GRADUATION PROGRAM NORTHVILLE H. S.

CLASS OF '17, SEVENTEEN IN NUMBER WILL HOLD VARIOUS EXERCISES DURING THE COMING WEEK.

The Northville High school is to grant diplomas to a class of seventeen young people next week. The exercises appertaining to the graduation will begin with the baccalaureate services in the Methodist church next Sunday evening, when Rev. F. I. Walker will deliver the address.

Class Day and the Commencement exercises will be held in the High school auditorium Tuesday and Thursday evenings, June 19 and 21, respectively. The exercises will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. Seats will be held for those having invitations until 7:45, at which time the doors will be open to all.

The members of the class are: Wendell Miller, President; Dorothy Dubuar, Vice-Prest.; Charles Wilcox, Treasurer; Gladys Heenev, Secretary; Thelma Bennett, Howard, Cole, Truman Garfield, Florence Hussey, Marguerite Laffay, Flora Miller, Scott Montgomery, Louis Meisner, Conciola Mueller, Margie Putnam, Loraine Westcott, Forrest Wilcox, and Aletha Yerkes.

DEVASTATED DISTRICT SEEN BY THOUSANDS

MANY PECULIAR RESULTS OF APRIL 6 WIND-STORM NOTED

GREAT CROWDS HAVE THROGGED SCENES OF WRECK AND RUIN NEAR SALEM.

Thousands of people from far and near have daily visited the wrecked premises that resulted from last week's wind-storm, but the beautiful weather of Sunday gave opportunity for actual thousands to see the havoc that can be wrought by the awful and mysterious forces of nature when let loose upon a defenseless world.

Automobiles in uncounted numbers and occasional horse-driven vehicles came and went in every direction and lined the roadside by scores along the farms where the worst destruction had been wrought. Through the kindness of friends, a representative of the Record was privileged to follow the track of the cyclone in reverse order from the F. P. Simmons property northwest of town where all buildings except the house were destroyed and the fine orchard ruined to the site of what was once the Walker school house west of Salem, near which one human life was sacrificed to the fury of the elements and others escaped death by a narrow margin.

The main facts of the disaster are known to everybody by this time, but the peculiar effects of the storm were legion, and their narration would require columns of type.

The first thought that comes to the observer of the masses of wreckage is the wonder that the loss of human and animal life was not greater. One can scarcely see how any living thing escaped from many of the buildings. From the Brose home on the base line, which was totally destroyed, house, barn and all, the wreckage was scattered over the fields for miles. Bits of linoleum, wire netting, tinware, stove pipe, slivers, small pieces of the broken woodwork, etc., line the wire fences on the road to the north.

The Balko home south of the stone school house was seen surrounded by uprooted trees, while the house itself was left intact except for some broken windows and missing shingles, the barns nearby being leveled to the ground. An automobile there was denuded of its hood, steering wheel and top, while the engine was unharmed and the body of the car scarcely even scratched.

At the Miller home, where several smaller buildings were piled on the house, and indescribable havoc wrought, a bright tin portion of the milk separator stands in its place absolutely undented, while the enclosing building and the engine were taken away.

At the VanAtta place west of Salem, where the house was shoved partly off the wall, rooms were denuded of furniture. Of a table carried out through a large window one leg was all that could be found. Straws and grain are found firmly imbedded in the walls and around the casings, and table silver from the dining room was scattered on directly opposite sides of the yard. Stoves were blown away as if they were feathers.

At the Roberts farm on the same road, farm machinery from the wrecked barns east of the house lies scattered over the field, many rods to the west. The little home of the Renstglers and the school house near it were swept completely from the face of the earth, leaving scarcely a trace of their contents to tell the story.

A pair of lace curtains still on their pole and absolutely unturned, were found in a piece of woods, on one of the farms, but belonged to no one in the neighborhood. Space is not available for the recounting of scores of other peculiar incidents of this most destructive storm that has ever visited this section.

DATES SET FOR 1917 CHAUTAUQUA

The dates for our local Chautauqua have been fixed for July 27 to 31, inclusive. There are to be ten entertainments, and indications are that the course will be the best yet.

The purchase of a season's ticket at $1.50 brings the price of each of these high-class entertainments down to the small sum of ten cents. It is expected that the Cady street grove will be prepared and used as a location for the tent.

CARD OF THANKS.

King's Daughters, Presbyterian Ladies I wish to thank the O. E. S. W. R. C. A. M. society, my Camp Fire Girls, Neighbors and friends for flowers and kind messages, and words of cheer sent me while at the Hospital. Also Mr. Neal for coming to bring me home.

NORTHVILLE SALES OF LIBERTY BONDS

REACH GRATIFYING AMOUNT OF APPROXIMATELY SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS, BY MEANS OF QUIET CAMPAIGN.

Northville's corps of workers for the Liberty Loan certainly have reason to be proud of the result of their labor, as well as of the patriotism of the people of this village and vicinity.

In addition to the list published last week, the following names have subscribed through the local banks, bringing the amount up to $60,000 or more.

MILITARY COMPANY ORGANIZED HERE

PRELIMINARY STEPS TAKEN ON TUESDAY NIGHT AND ABOUT 30 MEN SWORN IN.

At a meeting held Tuesday evening about 30 of Northville's young men were sworn in as members of a local military company, and 15 or 20 others have signified their intention of joining. The organization gives a splendid opportunity for our young men to obtain the foundation of military training. Enrollment in the home company does not exempt those of the required age from conscription, but the experience, and the knowledge of military tactics gained will be invaluable to those who may be called later to the service of our country in the way of fitting them for more rapid advancement should the chance present itself. The unit thus formed cannot be called out of the state but is liable for guard duty in case of emergency. Also, this home service is a demonstration of patriotism that cannot fail to have its influence on those who may lack some of the enthusiasm they should have, and above all, it may help our people to the realization that we are actually engaged in war.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors who in any way assisted us in the illness and burial of our father and grandfather, and all who sent the beautiful floral offerings; also those who so kindly furnished automobiles.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEET.

Secretary Rackham has sent out announcements that the Oakland County Horticultural society is to hold its June meeting this coming Saturday, June 16, in the orchard at the J. W. Cleaver home west of town on the base line, with a basket lunch at 11 o'clock a. m. The following program is announced: "What I am Doing," Mr. Cleaver; "Proper Pruning of Young Trees," L. B. Flint; "Fruit Prospects for 1917," Mr. Clapp; "The Misty Spray," Pres. VerDyne (with demonstration).

DELIGHTFUL JUNIOR BANQUET.

The Juniors' annual banquet in honor of the Senior class was held in the school gymnasium last Friday evening, and was, as usual, a very pretty as well as enjoyable affair. The decorations were effectively arranged and the dainty and delicious menu was also carried out as far as possible in the class colors. The guests were welcomed by the Junior class president, Charles Ransom, the Seniors' president, Wendell Miller, responding. Superintendent Misener ably filled the office of toastmaster. Music was furnished by the High school orchestra during the banquet.

NOTED PHILANTHROPIST TO VISIT THIS SECTION

L. T. Cooper, Millionaire Manufacturer, Gives Large Part of Income to Charity—Sprang Into Fame Through His New Health Theories, Based on What Is Known As the Tanlac Treatment.

NOT in recent years, perhaps, has the coming of any public character aroused such widespread interest as has the proposed visit to Detroit and other Michigan cities of L. T. Cooper, the Millionaire Philanthropist.

Mr. Cooper is described as one of America's foremost leaders of advanced thought, and sprang into fame and fortune through his new health theories based on what is known as the Tanlac treatment. He never ceases to surprise you with the infinite variety of his knowledge, and its absolute correctness and thoroughness. In several of the larger cities—especially throughout the South and West—he has done a great deal of relief work among the poor.

Mr. Cooper is a firm believer in practical philanthropy and his relief work is familiar to charity workers over the country. His Southern representative while in Houston, Texas, a few weeks ago distributed, under the personal direction of leading charity workers, one thousand dresses of excellent quality to the poor women and children. In San Antonio the following week, he donated another thousand dresses to the poor of that city and a few days later four hundred of the garments were provided by him for the poor women and children of Galveston. Ladies prominent in social life and many prominent citizens of these places assisted and co-operated with Mr. Cooper's representatives in this worthy cause.

Mr. Cooper contends that nine-tenths of the diseases and ill health of the present day American is due to faulty digestion and improper assimilation of the food, which finally produces a stunted up condition of the vital organs. It has been said that Tanlac, his celebrated medicine which is now accomplishing such remarkable results throughout the country, not only quickly overcomes all catarrhal inflammations of the mucous membrane, but acts directly in the correction of stomach, liver, kidney and intestinal disorders.

Tanlac as has been so convincingly proven by the thousands upon thousands who have indorsed it, is also a reconstructive tonic of great power.

Nerves All On Edge?

Just as nerve wear is a case of kidney weakness, so is kidney trouble a cause of nervousness. METHOD OF DESTROYING CABBAGE WORM

(By GEORGE A. DEAN, Professor of Entomology, Kansas State Agricultural College.)

A short time before the earliest cabbage is set in the spring, the familiar white butterfly with black spots on the wings may be seen flying about near the ground. When cabbage is set, the butterflies deposit their eggs on the leaves. The eggs hatch in about a week into small green larvae or "worms." These worms eat the cabbage leaves, making their way down to the tender crown of the plant, and sheltering among the outer leaves of the head. After about two weeks of rapid growth, the velvety green worms are more than an inch long. Each transforms to an angular pupa, attached to a cabbage leaf or other object, and in about another week, there burst from these pupae another generation of white butterflies which deposit eggs to produce more worms.

Since all stages in the life of a cab-

INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF WORK OF CABBAGE WORM.

Large butterflies are passed in about one month, there may be as many as four generations or more in one year, and thus the worms become very numerous on the later cabbage. The pupae from worms of the last generation that were fortunate enough to have been formed in a sheltered place where they are undisturbed, survive the winter, the butterflies emerging early in spring.

Control Measures.

The commercial growers destroy the worms by means of Paris green or lead arsenate, which is applied to the plants by either dusting or spraying. For dusting, mix one pound of Paris green or five pounds of finely powdered lead arsenate with ten pounds of hydrated lime or dry flour. Place this mixture in a flour sack or in a can with the top or bottom finely perforated. The operator walks between two sources of these necessary materials will presently be utilized. Although the soy bean is not considered a source for oil in this part of the country, in Virginia and North Carolina, the threshed crop is sold mainly to the cotton oil mills, where the oil is expressed and the residue, or cake, ground into meal. Indeed soy bean seed is actually second only to cottonseed as a source of vegetable oils. It now seems certain that the demand for soy bean oil will soon become greater than can be supplied by the Eastern crop and that the Missouri crop will be drawn on to meet the need.

During the war, when foodstuffs of all kinds will continually diminish, many unusual kinds of human food will be brought into use. The soy bean is one of the crops which will be utilized. Already several manufacturers in the East have successfully substituted soy beans for navy beans in baked pork and beans. Indeed the demand in the East for soy beans for packing and for planting has been so great since last fall that the cotton oil mills have practically ceased crushing the seed and are turning them to the planters and packers. One mill which last fall bought 10,000 bushels of seed and planned to crush at least 100,000 bushels did not crush any seed but disposed of the whole stock for food and planting. Only the yellow-seeded varieties are used for food.

KEEP TRACTORS BUSY

"Help your neighbors" is the keynote of a special appeal to tractor owners issued by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carl Vrooman.

"Every farmer who owns a tractor," he says, "owes it to his country this spring to do all the custom or exchange work he can do without neglecting his own work. Every hour that his tractor would otherwise be idle ought to be at work helping a neighbor who is behindhand with his plowing or harrowing. Make four outfit work from dawn to dark; make it work all night if you have enough operators to fill the shifts. The acreage to be harvested this fall hangs on the plow. Don't let an acre that might otherwise be planted go untended because your tractor is in the shed. Help your neighbors and thus do your part in strengthening the allied lines on the battle fronts of Europe."

LARGE CROP OF SOY BEANS IS REQUIRED

Farmers Should Greatly Increase Acreage of This Crop for Oil and Human Food.

Although farmers have planned to grow a far larger crop of soy beans in 1917 than ever before, they should now greatly increase the acreage of this crop. The department of farm-crops of the Missouri college of agriculture predicts that as a result of the war the crop will be in demand as a feeding concentrate, for oil and for human food in addition to its normal use as a forage crop.

Experiments have shown soy bean meal to have about the same feeding value as cottonseed meal; and cottonseed meal will probably be so high next fall that it cannot be afforded for feeding. There is sound reason then for anticipating a great demand on the crop for use as a feeding concentrate.

Because of the present shortage of fats and oils throughout the world, due to war consumption and low production in Europe all available

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

WOMAN'S OPPORTUNITY

The complexion of Wall Street's big organization that works from time to time is slowly changing as man after man drops out to take up military service. The inroads, which have already been made in staffs of the big banking institutions are not serious, but the prospect of losing many more employees in the next few weeks or months is being discussed by employers, and it is the general view that most of the vacancies must be filled by women, says a New York news letter. One of the largest national banks has lost 50 men to Plattsburg and Madison, has 75 more who are in militia organizations, and who will soon leave, and has 400 who are liable to conscription. A prominent trust company has lost upward of 100 men, including the senior vice president, and expects the total to be more than 300 before the end of the year. Plans are being made to fill many departments with girls, who have been found more satisfactory than men in work that is much the same day after day.

Doubly Efficient. "He is a man of deeds, I understand." "Yep; also words. He is a probate lawyer."

And yet, after all that talk, it took the world's greatest war to start the real back-to-the-farm movement.

PAIN? NOT A BIT! LIFT YOUR CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is an ether compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist. It is called freezezone, and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store. Just ask for freezezone. Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears. Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off, root and all, with the fingers.

Not a twinge of pain, soreness or irritation; not even the slightest smarting, either when applying freezezone or afterwards.

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus, but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out. It is no humbug! It works like a charm. For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of your feet. It never disappoints and never burns, bites or inflames. If your druggist hasn't any freezezone yet, tell him to get a little bottle for you from his wholesale house.—adv.

The Northville Record.

An Independent Newspaper published every Friday morning by the Neal Printing Co., at Northville, Michigan, and entered at the Northville post-office as Second-Class matter.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., JUNE 15, 1917

We have had many noted phrase-makers among our public men, but it is not always easy to trace the originators of all the single words that so catch the fancy of the public that they are used on every possible occasion...

This back-yard and vacant-lot garden movement has done something more than was contemplated in the inception of the idea. It has caused a lot of unsightly back yards and weeds and rubbishy unused lots in cities and villages all over the country to become beauty spots instead...

And still the advancement of the gentler sex goes on. Two "ladies" over at Lapeer were arrested the other day as "hoof-leggers" One admitted selling a quart of whiskey to a woman, who in turn, was charged with transferring the same quart to a man.

We are officially informed that America has more wealth per capita than ever before in her history, as well as more than any other country in the world. We're no socialist but we would be awfully pleased to have our per cap right now.

Here's hoping the un-American Americans who skipped over the Mexican border to escape registration immediately run up against "that there" Villa, and that he doesn't love 'em better than we do.

It must be very consoling to those men who can't or won't buy a new Panama hat this season to learn from the daily papers that the spring trade in Panamas is very, very dull.

The United States is now prepared to dye for humanity. American chemists have demonstrated that they can make just as good dyes as any German dyes can.

Wixom-Whisperings.

The topic at the Wixom Baptist church Sunday morning will be "The Ministry of Necessity." The evening subject is to be "Thoughts of the Head and Thoughts of the Heart."—Pastor Brass.

Dr. Floyd W. Lockwood, 31, practicing physician at South Lyon and his former wife, Mrs. Josephine E. Lockwood, 28, went to Pontiac Monday, where they were quietly married in the afternoon and returned to make their home in the Lockwood residence where Mrs. Lockwood and her two children have been living. The Lockwoods were divorced in January.

Walled Lake Warbles.

Mrs. D. L. Bently is improving from her recent illness.

Elmer Parks of Flint spent Sunday with friends here.

Isaac Welch had a barn raising last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Champ were Detroit visitors Tuesday.

Mrs. A. V. Tamlyn was an over Sunday guest of Linden friends.

Mr. Paul Branger of South Lyon was a recent guest of relatives here.

Children's day exercises will be held next Sunday morning in the Baptist church.

The remains of Mrs. George Parks were brought here for burial Tuesday afternoon.

Jerome Compton was called to Detroit last week by the death of a nephew. The body was brought here for burial Sunday afternoon.

Familiar Misquotations. "Where there's a will there are many quarreling relations."

Novi News.

Children's day Sunday morning at the Baptist church.

The W. C. T. U. met Wednesday with Mrs. Effie Root, a very pleasant time and good attendance.

Mrs. Waits and two daughters spent Sunday with Mrs. Scates, another daughter, east of Farmington.

A Red Cross society will be organized here with the help of the ladies of the Farmington society. The first meeting will be held in the Town Hall Friday afternoon, at 2:00.

Mrs. John Huffman and daughter of Ray, Ind., returned home after a three weeks' stay among relatives here. The former's mother, Mrs. J. L. Munro, accompanied them for a few weeks' visit.

OBITUARY.

John C. McCowan, a former Novi resident, died at the home of his son in Mason, May 30. After a short service at that place on June 1, conducted by Rev. G. W. Maxwell, the body was brought to Novi and interred in the cemetery here the same afternoon, the Rev. Frank Brass of Wixom, a close friend of the deceased, officiating, the sons acted as pall bearers.

Mr. McCowan was born in Elmira, New York, December 26, 1844, and was the son of Henry B. McCowan and Sarah Ann Weir. When 5 years of age his parents moved to Moscow, Michigan, where his boyhood and early manhood was spent. On February 22, 1869, he was married to Ida M. Kings of Hudson, Mich. Since that time he had been engaged in the mercantile business at Hesperia, Hudson and Novi, having been postmaster for over twenty-five years of the time, first at Hesperia and later at Novi. He had been honored at various times by his fellow citizens with responsible township offices.

He is survived by the widow, Ida M. McCowan, and three sons and three daughters, Henry B. of Grand Rapids, William B. C. of Mason, John C. Jr. of Detroit, Mrs. Belle Walter of Novi, Mrs. Mae Carron of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. Alma Johnston of Hastings. Besides there are eight grand-children and one great-grandchild, also one brother, Linnas McCowan of Ypsilanti, and two sisters Mrs. Libbie Roy of Hanover and Miss Tilhe Cowan of Moscow.

Farmington Flashes

Harold Grace was in Detroit Wednesday.

Dr. Sharpsteen is in town with his show this week.

M. F. Stanley of Northville was a Farmington visitor Sunday.

Mrs. Harry Habermehl and Mrs. Shell Gates were in Pontiac Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Willever returned home Sunday from a visit with the former's parents.

Two Boy Scouts of Northville were canvassing Farmington Wednesday, selling Liberty Bonds.

Rev. W. A. Moore of Detroit speaks in the Universalist church Sunday. The subject will be, "The Ideal Republic."

Claude Stanley was in Detroit on business Tuesday, and returning, to Northville, stopped to see his sister, Mrs. Geo. Conroy.

Mr. McDougall of Brighton, who is to be the Superintendent of our school next year, was visiting the school Wednesday.

The Patriotic Mass meeting was well attended Saturday night. Reports say that Farmington has passed the $50,000 mark in the sale of Liberty Bonds.

Queer Corps.

A western senator of burly appearance was passing an undertaker's shop when a roughly dressed man came out and said: "Say, mister, will you give me a lift with a casket?" The senator shuddered and asked hesitatingly: "Is there—is there anything in it?" "Shure!" came the hearty reply; "there's a couple of drinks in it."—Boston Transcript.

Lamb's Money.

Cecil, aged four, had often gone with Aunt Elsie to the garden to weed, and had asked the names of the different weeds, and was told that one was lamb's-quarters. Several days later he went to the garden for lettuce, and called excitedly: "Oh, come quick, Aunt Elsie; here is some lamb's money."

Dismal.

"History is interesting," remarked a little beginner the other day, "but I think it is very sad, father. Do you know everybody I've studied about yet has died."

Failure.

Failure is sometimes the result of attempting what we have for what we want.

Simply Solved. "He had been calling on the Widow Smithers for some time, and it could not be said that he had made an impression, although he had failed to realize the fact. She decided to speed him on his way at the first opportunity, and it came that night. He heaved a sigh and said, "I have only one friend on earth—my dog." "Well," she answered, calmly, "if that isn't enough, why don't you get another dog?"

Dark Ways—Darkness. "Night is proverbially the time for criminal activity, and Spaniards say: 'The false coin passes at night.' Too often successful men ignore old friends or, as the Spaniards say, 'With the glories they forget the memories.' Shrewdness has worked off undesirable articles. Spain tells that 'The saddle and mane make the horse sell. We stole labor is 'To carry iron to Mexico.' A man born to good fortune is 'the son of a white hen.'"

Robin Adair. "Robin Adair" is not a Scotch song. It is Irish, and was first known as "Eileen Aroon" or "Eibhlin a ruin." It is very old, as songs go, the words being written about 1330, by Carrol O'Daly. The tune as we know it belongs to Cornelius Lyons (1702). The Scottish version was written by Lady Caroline Keppel in 1753; five years later she married Mr. Robert Adair M. P., from Packstown, County Dublin, Ireland.

About Deep Breathing. Many people act on the principle that because deep breathing causes dizziness it does not agree with them. But if they will practice the breathing less vigorously they will find that gradually they can take all the deep breaths they want without the slightest discomfort. Take ten breaths in ten seconds and gradually decrease the number of inhalations.

A Mild Protest. "Breddern and sisters," said Furson Absalom Jonsing, as he surveyed the scant covering of the bottom of the contribution basket, "Ah wouldn't say a word to 'sitate that one of yoh was stung, but Ah has got to admit that yoh all is mighty thrifty tryin' to get to heaven foh about one ten billionth of a cent a mile."

In Solitude. All weighty things are done in solitude—that is, without society. The means of improvement consist not in projects, nor in any violent designs, for these cool, and cool very soon, but in patient practicing for whole long days, by which I make the thing clean to my highest reason.—Fean Paul Richter.

Black Hair Means Vigor. The most pugnacious of all animals known in nature is the black panther. The most difficult of all horses to control is a black stallion. The one snake which never can be safely handled by a snake-charmer is the black cobra. The only untameable frimly in the timid species of mice is the black mouse.

Platonic Friendship. "Do you believe in platonic friendship?" "Well, not altogether. My personal opinion is that I'd believe more in platonic friendship if it were carried on with the full knowledge and consent of the husband of the one and the wife of the other."—Detroit Free Press.

Rich Roumania. Roumania is one of the richest parts of Europe. After the United States and Russia it is the largest grain-growing country in the world. It is one of the world's chief oil fields. Its saddle class is probably the richest to be found anywhere.

Effect of Cutting Diamond. In the process of cutting about 60 per cent in weight of the rough stone is lost, and this, added to the cost of cutting and the rarity of these fine gems, partly accounts for the high cost of the finished diamond.

Not a Botanical Species. The artichoke, which originally came from Barbary, is not a botanical species, but a variety of the thistle, which grows spontaneously all along the African coast of the Mediterranean from Morocco to Palestine.

Italian War Economy. In Rome and other Italian cities ladies are adopting the habit of going hatless as a war economy. The example has been set by many aristocratic ladies, who take walks and automobile drives, and even make social calls, bareheaded.

Appraising the Goods. Fair Client—"I wish to sue a young man for taking two kisses. At what amount shall I place damages?" Lawyer—"Kisses, my dear lady, are variously quoted. I—er—I could judge better their value if you gave me a sample."—Boston Evening Transcript.

"Mother Ann." "Mother Ann" was a friendly nickname given to a woman named Ann Lee, an English woman, who came to the United States during the revolutionary period and founded the sect called Shakers. She was illiterate, but a good woman, a religious enthusiast, and popular in her day.

MICH. STATE FAIR AUG. 31 TO SEPT. 9

Announcement is made by George W. Dickinson, general manager of the Michigan State Fair, of the superintendents of the various departments of the exposition, which will be held in Detroit August 31 to Sept. 9. Among the changes in the list this year is a complete reorganization of the Educational department, which divides the work into three sections. Under this arrangement, E. T. Cameron of Lansing, will superintend of the school work; Miss Edna B. Montgomerie of Detroit, head of the physical training department, and Thomas M. Sattler of Jackson will have charge of the Boys' State Fair school.

In the automobile department, Frank T. Newton of Ypsilanti will be member in charge, with W. S. Gilbreath and H. H. Shuart of Detroit, superintendents.

One other notable change is the consolidation of the fruit, plants and flowers departments. This change was thought advisable in that one helps to show the other off to better advantage. H. S. Newton of Hart will be superintendents of the enlarged department.

Most of the other superintendents are already well known to State Fair patrons. Charles Prescott of Tawas City is superintendent of the horse department, assisted by Howard C. Allen of Washington Court House, Ohio. In the cattle department, F. L. Tessier of Clarkston, who for many years has had charge of this department, will have charge of the beef breeds and J. Fred Smith of Byron, the dairy breeds. The sheep department will be under the supervision of Frank Coward of Bronson with E. N. Ball of Hamburg, assisting.

John W. Smith of Port Huron will be superintendent of swine, while the poultry, pigeons and pet stock will be in charge of George Kelly of North Branch, assisted by Daniel Thomas of Pontiac. Farm products will be supervised by T. F. Marston of Bay City; machinery, implements and vehicles by A. E. Stevenson of Port Huron, dairy, domestic and apairy by Leonard Freeman of Flint as member in charge and George H. Brownell of Detroit as superintendent.

D. J. Healy of Detroit will be in charge of the needlework department. The handicraft and fine arts will be in the hands of Dudley E. Waters of Grand Rapids as member in charge and Miss Ethel Plumb of Detroit as superintendent. The Better Babies' contest will again be under the direction of Mrs. Edwin S. Leonard of Detroit.

W. A. Williams of Sandusky, will be superintendent of the merchandise and manufacturing department. Transportation will be supervised by Eugene C. Betz of Monroe as member in charge and George A. Walker of Detroit as superintendent.

C. A. Taylor of Detroit, is superintendent of the outside gates and Joseph Toynton of Pontiac, superintendent of the grand stand.

When the Tigers Play in Detroit.

Nature's Great Hoodoo Temple. In the Hoodoo basin of western Wyoming are curious formations which resemble Punch and Judy heads, grim savages, slumbering old maids, monkeys, rabbits, birds and animals. There are fifty different shapes of heads, says Popular Science Monthly, and over forty different animal and human faces have been counted. The rock out of which the hoodoos have been carved by Dame Nature is what is known as volcanic breccia.

Yes, Very Dry. "Yes," said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, Ark., "it's pretty tollable dry out my way. It's got so, in fact, that about half of the time three or four of my smallest children get practically covered up while playing in the road and can't be found till their maw yells for 'em to come to dinner or an automobile comes lipping along and knocks 'em out of the dust."

Some Travelers. The Arctic tern holds all records for length of migration. When the young are full grown the entire family leaves the arctic regions and several months later is found skirting the edge of the Antarctic continent.

First Lithograph. The first successful example of the lithographic art was produced 120 years ago by Aloys Senefelder, a Bavarian, who produced a piece of music printed by this process.

Children's Dresses. With the prices of Machinery, Material and Labor steadily advancing, a great many of the smaller factories are discontinuing operations. We made a purchase a few days ago from one of these concerns, taking all of the Children's White Dresses they had on hand. Buying them in such a way that we can sell you Dresses that formerly sold at $1.75, $2.25 and $3.00, for $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50, ages from 6 to 14 years. They will all move out quickly. Nemo Corsets are going to be advanced 50c per pair on July 1. We have no option in this matter, as the makers make the price. The merchant must adjust himself according or lose the agency. Over $6,000 has been raised for helping the storm victims in Washtenaw county and large numbers of Boy Scouts and Red Cross workers from Ann Arbor and vicinity have been assisting the farmers in the work of clearing up wreckage and repairing buildings.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ferguson of Ann Arbor, June 11, a son, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson have many friends here, as he was formerly a member of the faculty of the Northville schools and Mrs. Ferguson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judd Chapman, and a graduate of our High school.

While plowing on his farm in Southfield recently, J. D. Brooks plowed up the skeleton of an Indian. They found an iron kettle, tomahawk, skinning knife, two bracelets, a heavy chain with a cross attached around his neck, a clay pipe half full of tobacco, and many silver coins.—Birmingham Eccentric.

The graduating costumes of the Eighth grade class of the South Lyon school last week were as unique and economical as they were patriotic. The girls wore blue aprons, red sunbonnets and white shoes and the boys appeared in blue overalls, red neck handkerchiefs and white footwear. The national colors were also used in decorating the hall where the exercises took place.

The two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Slater died Sunday, in a hospital in Brooklyn, N. Y., where they reside, after an illness with pneumonia. Plymouth Presbyterians have engaged a pastor to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Rev. B. F. Farber. The new incumbent is Rev. Karl Miller of Tipton, Ind., who will assume his duties about July first, next.

We learn from a Traverse City paper that Harry L. Weaver, formerly of this place, has been so successful in his undertaking business there that he has recently purchased an elegant automobile hearse, and also the first motor ambulance to be brought to that city.

No more conclusive demonstration of unselfish patriotism could be made than that of the bank officials of this country in their work for the Liberty Loan. In definite illustration of this fact, the subscriptions secured here mean the absolute withdrawal from our local banking institutions of $80,000, a withdrawal which has possibilities of being a permanent one, and which is in any event a matter of years. The idea that the banks are to profit in any way from their activities along this line is absurd on the very face of it, as may be readily seen on very slight consideration.

The W. R. C. benefit show at the Aelseium Wednesday night brought out a full house, lots of applause and much merriment. The "company" members all did themselves proud and won added laurels for Northville's already appreciated home talent. Every number was applauded to the echo, from the versatile "Joins" of the "cullid" ladies and the antics of "Mutt and Jeff" to the Boy Scouts' song attesting Uncle Sam's wealth of nephews and nieces and the singing of one of that gentleman's nephews, who is "on the job".

The W. R. C. netted a most acceptable sum for its treasury, and the quest was received that the entertainment be given at Redford either this will be done is not yet decided.

GRISWOLD HOTEL ARTS SELF-SERVE

The Griswold House at Detroit has certainly had some innovation in the remodeling and conversion of their main room into an up-to-date service restaurant or cafe. It certainly is a new idea and ought to prove successful. By this new plan a is able to get a very delightful for from 40c to 60c, including very best food, and cooking that had, and in addition one doesn't spend 25 cents to $1.00 tipping waiters for service you don't in order to be stylish.

Manager Post the Griswold Hotel estimates ing in overhead expenses by the plan of $50,000 a year. A restaurant service dining room is maintained in the second floor.

"Eat Plenty of Hard Food." There are three things to keep in mind when considering diseases of the teeth—first, that soft food is injurious and that plenty of hard food should be eaten; second, that infection in the gums and tooth cavities may cause disorders by the pus being swallowed and so conveyed to the stomach and intestines; thirdly, that the pus may cause more serious trouble by being absorbed through the lymphatics.

Colonel Illingworth had dismissed Meade from his mind because he hated him. Helen Illingworth refrained from talking about him to her father because she loved him. So they were never in each other's presence without thinking of the man. This was a source of great irritation to the father. On occasion he almost found himself at the point of shouting at his daughter to talk about him. And that she so carefully avoided the subject and as the avoidance was so obviously in accordance with his own wish, the restraint irritated him the more. The fact that they both sought so carefully to maintain the old relationship made it more impossible. For relationships which are primarily founded on love cannot be maintained by constraint without the weakening of the great force upon which their tenure had previously depended. There is nothing like concealment to impair and weaken a tie unless it be a ban! Prohibitions rarely prohibit.

Still there remained a deep and abiding affection between father and daughter and they managed somehow to get along outwardly much as before. Indeed Colonel Illingworth was more kind and considerate than ever to his daughter, and she repaid him with more than usual care and devotion. The very fact that she seemed to have accepted the situation and obeyed the law he had laid down gave him some compunctions of conscience. On that account, perhaps, he had been the more willing to accede to her request to take Shurtliff into his employ. In no way was Shurtliff responsible for the failure of the bridge or for any mistake in the calculations of the Meades, and Shurtliff was an invaluable man, not only for an engineer but for the president of the Martlet Bridge company.

He was familiar with the subjects that Colonel Illingworth discussed and wrote about. He was intelligent and reliable to the last degree, his reputation for steadiness and discretion unquestioned, and he was marvelously efficient in his subordinate position. The colonel, having first tried him out, had advanced him rapidly after learning his worth. He was now his private secretary. Shurtliff being an old bachelor without kin or kind, and not originally fond of women, found himself suddenly in touch with one of the sweetest and kindest, as well as the youngest and most beautiful of a sex about which he knew nothing.

His new position naturally brought him into close touch with the colonel. The old man transacted a good deal of his business in his own house. Shurtliff was frequently there. Under other circumstances Helen Illingworth would have treated him with that fine and gracious courtesy which she extended to everyone with whom she came in contact, but she would not have especially interested herself in him. She would not have made him the object of the delicate attention and given him the careful consideration which would have completely turned the head of a younger and more susceptible man.

There had been a prejudice in Shurtliff's mind against women in general, and Helen Illingworth in particular. He had quickly realized that she above all persons had the greatest interest in disproving Meade's statement and his own and in laying the blame for the failure of the bridge where it belonged on the shoulders of the patron to whom had been the habit of his life. Therefore the old secretary was constantly on his guard lest he be trapped into admissions or actions which might be used to discredit the older Meade and convict the two conspirators.

But Helen Illingworth was far too clever to allow any inkling of such a design to appear. Not the remotest hint of such a purpose did she betray. She deliberately set about to win the old man's regard and respect and perhaps eventually his affection. She had the ordering of her father's household, of course. That was a matter in which the colonel concerned himself not at all so long as things went smoothly, as they always did. He was a little astonished at her treatment of Shurtliff, but the old secretary was at heart a gentleman, and there was no reason why, if Helen chose to include him among her friends and invite him to dinner and otherwise make him welcome in the house, she should not do so. And in his dry, precise way Shurtliff was rather likable. He was touched and flattered by her kindness, and in spite of his suspicions, which gradually grew less, by the way, he exerted himself to show his appreciation and to bear himself seemingly in his new life.

Colonel Illingworth had no suspicions whatsoever that there had been any conspiracy to suppress the truth and shift the blame. True, his daughter had protested on that fatal day that she did not believe Meade and Shurtliff, but that was in the excitement of the moment and understandable in view of her plighted troth. Helen had never discussed that with him; even the very name of the engineer being banned, she was silent. She was wise enough not to try to worry or bother her father with arguments on that point, to which, of course, he would not have listened in any event. Accordingly the conferences with Rodney had never been brought to his notice. There was no use stirring up trouble and strife. There was no necessity even to discuss it with her father, until she had found more proof. So he at least had no suspicions as to her treatment of Shurtliff. He could not see any end to be gained and therefore he jumped to the conclusion that there was none.

In course of time, as Miss Illingworth never referred to Meade in the secretary's presence, all his mistrust disappeared. Finally he even brought up the subject of Meade's whereabouts of his own motion. Although the girl was fairly wild to talk and ask questions she had wit and resolution enough to change the subject when it had been first broached and for many times thereafter.

Helen Illingworth was fighting for the reputation of the man she loved and for her own happiness, and she was resolved to neglect no point in the game. She partook in a large measure of her father's capacity, but she added to his somewhat blunt and military way of doing things the infinite tact of woman, stimulated by a growing, overwhelming devotion to her absent lover. She cherished that feeling for him in any event and would have done so but the whole situation was so charged with mystery and surcharged with romance that it made the most powerful and stimulating appeal to her.

She lived to vindicate Meade and she bent every effort toward that end. She did not overdo it, either. Finally, as he himself continued to press the subject upon her, she made no secret to Shurtliff of her devotion to the younger Meade, her sorrow that he had made such a declaration, and her determination to wait for him. She was always careful to end every conversation by saying that she knew her outlook was perfectly hopeless and that she could expect nothing except sorrow until the younger Meade was rehabilitated. She so contrived matters, while constantly affirming her feeling for Meade, as to let Shurtliff infer that she was convinced that he had been telling the truth in what he had said.

After a time she deftly appealed to him to know if he could not help her discover the truth she tactfully maintained even in face of the evidence that Shurtliff had given. And she did this in such an adroit way that Shurtliff became convinced that she did not connect him with any willful deception, and that she believed that he was deluded himself and occupied the position of an innocent abettor. And Shurtliff, in his strange, old, self-contained way, finally grew to like Helen Illingworth exceedingly. Indeed he started in his work with natural antagonism to Colonel Illingworth, and when he sensed, as he very soon did, the difference that had arisen between father and daughter, he espoused the cause of the latter. He was the kind of a man who had to devote himself to somebody. He began to wonder if there was any way to secure the girl's happiness without betraying the elder Meade.

She compassed the secretary, who was, of course, old enough to be her father, with sweet observances and he found it increasingly hard to keep true to his falsehood. Now she was capable of fascinating bigger personalities than Shurtliff, although she cared little for that power and rarely exercised it. The old man actually got to thinking of her as a daughter. Sometimes when they had an hour together he found himself seconding her arguments for the innocence of the younger Meade, for she had progressed that far by now, with little details which his knowledge and experience of the two men could supply. Trifling in themselves as were these contributions, as Rodney pointed out when she repeated them to him, they nevertheless added something to the cumulative force of the argument so laboriously built up by the friend and woman. And they were decidedly indicative of a growing mental condition on the part of Shurtliff from which much might be hoped and expected.

But Shurtliff could not bring himself to come out boldly and confess, and his failure to do that made him more and more miserable. At first his conscience had been entirely clear. He had viewed his conduct in the light of a noble sacrifice for the great man. Now he began to question—Was it right to blast the future of the living for the sake of the fame of the dead? Probably he would have questioned that eventually without regard to Helen Illingworth, but when he began to grow fond of the woman and when he realized, as she unmistakably disclosed it to him, that her own happiness was engaged and that he was not only ruining the career of a man but wrecking the life and crushing the heart of an entirely innocent woman, he had a constant battle royal with himself to pursue his course and to keep silent.

Yet such is the character of a temperament like that of Shurtliff, narrowed and contracted by a single passion of life and lacking the breadth which comes from intercourse with men and women, that his compunctions of conscience only made him the more resolved. The lonely, heart-broken old man swore that he would never tell. The young man could go his own gait and work out his own salvation, or be damned, if he must. The woman's heart might break, pitiful as that would be, but he would never tell. He was as unhappy in that determination as any other man fighting against his conscience must inevitably be.

Sometimes looking at the misery in the old man's face (for on his countenance his heart wrote his secret), Helen Illingworth experienced compunctions of conscience of her own, which she told to Rodney in default of other confessor. That fine young man appreciated fully the woman's feelings and understood her keen sensibilities, and his comprehension was a great comfort to her. He encouraged her to persevere. Since it was only through Shurtliff that the truth could be established, she must not falter nor reject any fair and reasonable means to gain his whole confidence and make him speak. It was, after all, simply a question of whether the game was worth the candle. How best could they expose or fight a deceit? And that the deception was for a noble purpose and to serve a laudable end in the midst of the deceivers did not alter that fact.

"You are doing nothing in the least degree dishonorable, Miss Illingworth," said Rodney, reassuringly. "Woman's wiles have been her weapons since the Stone Age."

"But I do feel compunctions of conscience occasionally."

"Personally I think you are abundantly justified," urged Rodney. "Yes, to establish the truth, to give the man I love his good name would justify more than this," she replied, "and yet—she smiled faintly—"my conscience does hurt me a little. The old man is beginning to love me."

"That's the reason it hurts you," said Rodney. "When he loves you enough he will do anything you want, as I would."

The young man stopped, looked long at her, and then turned away with a little gesture of—was it appeal or renunciation? He was too loyal to his friend to speak, but he could not control everything. The tone of his voice, the look in his eyes, his quick avoidance of her, told the woman a little story. They had been very closely associated, these two. Rodney also had not had much advantage of woman's society, certainly not of a woman like Helen Illingworth. She had given him her full confidence in the intimacy. He was a man. He loved like others. She was too fond of him, too great, too true a woman to pretend.

"Mr. Rodney," said the girl, laying her hand on his arm as though to restrain him, "that way madness lies."

"Miss Illingworth," said Rodney, turning and facing her, his lips firmly compressed, his eyes shining. "I'm devoted to Bert Meade and to you"—he lifted her hand from his arm and kissed it—"and I'm going to do everything for your happiness."

That was the only message that she received from her lover. He had dropped out of sight completely. They caused search to be made for him, sought tidings of him in every possible way, but in vain. Her heart almost broke sometimes at the separation. She had confidence enough in her power over him, and in her woman's wit, to feel that if she had only another opportunity she might learn the truth, force it from him, constrain him to tell it, because she loved him!

CHAPTER XVII.

Once More Unto the Work.

The Martlet Bridge company had finally weathered the storm, although it was, of course, not intrusted with the new international bridge which was about to be commenced. When Bertram Meade read of the new undertaking, it cut him to the heart. This time there would be no mistake. In the necessity of recouping its fortunes, the Martlet Bridge company entered upon an even wider career. The directors took contracts which they had hitherto disdained because they were comparatively unimportant and they bid on operations which they had hitherto left to competitors. They were building the great steel viaduct by the town of Coronado below the dam, and they had already built the splendid steel arch that spanned the ravine, here almost a gorge, in the valley of the Kicking Horse to the eastward of the big mesa.

After Christmas, Colonel Illingworth decided to make another of his tours of inspection, and as Helen was not looking particularly well from the strain under which she was laboring, he offered to take her with him, especially, as he was going to the far Southwest, where the weather would be mild and pleasant, to inspect the growing viaduct and the completed arch. She gladly availed herself of the permission. There was always a possibility, albeit a most remote one, that she might hear of Meade. That it might be well to invite a representative of The Engineering News, to wit, Rodney, to accompany them, so that the really splendid work the Martlet company was doing might be made widely known. The party consisted of the father and daughter, Curtiss, the chief engineer, Doctor Severance, the vice president and financial man, and Rodney.

Now Helen Illingworth had not the least reason in the world to suspect that Bertram Meade was in any way connected with this engineering project, but Rodney had pointed out and had imbued her with his own belief that sooner or later, when Meade was found, he would be found engaged in engineering in some capacity.

"It's in his blood," said Rodney. "He can no more keep away from it than he can stop breathing. He can't do anything else. Somewhere he's at the old job. It might be in America, and it might be out there at Coronado, or it might be in South America, Europe, Asia, or—

"I wonder if we can't find out all the engineering work that is being done in the world and send representatives to seek him," said Helen Illingworth.

Rodney laughed. "To hunt that way would be like hunting a needle in a haystack. I cannot bid you hope that he is there; in fact, I think it is most unlikely that he would be any place near where the Martlet people are operating, but there's a chance, even if only the faintest one."

Well, women's hearts can build a great deal on a faint chance. They are calculated for the forlorn hope. And so Helen Illingworth stood on the steps of the private car as it rolled across the mile-long temporary bridge at Coronado, and scanned the workmen grouped on one side of the track, their work suspended for a moment that the train might pass on the wooden trestling, in hope that she could see in one of them the man she loved and sought. And Rodney stood by her side, equally interested, searching the crowd with his glance, also.

There was nothing in the town to attract Helen out of the car. She had visited West and Southwest many times. Colonel Illingworth, with Rodney and Severance, there left the train. Miss Illingworth decided to go into the hills and get away from the arid and heated plains. A siding had been built near the steel arch under the slope of the hill from which the huge mesa arose, within two miles of the dam, and the car was to be placed there. The men left behind would use the private car of the division superintendent of the railroad when they had ended their several tasks.

It had been raining dimly during the afternoon, and when the car was detached and switched to the siding and left up in the hills some twenty miles from the town, it was too wet and uncomfortable to leave it. Disregarding the downpour, however, Curtiss, who had come up with it, made a very careful investigation of the completed bridge, which more than surpassed his expectations in its appearance of sturdy grace, as well as in the evidences of careful workmanship in its erection.

That evening the special engine pushed the other private car up from the valley, bringing the people who had inspected the bridge. A few more weeks would complete the great viaduct. Everything was proceeding in the most satisfactory way and Colonel Illingworth was very much elated over the situation.

"Who would have thought," he said as they sat down to dinner in the brightly lighted observation room, "that it would rain in this country at this season of the year?"

"It will probably be over by tomorrow morning," observed Rodney.

"If it continued long enough and rained hard enough, that dam would have to be looked after. We'll go over and see it tomorrow," said the colonel cheerfully.

"What would happen if it gave way?" asked his daughter.

"It would flood the valley, sweep away the town, and—" he paused.

"Well, father?"

"Run the bridge."

"We can't afford to have another failure after the International," said Severance.

Now there was a newcomer at the table, a big rancher named Winters, whom Rodney had met in the town and had introduced to Colonel Illingworth. The latter had invited him to dinner and to stay the night in the extra sleeper, and Winters, who had particular reasons for wanting to talk with Rodney and to meet Miss Illingworth, had accepted.

"You can count on its stopping," he said at last. "My ranch is a hundred miles to the north of here. I heard Rodney was with your party, and as he was an old classmate of mine—in fact, my best friend at Harvard along with Bert Meade—and the mention of the forbidden name caused quick glances to be passed around the table, but raised no comment—the chance of seeing him brought me down here. I know the weather along this whole section of the country; it's the driest place on earth, and I would almost offer to swallow all the rain that will fall after this storm spends itself."

"Well, that's good," said Curtiss, "because I've heard that the dam lacks very little of completion, but that the spillway has been delayed."

"You'll find that the storm has broken in the morning," said Winters confidently.

After dinner Colonel Illingworth, desirous of talking business, called the men of the party, except Rodney and Winters, back into the observation room of the other car, leaving the two men with Helen.

"Mr. Shurtliff," said Helen, as the men stepped out on the platform, the secretary following, since his employer had intimated his services might be needed. "If you can, I wish you would come back here as soon as possible."

"Certainly, Miss Illingworth," said the secretary, "immediately, if your father finds that he does not need me."

"Rod," said Winters when they were alone, "I'd go a long way to see you, but I might as well be frank. I did not come down these hundred miles, leaving my ranch in the dead of winter with all its possibilities of mishap to the cattle, simply to see you, or even Miss Illingworth here, although she is worth it," he went on with the frank bluntness of a western man.

"Of course you didn't," said Rodney, smiling. "I know I'm not a sufficient attraction."

ney, and so devoted to Bert, that I am worrying—"

"You need say nothing more, Miss Illingworth. I know all about the situation. Rodney wrote me and—"

"Well, then, you understand my anxiety, my reason for asking?"

"I do."

"And you will tell us?"

"I wish to heaven I could."

"Can't you tell us anything?"

"Well, yes, I can."

"What?"

"It may be a breach of confidence."

"I'd take the risk," said the girl, her bosom heaving. "Was she at last about to hear from her lover?"

"Know where he is, old man?" asked Rodney.

"I think so—not sure, but—"

"Where?"—from the woman, breathlessly.

"I didn't agree to tell you that."

"What then?"

"All I can say is that after the death of his father he turned up at my ranch one day some five months ago and told me his story."

"What?"—exclaimed Rodney. "Did he tell you he was innocent?"

"Not at first. He told me he was guilty."

"But you didn't believe him, did you?" asked the woman impulsively.

"I certainly did not."

"Why not?"

"Well, I don't know why. I just didn't, that's all. I know Meade. I know him well. I know his make-up. We get accustomed to sizing up a man's actions out West here, and it didn't take me longer than it took him to tell the story to know that it wasn't true."

"Oh, thank you for that," said the woman.

"But our beliefs are not evidence, Dick," interposed Rodney.

"We can't prove it and that's the point. I told him," continued Winters, "that it was a damned lie—I beg your pardon, Miss Illingworth, I mean I told him that it was not true and that he was a fool for sticking to it, and—er—he admitted it—er," floundered Winters, suddenly realizing that he was on the eve of a breach of confidence and checking himself just in time. "In fact, the subject was painful to him, and I let him alone, which is what we generally do to a man who doesn't want his affairs inquired into too closely." Winters ended lamely, realizing how near he had come to betraying his friend's confidence and telling of Meade's own admission that he had said what he had to save the fame and honor of the father.

"Well, what next?" asked Rodney, understanding as did Helen Illingworth herself the ranchman's hesitation, and respecting it, although the unavoidable inference gave her great joy.

"He hung around the ranch for a month or six weeks to get his balance. He was pretty badly broken up. I'm a bachelor myself and don't know much about those things, but I can say that he loved you, Miss Illingworth, more than life itself."

"But not more than the reputation of his father," she said with a little tinge of bitterness.

"Well, I take it he looked at that as a matter of honor. You know a man's got to keep his ideals of honor."

"Even at the expense of a woman's heart?" said the girl.

"It sounds hard, but I guess we've got to admit that. But that's neither here nor there," he continued, gliding over the subject, "the point is I found that he had to fight it out himself, and I mainly let him alone. I gave him a horse and gun and turned him loose in the wilds. Best place on earth for a man in his condition, Miss Illingworth. You can go out into the wilderness and get nearer to God there than any place I know of. He came back finally, turned in his gun, borrowed the horse, bade me good-by, and said he was going out to make a new start."

"Where did he go? Which way?"

"He was headed south when I saw him last, and all this lay in his way."

"You mean—?" cried the woman.

"He may be here?" said Rodney. Winters nodded.

"I have thought so. It's only a guess, of course, and probably a poor one. But when I read in the papers that Colonel Illingworth was coming here, and that you were along, and Miss Illingworth, I thought I'd just take a run down here and see what could be done."

"Oh, I'm so glad you have come." "He's not working on the bridge," said Rodney.

"How do you know, Rod?"

"I examined all the pay rolls, and none of them bears his name."

"He wouldn't work under his own name in the Martlet Bridge company," said the woman.

"Certainly not. That was only my first step. I went around among the workmen too, and I got a look at every one of them. I'm sure he's not there."
