THIEVES BREAK IN JIM. HUFF'S STORE

CUT DOOR GLASS AND MAKE
BOLD ENTRANCE RUMMAGING AROUND AT WILL.

TOOK GUNS, SEARCH LIGHTS,
AUTO ACCESSORIES LIKE REGU-LAR SPORTS.

Monday night some fellow cut a piece of glass from a door on the Main street side of James Huff's hardware store and after slipping the door bolts took possession of the store.

Just what hour it occurred no one seems to know, but the door was first found open by Mr Huff himself when he came down to the store Tuesday morning.

The goods missing are two shot guns, 12 and 16, a 22 rifle, some gun shells, spark plugs and search lights. It has the appearance of youthful activities, safety razors, valuable cutlery, money drawers, etc., being over-looked or purposely passed by. The youngsters evidently were in the store for some time and their tracks even lead up into the big front display window as well as in the Main street side and around behind the counters.

A goodly-sized electric light is doing business all night in this store and the big street lights outside make the exterior and interior exceptionally light at all times and just how the youngsters got away with this stunt without being seen is hard to conceive.

K. T. MAY PARTY VERY SUCCESSFUL

NEARLY FIVE HUNDRED PERSONS WERE PRESENT TO ENJOY IT.

The Knights Templar May party at the High school gym last Friday night was both a brilliant and successful affair. Nothing was left undone by the society that could enhance the enjoyment of the occasion.

The music rendition by the Fishers was great—nothing better has ever floated over a Northville ball room floor or lent inspiration to the fantastic movement of pumps and slippers.

The decorations, under the direction of M. A. Porter and his able assistant, A. E. Fuller, were very elaborate and appropriately arranged.

The supper service, under the management of Newt. Cof, and a corps of valued assistants, was just about right. It was all that could be desired and was conveniently arranged.

Nearly five hundred persons were present, many from Plymouth, Farmington and other near-by towns, to take part in the enjoyment.

This was the first party ever given by the Knights and the big success of their first effort will doubtless inspire them to repeat the event another year if not sooner.

The success of the occasion to no small extent reflects great credit upon the heads of the various committees and especially that of the arrangement management which was headed by B. G. Filkins and his valued assistant, N. C. Schrader.

MAIN STREET SOON MAY BE PAVED

COUNTY ROAD COMMISSIONERS
DECIDE TO BUILD CONCRETE
THROUGH VILLAGE.

NEW DETROIT CITY HOSPITAL
GROUNDS, NORTHPROP'S COR-NERS, TO BE ULTIMATE GOAL.

The Wayne County Highway Commissioners have now notified the Northville council that they will complete the cement road up through the village, providing the people here bond to raise a sufficient amount of money to pay what the state award would be and also for the payment of the paving in excess of the standard 16 foot width. In all, this will probably amount to upwards of $25,000. The road proposed, is to be 18 feet from the Seven-Mile road to the foot of Main street; curb to curb up to Wing street; 20 feet from Wing street to Rogers; 13 feet the balance of the distance to the village limits at the U. S. fisheries station, from which point the county authorities will extend it on one mile west to the Detroit city hospital reservation at Northrop's corners.

The council met with Messrs. Haggerty, Hines and Butler and the county engineers in Detroit Tuesday where the proposed plans were outlined and the council returned very much enthused over the prospects.

For a little time past it has appeared evident to Mayor Lanning and the council that the prospect of Northville getting a cement road up through the village this year was not real bright. But through the efforts of members of the Auto club, especially including Milo Johnson, Cass Benton, C. C. Yerkes and the co-operation of Mayor Couzens and Alderman John Lodge, the County Commissioners were induced to see the justice of Northville's claim for action at this time.

The council will call a special election in the near future to vote on the bond proposition. The County Commissioners now build roads of not less than 18 feet. That is the same width as the 7-mile road. In this case the village must pay not only the state award, $3,400 per mile, but in addition the entire expense of all concrete in excess of 16 feet.

At first it was considered that an 18 foot paving all the way and curb-to-curb from Church to Wing street only would be ample and would have cost somewhat less. Some of the council, however, even favored a still longer distance up Main street but finally a compromise was reached on 20 feet as the minimum there.

In order to accomplish all this the village will be required to raise the money to turn over to the county commissioners and the bond issue will have to carry by a 55% vote. The county's expenditure here on these streets will be something like $70,000 in addition to what Northville raises and besides the paying required by the I. I. R. along its tracks. In this may be included enough to pave the one business block on Center street

N. H. S. GRADUATES CLASS OF FIFTEEN

The 1919 graduating class of the Northville High school has fifteen members—nine girls and six boys. The graduates are Helen Bradley, Carrie Litsenberger, Muriel Parmalee, Helen Lanning, Marguerite Millard, Helen Cunningham, Mary Sowle, Cornelia Mueller, Hazel Merritt, Russell Millard, Harold Belles, Floyd Salow, Howard Stark, Glenn Charter and Walter Ryder.

FORMER NORTHVILLE LADY DIES AT YPSILANTI

Mrs. Nellie Dunham Yerkes, wife of the late Stephen Yerkes, died Saturday, May 10, at her home in Ypsilanti, aged 71 years. After their marriage in 1869 Mr. and Mrs. Yerkes lived in Northville until his death in 1881, the widow later taking up her residence with her mother in Ypsilanti.

Mrs. Yerkes was a woman of rare mental caliber, and was prominent in club and church work, Y. W. C. A., Red Cross, musical circles and other local activities, besides holding responsible positions in the Synodical work of the Presbyterian church.

SENIOR PROM NEXT FRIDAY.

One of the big social events of the graduation season for the Northville High school will be the Senior Prom, which is dated for next week Friday evening, May 23, in the High school gymnasium.

The music is to be furnished by Fisher's orchestra and the grand march will begin at eight o'clock. A large number of invitations have been issued and there is no doubt the affair will be a red letter occasion, among the younger set and their out-of-town guests.

What is Castoria

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrup. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind-Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. WHEN BUYING ASPIRIN ALWAYS SAY "BAYER"

Ask for "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in a Bayer package—marked with "Bayer Cross."

Don't buy Aspirin tablets in a pill box. Insist on getting the Bayer package with the safety "Bayer Cross" on both package and on tablets. No other way!

You must say "Bayer." Never ask for merely Aspirin tablets. The name "Bayer" means you are getting the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," proven safe by millions of people.

Beware of counterfeits! Only recently a Brooklyn manufacturer was sent to the penitentiary for flooding the country with talcum powder tablets, which he claimed to be Aspirin.

In the Bayer package are proper directions and the dose for Headache, Toothache, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Colds, Grippe, Influenza, Neuritis and pain generally.

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," American made and owned, are sold in vest pocket boxes of 12 tablets; which cost only a few cents, also in bottles of 24 and bottles of 100—also capsules. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

Substitutes for Glass.

"Materials of many kinds, more or less transparent, are being tried in Europe to replace window glass, which is unobtainable. Cellulose films are made practically by mounting on metal gratings, light wire screen, or cloth. Glue interlaced with hemp strands between two sheets of paper; albumen and casein products, sheet gelatin, and an artificial resin made by condensing phenol with a formaldehyde solution, all are imperfect but ready makeshifts. More nearly resembling glass, but comparatively expensive, are an oxide of silica made by fusing it with acid oxides of titanium or zirconium, and a combination of greensand and marl with magnesia, bauxite, and an alkali, melted in an electric furnace. Some of these glass substitutes are flexible."—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Rejects Title of "Hon."

"I received a compliment yesterday for which I did not thank the giver," grumbled old Festus Pester. "A total stranger wrote me a letter and addressed me as 'the Hon.'"

"I do not know why he should have applied that epithet to me, unless it was because he did not know me. I feel safe in saying that even my enemies would not charge me with having many of the characteristics of an Hon."

"I am not a fawning smiling black-skirt, too lazy to work, nor am I a liar and deadbeat. It may be that I have one attribute of an Hon.—very likely I am a bore, but beyond that I am not guilty."—Kansas City Star.

He Thought of Father.

The twilight was wistful and sad. "Listen," she said, in a tense voice. "Hear the howling of the wind among the trembling trees. See how mournful the waning light on the hills. This chilly desolation! Oh! does it not make you feel that in life there is too much of cold, too much of bleakness?"

"Well, no," he answered, candidly. "Father, you see, is in the gas stove business."

PIG CLUBS HELP SWINE INDUSTRY

Direct Effects of Work of Boys and Girls Evident in Many Parts of Country.

IS FULFILLING ITS MISSION

Practical and Constructive Means of Meeting Various Problems—Utilization of Wastes, By-Products and Grazing Crops.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Evidence in abundance indicates that the boys and girls' pig club work plays a promising part in stimulating the swine industry.

The direct effects are very evident in various sections of the country. They show that the work is fulfilling its mission, that it is a practical and constructive means of meeting the problem in swine husbandry and stressing economy of production through the utilization of wastes, by-products, and grazing crops, through the use of good breeding stock, and their proper care, feeding and management. These objects are accomplished through the innate appeal of animal life to young people, and their faith, optimism and determination, which, together with their responsiveness to instruction, lead to successful achievement.

To provide work that may meet the need in the different sections of the country and the need of the members as they advance, the following projects are offered and are in common use:

1. Feeding project. (a) Fattening phase, in which the member feeds a pig or a number of pigs for pork production.

(b) Breeding phase, in which a weanling purchased sow-pig (or boar and in some cases both) is raised by the member to breeding size and age.

2. Sow and litter project. In this project the member has a sow (either the one raised in project 1, or another bred gilt) which he or she cares for until the sow has weaned the litter; that is, this project covers the practical breeding and raising of pigs.

3. Herd project. In sections where the swine industry is well established the members in many cases have had experience in caring for swine and are not interested in a unit of one or two pigs, such members may, with their parents' consent, handle all the hogs on the farm in either meat production or breeding work, under the father's direction, yet following the club regulations and instructions.

NOT ALWAYS AS GOOD LAYERS

Undersized Chickens Will Not Make Good Hens for Winter—Cull Out Undesirables.

Not all of the early-hatched pullets will make good winter layers, according to E. H. Wiegand, state poultry club leader of Kansas.

"An early-hatched pullet that is undersized at this season will never make a good hen," he says. "If proper care is given it should begin laying in mid-winter. Don't waste feed on any except the promising pullets. They should have good care and good feed at all stages."

"It is impossible to grow pullets carelessly and on short rations until they reach the age when they should be full grown and mature, and then bring them forward quickly by a short course of good management."

"The pullet that is worth keeping as a layer is worth good care and full rations all the time. One that is not considered worth keeping should be eaten or marketed. Undersized birds will not pay for the feed they eat during winter."

EAT COWPEAS AND SOY BEANS

Usefulness as Human Food Recognized Only Recently in This Country, Says Houston.

Secretary Houston of the United States department of agriculture, says the usefulness of cowpeas and soybeans as human food has been recognized only recently in this country. Existing conditions warrant the planting of all the available seed of varieties known to do well in the several sections. The soy bean in particular has proved sufficiently resistant to cold in spring and to adverse weather during summer to warrant heavy planting. The value of the beans for oil production, as well as for human food, has become recognized so quickly and so generally during the last year that the crop has acquired a commercial standing far in excess of its previous status.

BIG YEAR FOR HONEY

According to predictions made by the department of agriculture at Washington, the beekeepers may look forward confidently to a prosperous season during the coming summer and fall. The department at Washington reports that the increase in the cost of honey owing to the big export demand created by the war, makes it safe to predict that the coming year will see the greatest effort ever made to further beekeeping.

During the last half of 1918, honey to the value of perhaps $2,000,000 was exported. This was about ten times the value for any year before the beginning of the war, which indicates that honey has ceased to be a luxury in the minds of the allied peoples. The home demand for honey has also increased.

ALFALFA INSECT IS DANGEROUS TO CROP

Chalcis Fly Is Principal Cause of Blighted Seed.

Damage Is Especially Severe in California and States on Pacific Slope of Rocky Mountains—Basis of Control Work.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

The alfalfa seed chalcis fly, an insect the size of a gnat, is the principal cause of blighted alfalfa seed. Its range covers practically the whole of the United States. While its ravages extend to clover and bug clover, the largest damage is done to alfalfa seed. Damage occurs whenever an alfalfa seed "crop" is grown, but is especially severe in California and the States on the Pacific slope of the Rocky mountains. The fly deposits its eggs through the seed pod directly into the green seed where the larva is hatched and grows to maturity. All changes, both larval and pupal, are effected inside the seed. The adult insect emerges through a hole cut at one end of the seed, leaving only a hollow shell.

The egg of the chalcis fly is so small as to be invisible to the naked eye. Even the presence of the living larva in the seed is hard to detect except by opening the seeds and examining them under a microscope. There is some modification, however, of the shape of the seed in which larvae are feeding. The color, also, is likely to be darker and the surface less glossy. The basis of control work is to allow no seed pods to develop anywhere before those of the regular seed crop and to leave no infested pods in fields or around stacks in which the larva or pupa may overwinter.

MOVING ARMS ON SCARECROW

Contraption Has Proved Quite Effective in Frightening Away Birds From Fields.

A scarecrow which, if not very life-like, proved effective in frightening away the birds, was provided with "arms" to be revolved by the wind. On the end of the crossbar were mounted two sticks of pine, one-inch square. To one end of these sticks were fastened disks of bright tin, seven inches in diameter; the other end was rounded off, and a piece of iron or lead pipe was driven on as a weight. The holes through these arms were placed at the points found by balancing the arms after the disks and pipe weights were applied; thus the slightest breeze would cause them to revolve. They will move somewhat more freely if washers are placed between them and the crossbar. Sylvanus Van Aken, Port Ewen, N. Y., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

EXCELLENT FOR DAIRY STOCK

Silage Should Be Combined With Some Leguminous Feed, Such as Clover or Alfalfa.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

While silage is an excellent feed for dairy stock, it should be combined with some leguminous feed, such as clover, cowpeas, or alfalfa, owing to its insufficient productive quality. The leguminous material will tend to correct the deficiencies of the silage in dry matter, protein, and mineral constituents.

The Flow of Meat

Two-thirds of the live stock in the United States has to be raised in the West.

One-half of the consumers of meat live in the East.

In other words, most of the live stock is one or two thousand miles distant from most of the people who need it in the form of food.

Fifty years ago, when live stock was raised close to every consuming center, the country butcher could handle the job after a fashion.

But the job got too big.

Now millions of animals have to be moved hundreds of miles to millions of people. Somewhere on the way they have to be turned into meat.

The packers solved the problem. They set up plants where the "live haul" and the "meat haul" were in the right balance. They built up distributing systems—refrigerator cars, refrigerating plants, branch houses. They saved time, money and meat everywhere. The stockraiser benefited in better markets and higher prices; the consumer, in better meat and lower prices.

As the country grew, the packers had to grow, or break down. Because of its present size and efficiency, Swift & Company is able to perform its part in this service at a fraction of a cent per pound profit.

Mrs. Eugene Root was a Pontiac visitor one day last week.

Mrs. John Phelps of Farmington spent Sunday at Bert Hicks.

Mrs. Nettie Phelps of Louisiana is visiting her sister, Mrs. Clyde Putnam.

Mrs. Alice Flint of Ypsilanti is visiting her sons, Loren and Will Flint and families.

Mrs. Julia Hudson of Grand Blanc is spending the summer with her cousin, Mrs. Frances Dandison.

The Shadow social which was given at the Grand Putnam home last week Wednesday evening for the benefit of the Eighth grade was largely attended. Miss Lena Foss of Northville received the highest bid—$275.

The new Covert road from Milford to the Grand River road will run 2 miles straight south from that village, then 3/4 mile east to the Town Line school house, then by the old "Milford plank" to Grand River, thus avoiding the two railroad grade crossings at Milford.

The Oakland County Automobile club was organized at Pontiac last week with C. L. Groesbeck as president, Lloyd Linton, vice-president and C. J. Merz, treasurer. A vice-president is to be chosen from each township in the county. There are ten charter members.

Wixom Whisperings.

Mrs. Fred Carpenter of Northville visited relatives here a part of the week.

Mrs. Bert Parker was at Milford Wednesday to see her parents Mr and Mrs. Sturdevant.

Jeff Parker and wife of New Hudson spent Sunday with their son Bert and family.

Guy Banks and family of Novi called on his mother, Mrs. Thompson last Thursday evening.

The Red Cross have finished 50 garments sent them last week and expect that is the last work they will have.

H. B. Cummings and wife of Detroit and Dr. H. A. Shibley and family of Pontiac were Wixom callers Sunday.

Mr and Mrs. J. R. Crow and Harry Brooks and wife of Oak Oak visited John Pattar and family last Saturday.

The Farmers club was entertained by Mr and Mrs. Rollin Porter Wednesday instead of at Pontiac, as stated last week.

E. A. Hautebergue and sons, Asa Eugene and Lester, and Orville Grant, all of Pontiac, were Wixom callers on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Mary Proud and daughter and Kathryn Burch of Detroit spent Saturday night and Sunday with Wm. Chambers and wife.

Rev. and Mrs. Brass, accompanied by Rev. and Mrs. Sayles of Walled Lake, attended a church convention at Brighton last Thursday.

WIXOM CHURCH NOTES.

The topic for the Sunday morning sermon will be, "No Faith But Good Logic." If you wish a back seat come early.

Mothers' Day was well observed by the people of Wixom last Sunday; nearly all the seating capacity was occupied.

The topic for the C. E. service will be, "Life, the School of God and Its Lessons." Leader, Ruth Pearsall. Sermon to follow.

Farmington Flashes

Allen Prindle has returned from overseas service.

Carl Parker has bought a lot on Oakland road and will build a home thereon this spring.

Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Power have moved from Detroit to their Farmington home which they recently bought.

The F. E. Bradley home was burglarized one night last week to the extent of $30 in money; the home of Rev. A. Stange, pastor of the Lutheran church, was entered, clothing, eatables, money and communion wine taken; Meyers' barber shop was broken into and some tools stolen, and the Chamberlain jewelry store and the C. F. Smith grocery were also visited, with no large losses reported. Four men were arrested Sunday by Pere Marquette detectives on suspicion of thefts committed Saturday night at Holts, and it is thought this may be the same gang that operated here.

Farmington is coming right along to the front in the village improvement line. The council has voted to purchase two pieces of ground in town for park purposes, one between Grand River and Shawassee street and one between Grand River and Rogers street, also to name all unnamed streets and put up street signs. A fire department has been organized, with Harrison Johnson as chief, and drills will be held, so that fire protection will be much better. Then with our new cement pavement and many new houses our little town will be a big town almost before we know it.

FORMATION OF PARADE.

Band, Knights Templar, on right of line School Children World's War Veterans Spanish War Veterans W. R. C. G. A. R. Boy Scouts All Civil war veterans are invited to join with the Post in the observance of the day. Spanish war veterans World's war veterans and Boy Scouts are cordially invited to participate and will as assigned positions in the parade, as above indicated. It is requested by the National Commander, G. A. R., that flags fly at half-mast during the forenoon and be raised to the top of the staff at noon.

NEW SUBDIVISION "ORCHARD HEIGHTS"

A new subdivision in one of the pleasantest parts of the village is now to be opened for sale. The Eaton farm on the west side of Rogers street and extending west on the U. S. Fishery road has been placed in the hands of the Love-well Farms agency and is to be immediately surveyed and re-platted for residence lots. The subdivision has been given the pretty and appropriate name of "Orchard Heights" because of its elevation and the fact that nearly the entire acreage is set out to fruit. This will be one of the most desirable building locations in the village.

BIG FARM DEAL.

One of the largest real estate deals of the season for this vicinity has just been negotiated by the Lovewell Farms agency in the transfer of the 130 acre fruit and stock farm, with stock and tools, from the ownership of J. S. Lang to that of Harry W. Rainey, of Birmingham. The farm, which is near the stone school house, is familiarly known to older residents as the old Blackwood homestead, and is one of the finest in this section, with many large buildings, flowing springs, extensive orchards and numerous other desirable features. The purchaser, Mr. Rainey and his wife have just sold their 200 acre farm in Bloomfield township, near the village of Birmingham, for the nice little consideration of $90,000.

CARD OF THANKS.

We most sincerely thank the Relief Corps, Maccabees, King's Daughters, M. E. Ladies' aid, Daisy Mfg. Co. girls, Dr. Dan Henry and all other friends for flowers; the Auto club; Ray Van Valkenburg for his beautiful music; Mr. Francis for words of comfort, and we especially thank the Relief Corps, G. A. R. and old Comrades of Plymouth for their kindness in the time of our sorrow.

WEBSTER A. WOOD DIED MAY 10.

Webster A. Wood, a resident of Northville for the past 27 years, passed away at the home of his son, Harry, last Saturday, May 10, after an illness of several weeks. It had been thought that he was getting better, and the end came unexpectedly. Mr. Wood falling into a quiet slumber which was discovered a short time later to have merged into his final rest without the slightest struggle. Mr. Wood was born in Livonia township November 24, 1841, receiving his education in district school and the Ypsilanti Normal. He was a veteran of the Civil war, enlisted in 1861 and mustered out in 1865. His military service included the work of adjutant and dispatch bearer for Col. Morrow, 24th Mich. Infantry, and the still higher honor of being in charge of the drum corps at the burial of President Lincoln.

He was married in 1865 to Carrie E. Porter of Pontiac, and of their three children, Eddie, Grace and Harry, the two latter are living. Mr. Wood was a brick manufacturer for a year after coming to Northville, and since that time had been engaged in the wholesale manufacture of spears. Besides the son, Harry Wood and the daughter, Mrs. J. B. Watts, the nearest relatives left are a brother, Theodore W. Wood, of Northville, eleven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services were held from the Methodist church Sunday afternoon, the pastor, Rev. W. C. Francis, officiating, and members of the G. A. R. and Woman's Relief Corps attending in a body. Burial was made in Rural Hill, beside his wife and son.

Clair thought of protesting, but was overcome by the idea of the woman in the next room and hastily donned the garment, which was cut on lines designed to cover any sort of figure which nature could turn out. The effect of the dress plus the whiskers was startling, to say the least.

"Before we go," the sheriff decided, "we had best have a look at the remains." To me he said: "Where is the deceased? Where is Mrs. Green?"

"Mrs. Green hasn't been murdered," I started to set him straight.

"I didn't ask how she met her death," the sheriff thundered. "Of course I don't expect you to admit you killed her. All I asked was where she is, and by George, I'll have an answer. Where is she?"

I pointed silently at the locked door. "Boys," said the sheriff with emotion, "a poor, defenseless woman lies beyond that door foully done to death by these ruffians. Smith, Wadsworth, Glancy, Snider, you will act as ambulance department."

Four of his comedians went toward the door. "Wait," the leader commanded. "Before you enter that room take off their hats." The four nondescript hats came off silently. Then they discovered that the door was locked. However, that proved only a slight obstacle, for the lock was easily forced. It struck me as funny that Mrs. Green had not walked out on the scene before this. A premonition of coming disaster gripped my heart.

The four men re-entered, carrying reverently a limp figure, which was unmistakably Mrs. Green. Had she been struck by a stray bullet from the attacking party? If she had, things certainly were looking black for Clair and myself. We had no way of proving that we were innocent, and all circumstantial evidence would be against us. A murmur of anger ran around the room, and the man with the rope fingered it nervously.

"Steady, boys," the sheriff ordered. "One moment." The young man with the camera held up his hand. "Don't move."

There was a blinding flash, and my overwrought nerves jumped seven feet and rebounded before my brain assured them it was only a flash-light.

The effect on the four members of the ambulance squad was even more startling. Apparently not expecting the explosion, they dropped their burden and stood with mouths open. Accidentally they dropped the body in a sitting posture.

There was a slight scream. Mrs. Green opened her eyes and demanded, "Where am I?"

If the officers of the law had been started before, their condition now was absolute consternation.

"Madame," the sheriff inquired, "aren't you dead?"

"I should say not."

"Then you are not Mrs. Green."

"I certainly am."

"But Mrs. Green is dead. Her daughter told us so."

"Dead! Fiddlesticks! It's a wonder I'm not, though, after coming over here in an open boat and being attacked by a half naked savage with whiskers, and let's see—some one was shot. That's when I fainted, I guess, because I don't remember anything more until just now."

"All I have to say," stated the man with the rope-jamming his hat on disrespectfully, "is that this is a bum night to get a man to play a joke on him."

"Madame," the sheriff said, with gloomy politeness, "you have spoiled the only murder case we ever had in Maskelon county; that's what you have done. Come on, boys."

In majestic silence the members of the sheriff's posse filed from the room. The young man with the camera was left behind, hastily picking up his traps in order to join the others before their boat left the island.

I approached him.

"Now that there is no murder mystery," I began, "I presume that the picture you took will be useless."

"Not at all," he answered, too busy folding up his tripod to notice that I had opened the shutter of his camera. "We'll find use for it some way."

I lit a match and held it about an inch from the lens of the camera, pretending to examine the name of the maker on it.

"What are you doing?" he demanded sharply.

"Just looking at your lens," I answered, blowing out the match. "It's a Dalmeyer, I see."

"Yes, I was afraid something might happen to that negative. I left this film in the camera."

He smiled. "If this picture turns out well," he said, "nearly everybody in the United States will have a copy of it. I'm a photographer for the Hanlman Syndicate of Newspapers."

"That's what I thought," I answered, returning his smile.

After he was gone I added, "That's why I let that negative get light struck."

My assorted companions were sitting on opposite sides of the table.

"Pardon me," I murmured. "I believe that you have not met. Mrs. Green, this is Lipton S. Clair."

"Is he the one who wrote the article about fasting?" Mrs. Green asked me, again ignoring her vis-a-vis.

"He is," I admitted.

Mrs. Green said nothing further.

"I presume," Clair stated sourly, "Mrs. Green has forgotten that she stuck a hairpin through my thumb less than half an hour ago."

"It was not a hairpin. It was a safety pin bent out straight. I was afraid it would not reach. Was that your thumb you held over the keyhole?"

"It was," I suppose, you are sorry it was not my eye.

I could see that the more we talked the worse the situation would get, so I interrupted them. "We might as well go back," I suggested, surveying my companions. "I am going to the mainland, Mrs. Green, and I can leave you at home as I go by."

"You're not going away, Mr. Blainey?" Mrs. Green asked, with motherly kindness.

"Yes," I answered.

"What's the matter?" she queried gently. "Lucile? You mustn't let her sickness hurt you. She has fads in beads as well as fads in foods and exercises."

I assured her with what dignity I had left that I would prefer to consider my visit at an end.

When we descended to the shore to embark on the Merry Widow, Mrs.

Green took one look at the lake and flatly declined to travel by boat until it was calm.

"I don't know how I came over here. I couldn't have been in my right senses even to start, but I certainly am perfectly sane now, and as long as I remain so I intend to stay on dry land while a storm is in progress."

"But your daughter will worry," I protested. "Lucile has been very nearly distracted for twenty-four hours."

"She might better be distracted to-day than an orphan on her mother's side tomorrow. Anyway, I'll telephone her that I'm all right."

"But we can't leave you here," I renewed my argument, "and I have to go back."

"Perhaps the gentleman here"—Mrs. Green began.

"No," Clair declined, looking at his thumb. "I have to be in Fair View before morning to prevent my friend's marriage."

"You can't go into Fair View wearing a Mother Hubbard," I reminded him.

"Well, I can stop and get my own clothes."

"On Green's island? And meet Miss Dunmore again?"

"I'd forgotten about her. What can I do?"

"Stay right here and I'll send the boat back with a suit of clothes in an hour."

"Is the lady, Mrs. Green, a wife or a widow?"

"She has a husband living."

"All right then. My own clothes that I came ashore in this morning are on a line on the back porch. Send them back soon. I don't know what I should do if Mrs. Green should fall in love with me."

I surveyed him from the hem of his skirt to the tip of his beard. "As long as you have those clothes on," I gravely assured him, "you're as safe as a dollar at the bottom of the sea."

Before I left Mrs. Green telephoned to Lucile and told her that she was safe. I took the liberty of ransacking the pantries and storeroom of the Huntingdon house for supplies and carried away enough tinned stuff to assure the garrison on Green's island at least one square meal.

Bill and myself embarked alone. I carry with me yet in memory the picture of Mrs. Green and Lipton S. Clair as I left them, two strangely clad figures, one in a red ball gown, the other in a calico wrapper and whiskers hobnobbing over a pot of tea.

CHAPTER XVI.

A Fire and a Rescue.

THE journey back to Green's island was uneventful. The sea had calmed down enough so that we shipped very little water.

When we landed I was thankful to note that there were no lights in the house. Apparently every one had gone to bed for a much needed rest.

I sent Bill up to get Clair's clothing, while I unloaded the supplies and hid them under the dock. I expected to telephone Jim in the morning and tell him where they were so that he could cook breakfast for the cantaways.

When Bill returned I helped him put out to sea again. This required considerable persuasion and $3 in money. I also had to promise to make it all right with the newspaper man, whom he had brought over.

Now the next adventure in this Arabian nightmare occurred. At first I thought it was the reflection of the rising sun in the windows of the cottage which caused the red light, but when I looked to the east I saw that the sun was not up.

Then the house must be on fire. Clearly I had no time to lose. Probably every one was sleeping. I ran up the path from the beach to the house, my temples bursting with the exertion.

By the time I got to the front door the flames were beginning to lick out of one of the upstairs windows.

I threw myself against the front door and broke the lock without ceremony. The stairway was still clear.

I dashed up, yelling, "Fire!"

The people began to come out in various stages of undress, carrying clothing and valuables. Vida's stage experience stood her in good stead. She emerged from her room completely dressed and went downstairs as if she were answering a rehearsal call.

All were accounted for but Lucile. I pointed on her door again and again.

"Hurry!" I commanded at frequent intervals.

"I'm hurrying," she always answered.

At last the smoke began to be unbearable in the hallway, and the crackling of the flames warned me that in an instant the stairs would be impassable. I stood on ceremony no longer. I threw open Lucile's door.

She was looking aimlessly about her, with a stocking in one hand.

"I can't find my other stocking," she announced calmly.

"Don't be excited!" I shouted. "The house is on fire, and we've got to get out!"

"I'm not excited. But how can I escape with only one stocking?"

There was no time for argument. I grabbed a blanket that was hung over the foot of her bed, wrapped her in it and swept her off her feet and into my arms.

The rescue was very simple. There was a little smoke on the stairway, and in a minute it would have been hard to get down; but as it was I only had to hold my breath for a few seconds and we were safe on the first floor, which had not caught yet.

However, I carried Lucile clear out in the front yard and deposited her in the little group of scantily clad survivors.

"Where's the fire department?" asked Vida.

"There isn't any fire department," Kent volunteered gently.

"Can't anything be done?"

"Not much now," I shrugged my shoulders. "When a fire gets that much headway in a country house built of wood there is nothing much to do but save the nearby buildings."

"How could it have caught?" asked Bopp, trying to put his left shoe on his right foot. "He had carried them both out in his hands."

"No one was up," said Jim, the fireman.

"How did you come to be around, Monty?" Bopp straightened up with a quick glance at me. "Mrs. Green telephoned that you were going to the mainland."

It hardly seemed possible, but I knew that for a moment they all suspected me of having set fire to Lucile's house in revenge for our quarrel of the evening before.

"I came back to the island for something, and I noticed the fire," I explained weakly. "The flames were coming out of the window of the northeast room."

"Who slept there?" Captain Perkins asked practically.

No one answered.

"That's funny," Captain Perkins was sarcastic. "Didn't anybody sleep in the northeast room, or don't you know where you slept?"

"You slept there yourself," Jim explained, rather hesitant about calling his superior officer's attention to such a damning fact.

"Oh!" The captain collapsed. "I guess I did."

"Where did you empty the ashes of your pipe before you went to get that drink of water?" I interrogated.

HOME TOWN HELPS

REFUGE FROM SUDDEN STORM

Easily Constructed Shelter Which Should Have Place on Every Public Picnic Ground.

There is not much pleasure to be had in the woods if no shelter is near when rain threatens at any minute. Many picnics are broken up by showers which last but a few minutes, simply because there is no way to protect the food or to keep dry until the squall passes over, writes C. L. Meller, Fargo, N. D., in Popular Mechanics Magazine. A shelter, such as illustrated, will take the discomfort out of walks and picnics, and will induce people to tempt the weather more often, since they know that protection is within easy reach.

A dead tree, the trunk of which is still quite sound, makes an excellent start for such a shelter. It should be cut off about ten feet from the ground, care being taken to make the saw cuts as even as possible. It may be necessary to erect scaffolding to make this cut properly. After the cut surface is worked smooth, eight rafters are fitted into the top of the trunk. The rafters are 12 feet long, four of them being two by four inch timber, and four, four by four inches. They are supported at the outer end by four by four inch posts, driven into the ground and extending eight feet above it. The four by four inch rafters should be fitted into the log first, the two by four inch being added later. Upon this framework, which forms an octagonal, umbrella-shaped structure, seven-eighths inch boards are nailed to form the roof. This may be covered with shingles or some roofing material.

For greater comfort, a seat built around the trunk may be added, and other seats may be built near it. The whole structure should be finished in a dark, neutral brown, with just a touch of white trimming. If the roof is stained a moss-green, the color scheme will be in harmony during all seasons of the year, with the prevailing colors throughout the surrounding woods.

BUILD TO SUIT HOUSEWIFE

Designers Appreciate Importance of House Construction From the Standpoint of the Women.

The average citizen, supported by the women of his household, is demanding improved home building and this will, of course, influence all future building operations. From now on consideration of the housing question must be primarily from the point of view of the housewife. Consequently, labor-saving devices will be increasingly stressed. Landlords have learned that it can be just as profitable to own well-kept properties as it is to own dilapidated tenements, or vacant lots filled with rubbish or billboards.

The United States Housing corporation, however, has not adopted any Utopian building scheme. It has simply recognized that the efficiency of the workman is seriously depreciated if he and his family must live in unsanitary dwellings. It has been proved that if he is to work to his best capacity he must be not only well housed, but housed adequately and comfortably within reasonable distance from his workshop and at a rental he will be able to pay.

Industrial housing is a comparatively new proposition in America. It is an old one in England, and in many ways it has been adequately solved. The problem there is now largely dealt with from the woman's angle.

Need for City Planning.

The need of city planning and the pushing of public work is greater to-day than ever before, said Walter D. Moody, managing director of the Chicago plan commission, in an interview with a representative of the Christian Science Monitor. Not only is this true because public work needs to be done to aid in the solution of the labor problem, continued Mr. Moody, but the cities in the United States have grown so rapidly in the last twenty years and the problems of city life are so complex that the new conditions cannot be coped with for the well-being of the people in them without a definite city plan to work to. The problems of parks, better housing, sanitation, ample means for recreation, and facilitation of traffic and the relief of traffic congestion, must be given special attention.

JOHN NORTH

By ANITA DAY DOWNING.

Alma Byers, the prettiest girl in the graduating class at high school, turned up her delightful little nose and dismissed John North with a phrase.

"He's always talking about what he's going to be doing five years from now, and he always wears 'sensible' clothes. I can't be bothered with him."

She turned with what she meant to be an imitation of Mary Pickford's pout, and began babbling pretty nothings to a group of girls in the corner of the auditorium. It was just after the graduating exercises, and parents and pupils, with a fair sprinkling of anxious looking teachers, were chattering in clusters. With his back to the wall, a little apart from any group, stood John North.

He was a tall, rather raw-boned youth, dressed in blue serge that was plainly expected to give yeoman service rather than to express smartness. His face, a little older than the others, showed a thoughtfulness that invited one's interest. He stood looking a little sadly, a little regretfully, at the kaleidoscopic picture before him. It was the last day of four years of struggle, of determination, of hard work.

Just as he knew that he had gained more than the other fortunate youths and girls that surrounded him, so he knew that perhaps he had missed something, something he would never know. He glanced at his hands, large, capable, seamed with the hard work that had made his schooling possible, down at his heavy shoes that contrasted oddly with the patent leathers of the other boys.

Then, as though drawn irresistibly, his eyes sought and found the delicate, daintily clad figure of Alma Byers, as unconsciously, coquettishly as a difficult.

Something caught in his throat, and his face flushed hotly over the unaccustomed stiff white collar.

He started involuntarily toward her, but with one of those unaccountable silences that fell unexpectedly, her voice, pitched high to overcome the loud hum of the room, rang out, and he heard the speech that condemned him to the limbo of her disdain.

Then the utterly unexpected happened.

The silent, restrained John North, known as the class "clam" and alternately scorned and envied for his long hours of study, and his high marks in scholarship—the very epitome of retiring self-effacement—John North strode swiftly to the astonished and chagrined Alma Byers, and with utter disregard of the people-filled room, took her by the shoulders, and turned her not too gently, suddenly to face with him.

"Listen, Alma," he said after a pause that brought the whole room to attention. "I want to say something to you, and there is no better time nor opportunity than right now. You people have been kind to me, in a sort of tolerant fashion. I never could afford the parties and frills, and I know it was a relief to all of you that I never tried. You all are a little sorry for me. But I want to tell you something. I have a long start ahead of every one of you. I have what is going to take you four or five years to learn. And that is that you never get anything that is worth having without hustling for it, and you've got to build every day for the day after and the day after that."

He dropped his hand from Alma's shoulders and drew a folder from his pocket. He opened it so that everyone could see the blue War Savings stamps that almost filled it.

"Do you see those stamps?" he questioned. "They are the keynote of my whole plan. They are the foundation of the structure I'm building for myself. They are growing steadily, surely, and in five years they will be a stake ready to start on. They have cost me self-denial. They have cost a pang or two of vanity, but they are solid, and the United States government is behind them, and that means that the government is behind me. You folks may smile now. Wait until I cash in, five years from now. I will have worked my way through college. I will have a definite end of success in view."

He turned again to Alma, and took her by the shoulders again, more tenderly, more reverently.

"I will cash in on my love for you, too," he said gently. "You are going to love me before the five years are up. You may think you aren't, but every day, every week, every month, I'll add a little to your regard, a little memory of fonderness, of thought for your comfort, of consideration for your happiness. You may think of others, but always in the back of your heart will be the image of me, growing, growing, until when I come to take you, your heart will be full of me."

He turned, entirely careless of the staring people about him, and walked swiftly from the hall.

Alma tried to laugh, failed embarrassingly; tried to cry, and had to smile, and as John turned once to look at her before he closed the door behind him, he met a look in her eyes that promised as much as did the folder of War Savings stamps in his breast pocket.

A Complete Tractor

The International 8-16 Tractor is delivered to you ready for work. No mass of "extra" equipment necessary. From fuel mixture to drawbar, the tractor is complete.

It is ready for plowing, deep or shallow as you wish; for disking and smoothing; for seeding. It will draw manure spreaders, load hay, and haul it; cut grain crops, draw a corn binder, and when your crops are all in, will run the thresher, husker and shredder, ensilage cutter, corn sheller, feed grinder, sawing outfit, or any other machine run by belt power.

All it needs is kerosene for fuel, lubricating oil, and the kind of care that every good machine deserves. Give it those things and you'll never have cause to complain about power or power expense.

OBITUARY—MISS CAROLINE S. THAYER

A long and useful life was brought to a close in the passing away of Miss Caroline S. Thayer at the home of her nephew, Wm. W. Thayer, the sixth of this month. Born at the old Thayer homestead September 24, 1838, she had been a life-long resident of this locality, except for a few years spent in Washington, D. C. following the death of her mother in 1875. Returning to Michigan in 1902, she had since made her home with her nephew, Wm. W. Thayer of this village. She was a noble christian woman, whose life of sacrifice and service will ever be a cherished memory in the hearts of her many friends. Her brother, Wm. U. Thayer of Washington, is the only surviving member of her family.
