NORTHVILLE HONORS SOLDIER DEAD

APPROPRIATE AND LARGELY ATTENDED SERVICE LAST SUNDAY EVENING.

The union service at the Methodist church Sunday evening in honor of Michigan's soldier dead through the world war, brought out a splendid attendance. The special music by the choir of the church was fine, the tenor solo "When the Blue Star Stars to Gold" providing a particularly beautiful feature both in its sentiment and the way in which it was sung. Mr. VanValkenburg almost surpassing his usual excellent best. That the splendid address by Rev. Edward Belles of the Presbyterian church was one of the finest ever given in Northville was the general verdict, judging from the comments heard on all sides.

WELCOME TO NEW PASTOR.

A public reception is to be given this Friday evening, commencing at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Simmons, in compliment to Rev. E. L. Prestidge and wife, of the Baptist church. The people of the other Northville churches are cordially invited to join in extending to Mr. and Mrs. Prestidge a hearty welcome to the community. This honor would have been paid them much sooner had it not been for the influenza epidemic, which made it necessary to defer what is hoped will be a large gathering of Northville people.

EASTERN STARS' ANNUAL BALL

Final arrangements for the O. E. S. annual ball at the new school gymnasium Friday evening, February 21, have been completed. Benjamin L. School's famous orchestra, which furnishes dancing music for such societies as the Palestine and other large lodges of Detroit, has been engaged for this rare occasion, and a great treat is expected along this line. Those desiring to have friends receive invitations to this dance should notify any member of the Executive Committee immediately as the mailing lists are being completed. Members of the society will receive no invitation, as it is expected and hoped that every member will be present.

DETROIT VOTES HOSPITAL SITE

APPROPRIATES $100,000 FOR LAND FOR TUBERCULOSIS SANITARIUM IN NORTHVILLE TWP.

COUNCILLORS ADVANCE FUNDS TO HEALTH BOARD AS AN EMERGENCY MEASURE.

Detroit common council Monday authorized the expenditure by the board of health of $100,000 for the purchase of a site for a tuberculosis sanitarium to be located between the U. S. Fishery road and the Base Line road west of this village.

The land to be acquired by Detroit has been held under option for some time. These options are now about to expire. Therefore the board of health, instead of awaiting the untangling of the city bond situation and fearful that higher prices would be exacted from the city in the future, asked the council to sanction the use of the necessary funds from the unexpended balances of the city.

In explaining to the council the plans of the board of health, Dr. Francis Duffield, president of the board, stated that the farms to be bought all had adequate water supplies but that it was also desired, in order to provide additional water facilities, to purchase a tract of 10 acres a short distance away from the building site.

The tract which the council authorized to be purchased at the present time contains a little more than 629 acres. The health board was advised to obtain supplementary information in regard to the outside plot and to submit such information at a later date.

Bonds for a tuberculosis sanitarium were authorized by the common council in 1917-1918 in the amount of $1,070,000. Of these $100,000 were issued, being taken by the National City company. But the same question arose in regard to these as in the case of other bonds of the city of Detroit. The National City company contends that under the new charter such bond issues are not legal unless approved by the people in a referendum vote. Court proceedings in the matter are still pending.

For this reason the $100,000 already issued were not available to the board of health, and as an emergency measure the council Monday authorized the city controller to advance city funds in order to take up the expiring options. If the bond controversy has not been settled at the time when actual construction work shall begin it is probable that further sums will be similarly advanced to the health board.

The properties to be purchased by the city under existing options are tracts belonging to the following: Wallin farm from Ralph Diserens, DeKay farm, Harry Clark's south 160 a part of E. K. Starkweather's, Fred Foreman's and a part of the Lockwood farm of Mr. Dyer opposite and west of Floyd Northrop's.

The tract to be used for the sanitarium has been appraised by the Detroit Real Estate board as worth $82,800, while the options obtained by the board of health entail a purchase price of $33,764.47. Expenses of getting the options and other expenditures will bring the total up to more than $97,000.

The credit for calling attention to Northville as the most desirable spot in Wayne county for the location of the Detroit sanitarium is largely due to the efforts of Attorney C. C. Yerkes of this place.

TWO CAUCUSES CALLED FOR FEBRUARY 11

Calls have been issued for the village caucuses, both to take place next Tuesday evening, February 11.

The "People's Party" will meet in the village hall at 7:30 o'clock, and the "Workmen" will gather in Foresters' hall—formerly Princess rink—at the same hour, to place in nomination the various officers of Northville, for the ensuing year.

DEATH OF MRS. HOUK.

Mrs. Andrew Houk, for many years a resident of Northville and vicinity, died Saturday, February 1st, at her home at 61 Beverly Court, Detroit, from a complication of diseases.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon at the home, conducted by Rev. William T. Jacquess of Detroit, a former pastor of the Northville Presbyterian church, and the body was brought to this place for interment in Rural Hill cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Houk moved to their city from this village eight years ago.

Besides the husband, the nearest surviving relatives are one daughter, Mrs. Leroy Naylor of Redford and three grandchildren, one of whom, Mrs. Ralph Willis made her home here with her grandparents before her marriage.

FORD INTERESTS GET PHOENIX WATER RIGHTS

The Phoenix water power site has been taken over by the Ford interests and work has been commenced on the new dam, which must be completed by March 20th, next, according to the terms of contract, in default of which completion the power rights lapse.

Negotiations are still pending for the purchase of power sites in Northville, including the former Ambler property now belonging to the village. It is said the water rights on the Lawrence farm have already been secured by the Fords.

ROLLER SKATING CAUSES ACCIDENT

Joe Watts was the victim of a bad accident Tuesday, while roller skating on the cement road east of town, in company with a boy-friend. An automobile came up behind the boys, the noise of their skates preventing them from hearing the machine until it was close upon them. In the resulting confusion, Joe was knocked down and run over. He was brought home, and a physician was called, who found that the boy's leg was broken above the knee and both bones of the right arm fractured.

Why Is Northville Firm?

Because Its Citizens Have Learned The Truth.

After reading this generous and encouraging report from Mr. Clark, those who have the misfortune to suffer, as he did, will naturally long to get similar relief. But to get the same good as Mr. Clark had, you should get the same remedy. There are, of course, other kidney pills but there are no other kidney pills that have the same good as Mr. Clark's. That is why Northville people demand the genuine.

N. L. Clark, retired farmer, Grace avenue, Northville, says: "It has been some time since I have had to take Doan's Kidney Pills, but, speaking from past experience, I couldn't advise anyone to use a more reliable medicine than Doan's. Whenever my back bothered me or my kidneys acted irregularly, Doan's Kidney Pills soon did me of the trouble."

The Conscientious Objector, or, Coming Through Under Fire

By
Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey
Author of "Over the Top,"
"First Call," Etc.

Mr. Empey's Experiences During His Seventeen Months in the First Line Trenches of the British Army in France

"What do I think of a blinikin conscientious objector?" answered Ikey Honey from the corner of the firebox. "Well, what with this bloomin' war and all, blokes goin' west by the thousands, a pacifist or conscientious objector is one of two things, he's either a blinikin coward or a bloody pro-German. But it's funny the way some of them blighters, with their West End ideas back in Blighty, changes their minds when they get out here in the mud, and gets their first glimpse of a wooden cross. It's either a firm squad up against a wall, a bloomin' V.C. (Victoria Cross) or a 'rest in peace' sign over their nappies for them. A strange thing it is, but true; those blokes never go through the trenches in an ordinary way like we do. It's a case of extremes, no in-between stuff."

"Next time you're on a burial party, take a look at the third cross from the left in the fourth row as you enter the cemetery. You know that path that leads through the orchard just off the entrance of that big R. E. (Royal Engineers) dugout; well, under that cross rests a bloke who back in Blighty professed to be a pacifist. He wouldn't blinikin well volunteer, not likely; they had to draft him, an' when they did he refused to fight, so they stuck him in the N. C. C. (non-combatant corps) and handed him a pick and shovel and put him to repairin' roads and diggin' graves. Well, it didn't take long before he was properly fed up with his job, and he threw down the pick and shovel and grabbed up a rifle an' bayonet. Oh, yes, he clicked it all right and went west. In fact he was buried in one of the graves he helped to dig. I suppose some of those college officers called it the 'iron of fate,' or some other blinikin high-sounding phrase, but he knows that it was only common ordinary luck, 'cause we all know that if you're going to get it, you'll get it, no matter if you're a gentleman's son or a bloomin' chimney sweep."

"This blighter I'm telling about was in my platoon when I was in C company, an' he used to give me the proper plp with his arguments against fighting and the likes o' that."

"The first time I met him was in St. Armand, or 'bat' was in the rest billets away from the front. You see we had clicked it pretty rough at Fromelles, an' a platoon looked like a blinikin squad when it lined up for parade. I was playing 'house' from that estaminet right across from that bashed-in church on the corner when his labor battalion came through and took over billets just opposite from the estaminet. I was sitting near a window and watched them pass. A sorrier bunch of specimens of men I never saw; it turned my blinikin stomach to look at them, what with their pasty faces, stooped-over shoulders and sagging gait. Right then and there I admired the Germans for their system of universal military training. If England had had a little more of it there never would have been a war and right now we would be in Blighty with our wives and nippers, instead of sitting here in these bloody ditches waitin' for a shell to come over with our name and number on it."

"After the labor battalion took over billets several of them came into the estaminet and sat at a table near me. They started to discuss the war and voice their opinions about the 'top hats' at home. This bloke I'm talkin' about was the loudest of the bunch; he seemed to have a grouse on everything in general. I listened to him a few minutes chuckin' his weight about until it bloody well got on my nerves. Chuckin' up my game of house—and I had paid half a franc for my board, too—I leaped over to him and said:

"You must be one of those bloomin' conscientious objectors we reads about in the papers, one o' those blighters who don't believe in fightin' but is willing to sit back in Blighty and let us blokes out here do your bloody fightin' for you, while you gets a blinikin good screw (salary) sittin' on a high stool in some office."

"He turned to me and answered: 'It's the likea o' you who volunteered for this war what keeps it goin'. If you had all refused to go at first, there wouldn't be any war?'

"I couldn't see it his way at all, and went right back at him with: 'Yes, and if it wasn't for us volunteering, the bloody German flag would now be flyin' over Buckingham palace and King George would be in the Tower of London.'

"He thought a minute or two and answered: 'Well, what of it; one flag's as good as another, and as for the bloomin' king, what did he ever do for you but make you pay taxes so he could bloomin' well sit around doin' nothin'?"

"This was too much for me, that blinikin jellyfish a blinging mud at our king, so I lost my temper, and taking my glass of vin rouge in my hand I leaped over close to him and said: 'When you mentions the king's game it is customary to drink his health. Perhaps he never did anything special for me, but I have never done anything special for him, and even at that I've done a damned sight more than you have for him, so take this wine and drink his health, or I'll dent that napper of yours so you won't be able to wear that tin hat of yours.'

"He got kind of pale and answered: 'Drink to the king's health, not like-ly. It's through him and his bloody Top Hats in parliament that I'm out here. Why in the blinkin' hell don't he do his own fighting and let us poor blokes alone?'

"I saw red and was just goin' to hit him, when a big Irishman out of the Royal Irish Rifles next to me grabs the glass of wine from my hand, and looking the blighter in the face yells at him:

"Well, if the king ain't done nothing for you English, he's done less for us Irish, but I volunteered to come out here for him, and here I am, and glad of it, too, and hopes some day to get into Berlin with the king's forces. You won't drink his health, well you can bathe his health. With that he threw the wine into the blighter's face and smashed him in the nose with his fist. The fellow went over like a log with the Irishman still again' for him. If we hadn't of pulled him off I think he would have killed that conscientious objector. The military police came in to see what all the row was about. I had clicked three days C.B. (confined to barracks) and didn't want to get arrested, so in the confusion I made tracks for my billet."

"The next time I met the bloke was when we buried old Smith out of the Tenth platoon in the cemetery at La Bassée. He was one of the grave diggers. All during the burial service he stood looking at the Union Jack with a queer look on his face. When old Smith was lowered into the ground and the dirt was thrown on him the conscientious objector—Watkins was his name—came over to me and said:

"I hear he (pointing at old Smith's grave) is forty-eight years old and has left a wife and three nippers back in Blighty. He was too old for the draft wasn't he? Then he must have volunteered."

"I answered: 'Of course he volunteered, and there he lies, dead as a doornail, but I'll wager a quid his wife and kids will be proud of him—and that's more than your kids will be about you.'

"He sneaked off without answering. Three days later I nearly dropped dead when our lance corporal came into our billet with a bloody nose and a beautifully trimmed lamp. When I asked him how he got knocked about he told me that a fellow out of the non-combatant corps named Watkins had mugged him up just because he had called him a white-livered coward."

"Watkins ducked twenty-one days number one on the wheel, and when his sentence was finished they transferred him to a fighting unit, and bang! into our platoon he comes."

"Many a talk I had with him about that pacifist stuff—he hadn't changed a bit in his ideas—but he kept his mouth shut about the king and the Top Hats at home."

"Then we went into the trenches and I knew his finish was near. A firing squad or 'rest in peace' was to be his lot; they all get one or the other sooner or later."

"After two days in Fritz got rough and opened up with a pretty stiff bombardment."

"Watkins was in the fourth squad in a dugout in the support trench when a 'Minnie' registered a direct hit on the roof and caved her in. Every one but Watkins was killed. How he escaped was a marvel, the rest of the squad being smashed up something awful. We collected the pieces and buried them the next day. Watkins helped dig the graves."

"For two days Watkins scarcely spoke a word, just went round with a faraway look on his face."

"On the third night after the burial volunteers were called for a bombing raid, and I could scarcely believe my ears when I heard that Watkins had volunteered. It was the truth all right—he went alone."

"We crawled out in No Man's land under cover of our barrage and waited. Watkins was next to me. Suddenly a star-shell went up and we crouched down in its light. I was laying so that I could see Watkins. 'Blinme, me—he had no rifle or bayonet,' I whispered over to him: 'Where's your rifle?' He answered: 'I threw it away.' Before I had time to reply, the signal to rush the German trench was given and I lost sight of him."

"It was rough going in the German trench, and we had quite a little of hand-to-hand fighting. Star-shells were going up all around us. 'One of our blokes in front of me was just going round the corner of a traverse when a big German got him through the throat with his bayonet and he went down. Something sprang past me like a wildcat and closed with the Fritz. They both went down together. Just then another German came at me from the entrance of a dugout and I was busy. I managed to get him. Then our lieutenant and two men came round and gave the order to get back to our trenches. The lieutenant stumbled over the three bodies in front of us. 'One of them, groaned. It was Watkins all right. Unarmed he had sprang at the German and with his bare hands had choked him to death, but he had a nasty jagged bayonet wound in his right side. We managed to get him back to our trenches, but he died on the stretcher. Before caving in he looked up at the lieutenant and, with a grin on his face said: 'Tell the bloomin' king and the Top Hats at home that I died for England, an' I hope that like old Smith, my nippers will be proud of their father. God save the king,' and then he died."

"We buried him next morning. No, my opinion of conscientious objectors and pacifists has not changed. 'They are either cowards or pro-Germans.' 'You see Watkins wasn't either; he was a soldier of the king, and a damned good one, too.'"

THE END.

SINCERITY SHOWN IN LIFE

Venerable Declaration That Faith Without Works Is of No Avail Remains True.

An author tells us that sincerity is the supreme virtue; but that sincerity is not expressed in words—only in real life. The venerable declaration that faith without works is dead is true. And one will see an illustration of the fact on every side every day. The fact is the world does not live what it believes. We noted in a book the other day that there would be little, if any, controversy if men said what they thought and felt. This is surely true. Men differ as soon as they appeal from the spirit to the intellect. This is because the spirit deals with the fundamentals and the intellect with the details. Sincerity belongs to the former. It is more than an opinion. It is bigger than a standpoint. It is where sincerity gets its influence, which is the still, small voice that comes out of the whirlwind that roars around every man's life. But we should remember that sincerity is not a concoction, but a virtue as real as a mother's love. And don't mistake sincerity for consistency. They may be acquainted, but they are not related.—Ohio State Journal.

DIFFERENT WAYS TO SHIFT GEARS

Some Good Advice for Beginners With a Few "Don'ts" That Are Worth While.

SOME OF THE DIFFICULTIES

Expert May Be Able to Perform Task Without Disastrous Results—Suggestions That Will Eliminate Wear and Tear.

Thousands of motorists, each season, are having their first experience in the operating of sliding gear transmissions. Changing gears is a matter of some little difficulty in the beginning at least, and it is a fact that quite a proportion of operators never learn to shift gears quietly and to the best advantage.

There are a few difficulties which the experienced driver should be warned against, among which are the following:

Some Difficulties. Attempting to shift from one gear to another without first throwing out the clutch. An expert may be able to do this without noise or disastrous results but, in general, it should never be attempted. Attempting to shift from neutral to low (or any other) gear, when the car is at rest, without first throwing out the clutch until the clutch shaft comes to rest. Trying to engage the reverse gear without first allowing the car to come to a full stop. Attempting to change from neutral to low gear with the car at rest and the engine running too fast.

Among other "don'ts" for the unskilled operator of sliding gears are these:

Don't fail to know exactly where the "reverse" position of the gear shift lever is, and don't fail scrupulously to avoid this position, so long as the car is moving forward.

Don't try to shift from a higher gear to a lower gear without letting the car speed slacken somewhat before so doing.

Don't try to change from high gear to low without letting the car nearly stop.

Don't fail to speed up the car somewhat before changing from a lower to a higher gear.

Few Suggestions. The following out of these few suggestions will eliminate much unnecessary noise and wear and tear.

Transmissions, as built today, are extremely rugged, but, nevertheless, mishandling such as the driver is here warned against may chip the teeth of the gears or even cause the breakage of shafts and other parts.

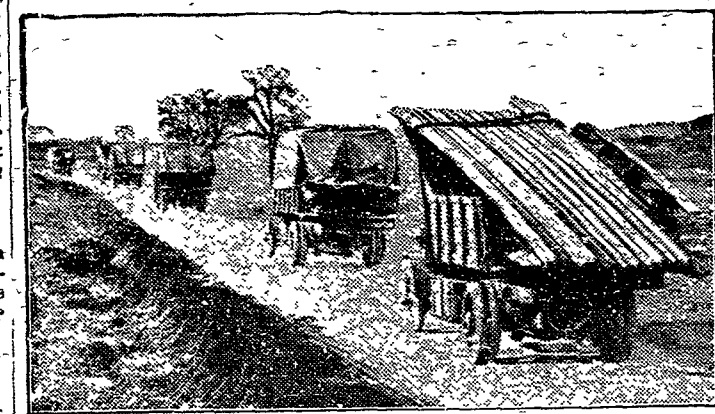

It always should be remembered that two gears cannot be forced into engagement quickly and easily unless they are running at somewhat near the same speed. This is an important point in gear-shifting.

AVOID OVERLOADING TRUCK, BECAUSE TOO HEAVY LOAD OFTEN MEANS RUINED TIRES

Heavily Loaded Trucks Carrying Supplies to Front in France.

Many men of moderate means who bought motor trucks during the war, and have gone into the hauling or transportation business have had little bargaining or experience in truck operation, and, because of this fact, stand too heavy a load on the truck. A team of horses may occasionally be called on to carry a load which seems too heavy for them and not be injured.

Mistake of Owners. Some truck owners think they can call on their solid tires to carry an over-heavy load occasionally in the same way, but in this they make a mistake. When once a solid tire is battered out because of overloading, it is ruined. The overloading may occur the very first time the tire is used, instead of giving the thousands of miles which a well-constructed solid should give, the tire's usefulness is spoiled at the outset.

OPENINGS IN HOOD OF CAR IMPORTANT

Louvers Keep Temperature at Point of Greatest Efficiency.

Sits in Sides of Metal Hoods Are Not Fad of Automobile Designer—Absence Means Back Pressure on Radiator Fan.

In the mind of more than one man who owns and drives his own motor car the slits cut in the sides of the metal hood are purely a fad, or the automobile designer, and excuse their existence by making a rather looking bonnet. Judging from externals, it might seem that this is the case, since in a number of automobiles the hood openings, or louvers, either have lost caste completely, or have been so reduced in number as to lose any hint of significance.

The louver, nevertheless, is rather an important factor in keeping the motor temperature at a point that permits the car to operate at its greatest efficiency. The air that has warmed in passing over the engine finds its exit to the outer atmosphere through these openings, and in this way opens a path for a constant stream of fresh, cool air above the working parts.

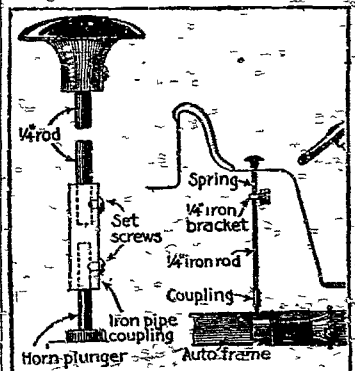

The absence of louvers, or the presence of only a limited number, means a back pressure of warm air on the radiator fan. On the contrary, it follows that the greater the number of louvers the greater will be the velocity of the unwarmed air flowing under the bonnet.

In many parts of the country, where temperature conditions do not require the utmost of cooling systems, attention to this detail of cooling system construction is a matter of little consequence. However, in hot dry regions, motor cars must travel on their cooling systems as well as on their fuel tanks, and every item that points the way to a better radiator system deserves at least a passing notice from the motorist.

The Many Mysteries of Nature

BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.

You can take an onion seed and a penny seed, and plant them side by side in the same spot of ground. In one case, you get an onion, with its peculiar strong odor, and in the other you get a flower of rare beauty. You can plant a poppy seed and get opium (a dangerous habit-forming drug), or you can plant a shrub seed and get something that helps constipation. No scientist, living or dead, can explain these mysteries of Nature. Behind the invisible life form in each seed is hidden the deep secret that nobody understands. Every thing growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce's of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backsache, headache, weakening drains, beating-down pains, periodical irregularities, pelvic inflammation, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue cohosh root, and Oregon grape root. Women who take this standard remedy know that if Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it.

Favorite Prescription should have the full confidence of every woman in America, because it contains neither alcohol nor narcotics. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whisky and morphine are poisonous, and he has always kept them out of his remedies. Send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalid Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pills.

YOUNG MAN WAS INTERESTED

Not Understanding Fellow Passenger of "Literary Workers" Inland That He Scented Romance

Indiana has many women novelists and still more aspiring ones. The day two girls with literary ambitions and who have not yet been successful in selling a story went to an Indianapolis movie. As usual they began to discuss the stories on which they were working. "How is your man now?" asked the first in a louder tone than she usually used. "How is he getting along in his love-making?"

"Oh, I'm having a terrible time with him," returned the second. "Every thing he says sounds so awkward and—"

The pair of broad shoulders in front of them turned and the eyes of one of Indianapolis' young attorneys began to try to solve their identity. But before he could recognize them they fled with the determination to do "literary work" at home only.—Indianapolis News.

Earliest Arrivals in Spring Suits and Dresses

The earliest arrivals in suits and coat-dresses are like the first robins appearing in scattered groups and glimpses, but are harbingers of charming fashions soon to follow. They are rather tentative as to line and silhouette, their motto apparently being "When in doubt choose straight lines." Therefore there are more straight-line models than anything else. Designers may have been waiting for a just word from Paris before launching their earliest creations; if so that last word was the long-winded blouse; a Parisian fancy that results in an obliteration of curves. Along with it came gathered tunics, straight around the bottom, and a variety of interesting lines moving generous and extraordinary cuffs, and mostly cut in the "show" in the sleeve of the illustrated above.

The straight-line suit is a safe choice; women do not confine themselves to one or two styles or to one silhouette any more. The light-line dress is always smart, and wears it with confidence and grace, as is the case with Russian models. There is not a chance that the new suits will keep to the straight and narrow ways of these first arrivals, but however devices they wear, they will not be more attractive. There is a chic slenderness, which the straight-line insures to the figure of average plumpness.

The suit pictured might be of jersey cloth or of some member of the tricotee family of new wares, or of any of the lighter weights and shapely wood fabrics that insure graceful pliancy.

For decoration the coat turns to two bands of long and short, and an embroidery in silk of the same hue as the cloth it adorns. One of these bands is narrower than the other and two of the narrow bands call attention to the up-to-date-ness of the sleeves. The skirt is without decoration and as to the absence of curves as a section of a smoke-stack. No sort of ornamentation is better liked on suits and dresses than embroidery of the sort shown in this suit. It is made up merely of irregular lines and does not even hint at portraying anything in nature. Imagination may translate it into something that pleases the eye, but however formless, it pleases the eye so emphatically that it is used on gorgeous evening gowns, elegant afternoon frocks and on unpretentious suits as well.

ECONOMY CORNER

Methods of Cleaning Laces.
For spring, in blouses and slacks, show a return to hand-sewn to hand made laces—knit "real" lace and thus distinguish from machine made laces. Some machine laces do not suffer comparison with the hand made and both varieties are worth care. Ordinary laundering is one question for them; they are unwashed carefully. Now that the of real lace is a mark of style of distinction in dress for sprightly households will either have sent to the cleaner or cleanness in order to reappear in outfit for the new season.

And be soaked before it is washed. The water for this soak adding a teaspoonful of borax two cups of boiling water. When the soaked lace has soaked hours or overnight in this will wash easily.

After of hot water and any go. Take the lace from the water it has been soaked and place the soapy water, squeezing it, were a sponge, until it is clear water becomes very dirty. Then rinse in clean cold water until all the soap is removed. This process the lace simply look it may be boiled. To put it in a jar and cover it with water and pour into this we melted white soap. Stand the jar and boil for two hours.

Laces may be ironed by pressing under a thin clean muslin pulling them out with dry. They must be thoroughly dried or they will roughen up. Ironing will serve for thin and sturdier laces but solid fragile varieties are dried by the following process.

Soiled lace round a good stand then cover the bottle with muslin, tacking it on. Fill a cold water, sharing into it a piece of white soap and bottle in the kettle. Boil for four off the soiled water and, repeating the process until remains clear. Remove the bottle and rinse in several clear cold waters. Take off the muslin and let the lace dry on the bottle. If a little stiffness in the lace is desirable, dip it in skimmed milk. Then fold the lace in a damp cloth until ready to pin out.

Lace may be pinned out on an ironing board, or on a wooden drum which is first covered with cotton wadding and over that with white muslin. Pin the lace along its straight edge, setting the pins close together and at equal distances apart. Then pin out each piece separately. If the lace dries before it is all pinned down, dampen it slightly. Use non-rustable pins, choosing fine ones for tiny picots and larger ones for heavier laces. When lace is old or fragile, or very much soiled, it should be soaked for several hours in pure olive oil before washing.

To Look "Paintable."

When a woman wants to look "paintable," which is the artists' word for picturesque, she wears black velvet. No texture holds such charm of color in its weave as velvet. It drapes into exquisite folds, softens every line of the body and enhances every contour of the face. A beautiful complexion finds its most effective foil in velvet. Black is the most popular choice of the picturesque velvet gowns which are seen on the most stunningly dressed women. Next in favor comes brown with a running to seal and occasionally golden or tobacco brown. With a brown shade of velvet, kolinsky trimmings are very much used. The golden brown tones of this fur merge beautifully into the shadows of the velvet.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

One of the most popular pies at this season of the year is mince. Every housekeeper has a favorite recipe which she has cherished in her family here is—

Mrs. Taft's Mince—Take three pounds of lean beef, one pound of suet, two pounds of seeded raisins, citron and currants, two teaspoonsful of cinnamon, two quarts of cider, one pound of brown sugar, and one tablespoonful of salt. Cook beef until tender and cold chop very fine. Chop the suet, remove all of the stringy portion, and all together with the fruit chop until to a far, boil the cider with sugar, add reduced to one quart, when cool, add to the other ingredients. GENERALITIES

In using bread crumbs for escaloped dishes, season well with salt and pepper, and add a small quantity of melted butter; stir until well mixed.

Clean currants by rubbing and rolling in a small amount of flour; wash them, dry, and they are ready for use.

Cut the long and rough pieces from sirloin steak; use them in soup or put them through a meat grinder; season well with onion juice, a pinch of ground cloves and pepper and salt; add a portion of cooked oatmeal, breakfast cereal or bread crumbs; make into flat cakes and cook until brown on both sides.

Have small receptacles in which to save various kinds of fats; do not mix them, as they keep sweet better when unmixed.

Beef drippings mixed with lard may be used for deep frying or for shortening.

Coffee and tea stains may be removed from linen by rubbing on a little borax and soak half an hour in cold water; then hold over a deep dish and pour boiling water through the spot.

To deepen the color in any wash dress use a piece of green paper the color desired—a square foot soaked in cold water and used as bluing water. The result will be a delightful refreshing of the color.

Parsley may be kept fresh for two weeks or longer if dipped in water, then well shaken and put into a glass jar, sealing tightly. Keep in a cool place.

Drop the yolks of eggs into a bowl or cup, cover with cold water and they will keep several days.

Use a fiber vegetable brush to clean grates and scrub vegetables.

To get the flavor of orange for sauce or tea, or any kind of dessert, rub a few cubes of sugar over a well-washed orange, or grate off the rind and let it stand in a close jar with a handful of cubes of sugar or granulated sugar.

The water in which rice is cooked is too valuable to be thrown away; use it in tomato soup for the next day's luncheon.

The water in which peas, beans, and cauliflower are cooked may be added to the water in which a leg of mutton or a piece of beef is boiled. This may be reserved for soups and sauces.

A SCRAP OF PAPER

By ESTELLE M. TIDD.

The first time the telephone rang on that morning young Mrs. B. picked up the receiver and heard the following relief instantly—No waiting!

"That you, Nell? Say, did you find a little folded piece of paper on the hall floor after I left?"

"Well, will you look, please; at it, Nell. If you find it, don't look at it, please, do you hear? It's a little private. I'll hold the line, my dear."

The paper was quickly found and Nell rushed back to inform her husband of her success.

"Good! I don't want to see that," was the reply. "Put it in the little drawer in my desk, and you won't look at it, will you, Nell?"

"Afuilly private, it seems to me, but your precious paper. Go by."

She sat for a moment regarding the bit of paper with hostile eyes.

"Pretty fussy to call it a 'folded piece of paper,'" she used indignantly. "Looks to me like a note—a regular note."

Presently there rumbled upon her Julia D., her best and funniest friend.

"Have you heard the latest?" she demanded. "Sue B. is here—come Tuesday; she's going to stay a month. She's looking magnificent. Funny, Sue hasn't visited in town since your engagement to Harley was announced—over two years ago. She used to be crazy about him. They made the most stunning pair—everybody turned to look. I wonder—she paused abruptly, then rattled on—'Say, Nell, I wouldn't date to marry a handsome man—you never can tell. Goodness, Nell, don't ever wear that shade of blue again. You look five-years-old in it.'"

Julia had just whirled out when the telephone rang again. Harley's sister Lou wanted Nell's new recipe for eggless cake, and after hearing if she contributed her share to the morning's budget.

"Whose car were you out in last night at Pinetree Heights? After you had whizzed by, breaking every speed law ever made, I realized that one of the men was Harley. It was so near dark I couldn't recognize anyone else, but I suppose you were along. You certainly had a reckless person at the wheel."

"I tell you all about it later, Lou. I think there's something burning on the stove. Good-by."

She hung up the receiver. Out at Pinetree Heights last night, and he had told her it was a business engagement that had kept him until 7:30. He had been unusually high-spirited during the evening, and then alternately absorbed in thought.

What could it mean? Miserably she went about her work. She thought incessantly of that arch-charmer. Sue B., and the mysterious note, and though she felt a wholesome distaste in doing so, still she kept wondering whether Sue B. and the note did or did not belong together.

"No, I won't look at it," she assured herself. "I said I wouldn't, and I won't—I won't."

But before she had finished speaking her hand reached straight to the drawer, opened it and drew out the paper.

"All the rest of the day," she choked, "I've got to live with this awful note."

Springing up, she crumpled it in her hand.

"I know what I'll do. I'll burn up the horrid thing. Harley shan't have it—nobody shall have it, and if it's burned up, I can't read it."

Lighting a match, she knelt before the grate. She had just thrown the flaming scrap when the front door banged and her husband entered the room, going straight to the desk in the corner.

"Building a fire, Nell? Say, where's that paper I phoned about?" His voice was edged with excitement. "That's important."

"Yes, of course—very important—to you. Oh, I know all about it."

"What'd you look at it for? By George, you said you wouldn't. I like that."

"I didn't look at it," she flamed. "I had some degree of honor, but I've burned the horrid thing, and I didn't have to read it to find out a few things—joy riding way out to Pinetree Heights last night, for instance—and"

"What?" broke in Harley. "You burned that paper—you silly—and little you know what I was out to Pinetree Heights for. That peachy little bungalow out there, you know, Nell, that we are both crazy about. I've rented it, with a chance to buy it later, perhaps. We can have a garden and chickens and help out on our bit. I was out there again this afternoon, looking the place over, and have come back now to take you there. And, listen here, I've just bought another Liberty bond, my biggest yet, for you this time, and the 'horrible thing' you just saw fit to burn up was the receipt for the first payment. I was going to give you a pleasant little bunch of surprises, and that was why I told you not to look at it."

"Oh, Harley, how awful!" she wailed. "You can't ever forgive me." There was such distress in her face that Harley's annoyance vanished.

"There now, partner, don't you care," he soothed. "Nothing's really lost; the bank's got the record, but see here, Nell, don't ever go up in the air over shadows again. I shan't ever play any game without you for a partner."

TOMACH UPSET?

IS DIAPEPSIN AT ONCE END SOURNESS, GAS, ACIDITY, INDIGESTION.

When meals upset you and you belch gas, acids and undigested food. When that morning young Mrs. B. picked up the receiver and heard the following relief instantly—No waiting!

As soon as you eat a tablet of Pape's Diapepsin all the indigestion pain stops. Gases, acidity, heartburn, flatulence and dyspepsia vanish. Pape's Diapepsin tablets cost very little at drug stores. Adv.

"SWELL MANNERS" IN 1855

Here is Proof That Our Grandfathers Were by No Means Unacquainted With Dainty Conduct.

Some people affect to think that nice table manners are of recent invention, and that our grandfathers were unacquainted with dainty conduct. To show such people how wrong they are allow us to quote from a treasured work, "Fiquette Within, or 3,700 Facts for the People," published in Philadelphia in 1855:

"If possible, the knife should never be put in the mouth at all; but if it is necessary, let the edge be turned outward."

"The teeth should be picked as little as possible, and never with the fork."

"Carefully abstain from blowing the nose, raising the mouth or spitting while at table."

"When napkins are provided, they are to be unfolded and laid on the knees. Use the napkin to wipe the mouth or the fingers; never as a handkerchief, or to mop the brow."

"If possible is what makes a hit with us."

An Attack of Influenza

Often Leaves Kidneys in Weakened Condition

Doctors in all parts of the country have been kept busy with the epidemic of influenza which has visited so many homes.

The symptoms of this disease are very distressing and leave the system in a run-down condition. Almost every victim complains of lame back and urinary troubles which should not be neglected, as these danger signals often lead to dangerous kidney troubles. Druggists report a large sale on Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which so many people say soon heals and strengthens the kidneys after an attack of grip. Swamp-Root, being an herbal compound, has a gentle healing effect on the kidneys, which is almost immediately noticed in most cases. Those who try it, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., offer to send a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root, on receipt of ten cents, to every sufferer who requests it. A trial will convince any one who may be in need of it. Regular medium and large size bottles, for sale at all druggists. Be sure to mention this paper.—Adv.

Children's Clever Scheme

Grimsby (Eng.) town council, after closing the schools to stay the epidemic of influenza, passed an emergency by-law prohibiting children under fourteen attending the movies.

The resulting attendance at the cinema failed to decline and an investigation proved that children produced their birth certificates at the pay boxes before entering the show, but further investigation disclosed that these certificates were hired for 2 cents from elder children who had seen the show.

The traffic in birth certificates was proved to have been considerable.

Dear Friends and Lovely Congregation:

We are here because we are here, as the Democrats said when they elected a president after 24 years of trying.

Poke Easley's daughter, Sally, has two beans; one is the son of a rich man, the other of a poor man. The poor man's son came to see her Sunday afternoon and Sally went to make him a supper. She had the mush and to supper Sally requested the poor young man to ask a blessing, as the rich young man did not know how. He started in as follows:

"The Lord be praised, but I am amazed to see how things have ended. Shortcake and tea, for supper, I see, where mush and milk were intended."

If Sally had bought my Corn Meal and a Bottle of the I sell she would not have needed to change her supper. I will have lots of Potatoes to sell Saturday at 10¢ per bushel of 25 cts per peck.

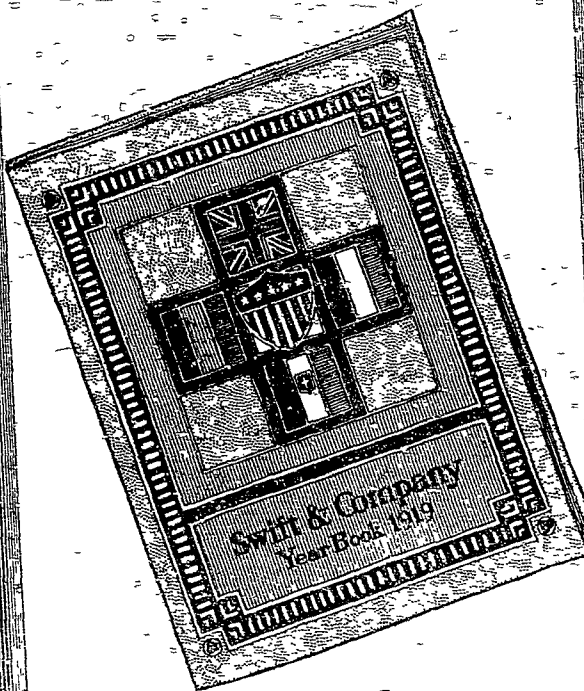

Peas—No. 1, 30¢; No. 2, 25¢. All kinds of Pork and Beef, Sausage, Bologna and Franks. The meat prices are all cut to pieces. Do not forget the Peanut Butter, 20 cts per lb. The best, in lb. packages, 28 cts.

General regret—and also indignation—is felt in Northville at the abrupt severance of relations between George Henry and the company for which he has so efficiently conducted business here for several months past. During their residence in our village Mr. Henry and his entire family have won a high place in the regard of everyone with whom they have come in contact, in business, social, church or fraternal society relations. Northville people feel that great injustice has been done Mr. Henry and they naturally resent it. Moreover, this resentment bids fair to result very unfavorably to the company in question, judging from the comments heard on all sides.

CARD OF THANKS.

To all the friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us, in our great sorrow, we are under the deepest obligations.
