ALL CEMENT ROAD AND THROUGH VILLAGE OF THROU

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS VOTE TO BUILD CEMENT HIGHWAY TO DETROIT HOSPITAL GROUNDS.

Wayne County Road Commissioners Haggerty, Hines and Butler have unanimously voted to concrete Plymouth avenue, Main street, Rogers street, Mill street and on west to the entrance to the Detroit hospital property and on Center street from Main to Base line. In bringing this all about there was a chain of circumstances that made it possible. The County Commissioners, the Mayor of Detroit, the City Council and the Detroit Hospital, John Lodge of the Board of Supervisors, Cass R. Benton, Milo Johnson, C. C. Yerkes, the Northville Village Council and the Northville Automobile Club. All are entitled to a lot of credit. Each seemed a powerful link in the chain which proved strong enough to accomplish the big project. The council held a special meeting Monday night and voted to hold a special election June 16, on the proposition to bond the village for $32,000 for Northville's share of the paving and the balance, something like double that amount ($64,000), is to be paid by Wayne county and the State of Michigan. Northville is particularly favored at this time and both the bond issue and the charter amendment ought to carry by a very large majority.

The project calls for the paving of Plymouth avenue 18 feet wide to Main street and curb to curb up Main to Wing, 20 feet on up to Rogers and 18 feet to Floyd Northrop's corner, also 30 to 40 feet on Center street for the one block to Dunlap street and 18 feet on north to the Base line.

RECORD TO PUBLISH McCUTCHEON'S NEW STORY.

Another new story, "Green Fancy," one of his best—that's "GR. FANCY," we have purchased for use as a serial in the Record. A McCutcheon story is always a big asset for a newspaper, so we imagine readers will be glad to get this one.

"Green Fancy" is a typical McCutcheon story. An international conspiracy is hatched in our own New England. A New York clubman stumbles on to the plot, matches with the conspirators, outwits the cleverest crook of two continents, rescues a Countess in distress, recovers the crown jewels of a royal house of Europe, and wins a charming bride. The story is full of dramatic incidents and makes a splendid serial.

We will run the first installment of "Green Fancy" in the edition of the Record of June 13.

HENRY FORD WAS HERE SATURDAY

Henry Ford and his real estate agent, Mr. Hudson of Dearborn, were in town some time Saturday looking over Northville's power dams and seemed very favorably impressed with Northville and its possibilities. The Ford interests have options on considerable property in the village to be used in connection with the water power plants if the deals go through. It is said if the power sites are secured, and there has been a few hitches thus far, a factory to employ 250 or more men will be forthcoming.

NORTHVILLE'S ANNUAL MEMORIAL OBSERVANCES

The annual observances of Northville and vicinity in commemoration of the nation's soldier dead were inaugurated Sunday evening, when the various church congregations joined in a service in the Methodist church. Forty members of the W. R. C. the Post's auxiliary organization, were in line, as escort to the little band of twelve Grand Army veterans who were able to march from Foresters' hall to the church, where a large audience listened to an especially excellent and appropriate discourse by the pastor, Rev. W. C. Francis, who was assisted in the preliminary service by Pastors Belles and Prestidge of the Presbyterian and Baptist churches.

The decorations, supplied as usual by a committee from the Relief Corps, were beautiful and effective in the arrangement of flags and flowers. The black-draped chairs, four in number, adorned with evergreen and floral wreaths, stood as silent reminders of the members of the local Post, G. A. R., who had been mustered out by death during the past year. Comrades Andrew Rasch, Clare Brigham, Daniel Craft and Webster Wood.

On Thursday of this week flowers were arranged by the Relief Corps for decorating the soldiers' graves in the local and outlying cemeteries, which was done that afternoon by a detail from the Post.

All arrangements for the Memorial day celebration Friday afternoon are now completed and it only remains for the weather to be favorable to insure what will be one of the best occasions of the kind our community has ever put on.

Northville is especially favored in being the only town in Michigan outside Detroit to be given the loan of U S government rifles, with bayonets and belts, for the use of our young soldiers who are to join in the observances in honor of the veterans of the sixties, living and dead, and in tribute to those who have given their lives in the cause of humanity in the war of the nineteen-hundreds. The guns are new Springfield, never having previously been used, with 150 blank cartridges for the salutes, and will add immeasurably to the dignity of the parade.

The presence of the local Commandery Knights Templar will also furnish an imposing feature, with the other organizations as indicated in the program which appears in this issue.

The world-war soldiers will march under command of Lieut. Charles F. Murphy, who has been drilling them this week, and while in line will be presented with the beautiful silver service rings which have been specially made for them, as a gift of appreciation from Northville township.

NAMES MUST BE SIGNED.

The Record is holding a communication on the road improvement question as affecting Novi taxpayers, which we would be glad to use except for the annoying newspaper rule which prohibits the publishing of anonymous communications. If the writer will confide in us to the extent of telling us his name, not for publication but simply as a guaranty of good faith, we will be pleased to print the article in question in our next issue.

A PLEASANT OCCASION.

A fine luncheon, a theatre party and a dinner at the D. A. C. were the features enjoyed by five Northville ladies last Monday, when Mrs. Angie Hueston was hostess to Mrs. M. J. Murphy of Cleveland, Mrs. C. A. Dolph, Mrs. M. Seeley, Mrs. B. G. Filkins and Mrs. Lizzie Harger of Northville and Mrs.

Fitzpatrick of Detroit.

Mrs. Hueston received the ladies at her Detroit home about 10:30 Monday forenoon and served an extra fine luncheon. At the proper time the party went to the Temple theatre and were entertained by a bright and breezy program of this week. The party then went to the Detroit Athletic club for dinner as the guests of Mr. George W. Fowler.

The ladies took numerous votes as the success of the day and the decision was unanimous that Mrs. Hueston was the best hostess ever.

BULLET BATTLE AT MILFORD.

Oakland county officers "went over the top" Monday night, at Milford, in a gun-fight with whiskey smugglers who had come from Detroit to unload 1,000 quarts of liquor shipped to that village from Toledo, concealed in a carload of baled hay. Over 100 shots were fired, the only known "wound" being received by undersheriff Hunt of Pontiac—in his hat.

The booze was safely deposited in Pontiac but the smugglers escaped. It is now believed that at least two carloads of similar "hay" have previously been successfully taken care of from Milford by the booze runners.

OVER-THE TOP.

Local Methodists are naturally elated over the fact that during the recent intensive Centenary drive for $105,000,000 the Northville church "went over the top" with its quota of $1,400 annually for five years. The total amount raised was $1,450, which means actual heroism on the part of most of the contributors.

Paint and Your Pocketbook

Decay causes losses of thousands of dollars annually. These losses are caused by weather acting upon unpainted surfaces. Weather is a destructive agent. Repairs are expensive. They are usually neglected because they are not apparent—seldom are they looked for. Few Jews Will Emigrate to Palestine From America and Great Britain

By OSCAR S. STRAUS, New York Banker

I am not a Zionist, but I am in hearty sympathy with Zionism's idealistic enterprise. Nevertheless I am convinced that the number of Jews who will emigrate to Palestine from, let us say, Great Britain or the United States is infinitesimal.

Jews in Britain and America have become prosperous and patriotic citizens and in numerous cases prominent figures in the life of those countries. Millions of them, though Jewish by faith and ancestry, are native-born citizens and feel themselves, as they are entitled to do, full-fledged Britons or Americans, as the case may be. I think events of the past four years amply demonstrated that their claims in this respect are justified. The Jewish war record in the United States, I am proud to say, was a splendid one. I am sure it was equally creditable in Great Britain.

Jews are domiciled in large numbers in the two great English-speaking countries and become integral parts of them because of the opportunities for spiritual freedom which they have so long offered. Why should Jews desert such an environment? I cannot conceive any circumstances under which considerable numbers of Jews will ever leave British or American shores.

I am told that anti-Zionists frequently suggest that, with the establishment of a special Jewish state, Jewish citizens of other countries might some day find themselves political outcasts and be told to "go back to your own country."

Nonsense! Stuff and nonsense! To suggest such a thing is to erect a ridiculous bogey. To carry out such a suggestion would be to set back the wheels of liberty which the war we have fought and won have set so far ahead.

We rejoice in New Palestine's foundation. We believe in its legitimacy. We are confident that sooner or later its mission will be accomplished—namely, to afford a comfortable, happy, prosperous national home for the oppressed Jews of all lands. It is because British and American Jews are not oppressed, Jews that they will not go to Palestine.

Time Is Ripe for National Financing of the Movement for Farm Homes

By LAJOS STEINER, War Trade Board

The present appears to be the opportune time to furnish natives and immigrants, soldiers and the others who are qualified a reliable depository in which to accumulate their savings for the acquisition in time, on acceptable terms, of farm homes.

Homes in farm communities, equipped with buildings, live stock and implements, at fair prices and terms are bound to improve conditions. A small investment of $1,000 (and much of that should be waived for our returning soldiers) should be sufficient for a fully equipped farm home to be taken possession of by qualified families. The balance of the purchase price to be paid out of crops in a long series of years, with a reasonable rate of interest.

Agricultural communities on the European village system, with American improvements, should be established, financed and administered. This would dispose of the draughted isolation. Churches, schools, meeting halls, moving pictures, etc., could be provided for the settlers living in villages. This would complete their Americanization. The community wood lot, pasture, thrashing and other machinery, blooded stallion, bull, boar, etc., co-operation in cases of emergency, the co-operative purchase of commodities and selling of farm products assure success.

Inasmuch as governmental action is considered to be paternalistic and undesirable, a national corporation chartered by our federal government and our several states should be established by our great financiers. This would secure the confidence of the clients.

Farm ownership is the foundation of stable government, of loyal citizenship and of the welfare of the population. Our safety and prosperity rest on the largest possible number of contented farm home owners. The acquisition of farm homes should be encouraged, aided and assisted in the proper and practical manner. The single family owners of farm homes in thriving agricultural communities are obviously the best remedy for our economic ills and emigration.

Five Million Europeans Have Their Eyes Fixed on America for Homes

By F. C. HOWE, New York Immigration Commissioner

Five million Europeans, wearied by the war but still awakened to new points of view by it, are turning their eyes and thoughts to new homes across the sea.

If they can find these homes in the United States they will flock here the moment the opportunity is afforded. Otherwise they will remain where they are. Canada, Australia or South America are not considered as an instant by the great majority.

France has her thousands ready to come. Italy has even more, and Ireland will be largely represented when a propitious time has come. But it is Germany that has the most numerous and most eager company of those who would be emigrants to this country.

The American doughboy is responsible for the new and fervent conviction Europeans are giving the United States. With his head up, on his tanned face and his long legs swinging in a stride that seems to tire, the American doughboy is altogether the most lovable, the worth while man in Europe. He does things that nobody else has been able to do; he goes to places that everybody else thinks cannot be reached. There isn't a corner in Europe that the man in khaki hasn't looked into; there isn't a job that he hasn't tackled and completed. European peoples want the things, the opportunities of the United States, whence came the American doughboy, their new idol.

It is curious that no other land in the world seems to possess them. They are sure they will find here. Not Canada, nor Australia, nor Argentina or any other country of South America. Politically or geographically these lands are too closely bound to Europe, and they want more of the old Europe.

MANY COMMUNITIES FIND NEW METHOD OF SELLING SURPLUS PRODUCTS OF BENEFIT

Where the Producer Is His Own Middleman.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Community markets have been found to solve the problem of better utilizing locally grown food products in many parts of the country, particularly in the New England states. In almost every community there are usually a number of farmers or small gardeners who produce above their own needs a small surplus of food products, an amount often too small in the individual case to command much, if any, consideration from the wholesale dealers or even retail grocers. These small surpluses represent in the aggregate a very considerable addition to the community's food supply and, says the bureau of markets department of agriculture, if such supplies can be economically placed in the homes, they are well worth utilizing, especially in this day of high living costs and need of conservation of both supplies and transportation.

To conserve this source of food and to benefit both producers and consumers a number of cities last year set aside portions of streets, public squares or vacant pieces of property on which the farmers and gardeners could offer their products for sale. At these community or public markets the consumer deals directly with the producer and gets fresh fruit and vegetables often at a lower price than could be possible at retail stores.

Community Market Successes.—One such market in a Massachusetts town last year reports that 30 farmers and 1,800 customers were in attendance in a single day, and the business done during the four months through which the market was conducted totaled about $45,000. Another open market in the same state reports that within two and one-half hours farmers sold ten tons of produce for $1,500, and this lot of foodstuffs was carried away by the purchasers.

The community market idea does not appeal to all producers. The commercial truck gardener or the farmer who grows and markets a considerable amount of produce usually prefers to sell in wholesale quantities. He considers that the difference between wholesale and retail prices is not sufficient to offset the value of his regular farm work. The small producer, however, whose time is not so fully occupied with his farming operations, finding those which are lost, and returning them to the owner.

Legislators and public officials may assist by providing laws, ordinances, and regulations to curb wasteful and dishonest practices, including the suppression of the milk-bottle traffic by junk dealers.

Inspectors and the courts may give valuable service by strictly enforcing laws and regulations.

The press has an important service to perform in pointing out that milk bottles are private property, in the aggregate of great value, and a material factor in the cost of milk service.

In raising orphan pigs, they can be fed with a bottle and nipple the same as an orphan lamb.

The late lambs should be given the best possible start, and growth should be pushed from the first.

There is no reason why a good fleece cannot be grown on the back of a good piece of live mutton.

Cholera is easily spread by streams, dogs, stray hogs, visitors and utensils moved from one hog lot to another.

There are sheep that will grow enough wool to pretty well make up the cost of feeding, leaving the mutton as a profit.

It would be much better for the colt and in the end for the bank account of his master if there was an open lot of two or maybe three acres close to the barn.

Milk dealers can develop more effective plans for marking bottles, collecting those which are lost, and returning them to the owner.

STATE FAIR MANAGER GEORGE DICKINSON SAYS RECONSTRUCTION ERA—ASSISTANCE KEY—NOTE OF 1919 STATE FAIR

Assistance to the reconstruction era, through which the State of Michigan as well as the entire country is passing, will be the keynote of the 1919 Michigan State Fair, at Detroit, August 29th to September 7th.

G. W. Dickinson, Secretary-Manager of the State Fair, asserted today that never in the seventy years the exposition has been held, has it been of such agricultural and industrial importance as it will assume this summer.

For two years the state was on a war basis. With the cessation of hostilities, every field of human endeavor was forced to commence reorganizing on a peace basis. This is proving a gigantic task, the Fair executive declared, but at the 1919 exposition thousands of exhibits will be shown, and methods demonstrated which will lighten this work.

Entries in industrial, livestock, and agricultural exhibits received at the present time, are far greater than the total of any of the preceding fairs, and the management but recently commenced accepting entries. These entries will continue being filed until August 15th, and Mr. Dickinson is now afraid they will surpass the physical possibilities of the present extensive grounds.

The ensuing fair not only will lend its efforts to future activities of the commonwealth, but it will also be a gigantic review of the products which Michigan gave toward the winning of the war.

Reconstruction does not confine itself to the business side of life, but is predominant in social and sporting activities. Thousands of athletes have been developed in the army, and the sporting events will surpass all previous proportions.

With the war at an end the people of Michigan have turned again toward amusements, which they had little time for during the fighting. In anticipation of this demand, Mr. Dickinson has scoured the country for the most spectacular and gorgeous spectacles in the market.

"Experience has shown that it is very difficult to convince an owner of a car of these conditions and the best way is to take a motor which has been misbehaving, drain all the contents of the crank case and let it settle in a bottle and the results which will follow will be plainly evident."

"The possibilities are that the contents of the crank case or oil pan will be much diluted and a thin fluid that lacks body and a proper consistency of oil. This can be very easily noticed by the way in which it flows, holding it to the light will quickly show the character of the contents. There is no remedy for a motor that has been put in bad shape by causes of this kind. It is a case of being thoroughly overhauled and having the working parts replaced by new parts and the motor put in a first-class condition. Then take all possible precaution to safeguard against repetition of these difficulties. Do not hold the choke closed too long; avoid running with the choke closed. While a carburetor with an adjustment on it will run readily with a rich mixture in cold weather when it is warmed up there will be an excess of gasoline which it is to be avoided. The car should be kept in a warm place and started in a warm place to avoid the too liberal use of the choke thereby avoiding sending too much raw oil into the cylinder drawn through the rings into the oil pan. The most important point to be observed where a car is in daily use in all weather is to drain out the entire contents of the oil pan once in two weeks and replace with entirely fresh cylinder oil. While this may seem a little expensive, it is the only real assurance against damage to the motor. As the weather gets warmer this can be gradually reduced until in the heat of the summer, once in five or six weeks will be sufficient. By observing these points very carefully and keeping the carbon cleaned out of the cylinder head very little difficulty will be encountered. The gasoline which is practically nothing but a high grade of kerosene, tends to soften the carbon and practically makes a carbon gasoline compound which has a tendency to aggravate the wear already caused by these parts running without adequate lubrication. To sum it all up: Keep your motor free from carbon. Replenish the oil in the engine base regularly. Watch your choke carefully."

AUTO RACING AT THE STATE FAIR

For three days, opening on Decoration day, May 30, and continuing through Friday, May 30th and Saturday through Friday, May 30th and Saturday June 1st, the Michigan State Fair will conduct its annual spring automobile racing meet. In anticipation of the three holidays, the Management has provided the largest meet even held by the association.

One of the first entries to be received by G. W. Dickinson, Secretary-Manager of the Fair was that of Dave Koetzla, of Detroit, a former sergeant with the 330th Field Artillery, which was trained at Camp Custer. Koetzla was one of the premier dirt track stars of the country at the time of his call to the colors; and his many Detroit admirers are certain he will again jump back into the circular track limelight.

"I'm afraid that is no way to tell," the revenue officer said pleasantly. "The worst smugglers we have are society people. We captured two of his accomplices on Huntington's island this morning, and when we get him we shall have wiped out one of the worst gangs of smugglers operating across the border."

At the mention of Huntington's island we all pricked up our ears. What connection did the smugglers have with the disappearance of Mrs. Green and Lipton S. Clair?

"While you were on Huntington's island," I asked, "did you see anything of Mrs. Green?"

"Why," began the officer, with a puzzled frown, "one of our prisoners claims to be Mrs. Green, but that is only an alias for 'Mother Farrel,' whose portrait is in the rogues' gallery. I recognized her at once."

"Who is your other prisoner?" I had an inkling of what had really happened at Huntington's island since I had left it.

"The other one is a man masquerading in woman's clothes. He refuses to give his name, but I think he is Dan Maloney, a rather high class crook who does smuggling only as a side line for grand larceny."

"I'm afraid you have the wrong parties," I smiled as I thought of Lipton S. Clair's outraged dignity. "This lady really is Mrs. Green, and the gentleman is not Dan Maloney, but Mr. L. S. Clair, a well known literary man."

The revenue officer's face fell, then a suspicious look came into his eyes. "How do I know that you are not one of the gang yourself and this is merely a trick to get us to release your pals? What was Mrs. Green doing over there anyway?"

"She was out in a small boat and was blown over there during the storm," Vida volunteered.

"Miss Green," the officer addressed her huskily, "I cannot refuse to take your word. I'll have the prisoners brought ashore, and if the lady is really your mother I shall be glad to release her instantly."

Vida did not correct his mistake, but asked, "How do you know I am Miss Green?"

"Oh, I'd know you anywhere," he bragged, smiling. "I've seen your photograph in the newspapers so often."

So he had, but not with the name of Lucile Green attached to it.

"Thank you ever so much for your kindness."

"Not at all," he returned, then, addressing the man in the dinghy, "Smith."

"Aye, aye, sir."

"Report to Marshal Cochran on board and ask him to bring his prisoners ashore."

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Happy Party.

THE man departed and after an interval returned with three passengers, two of them unmistakably Mrs. Green and Mr. Clair, the other a United States federal officer. Mrs. Green was decorated with a handkerchief, which was tied over her mouth.

"I had to gag the dame," explained the marshal. "She kept yelling all the time."

The look which the disheveled lady in the red ball gown cast upon Uncle Sam's representative probably burned a hole in his aura which will never heal up.

"Remove the gag," the revenue officer commanded.

That was a wonderful inspiration on Vida's part. As the two women had never set eyes on each other before, Mrs. Green might not address Vida as her own offspring as soon as the power of speech was restored to her.

"If you say she is your mother it is all right," said Vida's new conquest gallantly. "You may remove the handkerchief yourself if you like. I trust your mother will forgive us for our blunder. Can you identify the gentleman too?"

"She doesn't know me," Clair muttered, with a look of terror. "I don't want to be identified."

"I ought to know him," Vida replied wickedly. "I am seriously considering an offer of marriage from him."

"Let him go, then," the revenue man directed.

"I don't want to be released."

"You have to be." The officer silenced him sternly.

"How about the telephone man?" Cochran, the marshal, inquired. "I've got to get one prisoner anyway, or I won't dare show up in Detroit."

"We'll arrest him, all right," the other reassured him. "He's on the island somewhere. It's only a question of time. Now, gentlemen," turning to us, "it will save any unpleasantness if you will point out which one of you is in the employ of the telephone company. If not I shall be forced to ask all of you who cannot prove who you are to accompany me."

There was no answer. No one of us was anxious to turn informer.

"I have a description of Horace Blinn," said the officer, "although at present he is traveling under the name of Kent. Height, five feet four inches; slender, dark hair and eyes."

"Excuse me," interrupted Bopp.

"What are you going to do with the smuggler when you get him?"

"We shall have to take him to Detroit and thence to the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan."

"Will you give him a square meal?" Bopp asked anxiously.

"Why, yes," smiled the officer. "We have a good cook on board, and we would not starve a prisoner."

"All right," Bopp sighed. "Do I fit the description?"

The officer laughed. "I knew you all the time, Binn. Step lively. Get aboard, and we'll have you safe in jail in no time."

With a wink to the rest of us, Bopp climbed into the boat with a demeanor that otherwise would have been a credit to Sydney Carton.

When the boat was being rowed away he waved farewell.

"Don't worry," he reassured us. "I won't be in jail long."

"We won't worry," I answered for all. "Stay as long as you like."

After the tug had gone Clair stood looking disconsolately after it.

"You don't seem overjoyed at being set free," I said to him in a low voice, so that the others could not hear.

"Didn't I tell you I wanted to be arrested so that Miss Dunmore would break our engagement? Jail is better than marriage any time. They shorten jail sentences for good behavior."

He shook his fist at the departing tug. "They were just ready to have breakfast on board too."

A confusion of inarticulate sounds advised me that Miss Dunmore was removing the gag from her hastily adopted mother's mouth.

"Who are you?" Mrs. Green demanded as soon as she could speak.

"Where's Lucile? What is the next thing I have to do, loop the loop or be electrocuted?"

"I'm a castaway, wrecked on your island," Vida explained. "Your daughter is all right."

"Where is she?" Mrs. Green fired the question at me as if I were in some way responsible.

"Why," I started to explain, but realized suddenly that Mrs. Green might not take kindly to the idea of her daughter's present costume, so I stopped.

"She's over there," Captain Perkins waved in the general direction of the thicket where we had last heard Lucile.

"Dead?" Mrs. Green murmured, leaning for support on my arm.

"No, no," interposed Vida, who should have done the explaining in the first place. "She is just taking a nap. She has had such a terribly exhausting experience the last forty-eight hours that we were all thankful when she dozed off a little while ago. Poor thing, the rest will do her a world of good."

"What's she sleeping over there for?" pointing at the bushes. "Why isn't she in her own bed in the house?"

"Oh, the house," Vida repeated blankly. "Didn't any one tell you? There isn't any house."

"No house? Why not?"

"Your house, madam," said Captain Perkins, "has been consumed by the devouring element." He quoted a fire insurance advertisement from memory.

Lipton S. Clair plucked me by the sleeve to attract my attention and whispered in my ear, "Where are my pants?"

"Why," I replied, "I sent them over to Huntington's island, as I promised I would."

"Are they there now?"

"Yes. Bill left them in the kitchen for you."

"Then I suppose I'll have to wear this."

"I should think that it would be immodest if you didn't."

He walked away.

"Take me to my daughter," Mrs. Green said, with a sigh. "Let me see that there is something left of my life as it was before the earthquake."

"You can see her if you wish," said Vida calmly, "but I assure you she is all right, and you will only disturb her from a sleep which she needs very, very much."

Vida is an admirable liar. Mrs. Green actually believed her and ceased to worry about Lucile. Mrs. Green is one of those placid ladies who let other people bully them and mold their very thoughts. Lucile had always made her mother think just whatever she told her to, and Vida was apparently able to do the trick also.

We walked up to inspect the ruins. It was as nice and complete a set of ruins as I have ever gazed upon. Nothing was left to the imagination—the whole business was ruined.

While we were engaged in that mournful amusement a tall, muscular young man walked into our circle and demanded, "Where is Lipton S. Clair?"

"Ned!" Vida exclaimed, rushing toward him. She stopped when she saw his face.

He brushed past her.

"You treacherous hound!" hissed Blaney, gazing on that whiskered travesty without smiling. "You stole the only woman I ever loved away from me. Heart breaker!"

"I couldn't help it," Clair admitted.

It would have been a fairer fight if Clair had not been hampered by his skirts. As it was, it ended with Blaney-athwart Clair's back, grinding his nose into the dirt.

"I give up!" choked Clair. "I marry her."

"Marry her?" Blaney shook his friend again. "Not while I live."

"Isn't that what you're trying to make me do?" Clair expostulated as well as he could. "I don't want to, that's certain."

"Don't you see, Ned," Vida interrupted soothingly, "he doesn't want to marry me. Your outrageous jealousy has led you into making mistakes again."

"I'm sorry," corroborated Blaney. "I've been under a terribly nervous strain over all this, and first I was afraid Vida was lost in the storm. I was nearly frantic till I got hold of a rowboat and came over. It was an awful pull in the sea—that's running out there. But it's all right now. You must all come over to Fair View to see Vida and me get married this morning."

Clair was listening to all this in a sort of dazed wonder.

"Don't I have to marry her?" he asked.

"Have to marry her?" echoed Blaney good naturedly. "Why, you old rhinoceros, you couldn't trap a girl into marrying you even if you dressed up like Mrs. Katzenjammer to please her."

"But she said," began Clair.

Vida flashed an imploring look at me. Clair could still do a good deal of damage if he revealed all that she had said and done trying to win that wager from me.

"She said," I repeated, brushing off and adjusting Clair's skirt, which had suffered sadly from his rough and tumble encounter, "she said that she knew she would like you because you were a friend of Mr. Blaney's."

"Stop pinching my leg!" roared Clair, failing to get the significance of my signal and whisking his skirts out of my grasp. He glared at me balefully.

Blaney laughed. The picture Clair made obliterated the recollection of his jealousy for a moment. Then he caught sight of my seal ring on Vida's hand.

"What's that?" he demanded.

"That?" echoed Vida blankly, turning the ring on her finger. She had forgotten that she was wearing it. "That is a seal ring."

"Yes, I see it is," admitted her fiancé sarcastically. "Your explanation so far is perfectly satisfactory."

"I got it for you," she pouted, "but I don't know whether to give it to you or not."

CHAPTER XIX.

The Honor of Thieves.

WHEN Vida had definitely cast herself for the part she was going to play she went ahead with the certainty of a trained artist.

"Let's see it," Blaney demanded doubtfully.

She handed it to him.

"Hm!" He examined it closely.

"You got this for me? The 'B' is all right, but this other initial looks like an 'M'."

"No, it doesn't, dear," she said.

"That's an old English 'N'." The old Englishmen did things differently. Their 'Ns' always looked like 'Ms.' I've known lots of old Englishmen."

"Oh," the young man said, slipping the ring on his finger. "Thanks awfully, dear."

That was the end of my ring.

"She shall run," he announced. "For $2 she shall take everybody to Fair View."

"That's a lot to pay if you've ever spent a day in Fair View," said the prospective bridegroom. "Nevertheless I will pay it and ask you all to come to our wedding and the wedding breakfast."

"Could it be possible," Captain Perkins asked, "to have the wedding breakfast first?"

"I think it could," laughed Blaney.

"Come on, everybody," invited Vida. I started to follow the others, but Vida dropped back to my side and whispered, "You're not invited."

"What!" I exclaimed, startled.

"You're not supposed to come."

"Why not?"

"If I were you, I should get lost in the woods somewhere. You might run into some thing to your advantage."

"I couldn't. What would she think of me?"

"Try it and find out," Vida smiled at me quizzically. "I'm a woman myself, and I can guess. You won't need to make any advances. Don't you want her?"

"Yes," I answered.

A Good Day's Work.

"Besides stringing 53,824 tags yesterday (to get on the good side of the cook) I loaded 2,295 pounds of automobiles on to vans," writes a young soldier from Edmonton, who has only recently "got across." "Those were the exact figures for my share. Twenty of us were got together yesterday and started loading cases of automobiles onto trucks. Each case weighed 1,700 pounds, and we got 27 on altogether, which took nine hours of hard labor. (Hard is no name for it). The total weight loaded, you will see, was 45,900 pounds, which makes my share, as I said before, I tugged and hauled for all I was worth, and I haven't a sore muscle today, so you see I am in pretty good condition."

The Soap Berry Tree.

The jaborosa, or soap berry tree, grows in the humid parts of western Ecuador. It attains a height of 50 feet and has wide-spreading branches and immense quantities of fruit of the size and shape of cherries. The nearby transparent yellowish skin and pulp surrounding the round black seeds are so saponaceous as to be used instead of soap, being equivalent to more than 50 times their weight of that material."

The Closing Scenes of the Great War Between the States

IN THE bright noon of a brilliant spring day in Virginia General Grant, with his staff, rode into the little village of Farmville, a place that will be memorable as the one from which he opened correspondence with Lee regarding the surrender of the Confederate forces. There he met a Doctor Smith, formerly an army officer and relative of General Ewell, then a prisoner of the Federals. Doctor Smith told Grant that the Confederate generals had decided the game was lost when they crossed the line of the James river. Soon after came word that Sheridan had captured the last remaining provision trains of Lee's troops.

Lee made his dispositions for further fighting. Like a wounded lion brought to bay, the gray troops struck this way and that, at the ring of torments about them. At five o'clock the afternoon of April 7 Grant sent his first note to Lee. It read:

"General R. E. Lee, Commanding C. S. A.: The results of the last week must convince you of the hopelessness of further resistance on the part of the Army of Northern Virginia in this struggle. I feel that it is so, and regard it as my duty to shift from myself the responsibility of any further effusion of blood by asking of you the surrender of that portion of the Confederate states army known as the Army of Northern Virginia."

"U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General."

General Lee replied saying he would discuss terms with General Grant. Meanwhile the fighting went on. Sheridan threw his troops across Lee's front. In a final surge of heroism the worn and hungry Confederates fixed bayonets and drove Sheridan's cavalry almost to a rout. Even the infantry was disorganized. For a few brief minutes hope surged back into Confederate breasts. Perhaps after all they would break the line of the army of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, and then in the hills of western Virginia reorganize a force that would be the backbone of the Union again. But it was only a dream.

Memorial Day This Year Has New and Great Significance

MEMORIAL DAY, the day of America's soldier dead, has grown with the sweeping growth of America's destiny in this great war. Twenty-five years ago May 30 was the day of remembrance of the Union soldier. The Grand Army met on the village street, and the Woman's Relief corps fell in behind it; a carriage bountifully laden with lilacs and mock orange blossoms, sometimes with roses, brought up the rear, and the cortege moved to the cemetery, where, with prayers and bared heads, the veterans and the people strewed the flowers upon graves which were marked with little flags.

Then came the day, 25 years ago, when the Spanish empire was wiped off the map. Not that we had anything against the Spanish empire; but on that day an irresistible and unforeseen destiny moved our nation, and the world with it, on a glorious path, involving far more than we knew. Then we had new graves to decorate—not so many, perhaps, but graves about which a glorious symbolism clustered.

But see what a new stride it has now taken. Memorial day comes again, and we see the marshal of France, and with him the representatives not only of the French republican government but of Britain and Italy, standing by many new-made graves of American soldiers in a far foreign land, and reverently laying wreaths and palms upon them, with tears for our dead—tears and emotions of joy as well, for the deed which these American soldiers performed in dying was one which has sealed the unity of the free peoples of the world.

Marshal Foch, Premier Clemenceau and the other French leaders who participate in the decoration of the graves of our soldiers in France know well that they are celebrating an event much vaster than the mere honoring of the heroic boys themselves who had gone to the aid of their cause. They know that they are celebrating the birth of the old world revived and liberated by the coming of the new world to their fair fields devastated by war.

Ingersoll's Tribute To Those Who Died for Their Country

WE cover the graves of the heroic dead with flowers. The past rises before me, as it were, like a dream. Again we are in the great struggle for national life. We hear the sounds of preparation—the music of the bolsters, the music of the drums, the music of the bugles, the music of the voices of heroic bugles. We see the pale cheeks of women and the flushed faces of men, and in those assemblages we see all the dead whose dust we have covered with flowers. We lose sight of them no more. We are with them when they enlist in the great army of freedom. We see them part with those they love. Some are walking for the last time in quiet woody places with the maidens they adore. Others are bending over cradles kissing babes that are asleep.

We see them all as they march proudly away, under the flaunting flags, keeping time to the grand, wild music of war—marching down the streets of the great cities, through the towns and across the prairies, down to the fields of glory, to do and to die for the eternal right. We go with them, one and all. We stand guard with them in the wild storm and under the quiet stars. We are with them in ravines running with blood, in the furrows of old fields. We are with them between contending hosts, unable to move, wild with thirst, the life ebbing slowly away among the withered leaves. We see them pierced by balls and torn with shells in the trenches, by forts and in the whirlwind of the charge, where men become iron with nerves of steel. We are at home when the news comes that they are dead. We see the maiden in the shadow of her first sorrow. We see the silvered head of the old man bowed with the last grief.

These heroes are dead. They sleep under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the tearful willows and the embracing vines. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battle, in the roar of the conflict, they found the serenity of death. I have one sentiment for the soldier living and dead—cheers for the living, tears for the dead.

Just as we go to press Thursday evening word comes to us of a fatal accident on the Mark Seeley farm. Mrs. Gertrude Dunlap Swift, who was injured by a fall the latter part of last week, was taken to the Smith private hospital in Detroit Tuesday by her physician, Dr. Turner, and N. C. Schrader. Mrs. Swift made the journey very comfortably, all things considered, but her advanced age—93 makes it impossible to predict what the result of her injuries will be.

Bloomfield's township board has granted a license to a carnival company to stage a show in the environs of Pontiac, under the condition that the said carnival behaves itself. It undoubtedly will—same way. Those aggregations always do. The only trouble is their ideas of what constitutes "objectionable features" don't seem to coincide with those of the respectable element of the average community.

Recent real estate deals reported by S. A. Lovewell include the sale of T. R. Carrington's house to C. P. Bissell, the John McCully shoe repair shop to M. A. Briggs of Salem, who has already taken possession; the transfer of the S. S. Smith residence property on Plymouth avenue to the ownership of Mr. Briggs, and Mrs. Charles Cadwell's house on Yerkes avenue to Archie Kerr, also of Salem.

A picnic reunion of the boy pupils who attended the Jones school just south of Holly in the far bygone years is to be held June 28 at Buckhorn lake near Rose Centre. The program is to include the photographing of the group of "old boys" at the old school house. At the head of the list in the Holly Advertiser of the former "kids" of the school appears that of "T. G. Richardson, Northville." But what about the "girls"? Weren't there any in the school.

There are, every time it rains, and have been all the year a number of very unsightly mudholes about the village which could be very easily eliminated with a few loads of gravel. The business block section on Center street contains several, another bad one at the opera house corner, on Huton avenue at the foot of Dunlap street, on Mill street near Mr. Shafer's property and in front of the Silver place, on Randolph street in front of Will Safford's place, on South Wing street near Mill street. Mayor Lansing says he asked the Street Commissioner to attend to some of this and Mr. McKahn, chairman of the Street committee, said before he went to the hospital, that he had asked it to be done. Street Commissioner Austin says a shortage of teams is the cause of the delay, and there you have it.

THE NORTHVILLE LOAN & BUILDING ASSOCIATION

When Henry Ford comes to town,
The Boys begin to step around.

Now that the D. P. F., War Stamps and Liberty Bonds are out of the way, what am I going to do with my money? Why, of course, there's the Loan Association.

That concern is organized for the express purpose of helping people to build or purchase homes and as the Government is devising ways for the building of more homes, it will be as patriotic for me to put my money into the Association as to buy a bond. I will not miss a dollar or so a week and I can get some other fellows also, so that after a little time the Association will have more money to lend. The Secretary tells me that lots of people speak to him about starting in but fail to connect—likely a little mud on the walks and they don't want to "come across"—but—

I'M GOING TO DO IT.

CURIOUS IDEAS ABOUT GOLF

Some of Them That Have Been Preserved, Will Be Appreciated by Devotees of the Game.

Twenty years ago the majority of women knew nothing about golf, and many good anecdotes are still told of some of the scintillating ideas they had regarding the game. One lady, making sympathetic conversation at dinner, said to an enthusiastic golfer:

"I often see you in your red coat. Do you need many dogs to play golf?"

A younger lady said she knew exactly how the game was played.

"They get what they call caddies to hunt about in the grass till they find a round stone and then they hit it into a rabbit hole."

A third lady, who had evidently enjoyed a nearer view of the game, said:

"It is played by two men. One is a gentleman and the other is a common man. The common man sticks a ball on a lump of dirt, and the gentleman knocks it off."

Yes, no doubt, the best material for a successful sport story is brains.

If brevity is the sole of wit, Jovity must be the upper.

Looked Like Melodrama.
When Lewis Waller was playing "Charles Surface in 'The School for Scandal'" he unfortunately stumbled just before making his entrance, and his right hand was thrust into a pot of red paint, with which a scenic artist had been retouching some of the "props." There was no time to lose, so Mr. Waller walked on the stage with his hand apparently dripping with gore, as from some hideous crime. The audience imagined the actor had injured himself, until his uncontrollable mirth reassured them.

The Result.
"I tried to teach my wife something about the parliamentary way of conducting a debate."
"Did you succeed?"
"Only too well. The first thing when we had a debate about buying a handsome centerpiece she moved to lay the subject of the debate on the table."

His Poor Selection.
"I can't believe more than half some folks says," said Uncle Eben, "an' somehow de half I does believe is mos' generally de half dat ain' so."

All are not saints who go to church, of course, and neither are all such bad sinners who don't go.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Let me but do my work from day to day. In field or forest, at the desk or loom, In roaring market-place, or tranquil room.

WISDOM IN FEEDING THE FAMILY.

Food is not necessarily nutritious in proportion to its cost. Humanly, the high-priced foods appeal to the imagination and they seem very desirable, but by stiffening the backbone and developing will power we are able to pass them by with but a longing glance, though tempted.

The mother of a family should, of all people, understand food values, for she is in a position to build up healthy bodies or tear down and ruin, digests. "Bad habits run life, as do weak bones the bodies."

Protein foods are those most expensive and complex, such as meat, fish, eggs, cheese and milk. Carbohydrates are the starches and sugars, potatoes, rice, macaroni and the various sugars. It is important that we balance our meals, but it is not necessary that each meal should be; each day's dietary should contain proteins, fats, carbohydrates in the correct proportion, which is one-part of protein to five of carbohydrates.

Plant protein, such as peas, beans and lentils, take the place of meat. When the meat allowance is small these vegetables should be used freely, rather than cabbage, turnips and beets.

An excess of meat is especially bad, as that which is not assimilated clogs the system and causes self-poisoning.

Brain workers need easily digested foods, muscle workers find coarser foods better suited to their needs. However, all need roughage (foods that contain cellulose) to give bulk and increase intestinal activity.

Let us not forget that milk and butter, yolk of egg and green leaves of plants contain a growth determinant absolutely essential to the growing child, without which he will be stunted and handicapped through life.

Diet should be varied as well as mixed, substituting occasionally such foods as rice and macaroni for potatoes.

By planning meals several days ahead it will be much easier to arrange a rightly balanced and varied diet. We do not tire of the common staple foods, but we find them very monotonous served in the same old way. It is not possible to fix a general dietary standard, as many things, such as age, occupation, health and climate enter in to qualify it.

Nothing is given for nothing in this world, there can be no true love even on your own side without devotion, devotion is the exercise of love, by which it grows.—R. L. Stevenson

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS.

When replacing papers in drawers to keep them firm, put a small sticker half on the paper and the other half on the drawer.

When setting dishes on ice, use old can rubbers to keep them from slipping.

Fill salt and pepper shakers with an orange spoon or make a paper funnel, which may be used more quickly.

A piece of macaroni placed in a berry pie when put in the oven will save the loss of the good juice, as the macaroni will serve as a chimney for the juice to boil up in.

Grease the cork of the glue bottle, so that it will not be glued in when it is wanted.

A piece of ice held in the mouth a moment before disagreeable medicine is to be taken, will dull the sense of taste.

Keep on your desk a list of things to do—calls, letter-writing and household tasks; as they are done, cross off. It is a most satisfactory way of knowing what is accomplished during the week or month. The same method is a good one to use in the kitchen; various things are forgotten that, with the list before one, will spur on the worker.

A camp chair that will slip under the table, out of the way or can be hung from a hook, is a great convenience in a kitchen with small space.

A roomy market basket with a strong, well-fastened handle, makes a fine bed for the small child when traveling, and one in which it may be carried with its belongings. The basket is picked up and carried without disturbing the baby or exposing him to the weather.

Carry a package of courtplaster of different colors. This may be used when traveling to mend a garment or stocking in an emergency.

Transplant a few asters and other favorite flowers in the garden after the vegetables are gone. In the fall they will be pleasant to look at.

Kitchen aprons of unbleached cotton made with a good fitting style are most desirable, as they may be boiled and kept white.

Tennis shoes are fine to use when scrubbing floors or porches, as they protect the feet from the moisture and are comfortable to wear.

Like Mother.

Mrs. Flatbush—So this is the new baby?
Mr. Bensonhurst—Yes, that's our new little angel.
"Who does the dear take after?"
"Oh, her mother. The likeness is very striking."
"I can't see it."

A Good Audience.

Little Elizabeth studies music, also elocution, and it means much studying and practicing. It is sometimes hard to impress on her the importance of "practice makes perfect," however, she is faithful. Edith, her playmate, is not burdened with these duties and often waits patiently while Elizabeth "practices."

To encourage Elizabeth, her mother remarked, "Won't it be a terrible thing for Edith to grow up and not know how to play the piano?" Elizabeth sighed and answered, "Well, one thing, Edith is going to grow up to be a mighty good audience."

Mrs. Minnie Hesse, 1023 Stewart St., Owosso, Mich., says: "My kidneys troubled me for several years. I had dull pains across my joints, my back ached and it hurt me to stoop or lift. I was bothered by the irregular action of my kidneys, too. Hearing so much about Doan's Kidney Pills, I tried them and they certainly benefited me. Judge Wood was talking about insignificant cases which suddenly loom in importance because they present knotty legal questions. "A case of this kind came up before a friend of mine not so very long ago. A young lady sued for breach of promise."

"But how can you sue for breach of promise?" demanded the judge. "You've just admitted that the defendant never promised to marry you."

"That don't make no difference, judge," declared the lady, "he promised he'd be a brother to me, and he ain't been no such thing."

Whence "Dutch."

The name "Dutch" is derived from Dietsch, meaning the vernacular, as distinguished from Latin. It is the same word as the German Deutsch. Dutch belongs to the Frankish division of the Low German, and is closely related to the Flemish, with which it is now practically identified in its written form. The Dutch language is one of the Germanic group of dialects, and is practically the same in its structure.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Love's Labor Lost.

"What did Mr. Cummings say to you last night, Clara, when he was trying to button your glove?" queried the anxious mother.

"Why," replied the daughter, "he said that any firm making gloves as hard to button as mine ought to quit the business."

"Well, my dear," continued the a. m., "take my advice and don't waste any more time in that direction."—Brooklyn Citizen.
