

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

VOL. XLVII. NO. 19.

THE RECORD: NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1916.

$1.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

TWO DANCING PARTIES IN NEAR FUTURE

BAND TO GIVE ONE ON FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 29.

ORDER EASTERN STAR WILL GIVE ONE WEDNESDAY EVENING JAN.
24, 1917.

After a dearth of dancing parties, Northville is promised two big affairs in the near future.

The Northville City Band will give the first dance, Dec. 29, which will take the form of a New Year's party. A six piece orchestra is promised which will furnish snappy up-to-date music. The rink, as usual will be the scene of action. A good time and a boost for the band is assured.

On Wednesday evening Jan. 24, the Eastern Stars will give another of their enjoyable parties, also in the rink. Thought the efforts of the committee in charge the services of Fischer's orchestra of Kalamazoo, has been secured, which will undoubtedly make this dance the biggest of the season.

ACCOMPLISHED HORSE KILLED.

"Old Charlie" one of the most intelligent and accomplished equine "citizens" that ever lived in Northville, was painlessly killed Sunday. The horse was raised by the late Morell Simmons on his farm in Novi and some time after the family moved to Northville, was given by Mr. Simmons to his daughter, Mrs. B. E. Miller, who is an accomplished driver, and who has successfully participated with Charlie in several driving contests. The horse was very spirited as well as intelligent and continued so to the last of his thirty years, or thereabouts. He would, when driven to the barn door, unfasten and open it, and then, on entering, would turn on the electric light as deftly as a "human person." Charlie was taken sick a few days ago and because of his extreme age it was thought best to put an end to his life and spare him further suffering. Naturally the members of the family feel that they have lost a valued friend.

OLDEST STEEPLE JACK IN STATE.

It is believed that Northville has the oldest "Steeple Jack" in the state in the person of Theodore W. Wood, who has been engaged this week in repainting the spire of the Methodist church, which is the highest in town. Mr. Wood has passed his 73rd birthday, but seems to be the only painter in this section who will undertake any jobs which require going up so far above ground. It is certainly rather a remarkable feat for a man of his age.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Considerable interest has been manifested in the Record's article of last week relative to making a public park of the maple grove east of Oakwood cemetery. One citizen offers the suggestion that instead of an ordinary fence to separate the grove from the burial ground, a handsome hedge would be the proper thing, as once planted it would last forever if properly cared for, and would also be much more ornamental than a fence, and no more expensive.

NOTICE.

Beginning December 1st we will make our town delivery the first thing in the morning. All orders must be in the night before.

SPECIAL ELECTION OF THIS SCHOOL DISTRICT

THE QUESTION OF MORE BONDS TO BE VOTED ON.

NECESSARY TO RAISE $15,000 TO EQUIP BUILDING.

Elsewhere in this issue, notice of a special election of school district No. 2, fractional, which is to be held next week Thursday, for the purpose of issuing additional bonds for the completion and furnishing of the new school building.

When the matter was taken up with the architect J. E. Mills & Son, soon after the fire in February, they drew plans for the present building, and was very positive that the entire cost would not exceed $50,000. The board added $5,000 more, to be certain that all items would be covered. When the bids were received, the lowest one for the general contract was $56,800, heating and ventilating $6,090, electric wiring $14,625. This makes a total of $64,362.50. The board did not feel that any better offers could be made, and did not like to run the risk of readvertising in the hope of getting more favorable bids. In the light of subsequent events, it was well that they did not wait, because of the rising cost of materials and labor.

The Laboratory furniture, new seating for the High school room, and class rooms, some additional electric wiring, a program of equipment, and the architect's fees, make the cost $70,000, or better.

The items of new sewer and grading will also have to be attended to. To cover all these charges there has been received the proceeds of the first bond issue $56,525, and the insurance of $5,076.38, which makes a total of $61,601.38. Out of this sum it was necessary to use $2,500 to pay up the balance of loans which had been standing against the district.

The board, therefore, estimates the amount needed to properly furnish the building, and have it complete in all respects, to be $15,000. The minutes of the board meetings show that their members have labored diligently to provide a first-class school building, and one that would be approved by the community, and give patrons a modern school for their children.

All material and work have been rigidly inspected, so that the property owners may rest assured that they have the finest building which their money can secure. The excellence of the work done has been commented upon favorably by the best posted business men in the town.

The board feels certain that their will be no objection to this present issue of bonds, and will accept a favorable vote as backing them, in the very heavy responsibility for this piece of public work.

FULL VALUE FOR GOOD ROADS AID

GOVERNMENT ADOPTS ELABORATE PLANS TO SAFEGUARD SPENDING OF THE $75,000,000

DOLLARS WORTH FOR EVERY DOLLAR

Money to Be Spent in Co-operation With States Only Where Traffic Needs It.

Washington—Elaborate plans to prevent the diversion into improper channels of any part of the $75,000,000, which the Federal Government is to spend in co-operation with States on good roads within the next five years, have been made by Logan Waller Page, director of the Office of Public Roads and Rural Engineering, which will supervise the work.

The Government is determined, officials say, that there shall be no repetition of lax methods and waste which have characterized building of roads in many sections, and that a dollar's worth of road bed shall be constructed for every dollar spent. Further, the public roads office is preparing to see to it that the roads for which the Government money is spent are places where the traffic demand is the heaviest and not where politicians or others desire them.

The plans designed to prevent abuses are covered largely in rules and regulations promulgated by Secretary Houston, of the Department of Agriculture, under authority conferred by the Federal Aid Road Act. The rules, which outline the methods by which the Federal Government shall aid the States in the construction of highways, provide that detailed information in reference to the proposed construction and maintenance shall be furnished to the Secretary of Agriculture before any agreements are made.

When the plans of a State for road building, accompanied by a request for Federal aid are received, they will be fully investigated by Government agents, and, if acceptable, the State will receive from the Government its apportionment of the appropriation made for the purpose. Under the terms of the act, the Federal Government pays the bill for one-half the cost and the State pays the other half.

Project statements made to the department, according to the rules and regulations, are required to contain "all information necessary to enable the Secretary to ascertain (a) whether the project conforms to the requirements of the act; (b) whether adequate funds, or their equivalent, are or will be available by or on behalf of the State for construction; (c) what purpose the project will serve and how it correlates with other highway work of the State; (d) the administrative control of, and responsibility for, the project; (e) the practicability and economy of the project from an engineering and construction standpoint; (f) the adequacy of the plans and provisions for proper maintenance of roads, and (g) the approximate amount of Federal aid desired."

With each statement there must be submitted for the approval of the Secretary copies of the forms of contract, together with all documents referred to therein, and the contractor's bond.

If a contract should be awarded to any other than the lowest responsible bidder the Government will not pay more than its pro rata of the lowest bid, unless it can be satisfactorily shown that it was advantageous to the work to accept the higher bid. Copies of all contracts must be certified by the respective State highway departments and furnished the office of the public roads, and specifications and plans must be made a part of all contracts.

Unless otherwise specified in writing by the Secretary of Agriculture, materials for construction, prior to use, must be tested for conformity with specifications.

The office of public roads will, as far as is practicable, endeavor to have the roads of one State connect with those of another. The effort will be to have the roads continuous in States, and patches here and patches there will not be constructed out of any of the Federal money unless they should be in localities where the traffic is heavy and the demand great. For instance, in some cases plans for roads branching out from market or industrial centers to thickly populated sections would be acceptable to the Government regardless of whether they connect with other market or industrial centers.

Two of MacMillan Rescue Crew Nearly Perish in 20-Mile Dash for a Smoke.

Boston, Mass.—A grim game with death—the stake, a pipeful of tobacco. Never was there a stranger Polar dash than this that a Lynn man made to satisfy his craving for a smoke. And it all occurred in the Cluett relief expedition, seeking MacMillan.

Twenty miles away in an Eskimo hut was the tobacco. A fearful icy waste, broken only by a treacherous 7-mile-wide glacier, lay between. The thermometer registered 60 degrees below. He took the chance and played with death.

Just one of the gripping yarns that Melrose Cotton tells is this—fully as gripping as the eternal cold of the region from which he returned recently.

"It was at Parker Snow Bay that the incident of the tobacco occurred," Cotton said. "You smoke, eh? Well, you know how it feels when you're off in camp somewhere and discover you're out of tobacco. Seems like unbearable torture to wait until the following morning."

"That's how a sailor man named Taylor, whom we picked up at Sydney, felt—only a thousand times worse when he found that he had smoked up his whole allotment of tobacco. And he thought himself the luckiest man in the world when he found out that an Eskimo settlement some twenty miles away there was tobacco to be bought."

"So he persuaded Second Mate Norman, who hails from Lynn, to make the trip with him. Down here now it seems as tho it were the limit of foolishness, but up there you look at things in a different aspect."

"Dressed in the polar bearskins trousers and moccasins, sealskin coats and blue foxtail hats we all wore, they were prepared for the 60 degrees below temperature outside. And all went well until they struck a seven-mile glacier that lay across their route."

"You can never tell when the cold hit man succumbs to it after a short period of exposure. Half way across the glacier Norman was gripped by it. His arms, his face and his hands became numb. In vain Taylor tried to restore circulation."

"Luckily Taylor didn't lose his head. Half dragging and half beating his frozen companion, the Sydney man started him back toward the ship. The cold had grown more intense all the while. The staggered pair reached the edge of the glacier. Now Taylor could go no farther. He too, succumbed to the cold."

"Here it was that Norman dropped and his heavy weight was too much for the tired Taylor to drag farther. So the Sydney man made the mate as comfortable as he could and set out for the ship."

"And he ran. Talk about your Marathons! Taylor fairly flew over the ice and the snow. Never faltering, he slipped and slid over wide stretches of ice as smooth as glass. His moccasined feet broke thru the web of the snowshoes and every pace left a mark of blood upon the snow as he ran down and over the rolling plain."

"For two whole hours he ran, and at 8 o'clock that night he clambered up the ladder of the ship barely able to tell his story. It was the work of a minute to get the entire crew to gether and we started out with lanterns and sleds."

"Three hours later First Mate Davis found Norman within a foot of a seventy-five-foot cliff to which he had wandered in a delirium. So stiff was Norman that he halloed down to Doctor Hunt and myself that the mate was dead."

"Davis tied a rope around Norman's body and down into the pitchy black darkness of the sides of the cliff he lowered the supposed dead man. Doctor Hunt and I were waiting below and Norman was put on a sled."

"We got him back to the ship at 1 o'clock the following morning and from that time until 7 o'clock the whole crew worked over him in relays. It was mighty serious business, for we all loved Norman, but you can imagine the relaxation that followed in a regular gale of laughter when the mate came to and muttered: "Did I get the tobacco?"

"And next day an Eskimo ruined it into Norman when he casually remarked, in the nearest that the Eskimo language can express, 'It's a very mild winter.'"

THANKSGIVING.

Once more our day of national, concerted thankfulness has come and gone. Almost three centuries have passed since our Puritan forefathers held the first "thanksgiving day," a year after they had reached the shores of the New World and there was not merely a thanksgiving day but a thanksgiving week. The terrible rigors of the first New England winter had reduced the little colony to half its original number, but the following summer had rewarded their incessant labors with harvests so abundant that all fear of the second winter was removed and those who had survived felt that they could not make too emphatic public acknowledgment of their gratitude to the God they served, and feared as well. The annual observance of a special day for this purpose was not inaugurated until the time of Washington, almost at the end of the eighteenth century. Other nations have had thanksgiving celebrations, sometimes yearly for long periods, but our own country has the proud distinction of being the only nation that now holds an annual national festival of thankfulness for benefits enjoyed. And it is to be feared that too many of us often forget the real significance of the day, even though we are periodically reminded from pulpit and press, to be grateful in reality, not merely in the form of our observance. And we should also remember that if we had abundant cause for gratitude to the Giver of all good on the last Thursday of November we have the same reasons on the next day and so on throughout the year. Let us learn to appreciate our blessings and to be thankful for them at least 365 times during the twelve months.

Most everybody is revengeful-minded enough to wish that the Chicago egg plotter who has seventy-two million (alleged) last summer's eggs in cold storage and is holding them till he can get 70 cents a dozen, will hang on to them a little too long and get caught in the ten-months' limit net by the government food inspectors who are laying for him. No pun intended, but we hope something will happen to lay him out.

The Oxford Leader last week started one of its local columns thusly: "Lots of Converts. Six reels Saturday." The combination leads us to wonder whether the revival meetings there are held in partnership with the picture show, or vice versa, or neither, or both.

Friend Rockefeller and his pals are about to establish an eight-million dollar medical school and hospital, the largest in the world, in Chicago. Dear, dear! kerosene hadn't been raised in price for a long time, and we were beginning to hope it wouldn't.

A "cultured gentleman" was arrested at Pontiac the other day for assault on another ditto, the deadly weapon used being a frying pan. Probably he couldn't get anything to fry, so made the utensil useful in the manner stated. "To such base uses," etc. etc.

The high price of sheep and the low price of dogs no doubt has something to do with the present strenuous official campaign in Oakland county for the elimination of unlicensed canines.

A Pontiac citizen bears the peculiar name of Watchpocket. He'd better, especially if he goes to Detroit, judging from the daily and nightly activities there in the hold-up business.

"Use your imagination" says an exchange. Lots of folks do, but they are very likely to get the reputation of being liars if they do too much of it.

Have you found something? The Record's column will find an owner for you without cost.

GARRICK THEATRE, DETROIT.

One of the most successful musical plays of recent years is "The Blue Paradise," which was seen in New York last season at the Casino and ran there for an entire year, and which is to be seen at the Garrick theatre, Detroit, for the coming week. "The Blue Paradise" was Americanized by Edgar Smith from a Viennese operetta written by the author of "The Merry Widow," Leo Stein, and the music is by Edmund Eysler, the lyrics by Herbert Reynolds and it was staged by Benrimo. The scenes are all laid in Vienna, although there are American characters in the play, and it takes its title from the name of an inn supposedly located in the Austrian capital.

DETROIT TRUST COMPANY

Detroit, Mich. Nov. 17, 1916.
Honorable Village Council,
Northville, Mich.

Dear Sirs:—Mr. Browning has advised me of his talk with you on the 10th inst. relative to the purchase of Michigan Municipal Bonds suitable for said Sinking fund. The issues, I understand, in which you were particularly interested were the following:

$14,000 Otsego, Michigan, 5 per cent. Water Works Bonds on a 4.15 per cent basis. These bonds are the unsold portion of an issue of $30,000, which we purchased about a month ago, and which are the direct obligation of the entire village, having been authorized by more than a two-thirds majority of the qualified electors of the village. The bonds are issued for Water Works purposes, and constitute the only indebtedness of the village. Otsego was incorporated in 1865, is located in Allegan county, fifteen miles northwest of Kalamazoo, and is surrounded by an excellent farming community.

$5,000 Pontiac, Michigan, 4 1/2 per cent School District Bonds, represent the unsold portion of an issue of $150,000 which are issued by the Union school district of Pontiac, the boundaries of which are the same as the City of Pontiac. These bonds were authorized by the qualified electors of the District and in our opinion, are an excellent high grade security. We have sold the balance of the issue on a 4.05 per cent basis, and in view of the high character of the bonds, we consider the same an excellent investment for your Sinking fund, on a 4.05 per cent basis.

Mr. Browning also mentioned to you $15,000 Royal Oak, Michigan, 5 per cent. Water Extension Bonds, which are issued for the purpose of extending the present water system. The population of Royal Oak is steadily increasing, and a very large number of its residents have their business connections in Detroit. The fare on the Detroit United Lines from Royal Oak to Detroit is only 16c, and this has a tendency to induce many people to settle in Royal Oak as they are able to secure building lots more reasonably than in the city. We have handled a large number of Royal Oak bonds, and our customers have always found them prompt in the payment of both principal and interest. We are offering these bonds on a 4.15 per cent basis, and on account of the nearness of Royal Oak to Detroit, we consider this price favorable and the bonds a conservative investment for you.

All of these issues have been purchased by us after a full and complete investigation, and the legality of the issues has been approved by our attorneys. Each of the issues is a legal investment for Savings banks in this state, and is also eligible under the rulings of the United States Treasury department as security for Postal Savings deposits.

We trust that we may have the pleasure of serving you, and remain, Very sincerely yours,

THANKSGIVING.

Once more our day of national, concerted thankfulness has come and gone. Almost three centuries have passed since our Puritan forefathers held the first "thanksgiving day," a year after they had reached the shores of the New World and theirs was not merely a thanksgiving day but a thanksgiving week. The terrible rigors of the first New England winter had reduced the little colony to half its original number but the following summer had rewarded their incessant labors with harvests so abundant that all fear of the second winter was removed and those who had survived felt that they could not make too emphatic public acknowledgement of their gratitude to the God they served, and feared as well. The annual observance of a special day for this purpose was not inaugurated until the time of Washington, almost at the end of the eighteenth century. Other nations have had thanksgiving celebrations, sometimes yearly for long periods, but our own country has the proud distinction of being the only nation that now holds an annual national festival of thankfulness for benefits enjoyed. And it is to be feared that too many of us often forget the real significance of the day, even though we are periodically reminded from pulpit and press to be grateful in reality, not merely in the form of our observance. And we should also remember that if we had abundant cause for gratitude to the Giver of all good on the last Thursday of November, we have the same reasons on the next day and so on throughout the year. Let us learn to appreciate our blessings and to be thankful for them at least 365 times during the twelve months.

Most everybody is revenge-minded enough to wish that the Chicago egg plutocrat who has seventy-two million (alleged) last summer's eggs in cold storage and is holding them till he can get 70 cents a dozen, will hang on to them a little too long and get caught in the ten-months' limit net by the government food inspectors who are laying for him. No pun intended, but we hope something will happen to lay him out.

The Oxford Leader last week started one of its local columns thusly: "Lots of Converts Six reels Saturday." The combination leads us to wonder whether the revival meetings there are held in partnership with the picture show, or vice versa, or neither, or both.

Friend Rockefeller and his pals are about to establish an eight-million dollar medical school and hospital, the largest in the world, in Chicago. Dear, dear! kerosene hadn't been raised in price for a long time, and we were beginning to hope it wouldn't.

A "cullud gentleman" was arrested at Pontiac the other day for assault on another ditto, the deadly weapon used being a frying pan. Probably he couldn't get anything to fry, so made the utensil useful in the manner stated. "To such base uses," etc. etc.

The high price of sheep and the low price of dogs no doubt has something to do with the present strenuous official campaign in Oakland county for the elimination of unlicensed canines.

A Pontiac citizen bears the peculiar name of Watchpocket. He'd better, especially if he goes to Detroit, judging from the daily and nightly activities there in the hold-up business.

"Use your imagination" says an exchange. Lots of folks do, but they are very likely to get the reputation of being liars if they do too much of it.

Have you found something? The Record's column will find an answer for you without cost.

GARRICK THEATRE, DETROIT.

One of the most successful musical plays of recent years is "The Blue Paradise," which was seen in New York last season at the Casino and ran there for an entire year, and which is to be seen at the Garrick theatre, Detroit, for the coming week. "The Blue Paradise" was Americanized by Edgar Smith from a Viennese operetta written by the author of "The Merry Widow," Leo Stein, and the music is by Edmund Eysler, the lyrics by Herbert Reynolds and it was staged by Benrimo. The scenes are all laid in Vienna, although there are American characters in the play, and it takes its title from the name of an inn supposedly located in the Austrian capital.

DETROIT TRUST COMPANY

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 17, 1916.
Honorable Village Council
Northville, Mich.

Dear Sirs:—Mr. Browning has advised me of his talk with you on the 10th inst. relative to the purchase of Michigan Municipal Bonds suitable for said Sinking fund. The issues, I understand, in which you were particularly interested were the following:

$14,000 Otsego, Michigan, 5 per cent Water Works Bonds on a 4.15 per cent basis. These bonds are the unsold portion of an issue of $30,000, which we purchased about a month ago, and which are the direct obligation of the entire village, having been authorized by more than a two-thirds majority of the qualified electors. The bonds are issued for Water Works purposes, and constitute the only indebtedness of the village. Otsego was incorporated in 1865, is located in Allegan county, fifteen miles north-west of Kalamazoo, and is surrounded by an excellent farming community.

$5,000, Pontiac, Michigan, 4 1/2 per cent School District Bonds, represent the unsold portion of an issue of $150,000 which are issued by the Union school district of Pontiac, the boundaries of which are the same as the City of Pontiac. These bonds were authorized by the qualified electors of the District and in our opinion, are an excellent high grade security. We have sold the balance of the issue on a 4.05 per cent basis, and in view of the high character of the bonds, we consider the same an excellent investment for your Sinking fund, on a 4.05 per cent basis.

Mr. Browning also mentioned to you $15,000 Royal Oak, Michigan, 5 per cent Water Extension Bonds, which are issued for the purpose of extending the present water system. The population of Royal Oak is steadily increasing, and a very large number of its residents have their business connections in Detroit. The fare on the Detroit United Lines from Royal Oak to Detroit is only 10c, and this has a tendency to induce many people to settle in Royal Oak as they are able to secure building lots more reasonably than in the city. We have handled a large number of Royal Oak bonds, and our customers have always found them prompt in the payment of both principal and interest. We are offering these bonds on a 4.15 per cent basis, and on account of the nearness of Royal Oak to Detroit, we consider this price favorable and the bonds a conservative investment for you.

All of these issues have been purchased by us after a full and complete investigation, and the legality of the issues has been approved by our attorneys. Each of the issues is a legal investment for Savings banks in this state, and is also eligible under the rulings of the United States Treasury department as security for Postal Savings deposits.

We trust that we may have the pleasure of serving you, and remain, Very sincerely yours,
DETROIT TRUST COMPANY.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.

(By the Pastor)
Sunday will be a great day in the religious affairs of the community. It will be the beginning of the revival campaign which is to continue but two weeks. Because the time will be short and because the interests are most vital and important, let every member of the churches rally at the very first.

In the morning the services will be held in the several churches and the Sunday school sessions will follow as usual. Arrangements will be made by which members of the Buck evangelistic party, who are with us for the campaign, will be in the services of the various churches in the morning.

In the evening the first special service of the series will be held. Because of its central location and also of the fact that the building is the largest, it has been decided to hold all of the evening services in the Methodist church. The services are not for the Methodist church alone, however but for all the churches and for the entire community. Therefore everybody is most cordially invited to cooperate and help in making the meetings productive of the greatest amount of good for the community at large.

Rev. Mr. Buck will preach Sunday evening and Mr. Tallman will have charge of the music. Let the church be filled Sunday night.

FANTOMAS

"THE CROOK DETECTIVE"

Fantomas, this was the name given to all unpunished, mysterious crimes in Paris, due to the many exploits of the phantom crook. The press tired of writing concerning crimes it could not explain, centered the matter in one of the leading papers, which said:

"Does Fantomas exist? Yes, because he is committing new crimes, every day. Who is Fantomas? Why is he not arrested? The question can be answered in a few words:

"Fantomas, the phantom crook, Fantomas, who always escapes at the right time, Fantomas, the elusive is simply an invention of Detective Inspector Juve, while many believe that Juve and Fantomas are one and the same person."

The powers interested, understood they had to satisfy public opinion, and in this method showed themselves exceedingly clever. Juve was ordered to appear immediately before the examining magistrate, and did so with a calm conscience. Juve, deserted by his superior officers, was committed to a cell in spite of his strong defense.

When Fandor, his journalist friend, learned the astonishing news, he said to himself, "If they really on appearances, and if Juve is jailed, merely to give satisfaction to idiots, they must naturally consider me his accomplice. By keeping at liberty, I can defend my friend, and will therefore take to cover."

Fandor left a note on his desk, which was found by the police the next morning, which read as follows:

"TO THE POLICE"

I know you have it in for me, like you have for my friend Juve. Excuse me for not staying to be arrested, but with Juve in jail, it is better for me to be free to work for him, so justice may be done."

JEROME FANDOR

In the Belleville quarter of Paris, lived "Father Moche," who loaned small sums of money, and pretended to be a lawyer. He owned the house in which he lived, and had a good reputation, though some of his tenants had had trouble with the police.

On October 15th, a collector called and collected $1200. At last, I am through with my work for to-day," remarked the collector. "I have only one more floor to climb and that will be all."

"Another bill to collect in this house, from what family?" asked Father Moche.

"From Mr. Paulet."

The collector went away, and Father Moche closed the door carefully.

Paulet was a desperate-looking chap, and his companion was worthy of him, although only 16 years old, she was already a criminal. Her name was Nini Gunon.

As the bill collector knocked at the door, Paulet stood at one side holding an upraised hammer. The bill collector made one step into the narrow entrance, when Paulet brought the hammer down with full force upon the head of his victim, who sank to the floor, his head crushed by the blow.

Father Moche, hearing the fall of the body rushed upstairs and into the room. Paulet and Nini were washing their hands in the kitchen; on a chair near them, was the collector's wallet, crammed with bank notes and drafts. Without hesitation, Father Moche, seized the wallet, and before Nini or Paulet could stop him, ran out of the room.

After entering his own room, Father Moche, locked the wallet and contents in his safe. The bell rang and he opened the door, a young woman was standing there holding out a letter to him. It read,

Dear Sir: This is the new tenant for your fifth floor, she wishes one room divided by a partition, for she finds it too large.

DOULLENQUE"

Father Moche assured his visitor that he would do as she wished. Just then Paulet and Nini rushed into the room, demanded their money back. Moche only rubbed his hands and laughed. Paulet whipped out his knife, but Moche seized his arm, twisting it until the knife flew out of his hand; with his other hand he seized Nini by her throat, forcing her to her knees. The man and woman looked at the old man frozen with terror. "You idiots," Father Moche stormed, "you are working like fools, the corpse will be found, and you will be punished. Obey my orders and I will rescue. Tonight the proof of your crime will be so well hidden that months will elapse before it is discovered, if ever."

"Tom Bob," the famous American detective has just arrived in Paris with the intention of discovering the truth about Fantomas.

The detectives received orders to extend every courtesy to their American conferees, should he present himself to them. However, Tom Bob, did not make himself known.

Moche had had the partition put in for his new tenant, and the paper hanger had just come to place his first roll of paper, when his boss arrived. He wore a muffer, long white blouse and soft white hat, under which you could see eyes of extreme shiftiness. He discharged his workman, then took a long nail, and drove it in the partition in a spot he seemed to know well.

From the nail hole, a black liquid began to run. The man watched the bleeding wall for a few moments, when the new tenant came in, and beheld the stream of blood which was continuing to flow. The poor woman was on the point of fainting, but the man did not give her time.

"Hurry, go get the police!" he ordered.

She rushed away, soon returning, with two officers and a detective.

"What's this story about a bleeding wall?" demanded the detective.

He was shown the blood dripping from the wall, so he commanded the detectives to make a hole, which soon revealed the corpse of a man, who proved to be the missing collector.

The detective turned to the man who had driven the nail, demanding to know who he was, and how he came to drive the nail in that spot. Instead of replying, the man handed a card to the astonished detective.

TOM BOB

American Detective, Hotel Terminus, Paris.

The detective's manner changed, he was gratified to be the first to come in contact with the American detective, engaged in his duties.

A few days after the discovery of the corpse of the collector, Lady Belham, who it will be remembered, had been ensnared by Fantomas, had disappeared, but through marriage, had become the Grand Duchess Alexandra. She thought herself secure from pursuit by the adventurer in whose crime she had been implicated.

As she sat one day in her drawing room, a card was brought to her, reading Tom Bob, American Detective. No sooner had he appeared in the door than she started back with a shriek.

The so-called American detective, was no other than Fantomas.

"Good morning," he bowed in irony. "We have not seen each other for some time."

He was not long coming to the point. He wanted money and forced the Duchess to start a huge subscription for the purpose of capturing Fantomas. This she did with fear and trembling.

Fandor in the meantime had retired to a suburb not far out of town. He stopped at a small hotel, confident that the examining magistrate was not really anxious to capture him.

Fandor arranged a custom of black, said to be the favorite dress of Fantomas himself.

The Duchess was giving a grand ball, when she spied a familiar and dreaded figure in black among the masqueraders—but she felt it was not really Fantomas. She was scarce over her surprise when a second man in black stood before her. She knew too, this was not Fantomas and her mystification was complete. As she turned it was only to see a third figure in black—this time she recognized the terrible Fantomas, he gazed sternly at her through his mask, his deep eyes blazing. As quickly as he had come he disappeared after a low bow.

"What is he going to do?" asked the Duchess of herself.

When dancing was at its height the Duchess found herself forced to dance with one of the men in black. As she danced she was jostled by a figure in black—it was Fantomas. The two men accosted each other with heated words. They then left for the huge gardens surrounding the palace.

A scream came from the dark.

Fandor in the garden saw Fantomas appear and go toward the palace. Then Fandor rushed to a dark figure on the ground. It was a detective from headquarters with a huge dagger thrust in his breast.

Fandor summoned the police, who after investigation announced that "if Fantomas had really done the deed—then Juve must have been out of his cell the night before, and as Fantomas, or the assassin had been wounded in the arm, Juve must bear such a wound at this time."

It was thus easy to prove Juve guilty or innocent. Upon entering the cell, they found Juve asleep—he was under the influence of a powerful drug. He was awakened with great difficulty.

"Hold out your right arm," said the chief of police. Juve did so with difficulty, to their amazement there was a deep wound on his arm. Juve astounded asked the chief of police to summon all the keepers who had been on duty the night before.

Juve scrutinized the assembled keepers, suddenly he sprang upon a burly fellow.

"Arrest this man, it is Nibet, the accomplice of Fantomas."

Nibet's attitude, told of his guilt. A search revealed upon him a vial of narcotics and a blood stained knife. Thereupon Juve was re-instated in the detective force with full honors. He was determined to make Fantomas pay the penalty of his many crimes.

Fandor was still in hiding in the suburbs, and walking one day, in a wooded path came upon a typical band of "Apaches" who were quarreling violently. He stole up in the bushes and overheard their words. They were heaping abuse on an old man who stood calm, as one ugly looking chap shook his fist under his nose.

"As true as my name is Paulet, I am going to kill you, Father Moche, if you don't bring the money."

Moche seemed undisturbed—he drew out a paper and read:

"Fals—Haye faith. All will be well. Trust Father Moche while I am in prison. When free I shall distribute the money—Fantomas."

The Apaches read the letter and were convinced now that Juve and Fantomas were the same, since Juve really was in prison.

Fandor knew that Juve had been released, and after allowing the Apaches to disperse, Fandor watched Moche as he unearthed an iron box and took it to a ramshackle building. Fandor followed Moche and saw him hide the box; but when he would have emerged from the house found himself prisoner.

Juve, that very morning, was in conference with the examining magistrate, when several workmen, helping in remodeling the building, entered the room and overpowered the magistrate and Juve. They placed Juve in a bag lowered him from the window and drove him off in an automobile. On the seat Paulet turned to his companion, with a chuckle.

"Well, we have him, now for our money."

Fandor in the basement of the deserted building heard the tramping of feet overhead, then there was a scuffling on the stairway as the pretended workmen lifted Juve down in the bag in which he was tied.

They untied the sack, out stepped Juve to face a sinister ring of faces.

"Are you Juve, or are you Fantomas," cried the ringleader, Paulet.

Juve was backed up against a huge cask under which Fandor had crawled, as Juve hesitated in his reply he heard Fandor's whispered words, "It is I, Fandor, tell them you are Fantomas, under the dark stone is money to satisfy them. Give it to them."

Juve looked at Paulet. "Unbind me and you shall have your money," he said in a calm voice. The man did his bidding and Juve directed them where to find the box. As they were disputing over the division of the money, a cry from the lookout, "Beat it, the cops," caused them to whirl, but too late. There was a short, hard fight and the gang was captured and bound and led away to meet French justice.

The gang had been betrayed by Tom Bob, the crook detective to get rid of all his accomplices at one blow. But Tom Bob and Father Moche, both in reality, Fantomas had disappeared. Juve and Fandor however felt, that with much of his ill-gotten gains taken over by the police, Fantomas would make one more daring attempt to recoup his fortunes before disappearing entirely.

Fandor recalled the past connections between Lady Beltham and Fantomas. "Juve," he remarked, as they sat in the journalist room, "I have a feeling there is some strange connection between that big subscription being gathered by the Duchess Alexandra and Fantomas. You recall he had a terrible hold over her. The subscription now amounts to a large amount. Wouldn't it be possible for Fantomas to go after it?"

"You are right," cried Juve. "The very idea I had in mind. We will go to the palace tonight and await the developments. We need no extra help as Fantomas is now working alone."

That night as the Duchess was reading in her bedroom she heard a noise at the window, turning she beheld the devilish leer of Fantomas.

His crafty eyes shot menace at every glance, her screams were choked back, for a huge pistol was leveled at her head. Fantomas was in his black suit. He sprang into the room, advancing to the terrified woman, he bent over her.

"My dear, you have succeeded very nicely with the subscription to capture me. I need a lot of money—hand over the money and all of your jewels."

The Duchess started to protest but Fantomas clutched her bare shoulder with a grip of steel, she gave in. As Fantomas pocketed the case of banknotes little did he know that stern fate was at his heels.

Little did he think that he was in the clutches of the men whom he had so often eluded and escaped from. Fantomas after taking all of the jewels and money in sight, stopped over the crouching woman before him.

"You used to kiss me good-bye for the last time," she threw out a protesting hand, but he crushed her down, as his lips were about to meet hers, a voice of steel rang out: "Hands up!"

Fantomas whirled—in the window was framed the stern face of the master detective, his eyes aglow with triumph, he held a leveled revolver at the heart of the crook. In the mirror Fantomas spied, behind him, Fandor advancing also with a revolver. He knew the game was up.

It is six in the morning—the sky has turned from pink to red—the blood color that has so long surrounded Fantomas in his terrible career.

A bell tolls mournfully—by the prison wall a scaffold shades the scene, but there is a swift flash as the rising sun strikes the descending blade, a soft thud as a head drops into the basket ready for it.

Justice has triumphed and Paris breathes free once more.

Fantomas has gone to his last reward.

FIGHTING LOBSTER

GAME TO THE LAST

Battles Restaurant Cat and Bull Pup, But Manager Butted in With a Club.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A pet cat was in the kitchen of Imfeld's restaurant one afternoon when the cook's helper placed on the floor a basket of lobsters. One crawled out and the cat jumped for it.

The lobster was indignant and a big claw grasped the cat's tail. The cat raced upstairs and into the dining room.

Miss Eva Seidler had brought her Boston terrier into the restaurant. He was tied to her chair. When he saw the cat and lobster he got busy and made for the cat. The lobster grabbed him by a hind leg. Howling, the dog made a jump and pulled the chair from under Miss Seidler. She fainted.

The head waiter ran upstairs when he heard the screams. Cat dog and lobster got tangled up with his feet and threw him. Then the dog got to snapping and the cat to scratching. The lobster just hung on. Finally the manager got a club and persuaded the lobster to let go. A physician revived Miss Seidler and the cat went down stairs.

CHAMPION'S "BIG EAT"

SHOCKS DENVER GIRL

His Latest Record Is 10 Lbs. Sausage, 24 Eggs, 4 Loaves Bread, at One Meal.

Sharon, Pa.—Edward Burke of Farrell has "Useless" Lennon beat to a frazzle when it comes to eating. He recently won a wager of $50 when he cleaned up ten pounds of sausage, two dozen eggs, four loaves of bread and drank a gallon of buttermilk at one sitting, and then declared that he could have eaten more.

An account of Burke's "big eat" reached Denver, and a young woman signing herself Miss Anna Solomon sent him this warning:

"I must say that your desire for money is extraordinary. Do you not realize that you are violating the laws of nature when you try to imitate the elephant? You are what I term a 'human hog.' I never did like men in general, but a 'man' of your type I simply loathe. Of course I have never been in need of $50; possibly the circumstances were 'extenuating,' but nevertheless I warn you never again to eat as much food as you are credited with having devoured. I knew a man in Los Angeles who after fasting eight days went into a cafe and ate for three hours, and died the same day. Bear that in mind, sir, and cease making a hog of yourself."

COW SAVES LIFE OF WOMAN

Drives Off Dehorned Bull Which Had Badly Injured Her.

La Grande, Ore.—Mrs. C. W. Bearden of South La Grande, owes her life to a Jersey cow. Mrs. Bearden had gone to the outskirts of La Grande to milk the family cow, when she was set upon by a dehorned bull from a neighboring pasture. She was bunted over and her collar bone broken and several less serious wounds inflicted.

Mrs. Bearden explains that she had given up all hope of rescue when her own cow came running to the scene, assailed the attacking beast and drove it away.

BURGEON GENERAL BLUE SAYS COURSES WOULD UPBUILD BODILY STRENGTH

Princeton Head Claims That Universal Training Is Needed.

Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the United States public health service, in a letter to the National Security League, gives his unqualified indorsement to university military training, as beneficial to the public health.

"I believe a system," says Dr. Blue's letter, "under which all the young men of this country could receive military training would be of inestimable value. The outdoor, life and physical development which such training guarantees could not fail to improve materially the health and vigor of our entire population."

"Such a system would mean that every young man would receive carefully supervised physical training at an age when the upbuilding of bodily strength is most important and unfortunately, often neglected. As a preliminary to such training, every youth would be given a thorough physical examination, and the value of this one phase of the system would be enormous, for it would result in the discovery of many physical defects or ailments of which the men themselves might be unaware, and which could be remedied by proper measures.

"It should be remembered also that the elementary principles of hygiene and sanitation form a part of the training of every soldier. The public health value of inculcating these principles in the mind of every youth in the land cannot be overestimated."

President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University, writing to the league on the subject of universal training, said:

"I have received your letter and I am very glad to express to you my conviction that we need in this country universal military training. This will not only insure proper protection in time of war, but throughout the years of peace, which we all hope we may enjoy, it will knit together the citizens of our country in a common work and give them all a feeling of obligation to serve the nation not only in arms, but through the best efforts of citizenship."

The U. S. government exhibits will

Hog Dies, Colt Is Injured, Baby Is Jeopardized, and Dog Is Killed.

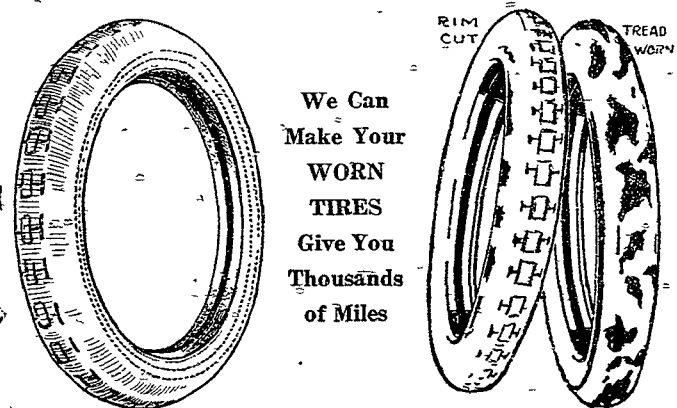

Altoona, Pa.—A chapter of correlated accidents is told by Henry Weaver, a Bald Eagle Valley farmer, in Tyrone. Weaver says he decided to pick some pears from a large tree one Sunday. The limb broke and in his descent he passed through the roof of a hog pen. He fell on the back of a fat porker, which was so badly injured that it died.

In the barnyard adjoining the pig sty's was a colt. It was so frightened by the noise that it jumped over a fence and ran into a clothes line, one end of which was fastened to a post. The post was buried through the kitchen window of the farm house, narrowly missing Weaver's baby.

The colt leaped over another fence and collided with a barbed wire fence, lacerating its legs and breast. When the veterinarian came next day to sew up the cuts he ran over Weaver's dog which had to be shot.

TIMELY TOPICS FOR ALL INTERESTED IN BETTER FARMING

HINTS ON PIG FEEDING

Feed regularly, no matter what food you feed, remember that if you skip the regular feeding hour, the pigs overeat, this leads to all kinds of disorders and disease. Watch the water supply, dirty water may carry disease germs. The best pasture for pigs is either red or white clover, alfalfa, peanuts, blue grass, cowpeas or lespedeza. These belong to the family of legumes, or pod-bearing plants, they furnish protein feed and enrich the soil at the same time.

Young pigs should have plenty of legume feeds because protein is the blood, bone and muscle building element. While the pig is young and feeding in the pasture feed only a little corn each day, we want growth now—later comes the corn for fattening. Fresh slop is good, but thin meal stirred in, to make a thick slop is good. Be sure to give your pigs charcoal, ashes, salt and lime. Mix wood ashes, fine salt, and air slacked lime—the wood ashes usually contain enough charcoal—and keep where the pigs can get at it easily. Let the young pigs have plenty of exercise and do not shut them up in too small a space. Only when fattening them confine them in smaller quarters. How to Control Grape Leaf-Folder The grape leaf-folder, a small "worm" which folds portions of grapevines over it, feeding within this shelter, can be controlled successfully, say the U. S. Government authorities, spraying regularly with arsenical solutions, crushing the larvae by hand in the folded leaves, during the growing season, and burning all dead leaves and trash under the vines in the fall, are the control measures recommended. A satisfactory spray is arsenate of lead, best applied in a fungicide such as Bordeaux mixture, a single application as a treatment for disease. The first application to be made in spring, shortly after the blossoms appear. If the pest appears later make another application. But be sure to burn all the dead leaves and trash in the fall—as the insect winters in the pupal stage in the ground-litter.

Worms in Sheep

Stomach worms and tapeworms, which cause tremendous loss to sheep raisers in the state, may be treated satisfactorily by drenching with copper sulphate. Digestive disturbances, malnutrition and general weakness are symptoms of worms in sheep. For 8 to 20 hours before treatment the sheep are fasted. They are then drenched with a bottle, or a rubber tube and funnel. Two fluid ounces of a solution made by dissolving an ounce of copper sulphate (blue vitrol) in two quarts of water is sufficient for a yearling, while a two year old sheep requires three fluid ounces.

When topping beets be careful not to cut into the root as they do not keep so well if they bleed.

CLOTHES FOR THE BABIES.

Under the auspices of the Civic Improvement committee of the Northville Woman's club a "shower" was given at the Library Friday afternoon for the Michigan Home society. Mrs. Bristol of Ann Arbor, financial supervisor of the society, was present and gave a most interesting talk, in a very charming manner on the work of this worthy organization. Thousands of little ones have been placed, by adoption, in good homes, and hundreds are being cared for, all the time until permanent homes can be found for them, while many crippled and diseased babies are cured by surgical and medical treatment. Many are temporarily cared for, and later returned to their parents, and sometimes poor parents are able to pay a portion of their expense of feeding and clothing children they cannot entirely support. The work, while officially endorsed by the state, is supported entirely by public contributions. The headquarters of the society are at St. Joseph, with branches in Detroit and other cities of the state, and the philanthropy is one of the noblest possible enterprises for the benefit of infant humanity.

A large number of dainty, practical little garments of various kinds, some materials and several dollars in money were donated by the ladies of the club through the "shower" given Friday afternoon. The object is the same for which several Northville clubwomen assisted at a "tag day" in Detroit a few weeks ago.
