PUPIL'S PUNISHMENT

JUDGË NOBLE THOUGHT THE EVI-DENCE DIDY'T SHOW THE GRAY BOY UNDULY STRAPPED.

MANLY APPEARING YOUNG FEL-LOW TOLD STRAIGHTFORWARD STORY AND SAID PLAYED FOOT BALL SAME AFTERNOON.

The twice-postponed trial of Supt. Misenar of our local schools for the alleged excessive - punishment Charles Gray, a thirteen year-old pupil of the Seventh grade, took place before Judge Noble Monday morning There was no attempt on the part of either party to deny the punishment, but the contention that it was infuriously severe could not be sustained for several reasons, one being that the boy immediately went to Athletic park and took part in a lively game of foot ball. The Prosecuting Attorney's office was represented by H D MUSICAL COMEDY: Kednie of Detroit, City Attoreny Yerkes appearing for the defendant. After a brief presentment of the facts in the case, a verdict of not guirty as charged was erendered by the court. The boy told a straighforward story, fully corroborated in every particular by Supt Misenar and a gained considerably in the opinion of (ROWNLD HOUSE AT BAND BENCthe witnesses, giving the impression. that, though he might be disobedient and unruly on occasions, he is a good enough sport and flot ball player if left to himself, to have taken consequence- of tebellion

There seems to be comsiderable "cause of action" in this grade, according to report, as two or three other boys have recently been subjected to similar discipline, hue since the Gray case, without, however, any resort to the law in consequence.

Joash Repairs

LESSON TEXT-2 Kings 12: 4-15 GOLDEN TEXT - "God loveth a cheerful giver." -2 Cor. 9-7

The time of this lesson was about 878 B. C. and it follows within a few years last Sunday's 'lessou? Inaugurated as king and instructed by a great lethargy on the part of the priestly class with regard to the house of God. Joash set himself to arouse great liberality and to repair the temple.

1. Lethargy, v. 4. 8. (1) Its caus We need to read in this connection 2 Chronicles 24. From the two accounts and the previous history of the nation we conclude that the condition of the temple was due. (a) to the weak and frequently vicious characters of the rulers of the nation; (b) to the evil companions of both princes, and priests and (c) to the cupidity of court and curate. (2) The result of this lethargy regarding God's cause was evidenced (a) upon the temple, and (b) upon the brooks of the people of the kingdom (3) The cure. Joash instituțeu great reforms în Judab, and in these Jehovada the priest (v. 2) had no small part in this particular lesson the prince (v. 7) seems to lead the priest Unfortunately the godly priest did not long survivie the where your beasure is, there will crowling of Joash and hence when your heart be also." priest did not tong trowtong of Joash and hence when the came under other influences he goon went back to the ext practices Proverbs 11-24, 26. These priests had the people a chance and there will be aided him to gain his throne and no lack doubtless had had a part in his boy. Again strictly speaking, a "house of the Lord" such as was the Jewish temple, yet "the condition of many of our churches would indicate great in difference to the cause of the kingdom. Our bodies are indeed a "temple" (1 Cor. 3:16; 6:19) and both the body and church buildings alike should be kept in proper condition.

II. Liberality, 18 9 15. The plan to-have the priests gather funds for the repairs was scriptural. (Exod. 25: 2-8) God does not look upon the measure but upon the motive of our gifts. (2 Cor. 8:12). The priests gid gifts. (2 Cor. 8:12). The priests gid not "hasten the matter" so the king took it into his own hands (v. 9). In this remissness Jehorada as chief priest, is held accountable for all (v. 7).

We have in this story—a rich suggestion as to God's plan of Christian giving. (1) The Object. It was distinctly for the glory of God and not to outbid others or to wastefully use the Temple the money for selfish purposes, (2) out of their abundance (2 Chron. 24:10), systematically and faithfully.

(3) The Results were a House repaired (2 Chron. 24:12), beautiful (2, Chron. 24:13), and worship repaired (2 Chron. 24:13). stored (2 Chron. 24:14). Joash seems to have laid great emphasis upon the "tabernacle of witness" (24:6) and we need to recall that each and every part of that temple was a testimony to the truth of God-and had in it a rated as king and instructed by a spiritual suggestion and prophecy, faithful priest, yet Joash discovered As a whole, it suggested that God dwelt in the midst of His people. The sons of Athaliah (Joash grandsons of Athanian (Josep; grand-mother), had so conducted themselves as to cause it to need repairing (2 Chron. 24:7). When we turn to 2 Chron. 24:6-14 and read the record of the restoration of the temple, we discover (1) Each had his part in the work: (2) Each did a "perfect" work e. g did his task faithfully, fully and to a finish. (3) Each did an orderly work, "in his state." None sought to supplant or defraud others work assigned. (4) Each did a strong work, it was "strengthened" and not a trifling work as men-pleasers on for the moment. (5) Each worked economically because when all bills were paid, money was returned to the

It will seldom pay to keep hens after they are two years old. These hens may make a profit, but younger hens will' return a much larger proft for the same amount of care and attention. The older the hen the later she will begin to lay in the winter. The 2-year old hen will seldom lay much before January, and the older hen will most likely not get down to business until late February or March. The hen that lays only during the spring and summer months will return her owner little, if any profit, since all or nearly all the profit made on her eggs is eaten up by the winter board bill.

CHAPTER XII

The Master Still Entangles. -Somehow we got out of that office. The detectives weren't gentle, but the thysical pain of their emphase fingers and the way they threw me into the waiting faxi were welcome hurts that dulled the bigger pain inside of me. That's all I remember about it, and it's all I ever want to remember

For two hours they third-degreed me at headquarter and I told every thin but one. They beckled, radge ered, swore; the prandished firsts, lat I stuck to my story.

I told them of linke Garven, his nelbods end work. I told them of i his organization—or es vich as I knew of it-as they snarled their disbehef. J Michael Garren, the broker, Fas well known as on Forest man

I told them of the visit of Slivers O'Hagca and what-I had heard told them of my efforts to get out of the muster's clutches so that the old man and the girl wouldenot be rebbed.

I told them of the ash tray: the claver trap which had put me where I ves. No motter what the great or I broaght in Mike Carren's rame. there was any way on earth of doing i Le would, follow me.

I crawled under the sheet and by wrenched contortions of my body managed to femove the vest between his trips. It took me hours, it seemed but at last the bills were evenly dis tributed under the mattress and I roplaced the vest.

One hundred and sixty thousand dollars! .It was enough to enable my lawyer to hire a hundred detectives to look up Mike Garven's record. Fione revived again, and there was a peaceful smile on my lips as I slept.

"Come on, you! Get a wiggle on!" A sullen-faced turnkey snarled the order next morning when I had eaten the stuff they had given me for breakfast and taken my hour of exercise. I obeyed sullenly, and sullenly I let the detective who came in snap handcuffs on my wrists. I didn't know what was in store and I didn't care.

He took me to the chief's office The two detectives who had airested me were there; also Whisky-Face, Alice, her father, a stranger-and Mike Garven. The sight of his blank eves sentthe hell-fire racing through my veins!

I broke away from the detective and leaped at him. Heavens! If I could only get my hands on his threat I'd choke a confession out of him. My manacled hands were with in two inches of his face when the two detectives grabbed me and hurled me back into a chair. And the cold gray eyes had never even blinked; not a muscle of his passive face twitched, his hand did not even raise.

"Another move like that and we'll put you in a straight jacket!" warned the chief. _

"He needs close attention. I should imagine," remarked Garven in that cold, even tone that held neither sneer or gloating per felief.

He had faced me unflinchingly, coolly. While my rage hid shown the police the hate I bore him, he had explained away my accusations convincingly and unwaveringly By a clance of his gray eyes he had made his tool obey his master brain.

Trever would swear that I had confassed to him, and Mike Garven would open the door of his cell There was no doubt in my mind of that. He could do austhing

He had made me a self confessed blackmåller by my own words. His alert brain had figured in ediance every step of the path I must so New he was trying to locate the morey I thought so safe, and there was a chance that he would succeed.

"Here's yer lawyer." The sullenfaced turn'tay's voice aroused me and I sat up listlessly. There was no reed of a lawyer now. Hope had gone utterly. Mike Garren was in include; he could not be traced

There was a scoul on the strong, the cell and waited for the guard to go where he might watch but not hear. "Well?" he said coldly.
I looked up blaubly. This was not the usual greeting of lawyer and prosrective chent.

"I came to inform you that, as I believe you cught to be drawn and quartered instead of electrocuted, if are not convident to act as counsel." Te explained stiffly? -

- In a fiash I realized that he was re faring to take the case because of Alice Walton and her father. Ch. I could understand how the yellow-pa pers were playing up that story—the rathetic tales of the heart-interest writers, the word-pictures of the old man and his daughter, my knavery! Jamison was not a shyster who would take any case that promised a fee That is why I sent for bim.

His words and manner aroused me as nothing else would have done. A moment before I had not cared. Now

I wanted him to hear and know all. 'For Heaven's sake let me_tell ye the story!" I cried, and the tear-to my eves as I touched his sleeve in pleading.

His experience had taught him to read men, and he saw everything in my manner that changed the expression of his face and in his voice as he said, very quietly, "Go on." He sat down on the edge of the cot where I could whisper the whole horrible story. As I went on my voice tiembled with rassion when I spoke of the man I hated; it was husky with despair when I mentioned the girl I loved; it was dead with hopelessness when I told what I had done. I forced myself to tell all-everything.

"I apologize," he said earnestly when I had finished. He thrust out his hand, "I'misjudged you." =

, "You'll take my case?" I said joyfully. Somehow he had put new strength into me; rew hope ran with the blood from my neart. "Gladly."

"I want fou to bue private detectives." I continued eagerly, "A hundred, if necessary, to trace every move Mike Garven made on the day of the murder." His virile presence had sent the see-saw end of chope bounding upward again."

"That would cost a small fortune," he said seriously. I have it," I assured him.

He glanced at me curiously, but he only said: "It is more than likely that the police have taken steps to tie ur every cent you might have."

l conidu't resist smiling wanly. "I am sitting on a hundred and

'Where'd you get that money?" he snarled. "I'll write you a receipt," said the lawyer imperturbably, utterly ignoring the man at the door. The detective didn't repeat his question. He whirled and ran down the corridor toward the chief's office. In less than a minute that official, with a small savad of currous sleaths at his heels, was at the cell.

"Where'd that money come from!" demanded the chief, pushing his way in, as the turnkey opened the door. Hello, chief!" greeted Jamison

What money?" That money he just gave you!" "He took it from under the mattress here." The lawyer's face expressed mild surprise at the question, . I was content to stay in the background "How much was it?" snapped the Washington, D. C., Water, not cold, is the cause of the deterioration of roads in winter, according to the road specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Cold weather does not in itself injure roads no matter whether they are earth, gravel, or macadam. -In fact an earth rond will stand more traffic when it is solidly frozen than at any other time. Excess water, however, is al-ways detrimental to a highway. When cold weather turns this water into ice, the damage that it does is greatly increased. Ice occupies considerably more space than the water from which it is formed, and every person who has lived in a cold climate is familiar with the coverful binsting effect of a stor when left to freeze in confined ves.el The same action takes place when it wet road freezes to any considerable depth. It simply bursts of, as we generally term it in road parlance, the road heaves. Later, when the front leaves, the road is getting out plans of $50,000. The than merely allows the ice to melt and assume its original volume as water.

The remedy is self evident Keep the water out of the road. The time to begin preventive measures is early in the fall, before the rains begin if the road goes into the winter thoroaghly dry with the surface and drainage in good condition, the chances are extremely favorable that it will come out all right the following spring.

Remove all accumulations of weeds, grass, etc. which tend to retain moisture and obstruct drainage. Furthermore, do this work early, while the ground is still dry and hard. Vegetation and litter hold water like a sponge and allow it gradually to soak in and soften the earth. job before the roso man is to keep the hard dry surface formed in the summer time from becoming softened by the fall and winter rains and snows. When the fall rains begin the earth or gravel road should be dragged frequently to prevent the ormation of ruts and the collection of water. All traveled places on macadam surfaces should be carefully filled in and consolidated.

During the winter, whenever a thaw is coming on, the cross drains and side ditches should be onened un as far as possible, so as to prevent water collecting along the roadway. If the thaw is so pronounced that the coadway is softened, the drag should be used: sometimes one-round trin of the drag, with the hitch reversed, will entirely rid the earth road of slush and melting snow and leave the road surface practically dry. Don't get the 'idea that the drag is not needed on your earth and gravel roads in the winter time. Instead, keep it where you can get at it readily, for if the winter is an ordinary one you will need it many times. Winter destruction begins in the early fall. The best way to prevent such destruction is to forestall it. Keep the road dry, and remember that so long as it remains so, it will not be seriously injured by frost. Keep the drains open, the ditches clear remove all vegetation and litter, and use the drag frequently. If the road libis club completed 27 garments, the is kept dry to a depth of 2 feet below the surface little trouble will be experienced from the coldest winter.

"As Ye Sow," at Alseium Theatre Saturday Evening, November 6, 1915.

'As Ye Sow," a five act photo play written Saturday's feature will be by a clergyman

The story opens in the home of a family on the coast of Cape Cod. There are two sons, one a strong, fine principled man and the other, the black sheep of the family. Frank, the latter, goes to New York and obtains a position but becomes a member of a fast set and soon, adopts their vices - Dora, a millionaire's daughter, falls in love with him and they are married. He continutes his evil associations and finally steals his own child and leaving it on the door step of his mother's home, goes off the sea in a boat.

Dora, the mother and wife, in deep grief over the loss of her child and supposed death of her husband, stops, by accident, at the home of Frank's mother whom she does not know, Frank having married her underan assumed name. The brother who is now a minister, becomes attached to her and they are about to be married when word comes of a fishing wreck One of the survivors' proves to be Frank who again ill treats his wife. He is finally killed in a fight with a former evil associate and Dora is left to continue her life in peace with their child
