LOCAL ROAD WORK PROGRESSING FINELY

The outlook for completion of the work that is going to transform Northville's often muddy principal business streets into smooth, paved thoroughfares directly connecting with Detroit is very encouraging, even to those pessimistic folks who have been prophesying that the job would not be finished before cold weather should put a stop to the activities. The steam shovels finished on Rogers street and the Fishery road Tuesday forenoon and were immediately set to hitting out their big mouthfuls from the north end of Center street and the D. U. R. roadbed on Main street. The cement laying department of the road commission forces began business on Plymouth avenue at the Northville Outer Belt drive last Saturday and rapid progress is being made. It was necessary to close the Plymouth road for a few days and detour by way of the road extending south from Center street, but the highway is now open to light traffic. Barring, unlooked-for hindrances everything looks very favorable for the completion of the entire job in good time, under the efficient supervision of the veteran roadmaster, Pat McKinlough of Romulus.

The work of the steam shovels is a never-ending source of interest to spectators, especially the one handled by George Shook, who is said to be the most expert manipulator of these big mechanical "animals" in Wayne county. And it seems to be a good plan to "let George do it," as on-lookers say that George Mosher, who runs the other machine, is fast getting into the expert class also. Eural Clark, who has charge of the grading operations, is proving himself a worthy son of his experienced father in the excellent way in which he handles that part of the business.

OSCAR HARGER DIED TUESDAY

Oscar S. Harger, another of Northville's well-known older residents, passed away Tuesday, August 19, at his home on Main street, after a comparatively brief illness with heart trouble. Mr. Harger's usually excellent health had been somewhat unpaired since last spring because of an accident caused by driving a spirited horse, but he had not given up his ordinary activities, which were numerous and varied for one of his advanced age. Of Mr. Harger it can be truly said that he was "84 years young." In his interest in the affairs of life and the events of his times, Mr. Harger never grew old. His mentality was that of a man of half his years, and his physical appearance also defied time to an unusual degree.

Mr. Harger was born in Western New York, but came to Michigan when a babe one year old, with his parents, who settled on a farm in Farmington township where he spent more than half of his life, and which he inherited and still owned at the time of his death. The farm has always retained its name, "Briar Hill," given by Mr. Harger's parents in those days of more than three quarters of a century ago, when the naming of a farm was scarcely ever heard of.

Mr. Harger retired from active work on the farm when in middle life, although he has always continued its supervision. The family moved to Detroit, where they lived for some years, when they purchased a home in Northville, occupying it for 14 years. They returned about five years ago to Detroit, where Mrs. Harger died two years later. Mr. Harger and daughter came back to this place last December to make their home among the many friends they had won during their previous residence here. Mr. Harger is survived by one son, Attorney John D. Harger of Detroit, and the daughter, Elizabeth of this place.

Funeral services will be held from the home this Friday afternoon at two o'clock, with Rev. Edward V. Belles as the officiating clergyman, and Ray Van Valkenburg as soloist. Interment will be made in the Harger family burial ground in the North Farmington cemetery.

THE NORTHVILLE-HOWELL BALL GAME POSTPONED UNTIL SATURDAY AT 2:00.

The game of ball that was to take place last Saturday between Northville Independents and Howell Tigers was postponed and will be played here Saturday at 2:00 o'clock. The rain up until 2 o'clock Saturday last put the grounds in an unfit condition for this big game.

Manager Sawyer of Howell phoned to Northville that they were ready for the battle if the grounds were in condition and would be at our village within an hour and a half, but the game had to be called off for the day. It not only disappointed the players from Howell but about one hundred ball fans who were to accompany the team down from that little city.

The visiting club seems to be very enthusiastic about playing and the manager suggested playing the game on neutral grounds at Milford for a purse of $400 instead of playing at Northville for $200. This manager Harry German would not listen to but insisted that this game be played at Northville first and it would be time enough to talk about another game if both teams were not satisfied.

Automobiles from Redford, Farmington, Plymouth, South Lyon and other places were driven to Northville last Saturday that in spite of the rain and people were disappointed but said they will be around again next Saturday and would speculate a little on the Northville team.

McArthur the ex-Tiger Detroit player and Brown, also of Detroit, will umpire the game.

Your home represents a considerable investment. You would use the greatest care in buying stocks with the money your home cost, or in selecting a bank in which to deposit it. You would want maximum protection. Consider the weather. Sun, rain, snow, heat, cold, frost—all these destroy property. And property which begins to decay also loses in value. ## Northville State Savings Bank

What 4% Means.

THE NORTHVILLE STATE SAVINGS BANK OF NORTHVILLE pays 4% interest, compounded twice a year. What does 4% compound interest mean? It means that if the interest is allowed to remain on deposit with the principal sum, interest will be paid on interest—that is, $1.00 placed at 4% compound interest, will double itself in a little less than eighteen years through the interest additions.

To secure the best results it is necessary to set aside weekly or monthly a fixed sum from your income, and deposit it to your account. The tables here given show what may be accomplished by this method. The interest earnings equal from 20 to 50% of the money deposited during the periods shown. That is, if monthly deposits of $5 are made for twenty years, the total sum would be $1,200. With 4% compound interest, it will amount to $1,833.50; the earnings added equaling $633.50, or 52% of the money actually saved.

HOW YOUR SAVINGS GROW

We Are Responsible for All Damages to Foreigners in Mexico Since 1910

By SENATOR A. B. FALL—Debate in Congress

The Calvo doctrine, as acknowledged and accepted by Latin-American countries, provides simply this, in effect:

No government shall be responsible for damages to any of its citizens occurring during a revolution, or by virtue of a riot.

No citizen of a foreign country shall be entitled to collect damages against this government except as a citizen of this country would be entitled to collect damages. Under the Calvo doctrine, as it was presented at The Hague tribunal and refused, we could not have interfered diplomatically in Mexico to recover damages for any of our citizens, either for death or otherwise.

In 1913, prior to the recognition of Carranza when he proclaimed himself first chief of the revolutionary forces, and when he was seeking recognition, he issued a decree known as the Calvo decree, and in that decree he pledged himself to us, because he filed it in the state department of the United States government, that immediately upon the success of his revolution he would go back to the year 1910, to the inception of the Madero revolution, and that he would, by a joint commission, ascertain all damages done to any foreigner or to his property up to the time that he founded his government substantially in the City of Mexico, no matter from what source, whether by revolution or by riot; in other words, that he would not do as they had continuously done, put in a defense that the damage had occurred by revolution.

But the decree of 1915, which the president sent to the senate, as the foundation of his recognition of Carranza, repudiated the decree of 1913 and adopted the Calvo rule and we recognized him upon it; and what is the consequence today? That we are bound by every rule not only of morality but of international law to every government under the sun for every dollar of damage done to any foreigner in the Republic of Mexico from the time the revolution occurred in 1910 down to date, because the secretary of state and the president of the United States called upon France and Germany and Great Britain to yield to us in handling Mexican affairs, as was announced by the state department, and they yielded.

When they yielded Carranza's decree agreeing to pay damages, was in full force and effect. We handled Mexican affairs, and when we recognized Carranza we recognized him under an absolute repudiation of that decree.

Have we not placed the Monroe doctrine at least in pawn to every foreign government?

"World Statesmanship Will Be Sorely Tried in the Next Few Years"

By ROBERT LANSING, U. S. Secretary of State

Undoubtedly there is a great danger in the world today. Western civilization is still dazed by the shock of four and a half years of destruction. Industry and commerce are not yet restored. All of Europe is impoverished; parts of it are starving. Its whole political fiber has been shot through.

World statesmanship will be sorely tried in the next few years. Two things are essential: first an alert, intelligent, interested public opinion; and second co-operation of the nations.

The former is needed both as a check on any sinister purposes that may crop up and as the great support for common action. The second is essential, unless the nations are to return to a selfish particularism which can only breed the most dangerous dispute.

The peace conference has been history's greatest instance of a unified world statesmanship directing the moral and material resources of the world's family of nations. To allow the spirit behind it to disintegrate at this moment of emergency, when united action is imperative, would be fatal to all the hopes of permanent peace with which we entered the war.

If it is true that one nation can destroy the equilibrium of all it is all the more true that each nation is bound by its own law of self-preservation to co-operate with the others to check troubles before they get their headway.

So I come home pleased but not complacent with the outcome of the past six months and hopeful but not in the least unmindful of the problems of the next few years.

World Is Forced Into New Activity for the Protection of All Children

By JULIA LATHROP, Children's Bureau

It is not too much to say that the world is being forced willy nilly to a new activity for the protection of all children—not a few, not favored children, but all children. War losses of population and of wealth force Europe. A decent self-respect would force the United States even if it were not plain that the nations which are to maintain leadership will be those which most wisely and generously equip the children of today and tomorrow.

First, as to illiteracy, the United States is perhaps ninth among civilized nations; that is, Australia, the United Kingdom, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Germany all have a larger proportion of the population who can read and write than has the United States.

Second, as to maternal mortality, the United States is fourteenth in the list of civilized nations, judged by the proportion of deaths of mothers from causes incident to child-bearing. That is, in thirteen countries the mother's life is safer than it is in the United States.

Third, the United States is eleventh among civilized countries, tested by its infant mortality rate, a rate whose searching value as a sign of social wellbeing is axiomatic.

Considering the exemption this country enjoys from the poverty and hunger and devastation of Europe, it is not less than our reasonable service to make the United States stand first in every phase of child welfare in any list of countries. The war has left us no sectional questions. We have only the issue of a nation's welfare.

The ATHENS of SOUTH AMERICA

Primat Cathedral of Colombia in Bogotá.

THE name with which Licenciado Gonzalo Jiménez de Quesada and his warring hosts christened the Andean plateau was "Santa Fe." To that nobleman nothing seemed more fitting than to give to the land he had discovered the name of his birthplace—that classic Santa Fe founded upon royal command of Ferdinand and Isabella opposite the splendid Granada, to vex the multitude of heretic Mohammedans who aroused the jealousy and resentment of the Spanish by their fiestas and tournaments, the valor of their sons, the Moorish beauty of their women, and the unequalled romance of their arched windows, stone lacework, and balconies adorned by expert goldsmiths.

And what a thrill the conquistador must have felt, yet what homesickness must have been awakened within him as he gazed upon a plain watched over by two somber hills, so like that of his own land, with the Moorish Granada guarding the Castilian city, writes W. F. Anzola Samper in the Bulletin of the Pan American Union. But the Valley of Castles (Valle de los Alcázares), the Teusaquillo or recreation spot of Zipe de Bacata, its rightful possessor, was renamed by the new lords in mail and gorget. Bucata fled, abandoning his dominion, to die in the heart of the forest, never knowing that after centuries justice should be paid him; that the "very noble and loyal city" should bear his name, slightly modified, as decreed by the Emperor Charles V. in 1530. On December 3, 1548, it was given a coat of arms portraying a black eagle on a gold field, with an open pomegranate in each claw, and bordered by golden branches on a blue field.

Old and New Are Mingled. Bogotá, the intellectual and cultured capital city, molder of thought, home of savants and thinkers, is a metropolis which, while offering to the tourist no startling display of New York or Parisian skyscrapers, boulevards or Broadway, claims attention by reason of the gifts with which nature endowed it. Spring is there eternal; the climate is ideal; the fertility of the soil surrounding is extraordinary. Bogotá conserves vestiges of her colonial period. Over the portals of rambling old houses which defied the ages are to be seen coats of arms. The century-old churches, venerable relics of the past, guard beneath panels of gold and costly wood collections of masterly paintings; Byzantine cornices of arabesque designs about the granite pilasters which support arches, and under dais of wrought gold and silver the choir lofts are to be seen; long spiral staircases, massive towers, and belfry spires stand out against the clear sky, just as they did centuries ago.

On the other hand, the tendency toward twentieth century building is irresistible, and the most up-to-date talent is displayed in the erection of luxurious homes or public buildings in Bogotá today. The national capital situated on the southern side of the Plaza de Bolívar, resembles the Church of the Madeleine in Paris, and is considered one of the best stone edifices in South America. Along the entire western side of the plaza extends buildings uniformly of pure French style, and along the northern side modern buildings occupied by banks and commercial houses, the eastern side, is occupied by the cathedral, a massive structure, the towers of which rise 30 meters, and some few old houses.

In the heart of the plaza there is a small park which attracts notice principally because of the statue of Bolívar the Liberator, which rises upon its marble pedestal in the center of the square, being one of the finest works of the Italian sculptor, Tenerani. From the Plaza de Bolívar the main thoroughfares extend in every direction, almost all paved with asphalt, and kept in excellent condition by the municipality. Calle Real, the principal business street, and Florian street are the most bustling of the city. The former, a wide, thoroughfare, merges into Republic avenue (Avenida de la República), flanked by modern buildings and traversed by electric cars.

Called the Athens of the South. The Colombian capital has long been the patron of science. The astronomical observatory, National Library, the academies, museums and universities form a group of institutions which maintain the right of Bogotá to be considered the "Athens of the South," the name with which a European scholar christened her.

The observatory owes its existence to the efforts of the naturalist, José Celestino Mutiz. It is octagonal in form, 2,636 meters above sea level; hence, is one of the highest of the world and possesses a valuable set of instruments for taking observations. The academies were established by devotees of science and art. The Language academy recently took possession of a new building. The Museum of Bogotá contains objects of beauty and considerable historic worth. A Museum of Natural History founded by the Christian Brotherhood (Hermanos Cristianos) possess exhaustive collections.

The universities happily own adequate buildings. Recently the building to be used for anatomic lecture halls was completed, equipped much like the corresponding building of the University of Paris. Public instruction is becoming constantly more widely diffused and Bogotá is the center of secondary schools supported by the government.

Cultured and Prosperous. Bogotá, by the refinement of its inhabitants and the luxury in evidence, might be taken for a European city. Culture is marked; foreign news is received promptly; desirable features of Paris and London are imitated to stimulate progress. Unfortunately owing to the extreme narrowness of the streets, many of the architectural features of the city cannot be appreciated; nevertheless, upon contemplating the constant progress of the capital and its development, one is forced to the conclusion that Bogotá will become an imperial city in the western world, the heart of the plateau which extends 16 leagues from north to south and 3 from east to west.

Economically Bogotá is on a sound footing, being a commercial and banking center of constantly growing importance. There are five banks of large capital, the American Mercantile bank (Banco Mercantil Americano) having been established last year, and at present the establishment of another is under consideration. Several insurance companies contribute to the success of financial enterprises. Large export houses have founded headquarters there and importation is conducted on rather a large scale. Foreign credit companies in the United States and Europe are added factors in Bogotá's development. Industry also is being exploited. Thread and textile industries compete with foreign establishments in the production of fabrics and cloth. Stock raising is increasing considerably on the plain, the strains having been carefully selected from stock brought from England, and the wool market is plentiful.

HOME TOWN HELPS

FREE PLANS FOR DWELLINGS

United States Housing Corporation's Scheme to Assist Own-Your-Own-Home Committees.

The fact that plans for dwellings, prepared by the United States Housing Corporation during war time for various government projects, are to be made available for general public use by the own-your-own-home section, information and education service, United States department of labor, will serve to stimulate the interest of women in all parts of the country in this movement.

Several types of houses have been selected, and the plans for these will be given to own-your-own-home committees which are now carrying on campaigns in more than 40 cities. These plans are for dwellings that will best serve the needs of average families. Beauty and utility have been combined in the most practical manner, and the plans are capable of many variations. It is explained that the purpose is not to interfere in any way with the work of local architects by thus providing government plans, free of cost, but it is expected that when the estimates in widely separated states are compiled the information will be of value to prospective home owners, while it will afford comparisons of the varying cost of construction in many parts of the United States. The employment of local architects is advocated.

Requests that local own-your-own-home campaigns be started without delay were sent out by the United States department of labor to 400 cities. Letters were addressed to mayors, labor organizations and the clergy, as well as to clubs and other associations that have expressed willingness to aid the campaigns. While there are now 40 cities conducting well-advanced own-your-own-home campaigns, nearly 200 others have started the work of stimulating building.

SEES NEED FOR ZONING LAW

Writer Points Out Why Exclusively Residence Districts Should Be Afforded Proper Protection.

Chicago is asking the Illinois legislature for a zoning law—a law that will permit cities in Illinois to say what part shall be reserved for residence purposes. This is a thing that every city in the country has some interest in because it is a step in the right direction, asserts the Davenport Times. There must be factory and commercial districts, of course, and there must also be residence districts. But it isn't fair to a man who has developed a residence property, beautified the grounds, and arranged the house to suit him, to have all of sudden, some sort of business concern established next door, to the detriment of his home. Every city in the country has numerous examples of just that sort of thing. Restricting residence property is going to become more and more the thing as the years go by. We have a few districts in Davenport that are thus protected, but there are many other districts where the people who own homes have no protection at all from the possibility of undesirable construction and business enterprises on the lots next door.

Building a House for Sunshine.

One of the problems of modern city planning is to get sunshine. For example, to quote a Canadian city planner propounding what almost sounds like a conundrum: "How shall a detached building be constructed and oriented so that not only the exterior wall surfaces, but also the surface of the ground around them shall have the direct rays of the sun for as long a time as possible on December 21?" The problem, it appears, can be worked out, and has been, in the case of at least one town, in which each house, and even each building in the business section, is a solution of this technical problem. It appears also that the way not to do it is to follow the long established custom of many builders in the north temperate zone and square the walls of the building with the points of the compass. The town that gets all possible sunlight has no north and south or east and west streets, and the walls of its structures stand at various angles with the weather vane, if there is one, on the church steeple.

Own a Home.

The ownership of homes makes for the spirit of co-operation for the good of the community, based upon full appreciation of the fact that no man's real success can be built upon the failure of those around him. Of the lasting impressions that one gains upon going to a new town are the character of its inhabitants and the character of the houses that they live in.

Roller-Skating in Business.

Roller-skating, once indulged in only for pleasure, has now become an important accomplishment in many business houses. Several large mail-order houses in both Chicago and New York require office boys to know how to get about on skates, giving them a carefully worked-out route between the different departments.

Each Had a Wife. His Jivver was out of gas. And it was out of gas on a country road seven miles from town, and the rain was falling in sheets.

Leaving his wife in the protection of the machine he dashed out into the middle of the road, holding high in the air an undersized umbrella that it might protect his new, neatly pressed spring suit, while he shouted to a motorist whose headlight came dimly through the rain:

"Stop! I've got my wife!" "So have I!" interrupted the motorist who had gas, and his car sped on without letup.

And then it did rain.—Kansas City Star.

Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezone costs only a few cents.

With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of foot.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!

Not Always Appropriate.

During the fifth Liberty loan campaign all country newspapers were asked to insert between their articles some such quotation as "Help Finish the Job." Instead of the customary dash, the quotations were put in regardless of the substance of the article. Sometimes embarrassing results followed as when an article was headed, "Esteemed Woman of the City Is Dead," and below the obituary was "Help Finish the Job."

A lot of men will criticize a peroxide blonde and then turn around to straighten their toupees.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued.

"I will put my coat over your head. Here is a little electric torch. Don't flash it until I am sure the coat is arranged so that you can do so without a gleam of light getting out from under." He pressed the torch and a bit of closely folded paper in the other's hand and carefully draped the coat over his head.

Barnes read: "Thank God! I was afraid you would wait until tomorrow night. Then it would have been too late. I must get away tonight but I cannot leave—I dare not leave without something that is concealed in another part of the house. I do not know how to secure it. My door is locked from the outside. What am I to do? I would rather die than to go away without it."

Hastily he wrote: "If you do not come at once, we will force our way into the house and fight it out with them all. My friend is coming up the stairs. Let him enter the window. Tell him where to go and he will do the rest. He is a miracle man. Nothing is impossible to him. If he does not return in ten minutes, I shall follow."

There was a response to this. The head reappeared in the window, but no word came down.

Sprouse whispered: "I am going up. Stay here. If you hear a commotion in the house, run for it. Don't wait for me. I'll probably be done for."

"I'll do just as I please about running," said Barnes, and there was a deep thrill in his whisper. "Good luck. God help you if they catch you."

"Not even he could help me then. Good-by. I'll do what I can to induce her to drop out of the window if anything goes wrong with me downstairs."

A moment later he was silently scaling the wall of the house, feeling his way carefully, testing every precarious foothold, dragging himself painfully upwards by means of the most uncanny, animal-like strength and stealth.

Barnes could not recall drawing a single breath from the instant the man left his side until the faintly luminous square above his head was obliterated by the black of his body as it wriggled over the ledge.

We will follow Sprouse. When he crawled through the window and stood erect inside the room, he found himself confronted by a tall, shadowy figure, standing half-way between him and the door.

He advanced a step or two and uttered a soft hiss of warning.

"Not a sound," he whispered, drawing still nearer. "I have come four thousand miles to help you, countess. This is not the time or place to explain. We haven't a moment to waste. I need only say that I have been sent from Paris by persons you know to aid you in delivering the crown jewels into the custody of your country's minister in Paris. We must act swiftly. Tell me where they are. I will get them."

"Not a sound," he whispered.

"Who are you?" she whispered tensely.

"My name is Theodore Sprouse. I have been loaned to your embassy by my own government. I beg of you do not ask questions now. Tell me where the prince sleeps, how I may get to his room."

"You know that he is the prince?"

"And that you are his cousin."

She was silent for a moment. "Not only is it impossible for you to enter his room but it is equally impossible for you to get out of this one except by the way you entered. If I thought there was the slightest chance for you to—"

"Let me be the judge of that, countess. Where is his room?"

"The last to the right as you leave this door—at the extreme end of the corridor. Across the hall from his room you will see an open door. A man sits in there all night long, keeping watch. You could not approach Prince Ugo's door without being seen by that watcher."

"You said in your note to Barnes that there—er—something was in Curtis' study."

"The prince sleeps in Mr. Curtis' room. The study adjoins it, and can only be entered from the bedroom. There is no other door. What are you doing?"

"I am going to take a peep over the transom, first of all. If the coast is clear, I shall take a little stroll down the hall. Do not be alarmed. I will come back—with the things we both want. Pardon me." He sat down on the edge of the bed and removed his shoes. She watched him as if fascinated while he opened the bosom of his soft shirt and stuffed the wet shoes inside.

Then he said: "You are not dressed for flight. May I suggest that while I am outside you slip on a dark skirt and coat? You cannot go far in that dressing gown. It would be in shreds before you had gone a hundred feet through the brush. If I do not return to this room inside of fifteen minutes, open the door and hear sounds of a struggle, crawl through the window and go down the vines. Barnes will look out for you."

"You must not fail, Theodore Sprouse," she whispered. "I must regain the jewels and the state papers. I cannot go without."

"I shall do my best," he said simply.

Silently he drew a chair to the door, mounted it, and, drawing himself up by his hands, poked his head through the open transom. An instant later he was on the floor again. She heard him inserting a key in the lock. Almost before she could realize that it had actually happened, the door opened slowly, cautiously, and his thin, wiry figure slid through what seemed to her no more than a crack. As softly the door was closed.

For a long time she stood, dazed and unbelieving, in the center of the room, staring at the door. She held her breath, listening for the sound that was so sure to come—and the shot, perhaps! A prayer formed on her lips and went voicelessly up to God.

Suddenly she roused herself from the stupefaction that held her. With feverish haste she snatched up garments from the chair on which she had carefully placed them in anticipation of the emergency that now presented itself. A blouse (which she neglected to button), a short skirt of some dark material, a jacket, and a pair of stout walking shoes (which she failed to lace), completed the swift transformation. As she glided to the window, she jammed the pins into a small black hat of felt. Then she peered over the ledge.

She started back, stifling a cry with her hands. A man's head had almost come in contact with her own as she leaned out. A man's hand reached over and grasped the inner ledge of the casement, and then a man's face was dimly revealed to her startled gaze.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Flight, a Stone-Cutter's Shed, and a Voice Outside.

"Why have you come up here?" She came swiftly to his side.

"Thank the Lord, I made it," he whispered, breathlessly. "I came up because there was nowhere else to go. I thought I heard voices—a man and a woman speaking. They seemed to be quite close to me. Don't be alarmed, Miss Cameron. I am confident that I can—"

"And now that you are here, trapped as I am, what do you propose to do? You cannot escape. Go back before it is too late."

"Is Sprouse—where is he?"

"He is somewhere in the house. I was to wait until he—Oh, Mr. Barnes, I—I am terrified. You will never know the—"

"Trust him," he said. "He is a marvel. We'll be safely out of here in a little while, and then it will all look simple to you. You are ready to go? Good! Sit down, do! If he doesn't return in a minute or two, I'll take a look about the house myself. I don't intend to desert him. I know this floor pretty well, and the lower one. The stairs are—"

"But the stairway is closed at the bottom by a solid steel curtain. It is made to look like a panel in the wall. You are not to venture outside this room, Mr. Barnes. I forbid it. You—"

"How did Sprouse get out? You said your door was locked."

"He had a key. I do not know where he obtained—"

"Skeleton key, such as burglars use. By Jove, what a wonderful burglar he would make! Courage, Miss Cameron! He will be here soon. Then comes the real adventure—my part of it. I didn't come here tonight to get any flashy old crown jewels. I came to take you out of—"

"You—you know about the crown jewels?" she murmured. Her body seemed to stiffen. "Then you know who I am?"

"No. You will tell me tomorrow." "Yes, yes—tomorrow," she whispered.

For some time there was silence. Both were listening intently for sounds in the hall. She leaned closer to whisper in his ear. Their shoulders touched. He wondered if she experienced the same delightful thrill that ran through his body. She told him of the man who watched across the hall from the room supposed to be occupied by Loeb the secretary, and of Sprouse's incomprehensible daring.

"Where is Mr. Curtis?" he asked. "Her breath fanned his cheek, her lips were close to his ear. 'There is no Mr. Curtis here. He died four months ago in Florida.'"

"I suspected as much." He did not press her for further revelations. Sprouse should be here by this time. I must go out there and see if he requires any—"

She clutched his arm frantically. "You shall do nothing of the kind. You shall not—"

"Sh—What do you take me for, Miss Cameron? He may be sorely in need of help. Do you think that I would leave him to God knows what sort of fate?"

"But he said positively that I was to go in case he did not return in—fifteen minutes," she begged. "He may have been cut off and was compelled to escape from another—"

"Just the same, I've got to see what has become of—"

"No! No!" She arose with him, dragging at his arm. "Do not be foolish. You are not skilled at—"

"There is only one way to stop me, Miss Cameron. If you will come with me now—"

"But I must know whether he succeeded, the—"

"Then let me go. I will find out whether he has succeeded."

He was rougher than he realized in wrenching his arm free. She uttered a low moan and covered her face with her hands. Undeterred, he crossed to the door. His hand was on the knob when a door slammed violently somewhere in a distant part of the house.

A hoarse shout of alarm rang out, and then the rush of heavy feet over thickly carpeted floors.

Barnes acted with lightning swiftness. He sprang to the open window, half-carrying, half-dragging the girl with him.

"Now for it!" he whispered. "Not a second to lose. Climb upon my back, quick, and hang on for dear life." He had scrambled through the window and was lying flat across the sill.

"Hurry! Don't be afraid. I am strong enough to carry you if the vines do their part."

With surprising alacrity and sureness she crawled out beside him and then over upon his broad back, clasping her arms around his neck. Holding to the ledge with one hand he felt for and clutched the thick vine with the other. Slowly he slid his body off of the sill and swung free by one arm. An instant later he found the lattice with the other hand and the hurried descent began.

His feet touched the ground. In the twinkling of an eye he picked her up in his arms and bolted across the little grass plot into the shrubbery. She did not utter a sound.

Presently he set her down. His breath was gone, his strength exhausted.

"Can you—manage to—walk a little way?" he gasped. "Give me your hand, and follow as close to my heels as you can. Better that I should bump into things than you."

Shouts were now heard; and shrill blasts on a police whistle split the air. On they stumbled, blindly, recklessly. He spared her many an injury by taking it himself. More than once she murmured sympathy when he crashed into a tree or floundered over a log. Utterly at sea, he was now guessing at the course they were taking. Whether their frantic dash was leading them toward the Tavern, or whether they were circling back to Green Fancy, he knew not. Panting, he forged onward.

At last she cried out, quaveringly: "Oh, I—I can go no farther! Can't we—is it not safe to stop for a moment? My breath is—"

"God bless you, yes," he exclaimed, and came to an abrupt stop. She leaned heavily against him, gasping for breath. "I haven't the faintest idea where we are, but we must be some distance from the house. We will rest a few minutes and then take it easier, more cautiously. I am sorry, but it was the only thing to do, rough as it was."

"I know, I understand. I am not complaining, Mr. Barnes. You will find me ready and strong and—"

"Let me think. I must try to get my bearings. Good Lord, I wish Sprouse were here. He can see in the dark. We are off the path, that's sure."

"Do you think he escaped?"

"I am sure of it. Those whistles were sounding the alarm. He may come this way. The chances are that your flight has not been discovered. Do not feel like going out. We must beat them to the Tavern. They—"

"I am all right now," she said, and they were off again. Barnes now picked his way carefully and with the greatest caution. He could only pray that he was going in the right direction.

An hour—but what seemed thrice as long—passed and they had not come to the edge of the forest. Her feet were beginning to drag; he could tell that by the effort she made to keep up with him. From time to time he paused to allow her to rest.

"You are plucky," he once said to her.

"I am afraid I could not be so plucky if you were not so strong," she sighed, and he loved the tired, whimsical little twist she put into her reply.

To his dismay they came abruptly upon a region abounding in huge rocks. This was new territory to him. His heart sank.

"By Jove, I—I believe we are further away from the road than when we started. We must have been going up the slope instead of down."

"In any case, Mr. Barnes," she murmured, "we have found something to sit down upon."

He chuckled. "If you can be as cheerful as all that, we shall miss the cushions," he said, and for the first time, risked a flash of the electric torch. The survey was brief. He led her forward a few paces to a flat boulder, and there they seated themselves.

"I wonder where we are," she said. "I am inclined to suspect that we are above Green Fancy, but a long way off to the right of it. Admitting that to be the case, I am afraid to retrace our steps. The Lord only knows what we might blunder into."

"I think the only sensible thing to do, Mr. Barnes, is to make ourselves as snug and comfortable as we can and wait for the first signs of daybreak."

He scowled—and was glad that it was too dark for her to see his face. He wondered if she fully appreciated what would happen to him if the pursuers came upon him in this forbidding spot. He could almost picture his body lying there among the rocks and rotting, while she—well, she would merely go back to Green Fancy.

"I fear you do not realize the extreme gravity of the situation. We must get out of these woods if I have to carry you in my arms."

"I shall try to keep going," she said quickly. "Forgive me if I seemed to falter a little. I—I am ready to go on when you say the word."

"You poor girl! Hang it all, perhaps you are right and not I. Sit still and I will reconnoiter a bit. If I can find a place where we can hide among these rocks, we'll stay here till the sky begins to lighten. Sit—"

"No! I shall not let you leave me for a second. Where you go, I go." She struggled to her feet, suppressing a groan, and thrust a determined arm through his.

"That's worth remembering," said he, and whether it was a muscular necessity or an emotional exaction that caused his arm to tighten on hers none save he would ever know.

After a few minutes prowling among the rocks they came to the face of what subsequently proved to be a sheer wall of stone. He flashed the light, and, with an exclamation, started back. Not six feet ahead of them the earth seemed to end; a yawning black gulf lay beyond. Apparently they were on the very edge of a cliff.

"Good Lord, that was a close call," he gasped. He explained in a few words and then, commanding her to stand perfectly still, dropped to the ground and carefully felt his way forward. Again he flashed the light. In an instant he understood. They were in the brink of a shallow quarry.

BETTY'S SHIP

By SADIE M. STULL

"Nary a sign o' yer ship today, Miss Betty? Rough sailin' fer any craft, but then it don't allus take a sunny sky ter bring th' most precious cargo inter port."

Betty turned to the speaker with a rare smile. "I was not looking for my ship, Cap'n Andy. I was playing the game you chide me so much about—'make-believe.' I was just about to start on a journey of dreams—to the world beyond the harbor—the 'wonderland' that calls to me with the golden voice of Opportunity."

Cap'n Andy shook his grizzled head. "Avast, there, little shipmate! Ye must git sich notions out yer purty head! Mind, I'm not scolding, dearie," he added in a gentler tone. "Onct I felt th' same es ye do about this snug harbor."

"I was th' crazy ter see yer boasted 'wonderland' I run erway ter N' York an' signed with th' fast ship that needed a cabin boy." A reminiscent gleam brightened the speaker's faded blue eyes. "She was a chipper bar none, an' I got my fill o' adventure; but will ye believe me now, Miss Betty, it wasn't er bit like I'd pictured it? The kindly old voice ended in a chuckle. "Ev'ry bloomin' air castle went up in smoke at th' first port o' call, an' by th' time th' old ship tacked fer home th' last o' my store o' day dreams hed gone by th' board."

They had been walking along the wind-swept beach. Now they turned into the lane leading to Betty's humble home.

As he opened the creaking gate the cap'n said: "Jist let th' old anchor hold ye a while longer, dearie. Yer ship is due soon—I feel it in my weather bones. No, I won't lay to fer mess, but tell yer granddadder keep th' forecastle light burnin'."

Betty watched the sturdy old figure out of sight ere she entered the weather-beaten cottage. As she passed the living room door she called a cheery greeting to her grandfather. Her steps lagged as she entered the kitchen. Then, recalling the cap'n's parting words, she blithely set about preparing the simple evening meal.

Such was the influence of the genial mariner's optimistic spirit. It had always been so, from the day he told the wide-eyed child, her idolized father, would never come back from the "Banks."

The same sad day saw the birth of a series of wonderful sea yarns, more fascinating than any fairy tale. Spun to lighten the child's grief they made an unexpected and lasting impression. Some eight years later, Betty, on the threshold of beautiful womanhood, announced she had decided to become a writer and would specialize in Cap'n Andy's sea stories.

With the payment check for her first story, Betty bought a warm sweater for her ailing grandfather and a "high-liner" cargo for Cap'n Andy's pipe. Her own young heart craved roses, but her practical eye selected a hardy geranium.

Betty's glance turned now to that beloved plant—"Meow—meow ow!" Through the open window shot a small furry object, which like an ebony streak, disappeared cellarward.

"Why, Tommy Black—what's the matter?"

What, indeed? The distant rumble which preceded the kitten's hasty entrance, became a roar with a drumming accompaniment Betty had never heard with thunder.

She approached the window with bated breath. A sharp cry escaped her, as she beheld a huge flying monster cleaving the mist. Even as she looked, the great man-bird dove sideways—then down—to a shuddering stop in the wet sands.

heedless of wind and rain, Betty sped from the house.

To the helmeted and begoggled pilot who struggled from the wrecked machine she seemed a veritable water-sprite. As he removed his goggles Betty saw a thin stream of crimson oozing from his temple.

"It's nothing," he said with a crooked smile. "Just bumped an upright when the old girl smashed. Now, if there's a telephone station anywhere in this neck of sand—I'd like to call the nearest naval station—"

"Come to the house and Cap'n Andy will send your message from the post-office." Her strong young arms guided him across the uneven sands to the welcome ease of her grandfather's sleepy-hollow chair. Then with cool, deft fingers she bandaged the ugly cut. All the while her heart beat with a new rhythmic joy that almost frightened her.

She did not really what a pretty picture she made in her simple gingham dress—her sole ornament a quaint shell necklace fashioned by Cap'n Andy. The young airman's keen eyes also noted the carefully tended geranium and he secretly vowed to wear that particular flower on his next flight. Would it not prove a sacred talisman if accompanied by the fair donor's prayers?

He was interrupted in his romantic musings by the entrance of Cap'n Andy. The gravity with which the bluff old mariner received his instructions was belied by the twinkle in his eye.

And as he trudged through the mud to the postoffice his thoughts kept pace with his steps. "The little girl's ship lies come in—yes I knowed it would, but—" with an audible chuckle. "I'll be shanghaied if I ever thought it would come by air!"

The KITCHEN CABINET

It has been said that a man is known by absorption, meaning that we can tell the quality and type of any one's life by the things he allows to absorb him.

DISHES FROM CORN AND EDIBLE GRAINS.

The coarser foods are quite necessary in our diet and should be used freely at all times of the year.

Hominy Gema.—Four one cupful of scalded milk over half a cupful of cornmeal, add one-fourth of a cupful of cooked hominy, a tablespoonful of sugar, the same of shortening; mix well, cool and add yolk beaten thick and the white stiff. Sift in one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a little salt; beat well and bake in hot buttered gem pans.

Hominy and Pecan Croquettes.—Boil a half cupful of hominy with a half-teaspoonful of salt in two cupfuls of water five minutes; then put into a double boiler and cook two hours or over night in a double boiler. Add two tablespoonfuls of shortening, half a cupful of chopped pecans and a teaspoonful of scraped onion. Cool and shape in cylinders. Beat one egg lightly, add two tablespoonfuls of cold water, roll croquettes in crumbs and egg, then in crumbs again and fry in deep fat. This makes one dozen croquettes.

Scotch Oat Crackers.—Put two cupfuls of rolled oats through the meat grinder, add one-fourth of a cupful each of milk and molasses, one and a half tablespoonfuls of fat, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth of a cupful of raisins or nuts cut in bits. Mix well, roll very thin and cut in fancy shapes. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Oatmeal Tomato Soup.—Take half a can of tomatoes, one-third of a cupful of oatmeal, two cupfuls of water, one tablespoonful of sugar, half a small onion, pepper and salt to taste, a bit of bay leaf and two tablespoonfuls of peanut butter. Cook one hour; rub through a strainer, add seasoning, if needed, and serve hot.

Corn Flour Griddle Cakes.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of sour milk, the same of corn flour, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt and one well-beaten egg. Beat well with a wire whisk and bake on a hot griddle.

It would be narrowness to suppose that an artist can only care for the impressions of those who know the methods of art as well as its effects. Art works for all whom it can touch.—Elliot.

BALANCING THE MEAL.

We hear much about well-balanced meals these days and it is the desire of every home-keeper to have her meals well balanced, appetizing as well as attractive. When we speak of balancing a meal we mean giving all the food principals in their proper proportion in each menu, or getting the amounts in during the day; if lacking in one meal, make it up in the next, so that the day's meals will give the proper balance.

The amount of food to be taken by individuals differs so greatly that there is no fixed rule that one may follow. Age, climate, physical condition as well as occupation are important factors in determining the amount to serve, but it is safe to say that in the average dietary we may cut out one-third of the food we daily consume, masticate the two-thirds twice as long as is the habit and great benefit will be noted in one's health. This advice is only given to the well padded individual; those who are thin are so because even if good eaters, the food is not assimilated.

When serving a heavy main dish with the accompanying vegetable or two, the dessert should be light, one easy of digestion and with little bulk. If the main part of the meal is light, not preceded by a cream soup, let the dessert be a richer one.

The generous use of milk in desserts will give a better balance to the dinner in which only a small amount of meat is served, while at meatless meals more milk may be used as well as fish, cheese, beans and peas in order that there may be no lack of protein (the tissue building body) in the diet.

Coffee Custard.—Scald two cupfuls of milk with two tablespoonfuls of finely ground coffee, and strain. Beat three eggs lightly, add one-quarter cupful of sugar, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt and one-quarter teaspoonful of vanilla. Strain into buttered molds and bake in a pan of hot water. Unmold and serve well chilled with whipped cream.

Grape Juice Cream.—Take one cupful of grape juice, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, sugar to sweeten and a pint of thin cream. Freeze by stirring in the ice cream freezer. When this is carefully made it is the most beautiful watermelon pink and tastes as good as it looks.

The Northville Record.

E. E. BROWN, Publisher.

An Independent Newspaper published every Friday morning at Northville, Michigan, and entered at the Northville post-office as Second-Class matter.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., AUG. 22, 1919.

HAS EARNED HIS VACATION.

After 23 years' faithful service in the composing room of the Record, J. W. Perkins, accompanied by his sons, also employees of the plant, will leave Saturday for a three weeks' vacation in the shape of an auto trip to the home of his daughter in St. Cloud, Minn. This is, practically Mr. Perkins' first vacation in all these years. The working force of the paper will of course be reduced to a "short-handed" state, and for this reason it is urgently requested that all contributions of whatever nature—advertising, local news, job work, correspondence, etc.—be sent in as early in the week as possible during this time of the absence of nearly all the working staff. If The Record's patrons and friends will bear this in mind we will do our best to keep the paper as nearly up to its normal standard as will be possible under the existing circumstances.

The selection of Mr. Cass Benton of this place as chairman of the state board of equalization is a distinct honor to Northville and many friends here will join with The Record in extending congratulations. Mr. Benton is regarded as one of the best informed men in the state on matters affecting taxation and the assessment of property and this honor is richly deserved.

Northville's new Chamber of Commerce is a pretty lively organization for one of its age and we may expect some big accomplishments. Do not find fault if you cannot see any immediate evidence of the work the organization is striving to do. The men at the head of the new organization are alive to Northville's needs and will strive to give a good account of themselves.

Just be patient and within a few weeks Northville streets will be the pride of the community and the envy of our neighbors. The construction work is progressing freely and the pouring of cement was started last week. We will soon be out of the mud for keeps.

Mr. Verduan and son doing your share to bring trade to Northville and to induce the people of this section to trade at home. The column of The Record will cheer you a splendid opportunity to do your part.

Thanks. We are informed that fertilizer will be lower in price this fall. Well we may be compelled to eat the stuff as bread and food.

NORTHVILLE MAN HONORED.

Village Mayor C. C. Yerkes has received notice of his election to the presidency of the board of trustees of the Pontiac State Hospital a position of both honor and responsibility. Mr. Yerkes has been an active member of the board for some years and by placing himself at the head of that body the other trustees have indicated their high opinion of his ability to promote the best interests of this important state institution.

Miss Vahel Bolton of Port Huron spent last week with Miss Kathleen Safford.

LIBRARY RECEIVES VALUABLE GIFT.

A most acceptable gift has been recently received by the Ladies' Library Association from Alexander Milne, who has presented the institution with something over fifty volumes from the library of his grandfather the late Dr. John M. Swift. The collection consists entirely of works for the reference department and includes standard histories, biographies, relations and practical books, some of which complete partial sets already in the library. The trustees and other members of the association who are especially interested in the higher educational value of the library to the community greatly appreciate the thoughtfulness which prompted Mr. Milne's valuable gift.

A special meeting of the village council was called for Wednesday night to consider what action to take with reference to the request of the P. U. R. to defer the paving of Main street until 1921 but it was impossible to secure a quorum. Some action might be taken and taken quick.

Week-end visitors at the F. L. Hendryx home were Miss Lily Marquette and Miss Turner and Meyers, Archie Aves and Russell Brockmeyer all from Detroit.

F. G. Terrill and family spent Tuesday at the farm with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Terrill and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Curtiss of Grand Rapids, who have been visiting there for several days.

M. E. Atchison's farm agency reports the following transfers of real estate for the past week: The Frank Welland farm consisting of 120 acres, on the Dexter road one mile from Ann Arbor, sold to Mr. A. C. Austin of Monroe. Also the Mrs. Ellen Donegan farm of 60 acres 1/2 mile west of Whitmore Lake road to Joseph Balazs and wife of Salem.

It is a real pleasure to meet Harry S. German, whom the writer knew over in Monroe county. Mr. German is a true sportsman and enjoys sport for sports' sake, and whether he is directing a base ball team or conducting a race meet, he plays the game fairly and takes his defeats gracefully. Mr. German has a host of friends among the ball and horse fans over in Monroe county, and through all the years of his activity over there he was able to add to the circle of those who were pleased to call him "Harry."

An awfully mean game has recently been played on several Wyandotte citizens. Said citizens bought bottles of something supposed to be an unlawful beverage, and when they came to sample its liquid found that they had purchased cold tea or coffee. Nobody seems to sympathize with them, either.

The Baptist Ladies Aid society will meet with Mrs. B. Lockwood next Wednesday, August 27, at 2:30 p. m. The July and August ladies will entertain. All are invited.

Last Saturday was a large day in point of sales at E. M. Bogart's grocery. Courteous treatment and good service, supplemented with newspaper advertising have more "driving power" today than ever.

On order from the State Fire Marshal, that the dilapidated buildings in the rear of the stores on the north side of Main street must either be repaired or removed the work of demolition of some of them has been in progress this week.

The usual crowd of visitors from our town was in evidence just the same last Saturday evening, in spite of the street conditions, and everybody seemed to take the inconveniences of traffic in the most cheerful spirit possible.

Through an error it was stated that Miss Timperly would reopen her boarding house "Sept 31". This created a panic among the members of Miss Timperly's "family," but the badly frightened folks were reassured by the information that the date should have been August 31. Shows some people read the Record anyway.

A paper received in this office from San Jose Calif gives an account of a delightful silver wedding party given in honor of the 25th anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Lloyd of the Central Methodist church in that city. Mr. Lloyd was pastor of the Methodist church here some years ago. The family has been in California for fifteen years.

The attendance at the Northville Howell ball game here Saturday at 3.00 is prophesied to be a record breaker. A Plymouth fan remarked that two hundred from there would have taken in the game here last Saturday had the game taken place. Many phone calls came in from all the nearby villages to learn if the game would be played.

Northville can claim one of the oldest base ball fans in Michigan if not the very oldest. Henry Priest of Mill street passed his 83rd birthday last May, but there is not a "youngster" in Northville of any age who is more anxious to witness the ball games, or more really enthusiastic over them than this one in his ninetieth year. Mr. Priest is almost counting the hours until the Howell-Northville contest on local diamond and he was probably the most disappointed of all the disappointed fellows in town when the game had to be postponed last week.

Mrs. T. J. Alderman of Jacksonville Fla. da. formerly Myrtle Bradley who has been in Providence hospital Detroit for a serious surgical operation. Has returned to the home of her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bradley and is gaining rapidly. Mr. Alderman is with his wife at present. Mrs. Alderman is an alumnus of the Northville High school, and was the Record's efficient correspondent from Gilt Edge for several years.

R. L. Richardson, District Manager for the Dodge Motor Co. has moved from Detroit to Northville and occupies the beautiful little bungalow on High street recently finished by T. G. Richardson, paying therefor $40 per month. As everybody knows, "T. G." is a wizard at the building business, and is especially noted for the construction of pretty up-to-date homes, both in Northville and Detroit. His experience in the instance above noted shows what might be done by other citizens with money to invest. Probably from 50 to 100 thoroughly modern houses could be immediately rented here at similar rates if only somebody would build them.

Catholic services will be held in the Library Sunday morning at 8:00 o'clock.

One of the finest things ever done by the Northville school board is the adding of a Commercial course to the High school curriculum.

The annual picnic of the Northville Woman's club takes place this Friday afternoon at the D. P. Yerkes home on the Base Line road.

George Goodell is improving his Cady street residence by remodeling the front porch, building an addition at the back and installing city water and electric lights.

C. A. Ponsford will have his third annual special premium-fruit canning contest at the fair. See his advertisement in this issue of the Record for a list of the prizes to be awarded the successful exhibitors.

Mrs. J. N. Elliott is visiting friends in Port Huron.

COMMERCIAL COURSE IN THE NORTHVILLE HIGH SCHOOL.

It is realized by the management of every up-to-date High school that only a few of those who attend High school ever go to college. The High school is the finishing school for about ninety per cent of its members. After analyzing the demands made upon the graduates of the Northville High school, and being anxious to serve the community to the fullest, the board of education has decided to organize a Commercial course which will begin this fall. The aim of the course is to prepare the student for a position immediately upon graduation.

The Commercial course covers four years and the subjects are to be taken as follows:

1st year—English, Commercial Arithmetic, Penmanship
2nd year—English, Bookkeeping, Salesmanship, Spelling, Penmanship
3rd year—English, Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Typewriting.

4th year—Business English, Shorthand, Typewriting, Commercial Law and Commercial Geography.

The student will be allowed to elect such additional work from the other departments of the High school as will supplement the business course.

Three rooms on the first floor of the High school building are to be fitted up for the Commercial department. There will be a bookkeeping room, a typewriting room and a recitation room. The latest and most up-to-date equipment is to be installed so that the department will be as near like an actual business office as possible.

No extra fee will be charged in this department and it is expected that the student will secure a practical business education equal to that given in the special business schools and institutes without the heavy fee charged by such schools.

D. C. BOWEN, Superintendent

L. L. BALL GETS ANOTHER STUDIO

Northville's well known photographer, L. L. Ball, has leased the new photo studio in the Himer block at Plymouth and will move to that city. Mr. Ball will however still maintain the Northville gallery and will give it his personal attention for a time each week.

The Plymouth studio is very modern in location and equipment and Mr. Ball will be thus enabled to care for the wants of his patrons in a still more prompt and artistic manner.

As a photographer, Mr. Ball is an artist and will readily class with the best even in the large cities. He has been in the business for 21 years.

and has had charge of studios at Rochester and Hastings besides Northville, and has operated and finished in the leading studios at Jackson, Lansing, Appleton, Wis., and Spencer, Iowa. Plymouth and Northville are indeed lucky to secure the services of so competent a man.

Mr. Ball is a close student of photography and his artistic ability has stood him in good stead as an aid to getting results. He attributes his success to strict attention to business to an earnest desire to make not only a picture but a portrait which will give some idea of the real man or woman, and to the genuine satisfaction in feeling that a patron has been pleased a little more than he expected.

Separate Skirts for Late Autumn

The separate skirt steadily gains favor with American women because it is in line for advancement. It fits in with a new order of things in apparel, and that is, the demand for smart, dressy clothes that remain informal even though they are made of rich or dainty fabrics. But American women show very decided preferences in the styles they choose; their taste runs toward plain skirts of heavy silk, fiber materials and skirts of georgette or organdie with wide hems and tucks. The trend is away from fussiness, but little clever originalities, in details of finishing and making, are all the more appreciated because of this Paris has presented for fall, somewhat elaborate models of striped and plaid velvet and other materials and possibly, with the coming of cold weather, we may take up with these.

Here is a skirt for present wear of heavy white crepe meteor. It has the fashionable length and wide hem, the latter serving to weight the supple crepe so that it hangs beautifully.

Its very wide, folded girdle is loose about the waist but its casual folds are tucked to place. It fastens at the side with snap fasteners under a narrow fold, but two large, handsome buttons make a fine pretense of usefulness placed over the invisible fasteners.

Little baskets are embroidered in brown wool on the skirt, and yellow figures, that may be translated, according to your imagination, into fruit or flowers, overflow them. These little baskets have handles of the brown wool which serve to camouflage the slit pockets that slip into the skirt at each side under them. Except for them there would be nothing unusual about this skirt but with them it has the one thing useful to put it in the class of distinctive models.

The blouse worn with this skirt is a tailored model of white crepe de chine, but these handsome skirts are very adaptable and are worn with much fancier blouses than the one pictured when occasion demands them.

Fashionable Sweater Coats

The sweater, that summer and winter companion of the outdoor girl, is no fair-weather friend. But nevertheless, it has taken its cue from the suit coat this summer and is made in several very attractive styles that open down the front and demand a vest or blouse to be worn with them. These vests are not always of the substantial kind, but are varied, according to the demands of occasion and weather. Sometimes they are of crisp organdie and lace and sometimes of plain weaves in fiber silk. It is the vest that adapts the sweater coat to the day and the occasion.

The last word in these attractive late-summer sweaters is spoken and the picture above conveys it to you. Of the two models shown, the one at the right is the most novel. It is made of fiber silk, knitted (by machinery) in a wonderfully pretty fancy stitch, with a facing that forms a collar in a simpler stitch. The belt is knitted to match the facing, and one end of it slips through a slide in the other end; both are pointed and fasten with a loop over a pearl button. The cuffs and a border about the bottom of the sweater are knitted in still another stitch, and a narrow band of black introduced in them gives a sharp, and brilliant color contrast. This sweater is made in several bright colors—rose, the favorite, with velvet and turquoise following. It is shown with a lace vest so that a blouse can be dispensed with on warm days. When the weather is cooler a blouse replaces the vest.

The same model is shown in the sweater at the left, but it is knitted in a ribbed pattern and of wool yarn. The belt is supported at the sides by narrow straps which it slips through, and is adjusted lower than in the sweater at the right. The models are shapely and fine, and there is a neatness about them that is devotedly to be wished—in sweaters.

Make Your Filet Sweater.

The filet sweater grows amazingly fast in the hands of the needle woman who a few years ago learned to crochet filet lace for her linens. The patterns are not intricate and the designs are "filled in" with a simple crochet stitch. Done in wool, these sweaters are a quick and easy task, especially if they are made without sleeves.

Jet Pendants.

The revived interest in jet that came about several months ago has by no means diminished. Heavy jet pendants are worn about the neck. They really are plaques made up of cut jet sequins. They are worn about the neck suspended from black enamel and gold chains.

ALL SHOW RIBBON

Dresses for Midsummer Are the Prettiest in Years.

Net, Lace and Sheer Organdie Frocks In Particular Call for the New Effects in Way of Trimming.

Nothing prettier or more daintily feminine could be imagined than the ribbon-run midsummer dresses of this year. Net, lace and sheer organdie frocks have satin ribbon of two-inch width, run through shirred casings, the ribbon emerging here and there to make a coquettish bow. Several of these dainty frocks have been worn on the stage this winter. There were three at least in "Gloriana" and the determined ingenue in "Miss Nell o' New Orleans" wears a delectably youthful frock run with pink ribbons; one across the bodice and three across the skirt, the emerging bows of ribbon coming under each other, all the way down the frock. A lovely summer afternoon dress for a young girl is of white net, with several shirred casings on bodice, tunic and skirt and blue satin ribbon run through each casing. Care should be taken, in planning such a frock, to have the ribbon-run casings at equal distances apart. One across the bodice just below the bust; one at the hip and another at the knee, usually makes a graceful proportion of trimming. Of course, the wide elbow sleeve will be finished at its edge with a shirring ribbon, and a smart bow of the ribbon on the other side of the sleeve.

SEVERE STYLES COME BACK

Return to Correct and Neat Tailleurs Of Ten or Fifteen Years Ago Observed.

There is a revival of the correct and neat tailleur such as we wore ten or fifteen years ago. One might even say that there is no difference in the cut, either in skirt or jacket. The little handkerchief in the side pocket and the flowers in the button-hole have resumed their place. Often a waistcoat in color or a white border coming below the vest adds to the smartness of this costume. The only difference between the severe tailleur of today and that of the older mode is the insistence on the wide waist; there is no indication of corseting or of girdle.

This return to the strictly tailored costume for street wear, the resumption of the clear definite lines, and the desire to be free, on street costumes, from incumbering folds and restless fringes and floating panels is very decidedly marked among the women of the smart world. One may see the women who sponsor this new mode jumping out of their cars in front of the hotel looking as if they were ready for horseback, with a flowery button-hole in the left revers, or perhaps a Spanish carnation.

It is with this idea in mind that the great dressmakers are thinking of bringing back the Louis XV jacket, that is to say, the jacket worn by the men of that period, which opened over waistcoats of heavy stuffs imported from London. They are in brilliant colors printed with English hunting scenes of the eighteenth century. From the Paris Letter in Vogue.

COOL-WEATHER COSTUME

Black panne velvet makes this attractive model for fall.

Those Old Crochet Edges.

You probably never thought to use again the crocheted edges already used. And you can, by the very simple expedient of cutting the edge away and crocheting a single chain to connect the remaining loops. It is a very simple matter after that to sew on to the new edge as you would a fresh lace edging. Then should the old edging be obviously old, what say you to treating it to a dye bath? Wonderfully effective are dyed laces of all sorts just now. And whether you are going to use the edging on frock or blouse or undies, the dyeing can hold good for all. A further suggestion is to dye the undies and the edging at the same time, so as to be quite sure that they match up.

Among Novelty Patterns.

Bouquet designs of simple field flowers in their natural colors, daisies, poppies and cornflowers on vivid grounds, such as yellow and green and on the ever conservative navy blue, are among the other novelty patterns.

FOR MIDSUMMER DAYS

Cool, summery gown of soft autumn leaf brown georgette crepe, suitable for afternoon wear. The Girdle frock, it is called. The beading is very unusual, and the girdle of old blue satin strikes a bright note.

FASHION IN NEW BLOUSES

Probability That the Smartest Will Reach Well Below Normal Waist-line—As to Sleeves.

Designers of blouses appear to have finally decided that the model reaching well below the normal waistline is quite the smartest thing. The question of sleeve length is now being bandied about. French-designed blouses brought over this season generally show very short sleeves—in fact, some are entirely sleeveless. American women have never favored the very short sleeves for daytime wear, most emphatically not for street wear, but the three-quarter-length sleeve has always been a favorite whether in dresses or blouses. Indications are that the smartest blouses for next season will have three-quarter-length sleeves.

Handsome laces are used to make blouses for wear with separate skirts of satin, net or chiffon. In this way an unusual and interesting costume may be developed, and as the waist of a dress made of one of the very sheer materials usually wears out before the skirt shows any signs of wear, the separate dressy blouse of allover lace is an excellent investment. It enables a woman who is economically inclined to utilize every bit of available material and wear each frock until it is wholly worn out.

For blouses of georgette, chiffon or crepe de chine is a favorite trimming. Artificial flowers are also effectively used.

FASHION'S FANCIES

All lace frocks are being shown in color.

Pinked taffeta ruchings are being introduced.

A frock of buff organdie is stitched effectively in green.

Lace and chiffon parasols are worn with lace and georgette.

Cock feathers are still the best liked decoration for small hats.

A sailor of tan pineapple straw, mushroom shape, is smart.

An oldcloth motorcoat in white and red has three buckled belts.

White organdie and black velvet appear together, even in capes.

Gray and black printed voiles are often chosen for the matron.

A dress of almond green satin is daintily embroidered in silver.

Many of the extremely low necks are now being veiled with tulle.

Heavy black silk jersey suits are embroidered with tan colored silk.

Evening gowns have a new role; very low fronts and very high backs.

Quaint frocks of English prints are trimmed simply by bands of plain white braid.

Not So Simple.

The gingham gown is the fad of the hour, as it was last year for awhile, and it is anything else than a "simple gingham gown." A very stylish gingham gown had a silk waist lining of plain blue with a vest of the silk, an overskirt of the checked bice and white gingham. It is not by any means a gown that can go to the tub, but has to be "dry cleaned," and, to tell the truth, it is not at all a cool gown, such as it looks to be.

Envy. Nineteen-year-old Henry has just come home from his first year in an eastern college. His sixteen-year-old brother Bill looks on many changes in him with scorn, one which is responsible for the most of this scorn being Henry's bit of mustache. The other day Henry went into the bathroom to trim the edges of that imitation of a mustache and Bill happened in while the operation was in progress. For a few minutes he watched his brother in silence and then he called to his mother:

Living in a small town I always drove a horse and wagon for delivering groceries. We later bought a car and I was not very familiar with the lurch and brakes.

One day as I was nearing the house where I had some groceries to deliver, I drove up close to the curb and, forgetting about the car, I hopped out and yelled, "Whoo, Tom!" while the car kept on going until it ran into a ditch and smashed both lights and the fender.

I soon found out that an automobile is unlike a horse.—Chicago Tribune.

IF THIN AND NERVOUS, TRY PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bita-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

When one stops to consider the host of thin people who are searching continually for some method by which they may increase their flesh to normal proportions by the filling out of their hollows, the rounding off of protruding angles with the attendant loss of health and attractiveness, it is no wonder that many and varied suggestions along this line appear from time to time in public print.

While excessive thinness might be attributed to various and subtle causes in different individuals it is a well-known fact that the lack of sufficient phosphorus in the human system is very largely responsible for this condition. Experiments on humans and animals by many scientists have demonstrated beyond question of doubt that a body deficient in phosphorus becomes nervous, shaky and thin. A noted author and professor in his book, "Chemistry and Food Nutrition," published in 1913, says: "That the amount of phosphorus required for the normal nutrition of man is seriously underestimated in many of our standard text books."

It seems to be well established that this deficiency in phosphorus may now be met by the use of an organic phosphate known throughout English speaking countries as Bita-Phosphate. Through the assimilation of this phosphate by the nerve tissue the phosphoric content when absorbed in the amount normally required by nature soon produces a welcome change in our body and mind. Nerve tension disappears, vigor and strength replace weakness and lack of energy, and the whole body soon loses its wiry hollows and shriveled angles, becoming enveloped in a glow of perfect health and beauty and the will and strength to be up and doing.

CAUTION:—While Bita-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc. those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART; IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the ills afflicting people today can be traced back to the kidneys. The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters of your blood. If the poisons which are swept from the tissues by the blood are not eliminated through the kidneys, disease of one form or another will claim you as a victim.

Kidney disease is usually indicated by weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gait slow, gravel, rheumatism, sciatitis and lumbago.

All these derangements are nature's signals that the kidneys need help. You should use GOLD MEDAL HAZEN'S OIL CAPSULES immediately. The soothing, healing oil stimulates the kidneys, relieves inflammation and destroys the germs which have caused it. Go to your druggist today and get a box of GOLD MEDAL HAZEN'S OIL CAPSULES. In twenty-four hours you should feel health and vigor returning. After you feel somewhat improved continue to take one or two capsules each day, so as to keep the first-class condition and ward off the danger of other attacks.

Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. Three sizes. Money refunded if they do not help you.

TOASTS OF RUSTIC ENGLAND

As Might Be Expected, Many of Them Have to Do With Eating and Drinking.

A good rustic toast is likely to be concerned with beef and beer, like that comprehensive toast of Arcadian wilds, "The Nine B's," which is as much as to say: Baker's best bread, butcher's best beef and brewer's best beer. In another form it runs: "The inside of a loaf, the outside of a fall, a pound of breakfast and a pot of good ale." The plow is toasted by an enigma: "Life before, dead in the middle and body and soul behind." The shy character gives for a toast, "Scorched bread and well buttered," adding, "If that ain't toast, I'm bothered." Some toasts are a little unkind, as: "May 'im as wunt wurk in the 'eat go 'ungry when the frosts come." To a farmer's wife it is polite to raise your glass with the words: "Ere's good 'ealth to 'ee, mum, an' may yer 'niss ave the strength to push about same as yew does now, and set a pattern t' all the farmers' wives way 'round."—London Morning Post.

The DAIRY

ICE PROBLEM FOR DAIRYMEN

Scrupulous Care in Production and Handling of Milk is Necessary to Keep it Sweet.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Keeping milk fresh and sweet this summer is likely to be more of a problem than usual. Cold is the most important single factor in keeping milk sweet, and ice is usually necessary to accomplish this. In most natural ice sections of the country, however, there is a marked scarcity of natural ice. Heretofore, in regions where 85 per cent of American milk has been produced, natural ice has been plentiful and cheap, and has been the principal means by which a perishable food product has been sent long distances to market without spoilage. As a result of the mild winter in many sections little natural ice was harvested, and since in the North the manufacture of artificial ice is confined principally to the larger cities, it is doubtful if this product will be available to milk producers even if the price could be made satisfactory.

On account of the lack of ice, dairymen will be compelled to use scrupulous care in the production and handling of milk and cream. It will be necessary to adhere more closely than ever to the three O's in caring for milk—keeping it clean, cold, and covered.

One of the most important factors in reducing the bacterial count in milk, and thus lengthen its keeping qualities, is the sterilization of utensils. Pails, strainers, separators, surface coolers, and shipping cans must be cleaned and sterilized, preferably by steam. Every farmer who can afford it should possess a steam boiler and sterilizer. If he feels that this is too great an expense, there are other sterilizers on the market, cheap but efficient, which will render milk utensils sterile. A satisfactory home-made sterilizer has been developed by the United States department of agriculture, and can be made at a cost of about $10. Complete directions for making it may be obtained by addressing the department, at Washington.

Such important factors as clean udder, milking with clean hands, keeping the stables clean, and the use of small-top pails will lower the bacterial count, and should be carefully observed by all milk producers.

In cooling milk dairymen should use facilities already existing, such as cold water in wells and springs. When milk is drawn from a cow it has a temperature of about 95 degrees F. In the North, well and spring water generally varies in temperature from 50 to 60 degrees F. By the use of surface coolers and a tank of cold running water, milk can quickly be cooled and held within two to four degrees of the water.

During warm weather it may be necessary to ship or deliver milk twice a day. This would have a tendency to check spoilage, especially of evening milk, which is usually more than twelve hours old when shipped. Milk dealers can do much to prevent spoilage by pasteurizing the milk. Pasteurization not only kills disease bacteria but reduces count, and therefore delays spoilage.

CHECK BAD FLAVOR IN MILK

Unless Utensils Are Thoroughly Washed and Scalded Fine Flavor of Milk Is Overcome.

Milk itself decays with age and produces a very offensive odor; and unless the milk utensils are thoroughly washed of all traces of milk and scalded, the fine flavor of the fresh milk and cream will be overcome with the bad flavor of the traces of the decayed milk.

Imitations Are Dangerous.

AN OHIO druggist writes to "The Practical Druggist," a prominent New York Drug Journal, as follows: "Please furnish formula for Castoria. All the formulas I have worked with are either ineffective or disagreeable to administer."

To this "The Practical Druggist" replies: "We do not supply formulas for proprietary articles. We couldn't if we wanted to. Your experience with imitative formulas is not surprising, but just what is to be expected. When Castoria is wanted, why not supply the genuine? If you make a substitute, it is not fair or right to label it Castoria. We can give you all sorts of laxative preparations for children, but not Castoria, and we think a mother who asks for Castoria would not feel kindly toward you if you gave her your own product under such a name."

No mother with a spark of affection for her child will overlook the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher when buying Castoria.

Mothers Must Use Care.

Why do we so often call your attention to imitations of Fletcher's Castoria? Because it is a baby's medicine and imitations are always dangerous, particularly imitations of a remedy for infants.

Your druggist may not keep an imitation but they are to be found on drug-store shelves. Reliable druggists think only of the welfare of their customers. The other kind only of the greater profit to be made on imitations.

Your own judgment tells you that Fletcher's Castoria having for over thirty years at great expense held up its reputation, must jealously guard it. Then, it follows that this company must use the very best of material. Must employ experts in the selection of the herbs. Must retain skilled chemists in its manufacture.

Your same good judgment must tell you that these irresponsible imitators are trading on your credulity and the reputation built up by Mr. Fletcher, during all these years, for his Castoria.

joying an outing at their Walled Lake cottage started last Friday on their return journey to Washington, D. C. after spending a ten-days' sick leave at the former's parental home here.

GENERAL OBJECTION TO FARE INCREASE

A whole lot of "kicking" is going on, as was to be expected, because of the considerable increase in the interurban passenger rates between Northville and Detroit. Probably very little objection would have been made to a five or even a ten cent raise for the round trip, but when it comes to paying 38 cents more for the round trip, or over three times the previous price of the one-way fare, folks naturally object. If there are half a dozen in the family who want to go to the state fair, for instance, 38 cents more for each person will add materially—and probably prohibitively in many cases—to the expense. The only solution to this phase of the problem would seem to be the establishing of motor bus passenger service, and the private ownership of more automobiles.

It is possible to save ten cents on the round trip to the city, by insisting on paying the 40-cent fare to the Turner "Y," from which point the city fare of five cents only can be collected, and paying in the same manner coming out. And of course people are asking "what about the franchise that calls for a 35-cent fare from Northville to Detroit?"

A large proportion of the local freight service between our village and the metropolis is already being handled by motor truck, and if bus lines are established over the splendid paved roads that are bringing us into such easy communication with the city, it is quite possible that the income of the suburban lines may soon be reduced instead of augmented by the raise in fares.

The attempt of the railway officials to collect two city fares from passengers out this way is certainly unfair and the matter should be brought to the attention of the proper authorities so the abuse can be abated.

When the bill under which this action on the part of the railways came before the state legislature, Representative Johnson of this place, and Glaspie of Oxford interviewed the railroad commissioners, and were assured that the law would not apply to the D. U. R. Notwithstanding this assurance, however, both men voted against the bill, but it was passed by a large majority.

Attorney General Grosbeck is taking a hand in the matter and has filed a restraining order in the Ingham county courts. His opinion is that the law is unconstitutional anyway, but that in any event the raise in fares is unjustifiable for the following reasons, which we quote from the Pontiac Press:

"The law provides that no company shall be entitled to the increased rate where the gross earnings were more than $8,000 per mile. The attorney general claims that the company's earnings exceeded this figure and he also sets forth that the act of the legislature nullifies all provisions with reference to passenger rates contained in franchises and contracts made prior to the passage of the law."

An order was issued by Judge Weist Tuesday to the D. U. R. to show cause why the injunction should not be issued, and a hearing was appointed for this Friday at 10 a. m.
