THIRD LIBERTY LOAN STARTS OFF WELL

FIFTY-SIX THOUSAND DOLLARS
RAISED AT OPENING MEETING
TUESDAY NIGHT.

JUST SIXTY PEOPLE OUT OF 1,000
WHO ARE ABLE TO DO IT. LIBERTY
BAND AND LIBERATO.

Thousands of people lined the streets here Tuesday night to welcome the big Liberty band of 100 pieces and the world's greatest cornetist, Prof. Liberato. The Northville band was also out and gave their city brethren a royal welcome.

The big band came in two special U. S. cars under the splendid management of Division Supt. John Clark. After the street concert, a Liberty Bonds sale meeting was held in the Alseum theatre, attended by over 400 people. Here the great Liberato delighted the audience with four cornet solos. Then came the speeches by Mr. Lerchen and Ward Choate, a Canadian and American army officer. L. A. Babbitt as chairman of the meeting, then introduced Northville's own Charles A. Ponsford, who really made the best speech of the evening in explaining the need for sale of Liberty bonds and their value to the holder. Then Postmaster Will Timham and Nelt Schrader get busy and the sales commenced. A huge board of eight-inch squares on the stage showed the progress of the sales and before long $56,000 of Northville's quota of $80,000 had been disposed of. Fred Simmons, whose son is in the army, was one of the most enthusiastic buyers and boosters.

Sixty buyers did the work and about three hundred who haven't yet signed and who ought to have been right there at the meeting with their enthusiasm, loyalty and signatures, will be given a chance this and next week to get in on the big event.

Following are the names of those who have subscribed and next week the list will contain those who have been added:

"Trench and Catap" the Camp Custer weekly paper, is now on the Record's exchange list. It last week's report of the monthly Athletic Field Day, "Kysor, 328th Headquarters Co., Field Artillery," is noted as one of the successful contestants in the "high jump" and "broad jump" events. As this is the exact address, and the name not a common one we assume that it refers to Corporal James D. son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Kysor of this village.

Two names of Northville vicinity boys which should have been placed on the honor roll some time ago, are inserted this week, Harlan Filkins and Ralph Lyfe, who are at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Pa. Ralph has been very ill there but is now much better.

Chester Cram returned to Camp Custer Tuesday after a few days' furlough spent in visiting at Five Points and Northville. Mrs. Cram, who accompanied him, remained here with relatives for a longer visit.

Plymouth has lost her third soldier boy in the death at Camp Custer of another of her finest young men, Corporal Scott H. Coffrite, who died of pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Emory VanValkenburg now have three sons in the U. S. service, Carl, Milo and Lawrence.

Relatives here have received news of the arrival of Orrin Casterline in France.

MORE LETTERS FROM SOLDIERS

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Garfield and family received the following letter a few days ago, the first they have had from their son since his arrival "over there."

Some where in England,
March 10, 1918
"My Dearest Mother, Father, Brothers and Sisters:
Here I am in "Old England" and feeling fine. Had a very pleasant voyage. Was sick only two days, the first day out and last Sunday. Believe me, I was some sick. Hope I never go through it again, although of course I would be glad to get back in."

RED CROSS NOTES.
The Minnesota Red Cross has gained hundreds of dollars from the sale of tin foil collected in receptacles that it put in public places for the purpose, and from the discarded 1917 automobile license plates.

W. B. Mosher recently received a letter from his nephew in Edmore North Dakota the following extract from which is of much interest as showing the patriotism here. "The people of the small towns here are very patriotic. They hold Red Cross sales where calves, pigs, chickens, eggs, produce, etc. are donated by the farmers and sold at public auction at prices many times their value. Here are a few instances: an egg sold for $51.00 and a turkey for $811.25. A sale here last Saturday totaled over $3500. In another town they sold a load of wood, hauled 32 miles for $62.

Win the War by Preparing the Land Sowing the Seed and Producing Bigger Crops

Work in Joint Effort the Soil of the United States and Canada
CO-OPERATIVE FARMING IN MAN POWER NECESSARY TO WIN THE BATTLE FOR LIBERTY

The Food Controllers of the United States and Canada are asking for greater food production. Scarcely 100,000,000 bushels of wheat are available to be sent to the allies overseas before the crop harvest. Upon the efforts of the United States and Canada rests the burden of supply.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute; Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seedling operation.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 400,000,000 Bushels

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but needs the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help, to do farm work this year. It wants the land in the United States developed first of course; but it also wants to help Canada. Whenever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied, we want to direct him there.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than May 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

YOU NEED NOT SUFFER WITH BACKACHE AND RHEUMATISM

For centuries GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil has been a standard household remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and stomach trouble, and all diseases connected with the urinary organs. The kidneys and bladder are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters, the purifiers of your blood. If the poisons which enter your system through the blood and stomach are not entirely thrown out by the kidneys and bladder you are doomed.

Weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, headache, pain in loins, and lower abdomen, gait-stones, gravel, difficulty when urinating, cloudy and bloody urine, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, all warn you to look after your kidneys and bladder. GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil Capsules are what you need.

They are not a "patent medicine" nor a "new discovery." For 200 years they

The Housewife and the War

(Special Information Service, United States Department of Agriculture.)
RICE—GROW MORE. EAT MORE. SAVE WHEAT.

Made-in-America—We Might Advantageously Consume Greater Quantities of This Nutritious Food and Grow the Increase in Our Own Rice Fields.

RICE FAVORED AS NUTRITIOUS FOOD

If Consumption Could Be Increased in United States More Wheat Could Be Saved.

GREAT VALUE NOT REALIZED

Most Important Article of Diet in China and Japan—Increased Production Would Release Grain for Our Allies.

Here in the United States it is difficult to realize that there is no other edible product, excepting meat, upon which more people in the world are dependent for food, than rice. We might advantageously consume much greater quantities of this nutritious food and grow the increase in our own rice fields, according to the 1918 crop-production program recently announced by the United States department of agriculture. An increased production and consumption not only would expand a profitable industry, the federal specialists declare, but the eating of more rice in the place of wheat would release a greater quantity of the bread grain for shipment to the allies.

Per Capita Consumption.
The average per capita consumption of rice for food in this country is scarcely six pounds a year, and most of this is consumed in the Southern states. The high esteem in which rice is held in other countries is indicated by their per capita consumption. Norway and Sweden consume over 9 pounds per capita; Russia over 11 pounds; England, 27 pounds; France, 34 pounds; Italy, over 101 pounds; and Germany more than 93 pounds. But even these European countries do not begin to eat as much rice as Japan and China. There rice is the most important article of diet. Each man, woman and child in Japan, on the average, consumes 147 pounds of rice each year, and those in China, 158 pounds. The placing of such dependence upon rice as a staple food certainly proves beyond a doubt that it is highly nutritious; analysis of rice supports this proof. Pound for pound rice is about as nutritious as wheat. Every 100 pounds of cleaned rice contains 87.7 pounds of nutriment, of which 8 pounds are protein, 0.3 pounds fat, 79 pounds carbohydrates, and 0.4 pound ash. The analysis of wheat flour shows that it contains 87.1 pounds of nutriment in each 100 pounds, of which 10.9 pounds are protein, 1.1 pounds fat, 74.8 pounds carbohydrates, and 0.4 pound ash. Thus the total nutriment in rice is a trifle greater than in wheat. Wheat has the advantage in protein and rice in carbohydrates.

Foodstuff for Orient.
Although rice is the great foodstuff of the Orient, it is not used there in making a raised bread. In this country dietitians have made excellent bread by substituting as high as 25 per cent of rice for wheat flour, and have obtained a white yeast bread of excellent flavor.

Unpolished rice is offered and accepted as a product superior to the polished rice, but in reality its food value is only better by so small a degree that it is practically negligible. In the preparation of the polished and the unpolished rice, the article, aleu-one layer, and germ, which contains much protein and other important food constituents, are removed, reducing greatly the nutritive value of the grain. The real difference between these two mill products is largely in the coating of the polished rice with glucose and talc, and the absence of coating material on the unpolished. The superiority of the brown rice over either of these lies in the fact that the entire seed as nature produced it is used, except the inclosing husks or hulls, which have been removed.

BROWN RICE BETTER THAN THE POLISHED—ASK FOR IT

Rice as sold by our grocers is a pretty grain with a smooth and shiny surface, attractive to the eye, but lacks the palatability that makes foods popular. This rice has been so highly milled that it has been robbed of much of its food value and of most of its oily flavoring matter, leaving a product known to the trade as polished rice, which to many persons is tasteless. If the American housewife could be induced to demand brown rice instead of taking the polished product, there would be a marked increased consumption of this cereal in a very short time, due in part if not entirely to the pleasing flavor of the kernel.

Some Good Rice Recipes.

As a staple article of diet, rice may be boiled in salted water and used like potato or sweet potato as a vegetable at a meal at which fish, meat, eggs, beans or other foods rich in protein are served. Wholly or partially cooked rice can be used with cheese, minced meat or poultry, fish, eggs, beans, gravy, etc., for a variety of made dishes, the combinations constituting dishes in which most of the needed food elements are present. It also may be used as a major or minor ingredient in stews and soups.

Instead of serving rice plain as a vegetable, it may be stewed with tomatoes, cooked in a double boiler with tomato juice, soup stock or milk, or it may be seasoned with curry powder, onions or other seasoning materials. By using skim milk in this way a partially economical dish is produced.

As a cereal for breakfast, rice may be boiled in milk and sweetened, or eaten with butter and salt. If it is desired, dried fruits such as dates or raisins may be cooked with the rice. Cold boiled rice, mixed with pancake or muffin batter, of wheat, buckwheat or cornmeal, for instance, makes a pleasing addition to such food products, reduces the quantity of wheat needed, and furnishes a method for using the left-over cereal.

Mashed Potatoes Different.

Most housekeepers know how delicious mashed potatoes can be made by beating them until light with hot milk, margarine or butter and salt and pepper, four tablespoonsful of hot milk and one teaspoonful of the fat for every medium-sized potato. To make the mashed potatoes a little "different" they can be turned into a potato soufflé by adding the beaten white of eggs (two eggs to six medium-sized potatoes), piling lightly in a baking dish and baking in the oven till brown. Grated cheese added to the soufflé is good.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

RECORD OF HOLSTEIN COW

California Animal Sets High Mark by Producing 24.01 Pounds of Butter in Seven Days.

Purebred Holstein cows are certainly doing their level best to respond to Hoover's injunction to increase production. Records are being broken so rapidly that a cow no sooner gets used to her championship laurels than another one snatches them away.

Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker has just added to the dairy fame of California by breaking the record for butterfat production in the junior three-year-old class, by producing 24.01 pounds of butter in seven consecutive days, in the division covering tests begun not less than 240 days from freshening.

Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker freshened at the age of three years, five months, twenty-seven days, and began her test eight months after freshening. In the seven days she produced

Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker.

445 pounds of milk, yielding 24.01 pounds of butter. Her prior record, begun 11 days from freshening, is 688.6 pounds of milk, yielding 36.80 pounds of butter. She is making a large yearly record and is due to calve again within the year.

By yielding more than 24 pounds of butter in a week after having been milked for eight months she has established a new world's record, displacing Filderne Holingen Payne, whose record, begun 356 days after freshening, is 339.1 pounds of milk and 22.57 pounds of butter.

TRAINING FOR YOUNG BULLS

Should Be Taught to Be Led by Halter When Quite Young—Caretaker Must Be Master.

When quite young the bull should be trained to be led by a halter. By the time he is a year old, a strong ring should be inserted in his nose so he can be led by a staff. It is not safe to try to lead a grown bull merely by a halter or rope fastened to his ring. In leading by the staff, the caretaker should always walk at the side and never in front of the bull. One of the essentials in training the young bull is that he must be taught that his caretaker is his master. Bulls known to be vicious usually are dangerous with care, with the result that fewer accidents are likely to occur with them than with those considered gentle.

SILAGE FOR DAIRY ANIMALS

Found Superior to Corn Fodder by Experiment Stations—Larger Amount of Nutrients.

Experiments conducted by experiment stations demonstrate that silage is superior to corn fodder for dairy cows. Cows receiving silage in the ration produced 13 per cent more milk than cows receiving corn fodder. Henry in "Feeds and Feeding" states that "Silage gives better results than dry corn fodder for the reason that cows fed the succulent palatable silage usually consume a heavier ration than those fed the dry fodder and hence have a larger amount of nutrients available for milk production after the maintenance requirements of the body have been met."

LEAVING CALVES WITH COWS

As Milk for First Four Days Is Unfit for Human Consumption, Leave Calf That Time.

Practical dairymen differ in their opinion as to the length of time the calf should be left with the cow. The first milk, or colostrum, is necessary to cleanse the digestive system of the calf and get it in working order. The younger a calf is taught to drink the easier, but as the milk of the cow is unfit for human consumption for at least four days the calf may well be left with the cow for that time. Also, the udder of the cow is generally inflamed and often caked and the nursing of the calf helps to relieve this condition.

NO CURE FOR WHITE SCOURS

Disease Is Generally Fatal, Calf Dying in Day or Two—Disinfection Is Favored.

White scours is caused by a germ entering through the navel cord soon after birth. If the germ once gets in the dairy barn all the calves born are liable to the disease within a few hours unless the practice of disinfecting the navel is followed. There is no satisfactory remedy. It is generally fatal, the calf dying within a day or two.

Had To Quit Work Gave Up Hope of Recovery, But Doan's Restored His Health. Has Been Well Since.

J. B. Ragless, carpenter, 210 W. 60th St., Chicago, Ill., says: "My back gave out completely and I had to quit work. I could hardly endure the pain in my back and nights I tossed and turned, unable to sleep. Often in the morning, my back was as stiff as a board, so that I couldn't stoop to dress myself. When I did manage to bend over, everything before me turned black. My head seemed to be whirling and sometimes I was so dizzy I had to grasp something to keep from falling."

Mr. Ragless: "The kidney troubles were irregular in passage, getting me up at night and the passages burned cruelly. I lost my appetite, was weak and listless and went down twenty-five pounds in weight. When I had almost given up hope, Doan's Kidney Pills came to me. Soon after, I passed an examination for life insurance and I'm glad to say my cure has lasted."

Sworn to before me,

Represented the Snub.

An Irishman was at work on a hoisting machine that carried hods of bricks to the top of a building, and brought them down empty. Happening to get caught, he was carried to the top floor, and in the orderly but rapid progress of the machine, was brought to the ground rather suddenly. A fellow-workman leaned from the second-story scaffolding and cried:

"Are you hurt, Pat?"
"You go to the devil!" shouted Pat. "I passed you twice and ye never spoke to me."

Building up for the Spring Attack at the Front is a good deal like putting the body in condition for an invasion of the terms of grip, pneumonia or "Spring fever" here at home.

At this time of the year most people suffer from a condition often called Spring Fever. They feel tired, worn out, before the day is half thru. They may have frequent headaches and sometimes "pimples" or pale skin and white lips. The reason for this is that during the winter, shut up with in doors, eating too much meat and too little green vegetables, one heaps fuel into the system which is not burned up and the clinkers remain to poison the system—a clogging up of the circulation—with inactive liver and kidneys. Time to put your house in order.

For an invigorating tonic which will clarify the blood, put new life in the body, sparkle to the eyes, and a wholesome skin, nothing does so well as a glyceric herb extract made from Golden Seal Root, Blood and Stone-root, Oregon grapes root and Wild Cherry bark. This can be had in convenient, ready-to-use tablet form at all drug stores, sixty cents, and has been sold for the past fifty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By reason of the nerves feeding on the blood, when the blood is pure the nerves feel the effect, and neuralgia or other nerve pains disappear because such pain is the cry of the starved nerves for food. When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urination, rheumatic pains here or there or that constant tired feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain Dr. Pierce's Anuric from your druggist. In tablets, sixty cents.

THE TRUTH ABOUT ECZEMA AND PILES

Thousands and thousands of people, says Peterson, are learning every week that one 30 cent box of Peterson's Ointment will abolish eczema and banish piles, and the grateful letters he receives every day are worth more to me than money.

I had Eczema for many years on my head and could not get anything to do it any good. I saw your ad and got one box and I owe you many thanks for the good it has done me. There isn't a blotch on my head now, and I couldn't help but thank Peterson, for the cure is great, Mrs. Mary Hill, 420 Third Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

I have had itching piles for 15 years and Peterson's is the only ointment that relieves me, besides the piles seem to have gone. —A. B. Ruger, 1127 Washington Avenue, Racine, Wis.

Use Peterson's Ointment for old sores, salt rheum and all skin diseases. It banishes pimples and blackheads in less than 10 days and leaves the skin clean, clear and pleasant to look upon. Druggists guarantee it. Adv.

Son or Brother in training camps in the American Army or Navy? If so, mail him a package of ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath. It is the greatest comforter for tired, aching, tender, swollen feet, and gives relief to corns and blisters.

Soldiers use Allen's Foot-Ease. The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises men in training to shake Foot-Ease in their shoes each morning. Ask your dealer to-day for a 25c. box of Allen's Foot-Ease, and for a 2c. stamp he will mail it for you. What remembrance could be so acceptable?

BUY LIBERTY BONDS

Democracy and Liberty Undergoing the Supreme Test.

Americans Face Great Duties in Providing Food Products and Aiding Our Soldiers and Our Allies in War.

(By HAPSBURG LIEBE of the Vigilantes.)

Democracy and Liberty are not always synonymous, perhaps, but they mean the same to us now, certainly. A military autocracy, after more than forty years of thorough and cunning preparation, a great part of it by means of weapons of our own invention, has thrust our Democracy and our Liberty into the crucible to test it out, to see whether it would hold good. They did not believe it would hold good, those Russian militarists; they do not believe it yet. We believe it will, but our belief has been made up heretofore largely of egotism and blindness.

Democracy and Liberty, the world's with our own, is now undergoing the supreme test. Of course there is stress, and it is coming to the top rapidly. There is inefficiency, mismanagement, grave mistakes that even our national leaders have made; there has been some graft, no doubt; there has been some playing of politics; there has been profiteering, but all this is only the dross floating to the top of the crucible. We were never a military nation, you know. The biggest of our mistakes, I think, was in our shipbuilding program, but we were never a shipbuilding nation either. However, this dross is all being cleared away.

Fully 60 per cent of the winning of this war depends upon us here at home. We have three great duties upon us now as we never had them upon us before—those of us who can grow food products must grow more than ever; we must all aid in the saving of foods, and especially wheat, meats, and sugar; and all of us who can, though it may necessitate some sacrifice, must buy these new Liberty bonds. Properly carried through, these three great duties will prove the overbalancing power in the winning of the war, beyond a doubt. The growing of great crops and the conservation of food, and the buying of Liberty bonds, quickly mean enough food for our soldiers and our allies, and enough ships to carry it. If we fail in this the tide of destiny is quite likely to fall with its skull-and-crossbones upward for us; if we do not fail, then Democracy and Liberty will come out of the crucible covered with glory. The result is inevitable.

WHO FIGHTS AT HOME? SAY IT!

(By ROLAND G. USHER, of the Vigilantes.)

We cannot fight a war and still do business as usual. This means you and not other people. You might as well come to it first as last. The war is unusual and we shall have to have unusual business to deal with it.

The gist of it is this: The nation has just so many hands and just so much energy—just so much raw material and labor. There are only 24 hours in the day and 365 days in the year. We can make only so many things in a given time with a given supply of time and material. If we make some things we cannot make others. If we put sugar into candy to stuff idle women we cannot have jam to feed the soldiers. If we make autos for pleasure only, we cannot use that material, labor and energy for tanks and airplanes. If we burn the gasoline on Sundays, the boys in France cannot use it in battle.

The whole truth is that we must stop business as usual. And this is where you come in—you must stop spending as usual. Do it now. Put your money into gunpowder and not face powder; into tanks and not limousines; into food for the trenches instead of spending it in hotels and restaurants. But you cannot buy directly for the army. The government must do it. Give the government the money and BUY A LIBERTY BOND.

Your Bond Buys Explosives.

Many farmers here in America have used giant powder or dynamite in blasting out stumps and rocks and in preparing a hillside for an orchard. Explosives are dangerous to handle and we all duck our heads and run when the charge is to be set off. Over in France today our sons are having the stuff hurled at them every minute of the day and night with an occasional volley of gas shells that choke and strangle to death and they don't dare run. With the boys looking death in the face over there, we can do no more than look the issue squarely in the face here at home and buy Liberty Bonds and see that they are provided with ammunition to return the Kaiser just as good as he is sending across to our trenches.

We Are at War! Buy Bonds!

Do many farmers, far removed from the war, realize the seriousness of our present predicament? The very fact that the farmer is not immediately in touch with the war makes the danger more imminent. Russia is made up of farming population, probably three-fourths of which knew very little of what the war was over there meant. As a result the army was not provisioned and money not kept in circulation and the military machine collapsed. Support our army by buying bonds.

WHY CHART LACKED DETAIL

Wife Found It Simply Impossible to Put Down All the Remarks Hubby Had Made.

A physician needed a nurse's medical chart, but had none at hand. The man's wife was nursing him, so he drew lines on a sheet of paper to represent a chart. He instructed the wife how to fill it out and left.

Next day the physician called, looked at the chart and was puzzled to find so many remarks registered, far removed from things medical—remarks most irrelevant in fact. He asked an explanation from the wife and he got it!—Wife motioned the physician to follow her into the adjoining room, whispering to him that she did not wish husband to hear the apology she must make for him.

"You see, doctor, I couldn't put down all the remarks he made, even if you did want to know them. I'm awfully sorry—but you see—he used so many swear words about you, doctor, because you wanted to 'know every word a man said.'"

Contrariness.

"Speaking of the Kaiser's contrary or arbitrary attitude in this peace talk," says a well-known legislator, "reminds me of the Kansas farmer who was elected to the state legislature a few years ago. The farmer was called to the chair during a session to act as speaker pro tem. A motion was made to lay a certain resolution on the table. The speaker put the motion like this:

"All those who want the resolution to lay on the table say aye! All those who want to be contrary say no!"

How to Live Cheaply.

There is at least one family in England which can snap its fingers at Lord Rhonda and whose members are not to be found in food queues. The head of the family recently wrote to a London newspaper that himself, wife and family of four have lived for 14 weeks wholly on raw vegetable salads made of grated turnips, carrots, parsnips, beets, cabbages, etc., together with fruit salads, toast and porridge, and says they are all much stronger and healthier as a result. They use neither tea nor coffee and grow their own vegetables, and so may be regarded as the most independent family in England.—New York World.

Are Common in Western Canada

The thousands of U. S. farmers who have accepted Canada's generous offer to settle on homesteads or buy farm land in her provinces have been well repaid by bountiful crops of wheat and other grains.

Where you can buy good farm land at $15 to $30 per acre—get $2 a bushel for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre you are bound to make money—that's what you can do in Western Canada.

In the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta you can get a HOMESTEAD OF 160 ACRES FREE and other land at very low prices.

During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre—many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley, and Flax. Average price paid for live cattle per steer	$84.45
Average price received for meat	68.97
Average price received for by-products	24.09

DON'T BE A MONEY "SLACKER."

A young man who failed to register in the draft call and go to war, if his country needed him, is called a "slacker." He is less a slacker, however, than the person who CAN buy a Liberty bond and fails to do so. The first refuses to offer his life for his country while the other class refuses to loan their money to the government. Don't be a money slacker any how. You can't lose four money by loaning it to Uncle Sam; but somebody's boy can lose his life because you failed to buy a Liberty bond.

Ray Casterling has enlisted in the Engineer Corps of the U. S. A. and leaves Monday for Ann Arbor to take a two months' special course in preparatory work. Ray has been the efficient and painstaking manager of the Northville-Plymouth Gas company here for several years past, and that company greatly regrets to lose his services.

Keep the Kidneys Well

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Northville People Know How to Save It.

Many Northville people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Northville citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. J. N. Elliott, Randolph street, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are a family medicine for kidney disorders and backache in our home. I take Doan's now and then and they keep my kidneys in good working order and give me the best of satisfaction generally. Too much could be said in praise of this medicine."

Price, 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Elliott had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. —Adv. 63

KEEPING THE NEW TIME.

Here is what a few of our contemporaries have to say about the adoption of the "new time" in their respective villages:

The time muddle is gradually being cleared. The town whistle perpetrated an April-fool joke by blowing at 6:30 and 11:30, when most people expected it would blow at 7 and 12. This continued until Tuesday night when the council took action and this whistle now sounds at 7, 12, and 6. Now if everybody will set their time piece to these hours when the whistle blows all will have the same time which will be railroad time and legal time and the bother of two or three "kinds of time" will be eliminated. This will work just as well for farmers as for anybody and the people who want to have "dinner at noon" can do so and be only a half-hour ahead of the sun which is a fine thing in the summer. Hereafter only one time will be recognized in these columns and it will be the revised Central Standard as noted above—Millard Times.

So far the change in time has caused very little confusion in Wayne. For the most part business places are opening and closing their stores on the same hours by the clock as formerly while those not conforming to the rule have only added to the confusion of their patrons without any apparent good. Churches begin on the new hours and all other public meetings will hereafter be announced in conformity with the new time schedule. About the only noticeable feature about the change was that the first extra-hour of daylight after closing hours made the evening seem especially long but this is a feature that is pleasing to every one especially the clerks and others who will most benefit from the new order—Wayne Weekly.

What's the use of setting your clocks ahead just for looks, and then commencing work one hour later? South Lyon Herald.

The Record greatly regrets that the Northville schools and the factories (with one exception) have preferred the "half-hour" time when the change need have caused no confusion if the basis had been, as in Milford, the "12 o'clock whistle." The Dugbar Mfg. Co. adopted that plan at once, with perfect satisfaction to its employees, as they have to make but a half-hour change, in time of beginning of work, instead of a whole hour. The Library and the Northville Woman's club—as they did when "slow time" was officially adopted—will no doubt conform to it, going by the town clock as before. Like the Times, the Record, when mentioning hours of meetings, etc., means only the one time as kept by the official timepiece of this village, the town clock.

DON'T BE A MONEY "SLACKER."

A young man who failed to register in the draft call and go to war, if his country needed him, is called a "slacker." He is less a slacker however than the person who can buy a Liberty bond and fails to do so. The first refuses to offer his life for his country, while the other class, refuses to loan their money to the government. Don't be a money slacker any how. You can't lose four money by loaning it to Uncle Sam, but some body's boy can lose his life because you failed to buy a Liberty bond.

Ray Casteline has enlisted in the Engineer Corps of the U. S. A. and leaves Monday for Ann Arbor to take a two months' special course in preparatory work. Ray has been the efficient and painstaking manager of the Northville-Plymouth Gas company here for several years past, and that company greatly regrets to lose his services.

And sometimes there isn't so much in a name after all. A Detroit attorney whose given names were Abraham Lincoln is disbarred from practice and also sent to the D. of C. for helping a drafted man to evade military service.

BALDEN—LITTLE.

Miss Nellie Zoe Little of this village and Mr. Frank Edward Balden of Detroit were united in marriage Saturday April 6th by Rev. Edward V. Belles at the bride's home on Center Street.

Mrs. Balden has lived in Northville all her life, and has been in business here for some time past. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Balden of this place. The newly married couple will make their home here. Mrs. Balden continuing her millinery business for the present and Mr. Balden his work in Detroit. That not every widow card indicating Red Cross membership also indicates Red Cross workers is a regrettable fact. It is well to have your dollars in the Red Cross treasury but it is better still to be doing active work. It is all needed now as never before, and the same is true in regard to the food administration's work. Some pledged food savers do not display their cards (but all should) and some are saying who have not made the pledge, but in all cases it is actual work and actual food saving that is going to help our soldiers win, and not cards and pledges alone.

We have sufficient material on the ground that if it should explode would make the Halifax disaster look like a small affair, and would kill every man on the reservation and would be heard for 100 miles. Everyone working inside the plant is equipped with a gas mask as three or four breaths prove sufficient to send a man on his long journey.

PRUDENCE SAYS SO

By Ethel Hueston
AUTHOR OF PRUDENCE OF THE PARSONAGE

THE STARR FAMILY IS SETTING MUCH STORE BY JERRY JUNIOR, TO BE, BUT MOTHER NATURE DOESN'T TELL ALL HER SECRETS

Synopsis.—The story concerns the household of Rev. Mr. Starr, a Methodist minister at Mount Mark, Ga., and the affairs of his five lovable daughters—Prudence, the eldest; Fairy, the next; Carol and Lark, twins; and Connie, the "baby." Prudence marries and goes away. Her place as "mother" in the home is taken by Aunt Grace. Fairy is engaged to wed. The twins and the "baby" just coming into womanhood, have the usual boy-and-girl love affairs, and the usual amazing adventures of adolescence. Carol discovers love.

CHAPTER IX—Continued.

"Yes, he wanted to. But Prudence has set her heart on coming home. She says she'll never feel that Jerry Junior got the proper start if it happens any place else. They'll have a trained nurse."

"Jerry, what?" gasped the twins, after a short silence due to amazement. "Jerry Junior—that's what they call it."

"But how on earth do they know?" "They don't know. But they have to call it something, haven't they? And they want a Jerry Junior. So of course they'll get it. For Prudence is good enough to get whatever she wants."

"Hum, that's no sign," sniffed Carol. "I don't get everything I want, do I?" The girls laughed, from habit, not from genuine interest, at Carol's subtle insinuation.

"Well, shall we have her come?" "Yes," said Carol, "but you tell Prue she needn't expect me to hold it until it gets too big to wiggle. I call them nasty, treacherous little things. Mrs. Miller made me hold hers, and it squirmed right off my knee. I wanted to spank it."

"And tell Prudence to uphold the sponge and have a white one," added Lark. "These little Indian effects don't make a bit with me." "Are you going to tell Connie?" "I don't think so—yet. Connie's only thirteen."

"You tell her," Carol's voice was emphatic. "There's nothing mysterious about it. Everybody does it. And Connie may have a few suggestions of her own to offer. You tell Prue I'm thinking out a lot of good advice for her, and—"

"You must write her yourself. She wanted us to tell you long before." Fairy picked up the little embroidered dress and kissed it, but her fond eyes were anxious.

So, a few weeks later, weeks crowded full of tumult and anxiety, yes, and laughter, too, Prudence and Jerry came to Mount Mark and settled down to quiet life in the parsonage. The girls kissed Prudence very often, leaped quickly to do her errands, and touched her with nervous fingers. But mostly they sat across the room and regarded her curiously, shyly, quite maternally.

"Carol and Lark Starr," Prudence cried crossly one day, when she intercepted one of these surreptitious glances, "you march right upstairs and shut yourselves up for thirty minutes. And if you ever sit around and stare at me like a stranger again, I'll spank you both. I'm no outsider. I belong here just as much as ever I did. And I'm still the head of things around here, too!"

The twins obediently marched, and after that Prudence was more like Prudence, and the twins were much more normal in the old parsonage. Prudence said she couldn't feel quite satisfied because the twins were too old to be punished, but she often scolded them in her gentle, teasing way, and the twins enjoyed it more than anything else that happened during those days of quiet.

Then came a night when the four sisters huddled breathlessly in the kitchen, and Aunt Grace and the trained nurse stayed behind with Prudence behind the closed door of the front room upstairs. And the doctor went in, too, after he had inflicted a few light-hearted remarks upon the two men in the little library.

After that—silence, an immense hushing silence—settled down over the parsonage. Jerry and Mr. Starr, alone in the library, where a faint odor of drugs, anesthetics, something that smelled like hospitals lingered, stared away from each other with persistent determination.

"Where are the girls?" Jerry asked, picking up a roll of cotton which had been left on the library table, and flinging it from him as though it scolded his fingers.

"I think I'll go and see," said Mr. Starr, turning heavily.

Jerry hesitated a minute. "I think I'll go along," he said.

For an instant their eyes met, sympathetically, and did not smile though their lips curved.

Down in the kitchen, meanwhile, Fairy sat somberly beside the table with a pile of darning which she jabbed at viciously with the needle. Lark was perched on the ice chest, but Carol true to her childish instincts infant. Thanks. 'd just as lief have my own."

"Oh, she isn't acclimated yet, that's all. Do you think she looks like me?" "No, Jerry, I don't," said Lark candidly. "I never considered you a dream of loveliness, by any means, but in due honesty I must admit that you don't look like that."

"Why, it hasn't any hair!" Connie protested.

"Well, give it time," urged the baby's father. "Be reasonable, Connie. What can you expect in fifteen minutes?"

"But they always have a little hair," she insisted.

"No, indeed, they don't, Miss Connie," he said daffily. "For if they always did, ours would have."

"Now don't try to let on there's anything the matter with her, for there isn't—Look at her nose, if you don't like her hair—What do you think of a nose like that now? Just look at it!"

"Yes, we're looking at it," was the grim reply.

"And—and chin—look at her chin. See here, do you mean to say you are making fun of Fairy Harmer? Come on, tootsie, we'll go back upstairs. They're crazy about us up there."

"Oh, see the cunning little footies," crowed Connie.

"Here, cover 'em up," said Jerry anxiously. "You ain't let their feet stick out. Prudence says so. It's considered very—er, bad form, I believe."

"Fairy! Honestly, Jerry, is it Fairy? When did you decide?"

"Oh, a long time ago," he said, "years ago, I guess. You see, we always wanted a girl. Prue didn't think she had enough experience with the stronger sex yet, and of course I'm strong for the ladies. But it seems that what you want is what you don't get. So we decided to call her Fairy when she came, and then we wanted a boy, and talked boy, and got the girl! Let go, Connie; it is my daughter's bedtime. There, now, there, now, baby, was she her daddy's little girl?"

Flushed and laughing, Jerry broke away from the admiring, giggling, nearly fearful girls, and hurried upstairs with Jerry Junior.

But Fairy stood motionless by the door. "Prudence's baby," she whispered. "Little Fairy Harmer! Mmmmmmm!"

CHAPTER X.

The End of Fairy.

Now that the twins had attained to the dignity of eighteen years, and were respectable students at the thoroughly respectable Presbyterian college, they had dates very frequently. And it was along about this time that Mr. Starr developed a sudden interest in the evening callers at his home. He bobbed up unannounced in most unexpected places and at most unexpected hours. He walked about the house with a sharp, sly look in his eyes, in a way that could only be described as Carol said, by "downright noisiness."

And the Doctor Went in, Too.

The girls discussed this new phase of his character when they were alone, but decided not to mention it to him, for fear of hurting his feelings. "Maybe he's got a new kind of a sermon on his brain," said Carol. "Maybe he's beginning to realize that his clothes are wearing out again," suggested Lark. "He's too young for second childhood," Connie thought. So they watched him curiously.

Aunt Grace, too, observed this queer devotion on the part of the minister, and finally her curiosity overcame her habit of keeping silent.

"William," she said gently, "what's the matter with you lately? Is there anything on your mind?"

Mr. Starr started nervously. "My mind? Of course not. Why?"

"You seem to be looking for something. You watch the girls so closely, you're always hanging around, and—"

He smiled broadly. "Thanks for that. Hanging around, in my own parsonage. That is the gratitude of a loving family!"

Aunt Grace smiled. "Well, I see there's nothing much the matter with you. I was seriously worried. I thought there was something wrong, and—"

"Sort of mentally unbalanced, is that it? Oh, no, I'm just watching my family!"

She looked up quickly. "Watching the family! You mean—"

"Carol," he said briefly.

"Carol! You're watching—"

"Oh, only in the most honorable way, of course. You see," he gave his explanation with an air of relief, "Prudence always says I must keep an eye on Carol. She's so pretty, and the boys get stuck on her, and—that's what Prudence says—I forgot all about it for a while. But lately I have begun to notice that the boys are older, and we don't want Carol falling in love with the wrong man. I got uneasy. I decided to watch out. I'm the head of this family, you know."

"Such an idea!" scoffed Aunt Grace, who was not at all of a scoffing nature.

"Carol was born for lovers, Prudence says so. And these men's girls have to be watched, or the wrong fellow will get ahead, and—"

"Carol doesn't need watching—not any more at least."

"I'm not really watching her, you know. I'm just keeping my eyes open."

"But Carol's all right. That's one time Prudence was away off." She smiled as she recognized a bit of Carol's slang upon his lips. Don't worry about her. You needn't keep an eye on her any more. She's coming, all right."

"You don't think there's any danger of her falling in love with the wrong man?"

"No."

"There aren't many worth having fellows in Mount Mark, you know."

"Carol won't fall in love with a Mount Mark fellow."

"You seem very positive."

"Yes, I'm positive."

He looked thoughtful for a while.

"Well, Prudence always told me to watch Carol, so I could help her if she needed it."

"Girls always need their fathers," came the quick reply. "But Carol does not need you particularly. There's only one of them who will require especial attention."

"That's what Prudence says."

"Yes, just one—not Carol."

"Not Carol?" He looked at her in astonishment. "Why, Fairy and Lark are different. They're all right. They don't need attention."

"No. It's the other one."

"The other one? That's all."

"There's Connie."

"Connie?"

"Yes."

"You don't mean Connie?"

Aunt Grace smiled.

"Why, Grace, you're—you're off your head for saying it, but—you're crazy. Connie—why, Connie has never been any trouble in her life. Connie!"

"You've never had any friction with Connie, she's always been right so far. One of these days she's pretty likely to be wrong, and Connie doesn't yield very easily."

"But Connie's so sober and straight—and—"

"That's the kind."

"She's so conscientious."

"Yes, conscientious."

"She's—look here, Grace, there's nothing the matter with Connie."

"Of course not, William. That isn't what I mean. But you ought to be getting very, very close to Connie right now, for one of these days she's going to need a lot of that extra companionship Prudence told you about. Connie wants to know everything. She wants to see everything. None of the other girls ever yearned for city life. Connie does. She says when she is through school she's going to the city."

"What city?"

"Any city?"

"What for?"

"For experience."

Mr. Starr looked about him helplessly. "There's experience right here," he protested feebly. "Lots of it. Entirely too much of it."

"Well, that's Connie. She wants to know, to see, to feel—She wants to live. Get close to her, get chummy. She may not need it, and then again she may. She's very young yet."

"All right, I will. It is well I have some one to steer me along the proper road." He looked regretfully out of the window. "I ought to be able to see these things for myself, but the girls seem perfectly all right to me. They always have. I suppose it's because they're mine."

Aunt Grace looked at him affectionately. "It's because they're the finest girls on earth," she declared. "That's why. But we want to be ready to help them if they need it, just because they are so fine. They will every one be splendid, if we give them the right kind of a chance."

He sat silent a moment. "I've always wanted one of them to marry a preacher," he said, laughing apologetically. "It is very narrow-minded, of course, but a man does make a hobby of his own profession. I always hoped Prudence would—I thought she was born for it. Then I looked to Fairy, and she turned me down. I guess I'll have to give up the notion now."

Carol's awakening to life's seriousness reveals the career for which she was destined.

Her Expensive Hat.

A woman in London entered a car rather out of breath and presented a singular appearance. For instead of a hat she was balancing a huge basket on her head with as much grace and ease as if it had been her Sunday bonnet. She could just manage to get through the doorway, but she sat down with the basket gracefully poised on her head.

"All fares, please," said the conductor. "And I shall want twopence for that basket, mum."

"Get away with yer," she said. "D'ya charge anything for ladies' hats?"

"No, mum."

"Then get on with yer work. This basket is a-going to be my hat."

Our Part in Feeding the Nation

(Special Information Service, United States Department of Agriculture.)
LET THE BEES HELP THE SUGAR SUPPLY.

Save the Swarms and Make Every Colony Do Its Best This Year.

BEES WILL HELP PROVIDE SWEETS

Better Care of Colonies Is Best Way to Quicken Supply of This Crop.

SUGAR NEEDED TO HELP WAR

Present Stock of Honey Could Be Increased 10 to 20 Percent Without Appreciable Increase in Cost Per Pound.

More honey is needed to help the sugar supply—and needed in 1918. It is imperative, using the language of officials of the United States department of agriculture in a recent publication, that we increase not only the sugar crop in the United States, but every possible supply of sweets, and honey is one of the supplemental sweets, the supply of which can be enlarged without great effort. Not only should those who already keep bees enlarge the number of their colonies, but the industry should also be extended, say federal officials, to localities where beekeeping has not been tried on a commercial scale. It is important that efforts be made to make the honey increase immediate—more honey this year.

Provides Nutritious Food.

It is quite possible for the American beekeeping industry to be developed so that the honey crop will be ten times what it is at present. Not only would such a development be valuable in an emergency, such as the present crisis, but in normal times, to which all hope the nation may speedily return, the beekeeping industry can provide a concentrated nutritious food, almost universally liked and assuredly an article of diet preferable to the inferior sirups and jams so commonly used. The beekeeping industry may be the means of conserving a national resource now largely wasted, changing it into nature's own sweet. The raw material is free on every hand; the investment for equipment is small in comparison with other branches of agriculture; the profits are fully commensurate with the study and labor involved. It would seem profitable to stop such a waste of so desirable a supply of sugar. This waste can be prevented only by the education of beekeepers.

In selecting a place for commercial beekeeping, attention should be paid to the regions best adapted to the industry, and it should also be remembered that not all localities within a main region are equally valuable. The chief honey regions of the United States are (1) the white clover region of the Northeast; (2) the southeastern region, west to eastern Texas, with a wide variety of nectar sources; (3) the alfalfa region of the West; (4) the mountain-sage region of southern California; and (5) the semiarid region of Texas and adjacent states. In all of these regions commercial beekeeping is practiced extensively and in all of them, too, there is room for a great expansion of the industry as a commercial enterprise. In addition to these larger regions many more restricted areas offer special inducements to the beekeeper.

Not Always Profitable.

But even where colonies of bees are sufficiently numerous and where nectar is freely secreted, beekeeping is not always considered profitable. This results from the nature of the industry. A colony of bees does not always gather sufficient honey for its own use and also enough so that the beekeeper can take honey for himself. It is only when bees are properly handled that they yield to the beekeeper the fullest return, and to an unusual degree beekeeping is profitable to just the extent to which the beekeeper applies intelligence.

Success in beekeeping depends upon the beekeeper's skill in two lines of effort—keeping the colonies strong by proper care in winter and keeping the colonies from swarming. The failure to take proper care of bees in winter is a source of the greatest loss now experienced by beekeepers, and this applies to almost all parts of the United States; yet it is a simple matter to protect the bees in the hives—one, which will not more dollars in the farmer's pockets, and more bees in his hives. The essentials to the "greatest success" with bees are discussed in numerous textbooks and bulletins published by the state agricultural colleges and the United States department of agriculture.

HONEY'S CHANCE TO HELP INCREASE SUGAR SUPPLY.

The average annual honey crop of the United States is about 250,000,000 pounds and is sufficient to supply each man, woman and child with about 2½ pounds a year, which is equivalent to 10.5 per cent of the amount of sugar they consume in normal time. Thus there is ample room for expansion of both the production and consumption. The present use of honey in the home usually is as a substitute for jellies, jams and sirup. It is little used in domestic cooking or baking, but this use should be increased. While honey within recent years has sold at prices sufficiently low to justify its use as a substitute for sugar, it is rarely used in commercial food manufacturing except in the making of certain cakes which must be kept moist for a considerable time. Usually, however, the supply of honey is so inadequate that most of the crop can be used as a spread for bread. With the use limited as it is, many people in the United States rarely eat honey, but it is evident that there might be developed a ready sale for honey as a supplement to sugar, if production were increased many times.

Starting With Bees.

The best place to buy bees is near home. There are hundreds of colonies in almost every county which are unproductive and which might better change hands, bee specialists of the United States department of agriculture believe. If the prospective beekeeper does not know where these are, a small advertisement in a local paper will often locate them. If colonies cannot be found near by they can be bought of dealers in bees who advertise in the bee journals.

The best hive for all parts of the country is the 10-frame Langstroth, which is the American standard. If possible buy bees already established in these hives but if only other hives are available the bees can later be transferred to the desired hive.

An advantage in buying bees locally is that the bees are usually delivered by their former owner. If it is necessary for the beginner to go for the bees the hive should be securely closed with wire cloth just before dark when the bees are all in the hive, plenty of ventilation being provided. Usually the hive cover is removed and the top of the hive covered with wire cloth.

Look to 1919 Seed Now.

To be prepared for a possible scarcity of seed next year, growers of root crops of all kinds would do well to take steps to insure at least a partial supply by growing seed themselves, specialists of the United States department of agriculture advise. This can be done only by the use of roots already grown and now in the ground or held in storage. Such crops as carrots, beets, onions, turnips, rutabagas, parsnips and salsify are involved, owing to unfavorable weather conditions so far this year in regions where the chief seed supply of these crops is produced. This fact, together with the uncertainty of the usual European sources, which cannot be relied upon to supply us, threatens a very considerable shortage for next year's planting. Since it takes two years to produce these seeds, this shortage can only be alleviated by the planting of seed of roots already grown. Farmers' Bulletin 884 gives directions for the home production of seed of those crops mentioned, and other vegetables.

An Alaskan Love Story

ELLIOT AND SHEBA FIND THEY HAVE MUTUAL FRIENDS— HE AND MACDONALD BECOME RIVALS

Synopsis.—As a representative of the government Gordon Elliot is on his way to Alaska to investigate coal claims. On the boat he meets and becomes interested in a fellow passenger whom he learns is Sheba O'Neill, also "going in." Colby Macdonald, active head of the land-grabbing syndicate under investigation, comes aboard. Macdonald is attacked by mine laborers whom he had discharged, and the active intervention of Elliot probably saves his life. Elliot and Macdonald become in a measure friendly, though the latter does not know that Elliot is on a mission which threatens to spoil plans of Macdonald to acquire millions of dollars through the unlawful exploitation of immensely valuable coal fields. Elliot also "gets a line" on the position occupied by Wally Selfridge, Macdonald's right-hand man, who is returning from a visit to "the States," where he had gone in an effort to convince the authorities that there was nothing wrong in Macdonald's methods. Elliot secures an introduction to Miss O'Neill and while the boat is taking on freight the pair set out to climb a locally famous mountain. They venture too high and reach a position from which it is impossible for Miss O'Neill to go forward or turn back. Elliot leaves Sheba and at imminent peril of his life goes for assistance. He meets Macdonald, who had become alarmed for their safety, and they return and rescue Sheba.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

About a mile below the falls he met two men. One of them was Colby Macdonald. He carried a coil of rope over one shoulder. The big Alaskan explained that he had not been able to get it out of his head that perhaps the climbers who had waved at his party had been in difficulties. So he had got a rope from the cabin of an old miner and was on his way back to the falls.

The three climbed to the falls, crossed the bridge and reached the top of the cliff.

"You know the lay of the land down there, Mr. Elliot. We'll lower you," decided Macdonald, who took command as a matter of course.

Gordon presently stood beside Sheba on the little platform. She had quite recovered from the touch of hysteria that had attacked her courage. "You weren't long," was all she said.

"I met them coming," he answered as he dropped the coil of the rope over her head and arranged it under her shoulders.

He showed her how to relieve part of the strain of the rope on her flesh by using her hands to lift.

"All ready?" Macdonald called from above.

"All ready," Elliot answered. To Sheba he said, "Hold tight."

The girl was swinging from the ledge and rose joyfully in the air. She laughed gaily down at her friend below.

"It's fun."

Gordon followed her a couple of minutes later. She was waiting to give him a hand over the edge of the cliff.

"Miss O'Neill, this is Mr. Macdonald," he said as soon as he had freed himself from the rope. "You are fellow passengers on the boat."

Macdonald was looking at her straight and hard. "Your father's name was that 'Farrell O'Neill'?" he asked bluntly.

"Yes."

"I knew him."

The girl's eyes lit. "I'm glad, Mr. Macdonald. That's one reason I wanted to come to Alaska—to hear about my father's life here. Will you tell me?"

"Some time. We must be going now to catch the boat—after I've had a look at the cliff this young man crawled across."

He turned away, abruptly, it struck Elliot, and climbed down the natural stairway up which the young man had come. Presently he rejoined them above. Macdonald looked at Elliot with a new respect.

"You're in luck, my friend, that we're not carrying you from the foot of the cliff," he said dryly. "I wouldn't cross that rock wall for a hundred thousand dollars in cold cash."

"Nor I again," admitted Gordon with a laugh. "But we had either to understand that plateau or vacate it. I preferred the latter."

Miss O'Neill's deep eyes looked at him. She was about to speak, then changed her mind.

Sheba Sings—and Two Men Listen.

Elliot did not see Miss O'Neill next morning until she appeared in the dining room for breakfast. He timed himself to get through so as to join her when she left. They strolled to the deck together.

He came abruptly to what was on his mind. "I have an apology to make, Miss O'Neill. If I made light of your danger yesterday, it was because I was afraid you might break down. I had to seem unsympathetic, rather than risk that."

She smiled forgiveness. "All you said was that I might have sprained my wrist. It was true too. I might have—and I did." Sheba showed a white linen bandage tied tightly around her wrist.

"Your whole weight came on it with a wrench. No wonder it hurt."

Sheba noticed that the Hannah was drawing up to a wharf and the passengers were lining up with their belongings. "Is this where we change?"

"Those of us going to Kuskak transfer here. But there's no hurry. We wait at this landing two hours."

Gordon helped Sheba move her baggage to the other boat and joined her on deck. They were both sitting in the land. Their only common acquaintance was Macdonald and he was letting Mrs. Mallory absorb his attention just now. Left to their own resources, the two young people naturally drifted together a good deal.

This suited Elliot. He found his companion wholly delightful, not the less because she was so different from the girls he knew at home. She could be frank, and even shyly audacious on occasion, but she held a little note of reserve he felt bound to respect.

Macdonald left the boat twenty miles below Kuskak with Mrs. Mallory and the Selfridges. A chauffeur with a motorcar was waiting on the wharf to run them to town, but he gave the wheel to Macdonald and took the seat beside the driver.

"Are you going to the hotel or direct to your cousin's?" Gordon asked Miss O'Neill.

"To my cousin's. I fancy she's down here to meet me. It was arranged that I come on this boat."

Elliot caught a glimpse of the only people in Kuskak he had known before coming in, but though he waved to them he saw they did not recognize him. After the usual delay about getting ashore he walked down the gangway carrying the suitcase of the Irish girl. Sheba followed at his heels. On the wharf he came face to face with a slender, well-dressed young woman.

"Diane!" he cried.

She stared at him. "You? What in heaven's name are you doing here, Gordon Elliot?" she demanded, and before he could answer had called both hands and turned excitedly to call a stocky man near. "Peter—Peter! Guess who's here?"

"Hello, Paget!" grinned Gordon, and he shook hands with the husband of Diane.

Elliot turned to introduce his friend, but she anticipated him.

"Cousin Diane," she said dryly, "don't you know me?"

Mrs. Paget swooped down upon the girl and smothered her in her embrace.

"This is Sheba—little Sheba that I have told you so often about, Peter," she cried. "Glory be, I'm glad to see you, child." And Diane kissed her again warmly. "You two met on the same boat, of course, coming in. I hope you didn't let her get homesick. Above, Macdonald looked at Elliot with a new respect.

"You're in luck, my friend, that we're not carrying you from the foot of the cliff," he said dryly. "I wouldn't cross that rock wall for a hundred thousand dollars in cold cash."

CHAPTER V.

Sheba Sings—and Two Men Listen.

Elliot did not see Miss O'Neill next morning until she appeared in the dining room for breakfast. He timed himself to get through so as to join her when she left. They strolled to the deck together.

"I'm in the kind hands of my countrywoman," laughed Gordon. "I'll certainly be on hand."

"But what in the world are you doing here? You're the last man I'd have expected to see."

"I'm in the service of the government, and I've been sent in on business."

"Well, I'm going to say something original, dear people," Mrs. Paget replied. "It's a small world, isn't it?"

While he was dressing for dinner later in the day, Elliot recalled early memories of the Pagets. He had known Diane ever since they had been youngsters together at school. He remembered her as a restless, wiry little thing, keen as a knife-blade. Always popular socially, she had surprised everybody by refusing the catch of the town to marry a young mining engineer without a penny. Gordon was in college at the time, but during the next long vacation he had fraternized a good deal with the Peter Pagets. The young married people had been very much in love with each other, but not too preoccupied to take the college boy into their happiness as a comrade.

Then the Arctic goldfields had claimed Paget and his bride. That had been more than ten years ago, and until today Gordon had not seen them since.

While Elliot was brushing his dinner coat before the open window of the room assigned to him at the hotel, somebody came out to the porch below. The voice of a woman floated faintly to him.

"Look, Diane's Irish beauty got Ned?"

"Yes," a man answered.

The woman laughed softly. "Mrs. Mallory came up on the same boat with her." The infection suggested that the words were meant not to tell a fact, but some less obvious inference.

"She's wonderfully pretty, and of course Diane will make the most of her. But Mrs. Mallory is a woman among ten thousand."

"I'd choose the girl if it were me," said the man.

"But it isn't you. We'll see what we'll see."

They were moving up the street and Gordon heard no more. What he had heard was not clear to him. Why should any importance attach to the fact that Mrs. Mallory and Sheba O'Neill had come up the river on the same boat? Yet he was vaguely disturbed by the insinuation that in some way Diane was entering her cousin as a rival of the older woman. He resented the idea that the fine, young personality of the Irish girl was being cheapened by management of the part of Diane Paget.

Elliot was not the only dinner guest at the Paget home that evening. He found Colby Macdonald sitting in the living room with Sheba. She came quickly forward to meet the newly arrived guest.

"Mr. Macdonald has been telling me about my father. He knew him on Frenchman creek where they both worked claims," explained the girl.

The big mining man made no comment and added nothing to what she said. There were times when his face was about as expressive as a stone wall.

The dinner went off very well. Diane and Peter had a great many questions to ask Gordon about old friends. By the time these had been answered Macdonald was chatting easily with Sheba. She listened with glowing eyes to the strange tales this man of magnificent horizons had to tell. Never before had she come into contact with anyone like him.

Paget was superintendent of the Lucky Strike, a mine owned principally by Macdonald. The two talked business for a few minutes over their cigars, but Diane interrupted gaily to bring them back into the circle. Adroitly she started Macdonald on the account of a rescue of two men lost in a blizzard the year before. He had the gift of dramatizing his story, of selecting only effective details. There was no suggestion of boasting. If he happened to be the hero of any of his stories the fact was of no importance to him. It was merely a detail of the picture he was sketching.

Gordon interrupted with a question. A story he was telling of a fight he had seen between two bull moose.

"Did you say that was while you were on the way over to inspect the Kamatah coal fields for the first time?"

The eyes of the young man were quick with interest.

"Yes."

"Four years ago last spring?" Macdonald looked at him with a wary steadiness. Some doubt had found lodgment in his mind. Before he could voice it, if indeed, he had any such intention, Elliot broke in swiftly.

"Don't answer that question. I asked it without proper thought. I am a special agent of the general land office sent up to investigate the Macdonald coal claims and kindred interests."

Stories the rigor of the big Scotsman's steely eyes relaxed to a smile that was genial and disarming. If this news hit him hard he gave no sign of it. And that it was an unexpected blow there could be no doubt.

"Glad you've come, Mr. Elliot. We ask nothing but fair play. The men who own the Macdonald group of claims have nothing to conceal. I'll answer that question. I meant to say two years ago last spring."

His voice was easy and his gaze unwavering as he made the correction, yet everybody in the room except Sheba knew he was deliberately lying to cover the slip. For the admission that he had inspected the Kamatah field just before his dumplings had flared upon it would at least tend to aggravate suspicion that the entries were not bona fide.

It was rather an awkward moment. Sheba unconsciously relieved the situation.

"But what about the big moose, Mr. Macdonald? What did it do then?"

The Alaskan went back to his story. He was talking for Sheba alone, for the young girl, with eager, fascinated eyes which flashed with sympathy as of it. And that it was an unexpected blow there could be no doubt.

But if it was only Sheba Cross to climb from foot to crown, I'd soon be up an' over that. I'd soon be runnin' down. These sure the great old sea itself is there beyond the bar. An' all the windy wuthers are between us, so they are. Och anee!

The rich, soft, young voice with its Irish brogue died away. The little audience paid the singer the tribute of silence. She herself was the first to speak.

"Divided" is the name of it. A namesake of mine, Molra O'Neill, wrote it," she explained.

"It's a beautiful song, and I thank you for singing it," Macdonald said simply. "It minds me of my own barefoot days by the Tay."

Later in the evening the two dinner guests walked back to the hotel together. They discussed casually the cost of living in the North, the raising of strawberries at Kuskak, and the best way to treat the mosquito nuisance, but neither of them referred to the Macdonald coal claims or to Sheba O'Neill.

CHAPTER VI.

Wally Gets Orders.

Macdonald, from his desk, looked up at the man in the doorway. Selfridge had come in jauntily, a cigar in his mouth, but at sight of the grim face of his chief the grin fled.

"Come in and shut the door," ordered the Scotsman. "I sent for you to congratulate you, Wally. You did fine work outside. You told me, didn't you, that it was all settled at last—that our claims are clear-listed for patent?"

The tubby little man felt the edge of irony in the quiet voice. "Sure. That's what Winton told me," he assented nervously.

"Then you'll be interested to know that a special agent of the land department sat opposite me last night and without batting an eye came across with the glad news that he was here to investigate our claims."

Selfridge bounced up like a rubber ball from the chair into which he had just settled. "What?"

"Pleasant surprise, isn't it? I've been wondering what you were doing outside. Of course I know you had to take in the shows and cabarets of New York. But couldn't you edge in an hour or two once a week to attend to business?"

Wally's collar began to choke him. The cool, hard words pelled like hail.

"Must be bluff, Mac. The muckraker magazines have raised such a row about the Guttenchild crowd, putting over a big steal on the public that the party leaders are scared stiff."

"I understand that Wally. What I don't get is how you came to let them slip this over on you without even a guess that it was going to happen."

That phase of the subject Selfridge did not want to discuss.

"Bet you a hat I've guessed it right—just a grandstand play of the administration to fool the dear people. This fellow has got his orders to give us a clean bill of health. Sure. That must be it. I suppose it's this man Elliot that came up on the boat with us."

"Yes."

"Well, that's easy. If he hasn't been seen we can see him."

Macdonald looked his man Friday over with a scarcely veiled contempt. "You've about as much vision as a breed trader. Unless I miss my guess Elliot isn't that kind. He'll go through to a finish. If he sees straight we're all right, but if he is a narrow conservation fanatic he might go ahead and queer the whole game."

"You wouldn't stand for that." The quick glance of Selfridge asked a question.

"The lips of the Scotsman were like steel traps and his eyes points of steel. 'We'll cross that bridge if we come to it. Our first move is to try to win him to see this thing our way. I'll have a casual talk with him before he leaves for Kamatah and feel him out.'

"What's he doing here at all? If he's investigating the Kamatah claims, why does he go hundreds of miles out of his way to come in to Kuskak?" asked Selfridge.

Macdonald smiled sardonically. "He's doing this job right. Elliot as good as told me that he's on the job to look up my record thoroughly. So he comes to Kuskak first. In a few days he'll leave for Kamatah. That's where you come in, Wally."

"How do you mean?"

"You're going to start for Kamatah tomorrow. You'll arrange the stage before he gets there—see all the men and the foremen. Line them up so they'll come through with the proper talk. If you have any doubts about whether you can trust someone, don't take any chances. Fire him out of the camp. Offer Elliot the company hospitality. Load him down with favors. Take him everywhere. Show him everything. But don't let him get any proofs that the claims are being worked under the same management."

"But he'll suspect it."

"You can't help his suspicions. Don't let him get proof. Cover all the tracks that show company control."

"I can fix that," he said. "But what about Holt? You know how bitter he is—and crazy. He ought to be locked away with the flitter-mice."

"You mustn't let Elliot meet Holt. No. How the deuce can I help it? No chance to keep them apart in that little hole. It can't be done."

"Can't it?"

Something in the quiet voice rang a bell of alarm in the timid heart of Selfridge.

"You mean—"

"A man who works for me as my lieutenant must have nerve, Wally. Have you got that? Will you take orders and go through with them?"

Wally nodded. His lips were dry. "Go to it. What am I to do?"

"Get Holt out of the way while Elliot is at Kamatah. It isn't doing Holt any good to sit tight clamped to that claim of his. He needs a change. Besides, I want him away so that we can contest his claim. Run him up into the hills. Or send him across to Siberia on a whaler. Or, better still, have him arrested for insanity and send him to Rome. I'll get Judge Landor to hold him awhile."

"Leave it to me. The old man is going on a vacation, though he doesn't know it yet."

"Good enough, Wally. I'll trust you. But remember, this fight has reached an acute stage. No more mistakes. The devil of it is we never seem to land the knockout punch. We've beaten this knuck-out reform idiots before Winton, before the secretary of the Interior, before the president and before congress. Now they're beginning all over again. Where is it to end?"

"This is their last kick. Probably Guttenchild agreed to it so as to let the party go before the people at the next election without any apologies. Entirely formal investigation, I should say."

This might be true, or it might not. Macdonald knew that just now the American people, always impulsive in its thinking, was supporting strongly the movement for conservation. A searchlight had been turned upon the Kamatah coal fields.

The trouble had originated in a department row, but it had spread until the Macdonald claims had become a party issue. The officials of the land office, as well as the national administration, were friendly to the claimants. They had no desire to offend one of the two largest money groups in the country. But neither did they want to come to wreck on account of the Guttenchild. They found it impossible to ignore the charge that the entries were fraudulent and if consummated would result in a wholesale robbery of the public domain. Superficial investigations had been made and the claimants whitewashed. But the clamor had persisted.

The facts were simple enough. Macdonald was the original promoter of the Kamatah coal field. He had engaged dummy entrymen to take up 160 acres each under the homestead act. Later he intended to consolidate the claims and turn them over to the Guttenchild under an agreement by which he was to receive one-eighth of the stock of the company formed to work the mines. The entries had been made, the fee accepted by the land office and receipts issued. In course of time Macdonald had applied for patents.

Before these were issued the magazines began to pour in their broadsides, and since then the papers had been held up.

The conscience of Macdonald was quite clear. The pioneers in Alaska were building out of the Arctic waste a new empire for the United States, and he held that a fair government could do no less than offer them liberal treatment. To lock up from present use vast resources needed by Alaskans would be a mistaken policy, a narrow and perverted application of the doctrine of conservation. The territory should be thrown open to the world. If capital were invited in to do its share of the building, immigration would flow rapidly northward. Within the lives of the present generation the new riches would pour lavishly into the United States from its frozen treasure house.
