

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

VOL. XLIX. NO. 52.

THE RECORD: NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, JULY 18, 1919.

$1.50 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

BUILDING BOOM FOR NORTHVILLE

ALREADY STARTED, AND WITH EXCELLENT PROSPECTS FOR IMMEDIATE AND STEADY AD-VANCE.

A building boom, such as Northville has never before known seems to be in prospect and in fact is already under way. And a building boom is certainly needed, as the housing accommodations of this village are entirely inadequate to the demand, and have been for some time past. A number of families are desirous of coming here from Detroit and other places, but cannot do so because there is no place for them to live. Among the building and remodeling operations now in progress are a bungalow and garage on the Balder property on south Wing street, the new Richardson bungalow on High street, that of Charles Hill on Wing street north and the extensive remodeling of the former Noble residence on South Center, by the new owner, Mr. Forsythe. George Henry expects to have ground broken for his new home on Rogers street in a week or two, the contractor having agreed to have house ready for occupancy by September first. George Grinnell has made the excavation for his house on Cady street, which he will build as soon as he can get away along enough from the other people who want his services as a builder.

Mrs. W. A. Chilson of Plymouth has bought the driveway, barn and lot between the Robt. Thompson home and Mrs. Nettie Simmons' house on Wing street and will move the building forward and convert it into a pretty residence.

The demand for houses was never so great in the history of the village as is now. So many homes have been sold to newcomers and so many of our earlier residents own their homes that houses for rent are few and far between.

Miss Eva Bovee informs the Record that through a small amount of advertising in this paper as a rental agent, she was simply swamped with applications, being obliged to turn down fifty or sixty would-be renters for lack of houses.

A plan is now under way for the formation of a local building syndicate to provide for this emergency, which must, of course, be met before any considerable manufacturing interests can be brought here.

Our pretty town is becoming so popular as a residence location for city people that some are even talking of putting up tents for the summer. One family that had rented their home for a certain period, and had been unable to get a place to live when they came back sooner than they intended and have solved the problem by building a shed on the back of their lot, which they will live in until fall.

WILL BANQUET SOLDIER BOYS.

The Woman's Relief Corps, Northville's only patriotic organization, aside from the Grand Army Post, to which it is auxiliary, has long been planning for a big banquet "when the boys come home." Active preparations are now in progress for this event, which will be a large affair, as the G. A. R. veterans, the parents of all the soldier and sailor boys of Northville and vicinity, and the wives of those of the young veterans who have enlisted in the matrimonial army are to be invited to attend with their returned soldiers. The local Corps now has considerably more than 100 members, including quite a number of young ladies, some of whom are already wedded to World War boys. Mrs. Nellie Freydl has been elected general chairman of the banquet arrangements, and has chosen as her immediate assistants Mesdames Edna Edwards, Elizabeth Cobb, Belle Simmons and Della Harmon. The various sub-committees—invitation, reception, table, program, etc.—have been named, and all have commenced work on their respective jobs. No financial or culinary help has been or will be solicited outside the Relief Corps, but already several Northville people not connected with the organization have kindly and insistently expressed a desire to contribute to the expense, which will, of course, be considerable. The banquet will occur during July so as not to conflict with the Chautauqua dates but at the last of the month, in the hope that all the boys will then have reached home.

GET YOUR AUTO DRIVERS' LICENSE

AFTER AUGUST 1 YOU MAY MEET DELAY AT LANSING BECAUSE OF RUSH.

On and after August 14 no person will be permitted to drive a motor vehicle without a driver's license or chauffeur's permit, and no one under the age of 14 can obtain either.

Autoists should not delay their applications as after August 1st there will be some delay at Lansing because of the vast number of applications, which will be received after that time in the usual last day's rush.

The Secretary of State's office at Lansing has furnished the Northville Auto club with the following information:

Application blanks after being filled out must be sworn to before any Notary Public, or Justice; and then must be approved by Sheriff of the county or any Deputy Sheriff in the township where the applicant resides. All persons driving a car or truck for their employer or belonging to their employer must obtain a chauffeur's badge. Drivers license not required in such cases.

The Chief of Police, or his assistants only approves the applications in a city.

All license cards will be mailed direct from Lansing to the applicant.

No officer is allowed to charge for approving application blank. A Notary or Justice may charge for the affidavit only.

The Secretary of State anticipates that to start with practically everyone (of 14 years and over), who makes application will be granted a driver's license and then later on the wedding-out of the law-breakers will be commenced.

Don't pattern after Detroit and delay your application.

AMOS NORTHROP STORES AND HOUSE SOLD SATURDAY.

The Northrop estate store on Main street, Northville, were sold at auction Saturday afternoon, and were bid off by Paul Damm of Detroit for $6,700. Northville people bid up to $6,600 and quit. However Northville is on the boom now and in a short time the property may be worth much more than it is now. The Northrop home on Rogers street was bid off by E. A. Noble for $3,400.

NORTHVILLE FAIR FOR 1919.

The dates for Northville's annual fair are September 24 to 27. The 24th falls on Saturday and this is an innovation—so far as dates are concerned. Usually fairs end on Friday. However, as Saturday is a half-holiday it will give a lot of people a chance to attend this event, it is believed, who would be unable to attend on the other days.

Northville has a real fair and big tents are used to house the exhibits instead of buildings. When all is ready it looks like a big circus come to town.

Inside a very fast half-mile race track is a splendid base ball diamond where a lively contest will be pulled off each day.

Northville being located in the heart of Michigan's dairy country and one of the greatest fruit belts it gives an advantage over many communities in the way of exhibits.

McLEAN-HALL.

On Thursday evening, July 10, Miss Mildred Hall daughter of Mrs. F. A. Hall of this village, became the bride of Donald McLean, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McLean of Detroit, at the residence of Rev. King D. Beach of 24th street, that city. The only attendants were Peter L. Perkins and Miss Alice Wagner of Northville as best man and bridesmaid. The bride's gown was of white voile and her flowers were white roses, the bridesmaid wearing blue voile and carrying similar flowers. The ring service was used for the ceremony. The young couple went to Long Lake for a few weeks after which they are to reside at the McLean home in Detroit for the present, Donald having employment at the Parke-Davis plant with his father. Both young people are well and favorably known in Northville, where the groom has spent most of his life, and the bride has been employed for some time past in the office of the Edison Co. Many friends here are wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Northville Loan & Building Association, for the election of Directors and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting, will be held in Library Rooms, in the Village of Northville, Michigan, Friday evening, July 25th, 1919, at 8:30 o'clock sharp.

INTERESTING LECTURES FOR CHAUTAUQUA

The members of the local Chautauqua committee are anxious that the variety and attractiveness of the entertainment features of this year's program shall not overshadow or detract from the interest which is due the great lecturers who are coming here Chautauqua week.

First and foremost in interest is the great patriotic lecture of Hon. Frank B. Willis, ex-Governor of Ohio. As an orator he knows no peer. His contribution to the Chautauqua program, the powerful lecture, "Perils and Problems," will give every true American much food for thought. The distinguished ex-Governor is the big attraction on the night of the second day.

Another lecturer of more than usual interest is George P. Bible, in his lecture, "New Fads and Fancies," that deals with some of our national characteristics, both those desirable and undesirable. His lecture is a feature of the afternoon of the third day.

On the fourth day, James S. Knox will bring the forces of his great knowledge of local conditions in thousands of communities, his keen analytic powers and his convincing oratory to bear on the very important subject, "Community Efficiency." This lecture appeals to all classes of people and especially to business men and others interested in civic progress.

One most unusual feature of the program of lectures is the appearance of "Mother" Lake, who pleads for "The Divine Rights of the Child." She is a kindly, sympathetic soul with a big message to deliver and never fails to touch the heart of her audience with her plea for a sweeter home life and a greater opportunity for the child to develop into a really useful, full-rounded citizen. Mother Lake appears in the evening of the first day.

JAMIE'S FATHER

By MARJORIE PHILLIPS.

In the very midst of his joy, James Burnie was filled with distrust and contempt for himself. After all, what right had he to claim this favored woman's love, so willingly given? Between her ways and the ways of his people, a great gulf was fixed, and in the eagerness of his love for Madeline he had been too cowardly to refer to the humbleness of his old home, where his father still lived.

James Burnie had climbed rapidly the ladder of success and would gladly have shared its benefits with the rugged old Scotchman who stubbornly refused them all.

"I'll live as I like to live, Jamie," he had said. "New ways and new friends would bring no new pleasures."

So James continued in his splendid bachelor apartment in the city, while old Burnie Senior went happily about his household duties just a little farther away, keeping the floors as clean and the dishes as shining as when his faithful wife had been there to fulfill these duties. But the weekly visits of the younger James were to himself a continual source of humiliation. When he had first met Madeline, he had adored her from afar, never dreaming that this growing conquest might be his.

Madeline, the accomplished, reared in luxury, as mother and grandmother had seen before her. Her love had gone out to John Burnie as naturally as a flower seeks the sun, and their betrothal was inevitable. Now, only as they planned their future together, did he compare mentally this father of hers, this polished, aristocratic man of a successful world, with the contented Scotchman basking in comfortably shabby clothes over his flower beds, or whistling cheerily as he placed the blue cups back in their cupboard.

What would Madeline say when she thought when he must bring this stooped old figure into her presence and present him as his father?

James Burnie was not a snob. In his soul he loathed himself for the trepidation this fancied picture occasioned. So, "I've went on, and in his anxiety he neglected to urge the setting of the wedding day."

The entertainments with which Madeline's formidable friends favored the engaged couple were brilliant and many. But beneath the strain of gaiety, perhaps, the girl's health began to fail; the color left her cheeks, and her eyes seemed to take on an appealing light. James Burnie and Madeline's father were alike concerned.

It was after the doctor had forbidden the acceptance of invitations, and suggested low rides in the open air instead, that the pretty color came back again, and Madeline's spirits grew brighter accordingly.

James Burnie often wondered at the curious looks she gave him. He wondered too, at a sort of gentleness in her manner. Never had she been so endearing, more and more like a cloud before the sun of his happiness was the consciousness of this growing shame of his of the inevitable fact of his crude old father. And then one evening when James Burnie called, Madeline came, seriously to sit upon the garden bench at his side.

"I have had such a gloriously restful afternoon," she said, "one of many recently spent in the same way. It has been like leaving the stage of a theater for a play, James, and going back into real life—simple life and sweet." Madeline threw out her arms with a free gesture.

"A place, where no critical audience forever awaits one's acting. So, I cast aside my acting, James, and I was just a tired girl, comforted and cheered by the kindest human heart that ever beat. It has been an experience, James, to meet such a nobly simple soul," she said.

"During one of my first afternoon drives I became faint and left my car in the road, while I asked at a little cottage for some milk to drink. An old Scotchman who keeps house there alone brought it to me. But first I must obey his commands and take the milk seated in a great comfy chair on the porch. Afterwards, I must see his neat house and his garden, and as we walked together his shrewd old eyes seemed to read my very life. I did not need to tell him that my doctor had ordered rest and country air, or that I was sick unto death of committees and various public affairs. The old Scotchman knew it all—he had read it in my face. And he planned, with a planning which I did not realize at the time, that I must stop tomorrow to pick the big roses in his garden, and the next day, to look at his purple plum-laden tree. So every day I came to rest in the boisterous old chaise on the porch with the glass of cream waiting and growing larger each time, while the old man talked to me of life, of books, of people, until I felt that I had failed before in much knowledge that was true and needful. He spoke of his boy, and his tone was as tender as it was proud."

Madeline stood up, her eyes were shining.

"My dear old man, tells me that his name is James Burnie. But when he speaks of his son, he calls him just—'Jamie.'"

With a happy laugh the girl put on her hands.

"I have not seen this garden in moonlight, 'Jamie,' she said. "Will you take me there now, to visit—your father?"

The Army Worm and Its Control

How to Dispose of Pest Which Swoops Down on All Green Crops

The army worm that has been doing so much damage to corn, wheat and green crops in various sections of the country, is the caterpillar form of a moth that flies only at night, according to Frank B. Wade, deputy entomologist for the Indiana state conservation commission. In a bulletin issued by the commission, Mr. Wade describes the family history of the pest and tells the most approved methods of fighting it.

"To begin with," said Mr. Wade, "the moth is about one and one-half inches across the spread wings and is brownish gray in color. The caterpillar, when full grown, is about one and one-half inches long, is smooth, and is usually greenish in general color with one broad stripe of dark gray or black down the middle of the back and with a narrower stripe of the same color on either side. The broad stripe usually has a fine light broken stripe running down its center. The head is greenish-brown, speckled with black."

"It is this caterpillar form that does the damage by eating every green thing within reach. So numerous do they sometimes become that one can actually hear them eat in concert. When they have cleaned up on the food supply in one field they move en masse to an adjoining field, and thus, comes about the familiar name of army worm."

The full grown caterpillar ceases to feed and goes into the pupa or resting state after from three to four weeks of feeding. Here it remains beneath the surface of the soil, as a rule, for about two weeks. The pupae look something like date seeds. The moth on emerging from the pupal case dries its wings and flies away to mate. The eggs are then laid usually in the folded part of grass blades, and they hatch in from eight to ten days, thus starting the tiny caterpillars once more.

"To control these pests one should be alert to detect the first attack, for the area invaded is usually relatively small at first and may be mowed off and straw scattered and burned, thus destroying the caterpillars. Another method of control is to spray the infested area heavily with paris green (one pound to 50 gallons of water) or with lead arsenate (two pounds to 50 gallons). Such sprayed material should, of course, not be used as feed."

Poisoned bait will also do good service. Make up a bran mash with 60 pounds of wheat bran and one pound of paris green or two pounds of lead arsenate and moisten it with cheap molasses or sirup and add the juice of half a dozen lemons or oranges. By scattering this bait broadcast throughout the infested area in small places, a large number of worms may be killed.

"To keep the worms from moving on to new feeding grounds, trenches should be plowed entirely around the infested area. The trench should be at least six inches deep and should have a vertical side toward the new ground. It should have postholes at intervals for the worms to fall into and it should be kept as dusty as possible by dragging a log through it to pulverize the soil. It should be tended at all times when the worms are on the move, as they should be burned when they begin to get numerous in the trench. A gasoline torch or straw covered with coal oil may be used for this purpose."

"In wet weather the trench will not stop the worms, and then a line of heavy road oil laid an inch or two wide on a smooth hard surface should be used. Drag a plank heavily loaded with stones over the ground to prepare the surface for the oil."

The army worm appears about the same time each year, but in small numbers and without doing noticeable damage. It is only when, because of circumstances which are not thoroughly understood, the army worm becomes very numerous, that it is a menace. Probably some of its natural enemies fared in last winter and were not on hand in their usual numbers to dispose of the worms this spring. At any rate they are with us, and if not properly handled they bid fair to do more damage in the localities where they appear than the seventeen-year locust."

KEEPING CHICKENS IN TOWN

In many towns and cities there are ordinances restricting the keeping of fowls under certain conditions, namely, that the neighbors shall not be annoyed by the crowing of the male birds and that the poultry house must be located a specified distance from any dwelling. Under such conditions, says the United States department of agriculture, a permit should be easy to obtain and the conditions set forth complied with.

The male bird in the flock is not necessary for the production of eggs and usually the house can be so located and kept clean that it will not annoy the neighbors.

Indian Talk Was Too Much For Fritz When He Tried to Tap the Yankee Wires

There was one code Fritz never got on to in France. That was the Sioux. A soldier just back from France tells of it:

"A good many German spies got over into the allied lines," said the Yank, who was in charge of a communications battery. "And there was some tapping of lines and listening in by German agents who understood English perfectly. We got around that in a clever way. We put Sioux Indians on the telephones to send and receive orders."

"Um, glum, hoosha, moo, chank," an Indian would repeat over the telephone, meaning 'bring up a battery of 75's.'"

"Og, gog, pom, hegan, chahoo, rak-ak," would come the answer, which might mean, 'they're starting, will be there in five minutes.'"

"I don't know how much of a technical war vocabulary those Sioux had, but Fritz never got wise to the lingo."

How Light Changes Shape of Pupil of Eye of Both Animal and the Human

Nothing is more deceptive than the appearance of a cat's eye. The pupil ordinarily appears as a long, narrow oval or a vertical black line, yet its natural shape is circular. It is a matter of the effect of light. In a bright light our pupils become very small circles, while those of a cat turn into ovals or narrow slits. The general effect is the same in either case—namely, to diminish the quantity of light passing into the eye. Curiously enough, in the larger animals of the cat tribe, such as tigers, the pupil sometimes behaves exactly like a human pupil, and when brightly illuminated contracts into a minute circle instead of becoming linear. In the case of domestic cats, the older the animal the more frequently does the pupil of the eye assume a circular form.

Famous White Sox Second Baseman in His Old Form Both at Bat and Afield

Age is no handicap to Eddie Collins, famous second baseman of the Chicago White Sox. At least the Tarrytown lad has betrayed no sign of decay thus far in the season's campaign, and in the series at the Polo grounds has flashed all his old form at the bat and afield. Collins and Schalk are the lackbone of the Sox, the mainspring by which the play of the club afield is directed.

Collins certainly is as fast as he has been through the last few seasons, and although he has not invaded the 300 circle in batting he is sure to arrive up there in the early future. Furthermore, Collins has more to do with infusing a spirit of co-operative combativeness into the Sox than any other individual in the outfit, with the exception of Kid Gleason, the manager, who is a fighter down to the ground and one of the best all around good fellows in the pastime.

Children's Minds Should Be Stored With Pictures They Can Describe in Own Words

Memorizing is a worthy mental exercise; but one can hardly help protesting against the practice, now happily less common than in years within memory, of compelling young children to commit to memory tasks actually painful either from their impossible length or from their uninteresting and unintelligible matter. The good practice of a pleasurable habit of learning by heart a suitable quantity of suitable matter has suffered from a natural reaction; but we are now returning to better things, and we are convinced that there are few efforts more pleasant to children than the consciousness of having committed to memory a suitable task, that is, of having formed a clear and complete picture of some interesting subject.

Do not let the time pass for storing your scholars' minds with an abundance of distinct pictures, which they can represent to their own minds and describe in their own words—A Teacher.

Reader Finds Comfort in Old Books Written Without War in the Author's Mind

If during the war it almost seemed to some people that nothing written before 1914 had kept its old value, they may, on the contrary, soon find themselves blinking suspiciously at books written since then. Mathematicians distinguished carefully between "systematic" error, which is cumulative, and the casual errors which are as likely to lie in one direction as the other and in the long run tend to offset each other. To the reader who is beginning to recover a derailed critical faculty the trouble with most of which has been written since 1914 is that it contains a systematic error due to the perturbations set up by the great war. The comfort of old books, on the contrary, lies in the fact that they were not written with the great war lurking in some corner of the author's mind. Whatever their errors and prejudices, they are not bent all one way by a single force, and even their prejudices neutralize each other.

Mother's Cook Book

The life that is sharing in the interests, the welfare and the happiness of others, is one that is continually expanding in beauty and in power and, therefore, in happiness.

Good Things for the Family.

As the new apples are now in season, serve them in other ways than as apple pie and sauce. Shred green apples with one-third as many sliced onions cooked in a little sweet fat with water added as the moisture is evaporated, makes a most appetizing dish to serve as a vegetable. Add sugar to soften the acid of the apple and salt and pepper if desired.

Chopped Apple Fritters.

Take one cupful of flour, half a cupful of sugar, three apples, one egg, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one cupful of milk and a pinch of salt. Mix as usual, stirring in the chopped apples at the last. Drop by spoonfuls in hot fat and serve rolled in sugar or with a hot sauce as dessert. Green apples are much better flavored if they are used unpeeled.

Pineapple Jelly With Cream Cheese. Prepare the jelly as usual and mold in small cups. Unmold on lettuce and serve with the cream cheese rice over the top. Garnish with salad dressing and serve cold.

Parsley Potatoes.

Cook small-sized uniform, new potatoes until well done, turn into a vegetable dish with enough butter to cover, sprinkle with minced parsley and serve at once.

Oatmeal Cookies.

Take one cupful of shortening, one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of flour and two cupfuls of rolled oats well browned and put through the meat grinder; one cupful of chopped raisins, half a cupful of broken nut meats, two eggs, half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in half a cupful of sweet milk, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and salt and a half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg. Mix well and drop by small teaspoonfuls on a baking sheet.

Raisin Muffins.

Add to one-half cupful of raisins, one-half cupful of oatmeal, one-fourth cupful of lard, one teaspoonful of salt and a half cupful of boiling water. When cool add half a cupful of cold water and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted with flour to make a drop batter; do not beat. Drop into hot, greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven.

Sponge Cake Trifle.

Cut a slice of sponge cake and moisten with cherry juice and a few halves of cherries, put another slice on top and add more juice and cherries. Serve sprinkled with shredded almonds.

Grape juice with a spoonful or two of lemon juice added to thin cream and sweetened to taste, then frozen, makes a beautiful frozen dish and which tastes as good as it looks.

WHY NOT "CHAUTAUQUA PARK?"

Immediately after the mention in last week's Record of "Oakwood Park" as the place of holding the sunday afternoon band concert, people began to ask, "Where is Oakwood Park?" It transpires that a lot of folks do not even know our local cemetery by their names, but always refer to them as "the old cemetery" and "the new cemetery." This, for one thing—leads the record to suggest that if the beautiful little grove in question is to have an official name, the one most appropriate in all respects would be "Chautauqua Park," as the hundreds of people in town and in the vicinity who have attended the two Chautauquas held there would know instantly "where." A better reason still lies in the fact that the grove (which, by the way, hasn't a bit of oak within its bounds) was never made any use of whatever except as children played there, until it was permitted by the village authorities to be made available for Chautauqua purposes. The writer has asked the opinion of several persons in regard to the name, and with out exception they have approved of the idea.

GREEN FANCY

THE CUT DIRECT

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy young New Yorker, on a walking trip in New England near the Canadian border, is given a lift in an automobile by a mysterious and attractive girl bound for a house called Green Fancy. At Hart's tavern Barnes finds a stranded troupe of "barn-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Ruschcroft is the star, and "Miss Thackeray" the leading lady. They are doing hotel work for their board. He learns Green Fancy is a house of mystery. That night two mounted men leave the tavern under odd circumstances. One is shot dead near by; the other is brought back dying. Barnes comes under suspicion. He stays to help clear up the mystery. O'Dowd of Green Fancy says that that place of mystery is not concerned in any way. Barnes goes into the Green Fancy grounds and sees the mysterious girl.

CHAPTER VII

Spun-Gold Hair, Blue Eyes and Various Encounters.

She was quite unaware of his presence, and yet he was directly in her path, though some distance away. Her head was bent; her eyes were thoughtful, her stride slow and aimless.

She was slender, graceful and evidently quite tall, although she seemed a pigmy among the towering giants that attended her stroll. Her hands were thrust deep into the pocket of a white duck skirt. A glance revealed white shoes and trim ankles in blue. She wore no hat. Her hair was like spun gold, thick, wavy and shimmering in the subdued light.

Suddenly she stopped and looked up. He had a full view of her face as she gazed about as if startled by some unknown person.

"Morning, sir. Will be 'Diversity and Unity.' Don't fail to hear this sermon. It's a fine sound. For a second or two he held his breath, stunned by the amazing loveliness that was revealed to him. Then she discovered him standing there.

In a flash he realized that he was face to face with the stranger of the day before. He took two or three impulsive steps forward, his hand going to his hat—and then halted. Evidently his senses had deceived him. There was no smile in her eyes—and yet he could have sworn that it was there an instant before. Instead there was a level stare.

"I am sorry if I startled—" he began.

The figure of a man appeared as if discharged bodily from some magic tree-trunk, and stood directly in his path—a tall, rugged man in overalls was he, who held a spade in his hand and eyed him intently. Without another glance in his direction the first and more pleasing vision turned on her heel and continued her stroll sauntering off to the right, her fair head once more bent in study, her back eloquently indifferent to the gaze that followed her.

"Who do you want to see?" inquired the man with the spade.

Before Barnes could reply a heavy voice accosted him from behind. He whirled and saw O'Dowd approaching, not twenty yards away. The Irishman's face was aglow with pleasure.

"I knew I couldn't be mistaken in the shape of you," he cried, advancing with outstretched hand. "You've got the breadth of a dockhead in your shoulders and the trimness of a prize fighter in your waist."

They shook hands. "I fear I am trespassing," said Barnes. His glance went over his shoulder as he spoke. The man with the spade had been swallowed up by the earth! He could not have vanished more quickly in any other way. Off among the trees were intermittent flashes of blue and white.

"I am quite sure you are," said O'Dowd promptly but without a trace of unfriendliness in his manner. "Pa, dad, loving him as I do, I can't help saying that Curtis is a bally old crank. Mind ye, I'd say it to his face—I often do, for the matter of that. Of course, he went on seriously, "he is a sick man, poor devil. You see I've known him for a dozen years and more, and he likes me, though God knows why, unless it may be that I once did him some good turn in London."

"Sufficient excuse for repatriation, I should say," smiled Barnes.

"I introduced the lad to me only sister," said O'Dowd, "and she kept him happy for the next ten years. No doubt I also provided Mr. Curtis with three grandchildren he might never have had but for my graciousness." A look of distress came into his merry eyes. "Re. Jove, I'd like nothing better than to ask you in to have a dish of tea—it's tea-time, I'm sure—but I'd no more think of doing it than I'd consider cutting off my head. He doesn't like strangers. He—"

"My dear fellow, don't distress yourself," cried Barnes heartily. "There isn't the least reason in the world why—"

"You see, the poor old chap asks us up here once or twice a year—that is to say, De Soio and me—to keep his sister from filling the house up with men he can't endure. So long as we occupy the only available rooms, he argues, she can't stuff them full of objectionables. Twice a year she comes for a month, in the late fall and early spring."

"Why does he continue to live in this out-of-the-world spot? He is an old man, I take it, and ill?"

"You wouldn't be wondering if you knew the man," said O'Dowd. "He is a scholar, a dreamer, a sufferer. He is not a very old man at that. Not more than sixty-five."

"He certainly has a fanciful streak in him, building a place like that," said Barnes, looking not at the house but into the thicket above. "There was no sign of the blue and white—and the spun-gold that still defied exclusion from his mind's eye. He had not recovered from the thrill into which his vision of loveliness plunged him. He was still a trifle dazed and distraught."

"Right you are," agreed O'Dowd. "The queerest streak in the world. It's his notion of simplicity."

"Green Fancy. Is that the name he gave the place or does it spring from—"

"'Twas christened by me own sister, Mr. Barnes, the first time she was here, two years ago. I'll walk with you to the fence beyond if you've no objections," said O'Dowd, genially, and linked his arm through that of Barnes.

The latter was at once subtly aware of the fact that he was being belittledly conducted from the grounds. Moreover, he was now convinced that O'Dowd had been close upon him from the instant he had stepped out of his heels.

Now Wauchula, Florida entered them. Now and then the uncanny in the feeling that possessed him. Such espionage as this signified something deep and imperative in the presence not only of O'Dowd but the jack-in-the-box gardener a few minutes earlier.

His mind was still full of the lovely stranger about whom O'Dowd had so manifestly lied over the telephone.

"I must ask you to apologize to the young lady on whom I blundered a few moments ago. Mr. O'Dowd. She must have been startled. Pray convey to her my solicitude and excuses."

"Consider it done, my dear sir," said the Irishman. "Our most charming and seductive guest, he went on. "Bodad, of the two of you, I'll stake my head you were startled the most. Coming suddenly upon such rare loveliness is almost equivalent to being struck by a bolt of lightning. More than one painter of portraits has said that she is the most beautiful woman in the world. Mayhap you have heard of her. She is Miss Cameron of New Orleans, a friend of Mrs. Van Dyke. We have quite an enchanting house-party, Mr. Barnes, if you consider no more than the feminine side of it. By the way, have you heard when the coroner is to hold his inquests?"

"Nothing definite. He may wait a week," said Barnes.

"I suppose you'll stick around until it's over," ventured O'Dowd. Barnes thought he detected a slight harshness in his voice.

"I have quite made up my mind to stay until the mystery is entirely cleared up," he said. "The case is so interesting that I don't want to miss a shred of it."

"I don't blame ye," said O'Dowd heartily. "I'd like nothing better myself than to mix up in it. The next time you plan to pay us a visit, telephone in advance. I may be able to persuade my host that you're a decent, law-abiding, educated gentleman, and he'll consent to receive you at Green Fancy. Good day to ye," and he shook hands with the departing trespasser.

"Takin' a walk?" was the landlord's greeting as Barnes mounted the tavern steps at dusk.

"Going over the grounds of last night's affair," responded Barnes, pausing.

As he entered the door he was acutely aware of an intense stare leveled at him from behind by the landlord of Hart's Tavern. Half way up the stairway he stopped short and with difficulty repressed the exclamation that rose to his lips.

He had recalled a significant incident of the night before. Almost immediately after the departure of Roon and Paul from the Tavern Putnam Jones had made his way to the telephone behind the desk and had bawled a number in a loud, brisk voice, but the subsequent conversation was carried on in subdued tones, attended by haste and occasional furtive glances in the direction of the taproom.

Upon reaching his room Barnes permitted the suppressed emotion to escape his lips in the shape of a soft whistle, which if it could have been translated into words would have said: "By Gad, why haven't I thought of it before? He sent out the warning that Roon and Paul were on the way! And I'd like to bet my last dollar that someone at Green Fancy had the other end of the wire."

Mr. Ruschcroft was giving Hamlet's address to the players, in the taproom, when Barnes came down stairs at nine o'clock.

A small, dark man who sat alone at a table in the corner caught Barnes' eye and smiled almost mournfully. He was undoubtedly a stranger; his action was meant to convey to Barnes the information that he too was from a distant and sophisticated community and that a bond of sympathy existed between them.

Putnam Jones spoke suddenly at Barnes' shoulder. He started involuntarily. The man was beginning to get on his nerves. He seemed to be dogging his footsteps with ceaseless persistence.

"That fellow over there in the corner," said Jones softly, "is a book agent from your town. He sold me a set of Dickens when he was here last time, about six weeks ago. A year's subscription to two magazines (I loved 'em). By gosh, these book agents are sick ones."

"He's a shrewd-looking chap," commented Barnes.

"Says he won't be satisfied till he's made this section of the country the most cultured, refined spot in the United States," said Jones dolefully. "Excuse me. There goes the telephone. Maybe it's news from the sheriff."

With the spasmodic tinkling of the telephone bell the book agent arose and made his way to the little office. Barnes glanced over his shoulder a moment later and saw him studying the register. The poise of his sleek head, however, suggested a listening attitude. Putnam Jones, not four feet view of the car. That glance was enough, however. He would have been willing to go before a jury and swear that it was the same car that had deposited him at Hart's Tavern the day before.

Having guessed correctly in the one instance he allowed himself another and even bolder guess—the little book agent had either received a message from or delivered one to the occupant or driver of the car from Green Fancy.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Note, Some Fancies and an Expedition in Quest of Facts.

He started upstairs, his mind full of the events and conjectures of the day. As he entered the room his eyes fell upon a white envelope at his feet. It had been slipped under the door since he left the room an hour before.

Terse reminder from the prudent Mr. Jones! His bill for the day! He picked it up, glanced at the inscription, and at once altered his opinion. His full name was there in the handwriting of a woman. For a moment he was puzzled; then he thought of Miss Thackeray. A note of thanks, no doubt, vouchsafed to him. Vaguely annoyed, he ripped open the envelope and read:

"In case I do not have the opportunity to speak with you tonight, this is to let you know that the little man who says he is a book agent was in your room for three-quarters of an hour while you were away this afternoon. You'd better see if anything is missing."

M. T.

He made a hasty but careful examination of his effects. There was not the slightest evidence that his pack had been opened or even disturbed. If the little book agent spent three-quarters of an hour in the room, he managed most effectively to cover up all traces of his visit.

Barnes did not go to sleep until long after midnight. He now regarded himself as definitely committed to a combination of sinister and piquant enterprises, not the least of which was to know about the mysterious young woman at Green Fancy.

The next day he, with other lodgers in the Tavern, was put through an examination by the police and county officials from St. Elizabeth, and notified that, while he was not under suspicion or surveillance, it would be necessary for him to remain in the "bailwick" until detectives already on the way, were satisfied that he possessed no knowledge that would be useful to them in clearing up what had now assumed the dignity of a "national problem."

The sheriff said he would like to "run over the ground a bit" that very afternoon if it was agreeable to Mr. O'Dowd.

O'Dowd stayed to dinner. (Dinner was served in the middle of the day at Hart's Tavern.) He made a great impression upon Lyndon Ruschcroft, who, with his daughter, joined the two men. Indeed, the palaverer Irishman extended himself in the effort to make himself agreeable. He was vastly interested in the stage, he declared. As a matter of fact he had been told a thousand times that he ought to go on the stage.

The little book agent came in while they were at table. He sat down in a corner of the dining room and busied himself with his subscription lists while waiting for the meal to be served. He was still poring over them, frowning intently, when Barnes and the others left the room.

Barnes walked out beside Miss Thackeray.

"The tailor made gown is an improvement," he said to her. He was thinking that she was a very pretty girl, after all.

"The frock usually makes the woman," she said slowly, "but not always the lady."

He thought of that remark more than once during the course of an afternoon spent in the woods about Green Fancy.

O'Dowd virtually commanded the expedition. It was he who thought of everything. First of all, he led the party to the corner of the estate nearest the point where Paul was shot from his horse. Sitting in his saddle he called the attention of the other riders to what appeared to be a most significant fact in connection with the killing of this man.

Barnes again visits Green Fancy and meets with a very different reception, which is, however, quite as mystifying.

Tea Popular British Beverage.

Tea is the most popular of British beverages, and in spite of William Cobbett's lament that "tea shops" were being substituted for wholesome small beer to the detriment of the populace in his day, "the cup that cheers" is the staple drink of all classes. It cannot be said that there has been any marked deterioration of English people through constant indulgence in tea.

DISHES FOR HOT DAYS.

The delicatessen stores are of great help to the business woman who has no time for cooking and can afford to pay the extra price demanded for ready-to-eat food. For the housewife, however, such food is not economical to buy except on occasions when a quick meal may be prepared after an afternoon's outing. The cost of the dishes when prepared at home will be found to be much less, as odds and ends will make these appetizing croquettes, deviled crabs, and potato salads. Further one has the assurance that the food is fresh and wholesome. All the advantages of the delicatessen food is offset by the possibility of a case of ptomaine poisoning, as in many stores, perishable foods are noticed and will spoil in a short time.

Many women have the idea that home-prepared foods cannot be reheated, which is no doubt the reason that croquettes, fish cakes, breaded chops and such dishes are so often purchased rather than made at home. The following recipes will help the woman who wishes the delicatessen flavors without the price. These dishes may be prepared in the early morning to reheat at dinner time.

Ham Loaf.—This may be prepared from the bits of a leftover boiled ham or from slices of broiled ham. Take three cups of finely minced ham, one small onion also minced, three spoons of parsley, one tablespoonful of prepared mustard and two eggs. Put the ham, onion, and parsley through the meat grinder, add the eggs and mustard, beating the eggs and mixing all the ingredients until well blended, adding salt and pepper to taste. Pack into a well-greased bread pan and bake in a moderate oven for forty-five minutes. Serve hot or cold. Garnish with chopped egg white and serve in green pepper cups with tomato jelly.

Chicken or Ham Croquettes.—Melt two tablespoons of butter or oil in a saucepan. Add five tablespoons of sweet fat, add five tablespoons of flour and when well blended add three-quarters of a cup of milk gradually and cook until thick; then add one cupful of chicken or ham finely minced and one egg yolk and seasoning of salt and pepper one teaspoonful of lemon juice with a little celery salt. Form into croquettes which cool. Beat the egg white, add a quarter of a cup of water, roll in crumbs and egg and let stand to become firm. Brown in hot fat. Reheat in a pan well covered in a hot oven, twelve minutes.

SUMMER FRUITS, FLOWERS AND ICES.

Served on a porch or in the garden away from the dainty appointments of a luncheon table, the individual serving of ices and fruit should present a picture in itself. One may carry out some color scheme, using a flower of natural or candied fruits.

Cherry Roll.—Use small baking powder cans for packing. Add a spoonful of cherry water ice and pistachio ice cream in alternate spoonfuls in the cans. Chopped cherries are used in the cherry ice. Serve cut in slices and garnish with fresh cherries and foliage.

Strawberry Delight.—Serve strawberry ice cream on well-washed and dried sawberry leaves and garnish with a spray of the wild berries ripe and green. If served in sherbet cups the leaves may serve as a dolly.

Blossom Mousse.—Make an angel cake basket, frosted on the outside with boiled frosting and decorated in lattice strips with angelica. The handle also of angelica. Fill with raspberry mousse and garnish with candy rose buds or fresh raspberries. A few are used as decoration for the top of the cake. The cake is baked in a circular pan and then cut out to form a basket.

Poached Peach.—Lay a canned peach on a round of sponge cake and surround with a meringue-flavored with orange and delicately browned. Garnish with custard sauce and pecans or slices of fruit.

Watermelon Cup.—Cut with a French potato cutter enough balls to fill sherbet glasses from the pink flesh of the watermelon. Marinate them in a sirup which is flavored with chopped, crystallized ginger and fresh pineapple, with a few large seeded raisins. Serve in glasses with pineapple sherbet; garnish with strips of ginger and large raisins.

Cantaloupe Cones.—Scoop out the cones with an ice cream dipper and arrange them on a platter with vanilla ice cream and garnish with nasturtium leaves and flowers.

DOCTOR URGES AN OPERATION

Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Was Cured.

Baltimore, Md.—"Nearly four years I suffered from organic troubles, nervousness and head-aches and every month would have to stay in bed most of the time. INCREASE WEIGHT AND VITALITY WITH PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

The average person is beginning to realize more and more the lack of physical strength and nerve exhaustion (frequently evidenced by excessive thinness) are the direct cause of the failure to succeed in life's struggle for the necessities of existence, but also for the handicap in one's social aspirations. Compare the thin, sickly, angular frame with

At the seaside too, the plump well-rounded figure is most admired. The well rounded form, which is usually accompanied by the bloom of health and attractiveness. Millions of people are conscious of this handicap, evident from the continued appearance in newspapers and magazines of many suggestions proposing various remedies in food, medicine or exercise, either of which might or might not be appropriate for a given case. Authorities, however, agree that healthy nerve tissue is absolutely essential to a strong, robust body and mind. Weak nerves, while indicated by a multitude of different symptoms, more immediately and generally result in lack of energy, sleeplessness, irritability, depression, etc., which conditions gradually consume the healthy flesh, leaving weight hollow, a flat chest, bony neck and scrawny arms and legs. Our bodies need more phosphates than most of them are able to extract from the foods we eat nowadays, and many opinions affirm that there is nothing which may be taken into the human system that so effectively supplies this deficiency as the pure organic phosphate known as Bitro-phosphate and sold by good druggists everywhere. The essential phosphoric food elements in Bitro-phosphate assimilated by the nerve cells should produce a pleasing change in nerve energy and hence increased vitality and strength. With the burdens of nervousness, sleeplessness, lack of energy, etc., lifted, normal weight with its attractive fullness and ruddy glow of health replaces the former picture of skin and bones. CAUTION.—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unexcelled for the relief of nervousness and attendant disorders, owing to its tendency to leave weight hollow, one should watch the scales while taking it unless it is the desire to put on flesh.

SHED LIGHT ON SUPERVISION

Youngster Put Into Action the Effect School Officials' Words Had on the Children.

A certain town has a new school supervisor who is not an amiable as he might be. The president of the school board has heard complaints, but not until the other evening was he much affected by them. Then he happened to be watching his own and the neighborhood youngsters playing school. His own seven-year-old wished to be teacher, but was always turned down because of his youthful age. Finally when his protests had become pitiful, one of the older children said: "Why, you can be Mr. T," the new supervisor. John. Then you can assist our room."

John left the room, and when he re-entered came as the new supervisor. And how he did come! He stepped one child, shook another, and shook his fist at the third. Then the school board member laughed. "He surely doesn't do that way," he said to them.

John made answer. "Not exactly," he admitted. "He just says the things I do."—Indianapolis News.

GOLD STARS TOLD THE STORY

Pathetic Reason Why Elderly Lady Was Glad of Companionship of Fox Terrier Puppy.

A group of men were at lunch in a New York club, and one of them told this story:

"My daughter is going to school at Wellesley. The other day a friend in Boston sent her a little fox terrier puppy. She couldn't keep him at school, so she made inquiry for a place where he could be boarded till the end of the term. As a result of her inquiries she received a note from a lady, saying she would be glad to take care of the dog, not only because of the little additional pin money it would give her, but mainly because she was very, very lonely. So my daughter went to her home. There she found a sweet-faced, white-haired old lady who must indeed have been very lonely, for in the front window there hung a service flag containing five gold stars, each representing a son."

"And that is the reason the old lady with the halo of white hair was so lonely that she welcomed the companionship of even a fox terrier puppy."—Thrill Magazine

CATTLE IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE MUST BE SHOWN FREE FROM TUBERCULOSIS

A Splendid Herd of Good Quality Herefords.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Beginning July 1, 1919, the shipment of cattle interstate without having them properly tuberculin tested will be prohibited—with a few exceptions—by a regulation issued by the secretary of agriculture. The enforcement of this new regulation will, it is believed, be of great assistance in preventing the further spread of tuberculosis among live stock, and having the work practically under state and federal supervision at all times will serve to bring about uniformity.

The department of agriculture, through its bureau of animal industry is now actively co-operating with the state live stock sanitary officials and cattle owners of 42 states in the eradication of tuberculosis from live stock.

Recent legislation in several of the states has made it possible to proceed with the work where heretofore it has been impossible to do so. Federal funds available for the work are insufficient to meet present demands, and now that the cattle owners are finding the work to be of such advantage and importance the demands will increase rapidly.

Most activities are in the "accredited herd" work with the owners and breeders of pure-bred herds of cattle who wish to free their herds from tuberculosis and have them placed on the list as "accredited."

Full Co-operation Essential.

Some "area work" is being conducted. Under this plan a community or county or some other unit decides to have all the cattle in the area tuberculin tested with a view of completely eradicating the disease as soon as possible. In order that the "area work" may be successfully carried on, the fullest co-operation of the cattle owners in the territory must be obtained, and any attempt to proceed with the work without the good will and hearty co-operation of the people will fail.

Appropriations by the states for the coming fiscal year for live stock tuberculosis eradication aggregate about two million dollars. Part of this sum will be used to indemnify partially the owners of cattle found to be tuberculous. Most of the states now have laws permitting the payment of indemnity and the federal department also pays some indemnity when funds are available. With the exception of valuable breeding animals, it is found most advisable to consign the tuberculous cattle for slaughter and thereby dispose of them to the best advantage. In the greater portion of "reactors" the disease is found to exist to but a slight extent, making the meat fit for food—thereby causing a great saving. The carcasses of such cattle, after being passed for food by trained inspectors, usually bring about the market price, which sum, deducted from the appraised value of the live animal, leaves the amount of loss under the most recent laws; this loss is divided between the owner, the state and the United States—each standing one-third—except that in most cases the state is limited in the amount that it can pay and the United States is always limited to the payment of $50 for a pure-bred animal and $25 for a grade.

Healthy Cattle Worth More.

Owners realize that these slightly diseased cattle may at any time become a source of danger to the healthy animals of the herd and that they themselves may break down from the disease and die or become of little or no value. The value of healthy cattle in any herd, after the tuberculous ones are taken out, always increases, and it is a source of great satisfaction to the owner that he has a healthy herd or that he is doing everything in his power to make it so. Cattle from accredited herds are commanding increased prices over those that are not, and those from herds that are in the process of being accredited are also being sold at advanced prices.

The second list of accredited herds and those that have successfully passed one tuberculin test in preparation for the accredited list is expected to be ready for distribution July 1. Requests now received indicate that 100,000 copies will be required to meet demands. This pamphlet of about 100 pages will contain the names and addresses of about 4,000 cattle owners, representing about 91,000 cattle, whose herds have passed one or more successful official tuberculin tests applied under the co-operative plan for accrediting herds of tuberculosis-free cattle.

Up to April 1, 1919, the total number of herds under supervision for the eradication of tuberculosis was about 9,800, containing about 200,000 cattle, and since that time a large number have been added to the list.

These cattle owners have realized the great importance of trying to maintain a healthy herd, and have pledged themselves to co-operate with the state and federal officials in every possible way to free their cattle from the disease.

Must Guard Against Infection.

Experience covering a period of several years has proved beyond a doubt that a herd can be freed of tuberculosis and kept free, and that the procedure is entirely practical and within the power of a large percentage of cattle owners. But to accomplish the desired results everyone connected with the project must do his best to follow plans, in every detail, that will bring about the fullest co-operation on the part of the herd owner is very important. A herd of cattle may be declared to be free from tuberculosis by the officials in charge of the work, and then, through some oversight or by carelessness, diseased animals may be added to the herd or members of the herd may be allowed to associate with tuberculous cattle. In such case infection may again be introduced and cause further losses and much trouble.

Since the inauguration of co-operative tuberculosis eradication work the number of cattle tested with tuberculin each month has increased. A total of 52,114 cattle were tested from July 1, 1918, to May 1, 1919. Minnesota leads among the northern states with about 25,000. Virginia leads the southern states with 15,796, followed closely by Alabama with 15,604.

BLAZES IN COTTON GINS PREVENTABLE

Static Electricity, Chief Cause, Combated by Grounding.

Conclusively Shown in Recent Investigations by United States Department of Agriculture—Sparks Easy to Prevent.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The main cause of the frequent and destructive fires in the cotton-gins of the South is static or frictional electricity—an element easily controlled by simple methods. That was shown conclusively in recent investigations by the United States department of agriculture, through its bureau of chemistry, which now has issued a circular telling how to prevent blazes from static electricity, and also giving suggestions for the prevention of fires from matches or other foreign material in cotton, from friction, from cotton hanging to ribs in the gin, or from other possible causes of less importance.

So frequent were the mysterious gin fires in 1917—the losses in Texas alone that year being estimated at a million dollars—that rumors of alien enemy activity spread through the country, and Uncle Sam sent several experts to Texas to determine the cause and the preventive. The experts found that most of the fires were caused by sparks of static electricity, but that it was easy enough to prevent the sparks from doing damage by the simple expedient of running wires from the gin machinery to the ground.

How to "ground" gin machinery is the chief thing that the experts have to tell in the new circular, "Cotton Gin Fires," numbered 23, which may be obtained free by application to the bureau of chemistry of the department.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise made to the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has a real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says: "Take for example, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend; for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism. You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcels post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Then Mrs. Bozarth Used Doan's for Kidney Trouble. Says Worth Weight in Gold.

"Doan's Kidney Pills are worth their weight in gold for they cured me after all other medicine had failed," says Mrs. B. Bozarth, 87 Water St., Mt. Holly, N. J. "For over three years I was in misery."

"The pain in my back grew worse until I had to go to bed. I did nothing but toss about. The stinging pains shot through my body and my head ached and throbbled. My eyes felt as though they would bulge out of my head. The blinding dizzy spells made me think I was going to lose my mind. Everything would turn dark. The kidney secretions burned; were the color of coffee and passed every few minutes in very small amounts. I felt all a-titter with nervousness. I scarcely ate anything and I lost twenty-four pounds. I felt short of breath and my heart would palpitate. Sometimes I would shake all over and become numb. Doan's Kidney Pills soon gave me relief. I couldn't believe this little box had helped me after the doctors' expensive treatments had brought no results. Three boxes of Doan's cured me." Sworn to before me, R. J. B. SLACK, Notary Public.

MILLIONS Suffer from Acid-Stomach

FOR YOUR ACID-STOMACH

Millions of people suffer year after year from "acid stomach." Affecting practically every part of the body, never dreaming that their ill health can be traced directly to acid-stomach. Here is the reason: Poor digestion means poor nourishment of the different organs and tissues of the body. The blood is impoverished—becomes weak, thin, sluggish. Ailments of many kinds spring from such conditions. Biliousness, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, general weakness, loss of power and energy, headache, nervousness, mental depression—even more serious ailments such as catarrh and cancer of the stomach, intestinal ulcers, cirrhosis of the liver, heart trouble—all of these can often be traced directly to acid-stomach.

Keep a sharp lookout for the first symptoms of acid-stomach—indigestion, heartburn, belching, food repeating, that awful painful bloating after eating, and sour, gassy stomach. EATONIC, the wonderful modern remedy for acid-stomach, is guaranteed to bring quick relief from these stomach miseries. Thousands say they never dreamed that anything could bring such speedy relief—and make them feel so much better in every way. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise. Make your life worth living—no more aches, pains—no blues or melancholy—no more of that tired, listless feeling. Be well and strong. Get back your physical and mental punch; your vim, vigor and vitality. You will always be weak and ailing as long as you have acid-stomach. So get rid of it now. Take EATONIC Tablets—they taste good—you eat them like a bit of candy. Your druggist has EATONIC—50 cents for a trial box. Get a box from him today and if you are not satisfied he will refund your money.

Great Lecturers a Feature Of This Year's Chautauqua

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS

GEO. P. BIBLE

JAS. S. KNOX

MOTHER LAKE

You will respond with fervor to the glowing message of this year's Chautauqua lecturers—for surely never was such a galaxy of great thinkers and gifted speakers presented in a single week!

By reason of his importance in the body politic, and doubly by reason of his nation-wide reputation as an orator, chief attention focuses on the great address of Ex-Governor Willis of Ohio, whose lecture, "Perils and Problems," cuts with the white heat of an acetylene torch to the very heart of our national problems.

George P. Bible is another orator of gifted mind. His lecture, "New Fads and Fancies," gets close to the heart of the man and the nation and helps men steer their course during these trying days.

Jas. S. Knox—community specialist, comes not only to lecture but to counsel with us to find ways to better our own "Community Efficiency." Mr. Knox is not only a powerful speaker but has the added distinction of being one of the few men in America thoroughly familiar with the problems of the small and medium-sized community, as well as those of the larger cities.

Mother Lake—that eloquent woman who has dedicated her life to overcoming the iniquities of life—often unseen and unknown by the parent—that serve to hamper the mental, physical and moral development of the child, brings her lecture, "The Divine Rights of the Child," one of the most sympathetic appeals ever heard on the Chautauqua platform.
