

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

VOL. XLV. NO. 51.

THE RECORD, NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, JULY 14, 1916.

$1.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

RAID DISCLOSED LOAD OF LIQUOR

TWO TRUCK-LOADS OF FULLS AND EMPTIES CONFISCATED
SATURDAY NIGHT.

OTHER CITIZENS OF TOWN MAY BE IMPLICATED THROUGH UNIQUE METHOD OF OBTAIN-ING SUPPLIES.

As a result of a raid on the Park Hotel here Saturday night which netted two truck-loads of beer, whiskey and empty bottles, proprietor, Edward Shafer and bartender Fred Jennet held on charges of selling liquor illegally, and are awaiting trial in the circuit court, having been arraigned in justice court at Plymouth and bound over immediately. Bail fixed at $500 each was furnished.

Saturday night Jennet was taken, with the loads of evidence, to Plymouth, where Prosecutor Jasnowski's assistant, Paul Voorhies, was waiting. The defendant was bound over and taken in charge by Detroit authorities until bail was furnished Monday. Papers were served on Mr. Shafer Monday, he being at the lake when the raid was made.

It is reported that a federal investigation of the case will be made, following the circulation of rumors that liquor has been taken into the hotel in a rather unique manner which is far from meeting the approval of the collectors of federal liquor taxes. The alleged plan was to have the liquor consigned to various men in Northville who loaned the use of their names to the proprietor. The offense is said to consist technically of the wholesale selling liquor to another and if the case is proved, those implicated will be asked to pay the federal liquor tax, it is understood.

The raid Saturday night was made while a band concert was going on in the street, not far distant, and the sidewalks were crowded with people. None but Jennet was found in the barroom, but a number of probable customers were said to have been near the barroom entrance door ready to get inside to quench a thirst augmented by the continued drought and hot dusty weather. Northville has been dry two years.

Chief of Police Ernest Lyke of this village, assisted by Assistant Marshal Nelson Bogart and Deputy Sheriff Perrin, together with nearly 20 other deputies, comprised the raiding party. The officers claim they found a hundred or more cool plants in tempting positions on ice which were ruthlessly torn from their cool and appetizing nests.

Village President Filkins and his officers say that the citizens of the village have voted that the town should be dry and that complying with the expression of that vote he will endeavor to see that their will is carried out until a majority of the people change their minds and vote the town wet again. The raid, carried out under the direction of the prosecutor's office, was a very orderly and quiet one and no show of resistance was made by any one.

JUDGE J. D. TERRILL

Judge J. D. Terrill, whose death on July 3, was briefly mentioned in this paper last week, was a native of this vicinity, having been born in the then undivided township of Plymouth in 1841. In 1861 he enlisted in the first Michigan cavalry, and was later transferred to the Army of the Potomac. In the second battle of Bull Run he lost his right arm, and after receiving his consequent honorable discharge from the army returned to the farm near this place. In 1865 he was made chief law clerk in the comptroller's office at the national capital.

After the Spanish-American war Judge Terrill was appointed by President McKinley as Auditor for Cuba, resuming his clerkship in Washington when his work on the island was completed. He was again sent to Cuba by President Roosevelt in 1906 to audit the accounts of the Palma government and was again returned to his position in Washington, which he retained until his death.

W. T. C. U. NOTES.

(By Press Correspondent.)
The W. T. C. U. meeting will be held Monday afternoon July 17 at the home of Mrs. N. A. Clapp at 2:30. Everybody welcome. The subject: Mary H. Hunt; The good that she has done, by Mrs. F. W. Wheaton.

Popular Male Quartet to Be Heard Here on the Opening Day of the Chautauqua

HOOSIER MALE QUARTET

THE four young men composing this quartet have voices that blend with exquisite harmony, and long training has made them faultless in execution. This comment from one delighted critic reflects the universal sentiment of all who hear the Hoosier Male Quartet, who appear on the opening day of the Chautauqua, for the Hoosiers are all finished entertainers, shapers of ability and real musical artists.

Their program includes vocal solos, duets and quartets from chamber, operatic, sacred and popular compositions, together with humorous sketches, "talking songs" and monologues. The Hoosiers bring with them a concert grand xylophone, and a feature of the entertainment will be a number of melodious selections on this novel instrument.

Northville Chautauqua, July 21 to 28, inclusive.

THE SIXTH ANNUAL FAMILY REUNION

OF THE HOLMES FAMILY AT THE
OLD HOMESTEAD TWO MILES
WEST OF NORTHVILLE ON BASE LINE.

The sixth annual Holmes reunion was held July 6, at the Holmes farm about two miles west of Northville. Although the farm is in other hands, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram E. Holmes acted as host and hostess, and it goes without saying that their part was well performed. The day was perfect for the occasion and over seventy relatives gathered to "make merry." There were representatives from Northville, Novi, Howell, Detroit, Toledo, Ann Arbor, Grand Rapids, Alamosa, Colo., and Portland, Ore. The beautiful, spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes was alive inside and out with old and young. This is the farm originally "taken up" from the government in 1825 by Rosecrance Holmes, father of its present owner, Hiram R. Holmes. He and his brother, Alfred W. Holmes, Grand Rapids, are the only survivors of a family of fourteen and they are eighty-one and eighty-three respectively. The old farm house has recently been made over into a modern residence with all up-to-date conveniences and this was thrown open to the guests of the day. The present renters, Mr. and Mrs. MacIntosh, were most gracious and did all in their power to make the day one long to be remembered by the Holmes clan. The old spring, the beautiful big trees and other things of interest were visited and enjoyed.

The picnic dinner was the "best ever" and was served on the broad piazza and in the front yard. At the request of several a photographer was sent for and a group picture taken. The business meeting was of unusual interest as, after the reports of the secretary and treasurer were given, Hiram R. Holmes, better known to the company as "Uncle Hiram" told of his early days on the farm, to him the "dearest spot on earth." He described (Continued on page 4)

MRS. GEORGE VANSICKLE.

Mrs. Jennie Vansickle, 72 years of age, died at her home near Salem July 9, after an illness of two or three years' duration. The funeral in charge of Shrader Bros. was held Tuesday, with Rev. Mr. Knowles of Salem, as the officiating clergyman and interment took place in the Thayer cemetery. Mrs. Vansickle is survived by her husband.

Walled Lake Warbles.

D. L. Bently and family have moved to their farm.

The Sunday school picnic was held Tuesday at Straights Lake.

E. A. Arthur is moving his family into the Will Marx house.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Welch of Pontiac called on friends here Sunday.

Dr. Aaron Chapman has moved to Detroit, where he is practicing.

Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Compton of Pontiac were week-end visitors here.

Mr. L. M. Gould and Dorothy Rose of Mt. Clemens are visiting friends here.

Miss Helen Young is entertaining two girl friends from Detroit this week.

Mrs. John Ingersoll of Farmington visited her father the first of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Johns attended the funeral of John Crawford at Milford last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Haab and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Stanbro of Salem were Sunday visitors here.

Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Killane and Mr. and Mrs. C. Turnbull attended the Chautauqua in Pontiac Monday evening.

Alex Keith and family have moved to Commerce for the summer. Mr. Keith will work on the new road being built there.

The funeral of John Carpenter was held from the M. E. church Sunday afternoon. Mr. Carpenter died at his home in Pontiac July 7, from the ill of old age, having reached the age of 89. He had lived for 45 years on his farm near this village. Three years ago he moved to Pontiac. He leaves a widow and one son, William and a daughter, Mrs. Frank Jones, both of Pontiac. He was a member of the M. E. church here and was a highly respected citizen.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

The last day for paying village taxes is July 15. After that date 3 per cent will be added.

NORTHVILLE CHAUTAUQUA TO BE HUMMER

FIVE DAYS AND NIGHTS OF ENTERTAINMENTS—LECTURES, BAND CONCERTS, ETC.

"Sam Jones was the greatest nine-pin player that ever lived," said Col. Henry Watterson, the famous Kentucky editor, in speaking of the great evangelist. "He sets his audience up and then bows them over." This "nine-pin" characteristic of Sam Jones is emphatically illustrated in the following extract of "Dead-beats" taken from his lecture.

"On the first day comes the Hoosier Male Quartet—a group of talented musicians and gifted entertainers with novel xylophone selections and vocal quartets, duets and solos."

Appearing with the Hoosiers in the first day will be Dr. Lucian Edgar Follansbee, who will lecture on the expressive topic, "Genius and Gumption." Professor secures the attention of old and young from the first utterance and holds it until the close of his lecture. His audience returns home with truths he utters indelibly stamped upon the memory.

But fully as interesting a speaker as Dr. Follansbee, and with a message teeming with vital significance, is Hans R. Freese, who will lecture on "The Inside of Mormonism," on the second afternoon.

The youngest, hand director in the world will appear here with his band, and will give a concert as part of the fourth day's program of the Community Chautauqua.

Fully as interesting as Vitale and his band will be the appearance on the third day of Danbar's Venetian Serenaders headed by Mr. and Mrs. William Hallman. The Venetians are a musical organization of the Italian minstrel type.

Another number that will prove unusually popular because of its novel entertaining features is that of Robert F. Bowman, impersonator and character portrayal, who appears on the second night of the Chautauqua. A city peddler—an Italian selling "da banan"—a Swede, fresh from the lumber camp—a bashful country, and as one person expressed it, "A whole company of clever entertainers seem to be hidden away within the depths of Mr. Bowman's broadening table, to come and go at his call."

SEVERE TEST FOR KING

NEW YORK N. Y. — More than ten thousand miles in two weeks, day and night driving without much of a rest, the King will have a severe test. It is of course impossible to say just what the King would have done, if it had been decided to continue the run for another 10,000 miles or more. The technical men who were in charge of the test and who examined the various parts of the car at the end of the run were in doubt as to whether the King could have gone on for another 10,000 miles and another on top of that in the same consistent and efficient manner in which it negotiated the present distance without any removal of parts or any equipment. The newspaper men who were present at the conclusion of the test, who were afforded an opportunity for examining the car, confirmed this opinion. It was of course realized before the run began that it is possible to keep a modern car running almost indefinitely by renewing parts as they wear out. This was not the object of the King Motor Car Company in conducting the present test. The design in this instance was to demonstrate to the motoring public that the King car could be run for a mileage greater than the average motorist puts behind him in two years without any replacements of parts or more than ordinary adjustments. This end was easily accomplished.

EPIDEMIC OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS IN NEW YORK

Close Motion Picture Houses to All Under 16; All Sections Stricken.

NEW YORK — Volunteering by the score, physicians of New York and Brooklyn rallied to aid the municipal and state governments in their campaign against infantile paralysis, the dread disease that is causing dozens of deaths among the little ones.

The other leading all children under 16 from movie picture shows went into effect today and it is hoped that this measure will help to check the spread of the disease. Other measures of the same kind will be taken.

"SOWING AND REAPING."

The natural truth so emphasized in Holy Writ—that the harvest must inevitably be of the same nature as the seed planted—is figuratively applicable to all sorts of human experience, and nowhere more convincingly than in the matter of our personal intercourse with our fellow beings. The old first reader story of the child and the piece of colored glass illustrates this very thoroughly. Every thing must take on the colors of the particular glasses through which we view life. If our outlook leads us to discourtesy and fault-finding, we are certain to get the same in return. People who are continually looking for "slights" and "slams" always find them—or at least think that they do. On the other hand, if we go through our daily routine with cheerful hearts and sunny faces, with a supply of kind words and kindly acts always ready for use, we get our "change" in similar currency. It isn't so much what we say to people as the way we say it. Very commonplace requests are lifted above the commonplace when courteously and deferentially made—whether dererence may be really due or not. If a busy, worried, overworked public official is "cranky" to some inquirers and civil to others, it is all in the way in which he is approached. The homely old term, "soft-soap" typifies a social lubricant that makes a whole lot of life-machinery wheels run smoothly that otherwise "squeak" nerve-rackingly. Be nice to everybody and everybody will be nice to you—with very few exceptions, anyway. A crop of smiles and pleasant words is very agreeable to harvest but, like words, grows luxuriantly in all kinds of weather and never fail to produce a big crop of their kind.

As a climax to Oxford's Fourth of July doings, the entire supply of fireworks was dramatically ignited just as the fireworks display commenced. The ensuing fusillade caused several persons to faint, as the bombardment directed itself toward a crowd of three thousand people. No doubt some of the folks imagined war had begun between E and Sam. For a wonder, no one was hurt, but it probably occurred to more than one that if the money had been spent for the real victims of war it needn't have been thus wasted.

Not one death occurred in our Michigan metropolis this year as the result of patriotic fervor as expressed by explosives. Also, the number of such casualties throughout the country is reported to be under the usual average. Perhaps we are really justified in hoping that in a few generations more we will have learned, as a nation and as individuals, that "bang" and "patriotism" are not, necessarily, synonymous terms. Here's hoping.

As one solution of the traffic problem in Detroit we suggest that no automobile be allowed to park at all on Woodward avenue between Grand Circus Park and Jefferson avenue. No Autoist could reasonably object and that street above all others should be kept clear of standing vehicles of any kind.

Milford's canine population was listed at 114 and only seven of the number were left unlicensed. The unfortunate remnant probably considered it a dog gone shame that they were compelled to disembark from the voyage of life, because nobody wanted 'em badly enough to pay the tax.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

Better wages make better health?
Better health makes better citizens?
Better citizens make a better nation?
The U. S. Public Health Service found 78 per cent of the rural homes in a certain county unprovided with sanitary conveniences of any kind?
Cholera is spread in the same manner as typhoid fever?
Scarlet fever kills over 10,000 Americans every year?
Hookworm enters through the skin?
He who builds up his health lays up treasure in the Bank of Nature?

C. F. Rose, wife and daughters of Mr. Clemens visited the former's sister, Mrs. George Parker, Wednesday.

The first annual meeting and banquet of the stockholders of the Wixom Co-operative Association was held last Friday evening, with a good attendance and a fine time. The date for future annual meetings of the association was set for the first Friday in July of each year.

Gilt Edge Gatherings.

Mrs. B. Norton spent Friday night with Mrs. A. Grounher.

Mrs. B. Tuck and daughter, Helen, called on Mrs. F. Bradley Tuesday.

Helen Bradley has returned home after spending a week at Walled Lake with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Thayer of Nappanee Ind. took dinner with Mrs. John Harker and family.

Mrs. J. Barlan and children spent the Fourth at her sister's, Mrs. Fred Cook and family at Farmington.

Several people from around here attended the German picnic on the Fourth. All report a good time.

Farmington Flashes.

Mrs. Langton was in Detroit Monday.

Yorke Conroy visited his cousin, Tracy Conroy, Thursday.

Mrs. C. Aldrich of Switzer's Corners was in Detroit Saturday.

A young lady representing the Northville Chemical Co. was in town Thursday.

A number of children are employed at Bryan's fruit farm this week, picking berries.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Salbot left Thursday afternoon for an extended automobile trip.

Mrs. Hadley has gone back to Detroit, after a two months' visit at Mrs. Henry Pauline's of this place.

The Misses Dorothy Wixom and Phyllis Conroy visited friends at Switzer's Corners, Saturday.

Mr. William Wedow, a well-known resident of Novi for 34 years, died at the age of 76 on the Wedow farm at 6:30 Monday morning. He had been in ill health for the past two years. The deceased is survived by a wife and four sons, and a daughter. Three of the sons are farmers in and about Novi Township, while one son lives in Franklin and a half sister in Detroit. The funeral services were held from the home, Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Brass officiated. The burial services at Oak Hill cemetery in Farmington were conducted by the Masons.

W. R. C. NOTES.

(By Press Correspondent.)

The Annual picnic of the W. R. C. will be held Thursday afternoon July 20 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Van Tassel corner Center and Cady streets. The comrades of the G. A. R. will also receive an invitation.

There will be no more meetings of the W. R. C. until August 23, 1916. This being our annual vacation.

THE SIXTH ANNUAL FAMILY REUNION

cribed graphically how the old milk house was built and told some of the boyish pranks indulged in by himself and his brothers. He said all were more than welcome and no one had reason to doubt his statement.

The secretary reported greetings received from distant relatives and asked for reports of deaths, births and marriages that had occurred during the year. Three births, two marriages but no deaths were reported. The births are a son, Robert C. to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hare (nee Violet Stevens), daughter, Eleanor Margaret to Mr. and Mrs. Morris Stevens (nee Dorothy Youngs), and a daughter, Edna Louise to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bassett. The marriages were W. W. Sleanor and Lucy Bishop, and Paul Grandall and Lucile Briggs. A pleasant feature was that the "newlyweds" were present and rose and received the Chautauqua salute. The election of officers resulted as follows: Pres. D. P. Yerkes, Northville, vice pres. Robert L. Briggs, Toluca, and Albert B. Holmes, Detroit, Treas. W. W. Sleanor, Ann Arbor. The next year's meeting place is "Inland Park" Ann Arbor, and on the first Thursday in July.

GARRICK THEATRE, DETROIT.

Owen Davis is a playwright who possesses the happy faculty of reaching the public pulse. He has many successes to his credit and recently submitted to the Garrick Company a new comedy. Miss Bonstelle became enthusiastic over the play and will present it next week at the Garrick theatre, Detroit. If the play measures even in a few degrees with expectations it will be given a New York production by the Garrick Company next fall. Mr. Davis has cleverly combined the three elements of success required in a play—comedy, romance and melodrama.

SPLendid PROMOTION.

E. J. Burdick Made Assistant General Manager Detroit United Railway. President F. W. Brooks has appointed E. J. Burdick assistant general manager of the Detroit United Railway, the appointment taking effect July 1.

After finishing his education in Wisconsin where he was born, Mr. Burdick began work with the Brush Electrical Mfg. Co. of Cleveland and four years later his services were employed by the Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. In 1915 he severed connections with the Westinghouse and took charge of the electric apparatus of the D. U. R.

Mr. Burdick is a member of the city commission of the Board of Boiler Rules, is past president of the Detroit Engineering Society and has served the electric railway associations American and Central, in many capacities.

Mr. Burdick is thoroughly acquainted with all the properties of the Detroit United lines. His work has brought him in close touch with the details of railway practice, while his training and experience are extensive. The appointment is an extremely popular one within the company—D. U. R. News.

M. L. Thompson, of Manhattan, Kansas, 30 year old, has taken out a $5,000 20-year endowment life insurance policy in which H. V. Allman, a hotel man of that town, is named as beneficiary. In consideration of the policy Allman has agreed to furnish Thompson with board and room in his home through the summer.

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employees, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employees for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railroads be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or
2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employees are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employees as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employees, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employees, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employees, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

The old school building was destroyed by fire in February and it was necessary to make arrangement for housing the pupils. This was done by erecting a temporary building at a cost of $762.66 which gave us available quarters until such time as a new building could be erected.

Plans for a new school building were prepared and at a special meeting of the District held March 21, an issue of bonds amounting to $55,000.00 was authorized. These were sold April 1st at a premium of $1,525.00, the highest market rates then prevailing.

On June 6th contracts for the new building were awarded as follows:

General contract—Covel Construction Co., $56,500.00

Electric Wiring—Nelson, Beck & Company, $4,625.00

Heating and Ventilating—American Warming & Heating Co., $390.00

Work has already been started and the building is promised for January 1st, 1917.

The following teachers have been secured for the following year:

O. M. Misenar, Superintendent.

B. A. McCloy, Principal.

Adelia McCrea, Science.

Rufie Pinney, English and History.

Margarette Weiler, Eighth Grade.

Amey G. Peppier, Seventh Grade.

INDIVIDUALITY IN THE
OLDS BODY DESIGN

MINUTE DETAILS IN THIS SEARCH
ARE APPARENT.

Individuality in body design has a remarkable influence on motor car sales, according to Jay Hall, general sales manager of the Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Mich.

As proof of this statement Hall cites the rapid increase in Oldsmobile sales during the past two years.

In 1914 Oldsmobile production was 6,000 cars. This year, it will run approximately 12,000 and for next year a production of more than 28,000 cars is contemplated.

"With so many cars of the same or nearly the same appearance in the market," says Hall, "the distinctive Oldsmobile has a special appeal to many discriminating buyers."

"The automobile business is the same as the clothing, furniture, or any other style business, in this respect."

Men and women of discriminating choice insist upon something individual, different from the ordinary run.
They wish to be admitted for their taste, complimented upon their purchase.

In view of this fact, special effort has been made to surround the Oldsmobile with that atmosphere of elegance and distinction which is the essence of refined motor car appeal.

The contour of the body, displaying and original blending of curved surfaces and flat, the convex cowl,
the distinctive Oldsmobile radiator,
the deep and rich color combination, all combine to give the impression of "something different."

Even in minute details the search for individuality in Oldsmobile construction is apparent.

The wheels are natural wood finish, with rims painted in black, the lamps and hub caps are of special and harmonious design. Circassian walnut used for the interior wood work throughout, not an item which might contribute to the special effect sought by the designers has been overlooked.

Judged, by results, the effort has been well worth while, and, with the passing of the selling seasons, promises to become increasingly worth while.

"If you be different"
Ask the F. S. Neal Agency at Northville to give you a demonstration.

CHAPTER I.

EVELYN GRANGE is one of the show places of Long Island. It occupies a hill crest commanding the great Hempstead plains, made beautiful by its fine gradations of distance and color. To the left lies the wooded rolling country of Wheatley Hills, and but a few motor miles away the blue waters of the Sound indent the island's shore. The house—a vast edifice of pale red brick with white trim—possesses terraces bordered by marble balustrades, descending in steep succession, each a giant step of flowers, divided down the middle by a marble staircase alternating with pebbled pathways. The right wing of the mansion is devoted to the luxurious housing of its guests. The left wing contains the servants' quarters and the necessary array of kitchens. Detached buildings for squash and bowls offer exercise and pleasure for dark and sultry days. In the distance the great bulk of the stables lies shrouded in huge trees, whence a faint rapping from the crowded kennels is almost always audible.

It was Wendham's first visit to the Grange, and as he drove up the long leaf-strewn road in the gathering dusk, he was unprepared for the imposing structure that met his sight. "Really," he said to Mrs. Lawdon who had arrived on the same train, and sat beside him, enveloped in champagne and grey veils, "a little should go with it. Does it seem the proper thing for just a plain Mister, does it?"

"Do you think anything is too fine for the American gentleman?" she answered.

Wendham was clad in the growing dusk hid his smile. "Really, I wasn't quite serious about it," he answered, "and I've been away so long, you see, that I've grown contented."

She nodded. "Charlie told me you'd been in Europe a long time—four years, wasn't it?"

"Four years," he echoed thoughtfully, "and what happens?"

"And Charlie married!" she put out her tongue. "It seems to me they were sent to Vienna or somewhere like that."

"Yes, I married them—about six months ago."

"Then there's the Roskitch divorce—that must have surprised you—and Nellie Gaynor's a widow now, you know."

She paused abruptly, evidently recalling the gossip that linked Wendham's hasty departure with the marriage of the lovely Nellie. "Doesn't look heartbroken," she commented to herself as she turned to examine his expression under cover of adjusting the passing landscape. She saw a strong, broad, keen-eyed man of powerful build, whose hair, though prematurely grey, did not age his appearance. "He is the blue-sky type, isn't he, Pat?" she said to Mrs. Lawdon's maid and things there when they came. "And Nellie—see who's here—Boyd, Wendham! Arise and make salutations!"

A tall, slender, white-clad woman rose from behind the elaborate tea-table where she had been presiding, and advanced cordially. "Oh, Boyd!" she exclaimed, "it is good to see you." Her lovely, high-bred face lost its cameo whiteness in a soft flush of pleasure, while her dark, heavily-ringed eyes lighted as from within. Wendham took her extended hand, and the old emotion that the years had not lessened, flooded his heart once more. "Mrs. Gaynor," he stammered, "this is indeed a pleasure." She laughed reprovingly. "Mrs. Gaynor, is it? Dr. Wendham! Arise and make salutations!"

"No, I didn't happen to see her in Europe. My specialties—I'm a physician, you know—kept me in Vienna, but I'm looking forward to renewing an old friendship. I've had a glimpse of her, of course, since I've been back, but only for a moment. He spoke so naturally that Mrs. Lawdon was disappointed. She glanced at his companion, wondering how that astute coiffure butler, Charlie Lawdon, had ever been so "let in." The whole surface of the world had been rippled by the plunge of this particular little cloud into its distilled and filtered depths. There was no denying Mrs. Lawdon's gaudy and perfumed plebeianism.

"Do you know Mrs. Evelyn well?" she asked abruptly. "I've only met her once or twice, but they're old friends of yours, aren't they?"

"They are two of the best I have," he answered. "Cass and I were college mates—and Pat, oh well, I remember her with long red silk legs and short brown silk braids, she laughed ridiculously. 'She was a funny child, always tired; she was born tired—but, here we are; let me help you.'"

The carriage drew up before the main entrance, whose white columns seemed vast in the soft electric illumination from the dull glass globes guarding the doorway. The footman rang the bell and returned for Wendham's simple suitcase and Mrs. Lawdon's elaborate traveling emphysemata. The rest of her collection was in charge of her maid, due later in the servant's trap. A large black trunk, however, she had insisted should accompany her; indeed, the valued millinery must not be out of her sight, and with dimculty it had been installed, to the detriment of the speckless knees of the footman, who now deposited it resolutely upon the veranda.

The door swung open, revealing the subdued, rich tones of the interior, where the glow of antique velvet, heavy with tarnished embroideries, met the eye. Grape-wood torsion columns of the Spanish renaissance formed the doorway, while a dreamy-eyed madonna of the sixteenth century smiled from a canvas that filled the wall space by the stairs, two macaws of ostentatious plumage, swung in gilded rings, adding a final touch of old world eccentricity.

The new arrivals entered, and a moment later Mrs. Evelyn, in a floating tea gown, was extending languid greetings. Evelyn, however, made up in heartiness for his wife's tepid cordiality. "Nobody minded Pat's anyway, it was just her way," Mrs. Lawdon, not being familiar with her hostess's peculiarities, at once took umbrage. Only the joy of being within the Evelyns' exclusive portals prevented her from immediate rudeness. She contented herself with a menial note to "let even," and heighly devoted herself to Mrs. Evelyn and Alice Rawlins, who entered in her cross-country, riding trousers, high boots and gray frock coat, as alert and vigorous as a young Amazon.

"Hello, Kate, have some tea, have a highball! Pat, there, will never think to ask you. Better warm up a bit before we go to bed up as the country say. Oh, Boyd, it's bully to meet you again. Of course Cass looked out for you—I saw it in your eye. But it takes the new woman to look out for herself. What, ho!"

"WHAT A PEACH," MISS RAWLINS EXCLAIMED.

James! What's yours, Kate—tea? James, take Mrs. Lawdon's tea, and send them up to the blue suite. It is the blue suite, isn't it, Pat? And send Mrs. Lawdon's maid and things there when they come. And Nellie—see who's here—Boyd, Wendham! Arise and make salutations!"

A tall, slender, white-clad woman rose from behind the elaborate tea-table where she had been presiding, and advanced cordially. "Oh, Boyd!" she exclaimed, "it is good to see you." "Oh, nothing much—I suppose you know I've gone in for racing a good deal." He looked at her in surprise. "Oh," she added hastily, "I had to make my living, and I was left part owner of a racing stable when my husband died. I've been very successful, didn't you know? I'm very busy and my correspondence alone is enough to wear me out."

"That reminds me," he said abruptly, "I was entrusted with something for you. Let me give it to you now, before I forget it." From an inner pocket he drew forth a thin, foreign-stamped letter. "It came while I was with the Mortimers, and Evelyn forgot to mail it. I was entrusted with it as a sort of object lesson to forgetful husbands."

CHAPTER II.

Mrs. Gaynor received the letter and looked at the address. She paled; her eyes sought his face in a swift glance.

"No, not for me, after all," she said, laughing unreasonably. "And not a spot left on which to read—address! I must enclose it, I suppose. Forget it for a week, at least, because I haven't an envelope to fit. You know how it is—I'm sure I don't know why I allow my friends to make such a nuisance of a convenience of me." She thrust the letter securely into her belt.

"Good nature is hard on its possessor," he answered. "Your friend, by the way, has a name very familiar to me, but I can't place it."

Mrs. Gaynor's eyes narrowed. "You don't recall where you met her? Abroad, perhaps, I knew her there—a sort of nomad. She's traveling out West now. You see," she added nervously, "any important mail, remittances and things, she had ordered sent to me, and I forward as she advises—but it's rather a burden."

"Your description doesn't help me," he mused. "And, after all, I'm rather rude, to inquire into your friend's affairs."

"Not at all—nothing is rude but to be a friend," she smiled. She smiled upon him her old brilliant smile of conquest. He was suddenly elevated to the dizzy height of close companionship. Her manner included him in her chosen circle. The name of her strange correspondent vanished from his mind, and he was conscious only of the compelling magnetism of her presence.

The letter was of short duration, however. Evelyn whiskey and soda in hand ignored them.

"Well, Wendham, so you're just from the Mortimers. Are they over the excitement yet? Pat tells me they're almost given up entertaining since the robbery. That's foolish; nobody blames them, and if Mrs. Treadwell will tour the provinces, she can't expect her hosts to supply her with a body guard. I told her that when she was here."

"She didn't seem much put out, I noticed," said Alice from across the room. "She had on a new pearl ring that was just coming in a cable."

"New pearls," said Mrs. Evelyn, scornfully. "Mrs. Lawdon enjoyed the conversation at high pitch. That's what I think Mrs. Evelyn. If a person has good things, for heaven's sake wear them!" She fingered her cap with her left hand, and it flashed in the lamplight. My husband is always after me to have replicas, but I do think that sort of thing is the very height of bad taste, don't you?"

"You ought to see Kate get for her," said Alice to Mrs. Gaynor. "If Sally Treadwell is the only original Christmas tree."

Alice said the hostess's remark, but far from being offended, Mrs. Lawdon was charmed. "Dear me, I haven't so very much. Charlie has been awfully nice, and he knows I love pretty things, but really—"

"Well, all I ask," said Alice, rising to kick a rug into place, "is that you'll let me have them to play with, with my very own hands. I've never forgotten you as the Queen of Sheba at Mrs. Todd's costume dinner. No one talked of anything else for the week after. That reminds me, Pat, the Todds telephoned over to know who was going to the races to-morrow, and what your plans were."

"I said something about letting you have their extra motor if yours was still out of order."

"Oh, thanks," said Mrs. Evelyn. "Of course Nellie and Dr. Wendham will go and Mrs. Lawdon and Charlie, if he comes. Madge will be over from the Lesbis with us—"

Which means that I stay at home," interrupted Alice. "I would be smothered by the same gasoline. How I hate that little moth eaten, fan-eared, washed-out, forked-tongued gossip!"

"Very well," Mrs. Evelyn agreed imperturbably. With me, that makes six. Our little motor will take four and the rest can go in the Todds'. Alfred?" she called to a passing servant, "ring up Mrs. Todd and tell her Mrs. Evelyn will be very glad to have the use of her motor to-morrow. That's all settled," she sighed, as though the most weighty issue of international affairs had at last been decided.

"What kind of a card have they got?" asked Alice, somewhat chagrined by the prompt acceptance of her resignation, and addressing herself to Mrs. Gaynor.

"Very fair," Nellie moved from Dr. Wendham's side toward the central group. "Ventador, for the first race, Miller up, Bay Side and Quarterly ought to make a good finish. But if you want a ten-to-one shot play Tridant in the fourth. I think awfully well of him, he's been doing great work."

The very simplicity of her manner and voice as she spoke hurt Wendham—the revolt in him of his Puritan ancestry at this manifestation of the emancipation of the modern woman.

"Trident," said Billy Lough's old skate. He told him for a song. "Whose tip are you playing?" Evelyn asked.

"Sold for a song because Billy doesn't know a horse from a mowing machine, and because Stacy does. He's part owner now, for one thing, and any one knows that Stacy isn't buying skates—except for his ice pond. Alice's voice had a ring of defense and Evelyn laughed good-humoredly.

"Of course, if Stacy has given Nellie the tip, there's nothing more to be said. Aren't you jealous, Alice, that Nellie knows as much of Stacy's affairs as you do?"

Alice Rawlins buried her nose in her glass and granted a most unladylike disapproval. "I like a man to know his own business thoroughly, and Stacy does," she replied. "One for you," said Wendham to his host.

"Who is this Stacy?" inquired Mrs. Lawdon.

"Stacy," answered Evelyn with a grin at Miss Rawlins, "is Laughlin's right-hand horseman, and Alice's right hand—groom—at her bridge-club. Alice, don't whack my fingers. He's a brick, anyhow."

Mrs. Gaynor sat down wearily, passing her hand across her brow with a gesture of distress. "Dear me," she exclaimed, "how tired I am! I didn't believe I could be so tired. I really must take a vacation in bed soon."

"Well," observed Mrs. Evelyn, "it's your own fault a dozen times over. Fancy, Alice, she's so attached to that silly little maid of hers—"

"That silly little maid," as you call her," interrupted Mrs. Gaynor, "had the devotion to stay with me through thick and thin when I couldn't pay her wages, and she was in wretched health besides."

"Which is no excuse for your rubbing her head for her when she has neuralgia and even time you do it exhausts you. Did you ever hear of anything so foolish? Hire a masseur for her if you want to. You tire yourself, and it's undignified."

Nellie shrugged expressively—and moved toward the staircase. Wendham followed her. "Just a word," he called gently. "Let down the strings of the violin if you would keep its tone."

CHAPTER III.

Mrs. Lawdon put down her book and smiled a fluttered welcome as Mrs. Gaynor sank into a plusher velvet chair for Mrs. Lawdon, though pretty and blessed with her share of the world's goods compared with the share of numerous others, not so fortunate, fully realized that the war far from gratifying that inner circle of society to which Nellie Gaynor's multiple charms added lustre here was a golden opportunity to secure a valuable acquaintance.

"I am surprised you didn't go to the races, Mrs. Gaynor," she remarked, sure that this opening must lead to further conversation. "The lady smiled. 'Yes, Alice sits by the fire hardly seems my role does it?' To-day should have been Alice's sleep-by-the-fire. The truth is that for once in my life I was too tired." She leaned her rippled golden head against the cushions and half-closed her eyes. Deep weariness was stamped on her perfect features.

Mrs. Lawdon took notice, wondering whether sympathy would be resented, or if good form required her to assure the sufferer of her unaltered loveliness. She decided upon the latter.

"Tired! One would never believe it. You are positively radiant!" she exclaimed with enthusiasm.

Nellie Gaynor opened her eyes; a smile flickered upon her lips. "You are too kind," she murmured. "And you, don't you care for racing?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," cried Mrs. Lawdon, hastening to resent the implication that so fashionable a sport was not to her liking. "I love it, but I felt as if I'd caught cold last night—you know that cold drive from the station—so that I feared to sit on the clubhouse lawn, and there's no use being inside. Charlie is playing a few bets for me. I'm playing Roseben."

"Mr. Evelyn will excuse my card," Mrs. Gaynor shifted slightly. "You see I've made it quite a business. When my husband died his estate was heavily involved, so I took over the stable after I came back from Europe."

"Yes, indeed," cried Mrs. Lawdon, delighted with the intimate tone of the conversation. "I heard so much of you before I met you, you know. You're quite a plunger. Charlie told me you took twenty thousand out of the Metropolitan handicap one year, and no one knew until afterwards that you had a heavy interest."

"Oh, not so much as that," Nellie laughed. "No one knew, because my two biggest bets were 'on the side.' Mrs. Gaynor touched a string of pearls clasped by a scintillating ruby and diamond snap. "Part of that killing went into this. But, dear me, they would hardly interest you. I'm going to ask you to let me see your jewels some day. Your emeralds are simply astonishing, I hear."

The little parvenu flushed with pleasure. "Would you care to, really? Then why not now? Alice wants to see them, too. She's in the squash court. Come up to my sitting room and I'll send for her." She rose, fluttering. Mrs. Gaynor followed languidly. A touch upon the electric bell brought Mrs. Lawdon's maid, who was despatched in search of the energetic Mrs. Rawlins. "You know," twittered the hostess of a moment as the two ladies settled themselves in Mrs. Lawdon's sitting room, "it's really an awful responsibility, all this stuff, and since the affair at the Mortimers, when Mrs. Treadwell's pearls simply vanished, I've been nervous."

"It was odd," Mrs. Gaynor agreed. "I'd been spending the week end there, just before it happened. Their butler was drunk half of the time, and there isn't the slightest doubt in my mind that he failed to lock up securely. The only reason nothing else was taken was that the thieves were frightened. The Mortimers have three Pomeranians, you know, and though no one heard them bark, the burglars may have known that they were about the house, and made off with one good

"I told the second maid I'd help her with these rooms," she replied. "Of course, you did," approved Mrs. Gaynor. "That's quite right always make yourself useful in the houses where we visit—but you look tired."

"Yes, Madame," the girl answered, and followed her mistress meekly. (To Be Continued.)

When the night is beginning to lower—
Comes a pause in the day's occupation—
That is known as the cocktail hour."

Mrs. Gaynor laughed as she rose. "What a child!" she said. "What a naughty child! Well, I must be going. It's late and I want to rest before I dress for dinner. Thank you so much, Mrs. Lawdon. I did enjoy seeing your pretty things—and your jewel case is a dream."

She waved a light farewell as she departed in the direction of her own suite in the main building. At the end of the hall a servant's staircase gave unobtrusively entrance to the Annex. As she passed it the door swung open, admitting her maid. Mrs. Gaynor started. "Adele! I was just going to ring for you."

"I told the second maid I'd help her with these rooms," she replied. "Of course, you did," approved Mrs. Gaynor. "That's quite right always make yourself useful in the houses where we visit—but you look tired."

"Yes, Madame," the girl answered, and followed her mistress meekly. (To Be Continued.)

RABBIT IS LOCAL WONDER.

Family Pet Goes Through Many Remarkable Tricks.

Seattle, Wash.—Benjamin Bunny is Seattle's smartest rabbit. He is large in size, mottled and white in color and so intelligent that his mistress, Miss Alice Warner, challenges the world to produce his equal.

Miss Warner is at present a student at Garfield College, Northfield, Minn., but during her absence the members of her family have not neglected Benjamin's education, so that his present repertoire of tricks is, for a rabbit, somewhat extensive.

Benjamin can and will do the following amusing things:

Play hide and seek with the children, apparently laughing heartily at the frolic.

When told it is "bedtime for bunnies" he runs across the lawn and flatters himself on the grass.

When told to dig a hole he will go to work instantly and quits only at a stern command, if not told to dig a hole, he digs twice a day, anyway, being methodical in his pleasure.

When left alone never leaves the house, indicated by some member of the family.

Is a boon companion of a cat named Kelly (no, the cat won't eat the rabbit because a rabbit has a kick in his hind legs like a mule), and how the Warners are trying to teach the cat to pat the rabbit.

Benjamin's favorite dainties are raspberry jam and custard. His diet includes carrots, but he does not think much of them—white crackers and a potato a day he must have the potato to be happy.

Benjamin was brought to the Warner home four years ago on Valentine's Day. The day after he arrived Mr. Warner commenced teaching him, telling him he would have to sit up if he wanted his head rubbed. In ten minutes Benjamin had learned the trick and purred contentedly during the massage.

Benjamin is reputed to be a full-blooded Dutch rabbit, and the Warners say they have never found another marked as he is or half so smart.

ONE MISHAP CANCELS OTHER.

First Fall Shortens One Leg, Second Equalizes Them.

Des Moines, Iowa.—Fifteen years ago Frank Cervati fell and broke his left leg. When the bones mended the leg was two inches shorter than the other. About ten weeks ago he again slipped and fell, this time breaking his right leg. When released from the Iowa Industrial Hospital Cervati was able to walk again and found that both his legs were now exactly the same length.

"It's a better job than surgery could have done," said the hospital medical men.

"NOBODY LOVES A FAT MAN?"

Huge Virginian Says Old Saying is False One.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—R. Westerman, who weighs 455 pounds and claims to be the heaviest man in the state, recently married Miss Irma Cavin, who tips the scales at 119 pounds. The couple will live on Westerman's farm near here.

The romance started in a hospital where Westerman was a patient. Miss Cavin was a nurse. Mrs. Westerman says there is absolutely no truth in the old saying that "nobody loves a fat man."

CHICKEN COMES HOME TO ROOST.

No, Not a Barred Rock; Simply a Common "Clocker."

Olds, Alberta.—A family near here sold a number of hens to a neighbor who lives some little distance away. In the pack was a "clocker," which was marked before being sent away. In the evening of the following day they heard a clucking in the hen house. Investigating they found the "clocker" in her old nest. She had come back across country, a distance of three or four miles. One on the intelligence of the Barred Rocks.

WAR ONLY AS LAST RESORT SAYS WILSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Special—There will be no war with Mexico, unless Cahanza precipitates hostilities by attacking the American army. Even then the president will endeavor to avert a general conflict between the two countries.

Without doubt the effect of the note has been to relax still further the diplomatic tension between the two governments.

Disposition of the national guard organizations will continue along the fully developed plan worked out by General Funston and which has the hearty approval of the army general staff. While the troops sent to the western department or to the department of New Mexico, will pass under the commands of the heads of those departments; they will go to stations previously selected by General Funston. Any rearrangement which may be necessary later will be made after conference between the three border commanders hereafter.

General staff officials believe the result will be highly beneficial since the mass of administrative work with which General Funston now is burdened will be lightened and he will have more time for observation and have more time for keeping in direct personal touch with the situation along his lines.

BLUE RIBBON RACES

At Detroit, the races will be swift this season. The stakes for the Blue Ribbon Races are the best known of any in the Grand Circuit. They are the subject of conversation and written stories from the start of the season to that of the next. Always you see or hear something of the famous M & M. It is well known that nothing of the superior horse, or one of less merit, but driven by a top notcher in his profession can win either of the races, and for that reason some of the owners of horses that must be conceded, chances are a bit shy of tackling these classes. There seems to be more class in the great this year than ever in the past. The changed conditions will make the M & M and the rest of the Blue Ribbon affairs speed fast for the horses and others. Don't miss the event!

FUR CENTER OF WORLD SHIFTS TO ST. LOUIS

Sales of More Than $1,000,000 in Four Days are Reported—Big Future Seen

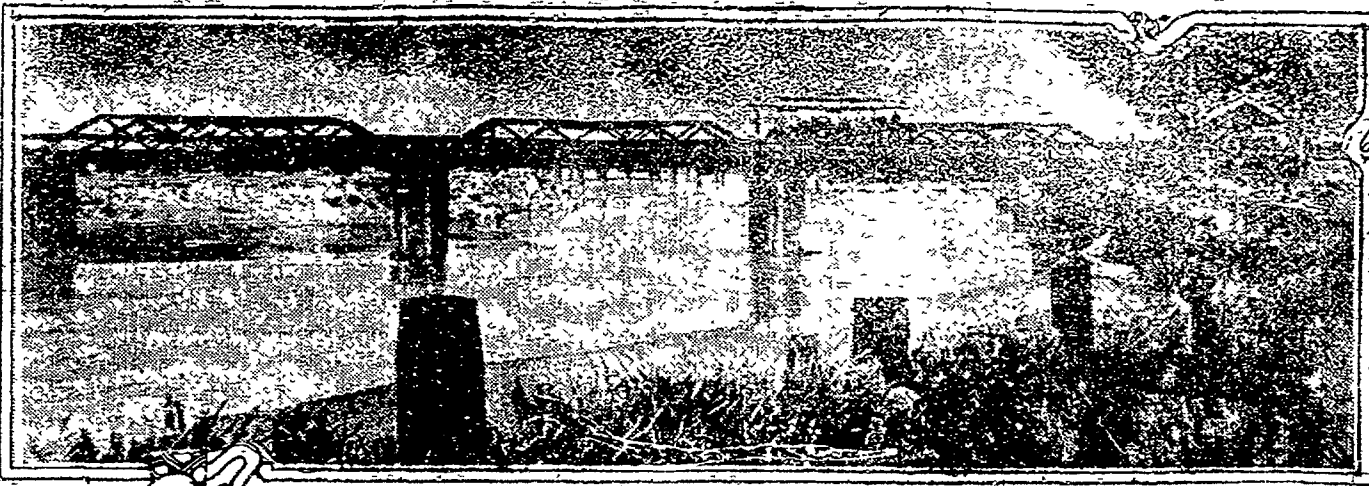

St. Louis, Mo.—The world's great central fur market has shifted. It used to be in London, England. It is now in St. Louis. The million dollar fur sale held here recently, at the Fursten Fur Exchange, announced this new era in the fur business. What this achievement means to the United States can best be realized by noting the effect on the great traders who control the world's fur business. They were all there. All the large fur houses of France, Russia, Germany and other European countries, as well as those of Canada and the United States, had their expert buyers on the floor of the exchange. Over 300 of them came in a special train of their own.

The bidding was spirited and competition keen. In the four days of the sale over a million dollars worth of furs changed hands.

The scene on the exchange floor was not unlike a legislative chamber. Each of the 300 expert buyers sat behind his own desk facing the elevated court like bench of the auctioneer. Pages and messenger boys scurried about. The selling was rapid and exciting. A bid of a dollar might actually be a bid of a thousand, if the lot happened to be one in which there were a thousand pelts. In the same way, a 10-cent raise might easily mean a cool hundred dollars. Yet the buyers, seasoned veterans, took all the excitement calmly enough. The sale of a single pair of silver fox skins for $2,350 did bring a ripple of applause. For such skins to bring $1,820 and $1,990 was a mere nothing. The furs of fifteen different countries were represented at all kinds of prices—from 6 cents upward. The prices for the fur of carabon blue and black house cats went up as high as 46 cents each and the demand was lively. On the whole, the prices commanded were high, in some cases showing an advance of 20 per cent over last year. Domestic skins from American trap pers were much in evidence.

Among the buyers present were experts representing Goetz Freres, Paris; J. Aronowitch & Co., Moscow; The Eltington Schild Co., another Russian concern; G. Gaudin & Blum, Theodore Thore, Inc., Otto Eriker and H. Jack el Sons, all German fur companies; H. M. Koenigswecker of Leipzig; The T. Eaton Co. of Winnipeg, and many others.

BORDER SCENES DEPICTING INCIDENTS IN THE MEXICAN SITUATION.

INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE CONNECTING EL PASO, TEXAS, AND EL PASO, MEXICO

SEARCHING SUSPECTED RIFES IN EL PASO, TEXAS

One of the above pictures shows American troops searching suspected Mexicans in El Paso, the American border town which has witnessed great excitement since the calling out of the National Guard. The other scene shows the international bridge, which is now being guarded by a heavy patrol of United States soldiers.

CARRANZA'S REPLY TO NOTE SENT BY THE UNITED STATES

The text of the note as translated by Eliseo Ornelando, the Mexican ambassador designate, follows:

Washington, July 4, 1916
"Mr. Secretary—I have the honor to transmit in continuation the text of a note I have just received from my government with instructions to present it to your excellency:

"Mr. Secretary—Referring to the notes of June 20 and 25 last, I have the honor to say to your excellency that the immediate release of the Carrizal prisoners was a further proof of the sincerity of the desires of this government to reach a pacific and satisfactory arrangement of the present difficulties. This government is anxious to solve the present conflict, and it would be unjust if its attitude were misinterpreted.

"It was also the Mexican government that earnestly suggested a plan for conferences along the boundary line during the conferences of Ciudad Juarez and El Paso. This government is disposed now, as it has always been, to seek an immediate solution of the two points which constitute the true causes of the conflict between the two countries. To the American government believes reasonably, that the insecurity of its frontier is a source of difficulty, and the Mexican government, on its part, believes that the stay of American troops on Mexican soil, aside from being a trespass on the sovereignty of Mexico, is the immediate cause of the conflict. Therefore the withdrawal of American troops on one hand and the protection of the frontier on the other are the two essential problems, the solution of which must be the directing object of the efforts of both governments.

"The Mexican government is willing to consider in a quick and practical way, and prompted by a spirit of conciliation, the remedies which should be applied to the present situation. Several Latin American countries have offered their friendly mediation to the Mexican government, and the latter has accepted it. Therefore the Mexican government only awaits information that the government of the United States would be disposed to accept this mediation for the purpose mentioned above or whether it is still of the belief that the same results may be attained by means of direct negotiations between both governments.

"In the meantime, this government proposes to employ all efforts that may be at its disposal to avoid the recurrence of new incidents which may complicate and aggravate the situation. At the same time, it hopes that the American government, on its part, may make use of all efforts to prevent also new acts of its military and civil authorities of the frontier that might cause new complications.

"I avail myself of this opportunity to get state to your excellency the assurance of my most distinguished consideration.

(Signed) "ARRENDONDO"
"Having thus complied with the higher instructions of my government, I afford me the pleasure to return to you excellency the assurance of my highest consideration."
(Signed) "ARRENDONDO"

BEST SUGAR ACREAGE ESTIMATED AT 758,500

WASHINGTON—Estimates made today by the department of agriculture put the 1916 best sugar acreage at 758,500 acres. This is 101,200 more than in 1915 and 254,000 more than in 1914.

Hatford City, Ind.—A very impolite burglar visited the home of Chas. Russell. After ransacking the house he departed, leaving the front door open. Cold wind and snow blowing in, awakened the family.

LINEN FAMINE TO RESULT FROM THE WAR

"Cotton Age" Overtakes Toledoans on Account of Scarcity of Flax. The death of flax, the result of the European war, is a very serious matter to the world's linen industry and as a consequence, linen manufacturers of all kinds are now facing a very serious situation.

Policy makers for the big stores who have kept themselves familiar with the pulse of the linen market agree on this, and they go so far as to predict that it will be at least two or three years after the close of the conflict ere anything like normal conditions will be restored.

MAN MADE PRISONER BY CATS

Locked In Barn by His Pair of Playful Pets

Means, Mich.—Ola Pearson was imprisoned in his barn by a cat. The other night he went into the stable to milk, and the two barn cats in chasing each other playfully around the door managed to slide the wooden bolt on the outside. He called lustily for someone to come and open the door, but the cats, in some distance from the barn, and no one near him, he finally contrived to wriggle out thru a live window.

Individuality

Oldsmobile Eight has an individuality of its own. Oldsmobile sets its own styles—never follows the crowd. That is one reason why each year's models, though improved, do not discredit last year's cars by marked differences of design. An Oldsmobile is a permanent investment.
