FOURTH DOINGS AT NORTHVILLE

ATHLETIC, STREET SPORTS PATRIOTIC PARADE, BALL GAMES AND HORSE RACES.

NOT A NOISY BUT AN ENJOYABLE TIME; STREET CARNIVAL FOR FOUR DAYS.

There will be doings in Northville July the Fourth. Not a noisy fire-cracker celebration, but one in keeping with the spirit of the day is promised.

There will be sports for prizes on the streets in the forenoon and a patriotic parade and calithumpian affair in the afternoon led by two brass bands, Northville and Belleville. The parade will end at the fair grounds where a ball game between the Northville and Belleville teams and several horse races will be the attractions.

There will also be a carnival on the streets here at the same time with a merry-go-round and a Ferris wheel in full operation.

The committees for the Fourth are as follows:

Fair and Driving Club—H. B. Clark, T. E. Murdock, A. C. Balden.

Executive committee of Business Men—J. A. Huff, W. E. Ambler, F. W. Lyke.

Publicity—C. J. McKahn, J. W. Perkins, M. N. Johnson.

Patriotic Parade—C. A. Ponsford, T. G. Richardson, W. E. Scotten.

Athletic—E. E. Miller, H. R. Richardson, C. L. Blackburn, F. A. Northrop.

Calithumpian Parade—N. C. Schrader, D. L. Ball, W. J. Thompson.

Lighting and Decorating—W. J. Fitzgerald, Roy Cramer, W. L. Tinsam, H. E. Tatt.

Streets—S. Montgomery, M. R. Seeley, Perry Austin.

Base Ball—Grant Stimpson, Lee Shipley, E. C. Hinkley.

Marshal of the Day—F. E. Hills.

Chief of Police—Ernest Lyke.

Music—W. H. Safford.

NORTHVILLE WILL HAVE REST ROOM

Through the co-operation of our village council with the Civic committee of the Northville Woman's club, a public rest room and convenience station for women and children is to be an improvement of the near future for Northville. The use of the former sample room in the basement of the Park House has been secured, the village supplying Mr. Ambler with the water for the building in consideration thereof. The council has voted to install the proper plumbing and do the necessary renovating and decorating of the room; and the women of Northville will do the rest, which will be the providing of suitable furniture. Some rugs, rockers and other chairs, a couch or two, a table, mirrors, etc., will be needed. The Record is requested to say that if any one has articles of these kinds (in good condition) out of use and stored away, and is willing to donate them for the purpose, the things will be collected when the room is ready. Anything suitable for furnishing the room will be gladly received. Any member of the Civic committee of the Woman's club may be notified, viz.: Mrs. Brock, Mrs. Sloan, Mrs. C. C. Yerkes, Mrs. R. H. Willis or Mrs. Galman Perkins.

A COMMUNICATION.

Editor Record: What is the matter with our Red Cross? I am informed that there were just six—six mind you—ladies at the meeting of Thursday, June 13th.

This town has a population of 2,000. Allowing 5 to a family, which is a general average. This would allow 360 parents, or 180 fathers and 180 mothers—to say nothing of some daughters—180 mothers in Northville and only 6 at a Red Cross sewing meeting—with thousands of our boys—and a good many of them right from this town "over there," too—and only 6 ladies interested enough in our boys' welfare to come out and sew for them!

180 mothers—enough so there should be 25 a day, 6 days a week, at the Red Cross meetings, to say nothing of some of the daughters.

Maybe I am wrong, but I again ask: What's the matter with our Red Cross society?

JUST A FATHER.
Northville, June 14, 1918.

FOURTH DISTRICT WANTS MEN.

Announcement is made by the Fourth District board that three laborers for the aviation work have been assigned for this district, to be sent to Vancouver barracks, Vancouver, Wash. Men who can qualify for special or limited service will be accepted. Four mechanics are also wanted to go to Valparaiso, Ind. These must be qualified for general military service as well. The chance to volunteer for these places will be open only until July 4. After that they must be supplied by draft.

EX-GOV. WARNER OUT OF THE RACE

ENDORSES HENRY FORD FOR U. S. SENATOR WHEN LATTER SAYS HE WILL ACCEPT.

Upon the announcement by Henry Ford, the auto king, that he would accept the nomination for U. S. Senator, ex-Gov. Fred M. Warner announced Saturday that he had withdrawn from the race and would support Mr. Ford for the place on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Warner said he believed that the great work Mr. Ford had done for humanity in this task of winning the election at the hands of the American people.

PHYSICIAN SUICIDES AT SOUTH LYON.

Dr. Floyd Lockwood, a South Lyon physician, who had passed nearly his entire life there, committed suicide

Saturday by shooting himself with a revolver. He was greatly esteemed in his home town, where he had been engaged in medical practice ever since his graduation from college, except one year spent in practicing his profession in Wixom and vicinity. He was only 32 years of age and his untimely death by his own hand is attributed to an attempt to cure him of the morphine habit by cutting off the supply. He leaves a wife, two children and several brothers and sisters. It had recently been rumored that Dr. Lockwood was about to take up his residence in Northville.

DON'T SHOOT PIGEONS—THEY MAY BE ARMY MESSENGERS.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture urges hunters not to shoot pigeons in the air, for they may be homing pigeons being trained in many sections by the Signal Corps of the United States Army to carry messages across battlefields. Farmers and other breeders who allow their birds a few hours of liberty each day also are liable to loss from shooting.

THIS IS AN IMPORTANT ITEM OF GOVERNMENT NEWS that will have a direct bearing upon the securing of Michigan's $70,000,000 quota in War Savings Stamps. It contains the War Savings campaign plan, together with a brief but clear explanation of the Government's war saving proposition. These are things with which every citizen should be familiar; and the National War Savings Committee is depending upon the newspapers of the country to give these matters fullest publicity. The Michigan War Savings Committee urges all editors to publish this:

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

HON. WILLIAM G. MCADOO, SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PROCLAIMS

FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1918

AS NATIONAL WAR SAVINGS DAY

GOVERNORS AND MAYORS MAKE SIMILAR PROCLAMATIONS

MEETINGS WILL BE HELD IN EVERY COMMUNITY TO SECURE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR WAR SAVINGS STAMPS

Pursuant to the call of the Treasury Department of the United States and the proclamation of the Governor of this State, I, War Savings Director for Michigan, acting under the authority of the United States Treasury Department, have called all taxpayers and wage-earners to meet on Friday, June 28th, to give their subscriptions for War Savings Stamps. In rural communities and the smaller towns and cities, meetings will be held in the school houses at 2 p. m.

The school officers will conduct the meeting in each school house, keeping a record of the proceedings and reporting the names of all persons present and the amount of War Savings Stamps subscribed for by them. The names of absent persons, and of those who refuse or neglect to subscribe, with their reasons for so doing, will also be reported.

War Savings Stamps (which are United States Government Bonds the same as Liberty Bonds) can be paid for during any month in the year 1918, but it is intended that subscriptions will be signed for them on June 28.

The price of each War Savings Stamp depends upon the month during which it is bought. During June each Stamp will cost $4.17. In July each Stamp will cost $4.18, and so on, one cent more each month during 1918. On January 1, 1923, the Government of the United States will redeem all War Savings Stamps at $5.00 each, no matter during which month in 1918 they were bought. They cost less during the early months in 1918 than during the later months because the person who buys earlier has loaned his money to the Government for a longer time than if he should buy later.

By way of illustration, note the following table:

COST OF WAR SAVINGS STAMPS DURING JUNE, JULY, AND AUGUST, 1918

	Cost in June	Cost in July	Cost in August	And are Worth on Jan. 1, 1923
1 Stamp	$4.17	$4.18	$4.19	$5.00
20 Stamps	$83.40	$83.60	$83.80	100.00
50 Stamps	208.50	209.00	209.50	250.00
100 Stamps	417.00	418.00	419.00	500.00
200 Stamps	834.00	836.00	838.00	1,000.00

The law provides that no person can hold in his own name War Savings Stamps exceeding $1,000 maturity value. War Savings Stamps, however, may be purchased for other members of the family, including minor children.

The money invested in War Savings Stamps is not a gift, or a donation, but is a loan to the Government. It will all be paid back with 4% compound interest. If, because of some serious financial reverses, or calamity, it should be necessary to get your money before January 1, 1923, you may do so by giving ten days' notice to any Money Order postmaster, in which case you can get what you paid for the Stamps, with interest to date of payment. The Stamps are free from all State and local taxes; when registered at the postoffice they are insured against loss; they are backed by all the property in the United States; they cannot fall in value below the price you pay; they are as convenient and as well paying an investment as has ever been offered by our Government.

A definite quota of War Savings Stamps has been assigned each school district and community, which will be announced at each meeting on June 28th. The Government of the United States expects all the citizens of every school district and county to subscribe for its quota and to pledge themselves to save and economize to help win the war.

It is to be hoped that the subscriptions taken at the meetings in your county will show you and your neighbors to be loyal Americans to whom our Government, in this hour of need, does not call in vain.

WHAT CAN WE DO?

The following article is quoted from the Red Cross organ, "A. R. C. Rays," published at Denver. Among the things we can do is to follow its advice.

"The following statement is authorized by the War Department: 'Recent reports from commanding generals of certain army divisions indicate that one of the fruitful causes of soldiers' deserting themselves without leave is the discouraging letter from home. Such letters frequently give alarming and exaggerated reports of conditions surrounding the soldier's family, that some member is desperately ill, that all are starving or that they are being in some way harassed. In instances such letters have so preyed upon the minds of soldiers that they have absented themselves without leave to go home, only to find that conditions had been grossly exaggerated.'

"Meanwhile the soldier has been absent without leave—a serious military offense. His problem, when he became one of facing the penalty or getting deeper in trouble by deserting. Sometimes a man's pride or fear has led him to desert.

"Every soldier wants to receive letters from home. They should be frequent, cheerful, hopeful and appreciative of the sacrifice that he is making for his country. They should be full of family incidents and cheerful home gossip. They should protect him from the trifling alarms and the small annoyances of everyday life. They should encourage him by giving ing full confidence that his family and his friends stand behind him in the great enterprise he has undertaken.

"A division inspector submitted the following in this connection:

"While stationed at Columbus Barracks, Ohio, last year, I was a member of a general court-martial that tried approximately 100 enlisted men for desertion from national guard regiments stationed on the border. I believe I am safe in saying that at least 90 per cent of them gave as their reason for desertion the fact that they had received letters from home to the effect that a wife, sister or mother was either dying, very ill, or in destitute circumstances, and begged the man to come home at once. Many of the men admitted that when they argued home they found that the writer of the letter had exaggerated conditions.

"Many young soldiers, fresh from home, suffer from homesickness, no matter how army officers may try to make their surroundings pleasant and comfortable and provide proper amusements. Extraordinary measures have been taken by the War Department during the past year to keep the young soldier actively engaged while in camp with sports, amusements, and comforts that a wholesome psychology might be sustained. Still, a type of soldier will yearn for home and fall into a brooding mood. It is obvious how harmful to him and to the service a discontented letter from home might be."

And Now It's Coats and Breeches

So fast our women are putting themselves into service suits, and service garments that we have already come to the place where this new order of things in apparel is taken as a matter of course. Arrives a new outfit over the animated horizon of original thing, and we discuss its points of advantage over other outfits—its trimness, its strength, its fitness for the purpose it is to fulfill or the emergency it meets—we have ceased to speak of it as a new departure; the novelty has passed and the service suit is established.

There is nothing simple and easily disposed of about the designing of these practical new clothes. They must be convenient, comfortable, durable and shapely. Specialists are giving them weeks of thought. Their last efforts proclaim that they have done wonders; for now we have the new coat and breeches suit as trim as a riding habit and as efficient as a soldier's uniform. In fact, the breeches are cut on lines much like those of the boys in khaki—except that they are cut in one with the leggings which extend to the ankles and lace up.

The coat is cut on good lines, has a long skirt part, sets easily and is provided with a belt and four capacious and practical patch pockets. Finally, a hat to match has a collapsible crown—and brim wide enough to shade the eyes. Can you imagine anything more comfortable and pleasing than this outfit? Two views of it are given in the picture, a photograph and a small drawing. On the farm, in the saddle, camping out, going fishing, driving a car, isn't it just the ideal garb for service? The blouse under the coat may be light or heavy as occasion requires.

At the left of the picture there is a sketch of a pair of overalls for garden or house work—or other service. But they deserve more than mere mention and will be shown—along with another service suit—in a photograph at some other time.

Julius Bottomley

Suits of Georgette.

The word "suit" recalls to many minds the tailcoats of serge, tricotine, gabardine and the various heavy silks in dress and sport weaves. Any material so sheer as georgette does not seem feasible for such a garment, but a stunning example on tailored lines created of the heaviest quality of crean georgette allows this fabric to enter the lists as a fitting medium for suits, says the Dry Goods Economist. The finger-tip length coat is elaborately embroidered in navy silk. A few broad plaits give the necessary fullness in a skirt of this material, and they nicely correspond to those in the back of the coat that is belted at the normal waistline.

Footings Is Popular.

Footings fits in so well with the very simple fashions of the season that it is no wonder this dainty trimming is in high favor this year. A lovely little frock recently over from Paris is made of fine white silk net in a design of artful simplicity. The gathered skirt is tucked in two-inch tucks set six inches apart and on the edge of each tuck is a two-inch band of black net footing. The sleeves (just to the elbow) are edged with black footing and so is a deep, demure fichu, drawn down over the shoulders into the sash. And the sash? It is of a deep blue faille silk, with four bands of footing on each sash end.

HOME TOWN HELPS

MAKE REPAIRS WHEN NEEDED

House Owner Owes It to Community to Keep His Property Looking Always at Its Best.

Keeping the house in repair should be the endeavor of every home owner, for the house in poor condition rapidly decreases in value and the ultimate repair bill is far beyond the expense necessary to fix it at once. A house should be carefully watched for needed repairs, as there are many little leaks and tears which might require attention that are unnoticed unless the house is systematically gone over once in a while.

A shingle or a square of slate found in the yard is a good indication that the roof needs attention, and the matter should be attended to at once. If it is delayed the next rainstorm might cause enough water to soak through the roof to ruin the ceiling and possibly injure the floors.

A broken pane of glass may seem unimportant to attend to at once, but if the wall paper or polished floor get a soaking it will cost much more than the expense of a pane of glass to repair the damage. If the broken window happens to be in the cellar it may cause the freezing of the water pipes of the boiler.

The paint on the exterior of the house should receive a share of the attention and should be renewed at least every third year. The life of the house depends on its ability to withstand the ravages of weather, and if the paint is in poor condition the house is bound to decrease in value.

CITY MUST LOOK TO FUTURE

Timely Comment Made by Indianapolis Newspaper Is Worth Consideration at This Time.

City planning is of immediate interest to many cities in Indiana besides Indianapolis, remarks the News of that city. Many of them are growing rapidly. They have enjoyed business booms due to war orders, and this prosperity, even though it may not be wholly substantial, makes necessary permanent improvements.

Municipalities are among the few businesses conducted today without a definite end in view. Cities grow as the result of conditions developing from time to time. A private enterprise may—and generally does—expand along definite lines. The desirable condition for a municipality would be to apply similar methods. "The time is ripe," said a Boston official, who made a tour of our cities, "for the state of Indiana to have a city-planning commission law, which will benefit your city (South Bend) as well as every other city in Indiana.

Seven states have enacted city planning legislation. The state of Massachusetts was the first to adopt such legislation, and according to the law, every city of 10,000 population must have a city planning commission. No improvements are made in these cities unless the plans have the approval of the commission, which is composed of five members elected by the people."

Successful Community Garden.

To relate the experience of a small borough in northern New Jersey last year may encourage others to go and do likewise.

The inhabitants subscribed to a guarantee fund to finance a community garden. The local clergyman was put in charge of the enterprise. A half day's plowing was donated, but all other labor was paid for, being done largely by the local boys' club. Two sacks of potatoes were planted. The crop was largely sold to people who bought them by the bushel in the ground, doing their own digging. The net result was about forty bushels, and the profit, $5.81, was donated to the Y. M. C. A. war fund. The members of the committee donated their time and the assets were a few hoes.

The guarantee fund was never called upon. If every borough or town in the country could do as well the potato crop next year would be increased a million bushels.

Improvements in House Details.

There are odds and ends about a house which, with little renovation and improvements, add to the beauty of the house. Front doors are in this class. Formerly wood was used to great advantage and still has not gone out of favor, but glass and metal are slowly becoming popular in this line of house adornment. The new idea, that of glass and metal, may be used with taste provided the combination is not ridiculous and in striking contrast to the architecture of the house itself.

Plan to Beautify Iowa Capitol.

The state executive council expects to employ a landscape artist to work out the planting scheme on the capital extension grounds. It is highly important that this work be done by one who is more than a mere tree planter, or one who has trees for sale. The beauty of that future park will depend to a very large extent upon having a real plan, made by a real landscape artist, and then adhered to.—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

DAIRY

"STARTERS" TO RIPEN CREAM

Technical Work Should Not Be Undertaken Unless Butter Is Made on Commercial Scale.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In creameries it is customary to control to some extent the ripening of cream by means of "starters," which are pure cultures of lactic acid-producing bacteria grown in pasteurized milk. The making of starters is technical work that should not be undertaken unless butter is made on a commercial scale. If the milk and cream are produced under proper conditions, there is no need for using starters. If handled under those conditions and protected from contamination, cream will develop the desired flavor when allowed to ripen or sour naturally at the proper temperatures.

When butter is made on a commercial scale it may be advisable to control the ripening and thus make a product that is more uniform from week to week.

Commercial cultures for starter making may be obtained from culture manufacturers and from dairy supply houses. Directions for using accompany each package and should be followed carefully.

A natural or homemade starter may be made as follows:

1. Clean thoroughly and boil for five minutes three pint fruit jars and tops. After boiling keep the jars covered to prevent the entrance of bacteria.

2. Take a pint sample of milk freshly drawn from each of three cows, place in the jars, cover, cool to 75 degrees Fahrenheit, and keep at that temperature until curdling occurs.

3. Curdling, or coagulation, should take place in about 24 hours. An ideal curd should be firm, smooth, marble-like, free from holes or gas bubbles, and should show little or no separation of the whey. It should have a clean, sharp, sour or acid flavor.

4. Select the sample that most closely meets those conditions and propagate it, discarding the others. The selected sample is propagated as follows:

(a) Clean thoroughly and boil for five minutes a quart jar, the top, and a teaspoon.

(b) Fill the jar with freshly drawn milk, cover loosely, heat slowly to boiling, and pasteurize by boiling gently for 30 minutes.

(c) Cool the milk to 75 degrees Fahrenheit and add a teaspoonful of curdled milk described in section 3 and set away to curdle at that temperature.

(d) Propagate the starter from day to day in the same manner described in a, b and c. The starter described in c is the one to use for ripening the cream, and should be added in such quantities as to be one-tenth to one-fifth of the cream to be churned.

MILK STERILIZER IS FAVORED

Cheap and Effective Device That Has Important Bearing on High Grade Product.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The simple steam sterilizer for dairy utensils developed by the United States department of agriculture is meeting with great favor from municipal milk and health authorities. The device has been demonstrated by the health authorities in 172 cities and 99 officials have written to the department ment praising the value of the device in improving the local milk supply. Thirty-seven health officers report that the device is being made locally for use by dairymen. Several dairy milk inspectors stated positively that the local milk supply has been improved through the introduction of this device. During the past season the sterilizer was demonstrated to more than 6,000 farmers and was made the subject of a campaign in favor of clean milk utensils that reached thousands of dairy farmers. Twenty-six of the state agricultural colleges secured devices to demonstrate to their short-course students. The device is now being made commercially and can be purchased complete with oil stove for $5.50; or the sterilizer portion alone, which provides apparatus for sterilizing pans, pails, separator parts, small utensils and strainer cloth, can be purchased for $5.50. Directions for making the home sterilizer are given in Farmer's Bulletin 748, which will be sent free on application to the department.

National and Local Meat Business

The meat business of the country is conducted by various agencies—

By small slaughter-houses in villages—

By local Abattoirs or small Packing Houses in towns—

and

Furnishing only a part of the local demand for meat.

These slaughtering and distributing agencies fill a well defined but necessarily restricted place in the distribution of the products of live stock.

But only packers like Swift & Company, organized on a national scale, are able to undertake the service that is more vitally important, involving

A Paper Controller.

Great Britain now has its Paper Controller, concerning whose identity there has been a flutter of excitement in the publishing and newspaper worlds. There is, however, very much less talk and less fuss about the advent of this new official than there was over the subject of the introduction of food rationing, although the innovation is capable of having much greater effects on the life of the country than the mere reduction of the consumption of certain food supplies. H. A. Vernet, on whom it has devolved, is a director of the Underground Electric Railways company.

Coolies' Ears Detect Peril.

English officers home from the front testify to the acute hearing powers displayed by the Indian and Chinese coolie laborers with the troops in France. These eastern auxiliaries are ever the first to detect the nearness of hostile airplanes and to fall prone as a measure of self-protection. In this way they give a valuable lead to the British and French soldiers, who are comparatively slow in detecting the difference in sound between the rival air machines.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attend the making of this great medicine for woman's use.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

Air Raid Lights

During their recent raids on Paris German aviators were greatly disconcerted by rockets which the French sent up and which discharged, before dropping, parachutes with brightly burning fuses. These parachutes dropped slowly and their fuses cast a brilliant glare on the hostile airplanes, making them a good target for the anti-aircraft guns.

Rye Is Particularly Good Because of Hardiness and Furnishes Excellent Spring Pasture—Other Crops Suggested.

The time has arrived when poultry keepers should begin making provision for a supply of winter green feeds. While such feeds contain only a comparatively small percentage of actual food nutrients, they are important because of their succulence and bulk which lighten the grain ration and assist in keeping the birds in good condition. By taking thought far enough ahead many backyard poultry keepers even can produce most of the green feed needed and thus avoid a considerable expense.

Double-Yard System.

If you have enough ground the double-yard system is advisable for supplying green feed during the growing season. By this system the birds are confined in one of the yards while the other is planted to some quick-growing green feed into which the hens are turned when it attains a height of three or four inches. This system, not only furnishes green feed for the birds but freshens and purifies the yard. Among the best crops for this purpose are rape, rye, oats and barley. Rye is regarded as particularly good because, in most sections, it will live through the winter and furnish an excellent early spring pasture. There are various other crops adapted to different sections. The proper season for planting varies according to the locality.

Feeds for Storage.

Of stored feeds, cabbages, mangel wurzels, clover and alfalfa are the feeds most commonly used during the winter. Cabbages and mangels may be either grown at home or bought in the fall when prices are low and stored in the cellar. Cabbages do not keep as well in ordinary cellars as mangel wurzels, and where both of these feeds are available the cabbages should be fed first. The best method of feeding is to suspend the cabbages in reach of the birds. Mangel wurzels should be split and stuck on nails on the wall or fence.

Clover and alfalfa may be fed as hay, cut in the lengths of an inch or less, or they may be bought in the form of meal. For use as poultry green feed, clover and alfalfa should be cut while slightly immature. This is one of the points that the poultry-keeper will need to look to in making provision for a supply of winter green feed. Sprouted oats constitute an unfailing source of winter green feed when no other feed is available, but involve more labor and expense in preparing and feeding them the vegetables or hay. They should not be relied upon exclusively. Oats may be sprouted at any time of the year and are therefore a dependable reserve.

Importance of Green Feeds.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the importance of growing some green feeds at home. If there is not enough space in your own lot both to keep the flock and grow a few cabbages, an arrangement might be made with a neighbor who keeps no fowls to allow the use of a bit of ground for late planted cabbages. For use as poultry feed, it is not necessary that the cabbages reach full maturity or that the heads be as perfect as for table use. Even when a cabbage plant is composed almost wholly of the large green leaves that would have to be thrown away if used for table purposes it makes good poultry feed. The poultry branch of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, has devoted a great deal of attention to winter green feeds for poultry, and asserts that a full measure of success cannot be attained with hens unless adequate provision is made in this regard. Where only a few hens are kept the kitchen waste will largely take the place of green feed even in winter.

GREEN FEED FOR HENS

Hens must have green feed all winter if they are to pay for their keep in eggs.

A little forethought and effort will enable most poultry keepers, even in cities, to meet the need without much expense.

Grow some green feed at home. Now is the time to plant. It will save a good bit of money next winter.

Infertile Eggs for Market.

The loss in the United States from improper methods of producing and handling eggs amounts to millions of dollars a year. Probably one-third of this loss is due to the partial hatching of fertile eggs which have been allowed to become warm enough to incubate. This annual loss of good food can be prevented by separating the hens from the male birds after the hatching season is over. The male bird serves no useful purpose in the flock during summer, fall and winter and should be cooked, sold or confined immediately after the hatching season is over.

Teach How to Preserve Eggs.

To teach city people how to preserve eggs with water glass, extension workers of the poultry division of the United States department of agriculture are holding demonstrations in large department stores in a number of cities. Demonstrations have been held in Washington, Chicago and New Orleans, and the plan is to extend the work to other large cities. Similar demonstrations have been held in rural schools and at meetings attended by farmers.

Record for Hauling Eggs.

The first commercial truck load of eggs from Vineland and Millville, N. J., into New York city—about 140 miles—arrived recently with not one egg broken. Delivery from the shipper to the wholesaler was made in 15 hours, which is faster time than that made by express shipments, and establishes a record for motor haul of eggs, according to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture which arranged for the demonstration. The five-ton truck carried 150 crates of eggs weighing nearly four tons, the rest of the load being made up of crated glass. It left Vineland at about 11 a. m., and arrived in the wholesale district of New York city at two o'clock the next morning.

Poultry Wheatless Rations.

Wheatless rations for commercial or coop feeding of young chickens for market offers to commercial feeders singularly efficient and economical rations for rapid gains in weight. In tests conducted by specialists of the United States department of agriculture, a report of which has been published in a professional paper, Bulletin 637, a ration composed of cornmeal and fresh buttermilk, fed again and again throughout the whole feeding season, produced in 14 days' coop feeding an average gain of a pound for every 888 pounds of wet feed consumed. Still better results were obtained with distillers' grains. In the tests the highest and cheapest gains were made by birds having an initial weight of two pounds or less.

Some of the heavy breeds of fowls are very hard to break of sitting when they once get "in the notion," and extreme measures are often practiced upon the poor sitting ones.

UP TO AMERICA TO WIN WAR

Collapse of Russia Places the Burden of Eliminating the Hun on Shoulders of the Yanks.

Daily it grows more certain that the world war is to be fought till one side or the other is prostrate. The war would have been over months ago if Russia had not collapsed; but with treason in the czar's cabinet and lunacy and stupidity pervading the Russian proletariat, that mighty empire of the north became an inert and important mass at the mercy of Germany. And as for Russia, her fate will be determined by the world congress that will write the peace when the war is over. It will be about the mightiest job human statecraft ever undertook and an impossible job unless Germany or the entente is then as helpless as Russia is now.

With the western front reinforced by the millions of veterans Germany had in Russia, the German people have become as confident of victory as they were when the first gun was fired. At this moment Germany, rulers and people alike, feel assured as to the outcome. There is a determination to annex all of Belgium, all of France now held by the German armies and all of the possessions of Belgium and France in Africa. Discussion is now going on in the German press as to the amount of the money indemnity the enemy shall pay. Already Russia is carved by the German sword. And if Germany shall succeed in her present intentions she will be as complete mistress of the world as it now is known as the Rome of Julius Caesar was mistress of the world as it was known on the eve of the Christian era.

FARMERS ARE WORKING HARDER

And using their feet more than ever before. For all these workers the frequent use of Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath, increases their efficiency and insures needed physical comfort. It takes the friction from the shoe, freshens the feet, and prevents tired, aching and blistered feet. Women everywhere are constant users of Allen's Foot-Ease. Don't get foot sore, get Allen's Foot-Ease. Sold by dealers everywhere, 25c—Adv.

Wattle Bark Valuable.

Quantities of the bark of the South African wattle tree have been imported into the United States from Natal in recent years, but most of it prior to the war was exported to Germany and Belgium. Since then wattle bark has been utilized to a far greater extent by tanners in this country.

Honey in Ice Cream.

Faced with a serious sugar shortage recently, two ice cream concerns in Portland, Ore., used honey as a substitute, and for two weeks made their product with choice strained honey, effecting 70 per cent conservation of sugar. And the ice cream was found to be excellent.

GOOD-BYE BACKACHE, KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES

For centuries all over the world GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules have afforded relief in thousands upon thousands of cases of lame back, lumbago, sciatica, rheumatism, gallstones, gravel and all other affections of the kidneys, liver, stomach, bladder and allied organs. It acts quickly. It does the work. It cleanses your kidneys and purifies the blood. It makes a new man, a new woman of you. It frequently wards off attacks of the dread and fatal diseases of the kidneys. It often completely cures the distressing diseases of the organs of the body allied with the bladder and kidneys. Bloody or cloudy urine, sediment, or "brickdust" indicate an unhealthy condition.

Do not delay a minute if your back aches or you are sore across the loins or have difficulty when urinating. Go to your druggist at once and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules. They are pleasant and easy to take. Each capsule contains about one dose of five drops. Take them just like you would any pill. Take a small swallow of water if you want to. They dissolve in the stomach, and the kidneys soak up the oil like a sponge does water. They thoroughly cleanse and wash out the bladder and kidneys and throw off the inflammation which is the cause of the trouble. They will quickly relieve those stiffened joints, that backache, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gallstones, gravel, "brickdust," etc. They are an effective remedy for all diseases of the bladder, kidney, liver, stomach and allied organs. Your druggist will cheerfully refund your money if you are not satisfied after a few days' use. Accept only the pure, original GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules. None other genuine.—Adv.

Worse Than the Barbers' Union.

In the reign of Elizabeth every beard of a fortnight's growth was subject to a tax of 33 cents. Peter the Great in 1705 imposed a tax upon the beards of the Russian nobles of 100 rubles, while the common people's beard tax amounted to 2 kopeck. This tax caused much dissatisfaction, but in spite of this the impost was extended to St. Petersburg in 1714. The tax on beards was confirmed by Catherine I in 1720, by Peter II in 1728, by Empress Anne in 1731, and in 1743 by the Empress Elizabeth.

X-Ray Reflectors.

Mica has been found an excellent material for concentrating mirrors for X-rays. Glass will not do, because, smooth as it is, it is too rough for the extremely minute X-rays, which are much smaller than light waves. Glass diffuses the X-rays much as a rough surface diffuses light waves, but it was found that the surface of mineral crystals were of the requisite smoothness for reflecting X-rays, and of them mica is the most adaptable, being readily split into sheets.

Farmers! Watch Your Stomachs In Hot Weather

We and Our Allies Are Depending Upon Your Strength To Supply Our Armies With Food.

You men who work long hours in the fields under a blazing sun—you've got to be big eaters because your food, after eating, EATONIC will help you to your strength, and now, more than ever, your strength is badly needed. So guard your health. Be sure and watch your stomach, for in the summer time nearly all illness can be traced to stomach and bowel complaint. You, yourself, know how liable a man is to be stricken—if he goes in the hot sun too soon after eating a hearty mid-day meal, and also how liable he is to sudden attacks of stomach miseries. So cool off in the shade before going back to work. Don't take chances.

Take care of your stomach, friend. You know you can't work well with your stomach out of fix. "Safety first" must be your motto, so send to your druggist and get a big box of EATONIC, enough for yourself and family, yes, and the hired folks, too. It's the wonderful new compound for the quick relief of stomach and bowel miseries. It was originated by H. L. Kramer, the man who made millions of people happy with his first great remedy, Cascarets.

Now, all you need do is to take a tablet or two of EATONIC after your meals. It's good—just like eating candy. Enjoy the quick, sure relief it brings—how almost instantly it relieves indigestion, heartburn, food-repeating, sour stomach, and that painful, puffed-up, bloated, lumpy feeling got to be big eaters because your food, after eating, EATONIC will help you to your strength, and now, more than ever, your strength is badly needed. So guard your health. Be sure and watch your stomach, for in the summer time nearly all illness can be traced to stomach and bowel complaint. You, yourself, know how liable a man is to be stricken—if he goes in the hot sun too soon after eating a hearty mid-day meal, and also how liable he is to sudden attacks of stomach miseries. So cool off in the shade before going back to work. Don't take chances.

Your health—your folks' health—is a matter of vital importance, not only to yourself, but also to the nation. And you know or can't be too careful of one's stomach and bowels during the hot spells.

EATONIC only costs a cent or two a day to use it—a big box 50 cents—no more. That is the price, and remember, EATONIC is absolutely guaranteed to do all we claim—in fact, more. It's the best Stomach Remedy you ever used.

You know your druggist; trust him then to make our guarantee good; if EATONIC fails in any way, take it back; he will refund your money. If your druggist does not keep it, drop us a postal and we will send it; you can pay when you get it. Address "H. L. KRAMER, Pres. EATONIC REMEDY CO., 1018 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

No one should consider for a moment that he or she is "giving" by pledging to buy thrift stamps. We are only making another good investment on gilt edged security, but an investment so gradually made that we need scarcely feel it at all. The invaluable feature of the movement, however, to the investor—aside from the demonstration of loyalty to our country's causes that it will establish a habit of systematic saving with thousands of people who would otherwise never form that habit. The value of such a habit cannot be estimated. It may come to mean freedom from the worries of debt, lessening of anxiety in times of sickness or comfort instead of poverty in old age, if firmly established now. The designation "Thrift" is just the right one. No one should fail to "get in" on a good thing like the thrift stamp investment.

Suggestion to Bill Hohenzollern: In order to fill up the reduced German ranks why not call in the thousands of spies "snapping" around in every known country on the globe and give decent soldiery a chance at 'em? They would make a big army, of course, but they ought to be wiped off the face of the earth along with the rest of the Huns.

It is reported that cats and dogs are being used as food for Belgians held in Germany, also for Germans—but the lean and sickly canines and felines are given to the Belgians while the fatter animals are reserved for the natives. Another illustration of the boasted "German thrift."

WIXOM CHURCH NOTES.

The topic for Sunday morning will be "Center and Circumference Religion." If there is lack of radiations of spiritual warmth or light at the circumference of your life, you will find the trouble all at the center. If the upper rooms of your homes cool off, you don't look in the garret for the cause; you just ring up the coal dealer for a load of anthracite. If the church is to radiate spiritual warmth and light to the community life there must be a warm fire of Divine love at the center. Keep the home fires burning, then the prayer service will be your delight.

The C. E. topic for Sunday evening will be "How to Have a Good Time."

The L. T. L. will have charge of the Sunday evening service.

The Red Cross will hold an all-day meeting next week Tuesday in the town hall, for work. Everybody who positively can do so is urged to come and help.

Mrs. M. A. Bourn is entertaining her daughter and family (Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler and children) and her son, Emmet Dawson, all of Indiana, who made the trip here by automobile.

GARRICK THEATRE, DETROIT.

"Captain Kidd, Jr.," which will be offered at the Garrick theatre, Detroit, by the Boistelle Company next week is a story which fascinates and meets all comedy requirements.

The story opens in a little second-hand bookstore in New York city. Among a collection of books purchased by Jim Anderson, a clerk, is an old volume with a mysterious drawing which tells of a treasure chest buried on Cape Cod in the year 1770. Having traced the book to the little shop, an heir of its former owner seeks to buy it again. Realizing its value, Jim refuses to part with the drawing, but an agreement is finally reached whereby all concerned may share in the result of a joint search for the treasure. A chest is actually found and its contents, though quite different from the expectations of the diggers, are not without some value. A prettily told romance develops, and the contents of the chest leads zest and mystery to the romance.

Matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

SUGAR ALLOWANCE CUT TO 2 POUNDS

NO LARGE SALES, EXCEPT FOR CANNING.

Lansing, Mich., June 19.—New regulations governing sales of sugar to private consumers which became effective at once, are announced by State Food Administrator Prescott. The amount which the private consumer in the city or small towns may purchase at any one time is reduced from five to two pounds. The amount a farmer may purchase is cut from 10 to 5 pounds.

For canning purposes the housewife may purchase 25 pounds by signing a sugar card obtained from her grocer, on which she must certify that the sugar will be used only for canning purposes. If she needs another 25 pounds for canning purposes, the housewife must obtain a sugar card signed by the county food administrator. Before she can obtain a third 25 pounds, the sanction of State Food Administrator Prescott must be obtained.

We Advise Every Nemo Wearer

to buy enough Nemo Corsets during the

BIG 4 NEMO WEEKS IN JUNE

to last until the war is over!

Owing to the enormously increased cost of all corset material, a number of Nemo Corsets are to be advanced in price Monday, July 1.

Owing to the growing scarcity in all corset materials, further and greater advances are sure to come, if not a serious shortage in corsets. We therefore advise early buying and heavy buying.

We secured a large supply of Nemo Corsets for this sale, but they're going fast. Come in soon and get your share.

This is an opportunity to exercise foresight and to practice true corset economy. Don't miss it.

PASTE the KAISER WITH W. S. S. ON June 28th

Paste him in the eye with a War Savings Stamp—then paste him again and again. Don't think that you have already done your duty. Pershing's men "over there" don't go home after their first battle—they go after the Huns again—they keep on pasting the Kaiser.

Your government has officially set—

Friday, June 28th

National War Savings Day

On that day every American is summoned to "sign the pledge"—to save and invest in a definite amount of War Savings Stamps each month.

Every real American will prove his patriotism by agreeing to regularly paste the Kaiser.

*W. S. S. cost $4.17 in June,
Worth $5.00 on Jan. 1, 1923*

"Sign the pledge" on June 28th. Paste the Kaiser with War Savings Stamps.

If our boys keep up the present rate of entering the service of their country we will have the "century" number.

A jolly motor truck load of 35 members of the local L. O. T. M. went to Detroit to perform the ritual work of the order for Alpha Hive of the city Monday evening. They were entertained at a six o'clock dinner, where they met four of their Mrs. Milton Brown, Mrs. Fair, Mrs. Mary Predmore and Mrs. Maude Harmon. The occasion was one of great pleasure for all concerned.

A remarkable motor accident occurred a few days ago at the bridge near the Electric power house when a car occupied by A. Walters and wife of South Lyon came down the street—probably at airplane speed—and in some unexplainable manner jumped over the eight-foot cement wall at the bridge approach and landed bottom up on the stones of the creek bed below, with the occupants underneath the machine. When extricated, it was found that Mrs. Walters had sustained only some severe bruises. Mr. Walters' injuries were expressed in the cool remark "Well what do you know about this! my watch crystal is all smashed to pieces." The car, which should by all precedent, have been smashed also, was not very seriously damaged either.

HOW TO HANG THE FLAG.

A glance at the flags displayed in windows around town shows that all Northville folks are not "on" to the right way of placing the Star Spangled Banner. Official authority says that when hung on walls or in windows, perpendicularly—stripes running up and down—the flag should have its blue field in the upper right hand corner as faced from the outside. When so hung that the stripes run the other way—horizontally—the stars should be in the upper left-hand corner—stripes to the right.

NORTHVILLE'S 1918 CHAUTAUQUA ASSURED

Miss Clements, organizer for the Community Chautauqua was in town the first of the week in the interest of Northville's coming Chautauqua, July 28 to August 1. As reorganized, the local management is in the hands of the following officers and committees: President, David Gage; vice-president, C. A. Dolph; 2nd vice-president, N. J. Coff; secretary, Thos. R. Carrington; treasurer, Charles A. Ponsford; advertising committee, T. E. Murdock, Wm. Safford, Don Ball, J. W. Perkins; grounds, Charles Filkins, H. Ray Bogart; tickets, C. L. Blackburn, Linnie M. Cook, E. M. Bogart, E. V. Belles, Mrs. Cobb. The committee feels safe in promising the people of Northville and vicinity a rich treat. The literary and musical talent secured by the Community people is the best that money can buy. The various performers have records that are a sufficient guaranty of the excellence of our Chautauqua for the 1918 season.

SOME BALL GAME COMING.

A game of ball has been arranged between the Presbyterian Ministers' Association of Detroit and the Business Men of Northville, to take place on the home grounds next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Some of the boys who used to play in Northville's crack team will be on the diamond with as much pep and vim as ever. The preachers will leave their dignity in the city with their Prince Alberts. A good time is absolutely assured. Don't miss it.

BUY WAR SAVINGS STAMPS AS OFTEN AS POSSIBLE.

You have invested in Liberty Loan bonds in sums of fifty dollars or more. You have given to the Patriotic Fund, for which you will receive no direct return either as a principal or interest. Again you have the opportunity to make an investment in Loyalty that will produce you better than 4% interest. Or you can buy Thrift Stamps at 25 cents each until you get enough to exchange for a War Saving Stamp. During this month, of June $4.17 will buy a War Saving Stamp the United States government will redeem for Five Dollars in 1923, which is giving you interest on your money at the rate of nearly four and one-half per cent.

PAY YOUR PATRIOTIC FUND

It has been somewhat of a surprise to the committee in charge that only about half the people here paid their Patriotic fund installments at the appointed date, Saturday, June 15. There really seems to be no good reason for such neglect, but the committee is going to give people one more chance this coming Saturday, June 22. Possibly some did not see the notice. Certainly it cannot be expected that those in charge can afford to spend the time to solicit every person for the installments as they become due. You can pay at Loomis' store Saturday night. Don't fail to do so, also tell your neighbors about it.

MRS. GRISWOLD DIED WEDNESDAY.

The end of years of suffering came to Mrs. D. F. Griswold Wednesday, June 19. The obituary will be published in next week's issue of the Record. Funeral services will take place from the home this Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Features at the New Alseium Theatre.

Saturday, June 22—a fine feature program.

Tuesday, June 25, Blanche Kennedy in "Nearly Married." Don't fail to see it. Its a sure cure for blues.

Thursday, June 27th, Fannie Ward in "The Unconquered."

Big treat for July 4—Jack Pickford in "The Dummy."

And on July 5th comes "The Unbeliever." Watch for it. It's great. It has had a six weeks' straight run at the Majestic theatre in Detroit, so it must be worth seeing. Special program in connection.

The YUKON TRAIL

A TALE OF THE NORTH
BY WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE

CHAPTER XXIII.

Holt Frees His Mind.

Macdonald whirled in his tracks. Old Gid Holt was leaning on his elbow with his head out of the window. "You better come and beat me up first, Mac," he jeered. "I'm all stove up with a busted tail, so you can wallop me good. I'd come out there, but I'm too crippled to move."

"You're not too crippled to go back to Kuskiak with me. You can't walk, you'll ride. But back you go."

"Fine. I been worrying about how to get there. It's right good of you to bring one of these here taxis for me, as the old sayin' is."

"Where have you cached the gold you stole?"

"I ain't seen the latest papers, Mac. What is this stuff about robbin' a bank and shootin' Milton?"

"You're under arrest for robbery and murder."

"Am I? Unless the particulars. When did I do it all?"

"You know when. Just before you left town."

Holt shook his head slowly. "No, sir. I can't seem to remember it. Sure it ain't some one else you're thinking about? How come you to fix on me as one of the bold, bad bandits?"

"Because you had no sense enough to cover your tracks. You might just as well have left a note saying you did it. First, you come to town and buy one of the fastest dog teams in Alaska. Why?"

"That's an easy one. I bought that team to win the Alaska sweepstakes from you. And I'm going to do it. The team you handled right or it would have won last time. I got to mullin' it over, and figured that old Gid Holt was the dog puncher that could land those huskies in front. See?"

"You bought it to make your getaway after the robbery," retorted Macdonald.

"It's a difference of opinion makes horse races. What else have you got against us?"

"We found in your room one of the sacks that had held the gold you took from the bank."

"That's right. I took it from the bank in the afternoon, where I had had it on deposit, to pay for the team I bought. Milton's books will show that. But you didn't find any sack I took when your bank was robbed—if it was robbed," added the old man significantly.

"Of course, I knew you would have an alibi. Have you got one to explain why you left town so suddenly the night the bank was robbed? Milton was killed after midnight. Before morning you and your friend Elliot routed out Akroyd and bought a lot of supplies from him for a hurry-up trip. You slipped around to the corral and hit the trail right into the blizzard. Will you tell me why you were in such a hurry to get away, if it wasn't to escape from the town where you had murdered a decent old fellow who never had harmed a soul?"

"Sure I'll tell you. The black eyes of the little man snapped eagerly. "I came so p. d. q. because that side partner of mine Gordon Elliot wouldn't let me wait till mornin'. He had a reason for leavin' town that wouldn't wait a minute, one big enough to drive him right into the heart of the blizzard. Me, I tagged along."

"I can guess his reason," jeered the Scotsman. "But I'd like to hear you put a name to it."

Holt grinned maliciously and waved a hand toward the girl who was pilloving the head of her lover. "The name of his reason is Sheba O'Neill, but it's to be Sheba Elliot soon, looks like."

"You mean—"

The little miner took the words triumphantly out of his mouth. He leaned forward and threw them into the face of the man he hated. "I mean that while you was dancin' and phillanderin' with other women, Gordon Elliot was buckin' a blizzard to save the life of the girl you both claimed to love. He was mushin' into fifty miles of frozen hell while you was fillin' up with potted grouse and champagne. Simultaneous with the lame goose and the monkey singlestep you was doin', this lad was windjammin' through white drifts. He beat you at your own game, man. You're a bear for the outdoor stuff, they tell me. You chew up a blizzard for breakfast and throttle a pack of wolves to work up an appetite for dinner. It's your specialty. All right. Take your hat off to that cheechacko who has just whaled you blind. He has outgamed you, Colby Macdonald. You don't run in his class. I see he is holding his hand up again. Give him another half-hour and he'll be ready to go to the mat with you again."

The big Alaskan pushed away a fear that had been lingering in his mind ever since he had stumbled on that body buried in the snow yesterday afternoon. Was his enemy going to escape him, after all? Could Holt be telling the true reason why they had left town so hurriedly? He would not let himself believe it.

"You ought to work up a better story than that," he said contemptuously. "You can throw a husky through the holes in it. How could Elliot know, for instance, that Miss O'Neill was not safe?"

"The same way you could a known it," snapped old Gideon. "He phoned to Smith's Crossin' and found the stage hadn't got in and that there was a whole of a storm up in the hills."

Macdonald set his face. "You're lying to me. You stumbled over the stage while you were making your getaway. Now you're playing it for an alibi."

Elliot had risen. Sheba stood beside him, her hand in his. She spoke quietly. "It's the truth. Believe it or not as you please. We care nothing about that."

The stab of her eyes, the carriage of the slim, pliant figure with its suggestion of the gallantry, challenged her former lover to do his worst.

On the battered face of Gordon was a smile. So long as his Irish sweetheart stood by him he did not care if he were charged with high treason. It was worth all it cost to feel the warmth of her brave, impulsive trust.

The deep-set eyes of Macdonald clinched with those of his rival. "You cached the rest of the gold, I suppose," he said doggedly.

With a lift of his shoulders the younger man answered lightly: "There are none so blind as those who will not see. Mr. Macdonald." He turned to Sheba. "Come. We must make breakfast."

"You're going to Kuskiak with me," his enemy said bluntly.

"After we have eaten, Mr. Macdonald," returned Elliot with an ironic bow. "Perhaps, if you have not had breakfast yet, you will join us."

"We start in half an hour," announced the mine-owner curtly, and he turned on his heel.

The rifle lay where Sheba had dropped it when she ran to gather her stricken lover into her arms. Macdonald picked it up and strode over the brow of the hill without a backward look. He was too proud to stay, and watch them. It was impossible to escape him in the deep snow that filled the hill trails, and he was convinced they would attempt nothing of the kind.

The Scotsman felt for the first time in his life old and spent. Under tremendous difficulty he had mused for two days and had at last run his men down. The lust of vengeance had sat on his shoulders every mile of the way and had driven him feverishly forward. But the salt that had lent a savor to his passion was gone. Even though he won, he lost. For Sheba had gone over to the enemy.

With the fierce wilfulness of his temperament he tried to tread under foot his doubts about the guilt of Holt and Elliot. Success had made him arrogant and he was not a good loser.

Sheba Had Gone Over to the Enemy.

He hated the man who had robbed him of Sheba, but he could not escape respecting him. Elliot had fought until he had been hammered down into unconsciousness and he had crawled to his feet and stood erect with the smile of the unconquered on his lips. Was this the sort of man to murder in cold blood a kindly old gentleman who had never harmed him?

The only answer Macdonald found was that Milton had taken him and his partner by surprise. They had been driven to shoot the cashier to cover up their crime. Perhaps Holt or another had fired the actual shot, but Elliot was none the less guilty. The heart of the Scotsman was bitter within him. He intended to see that his enemies paid to the last ounce. He would hurry them to the gallows if money and influence could do it.

None the less, his doubts persisted. If they had planned the bank robbery, why did they wait so long to buy supplies for their escape? Why had they not taken the river instead of the hill trail? The story that his enemies told hung together. It had the ring of truth. The facts supported it.

One piece of evidence in their favor Macdonald alone knew. It lay buried in the deep snows of the hills. He shut his strong teeth in the firm resolve that it should stay there.

The weather had moderated a good deal, but the trail was a protected forest one. The two teams low going down had come up so that the path was packed fairly hard and smooth. Holt lay propped on his own sled against the sleeping-bag. Sheba nudged behind Gordon. She chatted with them both, but ignored entirely the existence of Macdonald, who followed with his prize-winning Siberian dogs.

Though she tried not to let her lover know it, Sheba was troubled at heart. Gordon was practically the prisoner of a man who hated him bitterly, who believed him guilty of murder, and who would go through fire to bring punishment home to him. She knew the power of Macdonald. With the money back of him, he had for two years fought against and almost prevailed over a strong public opinion in the United States. He was as masterful in his hatred as in his love. The dominant fighting figure in the Northwest, he trod his stony way through opposition like a Colossus.

Nor did she any longer have any illusions about him. He could be both ruthless and unscrupulous when it suited his purpose. As the day wore toward noon, her spirits drooped. She was tired physically, and this reacted upon her courage.

The warmer weather was spoiling the trail. It became so soft and mushy that though snowshoes were needed, they could not be worn on account of the heavy snow which clung to them every time a foot was lifted. They wore mukluks, but Sheba was wet to the knees. The spring had gone from her step. Her shoulders began to sag.

For some time Gordon's eye had been seeking a good place for a day camp. He found it in a bit of open timber above the trail, and without a word he swung his team from the path.

"Where are you going?" demanded Macdonald.

"Going to rest for an hour," was Elliot's curt answer.

Macdonald's jaw clamped. He strode forward through the snow beside the trail. "We'll see about that."

The younger man faced him angrily. "Can't you see she is done, man? There is not another iota of travel in her until she has rested."

The hard, gray eyes of the Alaskan took in the slender, weary figure leaning against the sled. On a soft and mushy trail like this, where every footstep punched a hole in the loose snow, the dogs could not travel with any extra weight. A few miles farther down they would come to a main-traveled road and the going would be better. But till then she must walk. Macdonald gave way with a gesture of his hand and turned on his heel.

At the campfire Sheba dried her mukluks, stockings, carbon mitts and short skirts. Too tired to eat, she forced herself to swallow a few bites and drank eagerly some tea. Gordon had brought blankets from the sled and he persuaded her to lie down for a few minutes.

"You'll call me soon if I should sleep," she said drowsily, and her eyes were closed almost before the words were off her lips.

When Macdonald came to order the start half an hour later, she was still asleep. "Give her another thirty minutes," he said gruffly.

Youth is resilient. Sheba awoke rested and ready for work.

While Gordon was untangling the dogs she was left alone for a minute with the mine-owner.

The hungry look in his eyes touched her. Impulsively she held out her hand.

"You're going to be fair, aren't you, Mr. Macdonald? Because you don't like him—you won't?"

He looked straight into the dark appealing eyes. "I'm going to be fair to Robert Milton," he told her harshly. "I'm going to see his murderers hanged if it costs me every dollar I have in the world."

"None of us objects to justice," she told him proudly. "Gordon has nothing to fear if only the truth is told."

"Then why come to me?" he demanded.

She hesitated; then, with a wistful little smile, spoke what was in her heart. "I'm afraid you won't do justice to yourself. You're good—and brave—and strong. But you're very willful and set. I don't want to lose my friend. I want to know that he is all I have believed him—a great man who stands for the things that are fine and clean and just."

"Then it is for my sake and not for his that you want me to drop the case against Elliot?" he asked ironically.

"For yours and for his, too. You can't hurt him. Nobody can really be hurt from outside—not unless he is a traitor to himself. And Gordon Elliot isn't that. He couldn't do such a thing as this with which you charge him. It is not in his nature. He can explain everything."

"I don't doubt that. He and his friend Holt are great little explainers."

In spite of his bitterness Sheba felt a change in him. She seemed to have a glimpse of his tormented soul gaged in battle. He turned away without shaking hands, but it struck her that he was not implacable.

While they were at luncheon half a dozen packmales laden with supplies for a telephone construction line outfit had passed. Their small, sharp-shod hoofs had punched sink-holes in the trail at every step. Instead of a smooth bottom the dogs found a slushy bog cut to pieces.

At the end of an hour of wallowing Macdonald called a halt.

"There is a cutoff just below here. It will save us nearly two miles, but we'll have to break trail. Swing to the right just below the big willow," he told Elliot. "I'll join you presently, and relieve you on the job. But first Miss O'Neill and I are going for a little side trip."

All three of them looked at him in sharp surprise. Gordon opened his lips to answer and closed them again without speaking. Sheba had flashed a warning to him.

"I hope this trip isn't very far off the trail," she said quietly. "I'm just a wee bit tired."

"It's not far, the mine-owner said curtly."

He was busy unpacking his sled. Presently he found the dog mukluks for which he had been looking. He packed his sled, and fitted the shoes to the bleeding feet of the team-leader. Elliot, suspicious and uncertain what to do, watched him at work, but at a signal from Sheba turned reluctantly away and drove down to the cutoff.

Macdonald turned his dogs out of the trail and followed a little ridge for perhaps a quarter of a mile. Sheba trudged behind him. She was full of wonder at what he meant to do, but she asked no questions. Some wise instinct was telling her to do exactly as he said.

From the sled he took a shovel and gave it to the young woman. "Dig just this side of the big rock—close to the foot of the tree," he told her.

Sheba dug, and at the second stroke of the spade struck something hard. He stooped and pulled out a sack.

"Open it," he said. "Rip it with this knife."

She ran the knife along the coarse weave of the cloth. Fifteen or twenty smaller sacks lay exposed. Sheba looked up at Macdonald, a startled question in her eyes.

He nodded. "You guessed it. This is part of the gold for which Robert Milton was murdered."

"But—how did it get here?"

"I buried it there yesterday. Come."

He led her around the rock. Back of it lay something over which was spread a long bit of canvas. The heart of Sheba was beating wildly.

The Scotsman looked at her from a rock-bound face. "Underneath this canvas is the body of one of the men who murdered Milton. He died more miserably than the man he shot. Half the gold stolen from the bank is in that gunnysack you have just dug up. If you'll tell me who has the other half, I'll tell you who helped him rob the bank."

"This man—who is he?" asked Sheba, almost in a whisper. She was trembling with excitement and nervousness.

Macdonald drew back the cloth and showed the rough, hard face of a workman.

"His name was Trelawney. I kicked him out of our camps because he was a troublemaker."

"He was one of the men that robbed you later?" she exclaimed.

"Yes. And now he has tried to rob me again and has paid for it with his life."

Her mind flashed back over the past. "Then his partner in this last crime must have been the same man—what's his name?—that was with him last time."

"Northrup," he nodded slowly. "I hate to believe it, but it is probably true. And he, too, is lying somewhere in this park covered with snow—if our guess is right."

"And Gordon—you admit he didn't do it?"

Again he nodded, sulkily. "No. He didn't do it."

Joy lit in her voice. "So you've brought me here to tell me. Oh, I am glad, my friend, that you were so good. And it is like you to do it. You have always been the good friend to me."

The Scotsman smiled, a little wistfully. "You take a mean advantage of a man. You nurse him when he's ill—and are kind to him when he is well—and try to love him, though he is twice your age and more. Then, when his enemy is in his power, he finds he can't strike him down without striking you too. Take your young man, Sheba O'Neill, and marry him, and for God's sake, get him out of Alaska before I come to grips with him again. I'm not a patient man, and he's tried me sair. They say I'm a good hater, and I always thought it true. But what's the use of hating a man, when your soft arms are round him for an armor?"

The fine eyes of the girl were wells of warm light. Her gladness was not for herself and her lover only, but for the friend that had been so nearly lost and was now found. He believed he had done it for her, but Sheba was sure his reasons lay deeper. He was too much of a man to hide evidence and let his rival be falsely accused of murder. It was not in him to do a cheap thing like that. When it came to the pinch, he was too decent to stab in the back. But she was willing to take him on his own ground.

"I'll always be thanking you for your goodness to me," she told him simply.

He brushed that aside as mere sentiment. "There's one thing more, lass. I'll likely not be seeing you again alone, so I'll say it now. Don't waste any tears on Colby Macdonald. Don't fancy any story-book foolishness about my life."

He turned away without shaking hands, but it struck her that he was not implacable. While they were at luncheon half a dozen packmales laden with supplies for a telephone construction line outfit had passed. Their small, sharp-shod hoofs had punched sink-holes in the trail at every step. Instead of a smooth bottom the dogs found a slushy bog cut to pieces. At the end of an hour of wallowing Macdonald called a halt. There is a cutoff just below here. It will save us nearly two miles, but we'll have to break trail. holding boys, maybe, but a man goes his ain gait even when he gets a bit fater."

"Yes," she agreed. And in a flash she saw what would happen, that in the reaction from his depression he would turn to Genevieve Mallory and marry her.

"You're too young for me, anyhow—too soft and innocent. Once you told me that you couldn't keep step with me. It's true. You can't. It was a daff dream."

He took a deep breath, seemed to shake himself out of it, and smiled cheerfully upon her.

"Well, put our treasure-trove on the sled and go back to your friends," he continued briskly. "Tomorrow I'll send men up to scour the hills for Northrup's body."

Sheba drew the canvas back over the face of the dead man. As she followed Macdonald back to the trail, tears filled her eyes. She was remembering that the white, stinging death that had crept upon these men so swiftly had missed her by a hair's breadth. The strong, lusty life had been stricken out of the big Cornishman and probably of his partner in crime. Perhaps they had left mothers or wives or sweethearts to mourn them.

Macdonald relieved Elliot at breaking trail and the young man went back to the gee-pole. They had discarded mukluks and wore moccasins and snowshoes. It was hard, slow work, for the trail-breaker had to fight his way through snow along the best route he could find. The moon was high when at last they reached the roadhouse.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Diane Changes Her Mind.

The news of Sheba's safety had been telephoned to Diane from the roadhouse, so that all the family from Peter down were on the porch to welcome her with mingled tears and kisses. Since Gordon had to push out to the hospital to have Holt taken care of, it was Macdonald who brought the girl home. The mine-owner declined rather brusquely an invitation to stay to dinner on the plea that he had business at the office which would not wait.

Impulsively Sheba held out both her hands to him. "Believe me; I am thanking you with the whole of my heart, my friend. And I'm praying for you the old Irish blessing, 'God save you kindly.'"

The deep-set, rapacious eyes of the Scotsman burned into hers for an instant. Without a word he released her hands and turned away.

Her eyes followed him, a vital, dynamic American who would do big, lawless things to the day of his death. She sighed. He had been a great figure in her life, and now he had passed out of it.

As soon as she was alone with Diane, her Irish cousin dropped the little bomb she had up her sleeve.

"I'm going to be married Thursday, Di."

Mrs. Paget embraced her for the tenth time within an hour. "She was very fond of Sheba, and she had been on a great strain concerning her safety. That out of her danger had resulted was surplusage of good luck."

"You lucky, sensible girl."

Sheba assented demurely. "I do think I'm sensible as well as lucky. It isn't every girl that knows the right man for her even when he wants her. But I know at last. He's the man for me out of ten million."

"I'm sure of it, dear. Oh, I am so glad," Diane hugged her again. She couldn't help it.

"One gets to know a man pretty well on a trip like that. I wouldn't change mine for any one that was ever made. I like everything about him, Di. I am the happiest girl."

"I'm so glad you see it that way at last," Diane passed to the practical aspect of the situation. "But Thursday. Will that give us time, my dear? And who are you going to have here?"

"Just the family. I've invited two guests, but neither of them can come. One has a broken leg and the other says he doesn't want to see me married to another man," Sheba explained with a smile.

"So Gordon won't come?"

"Yes. He'll have to be here. We can't get along without the bridegroom. It wouldn't be a legal marriage, would it?"

Diane looked at her, for the moment out at last. "So it's Gordon, is it? Are you quite sure this time? Not likely to change your mind before Thursday?"

"I suppose, to an outsider, I do seem fickle," Miss O'Neill admitted smilingly. "But Gordon and I both understand that."

"And Colby Macdonald—does he understand it too?"

"Oh, yes." Her smile grew broader. "He told me that he didn't think I would quite suit him, after all. Not enough experience for the place."

Diane flashed a suspicious look of inquiry. "Of course that's nonsense. What did he tell you?"

"Something like that. He will marry Mrs. Mallory, I think, though he doesn't know it yet."

"You mean she will get him on the rebound," said Diane bluntly.

"That isn't a nice way to put it. He has always liked her very much. He is fond of her for what she is. What attracted him in me were the things his imagination gave to me."

"And Gordon likes you, I suppose, for what you are?"

Sheba did not resent the little note of friendly sarcasm. "I suppose he has his fancies about me, too, but by the time he finds out what I am he'll have to put up with me."

The arrival of Elliot interrupted conversation. He had come, he said, to relay congratulations.

"What in the world are you doing with your face?" demanded Diane. As an afterthought she added: "Mr. Macdonald is all cut up too."

"We've been taking massage treatment," Gordon passed to a subject of more immediate interest. "Do I get my congratulations, Di?"

She kissed him, too, for old sake's sake. "I do believe you'll suit Sheba better than Colby Macdonald would. He's a great man and you are not. But it isn't everybody that is fit to be the wife of a great man."

"That's a double, left-handed compliment," laughed Gordon. "But you can't say anything that will hurt my feelings today, Di. Isn't that your baby I hear crying? What a heartless mother you are!"

Diane gave him the few minutes alone with Sheba that his gay smile had asked for. "Get out with you," she said, laughing. "Go to the top of the hill and look at the lovers' moon. I've ordered there expressly for you."

As Lovers Will to the End of Time.

and while you are there forget that there are going to be crying babies and nursemaids with evenings off that golden future of yours."

"Come along, Sheba. We'll start now on the golden trail," said Elliot.

She walked as if she loved it. Her long, slender legs moved rhythmically and her arms swung true as pendulums.

The moon was all that Diane had promised. Sheba drank it in happily. "I believe I must be a pagan. I love the sun and the moon and I know it's all true about the little folk and the piper and—"

"If it's paganism to be in love with the world, you are a thirty-third degree pagan."

"Well, and was there ever a more beautiful night before?"

He thought not, but he had not the words to tell her that for him its beauty lay largely in her presence. Her passionate love of things fine and brave transformed the universe for him. It was enough for him to be near her, to hear the laughter bubbling in her throat, to touch her crisp, black hair as he adjusted the scarf about her head.

"God made the night," he replied. "So that's a Christian thought as well as a pagan one."

They were no exception to the rule that lovers are egoists. The world for them tonight divided itself into two classes. One included Sheba O'Neill and Gordon Elliot; the other took in the uninteresting remnant of humanity. No matter how far afield their talk began, it always came back to themselves. They wanted to know all about each other, to compare experiences and points of view. But time fled too fast for words. They talked as lovers will to the end of time—in exclamations and the meeting of eyes and little endearments.

When Diane and Peter found them on the hillside, Sheba protested, with her half-shy, half-audacious smile, that it could not be two hours since she and Gordon had left the living room. Peter grinned. He remembered a hill-top consecrated to his own courtship of Diane.

The only wedding present that Macdonald sent Sheba was a long envelope with two documents attached by a clip. One was from the Kuskiak Sun. It announced that the search party had found the body of Northrup with the rest of the stolen gold beside him. The other was a copy of a legal document. Its effect was that the district attorney had dismissed all charges pending against Gordon Elliot.

Although Macdonald lost the coal claims at Kamathah by reason of the report of Elliot, all Alaska still believes that he was right. In that country of strong men he stands head and shoulders above his fellows. He has the fortunate gift of commanding the admiration of friend and foe alike. The lady who is his wife is secretly the greatest of his slaves, but she tries not to let him know how much he has captured her imagination. For Genevieve Macdonald cannot quite understand herself, how so elemental an emotion as love can have pierced the armor of her sophistication.

A NOVEL by REX BEACH

Author of "THE IRON TRAIL," "THE SPOILERS,"
"HEART OF THE SUNSET," Etc.

(Copyright, by Harper and Brothers.)

O'REILLY MAKES LOVE BADLY, BUT WELL ENOUGH TO WIN THE HEART OF ROSA.

Synopsis.—Don Esteban Varona, a Cuban planter, hides his wealth—money, jewels and title deeds—in a well on his estate. The hiding place is known only to Sebastian, a slave. Don Esteban's wife dies at the birth of twins, Esteban and Rosa. Don Esteban marries the ambitious Donna Isabel, who tries unsuccessfully to wring the secret of the hidden treasure from Sebastian. Angered at his refusal, she urges Don Esteban to sell Evangelina, Sebastian's daughter. Don Esteban refuses, but in the course of a gambling orgie, he risks Evangelina at cards and loses. Crazy by the loss of his daughter, Sebastian kills Don Esteban and is himself killed. Many years pass and Donna Isabel is unable to find the hidden treasure. Don Mario, rich sugar merchant, seeks to marry Rosa, who has returned from school in the United States.

"Good!" Don Mario rose to leave, for the exertion of his ride had made him thirsty. "You may name your own reward for helping me and I will pay it the day Rosa marries me. Now kindly advise her of my intentions and tell her I shall come to see her soon."

It was quite true that Johnnie O'Reilly, or "The O'Reilly," as his friends called him, had little in the way of worldly advantage to offer any girl, and it was precisely because of this fact that he had accepted a position here in Cuba, where, from the very nature of things, promotion was likely to be more rapid than in the New York office of his firm.

A dancing eye speaks every language; a singing heart gathers its own audience. Before the young Irish-American had more than a bowing acquaintance with the commonest Spanish verbs he had a calling acquaintance with some of the most exclusive people of Matanzas. He had adjusted himself serenely to his surroundings when Rosa Varona returned from school, but with her coming, away went all his complacency. His contentment vanished; he experienced a total change in his opinions, his hopes, and his ambitions.

He discovered, for example, that Matanzas was by no means the out-of-the-way place he had considered it; on the contrary, after meeting Rosa once by accident twice by design, and three times by mutual arrangement, it had dawned upon him that this was the chief city of Cuba, if not, perhaps, the hub around which the whole world revolved; certainly it was the most agreeable of all cities, since it contained everything that was necessary for man's happiness. Yet, despite the thrill of his awakening, O'Reilly was not at all pleased with himself, for, as it happened, there was another girl back home, and during his first year of loneliness he had written to her more freely and more frequently than any man on such a salary as his had a right to do.

Inasmuch as her father was O'Reilly's "company" it may be seen that Rosa Varona's home-coming seriously complicated matters, not only from a sentimental, but from a business standpoint.

It was in a thoughtful mood that he rode up La Cumbre toward the Quinta de Esteban, late on the afternoon of Don Mario's visit. Instead of going directly to the house, as the merchant had done, O'Reilly turned off from the road and, after tethering his horse in a cluster of guava bushes, proceeded on foot. He did not like Donna Isabel, nor did Donna Isabel like him. Moreover, he had a particular reason for avoiding her today.

Just inside the Varona premises he paused an instant to admire the outlook. The quinta commanded an excellent view of the Yumuri, on the one hand, and of the town and harbor on the other, and one ever climbed the hill from the city to gaze over into that hidden valley without feeling a pleasurable surprise at finding it still there. We are accustomed to think of perfect beauty as unsubstantial, evanescent, but the Yumuri never changed, and in that lay its supreme wonder.

Through what had once been well-tended grounds, O'Reilly made his way to a sort of sunken garden which, in spite of neglect, still remained the most charming nook upon the place; and there he sat down to wait for Rosa. The hollow was effectively screened from view by a growth of plantain, palm, orange, and tamarind trees; over the rocky walls ran a profusion of flowering plants and vines; in the center of the open space was an old well, its masonry curb all but crumbled away.

When Rosa at last appeared, O'Reilly felt called upon to tell her, somewhat dizzily, that she was beyond doubt the sweetest flower on all the Quinta de Esteban, and since this somewhat hackneyed remark was the boldest speech he had ever made to her, she blushed prettily, flashing him a dimpled smile of mingled pleasure and surprise.

"Oh, but I assure you I'm in no sweet temper," said she. "Just now I'm tremendously angry."

"Why?"

"It's that stepmother—Isabel. If she dreamed that I see you so often as I do—Well—Rosa lifted her eloquent hands and eyes heavenward. "I suppose that's why I enjoy doing it—I so dearly love to spite her!"

"I see!" O'Reilly puckered his brows and nodded. "But why, in that case, haven't you seen me oftener? We might just as well have made the good lady's life totally unbearable."

"Still!" She knows nothing about it. "With a flirtatious sigh Rosa added: "That's what robs the affair of its chief pleasure. Since it does not bother her in the least, I think I will not allow you to come any more."

After judicious consideration, O'Reilly pretended to agree.

"There's no fun in wreaking a horrible revenge, when your enemy isn't wise to it," he acknowledged. "Since it's your idea to irritate your stepmother, perhaps it would annoy her if I made love directly to her."

Rosa giggled, and then inquired, naively, "Can you make love, senor?"

"Can I? It's the one ability an O'Reilly inherits. Listen to this now." Reaching forth, he took Rosa's fingers in his. "Wait!" he cried as she resisted. "Pretend that you're Mrs. Varona, your own stepmother, and that this is her dimpled hand I'm holding."

"Oh-h!" The girl allowed his grasp to remain. "But Isabel's hand isn't dimpled—it's thin and bony. I've felt it on my ears often enough."

"Don't interrupt," he told her. "Isabel, my little darling—"

"Isabel!" exclaimed a voice, and the lovers started guiltily apart. They turned to find Esteban, Rosa's twin brother, staring at them oddly. "Isabel!" he repeated. "What's this?"

"You interrupted our theatricals. I was rehearsing an impassioned proposal to your beloved stepmother," O'Reilly explained, with a pretense of annoyance.

"Yes, Senor O'Reilly believes he can infuriate Isabel by laying siege to her. He's a foolish person—Rosa's cheeks were faintly flushed and her color deepened at the amusement in Esteban's eyes. "He makes love wretchedly."

"What little I overheard wasn't bad," Esteban declared; then he took O'Reilly's hand.

Esteban was a handsome boy, straight, slim and manly, and his resemblance to Rosa was startling. With a look engaging in its frank directness, he said: "Rosa told me about your meetings here and I came to apologize for our stepmother's discourtesy. I'm sorry we can't invite you into our house, but—do you understand? Rosa and I are not like her; we are quite liberal in our views; we are almost Americans, as you see. I dare say that's what makes Isabel hate Americans so bitterly."

"Wouldn't it please her to know that I'm becoming Cubanized as fast as ever I can?" ventured the caller.

"Oh, she hates Cubans, too!" laughed the brother. "She's Spanish, you know. Well, it's fortunate you didn't see her today. Be-r! What a temper! She'll walk in her sleep tonight, if ever."

Rosa nodded soberly, and O'Reilly, suppressing some light reply that had sprung to his lips, inquired, curiously, "What do you mean by that?"

Brother and sister joined in explaining that Donna Isabel was given to peculiar actions, especially after periods of excitement or anger, and that one of her eccentricities had taken the form of somnambulist wanderings. "Oh, she's crazy enough," Esteban concluded. "I believe it's her evil conscience."

O'Reilly scanned the speaker silently for a moment; then he said, with a gravity unusual in him, "I wonder if you know that you're suspected of working for the insurrecto cause."

"Indeed? I didn't know."

"Well, it's a fact," O'Reilly heard Rosa gasp faintly. "Is it true?" he asked.

"I am a Cuban."

"Cuban? Your people were Spanish."

"True. But no Spaniard ever raised a Spanish child in Cuba. We are Cubans, Rosa and I go everywhere, and the Spanish officers talk plainly before me. Somebody must be the eyes and the ears for Colonel Lopez."

"Colonel Lopez?" exclaimed O'Reilly. Esteban nodded.

Rosa's face, as she looked at the two men, was white and worried. For a time the three of them sat silent; then the American said, slowly, "You'll be shot if you're caught."

"Some one must run chances," Esteban averred. "We're fighting tyranny; all Cuba is ablaze. I must do my part."

"But sooner or later you'll be discovered—then what?" persisted O'Reilly.

Esteban shrugged. "Who knows? There'll be time enough when—"

"What of Rosa?"

"At this question the brother stirred uneasily and dropped his eyes. O'Reilly laid a hand upon his arm. "You have no right to jeopardize her safety. Without you, to whom could she turn?" The girl flashed her admirer a grateful glance.

"Senor, you for one would see that she—"

"But I'm going away," O'Reilly felt rather than saw Rosa start, for his face was averted. "I came here to tell you both good-by. I may be gone for some time. I—I don't know when I can get back."

"I'm sorry," Esteban told him, with genuine regret. "We have grown very fond of you. But you will come back before long, eh? You're one of us. In the meantime I'll remember what you say, and at least I'll be careful." By no means waiting in tact, Esteban rose briskly and, after shaking hands with O'Reilly, left the two lovers to say farewell as best suited them.

But for once O'Reilly's ready tongue was silent. The laughter was gone from his blue eyes when he turned to the girl at his side.

"You say you are going away?" Rosa inquired, breathlessly. "But why?"

"I'm going partly because of this war and partly because of—something else. I tried to tell you yesterday, but I couldn't. When the revolution started everybody thought it was merely a local uprising, and I wrote my company to that effect; but, bless you, it has spread like fire, and now the whole eastern end of the island is ablaze. Business has stopped, and my employers have ordered me home to find out what's happened to their profits."

"You said there was something else—"

O'Reilly's hesitation became an embarrassed silence. He tried to laugh it off.

"There is; otherwise I'd stay right here and tell my penurious friends to whistle for their profits. It seems I'm cursed with a fatal beauty. You may have noticed it? No? Well, perhaps it's a magnificent business ability that I have. Anyhow, the president of my company has a notion that I'd make him a good son-in-law."

"I—Oh!" cried Rosa.

And at her tone O'Reilly hurried on: "These rich men have the most absurd ideas. I suppose I'll have to—"

"Then you are in love, senor?"

The young man nodded vigorously. "Indeed I am—with the sweetest girl in Cuba. That's the whole trouble. That's why I'm hurrying home to resign before I'm fired." Not daring to look too long or too deeply into Rosa Varona's eyes until she had taken in the whole truth, he waited, staring at his feet. "I'm sort of glad it has come to a show-down and I can speak out. I'm hoping she'll miss me." After a moment he ventured, "Will she—er—will you, Rosa?"

"I? Miss you?" Rosa lifted her brows in pretended amazement. "You are amusing, of course, but I won't have much time to think about you, for I am so soon to be married."

"Married? What? Nonsense!"

"Indeed! Do you think I'm so ugly nobody would have me? The richest man in Matanzas has asked for my hand this very afternoon."

"Who? Mario de Castano?"

"Yes."

O'Reilly laughed with relief, and though Rosa tried to look offended, she was forced to smile. "He's fat, I know," she admitted, "and he makes funny noises when he breathes; but he is richer than Croesus, and I adore rich men."

"I hate 'em!" announced O'Reilly. Then, for a second time he took Rosa's dimpled hand, saying, earnestly, "I'm sure you know now why I make love so badly, dear. It's my Irish conscience. And you'll wait until I come back, won't you?"

"Will you be gone—very long?" she asked.

O'Reilly looked deeply now into the dark eyes turned to his, and found that at last there was no squinty in them anywhere—nothing but a lonesome, hungry yearning—and with a glad, incoherent exclamation he held out his arms. "Rosa Varona crept into them; then with a sigh she upturned her lips to his.

"I'll wait forever," she said.

CHAPTER IV.

Retribution.

Although for a long time Donna Isabel had been sure in her own mind that Pancho Cueto, her administrator, was robbing her, she had never mustered courage to call him to a reckoning. Nevertheless, De Castano's blunt accusation, coupled with her own urgent needs, served to fix her resolution, and on the day after the merchant's visit she sent for the overseer, who at the time was living on one of the plantations.

Cueto was plainly curious to learn why he had been sent for; but since he asked no questions, his employer was forced to open the subject herself. Through dry, white lips she began:

"Will You Be Gone—Very Long?" She Asked.

"My dear Pancho, times are hard. The plantations are reeling, and so—Pancho Cueto's eyes were set close to his nose, his face was long and thin and harsh; he regarded the speaker with such a sinister, unblinking stare that she could scarcely finish: "—and so I can no longer afford to retain you as administrator."

"Times will improve," he said.

"Impossible! I tell you I'm bankrupt."

"So? Then the remedy is simple—sell a part of your land."

Although this suggestion came naturally enough, Donna Isabel turned cold, and felt her smile stiffen into a grimace. She wondered if Cueto could be feeling her out deliberately. "Sell the Varona lands?" she queried, after a momentary struggle with herself. "Esteban would rise from his grave. No. It was his wish that the plantations go to his children intact."

"And his wish is sacred to you, eh?" Cueto nodded his approval, although his smile was disconcerting. "An admirable sentiment! It does you honor! But speaking on this subject, I am reminded of that dispute with Jose Oroz over the boundary to La Joya. I have promised to show him the original deed to La Joya and to furnish him with the proofs about the boundary line. That would be better than a lawsuit, wouldn't it?"

"Decidedly! But—I will settle with him myself."

Cueto lifted an admonitory hand, his face angrier with the faintest glimmer of ironic mirth. "I couldn't trust you to the mercies of that rascal," he said piously. "No, I shall go on as I am, even at a sacrifice to myself. I love Don Esteban's children as my very own; and you, senora—"

Isabel knew that she must win a complete victory at once or accept an irretrievable defeat.

"Never!" she interrupted, with a tone of finality. "I can't accept your sacrifice. I am not worthy. Kindly arrange to turn over your books of account at once."

Then Pancho Cueto did an unexpected thing; he laughed shortly and shook his head.

Donna Isabel was ready to faint and her voice quavered as she went on: "Understand me, we part the best of friends despite all I have heard against you. I do not believe these stories people tell, for you probably have enemies. Even if all they said were true, I should force myself to be lenient because of your affection for my husband."

The man rose, still smiling. "It is I who have been lenient," said he. "Eh? Speak plainly."

"Gladly! I have long suspected that Don Esteban hid the deeds of his property with the rest of his valuables, and now that you admit—"

Donna Isabel recoiled sharply. "Admit! Are you mad? Deeds! What are you talking about?" Her eyes met his bravely enough, but she could feel her lips trembling loosely.

Casting aside all pretense, the overseer exclaimed: "Por el amor de Dios! Admit to this! I know why you sent for me: You think I have been robbing you. Well, to be honest, so I have. Why should I tell as I do while you and those twins live here in luxury and idleness, squandering money to which you have no right?"

"Have I lost any reason?" gasped the woman. "No right?"

"At least no better right than I. Don't you understand? You have no title to these plantations! They are mine, for I have paid the taxes out of my own pockets now these many years."

"Taxes! What do you mean?"

"I paid them. The receipts are in my name."

"Heaven! Such perjury! And you who knew him?"

"The deeds have been lost for so long that the property would have reverted to the crown had it not been for me. You doubt that, eh? Well, appeal to the court and you will find that it's true. Now, then, let us be frank. Inasmuch as we're both in much the same fix, hadn't we better continue our present arrangements?" He stared unblinkingly at his listener. "Oh, I mean it! Is it not better for you to be content with what my generosity prompts me to give, rather than to risk ruin for both by grasping for too much?"

"The outrage! I warrant you have grown rich through your stealing." Isabel's voice had gone flat with consternation.

"Rich? Well, not exactly, but comfortably well off." Cueto actually smiled again. "No doubt my frankness is a shock to you. You are angry at my proposition, eh? Never mind. You will think better of it in time, if you are a sensible woman. But now, since at last we enjoy such confidential relations, let us have no more of these miserable suspicions of each other. Let us entirely forget this unpleasant misunderstanding and be the same good friends as before."

Having said this, Pancho Cueto stood silent a moment in polite expectancy; then receiving no intelligible reply, he bowed low and left the room.

To the avaricious Donna Isabel Cueto's frank acknowledgment of theft was maddening, and the realization that she was helpless, nay, dependent upon his charity for her living, fairly crucified her proud spirit.

All day she brooded, and by the time evening came she had worked herself into such a state of nerves that she could eat no dinner. Some time during the course of the evening a wild idea came to Isabel. Knowing that the manager would spend the night beneath her roof, she planned to kill him. At first it seemed a simple thing to do—merely a matter of a dagger or a pistol, while he slept—but further thought revealed appalling risks and difficulties, and she decided to wait. Poison was far safer.

Constant brooding over the treasure had long since affected Donna Isabel's brain, and as a consequence she often dreamed about it. She dreamed about it again tonight, and strangely enough, her dreams were pleasant. Sebastian appeared, but for once he neither cursed nor threatened her; and Esteban, when he came, was again the lover who had courted her in Habana. It was amazing, delightful, Esteban and she were walking through the grounds of the quinta and he was telling her about his cashes of Spanish sovereigns, about those boxes bound with iron, about the gold and silver ornaments of heavenly beauty and the pearls as large as plums. As he talked Isabel felt herself grow hot and cold with anticipation; she experienced spasms of delight.

Then of a sudden Isabel's whole dream-world dissolved. She awoke, as though she did, at hearing her name shouted. But although she underwent the mental and the physical shock of being startled from slumber, although she felt the first swift fright of a person aroused to strange surroundings, she knew on the instant that she must still be asleep; for everything about her was dim and dark, the air was cold and damp, wet grass rose to her knees. Before she could half realize her condition she felt herself plunged into space. She heard herself scream hoarsely, fearfully, and knew, too late, that she was indeed awake. Then—whirling chaos—A sudden, blinding crash of lights and sounds—Nothing more!

Esteban Varona sat until a late hour that night over a letter which required the utmost care in its composition. It was written upon the thinnest of paper, and when it was finished the writer inclosed it in an envelope of the same material. Esteban put the letter in his pocket without addressing it. Letting himself out into the night, he took the path that led to the old sunken garden. He passed close by the well, and its gaping mouth, only half protected by the broken coping, reminded him that he had promised Rosa to cover it with planks. In its present condition it was a menace to animals, if not to human beings who were unaware of its presence.

Doan's Kidney Pills Effected Wonderful Recovery After Other Medicines Had Failed.

"I don't believe I would be alive to give this testimony if it weren't for Doan's Kidney Pills," says Mrs. Julia A. Thomas, 1125-A Missouri Ave., East St. Louis, Ill. "I was in a serious condition with kidney trouble; my feet and ankles were terribly swollen and the kidney secretions caused agony in passing. I had terrible rheumatic pains and often got so dizzy I dared not walk for fear of falling. I felt as if I would go frantic. I would grow weak as a baby and often had to grasp something to keep from falling. My nerves were all unstrung and the least noise startled me. Nothing benefited me and I was discouraged. A neighbor happened to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and I began using them. The swellings and pains were soon eased up and it was but a short time before my kidneys were in good shape again. They have never bothered me since nor have I had any backache or other kidney trouble. I have gained 55 pounds since I was cured and can do all my own work without suffering."

CRADLE SONGS ARE ANCIENT

Words Often Seem Meaningless Jumble; Melody Always Within Compass of Home Voices.

Almost all popular cradle songs are very old, some of them so old that, were they not familiar, they might be considered the veriest curiosities of literature. Through all the changes of language they have held their own upon the lips and in the hearts of the people. From mouth to mouth they have come down through the years with an irresistible swing of rhythm and patter and jingle of words, till they seem to have been rather a natural growth than a human invention.

In all the melodies, observes a writer, there is a certain likeness of rhythm with a national, I might say, a temperamental difference of movement and a meter from the slow assured major of the Germans to the wild plaintive minor of the Scotch, characterized by the short accented notes or the weirdness of the Hungarian with its sudden changes.

That these old songs should have embodied and retained the characteristics of the people among whom they originated gives them an importance which their crude words and the elementary character of their melodies scarcely seem to warrant. The words often seem a mere meaningless jumble, the melody is always within the easy compass of home voices. No doubt both express, in some supernally wise way, the one unalterable sentiment of maternal love.

Blinded in the War.

Statistics furnished by the French and British authorities show that there are in England, France and Belgium more than 3,000 soldiers who have been totally blinded in the war, and nearly 25,000 blinded in one eye.

* Yerkes, Joseph A.

* Deceased.

Mrs. Fred L. Newton has received a letter from her nephew, Morris L. Bailey, who recently joined the Navy, stating that he has been detailed as Secretary to Lieut. Farwell in the Barge office, 234 Battery, New York City. Letters will reach him, addressed care of Recruiting Office, U. S. C. G. Battery Barge office, New York City.

Sergt. Conrad Langfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Langfield of this place, is one of eight Michigan men who have recently received commissions. He is now a second Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps of the national army and is stationed at Washington.

Sergeant Earl Montgomery was home from Camp Custer for the week-end. Earl says that this will probably be his last visit here for some time, as his regiment expects to leave there in the near future.

Word has come to Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Dubuar that their son Carroll has reached France in safety.

Lou Balch of Detroit is spending the week at the Gillis home, and leaves Monday for Camp Custer.

Carroll Ambler left Thursday evening for the home of his uncle in Ohio, where he will work on a farm during the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Villerot, Miss Celma Villerot and Eugene Walling of Detroit, Frank and Julia Villerot of Redford spent Sunday with A. H. Kohler and family.

Mrs. Lyon and son of Detroit were guests of Mrs. Sarah Parsons Thursday. The young man is in the Quartermaster's department of the U. S. army.

Mrs. Ida Hendryx went to Detroit Wednesday to go on a motor trip to Flint with Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald (formerly Jennie Rich of this place) and Mrs. Charles Burgess. The party will visit friends in Flint for a few days.

Mrs. William H. White and Mrs. Geo. Ford were at Walled Lake Wednesday to attend the funeral of their cousin, Mrs. Grace Porter Dodge, whose body was brought there from her home on Oklahoma for burial. Mrs. Dodge was a graduate of the Northville High school and later was a teacher here for several years.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. VanTassel and E. K. Starkweather have been in Saginaw a part of this week attending the annual reunion of the Custer Brigade. Comrade Andrew Houk of Detroit came out to accompany them, these three Custer veterans of the local Post, G. A. R. being the only remaining ones in this vicinity. Each member of the famous brigade may be identified during the time of the reunion by his brilliant red tie, which all are expected to wear.

CUT DOWN YOUR BEEF RATIONS.

State Food Administrators, Michigan: On account of increasing demand for beef for our growing army we ask householders not under any circumstances to buy more than one and one-fourth pounds of clear beef or one and one-half pounds including the bone, per person per week. There is an increased supply of pork in the country, therefore we urge people to substitute fresh pork, bacon, ham and sausages to a certain extent for beef products. HERBERT HOOVER.

CARD OF THANKS.

John Schoultz extends sincere thanks to the O. E. S., the Masons and other friends for flowers and kindness during his recent illness.

We Set Tire
Standards

Why is it that United States Tires are setting new records for mileage and serviceability?

Why is it that the sales of these tires are constantly mounting by leaps and bounds?

The answer is found in the factories where United States Tires are made.

Standards of construction for these tires are higher than ever before known in the tire industry.

Makers of tire fabrics tell us that the standards we have given them for United States Tire fabrics are higher than any previously known.

Likewise through every process of construction from crude rubber to finished tires—we have set new and higher standards everywhere.

These standards work out on your car in the practical economy demanded by war times.

United States Tires will raise any car to higher efficiency.

There is a type to suit every condition of service.

The nearest United States Sales and Service Depot dealer will cheerfully aid in selecting right tires for your requirements.

RED CROSS NOTES.

It should be remembered that the work of making the small refugee garments is just as necessary as ever. Volunteer service in this line shows much greater patriotism and interest than solicited service. It cannot possibly be expected that the various chairmen can continually collect and distribute the work or that they can keep asking the ladies to make the garments. Ladies who have been assisting in this important work or those who are willing to do so, should go to the chairmen of their respective neighborhoods for the work and not wait to be asked to do it. It is the business of every patriotic woman who can spare the time, just as much as it is the business of those who have accepted the responsibilities of chairmanship. All are getting the same pay—the consciousness of helping in the world work of the Red Cross. It is absolutely necessary that all refugee garments be finished and turned in within two weeks from the time the material is given out. The smallest shipments that can be sent to Detroit headquarters are half dozens. The need to clothe the poor little bodies "over there" is more pressing than ever. Do not keep a garment after it is done. Just that one may hold up a shipment.

The Northville Unit wishes to provide an outfit of knitted articles and a comfort kit for every soldier who goes from Northville and vicinity, and to give the boys these things to take with them instead of sending them on later. Many soldiers have gone before the committee knew of it, and to avoid this in future it is requested that every soldier boy or his friends shall notify the local Red Cross before his departure. The articles will be ready whenever called for. Either Mrs. Kittie Harmon, Mrs. Georgie Yerkes or Mrs. Grace Stanley may be notified. Another important feature is the returning of these articles by boys who for any reason are sent back. Several outfits have been returned, but a few have not. As the articles are very expensive, and are intended only for boys in the service, the boys who are not retained in the service will please return the outfits, that they may be again given out.

It is intended to make the Junior Red Cross work an important feature through the summer vacation, and classes will be held every Monday and Wednesday afternoon, from 1:00 o'clock to 5. Here is a chance for our girls and boys to demonstrate their patriotism and their usefulness. Instructors will be present at every meeting.

W. R. C. NOTES.

(By Press Correspondent.)
The next regular meeting of Allen M. Harmon W. R. C. No. 225, will be held in Scotts Hall next Wednesday evening, June 26—call to order at usual time, 7:30. Let all interested in the work be present to hear the delegates report from Department Convention.

COMMISSIONER'S NOTICE.

In the matter of the estate of MORRIS EUGENE JOHNSON, deceased.

We, the undersigned, having been appointed by the Probate Court for the county of Wayne, state of Michigan, commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet at the Lapham State Savings bank, in the village of Northville, in said county, on Monday, the 19th day of August A. D. 1918, and on Saturday, the 19th day of October A. D. 1918, at 10 o'clock a. m. of each of said days, for the purpose of examining and allowing said claims, and that four months from the 19th day of June A. D. 1918, were allowed by said court for creditors to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated June 19, 1918.
EDWARD H. LAPHAM,
CHARLES BLACKBURN,
48-51 Commissioners.

SAVING WOOL IS NOT ALL.

We never could save enough to satisfy the needs of the boys at the front—we'll simply have to do without it. You know, they wear out about twice as many clothes as we do. Yes, the government is protecting them by taking over the raw wool supply and also a good many of the mills. That means that when the present stocks of clothing are gone we will have to get along here at home with much less wool than we are using now. Of course, a good many stores are selling cotton mixtures now, but I was over to Mabley's the other day and they still have

All-Wool Suits for as low as $20.00.
