

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

VOL. L. NO. 2. THE RECORD, NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1919. $1.50 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

Ain't It a Grand and Glorious Feeling? With Apologies to Cartoonist Briggs.

NORTHVILLE BANKS TO PAY 4 PER CENT

HEREAFTER SAVINGS DEPOSITORS TO GET INCREASED INTEREST.

Commencing August 1st, both Northville banks will increase their interest to Savings depositors to 4%. The two local banks have deposits of over one million dollars and the interest for loans and increase in business has warranted this interest increase. It is understood however, that deposits must be left at least 3 months to insure this rate at either bank.

This is a comparatively large rate of interest for Savings banks to pay and it will no doubt be appreciated by the large number of customers that these banks serve.

STATE FAIR TICKETS.

As for several years past state fair tickets are on sale at the Record office at 35 cents each or three for $1.00, if bought before August 23, when the sale closes. Free tickets for children of 12 years and under will be given out good for Saturday, August 30 only. As the tickets cost 50 cents each at the gates, it is a considerable saving to purchase them in advance.

LAPHAM BANK INCREASES CAPITAL

STOCKHOLDERS TUESDAY VOTED TO MAKE IT $50,000; STOCK OVER SUBSCRIBED.

At a special meeting called for the purpose, the stockholders of the Lapham State Savings bank, voted to increase the bank's capital stock to $50,000. Cashier Lapham states that the stock was all sold, in fact it was oversubscribed in one day. The new stockholders are all local people, or of this vicinity, and the new stock is to be issued at once.

LOAN AND BLDG. ASS'N ANNUAL

SPENCER CLARK BECOMES THE NEW PRESIDENT AND TO SUCCEED THE LATE JAMES DUBUAR

The annual meeting of the Northville Loan & Building association was held Friday night and the following new officers and 4 members of the board of directors were elected: Spencer Clark—President. B. A. Wheeler—Vice-President. I. Van Atta, Secretary. C. A. Dolph, Treasurer. C. C. Yerkes, Attorney. Carl Schults, Thomas Carrington, Roy Clark. The other directors are J. W. Perkins, F. S. Neal, S. E. Cranson, George Hotaling.

The secretary's report showed the society to be in a prosperous condition with considerable of a demand for loans.

SAMUEL J. LAWRENCE DIED SUNDAY

After an illness of many months, Samuel J. Lawrence, who was a prominent and respected Northville resident for a number of years, died Sunday evening, July 27, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. J. Marks, at 356 Hamilton Ave., Detroit, at the age of 72 years. Mr. Lawrence was a veteran of the civil war, enlisting when but 16 years old. He was a Past Commander of the local Post, G. A. R. and had held the honor of being elected Department Commander of Michigan G. A. R. and also of a seat in the Michigan senate. For the past 18 years he had filled the office of Wayne County agent of corrections and charities, and in that capacity had exercised fatherly care over hundreds of unfortunate children who came under his jurisdiction, placing many in homes where they had opportunity of growing up to be useful citizens, in spite of the handicap of their early circumstances. Mr. Lawrence was twice married, his second wife surviving him also three sons and two daughters of his first marriage, Robert of St. Louis, Mo., William, of Detroit, Leo, of Northville, Mrs. Ida Mattison of Bay City and Mrs. Vera Marks, of Detroit. Funeral services were held from the residence Wednesday, and interment was made in the family lot at Grand Lawn.

REUNION AND PICNIC.

The annual reunion and picnic of teachers and pupils of the Briggs school district No. 3, township of Livonia, will be held at the school house in said district on the second Saturday in August, 1919. All who ever taught or attended school here are urgently requested to attend and assist with the program, which will consist of addresses by former teachers, school reminiscences by pupils, historical reading, music, games, and a basket picnic dinner at noon. Come. Bring your family and friends and help to make it a day to be remembered with pleasure.

E. T. ALEXANDER, Secretary.

FORD REPRESENTATIVE HERE WEDNESDAY

Mr. Leibold, Henry Ford's private secretary accompanied by Messrs. Hudson and Dolson of the Ford Co.'s real estate department were in Northville Wednesday to look over the water power situation. The gentlemen expressed themselves as highly appreciative of the courtesy and friendly feeling manifested by the people of Northville toward them as Mr. Ford's representatives.

NORTHVILLE RECORD CHANGES HANDS TODAY

E. E. BROWN OF DUNDEE TAKES OVER THE PLANT AND ISSUES THE PAPER NEXT WEEK.

FOKS FACTS AND FIGURES FROM FILES OF EIGHTEEN NINETY ONE.

F. S. Neal has sold his newspaper and job printing plant to Edwin E. Brown, for some years publisher of the "Reporter" at Dundee. Mr. Brown takes possession today, he having recently moved here into the Sessions house on Main street which he purchased last week. Mr. Neal will for the present occupy an office in the Record building where he can look after the interests of the Fair and the Auto club and other matters which he is interested.

The retirement of Mr. Neal from the editorship of the Record after 23 years as its owner, naturally brings up reminiscences of the time when the paper came into his hands. A few gleanings from the files of 1891 may prove to be of interest to Record readers.

The principal advertisers of that time of course deserve first mention, at least from the newspaper viewpoint. Three of those most extensively advertising regularly, were T. G. Richardson, Telchener & Co. and C. W. Horton, the latter having just bought out C. M. Joshua at the time. Mr. Richardson was first to use any considerable space, and also used space for the longest time of any of the merchants.

Other dry goods dealers were C. J. Ball and Mr. Barnett who had a store called "The Fair." Two firms of that period are still in business in Northville—Stark Bros. and S. W. Knapp. B. A. Wheeler, who quite recently retired from business, was a grocer here then. Hardware firms advertising quite extensively were Knapp & Yerkes and Waterman & Co.

John Hirsch was engaged in blacksmithing and carriage building, J. B. Wilcox in the shoe business, A. E. Rockwell in the jewelry trade, and A. M. Randolph and C. R. Stevens were the local druggists. J. B. Hoar and E. N. Root were the Northville dentists. Mrs. H. P. Murphy was the only milliner whose advertisements appeared in the paper and the undertaking and furniture trade was in the hands of Sands & Porter.

Starkweather Bros. were buying wool and produce, M. N. Johnson & Co. were advertising feed and boarding stables. L. E. McRobert and Frank Miller operated meat markets.

Manufacturing concerns noted were the Globe Furniture Co., Dubuar Mfg. Co. Ely Dowel Works and Stanley Air Gun factory. Brown & Co. was the name of the local photograph firm, and H. F. Brown was the sole proprietor. Physicians mentioned were J. R. Avery, J. M. Burgess and J. M. Swift. J. S. Lapham & Co. were the only bankers, and Mary Lapham was the cashier. Later E. H. Lapham was the chief assistant. E. S. Horton was postmaster, and Prof. Sinclair was at the head of the schools.

Fry's Milk Route, Milk 4 cts a quart is an ad that immediately attracts the eye of the present day reader, and we also note that 14 lbs of sugar might be obtained for $1, and "5 lbs of Vail & Crane Crackers for 25 cents."

The pastor of the Presbyterian church at that time, was W. T. Jacques; of the Methodist, F. Bradley; Baptist L. G. Clark and of the Catholic society F. J. A. Hally.

The village "dads" were M. A. Porter, president, G. S. VanZile, Alexander Tinham, George Rayson and W. I. Ely, councilmen.

A few of the interesting news items were that "the village is talking water-works" and that "Northville is now going to support four barber shops." It is also quoted from the Holly paper that "T. G. Richardson drove his Black Beauty, one of the finest driving horses in the state, from Northville to Holly in four hours."

We might add, as one fitting illustration of the changes even a quarter-century has brought, that a few days ago, the same gentleman drove his Cadillac from the same place to the same place in one hour.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

During Monday morning's severe electric storm, timid people feared for a few minutes that the entire village was being "struck out" but in spite of the many terrific flashes and crashes no serious injury to people or buildings has been reported. One very narrow escape from death, however, was that of Charles Johnson. The young man home on Main St. The young man was sleeping between two windows, with his head close to one of them. He was knocked out of bed and later a summing up of results showed a slight abrasion on his forehead where the electric fluid had first touched, a larger patch of cuticle gone from his knee and a mark on the toe where the current had passed out. It was certainly almost a miracle that no greater injury resulted. No damage whatever seems to have been done to the house. In one or two other places in town houses were struck, but with slight damage.

The telephone service, however, was seriously interfered with, Manager Hall informs the Record Over 400 telephones were put out of business, but the storm seems to have vented all its fury on the district embracing Northville, South Lyon, Novi and Wixom, as the damage to the service was confined to the area embracing those places.

7,450,200 Deaths In War—Total Cost to United States $21,850,000,000.

American casualties during the 47-day Meuse-Argonne offensive aggregated 120,000 men, or 10 per cent of the total of 1,200,000 engaged, according to a "statistical summary of the war with Germany," prepared by Col. Leonard P. Ayres, chief of the statistical branch of the general staff, and published by the war department.

"Of every 100 American soldiers and sailors who took part in the war with Germany," the report said, "two were killed or died of disease during the period of hostilities." In the northern army during the Civil war the number was about ten.

"Among the other great nations in this war between twenty and twenty-five in each 100 called to the colors were killed or died."

Best information obtainable by the general staff places the total battle deaths for all belligerents at 7,450,200, divided as follows:

Russia	1,700,000
Germany	1,600,000
France	1,385,300
Great Britain	900,000
Austria	800,000
Italy	330,000
Turkey	250,000
Serbia and Montenegro	125,000
Belgium	102,000
Roumania	100,000
Bulgaria	100,000
United States	38,900
Greece	7,000
Portugal	2,000

American participation is summarized in the report in the following table:

Total armed forces, including army, navy, marine corps	4,800,000
Men who went overseas	2,086,000
Men who fought in France	1,390,000
Tons of supplies shipped from America to France	7,500,800
Total registered in draft	24,234,021
Total draft induction	2,510,298
Cost of war to April 30, 1919	$21,850,000,000
Battles fought by American troops	13
Days of battle	200
Days of duration of Meuse-Argonne battle	47
American battle deaths in war	50,000
American wounded in war	236,000
American deaths from disease	56,991
Total deaths in the army	112,422

Under the head of "Sources of the Army" the report shows that 13 per cent came from the regular army, 10 per cent from the National Guard and 77 per cent from the draft.

A concise history of the military operations in which American troops took part is given in a chapter headed "Two Hundred Days of Battle." Attention was called to the fact that "Two of every three American soldiers who reached France took part in battle."

Rest, the Remedy

Overwork Cause of Many Unaccounted for Ailments

When we become tired all sorts of things may happen. Sometimes we may have a sense of dizziness or of nausea. In that case the stomach is the weak point and the symptoms are from weariness of that organ. The eyesight of some persons is affected by fatigue, and they think they are going blind.

Occasionally, notes an authority, our symptoms convince us we are losing our minds. Every person is familiar with the little lapses that are so annoying—the inability to remember a name soon after it has been heard, the failure to retain the sense of a page just read, the sense of being far away, of general unreality. All of them are evidence of fatigue.

One of the curious things about getting tired is that often we are not conscious of it at the time, or even the next day. People who work long hours on Saturday often do not feel the effects until Monday or Tuesday.

There are very few diseases that are helped by drugs. Not more than six or eight out of 100. But poor health pretty generally is improved by rest. Sleep, of course, is the great rest agency. Most people need at least eight hours; more rather than less. Nobody need worry about sleeping too much.

Hat of the East Indian Takes Cloth Thirty Feet Long and Three Feet Wide

American women haven't a thing on a man from India when it comes to wearing expensive hats. And they'll have to get busy to crowd as much on their heads as do the men from Bombay, Calcutta and Punjab, for those red, yellow and white turbans which are seen adorning the heads of some of the visitors from India are as long as three tablecloths put end to end.

Each turban is made up of 90 square feet of cloth, 30 feet long by three feet wide. If one of these dark-skinned men from India should lose his silk turban and try to duplicate it, he would have to pay at least $30 for it. But over in India he pays only about one-tenth this price.

The average person wonders why men in those burning countries wear a hat which covers the head as completely as the hood of an Eskimo. Both do for the same reason; one seeks protection from the heat and the other from cold. The heat of one's own body is far more endurable than the burning rays of India's sun.

A man wears a turban 30 feet long, while a small boy wears one from 10 to 15 feet long. But Indian youngsters have found that the cap of the American boy takes far less time to put on than his turban, and they are generally discarding the headgear of their fathers for that worn by America.

Records Show Rube Marquard One of the Most Dependable Among Brooklyn's Twirlers

Uncle Wilbert Robinson was having troubles enough with his once highly-touted pitching staff when Rube Marquard went and broke a bone in his leg, to be laid up for six weeks or more. Now a lot of fans would say that the absence of Marquard should not mean much, but a study of performances this season indicates the Rube should be rated higher than he is generally regarded.

Previous to leaving for the road tour, Rube twirled A-I ball, was the only Robin hurler to take the measure of the Giants and won his game in Boston most handsomely.

It is not entirely the fault of Rube that his record is not better than .500. His last game against the Reds was the only one all season in which he was roughly treated. His other two defeats were at the hands of the Cubs and Reds.

The Boston Braves are credited with 11 hits off Rube's delivery. These were garnered in the last innings of a game in which the Robins had a seven-run lead and Marquard was taking things easy.

SMILES FOR ALL

Affluent indifference.

"They say Mrs. Jones is awful rich."

"She must be. She's in a position where she doesn't care whether the rent of her flat is raised or not."

Excess baggage.

"A college graduate wants a job."

"We have a place open that he might fill," replied the self-made man. "How many degrees has he?"

"We pay in inverse ratio to the quantity of sheepskin an applicant carries. Start him at $15 a week."

Just so.

"I thought you said that little shrimp, Snipson, was a model husband?"

So he is.

"Why, he mistreats his 200-pound wife shamefully."

"I mean a model husband in the sense that he's a small imitation of the real thing."

No gift.

"I wonder," said the young man, "what place history will give me."

"History never gives any man a place," responded the older man. "You've got to earn it."

Complimented.

A newly appointed page in one of the county courts, after wide-eyed watching and open-eared listening to the plea to the jury of a lawyer noted for his great bellowing voice and wild gesticulations, asked the bailiff:

"Say, what's that feller doin', arguin' the case?"

Natural mistake.

"Is this a jungle scene?" asked the slightly intoxicated gentleman in a movie show.

"No," replied his friend. "You are looking at the picture through the foliage of a woman's hat."

Much to say.

"Mrs. Neighbor talked with my wife an hour today 'over the phone.'"

"Probably they hadn't talked together for some time."

"Not since yesterday."

Varieties of Soy Beans.

Of the more than 500 varieties of soy beans that have been tested by government experts only about 15 are handled commercially by seed men.

LIVE STOCK PROBLEMS SOLVED UNDER GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION OF MARKETS

One Step in the Marketing of Live Stock—Cattle at the Stock yards.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Live-stock markets of the United States are more completely organized, more efficiently conducted and better protected against loss to the producer than almost any other class of markets for farm products. However, like all other large enterprises, the live-stock markets and meat-packing centers have created problems of supervision or regulation because of their extensive ramifications and their direct influence upon the affairs of every producer and user of meats and the long list of animal by-products.

As a consequence of these conditions and in view of the war needs for meat and other animal products, the government found it necessary, about a year ago, to conserve the meat supply for the war period by exercising the war power conferred upon the president by the food control act, and to place the live-stock markets under supervision. A proclamation to that effect was issued by the president June 18, 1918, which provided that public stock yards and those handling or dealing in live stock in such yards should be required to operate under federal license on and after July 25, 1918. The administration of this service was placed under the secretary of agriculture, who designated the bureau of markets to enforce the regulations governing licenses.

Suggestions From Industry Made.

Before the formal issuance of the regulations a tentative draft was sent to all interested parties with a request for suggestions. Numerous conferences were held with each branch of the industry, including representatives of the national and local live stock exchanges. As a result many practical and useful suggestions were received and incorporated in the final draft of the regulations.

At that time the bureau of markets was represented in most of the large live-stock markets by its market-reporting organizations, and these representatives were at once instructed to perform additional duties as acting market supervisors. As rapidly as competent candidates could be found they were appointed and assigned to duty in the various live-stock markets, extending from Boston to Portland, Ore., and from Jacksonville to Los Angeles, including up to the present time some thirty offices. One hundred and twenty-one stock yards, 394 exclusive commission firms, 735 traders, 107 order buyers, 231 packer buyers and 1,051 concerns doing two or more classes of business have been licensed.

Many Improvements Made.

At a number of stock yards additional facilities and improved service have been installed through the activities of the market supervisors, according to government officials. New scales, pens and sorting alleys have been built, better feed has been furnished, dirty pens have been cleaned, additional yard men have been employed, arrangements for loading, unloading and moving stock through the yards have been amplified, a closer check on weights of feed has been made, more prompt service on terminal railroads has been furnished, and numerous other features of stock-yard service have been improved.

At one important market the time required to move stock trains from the end of the terminal to the unloading chutes, which formerly was from four to twenty-four hours, has been reduced to a period of from thirty-five minutes to two hours. The officials of the live stock exchange at that market say they had tried for 25 years to secure relief from terminal delays but without result. At another market the baskets formerly used for measuring corn were discarded and a new set of standard bushel baskets put in their place. Feed charges have been reduced in some cases on suggestion of the local market supervisors.

Supervisors as Umpires.

Besides the direct purpose for which the supervision service was established it has been utilized in other important matters. The department representatives were in a position to be of assistance to the representatives of the food and railroad administrations, exchanges, packers and stock yards during the critical days of the period of stabilized hog prices which this country has recently passed through. In this situation, as in many other matters, it was found that a neutral official representing no private or class interest could aid with a degree of satisfaction to all concerned which would have been impossible if left to the interested parties to work out. In other words, the government men have acted as umpires, and, as always happens, the game has been played more fairly and with less friction.

One of the most important benefits from the supervision service, according to officials of the bureau of markets, is the confidence-lacking for many years—that has been established in the minds of producers and shippers of live stock. They say there is no question that the tendency among farmers and stockmen to increase their stock-growing and feeding operations is due in large part to the knowledge that Uncle Sam is supervising the markets.

BETTER SHEEP CARE PAYS FLOCK OWNERS

Results Given of Demonstrations Held in Missouri.

Animals Given Highest-Priced Feed Returned Biggest Net Return on Investment, Most Important Point to Raiser.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Seven farm sheep demonstrations were held last year in Missouri—flock owners co-operating with sheep specialists of the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural college—the results of which, among other things, showed that it pays well to give sheep proper care. In two of the demonstrations, where grade animals were kept, one flock produced 108 per cent of lambs, which means that some of the ewes had twin lambs, while the other flock produced only 59 per cent of lambs, which means that a large number of the ewes did not produce any or that the lambs were too weak at birth to be saved. The wool from the first flock was sold at 66 cents a pound, while the wool from the second flock brought 64 cents a pound. The cost of feed of the first flock amounted to $7.05 for each animal, while the sheep of the second flock were fed at a cost of $13.34 each. The total cost, in the first flock amounted to $8.36 an animal, as compared to $2.57 for the second flock. But the net profit a head—the point which is most important to all sheep raisers—was $5.74 in the first flock as compared to $2.22 in the second flock, and the net return on the investment amounted to 21.77 per cent in the first flock as compared to 10.23 per cent in the second flock.

SCIENTIFIC FEEDING IS BEST

Waste Saved by Carefully Studying Composition of Feeds and Their Digestibility.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To supply food in the right proportion to meet the various requirements of the animal, without a waste of food nutrients, constitutes scientific feeding. It is by carefully studying the composition of feeding stuffs, the proportion in which they are digested by different animals and under different conditions, and the requirement of animals for the various food nutrients when at rest, at work, giving milk, producing wool, mutton, beef, pork, etc., that the principles of feeding have been worked out. In applying these principles in practice the cost and special adaptations of different feeding stuffs must, of course, be taken into account.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Weeds give way before sheep.

The fruit and truck farmer can well afford to have a span of horses to sell each year.

Raise two or more colts every year and help supply the farms of this country with teams.

Where pigs have access to good pasture most any grain or mill feed can be used through the summer months.

"I AM A PRISONER HERE."

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy young New Yorker, on a walking trip in New England near the Canadian border, is given a lift in an automobile by a mysterious and attractive girl bound for a house called Green Fancy. At Hart's tavern Barnes finds a stranded troupe of "barn-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Rushcroft is the star and Miss Thackeray the leading lady. He learns Green Fancy is a house of mystery. That night, Andrew Roon and his servant, guests at the tavern, are shot near Green Fancy. Barnes comes under suspicion and, staying to help clear up the double murder, he gets into the Green Fancy grounds; meets the mysterious girl, who gives him the cut direct, and is politely ejected by O'Dowd, an interesting adventurer. Enter at the tavern another man of mystery, Sprouse, "book agent." Barnes visits Green Fancy with the sheriff and stays to dinner. Enter still another mysterious personage, "Loeb," secretary to Curtis, owner of Green Fancy, who does not appear because of illness. Barnes again meets "Miss Cameron," the mysterious girl, who is a ravishing beauty in evening dress.

CHAPTER X.

The Prisoner of Green Fancy, and the Lament of Peter the Chauffeur.

He envied Mr. Rushcroft. The barn-stormer would have risen to the occasion without so much as the blinking of an eye. He did his best, however, and, despite his eagerness, managed to come off fairly well. Anyone out of earshot would have thought that he was uttering some trifling untruth instead of these words:

"You may trust me. I have suspected that something was wrong here."

"It is impossible to explain now," she said. "These people are not my friends. I have no one to turn to, in my predicament."

"Yes, you have," he broke in, and laughed rather boisterously for him. He felt that they were being watched in turn by every person in the room.

"Tonight—not an hour ago—I began to feel that I could call upon you for help. I began to relax. Something whispered to me that I was no longer utterly alone. Oh, you will never know what it is to have your heart lighten as mine—but I must control myself. We are not to waste words."

"You have only to command me, Miss Cameron. No more than a dozen words are necessary. Tell me how I can be of service to you."

"I shall try to communicate with you in some way—tomorrow. I beg of you, I implore you, do not desert me. If I can only be sure that you will—"

"You may depend on me, no matter what happens," said he, and, looking at her eyes, was bound forever.

"I have been thinking," she said. "Yesterday I made the discovery that I—that I am actually a prisoner here, Mr. Barnes. I—Smile! Say something silly!"

Together they laughed over the meaningless remark he made in response to her command.

"I am constantly watched. If I venture outside the house I am almost immediately joined by one of these men. You saw what happened yesterday. I am distracted."

"I will ask the authorities to step in and—"

"No! You are to do nothing of the kind. The authorities would never find me if they came here to search. (It was hard for him to smile at that.) It must be some other way. If I could steal out of the house—but that is impossible," she broke off with a catch in her voice.

"Suppose that I were to steal into the house," he said, a reckless light in his eyes.

"Oh, you could never succeed!"

"Well, I could try, couldn't I?" There was nothing funny in the remark, but they both leaned back and laughed heartily. "Leave it to me. Tell me where—"

"The place is guarded day and night. The stealthiest burglar in the world could not come within a stone's throw of the house."

"It is as bad as all that, we cannot afford to make any slips. You think you are in no immediate peril?"

"I am in no peril at all unless I bring it upon myself," she said significantly.

"Then a delay of a day or so will not matter," he said, frowning.

"Leave it to me. I will find a way."

"Be careful!" De Soto came lounging up behind them.

"Forgive me for interrupting, but I am under command from royal headquarters. Peter, the king of chauffeurs sends in word that the car is in an amiable mood and champing to be off. So seldom is it in good humor that he—"

"I'll be off at once," exclaimed Barnes, arising. "By Jove, it is half-past ten. I had no idea—good night, Miss Cameron."

He pressed her hand reassuringly and left her.

She had arisen and was standing, straight and slim by the corner of the fireplace, a confident smile on her lips.

"If you are to be long in the neighborhood, Mr. Barnes," said his hostess, "you must let us have you again."

"My stay is short, I fear. You have only to reveal the faintest sign that I may come, however, and I'll hop into my seven-league boots before you can utter Jack Robinson's Christian name."

Good night, Mrs. Van Dyke. I have said all to thank for a most delightful evening."

The car was waiting at the back of the house. O'Dowd walked out with Barnes, their arms linked—as on a former occasion, Barnes recalled.

"I'll ride out to the gate with you," said the Irishman. "It's a winding, devious route, the road takes through the trees."

"They came in time, after many 'hair-pins' and right angles, to the gate opening upon the highway. Peter got down from the seat to release the padlocked chain and throw open the gate."

O'Dowd leaned over to Barnes and lowered his voice.

"See here, Barnes, I'm no fool, and for that reason I've got sense enough to know that you're not either. I don't know what's in your mind, nor what you're trying to get into it if it isn't already there. But I'll say this to you, man: Don't let your imagination get the better of your common sense. That's all. Take the tip from me."

"I am not imagining anything, O'Dowd," said Barnes quietly. "What do you mean?"

"I mean just what I say. I'm giving you the tip for selfish reasons. If you make a bally-fool of yourself, I'll have to see you through the worst of it—and it's a job I don't relish. Ponder that, will ye, on the way home."

Barnes did ponder it on the way home. There was but one construction to put upon the remark: It was O'Dowd's way of letting him know that he could be depended upon for support if the worst came to pass.

O'Dowd evidently had not been deceived by the acting that masked the conversation on the couch. He knew that Miss Cameron had appealed to Barnes, and that the latter had promised to do everything in his power to help her.

Suspecting that this was the situation, and doubtless sacrificing his own private interests, he had uttered the vague but timely warning to Barnes. The significance of this warning grew under reflection. Barnes was not slow to appreciate the position in which O'Dowd voluntarily placed himself.

A word or a sign from him would be sufficient to bring disaster upon the Irishman who had risked his own safety in a few irrefragable words. The more he thought of it, the more fully convinced was he that there was nothing to fear from O'Dowd.

Peter drove slowly, carefully over the road down the mountain. Responding to a sudden impulse, Barnes lowered one of the side seats in the tonneau and moved closer to the driver.

"How long have you been driving for Mr. Curtis?"

"Ever since he came up here, more'n two years ago. Guess I'm going to get the G. B. fore long, though. Seems that he's gettin' a new car an' wants an expert machinist to take hold of it from the start. I was good enough to fiddle around with this second-hand pile o' junk an' the one he had last year, but I ain't qualified to handle this here machine he's expectin', so he says. I guess they've been some influence used against me, if the truth was known. This new secretary he's got can't stummick me."

"Why don't you see Mr. Curtis and demand—"

"See him?" snorted Peter. "Might as well try to see Napoleon Bonaparte. Didn't you know he was a sick man?"

"Certainly. But he isn't so ill that he can't attend to business, is he?"

"He sure is. Paralyzed, they say."

"What has Mr. Loeb against you, if I may ask?"

"Well, it's like this. I ain't in the habit o' bein' ordered around as if I was just nobody at all, so when he starts in to cuss me about somethin' a week or so ago, I ups and tells him I'll smash his head if he don't take it back. He takes it back all right, but the first thing I know I get a call-down from Mrs. Collier. Course I couldn't tell her what I told the sheeny, seein' as she's a female, so I took it like a lamb. Then they gits a feller up here to wash the car. My gosh, mister, the durned ole rattle-trap ain't with a bucket o' water all told. So I sends word in to Mr. Curtis that if she has to be washed, I'll wash her. Then's when I hears about the new car. Next day Mrs. Collier sends for me an' I go in. She says she guesses she'll try the new washer on the new machine when it comes, an' if I kee to stay on as washer in his place she'll be glad to have me. I says I'd like to have a word with Mr. Curtis, if she don't mind, an' she says Mr. Curtis ain't able to see no one. So I guess I'm goin' to be let out."

An idea was taking root in Barnes' brain, but it was too soon to consider it fixed.

"You say Mr. Loeb is new at his job?"

"Well, he's new up here. Mr. Curtis was down to New York all last winter bein' treated, you see. He didn't come up here till about five weeks ago. Loeb was workin' for him most of the winter, gittin' up a book or somethin', I hear. Mr. Curtis' mind is all right, I guess, even if his body ain't."

"I see. Mr. Loeb came up with him from New York?"

"Kerect. Him and Mr. O'Dowd and Mr. De Soto brought him up 'bout the last o' March. They was up here visitin' last spring an' the fall before. Mr. Curtis is very fond of both o' em."

"It seems to me that I have heard that his son married O'Dowd's sister."

"That's right. She's a widder now. Her husband was killed in the war between Turkey an' them other countries four or five years ago."

"Really?"

"Yep. Him and Mr. O'Dowd—his own brother-in-law, y' know—was fightin' on the side of the Boogarians and young Ashley Curtis was killed."

"Was this son Mr. Curtis' only child?"

"So far as I know. He left three little kids. They was all here with their mother just after the house was finished."

"They will probably come into this property when Mr. Curtis dies," said

Mr. Sprouse, who was sitting in the car.

"She's a Widder Now. Her Husband Was Killed in the War."

Barnes, keeping the excitement out of his voice.

"More'n likely."

"Was he very feeble when you saw him last?"

"I ain't seen him in more'n six months. He was fallin' then. That's why he went to the city."

"Oh, I see. You did not see him when he arrived the last of March?"

"I was visitin' my sister up in Hornville when he came back—unexpected-like. This feller Loeb says he wrote me to meet 'em at Spanish Falls but I never got the letter. Like as not the durn fool got the address wrong. I didn't know Mr. Curtis was home till I come back from my sister's three days later. I wouldn't 'a' had it happen for fifty dollars." Peter's tone was convincingly doleful.

"And he has been confined to his room ever since? Poor old fellow! It's hard, isn't it?"

"It sure is. Seems like he'll never be able to walk ag'in. I was talkin' to his nurse only the other day. He says it's a hopeless case."

"Fortunately his sister can be here with him."

"By gosh, she ain't nothin' like him," confided Peter. "She's all fuss an' feathers an' he is just as simple as you or me. Nothin' fluffy about him. I can tell ye." He sighed deeply. "I'm just as well pleased to go as not, he went on. 'Mrs. Collier's got a lot o' money, of her own, an' she's got high-falutin' New York ideas that don't seem to jibe with mine.'"

Long before they came to the turnpike, Barnes had reduced his hundred and one suppositions to the following concrete conclusion: Green Fancy was no longer in the hands of its original owner for the good and sufficient reason that Mr. Curtis was dead. The real master of the house was the man known as Loeb. Through O'Dowd he had leased the property from the widowed daughter-in-law, and had established himself there, surrounded by trustworthy henchmen, for the purpose of carrying out some dark and sinister project.

"I suppose Mrs. Collier has spent a great deal of time up here with her brother."

"First time she was ever here, so far as I know," said Peter, and Barnes promptly took up his weaving once more.

With one exception, he decided, the entire company at Green Fancy was involved in the conspiracy. The exception was Miss Cameron. It was quite clear to him that she had been misled or betrayed into her present position; that a trap had been set for her and she had walked into it blindly, trusting. This would seem to establish, beyond question, that her capture and detention was vital to the interests of the plotters; otherwise she would not have been lured to Green Fancy under the impression that she was to find herself among friends and supporters. Supporters! That word started a new train of thought. He could hardly wait for the story that was to fall from her lips.

"By the way, Peter, it has just occurred to me that I may be able to give you a job in case you are let out by Mr. Curtis. I can't say definitely until I have communicated with my sister, who has a summer home in the Berkshires."

"I'll be much obliged, sir. Course I won't say a word. Will I find you at the tavern if I get my walkin' papers soon?"

"Yes. Stop in to see me tomorrow if you happen to be passing."

Barnes said good night to the man and entered the tavern a few minutes later. Putnam Jones was behind the desk, and facing him was the little book agent.

"Hello, stranger," greeted the landlord. "Been sashaying in society, hey? Meet my friend Mr. Sprouse. Mr. Barnes. Sie-em. Sprouse—give him the Dickens!" Mr. Jones laughed loudly at his own jest.

Sprouse shook hands with his victim.

"I was just saying to our friend Jones here, Mr. Barnes, that you look like a more than ordinarily intelligent man and that if I had a chance to buzz with you for a quarter of an hour, I could present a proposition—"

"Sorry, Mr. Sprouse, but it is half-past eleven o'clock, and I am dog-tired. You will have to excuse me."

"Tomorrow morning will suit me," said Sprouse cheerfully. "If it suits you."

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Sprouse Abandons Literature at an Early Hour in the Morning.

After thrashing about in his bed for seven sleepless hours, Barnes arose and gloomily breakfasted alone. He was not discouraged over his failure to arrive at anything tangible in the shape of a plan of action. It was inconceivable that he should not be able in very short order to bring about the release of the fair guest of Green Fancy. There was not the slightest doubt in his mind that international affairs of considerable importance were involved and that the agents operating at Green Fancy were under definite orders.

Mr. Sprouse came into the dining room as he was taking his last swallow of coffee.

"Ah, good morning," was the bland little man's greeting. "Up with this lark, I see. Mind if I sit down here and have my eggs?" He pulled out a chair opposite Barnes and coolly sat down at the table.

"You can't sell me a set of Dickens at this hour of the day," said Barnes sourly. "Besides, I've finished my breakfast. Keep your seat." He stared to rise.

"Sit down," said Sprouse quietly. Something in the man's voice and manner struck Barnes as oddly compelling. He hesitated a second and then resumed his seat. "I've been investigating you, Mr. Barnes," said the little man, unsmilingly. "Don't get sore. There are a lot of things that you don't know, and one of them is that I don't sell books for a living. It's something of a side line with me." He leaned forward. "I shall be quite frank with you, sir. I am a secret service man. Yesterday I went through your effects upstairs, and last night I took the liberty of spying upon you, so to speak, while you were a guest at Green Fancy."

Sprouse plans things quite different from selling books, and takes Barnes into his confidence.

Answer Letters Promptly.

Punctuality is as important in social and business correspondence as it is in personal conduct. Men and women in business learn the importance of replying to letters as soon as received. For mail social notes such as invitations, wedding announcements or death notices should be acknowledged as soon as received and even friendly letters demand a reply within a week after their receipt, if true courtesy is observed.—Biddy Bye.

Mexican Sacrificial Stone.

The sacrificial stone was the stone on which human victims were sacrificed before the war god Huitzilopochtli, in the principal Aztec temple in Mexico. It was dug up near the site of the temple in 1701 and is now in the Mexican national museum. The stone is diamond-shaped, 8 3/8 feet in diameter and 2 1/2 feet thick. The sides are covered with elaborate sculpture.

FARM POULTRY

CARE FOR HEALTH OF FOWLS

Dropping Boards Should Be Cleaned Weekly—Isolate Birds With Colds—Keep Away Insects.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Clean the dropping boards at least once a week, and spray the roosts once a month with kerosene or some commercial preparation for killing mites. Have a good supply of sand or dry dirt on hand to use on the dropping boards.

If any of the birds develop colds,

A Clean House Promotes the Health of Poultry.

put as much potassium permanganate as will remain on the surface of a dime into a gallon of water and keep this material in their drinking water for several days, or until the symptoms of the colds have disappeared. Remove any sick birds from the flock as soon as noted and treat them in coops by themselves or kill and bury them if they are not worth treating.

Examine the pullets and hens for lice and dust thoroughly with a good insect powder or apply a mixture of equal parts of vasoline and mercuric or blue ointment, applying a piece about the size of a pea one inch below the vent of the bird, rubbing the mixture lightly on the skin. An application of this ointment two or three times a year will keep the fowls free from lice. Where insect powder is used, it should be applied three or four times a year, or oftener if the fowls become infested with lice. Provide a small box in the house, partly filled with dry road dust or fine dirt, in which the hens may dust themselves, thus helping to keep them free from lice.

It is an easy matter to overfeed fowls. Bear this in mind unless the fowls are on range.

Hens that are laying are not likely to accumulate fat; it is when they are not laying that they do so.

Give the fowls good dust and plenty of it. This is how they keep themselves free of vermin and well.

Hens of light breeds may be profitably kept for three seasons; those of the heavy breeds for two seasons.

Good layers are bred up and not fed up. All the feeding in the world cannot induce a naturally nonproductive hen to change her nature.

A trap nest is the one accurate way to tell whether you are keeping a paying flock, but the poultryman who keeps it must look after the nest in a proper way.

If you have made a failure of everything else, don't think the chicken business will prove to be a life saver. It requires not only brains, but an overplus of energy.

Chickens never wash, as many other birds do but cleanse themselves of insects by wallowing in soil. For this reason every poultry house should be provided with a dust box.

Five eggs out of every 100 are spoiled by being fertile. Producing infertile eggs does not require anything but the removal of the rooster from the flock after the need for hatching eggs is past.

Milk is no substitute for meat, for it is not sufficiently concentrated. It is impossible for fowls to drink enough of it to take the place of meat. When fed with animal food, milk performs excellent service.

Infertile eggs are more common among poor layers than good ones. Experiments at the Maine experiment station proved it nearly impossible to get fertile eggs from the hens that were the poorest layers.

The Northville Record.

Published by NEAL PRINTING CO.

An Independent Newspaper published every Friday morning by the Neal Printing Co., at Northville, Michigan, and entered at the Northville post-office as Second-Class matter.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., AUG. 1, 1919.

THE RETIRING PUBLISHER.

In retiring as publisher of the Northville Record after a period of more than 28 years' activity and more or less success in the newspaper and job printing business, I am not unmindful of the deep obligations I am under for the many kind acts, co-operation and patronage of the business-men of this village and adjoining towns and the public in general. All this will ever be a pleasant memory. Edwin Brown, my successor, is an experienced newspaper man and printer, and is of the progressive and energetic sort that will make a place for himself as a valued citizen of Northville.

For 28 years I have striven for Northville's progress and the benefit of its people. Of course mistakes have been made for even an editor is only human. Intentionally the newspaper has however striven to be impartial and fair in its news and editorial columns, and no personal grievance has ever been aired and the news and doings of all persons has been without bias and without prejudice.

J. W. Perkins, who has been associated with me so faithfully for a quarter of a century as foreman, and for some years as manager, will remain with Mr. Brown as will all the other employees and the new proprietor has leased for a term of years, the building so long occupied by the Record.

FROM WORKSHOP TO IDENTIFICATION IN "MILLIONAIRE ROW."

The name, "Tom Swan," is a familiar word not only to many Northville residents, but to people all over the country. His rise from a boy with no advantages, whose first shop work was the driving of tacks, to a place among the leading inventors and manufacturers of the United States furnishes material for one of the most impressive stories of America's self-made men. Tom Swan first appeared in Northville as a boy of 17, in charge of the trimming department of the Hirsch carriage shop, going from here to Flint to take the position of master mechanic in the Patterson Carriage factory. Full of practical inventive genius, he soon perfected a machine which completely revolutionized the carriage trimming industry. After placing his invention in all the leading carriage concerns in the United States, Mr. Swan went into business for himself in Flint, and when the carriage manufacturing industry had to give place to the automobile, he of course became interested in the latter, and will go down in motor history as the first manufacturer of automobile tops in America. On leaving Flint he went to Detroit, where he was one of the prior inventors of winter demountable tops. Afterward he went into business in Cleveland, where he was at the head of the Standard Top & Equipment Co. spoken of by the newspapers there as "one of the largest businesses of its kind in the country," also the Tom Swan Paint Shops, which had a big patronage.

The owner of three handsome automobiles, Mr. Swan once entered them all in a big parade of 1500 automobiles held in Cleveland, winning four first prizes and a whole lot of newspaper puffs for the taste and skill with which his machines were decorated as well as a great deal of unsolicited advertising for his business enterprises. During his 15 years in the automobile industry Mr. Swan owned and operated eight factories for the output of his own inventions. He retired from business seven years ago, and established a home for his mother himself in Highland Park. A man of exceptional enterprise and energy, however, would naturally find it very difficult to settle down to a life of leisure, so we find Mr. Swan again before the public as a dealer in real estate, to which occupation he brings all the qualities that won him success along other lines. He also brings the strongest of credentials and endorsements from the highest sources among them the Cleveland Board of Commerce—as to his personal and business integrity and fair dealing.

LOCAL GARDEN CLUB COMPLETED.

County Garden Club leader G. O. Stewart gives the Northville boys' and girls' Garden Club the compliment of being "probably the best in Wayne county or even in the eastern section of Michigan." Lapham, Mrs. Floyd Northrop and Mrs. Cass Chase, has been asked to prepare exhibits for both the state fair and the Northville fair.

GARRICK THEATRE, DETROIT.

The brilliant musical success "Take it From Me," coming direct to the Garrick Theatre for a week, beginning August 4th, from a five months' run at the 44th Street Theatre, New York, is a musical show every bit as snappy as it's name.

The story deals with the spectacular career of Tom Eggett, a reckless young spender, who, at the opening of a prologue, has just gone through a

$50,000 Legacy left him by a rich uncle.

The music has a distinct charm of novelty. Some of the most greatly applauded numbers are: "I Like to Linger in the Lingerie," "Take it From Me," "Explanations," "Camouflage," "Tanglefoot," "Tomorrow," and "The Call of the Cozy Little Home." Mr. Joseph M. Gates, who made the production, has supplied his authors with a capable company of young people including Fred Hildebrand, Douglas Leavitt, Arline Gardner, Helen Gardner, Helen Rafferty, James Dyrenforth, Egar Gardner, Alice Hill, Harry Burnham, William Balfour, Ruth Lockwood, Zoe Barnett and Dorothy Betts. The chorus is particularly well trained and pretty.

CARD OF THANKS—We sincerely thank our friends, Lady Macabees, and King's Daughters, for flowers and other kindnesses, also those who furnished automobiles for our father's funeral. Mrs. Roy Cole, Mrs. Frank Shafer, Robert Denton.

YOUR DOLLAR AND YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

A dollar will never grow unless planted where it has a chance any more than a seed will become a harvest if it is always kept in the envelope. Plant the seed and replant its successors and you will eventually reap a bountiful harvest. Invest the dollar where it has an opportunity and it will form a foundation of a fortune for you. Let me show you where the most fertile fields for your dollar are. The right real estate is the soundest investment there is, and Dearborn real estate is going to make money for real estate buyers as Highland Park did.

INVEST IN GEORGIA PARK, DEARBORN.

TOM SWAN SAYS:

You cannot go wrong if you follow Henry Ford—he has made more people money by their real estate investments than any other man in Detroit today. People who bought property in Highland Park six or eight years ago, have doubled and trebled their money long since. This is a condition which will prove true around his new Tractor plant only on a greater scale.

GOOD ADVICE—TOM SWAN.

He was a wise observer who said, "If you wish to grow to wealth and independence buy land against a growing city." Detroit will have a million population in 1920, its past and continuous growth has surprised the entire country. Thousands have gotten rich in the last ten years by real estate investments, and will continue to do so for the next ten years—for what was a farm, a few months ago is today built up and a part of our wonderful city. Dearborn is a part of our Greater Detroit today, and Georgia Park lots will double and treble in value within an incredible short time. You can purchase today for $495 to $695. A lot will be worth many dollars over present prices long before your lot is paid for, so buy early. It's better to take advice than to wish you had later. Georgia Park Subdivision offers an exceptional opportunity to those who are looking for quick returns on a small investment. This property, located as it is will build up rapidly and undoubtedly these lots will double in value within a very short time.

GOOD THINGS REQUIRE QUICK ACTION.

My advice to my friends in and around Northville is that if you are seeking large returns on your small investments, buy a lot in GEORGIA PARK, which will be in the very heart of Greater Dearborn. This property located as it is will build up rapidly and no doubt will double in value within a short time.

Act Now, To-Morrow May be Too Late.

Dearborn Investments

Georgia Park Subdivision

LOTS FROM $495 TO $695. TERMS: 10 PR CT. DEPOSIT; $10 PR MONTH.

Remember wealth comes only to those of action, decision and courage. To the man who takes advantage of an opportunity when he sees it. Three years ago a young man bought a few lots bordering Highland Park, near Fords, and today these are worth many times what he paid for them. The chances are as good today to make money on small investments in Dearborn as they were then. It isn't a matter of luck, but simply a matter of grit and alertness.

Why I am enthusiastic about Dearborn investments: I saw Flint grow from 6,000 to 120,000, Detroit from 100,000 to 1,000,000 and Cleveland from 100,000 to 800,000. Being a pioneer in the Auto industry, I spent 15 years in the very heart of its commercial activities in the above three cities and have seen them grow and penetrate into farm lands worth a hundred or two per acre and now worth thousands per lot. You have only to glance at the articles appearing in the press from time to time given out by the Ford interests, to learn of the future of Dearborn. There are thousands of men employed in the Fordson Tractor Plant and the Blast furnaces, who are compelled to travel to and from every section of Detroit because they cannot get homes in the section in which they are working. It is with this knowledge that their construction engineer predicts Dearborn future is very promising. Its surrounding virgin properties should in a very short time furnish sites for thousands of homes. Dearborn has everything necessary to make it one of the largest, most beautiful and popular Suburbs of Detroit.

After a careful investigation the following are a few of those who have made purchases in Georgia Park, and heartily endorse the same:

Northville Newslets.

Plymouth's Chautauqua dates are August 22-27.

C. C. Chadwick has been appointed Wayne County Agent in place of Samuel J. Lawrence.

The Northville Record closed Volume 49 last week. This is some "record" to be proud of—South Lyon Herald.

Milford is to give a reception and banquet to the returned soldiers and sailors of that village and vicinity on Labor day.

Birmingham, also, is to have outdoor religious services, following the example of Pontiac, where such meetings are being very successfully conducted.

Milford is to have concrete pavement on six of its principal streets, property owners being unanimous in voting in favor of the proposition. The approximate cost will be $120,000.

One of the many recommendations for the luscious huckleberry pie the season for which is now open, is that if a venturesome fly happens to get baked in it you eat him in blissful ignorance.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Gordon of Detroit, July 18 a 4½ pound son, Robert, Milford Times. Mrs. Gordon will be remembered as Miss Gertrude Wickens who was an English teacher in the Northville High School, several years ago.

There is no one thing that would benefit Farmington more than some kind of a business men's organization which nearly every town of any size already has. A good live commercial club would do wonders for the development of our village—Farmington Enterprise.

An old and supposedly steady family horse ran away twice in one day over at Rochester last week, with his 33-year-old owner, who had driven the animal over the same route every week day for the past 15 years. The horse got scared at an auto at that. He was probably jealous and had heard somebody say "the horse must go."

Among the recent real estate transfers made in Northville through the Lovewell Farms agency are the sales of the F. B. Shafer home on Mill street to A. Lowry of Detroit, the T. R. Carrington property on Grace Ave. to Miss Euphemia Marquis and the C. C. Sessions residence on Main street to E. E. Brown of Dundee, mentioned in last week's Record.

Detroit, July 25, 1919. Northville Record, Northville, Mich. Gentlemen: In 1918 the press of Michigan were largely responsible for the success of our Better Babies contest, by endeavoring to send at least one entry from their locality.

We desire to make our 1919 Better Babies contest surpass all previous records, and want you to help us by inducing not only one, but all the mothers of your acquaintance, whose children are of an eligible age, to enter. Entry cards and premium lists are herewith enclosed. Additional entry cards can be had by communicating with this office. Physicians who make a specialty of children's diseases, and a corps of trained nurses will be in charge, and every contestant will receive a $25 examination, the only charge made being $2 for an exhibitor's ticket, which entitles the holder to make an exhibit in any department, and is good for one admission each day of the fair.

This is the Fourth Annual Better Babies contest the Michigan State Fair has put on, and we want you to help us make it a success.

Thanking you, I beg to remain, Very truly yours, G. W. DICKINSON, Secretary-Manager.

Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. ## THEY BRING THE HEART OF OLD SCOTLAND TO THE CHAUTAUQUA

HARRY BENNETT "SCOTCH" ENTERTAINERS

"A Man's a Man For A That"—so sang the Scottish poet. But "That Man Bennett" is no ordinary man at all—and he's just as Scotch as the poet at that.

For Bennett and his Highlan' Lassies bring a bit of Old Scotland to the Chautauqua that every one will appreciate.

There's a subtle fascination to the gleam of the tartan and the swish of the kilts, and a delicate lilt to the characteristically Scotch melodies that is irresistible. Bennett himself is a splendid singer of the old Scotch ballads—yes and of the newer ones, too—and in addition he is a character artist of superior ability. Among other things his imitations of that other Scotch singer and laughter Harry Lauder, are a mighty fine bit of work.

One does not have to be Scotch to get a world of enjoyment out of the combination of music, color and costume that makes up the offering of these Highland entertainers. They will appear on the opening day of the Chautauqua.

Musical Treat Offered for Second Day of the Chautauqua

MOZART ORCHESTRAL LADIES

Beauty has many aspects—its appeal is to both the eye and the ear.

And there is no appeal that beauty knows, whether seen or heard, that is not compassed by the talented group of musical ladies who are featured on the second day of the Chautauqua.

The Mozart Orchestral Ladies are not only good to hear—but they are also good to see. As charming and winning a group of ladies as ever appeared on the Chautauqua platform their appearance heightened by the delightful costuming of many of their special numbers.

As for the music itself—critics have said that their playing at times has all the beauty and volume of a full ten piece orchestra.

They perform a variety of musical instruments—they sing beautifully—and in their ensemble as well as their solo numbers, duets and trios they give as satisfying a musical program, as ever appeared under the 'big top'.

Hawaiian Players and Singers Coming to the Chautauqua

The whole country is ukelele mad. The weird tinklings of that tropical instrument have done more than anything else to make America appreciate the wonderful beauty of Hawaii and things Hawaiian.

Mark Twain sensed the charm of Hawaiian music upon his first visit to the islands. He wrote later: "Their music, the most fascinating in the world, haunts me. I can still hear the pulsing of the surf at Waikiki, see the pluming palms drowsing by the shore, the garlanded crags and leaping cascades, and this music fills me with the spirit of its woodland solitudes."

Moana Vierra, who brings her group of Hawaiian Singers and Players for the fourth day of the Chautauqua, is a true exponent of America's belief in the beauty of everything that comes from the Romantic Islands.

For Miss Vierra is herself a wonderfully beautiful young woman, with a surprisingly gracious manner and an exceptionally beautiful voice.

Her quintette of Hawaiians sing and play the quaint alluring melodies of their island home—a type of music that has no counterpart in all the history of the art, and their contribution to the Chautauqua program bids fair to be one of the best liked of the entire week.

Word was received Tuesday by Northville friends of the Kneelands family, formerly of this village, of the death, by accident, of Clyde Kneelands, in Montana. The young man was a graduate of the N. H. S.
class of '09, with Jamie Dubuar, James Erwin, Albert Holmes and others.
His classmates here have been notified that the body is expected to arrive at the Kneelands home at Ypsilanti this Friday, when services will be held, as now planned. Mr. Kneelands leaves, besides his mother and family, a young

VILLAGE TO HONOR
RETURNED SERVICE MEN

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS BAN-QUET NEXT WEDNESDAY TO BE FOLLOWED BY FREE PICTURE SHOW AT ALSEIUM THEATRE.

That the village may have its share in publicity celebrating the return of our boys of Northville and vicinity from the service of their country, the members of the council have arranged to provide a free picture-show in the Alseium, following the Relief Corps banquet in Foresters' Hall. There will be no admission fee for anyone, but the company from the banquet will be seated before the general public is admitted, and children attending must be in charge of older persons. Also, children will not be allowed to fill up the seats while older people are standing, as was the case on Memorial day.

The veterans of the 60's and members of the Relief Corps are expected to attend both banquet and show without special personal invitation.
Arrangements are also being made by the council and the Corps for a free informal dance for an hour or two in Forester's hall after the entertainment at the theatre. The banquet will be served about seven o'clock or a little later, for the convenience of the boys who are employed out of town.

GET THOSE AUTO LICENSES.

So few people, comparatively, have yet secured their drivers' license that the Record once more emphasizes the importance of making applications IMMEDIATELY. There is sure to be a final rush, and a lot of people are certainly due to get left, and be put to great inconvenience after August 14. Early applicants receiving mail through the Northville office are now beginning to get returns, ten or a dozen licenses having been received here, to date.

BAZAARS of INDIA

The Bazaar of Lucknow.

THE day of the bazaar in India has long passed without hope for any return of its glory. Yet the visitor, in search of novelty, may still be fairly well satisfied with the results of the effort he must make to see what remains of the curious life in those places which are different from everything in this land; their nearest parallel being the French market in New Orleans, or a county fair, says the Christian Science-Monitor.

The stranger to India should take the precaution to secure the services of a guide, and physical protector of a thoroughly competent interpreter, one who is conversant with at least half a dozen of the numerous dialects spoken in India's commercial circles, and who—when it comes to buying or rejecting—knows at a glance "a hawk from a heronshaw" because, as a decidedly cynical Englishman said, "Nine-tenths of the stuff displayed in those Indian bazaars are spurious, and the remainder utterly worthless rubbish." An exaggeration, of course, yet it is a hard matter to find the few gems that may be there; and, at any rate, if the purchasable inanimate is lacking, the almost endless variety of the recurrent or animate human denizens is a rich reward for the fatiguing hours in a bazaar.

In Search of the Picturesque.—It is a great pity that civilization is so very inconsiderate toward the picturesque, the stranger, and the racially attractive (in spite of its dirt) which are so different from the life and the people we know and are so tired of, their inartistic dirt especially, that we often rush off to the antipodes to find something artistic and interesting. When we fail in our search, we are apt to abuse the writers who tell us—not what they really did see, but what they had predetermined they were to see.

It is not many years since that the bazaar at Delhi, to take at random one of the many, was truly a wonderful place. It occupied a large extent of ground, covered with all manner of ramshackle buildings, the ground floors of which were open stalls somewhat like those seen in the illustration accompanying this article. There were a few fairly broad thoroughfares which traversed the section from side to side in a serpentine course, but the really interesting and attractive shops were reached by many narrow, winding lanes, forming a veritable labyrinth, into which the unwary stranger who ventured alone was quickly lost; and when he betrayed his misfortune by act or word, was sure to be pounced upon by a flock of human vultures bent upon getting his last rupee in exchange for their wares, and heartless as to whether or not he got back to the meager civilization of Delhi's then wretched hotel.

In the main avenues there were—shall we say canals, or streams, or ditches? Well, there was something in whichever we call them that possessed the motion of liquid, and there was one, or perhaps two, rows of discouraged-looking trees. But in the narrow alleys there was no disguising the fact that those ditches were simply open drains, usually so torpid in their flow that the stench was almost overpowering, and the visitor from abroad wondered how any human being could breathe the fetid air all day and all night as complacently as did the bazaar denizens.

Occasional Bargains Found.—Nevertheless, those were the days when it was quite possible to pick up really rare and precious bargains for a song, plaques hammered out from brass or other metals, true gems of many kinds, jade ornaments deftly carved from jade in minute patterns, making them almost literally "worth their weight in gold," and many other treasures such as nowadays never reach a bazaar stall, for they are snapped up by professional dealers the moment they leave the hands of their original owners, whom want compels to sacrifice, and the dealer knows exactly where lives the rich Indian who pays, without much haggling, the top-most price.

The glory of the bazaar, like that of practically all that was picturesque, had given way to the vitally needed sanitary measures. But the bazaar still exists, although rather in what we would call open or general markets. Undoubtedly they continue to offer many temptations spread before the covetous eyes of the foreign visitor in such alluring ways that the end of purchasing is not reached even when the bottom of the purse is, because the dealers are only too glad to send their wares to the hotel to be paid for at master's or madam's convenience, and lots of other "rare bargains which cannot be duplicated."

Most Fascinating of Streets.—Mr. Curtis' "Modern India" says of Delhi's Chandni-Chauk, "Silver Street," that it is fairly called "the most picturesque and fascinating street in the world." Between the two rows of trees that grow along the center of its width of 75 feet there was formerly an aqueduct of clear, running water, that is now filled, and its banks are the great promenade for the city's gentry, both foreign residents and natives.

But the street is marvelous for the adeptness of the shopkeepers in "spotting" the stranger. Let a visitor from abroad appear, no matter how perfectly (he, at least, thinks) he has disguised himself in proper Indian garb, he is pounced upon by a swarm of shopkeepers, and besought to avail himself of the bargains that were never before offered, and never will again fall to his good fortune, until he either yields and secures, sometimes a true bargain, but often a lot of rubbish, or calls to his relief a friendly policeman, usually a swarthy Sikh. Sometimes it is most amusing when rival merchants grapple each other in their frantic efforts to secure the monopoly of a seemingly profitable customer, and the policeman's services are required to separate the belligerents.

Frak Fiddles.—The story of frak fiddles would fill a book. They have been made of tin, copper, iron, leather, glass and paper. They have assumed many wonderful shapes. Last year, in Los Angeles, a blind fiddler used to play on the corner with a fiddle that had no body. A tin horn did the work of the ordinary sound box of the violin. This was the invention of a local man. A certain corporation making phonograph records in the east uses an aluminum violin. This instrument is scientifically constructed and used by one of the greatest artists in making records of his solos for reproduction on talking machines. Even the highest priced old violins do not sound as one expects a violin to sound when it is reproduced on a record. This aluminum viola corrects that and the listeners sit entranced at the sweet tones of the record. The violin, itself, has a most disagreeable tone.—Los Angeles Times.

Steaming Paper.—Stripping wallpaper from the walls of a room is a tedious and unpleasant task. The following method has been found to do this work satisfactorily: Remove all furniture from the room and take up the floor covering; place in the middle of the room sort of kind of a portable stove with a big pan of water on top. Light the stove and close all the windows and doors; when the room becomes full of steam—it will soften the paste which has been used for sticking the paper on the wall. After an hour or more of the steaming it will be easy to remove the paper.

As Far as It Goes.—Some people's idea of efficiency is to pin a notice on the front door that the bell is out of order, instead of having it fixed.—Ohio State Journal.

We Need a Chamber of Agriculture As Well As a Chamber of Commerce

By H. A. WHEELER, President U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Unless we indulge in complete government paternalism, wherein the government becomes the original buying and selling agency of everything, we must conclude that the system of limited price fixing is as undesirable as it is un-American and should be now abandoned with all possible speed.

A word of suggestion with regard to unified marketing of natural productions, whether they be products of soil, mine or forest: Violent price fluctuations due to overproduction or imperfect marketing facilities cannot be in the public interest. Marketing associations of producers should be developed and made as legal for minerals or timber as for live stock, cereals and fruit.

Furthermore there should be a chamber of agriculture, even as there is a chamber of commerce. It should be a federation of all of the agricultural associations and farm bureaus. It would constitute a great factor in promoting efficiency and would enable industrial production and agricultural production through their respective chambers to work together, whereas we now often find these interests antagonistic because of the absence of means through which to co-operate.

This brings us to the question of the measure of co-operation which in the period of readjustment should be permitted under government supervision to all producers of commodities calculated for domestic consumption as well as for export.

The war taught us many lessons of value, and one of these was that the practical suspension of trust laws, during the war, when manufacturers of both war and nonwar commodities were brought into intimate association with each other under government supervision, proved of great value in producing economies in productive costs and in use of needed materials, while under the supervision of governmental boards or agencies prices were stabilized and the public interest served.

In the days of readjustment upon which we have entered there is great necessity for a continuation of these rights of association if competition is successfully met in foreign markets, or competition in the domestic market between home production and those that will presently come into this country from foreign producers.

The Insistent Demand of the People for a National Budget System

By PAUL M. WARBURG, Federal Reserve Board

The change caused by the war in the chart of the world is probably no more drastic than the transformation, born of the same cause, that has taken place in the human mind. Thoughts that were characterized as "utopian dreams" only four years ago are now being formulated into actual plans by highly practical men having both feet on the ground.

The national budget idea is a case in point. Sporadic efforts in its behalf have been made for decades. Both parties stand committed to it. But it could not take tangible form in the past because conditions and minds were not ripe for it.

Now they are. The war has done away with stagnation; it has given us a gigantic scope to our political, economic and social problems that on the one hand it has awakened from lethargy the people's mind that generally bothers very little about the intricacies of government, and on the other it has imbued our legislators with a realization of their grave responsibilities.

The problems of government are now so staggering that they are capable at least of overcoming the point of view of the local or personal interest. The angle of the ballistics must now make room for the larger national interest.

It is the conscious and subconscious recognition of these facts that in congress has brought about the crystallization of the thought that we must modernize our government's financial methods, and which on the part of the people has brought about an insistent demand for a national budget system.

George Bernard Shaw—Poverty is the greatest of evils and the worst of crimes. Our first duty—a duty to which every other consideration should be sacrificed—is not to be poor. "Poor but honest," "the respectable poor," and such phrases are as intolerable and as immoral as "drunken but amiable," "fraudulent but a good after-dinner speaker," "splendid criminal," or the like.

If Lessons of War Are Not Forgotten We Shall Soon Have Good Roads

By O. F. BERRY, Chicago Automobile Distributor

If the stern lessons we learned in months of war are not soon forgotten a national system of good and permanent roads will be enjoyed by the present generation of Americans.

It is nothing less than a twentieth-century wonder that the automobile has attained its present popularity when we consider the average type of road on which our 5,000,000 passenger cars must run.

To date the automobile has received no stimulus from roads, as in France and England, unless you except such private projects as the Lincoln and Dixie highways and the progressive work of a few states. The passenger car and the motor truck have developed in spite of roads.

Like many other automobile dealers, however, I am optimistic enough to believe a new era of permanent road building is upon us.

Not only did the government learn the economic value of permanent roads during the eighteen months we were at war, but there are indications that it is now cognizant of its obligation to build a system of interstate trunk lines that will serve as military highways.

France demonstrated the importance of good roads. For none but good roads, permanently built and systematically maintained, could have withstood the travel of the allied armies with their trains of heavy artillery and motor lorries. The American soldier knows this, and when he returns to civilian life he will demand similar highways in this country, no matter how apathetic he may have been on such issues before he put in the khaki of the Yankee doughboy.

STRICT SANITARY MEASURES ARE URGED FOR CHICKENS ATTACKED BY CHOLERA

All Fowls Exposed to Cholera Should Be Quarantined.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Fowl cholera—a poultry disease rather rare in this country except in the far western States—demands fire department speed in combating it. Drug treatment or home remedies only waste the time of the poultryman and allow the malady to spread. Strict sanitary measures must be applied at once to control this infectious disease of poultry which spreads rapidly through the flock with high mortality. Turkeys, ducks, geese, pigeons, cage birds and chickens are all susceptible to fowl cholera.

Cholera is transmitted from flock to flock by means of sick or recently recovered fowl which have been placed in the flock without being subjected to a period of quarantine. The disease is also spread by wild birds or by persons, animals, or utensils which have been on infected premises. A yellowish coloration of the droppings is an early indication of the disease. Soon diarrhea develops, considerable fever is shown, and the bird loses its lively appearance, separates itself from the rest of the flock and appears dull, dejected, and sleepy. It no longer searches for food, but sits with head drawn down to the body or turned backward and resting in the feathers about the wing. The plumage soon loses its brilliancy, the wings droop, the appetite is diminished and the thirst increased; the comb and wattles may be a dark bluish red from engorgement with poorly oxygenated blood, or they may be pale and bloodless on account of the congestion of the internal organs, especially the liver.

Symptoms of Stricken Birds.—The affected birds soon become very weak, drowsy, and often sleep so soundly during the last day or two of their lives that it is difficult to arouse them. If obliged to move they stagger forward for a few steps in an uncertain manner and with dragging wings. The crop is generally distended with food and apparently paralyzed. The weight and strength of the bird rapidly diminishes, it breathes with difficulty, sits with beak open, and the breathing may be heard at some distance.

Finally, the weakness is such that the beak is rested on the ground, and a little later the bird dies. In very acute cases no symptoms are seen, the birds may be found dead under the roosts or they may fall at the feeding trough and die in a few minutes. Cholera may destroy the greater part of a flock in a week and then disappear, or may linger for months, only occasionally killing a bird. The time between exposure to the contagion and appearance of symptoms is from two to five days, while the duration of the disease is from 24 hours to 10 days. Most characteristic changes seen after death are red spots on the surface of the heart, which give it the appearance of having been sprinkled with blood, congestion of the intestines, enlargement of the liver, and swelling of the spleen.

Stopping Infection's Spread.

Since treatment of the affected birds is almost futile, the aim should be to prevent so far as possible the spread of infection. The first fowls showing acute feverish symptoms should be destroyed by a method guarding against contamination of the premises by infected blood. The carcasses should be burned or deeply buried. The healthy fowls should be moved to new quarters, if possible, and carefully watched for signs of disease. Houses and runs should be thoroughly cleaned frequently and disinfected with a 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid, a 2 per cent solution of compound cresol, or a reliable coal-tar disinfectant in proper dilution. The drinking water may be made antiseptic by adding one dram of permanganate of potash to each gallon. This serves to prevent the spread of disease through the water and also is a convenient means of administering an internal antiseptic. Prevention and treatment to control fowl cholera by means of antiserum and vaccine have not proved sufficiently satisfactory to warrant recommendation of the use of such preparations.

HOW EGG PRODUCERS CAN REDUCE LOSSES

Co-operation Will Help Save $45,000,000 Worth of Food.

Organizations Urged to Prevent Carelessness Which Permits Mongrel Stock, Dirty Nests and Other Undesirable Conditions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If egg producers would work together to reduce egg losses much of the $45,000,000 toll which results annually from careless handling could be eliminated. Egg circles, the name given to associations of egg producers, have been urged by the United States department of agriculture for a number of years. The work which these organizations can do now to save food is of the utmost importance.

Egg circles watch the egg crop, not only in its handling, but in its production. They strive to prevent the carelessness which permits mongrel stock, dirty nests, stolen nests of broody hens, unconfined males, late-maturing pullets, and other undesirable conditions to exist on egg farms. Every effort is made to reduce the high percentage of small, cracked, dirty, stale, heated and rotten eggs. Many marketing problems are also overcome.

One very successful organization of egg producers has a large incubator house of 12,000 egg capacity where early chicks are produced for the members at a low cost. This is done in order to obtain early maturing pullets, thus securing eggs during the fall when eggs usually are scarce. The company also has a receiving room for eggs where they are candled, sorted to weight—about 24 ounces to the dozen—packed in cartons and shipped on contract orders. Their eggs are all guaranteed to be according to grade, they advertise the fancy grades on their cartons and cases, and market prices are paid to the members. Twice a year dividends are paid each member in proportion to the amount of eggs marketed through the company and the time of year eggs are brought in, a larger dividend being paid per dozen for eggs brought in during the fall and winter than for those received during the spring and summer, estimated by months. A regular trade is established with discriminating consumers, with city clubs, with the best class hotels and restaurants, and with fancy grocers for a supply each day or week.

The reputation that is established enables the association to fix its prices at several cents a dozen above the regular market quotations, as fancy trade is willing to pay a premium for a guaranteed article. Most egg circles buy chicken feed and other poultry supplies in quantities for their members. While at first the number of eggs to be marketed may not warrant a central station with a manager to inspect, grade and market the whole product, the aim should be to develop to that state.

Specialists of the department of agriculture will aid producers in organizing community egg circles and also in problems of production and marketing. In Farmers' Bulletin 636 suggestions and forms are offered as aids in organizing and managing such co-operative associations.

POULTRY NOTES

Keep the chicks' quarters clean.

The flavor of the egg is influenced by feed.

Hens cannot carry parasites and chicks suffer from too strong sun.

Young chicks should not be fed until they are about forty-eight hours old.

The rooster does not help egg production—he merely fertilizes the germ of the egg.

The shell of the egg being porous, it will quickly absorb odors and these will affect the flavor.

The sex of eggs cannot be foretold, not one of the old-time theories in this particular having been proved.

Excessive heat will take the life and vigor out of a little chick, and will stunt the growing young stock to such an extent that they will never mature to full size and weight.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

The Detroit police department is enforcing the motor rules and laws in that city to an extent not before attempted. The speed law breakers are being hauled into court with much regularity. It isn't safe to travel over 20 miles per hour on the Boulevard or any other street and on Woodward avenue 15 to 17 is much safer from the policeman's view point. Driving by stopped street cars is also another point that is being closely watched. The police department says this is all very important in view of the increased number of motor accidents during the past four months. Copies of the Detroit traffic regulations may be obtained at the Northville Auto club's office, Record office.

Better get your application in for your Auto Driver's license. On and after August 14 it is unlawful to drive without one. You'll get pinched sure if you have neglected to obtain the required ticket. Licenses are now being mailed out. Those who have already applied should receive their permit by August 4th or not later than August 10. If not received by that time make inquiry.

WANTS TO KNOW ABOUT DOES.

Northville, Mich., July 28, 1919. Editor Record. Sir: I would like to ask through your valued paper what the law is in regard to owners of female dogs letting them run loose.

On the Northside of town there are several running at large and a decent woman can hardly walk along the streets without being annoyed by their fighting and yells at night. If the owners of these dogs have not the common decency to shut them up there will be trouble.

Yours respectfully,

A WOMAN

We would say in reply to the above that the state law explicitly requires that all dogs running at large shall wear tags, procured from the township clerk, with their license number thereon and that any and all dogs found without such tags shall be destroyed by the township authorities.

NO SWIVEL CHAIR FOR FORD'S SON

STAYED AT HOME DURING WAR TO HELP IN PLANT—REFUSED TO TAKE UNIFORM.

FATHER WAS RESPONSIBLE

Declares He Told Edsel That War
Work in Factory Needed Him—
Would Not Accept Safety
First Commission.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Henry Ford, during the last hour of his seven days on the witness stand, took occasion to claim full responsibility for his son, Edsel Ford's, claim for exemption from the selective draft. "He wanted to enlist," said Mr. Ford, "but I told him that he could do more good where he was. He was offered several commissions which would have permitted him to wear a uniform and stay right in the factory, but he wouldn't accept them."

Having made their decision, it was shown, both Mr. Ford and his son refused to camouflage it behind a swivel chair commission carrying boots and spurs.

This subject, the introduction of which has been awaited ever since the trial opened, did not develop along the lines which had been generally expected. Mr. Ford's inclination to shoulder full responsibility, his statement that his son was absolutely essential to the war work being done in the factory and his revelation of the fact that Edsel Ford turned down several offers of a commission, disarmed criticism. The charges, spread during a political campaign, and recently repeated on the floor of the United States senate, to the effect that the young president of the Ford Motor company had shirked his duty were so fully refuted that Tribune counsel did not pursue the point.

It was the first time that a full explanation of the facts in connection with Edsel Ford's war work has been made public and it was easily the feature of the eleventh week of the trial.

Henry Ford spent seven days on the witness stand and of this time he gave less than two hours to his own lawyers. As long as counsel for the Tribune was hammering him Mr. Ford sat quietly in the witness chair answering the constant fire of questions with great patience. But the instant his own lawyers took him in hand, his attitude changed. He became self-conscious and diffident. He would not accept the efforts of his counsel to provide him with an opportunity to reveal the full extent of his patriotic work during the war, his humanitarian views, or his advanced ideas of the relations which should exist between capital and labor.

"It is all in the records," said Mr. Ford. "I have told it all here once. He avoided, with care, anything that verged on boasting. He would not even describe the extent of the war work which his factories did and when record breaking performances in the production of munitions was mentioned he declared, 'we did all we could, let it go at that. I want to forget all about it. I feel just as the soldiers feel. I don't want to talk about my war work'."

The witness did, however, after being pressed, explain that his son had bought out the minority stockholders of the Ford Motor company because these interests had insisted on Mr. Ford squeezing the last dollar out of the public, the government, the workers and the product. He wanted to cut those from his associates, he said, so that he could carry out his ideas of the distribution of profits to employees through increased wages and to the public through lower prices. It was either buy or sell and Mr. Ford had considered selling and organizing a new company. His son, however, took up the task of buying out the minority stockholders and succeeded, despite the general belief in the financial world that this stock could not be purchased.

One of the most interesting developments of Mr. Ford's testimony came out when it was testified that the only legislation he has ever sought was that for the protection of birds. Other men of millions, it was shown, keep lobbyists in the national and state capitol to urge and work for special privileges, but the one favor that Mr. Ford has ever asked from the lawmakers had nothing to do with his own interests. It was a curious bit of testimony and left a deep impression on the audience in the court chamber.

The subject was a result of questions concerning Mr. Ford's list of friends. He named Thomas Edison and John Burroughs, the naturalist, as his best friends outside of his immediate associates.

Litigation in which Mr. Ford has been interested was another subject of interest. It was shown that when the automobile business was in the first years of its growth all manufacturers of motor cars were compelled to pay tribute to what was known as the Selden patent on internal combustion engines. Mr. Ford fought this patent for seven years and won and by his victory freed the entire industry from its shackles and made possible the wonderful growth which has marked the last few years.
