

Hamburg Steak—With Tomato Sauce—Two pounds hamburger steak, two tablespoonfuls melted butter, six tablespoonfuls bread crumbs (brown in oven and roll with rolling pin), two level teaspoonfuls salt, half-spoon pepper, one chopped onion. Mix thoroughly, form into a long, round roll, dip in egg and bread crumbs and lay in buttered bread tin. Pour following over it and bake an hour in hot oven. Tomato sauce: One tablespoon each, melted butter and flour, pint hot water, half can tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste, one bay leaf.

Bread Sponge Cake—Into two cups granulated sugar mix three teaspoonfuls cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon allspice, one teaspoon salt; mix through sugar, then add three-fourths cup lard, two eggs, two cups yeast. Put scant teaspoonful soda in enough hot water to dissolve, add it, then enough flour to make stiff as other cake. Pour into large baking pan, let stand one hour, then hal Raisins, figs or dates may be added.

time kingship, the divine ruler.

The perfect Samurai or warrior of Japan, according to a renowned citizen of the island empire, regarded his person as the most precious legacy left by his fathers, wherein dwelt in its most holy of holies a divine presence to be dedicated to the service of God, parent or master. His body was an instrument to be used for an end higher than his tenant's interest.

Into the fourth and highest caste came the souls who by many earth lives had passed through the three lower grades in the school of experience and having well learned their lessons were fitted to take upon themselves the momentous responsibilities of guide and teacher to the nation. These were the Brahmins. It was theirs to teach in order that there might always be a succession of wise helpers who should direct the evolution and progress of the people. They must not teach for money, but for any personal gain, they were to gain nothing for themselves and everything for the people. Their life was hedged about with restrictions in food and daily conduct, cut away from all the enjoyments of the earth which they were expected by this time to have outgrown and surmounted in the higher enjoyments of learning, philosophy, religion. They were bidden to have no earthly wealth, since wealth belonged to the merchant man; they were bidden to have no right to straggle for liberty, since that was the privilege of the warrior; they were bidden not to eat and drink and travel about as they liked since those were the prerogatives of the chief souls born in the lowest caste. Theirs was the severe life of self-denial.

The divisions were founded entirely upon the soul's stage of growth, and upon this basis they were maintained in the old days, if a man's life proved that he had mastered the lessons to be learned in his own caste and was showing forth the qualities of the higher caste he could pass from his own caste the next—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Curious Almshouse.

The most curious almshouse is England is St. Mary's Hospital at Chichester. There eight old ladies live actually in the church, which is a fine old building dating from 1680. It was originally a monastery, but when Queen Elizabeth came to visit there she turned it into an almshouse, to endure as long as almshouses exist. The old ladies have two neat little rooms each down the sides of the main church, with windows looking out on the garden. They have each a coal supply, a kitchen range, water and gas. At one end of the church is the chapel, where daily services are held. The choir stalls are beautifully carved old oak, the original seats that the monks used. The church stands in a quiet little square. Exchange.

Property.

The last thing we need to be anxious about is property. It always has friends or the means of making them. If riches have wings to fly away from their owners, they have wings also to escape danger.

Historic Pass Words.

The king has sent to the British Museum a collection of "pass words" used for the court and the city for each day in the months of July, 1812, and November, 1820, signed by George IV., as prince regent and as king, and this has been placed in the department of MSS. where other notes of the kind are kept.—Birmingham

THE BAD BOY NEEDS FRIENDS

No other boy needs a friend so much as a bad boy. Many times he is bad just because of a bad environment, and because he has no one to turn to for advice and help. Sometimes a loan may reach a bad boy most effectively, and the Big Brother movement, which has spread from New York to many other cities, shows how. The Big Sisters, a companion organization to the other, is demonstrating how in our own way a woman may help a bad boy to become a good man.

Mrs. Ralph Helmer, President of the Big Sisters of the Borough of Queens, New York City, tells of two small boys whom Mrs. Charles Dumas Gibson once undertook to reform. "One of the youngsters was heard saying to the other: 'I wouldn't believe what she says, but you'll tell her for me.' So let's a line of influence a Big Sister has which is not open to a Big Brother. The salient is the idea that if these two movements that anyone may follow it whether, unconnected with an organization or not. You don't need to take the boy you are going to help into your own home, but simply get into close touch with him in his own home, and by friendly advice and sympathy, and by practical assistance, when needed, help him to rise above his surroundings and to develop him into a good citizen.—Frances Frear, E. Leslie's

An ideal preacher is one who can preach loud enough to wake up the sinners without disturbing the sleepers of the men who contribute the most.

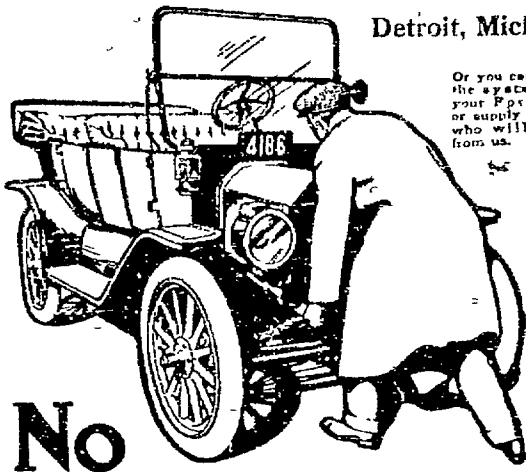

Many a man's failure in this world may be attributed to the fact that he used thick cartridges when firing at the target of success.

Thirty odd years of work of New York long ago was asked by an inquisitive person if he had lost much. He growled out in reply, "No, at course not. I haven't lost a blessed cent," and he followed with a loud explanation, "but I've shrunk five millions of dollars."—Ambassador Reid in London.

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

"The Scotts are having a house party and there is a dance next Tuesday night. Here is your invitation," said Nell, handing her friend the card.

"Was that Mrs. Scott who called last Saturday?" asked Olive, reading the invitation.

"Yes, Mrs. Scott, Jr. and Mr. The Scotts and Frazee own the big manufacturing plant here and they came to their country home last July. They are delightful people. What is worrying me is that I have nothing to wear to the dance."

"How is that?" asked Olive in surprise.

"Well, in the first place, our expenses for doctor and nurse have been appalling, and I did not feel like getting any evening clothes, especially as there are only one or two occasions a year when one needs anything of the sort here."

"I never thought you would be like the majority of married women, careless about such things. You were always a good dresser and careful of your appearance."

"I am yet," said Nell, coloring, "only I care so much more for other things that clothes have a minor place in my life. When you have a home to keep up and a baby to keep well, and a maid to pay, on a small salary, the amount you feel justified in spending for clothes is not large."

"Don't you have an allowance?" asked Olive.

"No, I never have; all the money is carefully spent, so I can't see as it makes much difference."

"It's not businesslike," objected Olive. "One is so much more independent with a private pocket book."

I mean to start that way, that is if I ever marry," laughed Olive.

"Perhaps it would be better. Dick and I have talked about it. I'll begin when the doctor's bill is all paid."

"Now about this party," resumed Olive. "I have several good evening dresses—I wonder if you could not wear one of mine."

"Oh, you are so much taller, I would have a train all around."

"There's one with a long tunic and the skirt is separate. The tunic is full and would do nicely for a skirt. Come and try it on." And they went to Olive's room.

"That's all right. I thought it would be; and the pale green clears your complexion."

Nell viewed herself in the glass with heightened color, the soft lace over the arms, the artistic touches of a real modiste. "I used to have such things," she reflected, "but now—"

A wall-floated up the stairs. "Unfasten this quickly, Olive dear; the baby is awake," and Nell slipped into her house dress and flew down the stairs.

"Do you know about the guests? Are there any unmarried people among them?" asked Olive when the baby was contentedly propped up in his baggy.

"I do not know about the house party guests, but there is young Frazee. I haven't seen much of him, but Dick says he is a pleasant fellow. And Mr. Burk, the head bookkeeper, is unattached and our doctor is a young widower." Nell and to Parsons had decided to say nothing to Olive about the divorce unless it was necessary. "His sister keeps house for him. She came while I was visiting at the farm this summer."

"I don't like widowers," commented Olive.

"Two young men and a widower may be all the available society. We live in such a scraggly place." Nell smiled into her friend's face. "I suppose nothing would make you willing to live in a small town."

"I am sure I should have to be very much in love to consider it; but you have some charming friends. You are very fortunate in that way," replied Olive.

Special Feature, "The Spoilers" at Alseium Theatre.

The biggest photo play yet put on at the Alseium will be "The Spoilers" scheduled for next Wednesday night. The play is in 9 reels and requires two and one-half hours for showing. It has been running at the Washington theatre in Detroit this week.

The story is one of intense interest and holds an audience spell-bound from the first reel to the last. The pictures cover a territory of 1500 miles of land and sea. The mining scenes are laid in Nome, Alaska, and all geographical effects are wonderful.

William Farnum and Kathryn Williams are seen in the leading roles, supported by hundreds of minor characters.

There will be only one show, to begin promptly at 8 o'clock. Admission 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children. Tickets on sale at "hardock's" drug store.

The story may also be seen Wednesday afternoon at a special matinee, beginning at 2:40 o'clock.
