IMPRESSIVE EXERCISES MEMORIAL DAY

PARADE AND MANEUVERS BY RE- TURNED SOLDIERS.

TOWNSHIP TO PRESENT NORTH- VILLE SOLDIERS WITH SPECIAL TESTIMONIAL RINGS.

Memorial Day exercises promise to be of especial interest this year owing to the fact that there will be a number of soldiers of the present war in line as escorts to the G. A. R. boys, and upon whom in but a few years must fall the task of taking over the observances of the day.

The township authorities have also provided for the purchase of beautiful testimonial rings to be presented to all those who enlisted from Northville. The silver rings are especially made for this purpose, and are handsomely designed. On the shanks appear the U. S. Arms and the Michigan state shield while on the signet will be embossed the new especially designed seal of Northville township.

The Honor Roll list as published in the Record of December last will be deemed the official list from Northville township except those who have or will receive a similar token from some other city. The rings must be called for in person by those not appearing in line on Memorial Day and within a reasonable time.

Fifty rifles and 150 rounds of ammunition will be furnished for this occasion by the War Department, and Lieutenant C. F. Murphy, who will be in command of the soldiers will get the boys together previous to the date for drill practice.

This will be one of the greatest events in Northville's history.

NORTHVILLE WOMAN'S CLUB OBSERVED ARBOR DAY.

The Northville Woman's club held its annual observance of Arbor Day and Bird day in the school auditorium last Friday afternoon, in conjunction with the school. The program included songs by the children, the reading of the governor's Arbor day proclamation, the reading of a prize essay on birds by Albert Tiernan, a High school student, the notification of the gift to the school, by the Woman's club, of a framed picture of Northville's historic stone school house, and an informal address by Mrs. B. S. Williston, Detroit, of the state federation conservation committee, and also connected with the work of the national commission on conservation. Mrs. Williston placed her principal emphasis on waterways conservation, presenting many interesting facts. She is very much at home on the different phases of conservation work and particularly enthusiastic on the subject of the waterways of our country, also very earnest in her desire that the clubwomen of Michigan shall become better informed and more actively interested in this important work.

Only four bird-houses were entered in that contest, all extremely good. The prize winners, Raymond Elliott and George Beard, first and second, respectively, received pretty illustrated bird books from the Woman's club, and the essay writer a money prize.

CEMENT STREET APPEARS ASSURED

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO EX- TEND SEVEN-MILE DRIVE UP THROUGH THE VILLAGE.

Through the efforts of President Yerkes of the Northville Auto club and Cass R. Beaton one of its directors co-operating with the Detroit city council, the Wayne County Road commissioners a continuation of the Seven-mile cement road up through the village will be built this year. The will be extended to the Floyd Northrop corners, the entrance to the newly acquired Detroit City Hospital grounds. It is the intention of the commissioners, it is understood, to put in proper drains when the grading is being done, the same plan probably as it being worked out in Farmington, Orion, Belleville, Wayne and other places.

OBITUARY CLARENCE P. ECKLES.

Clarence P. Eckles was born March 13, 1876, in Northville township, where he spent practically his entire life. On November 28, 1894, he was united in marriage to Marjetta Nims, who survives him. He also leaves his father, William P. Eckles, four brothers, Albert M., William A. and Arthur J. Eckles of Plymouth and Frank E. Eckles of this place and four sisters, Fittma Merritt of Willis, Elizabeth Shafer of Bay City, Oregon, Anna Bund of Livonia and Susie May Palmer of Detroit, besides a number of other relatives and a host of friends to mourn his loss.

MEMORIAL TABLET N. H. S. GRADUATES

THE NAMES OF THOSE WHO SERVED IN THE WAR WILL BE PLACED THEREON.

The Student Council of the Northville School Community has undertaken the securing of a memorial slab to be erected in the school auditorium. The tablet is in honor of the graduates of the school who served in the present war.

A rapid-fire campaign was carried out Monday, resulting in the securing of $120 in about four hours of work. This amount insures the erection of the slab. The Council may have missed some who would wish to contribute to this project. If such is the case, Miss Helen Cunningham will be pleased to receive the subscription.

NORTHVILLE KNIGHTS HAVE BUSY FUTURE

Northville Commandery No. 39 has a busy month ahead. It was voted Tuesday evening to attend the Grand Commandery Conclave at Jackson, on Tuesday, June 3. The trip will be made by special car arriving in Jackson in time to take part in the Victory parade. Fifty Sir Knights will attend.

The Commandery has also accepted an invitation to appear in the Memorial Day line of march with the G. A. R. and present war veterans. This was a feature introduced last year and proved very satisfactory.

Sunday morning, May 18, the Commandery will attend Ascension Day services in the Methodist church in response to an invitation from the pastor, Rev. W. C. Francis, and the official board of the church.

RED CROSS NOTES.

Red Cross knitters are once more urgently requested to finish and return the little stockings, which should all be brought this coming Saturday, if possible, to Mrs. C. L. Dubaur, Mrs. Georgia Yerkes or Mrs. F. P. Simmons. If not Saturday, please turn the work in just as soon as circumstances permit.

If any of our returned soldiers have not yet received the new sweaters intended for them, it is only necessary to apply to any member of the committee above named. The local Red Cross is not only willing but anxious that the boys shall have these sweaters which are all ready, and can be procured at once, on application.

FINE FORESTRY WORK.

R. M. Dyar has just completed an extensive job of Forestry on his farm home property north of the village. John Roberts is Mr. Dyar's genial superintendent and has had charge of the Forestry work which includes 2,000 pine, 1,000 spruce, 1,000 willow, 33 Jap walnut, 50 pin oak besides 232 apple trees. The planting has all been done in a systematic manner and in the not distant future it will prove a work of value as well as adornment.

A girl doesn't trouble herself much about a man's future if he comes with a present or two.

HIS RIVAL

By ACNES G. BROGAN.

Jimmie Taylor watched many evenings, with a scowl of displeasure, as his sweetheart bent over her knitting. This devotion to gray yarn, in his presence, had become tiresome. Anticipated happy hours were spoiled by Gracie's absent-minded responses to his personal conversation—for Jimmie was discussing the possibilities of their new home.

He had counted upon his fiancée's enthusiasm, and help, as they would plan together the furnishings of that home which was a long-dreamed-of goal. But during the stress of wartime Gracie had been distant, indifferent. What could have caused the change? Surely, oh, surely, and Jimmie had caught his breath at the thought, she could not have ceased to care; neither could anyone else have come between them.

Night after night, and day after day she had sat at his side here in her mother's comfortable living room, with no intruder to cause him apprehension.

"Shall we have the dining room in delft blue, dear?" he had asked one evening.

"M-m-m," murmured the girl intelligently, as she was counting stitches.

"Or old rose," queried Jim.

Gracie's eyes had rested for a moment upon him blankly. They were very beautiful eyes, and the lover patiently waited.

Presently Gracie rolled up the knitting and slipped it into her gay-colored bag. Coming close to rest her hand on his shoulder, "Jimmie," she had begged, "don't you think, at this troubled time, that we ought to put all thoughts of personal comfort and effort to help the brave men who are giving their very lives for our country? Just because you are a little beyond the age limits is no reason why you should not sacrifice, too, in your way. Marriage means added expense, Jimmie. Yourself only to provide for, you could give most generously to the cause, and I am well cared for at home. Later, in a peaceful time, we might more conscientiously realize our duty to the world."

Gracie had crossed then, quite out of breath. She was wondering what else it was that Myra told her. Myra, a great Red Cross enthusiast, had advised freely among her young friends.

Jimmie, staring at his formerly submissive sweetheart as though she had struck him, told her that she could not realize what she was saying; and Gracie, calmly opening the bag to regain her knitting, had dropped from its depths a crumpled note.

Flushing almost guiltily, the girl reached for the note, but Jimmie forestalled her, and a jealous flash shone in his blue eyes.

"Who is it from?" he fiercely asked her.

Raising her chin defiantly, Gracie had admitted that the note was from a soldier—the man for whom she had been knitting.

"What right," demanded the angry lover, "has a strange man to correspond with you?"

"The right of courtesy," she had crisply answered; "it's a letter of thanks for the sweater and helmet and gloves, and—"

"Heaven knows, you must have fitted him out completely," Jimmie acknowledged. "Will you let me see that letter?"

Grudgingly, the girl obeyed.

It had been his turn to flush then, and the angry red creeping up to his heavy, dark hair, left Jim in an unenviable mood.

"Sentimental stuff!" he muttered disgustedly. "Dreamed gratefully of his benefactress, while the warm sweater sheltered him from the breeze."—"Calls you his 'angel lady'."

"You are silly, Jimmie Taylor," she said at last. "You'd better go home."

And abruptly her lover had gone.

After his departure Gracie smoothed carefully the extravagantly grateful note, while a smile played about her lips.

Of course, she could not be actually in love with the clever writer of those beautifully penned epistles, but romance held her in its grasp—romance and idealism. And he, Jim, must stand aside until the fancy had passed. Would it pass? Returning soon now, perhaps, would this absent soldier seek her out, and finding her more lovely than even he could have dreamed, would he make her "ideal" a realization?

Resolutely Jimmie kept away from his beloved. Hers had been the fault, he told himself—hers, if she wished it, must be the undoing.

And evidently Gracie wished it. "If you will come tonight," called her sweet voice over the phone, "I will show you my last letter—from the soldier."

A laughing note in the request forced Jim to ignore its mockery. Still forbidding was his attitude as he awaited his sweetheart in the lamplight.

Smiling, Gracie slipped her arm through his as she thrust the note before him. Then she pressed her face against her lover's shoulder. This is what he read:

"My dear Miss Lady:

"The comrade who rote my letters is gone from here. I no can speak or write much english. But I want to say thank you. My wife, she say thank you too—"

WITH AN EYE TO THE FUTURE

Prima Donna Had Good Business Reasons for Asking for Slight Change in Contract.

Senator Lodge sounded the warning that the articles of the league of nations should be weighed carefully before being adopted. He asserted that too many ties might well jeopardize our future.

"Indeed," we may well follow the example of the prima donna who was reading a rough draft of her new contract.

"When she came to the paragraph providing that she should have transportation for herself, her maid, her dog and Sig. Gazibeni, her husband," she drew a line through the signor's name.

"Just make that husband," she said.

"Yes, madam," assented the manager, "but may I ask why?"

"The diva blushed and coyly fingered her hair. 'I might wish to make a change,' she answered."

Needless Alarm.

Junior had not been in the best of health, and when he seemed well on the way to recovery, his mother took extra precautions to guard him against possibilities of an influenza attack.

One evening the anxious mother was startled when she entered Junior's room to find the little chap in bed, sniffling, with red eyes and watery.

"Goodness, gracious!" she cried, "do you feel sick, dearie?"

"No, mamma," Junior replied.

"But you seem to have caught a dreadful cold."

"I haven't any cold."

"But your nose and your eyes?"

"From under the covers Junior produced a book."

"It is 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' mamma."

"He said, 'and I have just been reading about poor little Eva.'"

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Need of a Cash Register.

Mr. M.—is not always as regular in his accounts as he might be. In spite of that, however, he was recently elected to carry the contribution basket at his church. But there was much opposition, particularly from the men, who had known him to juggle various other accounts over which he had had charge. Finally the grocer voiced objection in this way: "I don't think we'd better let him carry that basket unless we have a cash register attached to it."

One man with an idea is worth 40 men in an old rut.

Out of Order.

The village was all agog. Flossie Flatfoot was marrying William Giles. The church was crowded. Flossie, looking as pale as her somewhat high-colored countenance would allow, bore up until the plain band ring was safely on her finger, and then, overcome, burst into tears.

The villagers were touched, but not anxious. All girls cry at weddings. Then suddenly William Giles screwed up his face and broke into howls. Tears poured down his face and dripped off his whiskers.

"What's up?" "Hush, man!" those nearest him urged. But Giles continued to howl, and at last burst out: "Let me be! I feel swiss, an' er about it!"—London T.Y. Bits.

Who Blushed Then?

A pretty young teacher was once placed in charge of a class of boys and she asked them what they would like to be when grown up.

They all had very high notions, one was to be an actor, one a sailor, one a lorry-driver and another a cowboy.

Presently it came to a pretty fair-haired boy to state his wish.

"What would you like to be?" said the teacher.

Jackie blushed deeply, and looked shy and afraid.

"Come, tell me your wish, Jackie, please!" said the teacher.

"Please—please, my wish is to be your husband!" he blurted out.

"Yes, you do, too, mother," she piped. "You know you always beg us children for some of ours on the way home from here every time we come."

Aerial Hunt for Whales.

With his airplane equipped with a machine gun, an army lieutenant recently went out on a whale-hunting expedition. Flying at an altitude of about a thousand feet above the Pacific ocean, the airman saw his quarry about four miles out at sea, and swooped down before the great animal could submerge. A short round from the machine gun was sufficient and a motorboat was soon on its way to pick up the carcass, which yielded the hunter a considerable profit.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

WAS IN MISERY

Mrs. Jones Was in Serious Condition From Dropsy. Doan's Made Her Well.

"I don't think many have gone through such misery as I did. Mrs. C. Jones, 138 Federal St., Burlington, N. J. 'That awful pain in my back felt as though my spine were crushed. My head ached and I had reeling and falling sensations when everything would turn black. Though the kidney secretions passed ten or fifteen times in an hour, only a few drops came at a time and they felt like boiling water. I soon found I had dropped. I bloated all over. My face was so swollen I could hardly see out of my eyes. My ankles and feet felt as though they would burst if I put any weight on them. My night clothes became wringing wet with sweat and I would get chilled and shiver all over. Doan's Kidney Pills soon had me feeling like a different woman. My kidneys were regulated and all the swelling went away. The aches and pains left me and after I had finished my eighth box of Doan's, I was as well as ever. My kidneys have never bothered me since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

UNspoiled by High Honor

Officers and Men Alike Recognize in General Pershing Qualities That Compel Their Affection.

"Why do we swear by Pershing?" countered a staff-officer in Washington one day in response to a question. "Well, I guess it's because he's the real thing—a regular American, if you know what I mean."

"You can easily figure out the sort of man he is by the stories they tell of him. I was with him when he was on his way to Washington to receive his orders for France. On the way, we passed through the town in which he lived when he was a boy. On the station platform was the same old negro porter Pershing had thrown stones at in his boyhood. The general chatted with the old man. Afterward I asked the porter what happened. He said:—

"He done wanted to know all 'bout the folks he uster know, an' when he was gettin' on the car again he picked up a pebble as big as my thumb an' hove it at me, jes like he uster when he was an ornery kid."

The KITCHEN CABINET

And 'tis my faith that every flower enjoys the air it breathes.

GOOD MEALS FROM LEFTOVERS.

Take the leftover mashed potato and form it into cakes of croquettes, adding an egg yolk for food value; season with salt and place in a pan to bake. Just before putting into the oven, brush with a beaten egg white, which will brown with a good color. Serve hot for a supper dish.

Oriental Stew.—Simmer gently together two cupsful of cooked potatoes diced, one cupful of water, two tablespoonsful of fat, one chopped onion, one cupful of cooked peas or cooked string beans; season with salt, pepper and a very little curry powder. While the stew is cooking cook a half-cupful of rice. When it is tender, place on a hot vegetable dish; and in the center turn the stew.

Put thinly sliced stale cake together sandwich fashion with any preserve or jelly, then serve with whipped cream or a fruit sauce, if preferred.

Rice With Bananas.—Peel, scrape and mash three bananas; add a few drops of lemon juice and sugar; to taste with a pinch of salt. Stir this fruit into one cupful of nicely cooked rice and serve with cream and sugar.

Beef Brains.—Brains, when nicely cooked and served make a most delicate and digestible dish. Beef brains are firmer than those of a young animal, but any kind from any animal will do. Blanch the brains as one does sweet breads; adding a tablespoonful of vinegar to a quart of water and salt to taste. Parboil 20 minutes with a blade of mace, a bay leaf, or any desired seasoning; drain and plunge into cold water; wash and remove all membrane and set on ice to chill. Serve cut in dice in a brown or white sauce. They may be served as one does sweet breads and they are very similar in appearance.

Salmon Canaps.—Remove the bones from a moderate-sized can of salmon; pound in a mortar with two hard-cooked eggs a teaspoonful of mustard, two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, and a dash of cayenne. Just before spreading on hot slices of toast add a salt-spoon of horseradish and set in the oven to heat. Serve with finely minced celery on the top of each.

Tommy in Humorous Mood

And Possibly There Was a Little Sacram in Remark Credited to Real Soldier.

"Don't ever imagine that the British haven't any sense of humor," said Robert Chambers, the author, recently. "A friend of mine, just back from London relates an incident that shows that the Tommy, at least, has a funnybone somewhere in his anatomy."

"These two Tommies, disheveled, torn with wounds and altogether untidy, were on leave in London. As they stood in Trafalgar square they approached a detachment of the Windsor guard in silver trappings, waving plumes, red coats, long varnished boots shining like mirrors, and kid gloves."

"The Tommies looked on in silence for a moment and then one nudged his mate.

"'Looka, Bill,' he whispered in an awed voice. 'Them's soldiers!'"

Supply Exhausted.
 Jennie came home from her playmate's, saying she was too mad to play with Jane any longer. Before night she teased to go back and play with Jane.

"I thought you were angry with Jane," her mother said.

"Oh, I was," replied the child, "but there wasn't mad enough in me to last all day."

PRACTICAL IDEAS FOR MAKING HOUSEKEEPING EASIER.

If there are those in the home who persist in using the woodwork for scratching matches smear a little vaseline over the spot generally used. After a few attempts to scratch a match on the greasy surface, even the most persistent offender will desist.

Two holders fastened together with a tape-long enough to be thrown around the neck will always be handy when a holder is needed.

A pocket on the inside of the apron will not catch on anything and tear.

Put a piece of camphor gum or a stick of camphor in the silver drawer; it will keep the silver from tarnishing.

A clothespin bag hung from a coat-hanger may be pushed along on the clothesline as needed.

A nut cracker makes a good wrench for small bottles with screw tops.

Old wall paper of heavy oatmeal or of light tints may be tinted cheaply with a special tint for use on walls.

The lower stair of the back stairs put on hinges makes a fine place to keep rubbers, overshoes and other things which are so apt to be mislaid.

When putting a patch on wall paper to cover a spot, tear the edges, as they are much less visible than if evenly cut.

When stirring in a small dish use a clothespin to steady it on the hot stove.

A dried-out half of egg shell with a hole broken in the end will serve as a funnel for filling small bottles.

Metal buttons which can be picked up by a magnet will rust when washed.

A sewing machine needle that has become blunt can be sharpened by stitching a few times through a piece of emery or sandpaper.

Rub suede shoes with emery paper to remove water spots.

Help Wanted.

"Be you the feller that runs the correspondence skule?"

"I am, sir. What can I do for you?"

"Wall, I'd like to take a few lessons. I been wantin' to correspond with the 'Widder Jones' back to my home town, but I'm sech a pesky bad writer I am skeered to tackle it."

One-Sided Proposition.
 "Well, I declare," exclaimed Aunt Nancy, gazing at the photograph of a Britisher all dressed up in his monocle, "if these English people ain't the savin'gest fellers! Think of wearin' only one spec' jest to save the other. But then, she added thoughtfully, 'mebbe the poor critter is blind in one eye.'"

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Drop Freezone on a touchy corn, then lift that corn off with fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic! No humbug!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

Criticism.
 Billy Sunday tells with gusto of the subtle criticism a pretty Philadelphia girl once passed on his informal preaching methods.

The revivalist halted at the end of an impassioned Philadelphia harangue, pulled down his sleeves; put on his coat and said:

"And now, dear friends, are there any questions?"

"All the congregation was silent except the pretty girl. She asked from her front row:

"May I smoke?"

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER

has been a household remedy all over the civilized world for more than half a century for constipation, intestinal troubles, torpid liver and the generally depressed feeling that accompanies such disorders. It is a most valuable remedy for indigestion or nervous dyspepsia and liver trouble, bringing on headache, coming up of food, palpitation of heart, and many other symptoms. A few doses of August Flower will relieve you. It is a gentle laxative. Ask your druggist. Sold in all civilized countries.—Adv.

She Understood.
 The preacher had been talking about the necessity for a "new heart." Little Bess' father took her on his knee and gravely asked if she understood what a new heart was.

"Oh, yes, indeed," she answered, brightly. "It's a kind of heavenly stomach."

A Lady of Distinction.
 Is recognized by the delicate fascinating influence of the perfume she uses. A bath with Cuticura Soap and hot water to thoroughly cleanse the pores, followed by a dusting with Cuticura Talcum Powder usually means a clear, sweet, healthy skin.—Adv.

When Money is a Curse.
 It is only when money is cheapened to worthlessness for some, and made impossible dear to others, that it becomes a curse. In short, it is a curse only in such foolish social conditions that life itself is a curse.—George Bernard Shaw.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets put an end to sick and bilious headaches, constipation, dizziness and indigestion. "Clean house." Adv

Indigestion, Gas and Bloat From Acid-Stomach

An acid-stomach cannot digest food any way connected with the stomach. Properly. Instead, the food soured and ferments and, passing into the intestines, becomes a breeding place for countless millions of deadly germs—poisonous they are called. These poisons are absorbed into the system and cause untold misery. So, you see, it is just acid-stomach, nothing else, that makes so many people weak, listless and unfit; saps their strength and energy; robs them of their vigor and vitality. Biliousness, bad liver, nervousness, blinding, splitting headaches, rheumatism, lumbago, scariness—these and many other still more serious ailments often are traced to the common source—an acid-stomach.

Take EATONIC and get rid quickly of the pains of indigestion, heartburn, that horrible, lumpy, bloated feeling after eating; disgusting, belching, food-repeating; sour, gassy stomach. These stomach miseries are caused by what doctors call "Hyperacidity." It's just ACID-STOMACH. And in addition to the pains and miseries it causes, ACID-STOMACH is the starter of a long train of ailments that most people never dreamed are in salts are wonderful!

Pleasant fasting EATONIC TABLETS that you eat like a bit of candy, quickly put an end to your stomach troubles. They act as an absorbent—literally wipe up the excess harmful acid and make the stomach pure, sweet and strong. Help digestion so that you get all the power and energy from your food. You cannot be well without it!

If you are one of those who have "tried everything" but in spite of it still suffer all kinds of acid-stomach miseries—if you lack physical and mental strength and vigor—begin at once to take EATONIC. Get back your physical and mental punch and enjoy the good things of life. Like thousands of others you will say you never dreamed that such amazingly quick relief and such a remarkable improvement in your general health was possible.

You druggist has EATONIC. We authorize him to guarantee it to give instant relief or refund your money. Get a big box of EATONIC today, it costs but little and the most people never dreamed are in salts are wonderful!

Salem Sayings.

Repairs on the road south from the Thayer school house are badly needed. There is also a bad 1/4-mile stretch northwest from the school house belonging to Northville town.

The Ann Arbor road through here is getting to be a regular thoroughfare between Ann Arbor and Detroit, many people preferring this road to the Michigan avenue line, it being much safer.

Soult & Manly have bought out Mr. Nelson's garage and will continue it as an up-to-date repair and accessory place, and agency for the Chevrolet automobile.

A POSSIBLE NEW RAILROAD.

Preliminary surveying is in progress on the proposed railroad, "the Detroit Connecting R. R.," which—if it materializes—is to be 75 miles long, running from a point on Detroit river some miles below Detroit, via Romulus, Wayne, Plymouth, Northville and Farmington, and making traffic connections with the Wabash, Michigan Central, Pere Marquette and Grand Trunk. The object of the enterprise is to relieve some of the freight congestion incident to the large manufacturing interests. The usual difficulties are already being experienced in the way of prohibitive prices demanded by property owners for rights of way.

British Museum Library

Entrance Hall of British Museum.

IT HAS become customary to start the history of the British Museum library with a transaction which took place between the British government and Sir Hans Sloane in 1753, but, as a matter of fact, the genesis of this library should be recorded 20 years earlier. The event chronicled upon this date of October 23, 1731, is a fire at Ashburnham house which partly destroyed the famous Cottonian library, and emphasized in the minds of influential patrons of learning the absolute necessity of properly housing the great collections which as yet had escaped the same fate, says the Christian Science Monitor.

That portion of the Cottonian collection which was saved from the flames still exists as an important and valuable part of the present British museum. Sir Robert Cotton was a real booklover and a natural collector. When summoned by Queen Elizabeth to Calais as royal commissioner in arranging a treaty between England and Spain, it was with sincere regret that he accepted the appointment, because it took him away from his library and from the research in which he found the greatest delight of life. Later Cotton's political activities aroused the suspicions of Charles I, and, as a result, his beloved library was sealed up and he himself arrested. When later a royal messenger came to him with the message that under certain conditions he might be restored to court favor, Cotton replied: "You come too late, my heart is broken."

The famous library was restored years later to Sir Robert's son and successor, Sir Thomas Cotton, who inherited, also, his father's love of books. From Sir Thomas it came down to Sir John Cotton, who presented the collection to the nation in 1700. The Cotton library, therefore, should be considered the nucleus to which the other collections were added.

Money Raised by Lottery.

This brings us to Sir Hans Sloane, where the chronicle usually begins. Sir Hans was physician, naturalist, and antiquary, and during his lifetime accumulated an extraordinary collection of books, manuscripts, drawings, prints, together with collections of natural and artificial curiosities. Toward the end of his life he offered them to the British nation, provided the government paid his executors some £20,000, which he estimated to be one-fourth of the intrinsic value of his collections. The real value was probably somewhat less than his estimate, but the price at which the British nation acquired his treasures was surely less than half their value, which made the contribution of Sir Hans a princely one under any circumstances.

To persuade King George II, so indifferent to the importance of letters and so miserly regarding the expenditure of money save for his own pleasures, that so large a sum should be paid was no easy task, and when the memorial was first presented to him he remarked: "I do not think there are £20,000 in the treasury." Fortunately, however, there was influence enough among those favoring the acquisition of this important collection to push the matter to a conclusion. As a result, an act was passed through parliament authorizing the holding of a lottery to raise £300,000, out of which £30,000 should be paid to the executors of Sir Hans and the countess of Oxford, and an additional £30,000 invested at interest in the public funds to provide for salaries and other expenses. Beyond this, an adequate sum was to be devoted to a suitable building for the collections. This act passed parliament in 1753, and marks the definite foundation of the British museum.

Early Restrictions on Users.

The records show that the first building containing the collections which went to make up the British museum was thrown open to the public on January 15, 1759, but the words "thrown open" require some explanation. Today there is no library in the world where the visitor or student is able to inspect and make use of its wonderful contents with greater ease or freedom than the British Museum library, but originally such restrictions were imposed as to make its use almost inaccessible. In the first place, it was announced that the library would be open "except Saturday and Sunday of each week, except Christmas day and one week after, except the week after Easter Sunday and the week after Whitsuntide, and except Good Friday, and all days which now or shall hereafter be specially appointed for Thanksgivings or feasts by public authority."

If a prospective student were able to master the mathematics of these restrictions, he then presented himself at the porter's lodge, where he was obliged to give his name, condition and address, to be entered in the register. This accomplished, the volume was laid before the librarian to decide whether the person so applying was entitled to admission. If the question were settled in the affirmative, on a second visit the applicant might receive his ticket. Having secured the precious card, he would then present himself for admission, but, as there was a restriction that not more than ten persons should be admitted for each hour the museum was open, it was still problematical whether he would be successful. If so fortunate as to be a member of one of these groups of ten he was then escorted around the library by a guide, with a limit placed upon the time, and with every element created to destroy the pleasure of literary communion with the volumes.

Later, important additions to the Cottonian, Harleyan and Sloane collections include the Royal library of 12,000 volumes, which was eventually turned over to the British museum by George II; the Thomason collection of "Kings' Pamphlets," the de Costa collection of Hebrew books and manuscripts; the Birch collection of biography; David Garrick's library of English plays; Musgrave's collection of biography and manuscripts; the Cracherode collections of books and prints.

Some Great Acquisitions.

All these collections were acquired previous to the year 1807 with no expense whatever to the government, but at this time a grant of approximately £5,000 was made for the purchase of the Lansdowne manuscripts. In 1813 another £8,000 was appropriated for the Hargrave Legal library, and, in 1821, some £13,500 was granted to secure the classical library of Dr. Charles Burney. Two years later the splendid Royal library acquired by George III became part of the British museum. This necessitated larger quarters, and was the beginning of the reconstructed museum. George III's library contained no less than 84,000 volumes. George IV tried to dispose of the collection to the emperor of Russia to enrich his own private coffers, but this plan was frustrated, and the volumes were saved to the British nation.

Francis Egerton was a later benefactor of the Museum library. He bequeathed to it the famous Egerton manuscripts, together with £12,000, the interest on which to be devoted to increasing the collection and maintaining a custodian. Three years later, in 1832, the autograph collection of the museum was enriched by the acquisition of the Arundel manuscripts; and, in 1847, the Rt. Hon. Thomas Grenville presented to the museum his magnificent library, which is still preserved as a unit under the donor's name.

No library is geographically situated more favorably to be available to the world than the British museum. A famous American collector some years ago bequeathed to it an extraordinary collection he himself had made, which seemed from patriotic motives should have been turned over to some American institution. After having worked in the British museum, however, and after seeing the cosmopolitan nature of those who visit and make use of its treasures, one is forced to admit that this collection will accomplish its highest good by being where it is rather than consigned to the geographical limitation of any one of the American libraries. In this case the American donor, considered his loyalty to letters beyond the demand of any nationality.

Bronze Statue of Evangeline

Memorial Will Be Erected on Historic Spot by Dominion Atlantic Railway

Near Evangeline's Well, Grand Pre, Nova Scotia, the same well from which Longfellow's heroine drew water nearly a century and a half ago, and almost under the shadows of the ancient Acadian willows, will stand soon a bronze statue of Evangeline, staff in hand, wandering in search of her lost lover Gabriel. This historic spot has been purchased by the Dominion Atlantic railway, which has also commissioned the Acadians to complete and erect the statue.

When Philippe Herbert, most noted of French-Canadian sculptors, died a year ago in Montreal, he was at work upon a statue of Evangeline, but this unfinished labor of love on his part was not in vain. The statue will be finished by his son, Henri Herbert, also a talented sculptor.

The expulsion of the Acadians in 1775 by the British because they would not take an unqualified oath of allegiance to their new king, was one of the tragedies of the century. The men were rounded up in church and later thousands of men and women were landed in various cities from Maine to Georgia. During the deportation an Acadian girl was separated from her lover, and the story of the wanderings of the lovers, looking in vain for each other until at last she finds him dying in a Philadelphia hospital, made a strong appeal to Longfellow. The name of the girl was unknown. "I know not what name to give to—not my new baby, but my new poem," the poet wrote in his journal December 7, 1845. "Shall it be 'Gabrielle,' or 'Celestine,' or 'Evangeline'?"

Statue to Be Erected Near Evangeline's Well.

He chose Evangeline, and the poem, which at once became a classic, added one more charm to that part of Nova Scotia where Maidens still wear their Norman caps and their kirtles of homespun, And by the evening fire repeat Evangeline's story, While from its rock caverns the deep-voiced neighboring ocean Speaks, and in accents disconsolate answers the wail of the forest.

FOOD FOR THE BABY CHICK

As the body of a baby chick is composed of 75 per cent water a sufficient supply of good clean water should be kept before it at all times. One of the first requirements of a chick is grit. Common sand is preferable to commercial grit as it is not quite so sharp and it not inclined to irritate the delicate digestive tract.

Nature has provided within the chick sufficient food for the first 36 to 48 hours in the form of the yolk of the egg. This is absorbed just before hatching. For this reason no feed should be given for the first few hours or until the chick shows indications of being hungry.

At no time during the first two weeks should the chick be given all the feed it will eat. In order to get the best results in raising baby chicks, it is necessary to make the artificial conditions under which they are raised correspond as nearly as possible to those which would have prevailed in the wild state.

Berry Acreage Falls Off.

The preliminary estimate of the strawberry acreage this year by the bureau of markets gives Alabama 1,190; Arkansas, 3,100; California, 4,600; Delaware, 2,585; Illinois, 1,496; Kentucky, 3,100; Louisiana, 8,940; Maryland, 5,273; Michigan, 1,820; Missouri, 4,597; New York, 1,521; North Carolina, 2,000; Tennessee, 6,102; Virginia, 1,298; several other states, under 1,000 acres each. The total is 53,139 acres, compared to 83,139 last year, 107,000 in 1917 and 109,398 in 1916.

WHAT THEN IS LIFE?

"What is Life?" I asked of a wanton

As he chased a butterfly,

And his laugh gushed out all joyous and wild.

"As the insect flitted by,

"What is Life?" I asked. "Oh, tell me, I pray!"

His echoes rang merrily, "Life is Play!"

"What is Life?" I asked of the maiden fair

And I watched her glowing cheek,

As the blushes deepened and softened there—

And the dimples played "hide and seek."

"What is Life? Can you tell me its fullest measure?"

She smilingly answered, "Life is Pleasure!"

"What is Life?" I asked of a soldier brave

As he grasped the hilt of his sword,

As he glanced his foot on a foeman's grave—

And looked "creation's lord,"

"What is Life?" I queried. "Oh, tell me its story!"

His brow grew bright as he answered, "Glory!"

"What is Life?" I asked a mother proud,

As she bent o'er her babe asleep,

With a low, hushed tone, lest a thought

Might wakeen his slumber deep.

Her smile turned grave, though wondrous in beauty,

As she made reply, "Life? Life is Duty!"

I turned to the father, who stood near by—

And gazed on his wife with pride;

Then a tear of joy shone bright in his eye.

For the treasure that lay at her side;

I listened well for the tale that should come.

"My life?" he cried. "My life is Home!"

"What is Life?" I asked the statesman grand,

The idol of the hour;

The fate of a nation was in his hand;

He, sickening, turned from the world's cares.

"Tis a bubble!" he cried. "Tis empty—ness!"

I turned and asked my inner heart—

What story it could unfold,

It bounded quick in its pulse's start

As the record it unrolled.

I read on the page, "Love, Hope, Joy, Strife—"

What the heart would make it—such is Life!"

—Sarah Brook, an English Poet of the Early Nineteenth Century.

Failing to Make First Effort.

A great deal of talent is lost to the world for want of a little courage. Every day sends to their graves a number of obscure men who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented them from making the first effort.—Sidney Smith.

Girard the Man Who Built Up Maritime Commerce and Made Shipping Great Power

Stephen Girard, remembered now chiefly as the founder of a Philadelphia college, through whose gateways no ecclesiastical, missionary or minister of any denomination is ever allowed to enter, was also the man who built up our maritime commerce and made American shipping a great power early in the nineteenth century. So he is pictured in John Bach McMaster's book, "The Life and Times of Stephen Girard."

Girard was born in France and began his shipping career in 1771 with a financially disastrous voyage to the West Indies. Forty-two years later he had achieved such fame and wealth that Joseph Bonaparte, in need of money, tried to put Girard in permanent possession of his vast French estates. In spite of recurrent losses from the depredations of pirates and privateers, Girard's fortune grew to be the greatest in his adopted country. His fundamental theory of trade which brought his chief profits was that wars and uprisings bring starvation, and that the vital need of any country at war is wheat. During the war of 1812 when the government seemed about to fail in its attempt to float a public loan of $16,000,000, fully two-thirds of the amount was subscribed by three rich men: David Parish, John Jacob Astor and Girard, who contributed the largest amount, and in whose bank the loan payments were placed.

Believing that a great fortune should be a part of the nation's wealth, Girard, in his will, made large bequests to the state of Pennsylvania, the cities of Philadelphia and New Orleans and an endowment for the college bearing his name.

Statue of Liberty Weighs 25 Tons and Cost $200,000

The Statue of Liberty was presented to the United States by France, in commemoration of the good will which existed between the two countries. Frederick Auguste Bartholdi was the artist, and the statue was unveiled on Bedloe Island, New York harbor, October 28, 1886. The figure is repousse, or hammered copper, 151 feet high, is crowned with a diadem and holds in its extended right hand a torch, while the left arm clasps close to the body a tablet having the inscription, "July 4, 1776." The statue weighs 25 tons and cost $200,000, which was raised by popular subscription in France. The pedestal is 155 feet in height and is of granite and concrete. It cost $250,000, which was paid for by popular subscription in the United States. The nose is 4 feet long, the right fore finger is 8 feet long and 5 feet in circumference, and the head is 14 feet in height.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Voyage of the Merry Widow.

I had stopped raining entirely now, and the south wind had become a warm and welcome reality. I went down to the cove. As I had rather expected, I found Bill Johnson there with his motor scow, the Merry Widow, with her nose driven up on the beach.

Bill's father was Danish, I believe, and his mother was a French Canadian. His speech is a combination of patois that he heard at home.

"Quite a sea out there," I indicated the lake.

"She shall run pretty high," replied Bill. "But not so high like she do awhile ago."

"Just come out for the ride?" I queried.

"No. The Merry Widow she bring over a young man, a newspaper feller. He says he give me three dollars or I wouldn't, by gimminy Christmas, do it. No, sare, not for two-fifty even I shan't do it." Then he added, with a slight wink, "The sea she ain't so high now as I make him think."

"Do you know where Huntingdon's island is?" I inquired, a vague plan of action forming itself in my brain.

"Sure I know him, he set over you 'bout three mile, maybe four or two and a half."

"Well, the young man you brought over here has decided to stay for an hour or so. While you are waiting I want you to take me over to Huntingdon's and get Mrs. Green."

"Mrs. Green! What she do by Huntingdon's?"

"I'll tell you later after I think up some interesting explanation. At present I shouldn't be able to do the subject justice. How about it? Will you take me over there?"

He hesitated.

"Here's a dollar," I said. "The storm is quieting down a good deal, and anyhow, you know the Merry Widow is the best sea boat on the lake."

The flattery won him. What owner, even of the veriest motor monstrosity, is not susceptible to praise bestowed upon his darling.

"I guess she shall run all right. One valve she shan't work just so good as she ought, but I got some wire. I fix him up."

I helped him shove off, and Bill tinkered with the one cylinder machine, gun which propelled the barge until he induced it to bark at irregular intervals.

Have I forgotten to mention that the Merry Widow is an open boat with no superstructure or canopy of any sort? If I have, let me state here that her lines are very delicate, and a large wave meets with little obstruction save the passengers when it starts to travel from the bow to the stern.

"She shall be, by gimminy Christmas, sure choppy," Bill commented. "The wind she shall haul to the south and make cross waves."

He was absolutely correct. As soon as we left the mouth of the cove we went through some evolutions which I would have said it was absolutely impossible for a man of my build to perform. I was favorably considering the idea of being seasick when a larger wave than usual washed over and struck the engine. It expired peacefully on the spot.

"What has happened?" I asked, with a landsman's justified terror.

"The engine has stopped." Bill's calm statement of the obvious exasperated me.

"Of course it has stopped. Can we ever start it again?"

"Sure. She shall run some more. The waves, she short circuit the spark. See," Bill pointed, "she all wet." His enthusiasm as a lecturer on the gasoline engine made him forget the lake outside.

It was brought to his attention by a large wave which tipped us on our beam ends and dropped Bill and myself in an affectionate group into the stern of the boat, where we were joined presently by a collection of oil cans, wrenches, grease cans and other marine impedimenta.

I removed his elbow from the pit of my long since hopeless stomach and scrambled to the engine.

"She hain't hurt a bit," he announced. "Lead me your handkerchief."

I silently passed him the article he desired. He carefully wiped off a large part of the engine with it before he offered it back to me. I declined and told him to consider it my contribution to the equipment of the boat.

"Now, sare," he directed, "you must hold the coat over the spark so she shan't get, by yee vizz, again wet."

He showed me how to protect the engine from the elements by interposing my coat and my shivering body between it and the waves. This being accomplished, he started the machine.

and we lurched forth into the night once more.

Bill split his time between steering and mending the engine, keeping up a running fire of conversation, not with me, but with the motor. When she'd cough weakly, Bill would hit her in some apparently tender spot with the flat of a monkey wrench and say:

"Come on, Merry; you shan't stop. I'll knock the carbon off your valves. Now you feel better."

Finally we reached the dock at Huntingdon's island.

After I had filled my lungs with a little undiluted air I picked up a heavy wrench to use as a weapon; and, directing Bill to arm himself likewise and follow as quietly as possible, I set out on the path leading from the dock, which doubtless ended at the Huntingdon domicile.

A turn of the path brought us in range with an illuminated window. I led the way off from the path and through the shrubbery to a position near the house, but a little to one side of the window.

Clearly it was up to me to look in and see what was in that room. I crept to the lower corner of the window and quickly raised my head so as to bring the interior of the room within range of one eye.

The lamp showed surroundings and furniture which proclaimed the room to be the kitchen.

I crept back to Bill.

"No one in sight," I reported. "There is someone in there I want to surprise, to play a joke on, so I am going to break in the door."

"Ha! ha!" laughed Bill. "She shall be very funny joke."

We felt our way to the door, which was a solid one of plain wood with no glass panels.

"Could you knock that off from its hinges?" I whispered.

"I bet," Bill replied, "easy."

"All right, then. Get ready. One, two, three!"

Crash! Bill sprang at the door, and it fell inward.

I stepped across the threshold and leveled my monkey wrench like a revolver.

"Throw up your hands!" I commanded.

To my surprise I found that I was addressing a whiskee, individual clad in white swimming trunks only, who was backed up against a door in a far corner of the room. He threw up one hand, keeping the other one behind him.

"Up with the other hand!" I shouted, advancing into the room to get a better view of its occupant, but keeping sufficiently in the shade of the lamp so that the real nature of my weapon would not be immediately evident.

"Throw up your other hand!"

"I can't," said my prisoner stubbornly.

"Can't?" I repeated in surprise.

"Why can't you?"

"Because I've got my thumb over the keyhole and there is a woman on the other side trying to peek through!"

I grabbed the lamp from the table and held it so the full light fell on his face.

"Lipton S. Clair!" I exclaimed.

"I admit that I did not expect to be recognized in this island wilderness," he began pompously, careful to gesture, however, only with his free hand, "but why should I not be here as well as anywhere else?"

"Because when I saw you last you were going to swim to the mainland."

"Where are you?" he demanded in turn, trying to see past the light which I held in front of me.

"Montmorency Blainey," I replied.

"Yes, yes; I understand." Then suddenly he shrank more closely into the doorway. "Is that woman—my fiancée—Miss Dunmore—with you?"

I reassured him and asked him how he came to be where I had found him.

"I found the swimming a trifle more strenuous than I had expected," he began. "I discovered that it was practically impossible for me either to reach the mainland or to get back to Green's island. The general trend of the waves was in this direction, and I was forced to go along, saving my strength for keeping my head above water."

"The rest of my story is absurdly simple. I saw land—here and came ashore. It was not quite dark, and I came up the path to the house without noticing the light in the window. I had no thought of there being any inhabitants, and my intention was to rummage around until I found something to eat and some dry clothes."

"As soon as I opened the door I saw that I had committed a social blunder. There was a woman standing at the telephone, and when she saw me she screamed and ran through this door, slamming and locking it after her. It was useless to try to explain to a frightened female the innocuous nature of my visit, so I refrained. I was about to partake of some of the food I found on the table when I heard the key being carefully withdrawn from the lock on the other side. Quick as a flash I asked myself the question, 'Why do people withdraw the keys from locked doors?' The answer struck me instantly. "So that they may look through the keyholes, of course."

I recollected my costume. With one bound I jumped to the door and put my thumb over the keyhole, where it has been ever since."

"Surely you have heard the telephone bell ringing."

"Yes, it has been making an infernal racket ever since I arrived, but how could I leave my post to answer it?" He helplessly waved his free hand in the direction of the keyhole.

"Ouch! Stop!" he yelled, jerking his thumb away and dancing up and down frantically.

"What has happened?"

She jabbed a pin into my thumb. I'm bleeding to death. Put your thumb over the keyhole a minute while I swear."

I was about to do that, foolish as it was, when there was the sound of a rifle shot somewhere outside, and almost simultaneously the 'amp which I held fell apart in my hand and crashed to the floor.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Bill Johnson in the darkness. "I see the joke now."

"What happened?" Clair asked.

"Some one shot out the light."

"What for?"

"I can't imagine."

Any further conversation was cut short by a scattering fusillade of shots, some of which came through the window, as we could tell by the flink of glass.

"This is a regular attack," Clair may have been an egotistical ass, but I must give him credit for not showing fear under fire. "What shall we do?"

The Picturesque Millinery of Midsummer

It is glorious summer in millinery showrooms. Garden and field flowers make wide-brimmed, graceful hats radiant with color and headwear more joyous than it has been for many a year. For a long time flowers were all but banished as a decoration for hats—a peevish-minded public would not have them. A conviction grew and became settled that there lovely trimmings would not return; yet, of all things, flowers are the most logical crown for beautiful heads. When a season of real rejoicing arrived, along with victory, they sprang into bloom. The beloved rose and violet and all the friendly little flowers and fruits are restored to favor and are fairly trooping all over the picturesque millinery of midsummer. If flowers happen to be not represented their ribbons that reflect their beautiful colors and swiftness take the place of the new hats.

There are four hats for the heart of summer shown in the group above. At the top a broad-brimmed shape is covered with crepe georgette in white; this beautiful fabric, which seems akin to flowers, makes a perfect background for the clusters of small grapes that clamber about the crown.

They are in several colors, ranging between pale green and a soft purplish red, colorings of the natural grape. This is an adorable hat and suited to matrons as well as younger women.

Just below a distinctly youthful leghorn appears at the right of the group. Very wide satin ribbon in rose color is draped about the brim and crown in a sash that is knotted at intervals. This provides the color and sheen of flowers and ends in a bow which droops from the brim-edge at the back.

It would be a bleak midsummer in the millinery world if there were no big black hats, more or less transparent, to flow in perfect lines about the head of the summer girl. This summer will boast many of them. At the left of the group above there is a hat having a crown of mill straw and a brim of lace braid. Its edge wire is covered with velvet. There is a sash of black ribbon about the crown and a glorious rose is posed against it. A smaller black hat has a braid crown, partly transparent, and a brim of malines. It has also a sash of ribbon, but a cluster of garden flowers shares the glory of a rose set in their midst.

Something New in All-Day Dress

Now enters a rival of the tailored dress and the tailored suit, by way of making a pleasant variety in the all-day garb of the busy woman of affairs. This rival is very chic and very new and is bound to have many followers. It is the "all-day dress," sturdy enough to stand up to the tests of endurance that make the tailored dress an essential in the wardrobe and smart enough to fit in with almost any background which the day's rounds may provide for it. There is chance for the exercise of one's individuality in selecting or designing the all-day dress; it is an affair of individual taste and is successful in the proportion in which it is tasteful and original. Here is something each one may think out for herself.

The chic model shown in the picture appears to have a cloth skirt which is plain except for a border of cordings at the bottom. Ten rows of this cording are set in with tailored precision and the skirt is cut to slope in a little toward the hem. Over it there is a jacket of light weight satin, which would be effective in other silks as

DAIRY

TIME TO IMPROVE PASTURES

Clean Up by Cutting Off Brush, Briars and Weeds—Reseeding Bare Spots Is Favored.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Spring is the desirable time of year for the improvement of pastures. Large areas of permanent pasture would respond to proper methods of improvement which might include the following:

Keep the pastures clean by cutting off brush, briars and weeds. Large stumps, stones and dead trees should also be removed.

Those areas used for pasture that would permit harrowing and disking at the time of reseeding, applying lime, fertilizers and manure, etc., may be greatly benefited. In some sections terracing may be practiced with satisfactory results.

The application of lime, acid phosphate and manure can always be relied upon in most sections as a means of adding the necessary increased fertility.

Reseeding, particularly in bare spots, is to be recommended. White and Japan clover, bermuda, heids grass, carpet grass and blue grass in favored sections are commonly used. As a rule reseeded pastures should be lightly grazed the first year. At all times it is advisable to keep the cattle off the grass in the spring until well started. Closer grazing during the rest of the season may be practiced where this has been done. It is also advisable to turn cattle off the pasture earlier in the fall than is commonly practiced.

Work Done in the Spring to Improve Pastures Will Insure Greater Supply of Feed Later.

DAIRY COW IS ECONOMICAL

Utilizes Coarse Materials, Inedible to Humans, and Turns Them into Food Material.

Two facts stand out prominently as reasons for the increased production and use of milk. The first is that milk as purchased on the market usually supplies food material together with the growth-producing elements more economically than either meat or eggs. The second reason is that the dairy cow is the most economical producer of animal food. One great law of food conservation is to turn inedible feeds into edible foods in the cheapest possible manner. The dairy cow will utilize coarse materials, inedible to humans—such as grass, cornstalks and hay—and will turn them into milk. Other farm animals also are converters of coarse roughage into edible foods, but are not so efficient as the dairy cow.

GOOD FOR SCOURS IN CALF

Mixture of Formaldehyde and Water Is Recommended—Cut Down the Amount of Milk Fed.

This is good for scours in calves: One ounce of formaldehyde (use 40 per cent formaldehyde), 16 ounces of water, mix, give one teaspoonful for each pound of milk fed to calf, stir in the milk. Cut down on the amount of milk being fed. This for two feeds is generally enough. Follow with two-ounce dose of castor oil if constipated.

FEED GRAIN TO YOUNG CALF

When Changed From Whole to Skimmed Milk Little Grain Should Be Put in Youngster's Mouth.

When the calf is changed from whole milk to skim milk, it will begin to eat grain. Place a little grain in its mouth after each feeding of milk. It will soon learn to eat the grain without assistance. The grain should not be fed with the milk. The calf should be allowed to masticate the grain.

TO PREVENT DISEASE GERMS

Healthy, Tuberculin-Tested Cows Are First Essentials—Pure Water Is Important.

To prevent the entrance of disease germs into milk, healthy, tuberculin-tested cows, free from any udder inflammation or garget, are the first essentials. Healthy men, and pure water from a protected well or spring, are of second importance. Clean utensils, covered pails and clean cows come next.

A Dependable Tractor

The one thing a farmer wants to know when he buys a tractor is: "Can I depend upon it to do my work?" Here is one you can depend upon—the International 8-16 H. P. kerosene tractor.

First: It is made by a Company that turns out nothing but dependable machines.

Second: It is backed by over twelve years of experience in tractor building and selling, so it has no experimental features. Everything about it is tested and tried.

Third: We give you such complete instructions in the care and handling of the machine that you can hardly go wrong.

Fourth: This tractor is so simple that anyone can learn to operate it. It is easier to handle than a team. It does both field work and belt work. It starts easily and runs steadily.

Yes, you can depend upon an International 8-16. It will do the work it is sold to do. Come in and have a look at it. Demonstration at G. W. Deal's Garage.

Also International Parts and Accessories on hand.
