HOLLY ACCEPTS THE CHALLENGE

Manager German's Terms Accepted, With Few Exceptions. Return Game Arranged.

Our local ball manager, Harry German has closed negotiations with Manager Phenev of Holly over the phone, after two or three communications by letter.

The Holly manager is to remit $100 to one of the local banks for their appearance here on Friday, September 12th and the Northville Independent's manager is to send to a Holly bank $100 for the appearance of the Northville Club on September 14th.

Holly named Miles Maines as one of their pitchers and this same man is the Maines that the Detroit League had with them three years ago and he later played with the Indianapolis club of the American Association. Our club objected to his pitching in this series but it was finally agreed that Maines is to pitch in but one game and Jones the other. Same medicine, however, was handed to Northville as German and Hutchins are to twirl one game each. Who will be the opposing pitchers here on Friday the 12th is not yet known as it will all depend upon the condition of the men when they warm up on the ball field. But Hutchins and German say that they are ready to meet Mr. Maines in the friendly battle and let the best man win in a pitchers' duel. Both of our pitchers have lots of confidence for the team back of them have been playing excellent ball and when they get in to bat they have shown they are some swatsmen.

Holly is considered a much stronger team than Howell as they are older players and their team consists of a number of Michigan State league fellows as well as other professional players.

This will no doubt be a another real contest and although Holly did defeat our boys twice, we admit that our team was not going right but now are in best of condition and will give our neighbor's boys a good busy time at least. Detroit Umpire association will furnish the arbitrators for each game and it is hoped that these games will run as smoothly as did the Howell series.

Manager Phenev has named the following players for his team. Miles Maines, Jack Maines, Jones, Snow, Beebe, Dodge, Adams, Striggo, Sheldon, Richmond, Shultz and Boice.

Northville team Moffatt, J. Simpson, C. Stimpson, Tousey, Van Buren, Schafer, German, Hantz, Hutchins, Burgess, Smith and R. Stimpson.

MRS. JESSIE VAN LEUVEN

Mrs. Jessie Palmer Van Leuven, daughter of Mrs. Mary Palmer and the late John Palmer, died at her mother's home in this village Saturday morning at two o'clock, after a ten weeks' illness.

Mrs. Van Leuven had been a sufferer from valvular heart trouble and complications for many years past, but had bravely kept up until the last possible moment, under physical conditions which would have prostrated any one of less courage, long ago. She was born in Novi township, and came to Northville with her parents when a child. She passed some years of her life in Detroit and other places, returning to make her home in Northville several years ago. The nearest relatives besides her mother are one sister, Miss Jennie Palmer of Detroit, her father's sister, Mrs. Kate Kingsley of Ovid and a cousin, Mrs. Wm. Wait of Novi.

Funeral services were held from the home Monday afternoon. Rev. F. A. Brass of Wixom officiating. Ray Van Valkenburg sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "Lead Kindly Light" in a manner that touched every heart.

The floral tokens of sympathy from friends and neighbors were many and very beautiful. Interment was made in the family lot in the Novi cemetery.

HOME-COMING AT WALLED LAKE

The fifteenth annual reunion of the Walled Lake Home Comers' association is to be held next week Saturday, Sept. 13, in the Methodist church in that village, the all-day session beginning at ten o'clock. A chicken dinner is to be served at noon by the Ladies' Aid society. These reunions have come to be the event of the season for a considerable section of this part of the state.

REMOVE THE CAUSE.

Health authorities of Saranac Lake, N. Y. declare that it probably is the first "flyless town" in the world. Despite unusually hot weather in June and July, there are hardly any more flies than most places have in January, and next year there will be none at all.

It cost the town about $1,000 to eradicate the fly nuisance, which was accomplished by requiring that manure be screened and frequently removed. The health officer there regards "swat the fly" campaigns as useless and says the only way to eliminate flies is to put a ban on all their breeding places, and adds that this can be done.—Pontiac Press

INDIGESTION Caused by Acid-Stomach

Millions of people—in fact about 9 out of 10—suffer more or less from indigestion, acute or chronic. Nearly every case is caused by acid-stomach.

There are other stomach disorders which also are signs of acid-stomach—belching, heartburn, bloating, flatulence, food poisoning, sour, gassy stomach. There are many ailments which, while they do not cause much distress in the stomach, are nevertheless traceable to an acid-stomach. Among these are nervousness, biliousness, irritability, headache, dizziness, insomnia, melancholia, and a long train of physical and mental miseries that keep the victim in miserable health year after year.

The right thing to do is to attack these ailments at their source—get rid of the acid-stomach. A wonderful modern remedy called EATONIC now makes it easy to do this.

One of hundreds of thousands of grateful users of EATONIC writes: "I have been troubled with indigestion for about nine years and have spent quite a sum for medicine, but without relief. HAY STACKERS ARE INEXPENSIVE AND WILL SAVE MUCH FARM HANDPOWER

Unloading by Machines Releases Hand-Power.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Thousands of farmers who faced the harvesting of a large hay crop last year with fewer hands than usual to help do the work owe their success in handling and saving their crop to hay stackers. The hay stacker is to stacking what the horse fork is to putting hay in the barn, a saver of man and labor. It lifts the hay on the stack by horse power instead of man power. When hay is loaded on the wagon by hand and unloaded by a stacker one-half of the hand labor is eliminated. If push rakes or hay loaders are used in connection with the stacker the laborious task of pitching by hand is entirely avoided.

Useful in East and South.
In the East and South, where much of the hay grown is stored under cover, a stacker could be used to advantage when it becomes necessary to stack, especially where labor is scarce. A boy who can drive a team can take the place of a man in the haying operation. Two men and a boy using a loader and stacker will handle about 75 per cent more hay for each man during a day than a three-man crew loading and unloading by hand.

Hay stackers are classed in two general types, one having teeth on which the hay is gathered and brought to the stack on push racks; the other consisting of stackers that do not receive hay directly from push racks, but handle it by means of horse forks or slings. Both types are comparatively inexpensive and can usually be made at home with material that is available or which can be readily assembled on the farm without using special tools. A stacker will last from 10 to 12 years under ordinary conditions, and the cost of repair is small. On 27 farms in central Kansas, which stack an average of 144 tons of hay a year, all charges against the stackers amounted to less than 7 cents a ton when the yield was one ton an acre.

Small Stacks Not Economical.
In building a haystack with a stacker it is scarcely economical to make one containing less than 10 tons, according to experience. In locating stacks long or difficult hauls should be avoided whenever possible. It is very common on many farms to see stacks of hay at the end of corner of the field, next to the farm buildings, the site being chosen in order to have the hay hauled for feeding. The total distance traveled in bringing hay to one side of a square field is approximately 50 per cent greater than in hauling to the center. If the stack is located at one corner of the field the distance traveled is 100 per cent greater.

To minimize damage by moisture from the ground, care should be taken to keep the hay in the bottom of the stack from coming into contact with the soil. The aim of all good stack builders is to make a stack that will not "take water." This can be accomplished by tramping the middle well and always keeping it higher than the edges during the process of building. To give the stack further protection, many farmers provide a canvas cover or sheets of corrugated galvanized iron roofing which, when properly put on, practically eliminates loss from rain.

DIFFERENT STORAGE HOUSES NOW IN USE

Insulated Structure Best Adapted to Southern Climates.

Aroostook Type With Concrete or Masonry Basement Walls and Wooden Superstructure Is Product of Maine.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The insulated potato house is not used extensively and as a rule is better adapted to southern than to northern climates. The construction feature of such a house is the thorough insulation of its walls, ceilings, doors, and windows. In northern locations such a house must be heated by a stove.

The Aroostook type of storage house with concrete or masonry basement walls and wooden superstructure, is distinctly a product of Maine and confined largely to that state. It is expensive and is always located on a side hill or knoll in order that advantage may be taken of a ground level entrance. The basements are usually from 8 to 12 feet deep, and most of them have a capacity of several thousand barrels. Generally the only provision for ventilation is by trapdoors in the floor through which the filling of the bins is completed. Occasionally a ventilator is found in the roof.

These houses, although practical in Maine, will never supersede the dugout pit or storage cellar now used in the middle and far western states. Each of these types of storages has distinctive features which peculiarly adapt it to its own environment, but do not necessarily preclude use in other localities.

The artificially refrigerated potato storage house is confined practically to the storage of northern-grown seed potatoes, held in cold storage for second-crop planting in the South. There is little demand for such a house in northern sections, but it is thought that community cold-storage plants of this type could be profitably used by the southern truck growers, as they could purchase their supplies of seed in the fall and have them delivered before the arrival of cold weather. The seed potatoes could be stored throughout the winter in the house and be available in excellent condition when desired the following season.

Tuberculosis in Poultry.
Tuberculosis in poultry is much more prevalent than poultry breeders realize. It is responsible for a large share of the unexplained losses among chicks and adult stock.

Moist Mash for Chicks.
A moist mash will whet the appetites of the youngsters and hasten growth. They relish a feed once a day of the moist mash, but it should not be fed sloppy.

CHICKENS LIKE FISH HEADS

Satisfactory Protein-Containing Food for Poultry Flock Is Simple and Inexpensive.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A simple and inexpensive substitute for meat scraps which often are hard to obtain at the average butcher shop, is to utilize fish heads in the poultry ration. Arrangements usually can be made with local fish dealers to save these heads particularly if the poultryman will furnish buckets in which the refuse may be kept until he calls for them. As they come from the dealer's shop, the fish heads are tough and covered with heavy scales and gristle. However, underneath is fine tender meat which the hens relish keenly. The poultryman can soften the coarse outer shell by boiling the fish head in water for five to ten minutes and then pouring off the water and throwing the fish heads in among the chickens. In many instances the dealers are glad to get rid of the fish heads, and on the basis of actual food value the poultry keeper can afford to pay 4 or 5 cents for a quart of fish heads which provide a satisfactory protein-containing food for his flock.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

The silo's the thing.
The early threshed barley usually fares best in the market.

All of the vegetables raised in the garden should be utilized for food.

Soils that have no crop on them, or the harvest fields as soon as the grain is off, will be better for a good disking.

Vegetables in the late summer garden must be kept growing without check in order to obtain satisfactory results.

It takes care and attention to improve land so that the crops may be larger each year the seasons are favorable.

Shoveling silage out of a silo is play compared with prying corn shocks out of frozen ground and snow banks.

Do not forget to continue the fight on mites and lice. They must be fought all the time in all sections and in all seasons.

Plowing up the old pasture for flax has one drawback that must be considered—it may make the feed problem harder to meet.

Careful packing means much. It pays to arrange vegetables in the most tasteful manner. Here is an opportunity to increase profits.

DAIRY

TANKS TO KEEP CREAM COOL

Can Be Purchased From Dealers in Dairy Supplies, or They May Be Made on the Farm.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

On most farms cream can be cooled most effectively by the use of cold water. In order to facilitate the cooling various types of tanks have been devised. Such tanks can be purchased from dealers in dairy supplies and sometimes from the local hardware merchant, or they may be made on the farm. A cooling tank should be large enough to hold at least two cream cans in order that the newly separated cream may be cooled in a can separate from that previously gathered.

In order to keep the cream cool it is necessary to change the water several times a day. For this reason the tank should be situated between the well and the stock tank so that all water pumped for the stock passes through the cooling tank, thence to the stock tank.

Of whatever design the cooling tank may be it should have a tight cover to keep out the heat, and for the same reason it is advisable to place it in the dairy house or under a shed so that the sun cannot shine directly upon it.

An excellent tank may be made of two-inch planed cypress boards, properly bolted together, painted on the outside and oiled on the inside; or, if it is desirable to keep the cost down to the minimum, a very simple and cheap cooling tank may be made from two or more oil or vinegar barrels—one for each can.

The pipe conducting the water into the tank should be about 1½ inches in diameter and upon entering the tank by means of an ell and a short piece of pipe, should turn down to within a few inches of the bottom so that the cold water may be conducted to the bottom, forcing the warmer water through the outlet pipe. Cream cans should stand on cleats so that water may circulate under as well as around them. The outlet pipe should be about 1½ inches in diameter. Locknuts and sheet packing may be used to make tight joints where pipes enter and leave the tank.

When using a tank in which water is the cooling agent it must be borne in mind that the water should either flow through the tank continuously or be changed so frequently that the cream will be kept as cold as the well water.

GIVE SOIL MORE ATTENTION

When Dairymen Do This They Will Find Themselves Independent of Feed Dealers.

The time has come when dairy farmers must devote more attention to soil management and crop growing and less attention to balanced rations until they get their farms on a self-sustaining basis. When dairy farmers do this they will discover that they are independent of feed dealers in feeding the cows, and as the system is continued a few years they will create a surplus which can be utilized in feeding horses, beef cattle, sheep and hogs.

TIME FOR COWS TO FRESHEN

Most Favorable Months Are Those Beginning With November and Ending With March.

Investigations by Professor McCandlish of the dairy department of the Iowa Agricultural college indicate that cows freshening in August produce decidedly less milk during the year than cows freshening in any other month. The most favorable months for cows to freshen are those beginning with November and ending with March.

Outfitting the Boys for School

The average small boy apparently gives little thought as to where or what he shall be clothed. Clothes being the least of his troubles. But if any fond mother has visions of decking him out in things that differ much from the clothes worn by his average, everyday school fellow, she might as well banish them first as last. Men and boys are less independent in the matter of clothes than women and girls are. This is because they come in for a lot of frank ridicule from their fellows the minute they do anything unusual in the way of dressing.

Here are two suits for school boys—the kind they like. They are made of good qualities of woolen goods, with two pairs of knickerbockers, to each suit and boast certain small finishing touches that will please their wearers, although they are so conspicuous that one's attention must be called to them. For instance the patch pockets on the coat for the larger boy have flaps that button down. This is an advantage that the rough-and-tumble youngster will go over since he will not lose his treasures, no matter what position the fortunes of war may place his anatomy in. Also a buckle, like that on the cloth belt, for some reason, has a claim for the small boy, that are fastening. This suit is made of dark woolen goods, soft finish and with an indistinct pin stripe. With a stiff turn-down collar and gay-plaid tie, the boy looks very trim and well set up in it.

For the smaller boy a plain wool goods is used to make straight, short pants and a moderately long coat. This is cut with pleats at each side, and the body is set onto a yoke. A belt of the material slips through slides of it, set on and fastened with two buttons at the front to make assurance doubly sure. He may put one fastening out of commission, but hardly two of them at the same time. The turn-down collar is finished off for him with a narrow tie with tasseled ends. He may consider this tie a little extreme in style and manage to dispense with the tassels.

Original Styles in Flapper Coats

Those who originate styles for the flapper are destined to come in for many thanks from that opinionated young person when she views the new winter coats designed for her. Since specialists give their time and thought to her needs styles for her frocks and coats and millinery are no longer afterthoughts of those whose business is to design apparel for grown-ups.

Of course when the girl from twelve to seventeen owns a frock or coat that takes its cue from styles worn by grown ups her happiness is complete. Here is a coat which has the long shoulder and graceful drapery that rules in the new fall coats for women. It is made of velours and is less full than the coats whose style it follows. But the arrangement of drapery about the sleeves gives it an ample look and makes it roomy, and these things are the mode for winter coats. At the back this coat suggests a skirt set onto a bodice and this effect is emphasized by a row of covered buttons down the center of the body. It is odd and pretty and girlish.

A small sailor collar, with three plaits at each side, sets an example which the sleeves follow by adopting three plaits for their decoration. Covered buttons, like those on the back of the coat, finish up the sleeve trimming. The coat falls to the calf of the leg and hangs straight at the front. Altogether it is as pretty as any model so far brought out for the coming winter—and this is saying a great deal to its credit. It is a convincing example of the advantages that come from expert designing. Girls from twelve to sixteen need the sort of service that specialists can give them and are giving them, with more and more success, until we have ceased to call these years "the awkward age."

FLORY

By MILDRED WHITE.

"Silly twaddle!" remarked James Comstock, disgustedly, and laid the book aside.

"Whose 'twaddle'?" asked a sweet voice near him, "is it?"

James glanced at the cover.

"By Flory," he quoted contemptuously. "Flory is exactly the sort of person one would expect to touch upon her subjects, like a butterfly among the flowers, with no substance of reality to hold."

"Haven't you," asked the girl at his side, "imbed some of Flory's poetic phraseology? Now, I know a man who is enraptured over the little books, considers them the acme of art. Certainly they sell well."

James Comstock turned to look into the piquant face upraised to his own. Like various other guests at Mrs. Van Houton's house party, he was exceedingly curious concerning this new arrival in their social midst.

The rest of the crowd had been known to each other, either by name or reputation for years. Rhoda Kent was one of Mrs. Van Houton's discoveries. To use her son's expression, his mother had "sprung a new one," and she was delighted in her young friend's reserve. The most favored had been able to learn nothing of Rhoda's past, present or future from her own lips.

It was the unusual charm of her personality which caused deep interest upon all sides; and much conjecture. Her clothing, though in good taste, was so independently simple that many wondered if Mrs. Van Houton had taken on a protégée.

James Comstock, being acceptably the most interesting man in the set, was naturally her vis-a-vis. In fact, during the days of proximity in the fine old house his heart had known its first serious affection.

James, the heretofore invulnerable, was, as Billy Van Houton said, "decidedly hard hit."

Never before, he gloomily admitted to himself, had face of voice of woman haunted the nightly hours which should be devoted to healthful slumber. So James was justified in possessing more than the usual share of curiosity concerning the real life of the winsome Rhoda.

"Perhaps," he said in answer to her defense of the book discussed, "this 'Flory' may say more, in a light manner, than I am clever enough to grasp. But, fancy, for instance, being married to such a dreamer 'Poor husband of Flory!' With his wife always soaring above the blue. She isn't so bad at rhyme, though. I'll admit, seems to have a number of little verses scattered through here and there, with a bar of music to start them off. Helps to sell, I suppose. Makes the book look easy to read."

Miss Kent nodded laughingly.

"But you would not want to be the suffering husband who must listen to his wife singing those things around the house," she said.

"Heaven forbid!" James piously ejaculated. And the lovely girl at his side arose in response to Mrs. Van Houton's call.

"Come here, Rhoda," cried that merry person. "Here are half a dozen bored people wishing to be entertained. My hope lies in you."

James Comstock gazed after the graceful figure regretfully. The glance she threw back at him was strangely disquieting. For days he had been joyously secure in a consciousness of the girl's preference. Unaccountably discouragement came upon him Rhoda's eyes had gazed at him reproachfully, her lips had closed firmly, as though in displeasure. Then presently he heard her voice in song, as she accompanied herself upon the piano.

It was a little Scotch tune that the girl played and the words sounded vaguely familiar. Comstock leaning forward, listening attentively found that voice and tune thrilled him with inexplicable tenderness. Where—had he heard—the words?

Idly his gaze fell upon the opened book of "Flory." Then he knew. It was one of the despised Flory's verses that his beloved was singing. And after a round of involuntary hand-clapping he heard Mrs. Van Houton's triumphant announcement:

"I had not intended to tell you for awhile; we have had such fun keeping our secret. But Rhoda Kent is 'Flory' as you have guessed, with those delightful books to her credit."

Comstock sat staring dully at the volume in his hand long after silence proclaimed that Rhoda's audience had departed. Bitterly he recalled his recent condemning conversation, with its fervent "Heaven forbid!" that a wife such as she should be his own. Well, he had done for himself this time, he bitterly reflected, and this time was all that counted in the world.

"If you please," asked Rhoda severely, "may I have that book of 'silly twaddle'?"

Wretchedly he looked up into the lovely face above his.

"And—I was going to ask you to be my wife."

"Heaven forbid!" murmured Rhoda. "A voice floating around in the blue." Her voice broke in soft uncontrollable laughter. Eagerly he caught at her hands.

"I will drop the name 'Flory,'" Rhoda said later; "Mrs. James Comstock will give to the book the proper dignity which it deserves."

No More Worries Over Excessive Coal Bills

It is not generally known that even the small coal consumer can have his coal shipped direct from the mines, thus saving the profits that otherwise would go to wholesaler and retail dealer, besides saving hauling expense. Of course, big manufacturers and other large consumers have always bought this way, but the man who buys only enough for his household is now in position to take advantage of the same purchasing privileges. The well-known BERNICE COAL CO., 936 South Dearborn St., Chicago, is doing an enormous business in supplying small consumers as well as the big ones with all grades of hard and soft coal at mine prices.

"That these customers are highly pleased is evidenced by the letters they write after receiving and trying their coal. The following are extracts from several such letters: 'Have found your coal entirely satisfactory and your dealings courteous and fair. I shall continue to buy my coal from you.'—Ed. G. Gereka, Burlington, Ia. 'More than pleased with it. Please quote me prices on same coal for December.'—Arthur Churchman, Alexandria, Ind. 'Well pleased with it. Expect to buy more from you.'—Fritz Bros. Pompei, Mich. 'Coal arrived on time, has given entire satisfaction, am exceedingly well pleased. Wish to thank you for your courteous treatment in our dealings.'—M. B. Ford, Franklin, Ky. Adv.

RUSSIAN BALLET DANCING IN FRONT OF GRAND STAND.

Detroit (Special):—Amusement markets of the nation have been searched for the highest class acts to make up the free vaudeville at the Michigan State Fair, Detroit, August 23 to September 7. Realizing that the American people, relieved from the stress of war, are ready to spend more time with amusements, G. W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the fair association, has increased the scope of the more frivolous side of the exposition.

Pernikoff and the Rose Ballet, one of the outstanding terpsichorean acts on the stage today, will appear in a series of dancing evolutions of bewildering beauty and artistic execution. The poetry of motion is personified, featuring the wonderful dances of the hour.

Among the other acts which have been booked are the Eight Hawaiians, Hawaiian singers, instrumentalists and dancers; four Danubies, gymnasts;

Walking for Pleasure. The old-fashioned person who used to walk mile after mile on pleasant Sunday afternoons through the countryside, has practically disappeared. This is the inevitable conclusion drawn by anyone who still pursues this ancient pastime and who has spent Sunday after Sunday dithering by foot over macadam and dirt roads frequented by automobilists and an occasional farm hand traveling to a neighbor.

Walking for the sake of the walk has nearly passed out, along with the one horse rig, the glass-encased artificial flowers in the parlor and hair-covered furniture. It had its day before the bicycle and the automobile and with the advent of these quicker, easier means of transportation it dropped from the human scheme of things with a dull thud.—Omaha News.

FAT STOCK AUCTION AT MICH. STATE FAIR

"DICK"

"Dick," the grand champion steer at the Michigan State Fair, last year, was put up at public auction during the exposition and when the hammer fell a record price for fat steers on the hoof was established. The animal, entered at the fair and placed on sale by C. H. Prescott & Son, of Tawas City, was bid in by Thomas Newton, Detroit packer, at 70 cents a pound on the hoof. The animal weighed 1280 and netted the owner $896, the highest price ever paid in Michigan. At the coming state fair, to be held in Detroit from August 29 to September 7, a great public auction of all kinds of fat stock will be held and buyers from all over the country will attend. This is a new department of the fair, established by G. W. Dickinson, secretary-manager, which promises to grow into a great market for Michigan livestock breeders.

Concerning Names.
Said the observing cuss, "When an actress starts out to make a name for herself she has to think up a good one to start with before she makes it."

SERVES THEM RIGHT.

Over in neighboring Oakland county two deputy sheriffs have been appointed in each township for the express purpose of protecting county residents from the thieving depredations of city people, who seem to think they may just help themselves to anything in the fruit or vegetable line they see along the highways. Eight men were arrested and fined Monday in the Pontiac courts for taking elderberries and apples without permission. People living between Northville and Detroit have been so tormented by similar lawlessness for some years past that some have actually provided themselves with weapons and have stood guard over their property. The time is past when even wild berries along the roadside were supposed to be public property, as all such things now have a market value, but even vegetable gardens and cultivated fruits have been taken by passers-by, and under protest of the owners, at that. Persons might still very innocently trespass in regard to wild berries, but when it comes to cultivated products, no plea of ignorance "goes." Perhaps a season or two of vigilance and drastic action on the part of the authorities will bring the depredating class to their senses.

WAYNE TO HAVE COUNTY NORMAL

A county Normal class will be opened at the Detroit Normal school at the beginning of the regular school year, September 8th. Although the County Normal is a new departure in Wayne County, it is an established institute throughout the state.

An acceptable year's work in the Wayne county normal will earn the student a teacher's certificate that entitles the holder to teach in any one or two room school in the county, and also by transfer to any other county of Michigan. The certificate also carries a full year's credit on the two years' course of the Detroit Normal and it is good for credit at any Michigan State Normal school and at the University of Michigan.

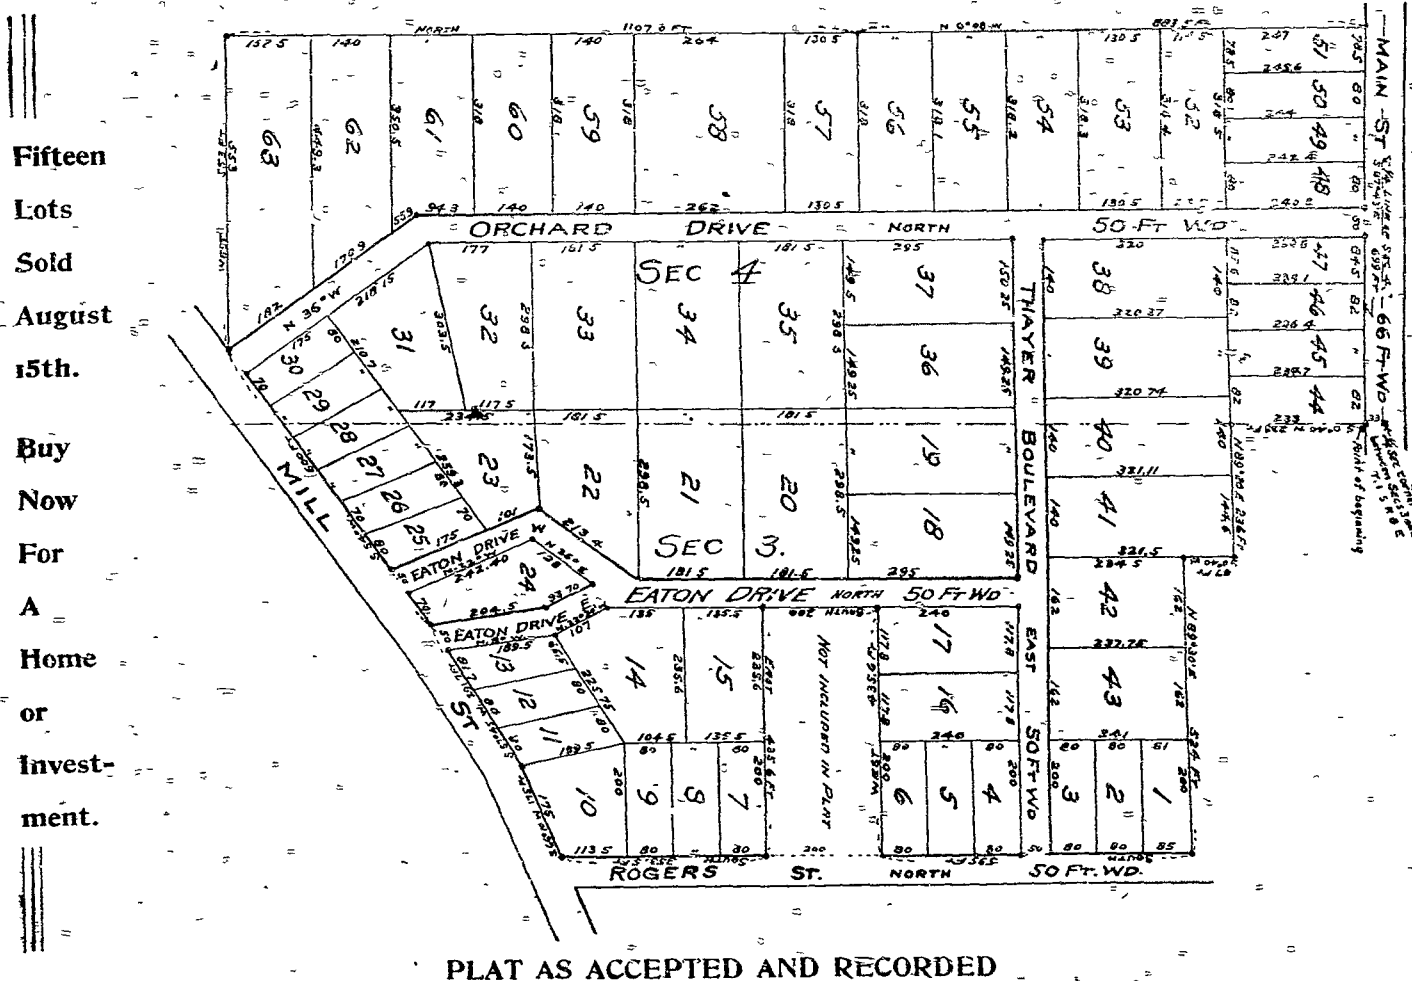

To enter the new class the applicant must be at least seventeen years old and must have finished at least the eleventh high school grade. The Detroit Normal is a city public school and the county division is jointly supported by state, county and city funds. No tuition fee is charged in any department.

The county course covers thirty-eight weeks' work and includes courses in all the common school subjects as well as in general education and the purely cultural subjects. Ample practice teaching and observation will be provided, the plan being to use a city school to a limited extent and conveniently locate typical rural schools for the greater part of this work.

Europe Is Not Wrecked and Ruined by the Greatest War of History

By OSCAR T. CROSBY, Interallied Council

Europe has not been crushed by the war and her outlook is not a desolate one. When a continent or a country is ruined you do not have to call witnesses to prove it. In the United States the war roused latent human forces which had been neglected and presented to us at the conclusion of the war an industrial and agricultural equipment far superior to the one we possessed before.

In Europe the war's effect upon real wealth and production has not been different in character. Each of the principal belligerent nations has vastly increased its mechanical capacity for production. England's greatest loss is that of merchant ships, while her power to replace those ships is so much increased that the loss will soon be more than made good.

In France there is an ugly streak of devastation running from Flanders to Verdun. Thousands have lost their private fortunes. But their desolation is not the ruin of France; nor will it even bear heavily upon the task of French reconstruction during the critical years, because full restitution will be made by German money and German labor. France exhibits the same attributes of increased producing efficiency that are shown in Great Britain and the United States.

Germany is well off except in the case of her merchant marine. Her industrial plants are intact, and the peace conference has conferred upon her a unique advantage in the power to man them by abolishing the military establishment in that country.

What the world produces in food it consumes every year, no matter whether there is peace or war. There is a hard pinch in some places at present, but the crops now being harvested will take us over the peak of privation.

The world will need five years to rest and recuperate and ten more before another great conflict can be staged. Enduring peace will remain a phantom until the instruments for making war are taken away from separate governments and intrusted entirely to a society of nations.

Single Air Control Is Necessary for Army, Navy and Postal Service

By HARRY S. NEW, U. S. Senator from Indiana

I believe that the aviation question is of sufficient importance to the country to call for the creation of a single department of the government to look after it to the exclusion of everything else. Great Britain was forced to the adoption of this eighteen months or more ago, and so was France. The United States should do likewise, and sooner or later she must do it. It is merely a question of whether she will do it now and take advantage of the present opportunity to get ahead or whether she will wait until forced to do what other nations have done and then attempt to come from behind with the same old American disregard of expense and lack of appreciation of the wisdom of preparedness.

I know that there is opposition to the separate department plan on the part of the navy. There is also opposition in certain army quarters, but this is the result of selfishness and a disregard of the interests of aeronautics in its broad and general sense. The navy is concededly competent to look after its own aeronautical needs. So likewise is the army. But neither of them can go beyond their own service.

The attempt to create such a department may be successfully resisted for a time—although I honestly believe that congress will be wise enough to discount bureau jealousies and do the obviously sensible thing at this session—but whether it does or not it cannot be long deferred.

No man knows what is to be the future of aeronautics. The marvelous development of the science can be best appreciated when we stop to think that the first man to fly, Orville Wright, is today but forty-eight years old.

Shall America realize all this and shape her aims accordingly in time to keep abreast of other nations, or shall we be permitted to bring up the straggling rear of a rapidly moving procession?

That is the question to be answered by congress and the people.

We Need an Annual Supplement to the Decalogue in These Latter Days

By EDWARD A. ROSS, in "Sin and Society"

The sinister opportunities presented in this webbed social life have been seized unhesitatingly, because such treasuries have not yet become infamous. The man who picks-pockets with a railroad rebate, murders with an adulterant instead of a bludgeon, burglarizes with a rakeoff instead of a jimmy, cheats with a company prospectus instead of a deck of cards, or scuttles his town instead of his ship, doesn't feel on his brow the brand of a malefactor. The shedder of blood, the oppressor of the widow and the fatherless, long ago became odious, but latter-day treacheries fly no skull and crossbones at the masthead.

Our social organization has developed to a stage where the old righteousness is not enough. We need an annual supplement to the Decalogue.

The growth of credit institutions, the spread of fiduciary relations, the enmeshing of industry in law, the interlacing of government and business, the multiplication of boards of inspectors—beneficent as they all are, they invite to sin. What gateways they open to greed! What fresh parasites they let in on us! How idle in our new situation to intone the old litany!

The reality of this close-knit life is not to be seen and touched; it must be thought. The sins it opens the door to are to be discerned by knitting the brows rather than by opening the eyes.

It takes imagination to see that bogus medical diploma, lying advertisement, and fake testimonial are death-dealing instruments. It takes imagination to see that savings-bank wrecker, loan shark and investment swindler in taking livelihoods take lives.

It takes imagination to see that the business of debauching voters, fixing juries, seducing lawmakers and corrupting public servants is like saving through the props of a crowded grandstand. Whether we like it or not we are in the organic phase, and the thickening perils that beset our path can be beheld only by the mind's eye.

His uneasiness increased to consternation when he discovered that Sprouse had not yet put in an appearance. What had become of the man? He could not help feeling, however, that somehow the little agent would suddenly pop out of the chimney in his room or sneak in through a crack under the door—and laugh at his fears.

Shortly before the noon hour, Peter Ames halted the old automobile from Green Fancy in front of the Tavern and out stepped O'Dowd, followed by no less a personage than the pseudo Mr. Loeb. There were a number of traveling-bags in the tonneau of the car.

Catching sight of Barnes, the Irishman shouted a genial greeting.

"The top of the morning to ye. You remember Mr. Loeb, don't you? Mr. Curtis' secretary. Mr. Loeb is leaving us for a few days on business. Good morning, Mr. Loeb," he called out to Purnam Jones who approached at that juncture. "We are sadly in want of gasoline."

Barnes caught the look that the Irishman shot at him out of the corner of his eye.

"Perhaps you'd better see that the chauffeurs don't give us short measure. Mr. Loeb," said O'Dowd. Loeb hesitated for a second, and then, evidently in obedience to a command from the speaker's eye, moved off to where Peter was opening the intake.

O'Dowd lowered his voice. "Barnes, I let you off last night, and I let her off as well. In return, I ask you to hold your tongue until the man down there gets a fair start. A day's start and—"

"Are you in danger, too, O'Dowd?"

"To be sure—but I love it. I can always squirm out of tight places."

"I would not deliberately put you in jeopardy," O'Dowd said.

"See here I am going back to that house up yonder. There is still work for me there. What I'm after now is to get him on the train at Horville. I'll be here again at four o'clock, on my word of honor. Trust me, Barnes."

"Do you mean to say that you are coming back here to run the risk of being—"

"We've had word that the government has men on the way. Why, hang it all, Barnes, don't you know who it was that engineered that whole business last night?"

Barnes smiled. "I do. He is a secret agent from the embassy."

"Secret? grumpy?" almost shouted O'Dowd. "He is the slickest, cleverest crook that ever drew the breath of life. And he's got away with the jewels, for which you can whistle in vain. I'm thinking."

"For heaven's sake, O'Dowd—" began Barnes, his blood like ice in his veins.

"But don't take my word for it. Ask her—upstairs there, God bless her!—ask her if she knows Chester fore. In the name of God, Barnes, how did you happen to fall in with the villain?"

Barnes passed his hand over his brow, dazed. "He—be represented himself as a book agent," he mumbled, striving to collect himself. "Jones knew him. Said he had been around here for weeks. I—"

"That's the man," said O'Dowd, scowling. "He trotted all over the country, selling books. For the love of it, do ye think? Not much. He had other fish to fry, you may be sure. Besides, if we ever lay hands on that friend of yours—well, he won't have to fry in hell. He'll be burnt alive. Thank God, my mind's at rest on one score. She didn't skip out with him. They all think he did. Not one of them suspects that she came away with you. There is plenty of evidence that she let him in through her window."

"All ready, O'Dowd," called Loeb.

"Come along, please."

"Coming," said the Irishman. "Don't blame yourself, old man. See you later, Barnes. So long!"

CHAPTER XVI.

The First Wayfarer Visits a Shrine, Confesses, and Takes an Oath.

How was he to find the courage to impart the appalling news to her? He was now convinced beyond all doubt that the so-called Sprouse had made soft with the priceless treasure and that only a miracle could bring about his recovery. He realized to what extent he had been shaped into a tool to be used by the master craftsman. He saw through the whole Machiavellian scheme, and he was also now morally certain that Sprouse would have sacrificed him without the slightest hesitation.

In the event that anything went wrong with their enterprise the man would have shot him dead and earned the gratitude and commendation of his associates! He would have been glorified and not crucified by his friends.

With a heavy heart he mounted the stairs. At the top he paused to deliberate. Would it not be better to keep her in ignorance? What was to be gained by revealing to her the— But Miss Thackeray was lurking him on to destruction. She stood outside the door and beckoned. Then she closed the door from the outside, and Barnes was alone with the cousin of kings and queens and princes.

"I feared you had deserted me," she said, holding out her hand to him as he strode across the room.

"I saw no occasion to disturb your rest," he mumbled.

"I have been peeping," she said looking at him searchingly. "Where is Mr. Loeb going, Mr. Barnes?"

"O'Dowd says he is to be gone for a few days on business," he equivocated.

"He will not return," she said quietly. "He is a coward at heart. Oh, I know him well," she went on, scorn in her voice.

"Was I wrong in not trying to stop him?" he asked.

She pondered this for a moment. "No," she said, but he caught the dubious note in her voice. "It is just as well, perhaps, that he should disappear. His fight today spares—but we are more interested in the man Sprouse. Has he returned?"

"No, Miss Cameron," said he ruefully. And then, without a single reservation, he laid bare the story of Sprouse's defection. When he inquired if she had heard of the man known as Chester Naismith, she confirmed his worst fear by describing him as the guard who watched beneath her window. He was known to her as a thief of international fame.

"You were no match for Chester Naismith. Do not look so glum. The shrewdest police officers in Europe have never been able to cope with him. Why should you despair?"

He sprang to his feet. "By gad, he hasn't got away with it yet," he grated. "I will run this scoundrel down if I have to devote the remainder of my life to the task."

She sighed. "Alas, I fear that I shall have to tell you a little more about this wonderful man you know as Sprouse. Six months ago the friends and supporters of the legitimate successor to my country's throne consummated a plan whereby the crown jewels and certain documents of state were surreptitiously removed from the palace vaults. Instead of depositing the treasure in Paris, it was sent to this country in charge of a group of men whose fealty could not be questioned. The man you know as Loeb is in reality my cousin. I have known him all my life. He is the youngest brother of the pretender to the throne, and a cousin of the prince who is held prisoner by the Austrians. This prince has a brother also, and it was to him that I was supposed to deliver the jewels. I traveled from New York, but not alone as you may suspect. I was carefully protected from the time I left my hotel there until—well, until I arrived in Boston."

"While there I received a secret message from friends in Canada directing me to go to Spanish Falls, where I would be met, and conducted by Prince Sebastian himself to the place called Green Fancy, which was near the Canadian border. A safe escort would be provided for us, and we would be on British soil within a few hours after our meeting. It is only necessary to add that when I arrived at Green Fancy I met Prince Ugo—and understood! I had carefully covered my tracks after leaving Boston. My real friends were, and still are, completely in the dark as to my movements, so skilfully was the trick managed."

"And now for Chester Naismith. It was he who acting for the misguided loyalists and recommended by certain vagabond aristocrats, who by virtue of their own dissipation had come to know him as a man of infinite resourcefulness and daring, planned and carried out the pillaging of the palace vaults. Almost under the noses of the foreign guards he succeeded in obtaining the jewels. No doubt he could have made off with them at that time, but he shrewdly preferred to have them brought to America by some one else. It would have been impossible for him to dispose of them in Europe. You see how cunning he is?"

"He was no doubt thwarted in his design to waylay me on the road from Spanish Falls by a singular occurrence in this tavern. He was attacked in his room here, overpowered and bound and gagged by two men. He knew the men. They were thieves as clever and as merciless as himself. They too were watching for me. I do not know how these men learned of my intention to come to Green Fancy."

"They came to the Tavern four or five days before your arrival at Green Fancy," Barnes interrupted. "Sprouse told me that they were secret service men from abroad and that he was working with them. My theory is this, and I think it is justified by events: The men were really secret agents sent here to watch the movements of the gang up there. They came upon Sprouse and recognized him. On the day mentioned they overpowered him and forced him to reveal certain facts connected with affairs at Green Fancy. Possibly he led them to believe that you were one of the conspirators. They waited for your arrival and then risked the hazardous trip to Green Fancy. They were discovered and shot."

"I believe you are right," she cried. "Then we have accounted for Mr. Sprouse, and I am no longer interested in the unraveling of the mystery surrounding the deaths of Room and Paul," said Barnes. "There is nothing to keep me here any longer, Miss Cameron. I suggest that you allow me to escort you at once to your friends, wherever they are."

She was opposed to this plan. While there was still a chance that Sprouse might be apprehended in the neighborhood, or the possibility of his being caught by the relentless purveyors, she declined to leave.

"Then, I shall also stay," said he promptly, and was repaid by the fathomless smile she gave him. He was helplessly in love with this beautiful cousin of kings and queens. And when he thought of kings and queens he realized that beyond all question his love was hopeless.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Second Wayfarer Is Transformed.

O'Dowd returned late in the afternoon. He was in a hurry to get back to Green Fancy; there was no mistaking his uneasiness.

"For the love of heaven, Barnes, get her away from here as soon as possible, and do it as secretly as you can," he said. "I may as well tell you that she is in more danger from the government secret service than from anyone up yonder."

"She may prefer to face the music," O'Dowd said. "If I know her at all, she will refuse to run away."

"Then ye'll have to kidnap her," said the Irishman earnestly. "There will be men swarming here from both sides of the border by tomorrow night or next day. It's the gospel truth, and it's going to be bad for all of us if we're here when they come."

"Who is she, O'Dowd? Man to man, tell me the truth. I want to know just where I stand."

O'Dowd hesitated, looked around the tap-room, and then leaned across the table.

"Miss Cameron is in reality the Countess Therese Mara-Dafanda—familiarily and lovingly known in her own land as the Countess Ted. She was visiting in this country when the war broke out. It is of any use to you, I'll add that she would be rich if Aladdin could only come to life and restore the splendors of the demolished castle, refill the chests of gold that have been emptied by the conquerors, and restock the farms that have been pillaged and devastated. In the absence of Aladdin, however, she is almost as poor as the ancient church mouse. So there you are, man. Half the royal progeny of Europe have been sufferers for her hand, and the other half would be if they didn't happen to be of the same sex. Good-by! I must be on my way." He arose and held out his hand. "Good-by and good luck—forever."

"You are a brick, O'Dowd. I want to see you again. You will always find me."

"Thanks. Don't issue any rash invitations. I might take you up."

Barnes started upstairs as soon as O'Dowd was off, urged by an eagerness that put wings on his feet and a thrill of excitement in his blood. Halfway up he stopped short. A new condition confronted him. What was the proper way to approach a person of royal blood? He would have to think. Pausing at her door, he was at once aware of voices inside the room.

He rapped on the door, but so timidly that nothing came of it. His second effort was productive. He heard Miss Thackeray say "good gracious," and, after a moment, Miss Cameron's subdued: "What is it?"

"May I come in?" he inquired, rather ashamed of his vigor. "It's only Barnes."

"Come in," was her lively response. "It was awfully good of you, Miss Thackeray, to let me hear your lines. I think you will be a great success in the part."

"Thanks," said Miss Thackeray dryly. "I'll come in again and let you hear me in the third act." She went out, mumbling her lines as she passed Barnes without seeing him.

"I hope you will feel able to leave this place tomorrow, Countess. We must get away almost immediately."

"Ah, you have been listening to O'Dowd, I see."

"Yes. He tells me it will be dangerous to—"

"He is right. It would be difficult for me to clear myself. No one would believe that I did not deliberately make off with the jewels. They would say that I—oh, it is too dreadful!"

"Don't worry about that," he exclaimed. "You have me to testify that—"

"How little you know of intrigue," she cried. "They would laugh at you and say that you were merely another fool who had lost his head over a woman. They would say that I duped you."

"No!" he cried vehemently. "Your people know better than you think. You are disheartened, discouraged. Things will look brighter tomorrow."

"I don't know what I should do without you," she said.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Mr. Sprouse Continues to Be Perplexed, but Puts His Nose to the Ground. Barnes was abroad early. He was at breakfast when Peter Ames called up. An inspiration seized him when the chauffeur mentioned the wholesale exodus: he hired Peter forthwith and ordered him to report immediately with the car. He was going up to Green Fancy for Miss Cameron's wardrobe.

Two minutes after Peter drove up to the Tavern he was on the way back to Green Fancy again, and seated beside him was Thomas Kingsbury Barnes, his new master.

There was not a sign of human life about the place. Peter accompanied him upstairs to the room recently occupied by Miss Cameron.

They found two small leather trunks, thickly belabeled, in the room upstairs. Both were locked.

"Now I know you are mistaken," cried Barnes, a wave of relief surging over him. "He has been in this tavern every night—"

"Sure he has. But answer me, did ye ever see him here after eleven in the evening? You did not—until last night, anyhow. In the struggle he had with Nicholas last night he was recognized. That's why poor old Nicholas is lying dead up there at the house now—and will have a decent burial unbeknownst to anybody but his friends."

"Good God, O'Dowd, you can't mean that he—he killed—"

HOME TOWN HELPS

PAYS TO MAKE USE OF PAINT

Apart From Adding to Appearance of Structure It Also Tends to Retard Deterioration.

The foundation reason for painting
is protection of the thing painted.
The owner of property should never forget that. No one can look upon painting as an expense if he is convinced that it prevents a greater expense.

There is, however, another great reason for painting and that is the appeal of pride in appearance. This is quite human. It is seen in the matter of clothes. Primarily clothes are to keep us warm, but a suit is discarded while it is still warm because it is shiny, out of shape, or slightly faded. In other words, one feels that it would compromise their standing were they to wear it.

So it is with the painting of houses.
Both without and within.
In progressive, proud communities, houses are painted every three or four years, though pride in appearance.
Progressive citizens are not satisfied with the looks of their houses after three or four years' exposure to weather.

As good citizens we should not only see that every person knows that structures will deteriorate if unpainted, but we should also try to make people as proud of the appearance of their homes as their more progressive neighbors. We should deliberately set out to make them ashamed of their dull homes which are a reflection upon the whole community.

This work is peculiarly one for local example and community co-operation.
Everyone knows that a newly-painted house is likely to start the whole neighborhood to slicking up. It becomes contagious.

Every person who wants to see his community prosper will join in such a movement.

Other Things in Life Besides
"Business."

If a writer on present-day industrial economics is right, the next few decades will be marked, in the United States, by an amazing amount of self-study by individual cities, towns, and even villages. He foresees "intensive study undertaken by every municipality to determine what can be manufactured at that place." Within limits he is probably right, but there will be many who will honestly hope that the limits will not be too widely extended, and who will believe in all seriousness that an occasional municipality without manufactures has its place in the scheme of things for a well-balanced nation. "Business first" may be a good slogan, but "business all the time" and "business everywhere" might weaken enthusiasm for desirable industry by overemphasizing it.
One is reminded that since somebody gave current meaning to the term
"business efficiency" about 2,000 books on the subject have been written and printed in English—Christian Science Monitor.

Boosters and Roosters.

The difference between the effective booster and the rooster is that the latter has no responsibility and the former must make good. There was a time when the boosters from a town would go on a visit asserting that they lived in the biggest city, had the tallest buildings, the largest stores, the wealthiest people, and so on, using words without stint simply because they wished to say something favorable about home. They would be placed in the rooster class now unless they could show by facts and figures that their assertions were true.

Landscape Gardening.

The great mistake made by most novices is that they study gardens too much and nature too little. Now gardens in general are stiff and graceless, except just so far as nature, ever free and flowing, reasserts her rights, in spite of man's want of taste, or helps him when he has endeavored to work in her own spirit. But the fields and woods are full of instruction, and in such features of our richest and most smiling and diversified country must the best hints for the embellishment of rural homes always be derived.—Andrew Jackson Downing.

Pointed Advice.

"Oh, doctor," cried a wild-eyed man.
"I am dreadfully afflicted! The ghosts of my departed relatives come and perch on the tops of the fence posts
all around my yard when dusk is falling. I can look out into the gloaming any evening and see a couple of dozen spooks solemnly sitting on top of that many posts, waiting, waiting, waiting.
Oh, doctor, what shall I do?"
"Sharpen the tops of the posts," briskly replied the physician. Five dollars, please.—Judge.

Should Work Both Ways.

I believe a man should be proud of the city in which he lives; and that he should so live that his city will be proud he lives in it.—Abraham Lincoln.

Submarine Invades the Mississippi

First Craft of the Kind to Ever Appear in This Historic Stream

An unusual photograph of the United States naval submarine K-5, "full speed ahead" on the surface of the historic Mississippi. The navy sent the K-5 for a trip of exploration and navigation under Lieut. Commander Thomas G. Berrian, U. S. N. The K-5 is the first submarine to ever disappear beneath the placid waters of the famous old Mississippi.

Clearing Away the Wreckage

Belgium's Activity After the War

Before the war Belgium was noted for density of population and the high standard of comfort among its inhabitants, all enjoying peaceful conditions, and looking forward to their general continuance. It was industrial efficiency and a calm, hopeful spirit that made Belgium so populous, thrifty and legitimately ambitious in business. No country was ever more inoffensive. Live well and contentedly, and let others live likewise, was the evident motto of Belgium. But autocracy had secretly mapped it to be suddenly overrun and crushed when the most powerful army in history swept forward to conquer the world. Belgium met the first impact, and looks it today. It was indomitable through four years of calamity and captivity. But it has been saved. It is clearing away the wreckage. There will be a greater Belgium—one tried by the fire of millions of hostile soldiers and thousands of cannon. It is might, not right that is a suppliant for terms.

What Belgium represented in economics before the war is an instructive example for the rest of the world.
Belgium's old prosperity will return to her, and more abundantly.

An Irish Poetess, Born in County Cavan. Author of "Kathleen Mavourneen"

The words of the famous song,
"Kathleen Mavourneen," were written by Mrs. Julia M. Crawford, an Irish poetess, who was born in County Cavan, toward the close of the eighteenth century. By taking up her abode in a small town in Wiltshire, England, and where she resided for many years, her biographers have been led into the error of supposing that she was of English birth. Besides "Kathleen Mavourneen," she wrote over a hundred lyrics, mostly Irish in sentiment, and published, with F. N. Crouch as the composer of the music, in a volume of "Irish Songs" in 1840. Mrs. Crawford also contributed a great deal of verse for the Metropolitan Magazine, edited by Captain Marryat, in London between 1830 and 1840. It was in this magazine that "Kathleen Mavourneen"
first appeared.

Snake Purloiner Snared By Swallowing Nest-Egg

"I had been losing eggs for some time, and had been laying the loss to some hounds of a neighbor which were frequently around," writes L. B.
Holmes in Boys' Life. "Perhaps some of the loss was just laid to them. One night I found only one egg in a house where I thought there should be quite a number, and was just leaving the house when I discovered a black snake about six feet long, with a knot or bunch in his middle that looked as if it might be an egg. I killed him and carried him to the dwelling house, where I opened him to get the other
egg. It proved to be a glass nest-egg.
It had probably prevented his escaping through the hole he entered the henhouse by and so proved a snare for him."

Prepared Wax Will Keep Varnish From Wearing Off

If varnished hardwood floors are rubbed with prepared wax it will prevent the varnish from wearing off. Rub the wax on with the balls of the fingers, as it takes less wax that way.
Let it dry for 15 or 20 minutes, then polish with a heavy flannel cloth. This need be done only once in five or six weeks except in places where there is a great deal of wear. In those places rub it on every week. All craftsmen, hand-polished furniture is kept in fine condition by the use of wax.

Edgar Allan Poe Hungry as He Wrote Some of His Masterpieces—Died 1849

When Edgar Allan Poe was a magazine editor his salary was $10 a week.
Poe left the New York Quarterly Review in or about 1839 because it, and he and his family, were getting hungrier with each issue, and removed to Philadelphia, accepting a position with the Gentleman's Magazine. After his "Tales of the Arabesque and Grotesque" were published, and when his fame as a poet was growing, he became a member of the staff of Graham's Magazine. His contributions and Mr. Graham's business head increased the circulation of the magazine tenfold within two years. But he resigned the editorship of Graham's because of his restless temperament and returned to New York in 1842. He never regained his footing. Mrs. Poe died in 1847, and he drifted further from his moorings.
He was in such straits in 1848 that he might have snatched at any opportunity. He died in October, 1849.

Braddock Scorning Advice of Americans, Was Licked by French and Indians

In 1775, on the ninth of July, the Battle of the Monongahela, commonly known as Braddock's Defeat, took place. Major General Braddock was the commander of the British forces in America during the French and Indian war. He was sent over from England to expel the French from their encroachments west of the Allegheny mountains. Scorning the advice of the Americans, who were accustomed to the Indians' tactics, Braddock marched his army of 1,200 British regulars and 1,000 Colonial militia openly toward Fort Duquesne and was ambushed and totally routed by a force of 200 French and 600 Indians. The panic-stricken troops were saved from complete destruction by Washington, who with the rank of militia colonel was serving as an aid to Braddock. Braddock himself and 50 of his officers were killed.

Catnip Is Found to Be Cure for Ivy Poisoning, Says Clergyman's Wife.

Mrs. Evelyn S. Trenbath, wife of Rev. Robert W. Trenbath, rector of St. James' Episcopal church of Montclair, N. J., has conferred a boon on sufferers from poison ivy by announcing a remedy which those who have tried it say is a most efficacious remedy. It is simply the green leaves of common catnip rubbed on the affected parts until the juice runs.
This never fails, Mrs. Trenbath says, no matter how advanced the case may be, and is simple to use, especially in the case of children.
The plant grows usually in great abundance behind old barns, and is said to be so antagonistic to the ivy that if planted near it the ivy disappears.

Some Don'ts for All Who Would Toil 365 Days the Year and Taking No Rest.

Don't work 365 days a year, notwithstanding that some other trojans did that year after year in their days of struggle. Take vacations.
Don't, however, let pleasure-seeking supplant success-seeking.
Don't become wholly self-centered.
Don't succumb to the temptation to be too busy to have any time to be rationally sociable.
Don't cultivate exclusiveness.
Don't forget that there are no express trains to the summit of success.
Don't look for any escalator to do your climbing for you.
Don't depend upon others to push
you along.
Don't count upon any "pull" which you yourself did not create.
Don't fancy that others succeeded because of mere luck, and that you are where you are solely because folk did not come your way.
Don't expect to hear Opportunity knocking at your door until you have trained yourself to recognize her when she comes.
Don't eat more than you feel you have to.
Don't oversleep.
And finally—Don't forget that things are apt to go right if we do.—Forbes Magazine.

Tree Juice and Seeds From Which Candles Are Made in Other Lands

There are three kinds of trees from which tallow candles can be made. One is a native of China, and is called by botanists stilingia sebifera. The seeds in its fruit are covered by a waxlike substance used by the natives for making candles.
Another tallow tree grows in the Western Ghats of India, about 4,000 feet above sea level. The height of the tree, which is an evergreen, is about 60 feet. It is called the valeria indica. Its seeds yield a pale yellowish fat, solid and concrete. By boiling the fruit the fat is easily procurable, and is then either made into candles or soap, or it may be burnt in lamps.
A third tree from which tallow candles may be made is the African butter tree, or Shea tree. Its fruit exudes a yellow, greasy juice, which is manipulated in a similar manner to those already described and with equally useful results.

With the Jokesmiths

Business and Scholarship.
"Do you think a college education helps a man in business?"
"Not right away," answered Mr.
Dustin Stax. "But after a man gets rich enough to indulge in litigation, school training will help a great deal
in answering the lawyer's questions."

Not a Life Saver.

"I asked the boss for an increase in salary.
Told him I couldn't live on the sum I was getting."
"What did he say?"
"Told me it was a business not a life-saving institution he was running."

Why He Stayed Away.

"We missed you at the family picnic the other day."
"Yep. I decided it was better to be missed than missed."

her is merely a temporary shelter between shopping tours."

Primitive Independence.

"Well! Well! Here's a queer old codger driving an ox team. It's the first time I've seen an outfit like that in years."

"I suspect the driver is a philosophic man."

"Why so?"

"I noticed he wore a superior smile
just now when he rumbled past a gasoline station."

Secret of Success Is Doing Work Right Way

The secret of success is not a secret.
Nor is it something new. Nor is it something hard to secure. To become more successful, become more efficient.
Do the little things better. So work that you will require less supervision.
The least supervision is needed by the person who makes the fewest mistakes. Do what you can do and what you should do for the institution for which you are working, and do it in the right way, and the size of your income will take care of itself. Let your aim ever be to better the work you are doing.—Thomas Dreier.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Mrs. L. B. Charter and son Glen, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Predmore, visited relatives in Detroit Sunday afternoon.

Several South Lyon-base ball fans took in the Northville-Howell base ball game at Northville, Saturday. For eight innings it was a very fine game. But Howell's pitcher couldn't pitch and fill the other seven positions in the field, so Northville eventually won by a score of 7 to 3.—South Lyon Herald.

W. P. Johnson suffered an added misfortune last week, when he fell, as Mrs. Johnson was trying to assist him to move, and dislocated his hip. He is doing as well as could be expected considering his previous, practically helpless condition and years of illness. Housewives are again reminded—if any of them need to be of the fine special prizes for the best collections in the preserved fruit line again to be awarded at the fair. The premiums offered by Mr. Ponsford are certainly well worth having, and his generosity in this particular respect has brought out some magnificent displays at our two previous fairs.

M. E. Atchison made a business trip to Alma and Mt. Pleasant last Friday. W. J. Fitzgerald of Monroe was in town on Labor day. A new home for the family is under construction in that city.

The steamshovel work on our Northville streets has been completed and the big machines will be put in operation elsewhere.

KILLING A TOWN.

An exchange prints the following receipt for killing a town:

"Underrate every present and prospective enterprise, speak ill of the churches and schools; enlarge the vices of the people; withhold patronage from your merchants and tradesmen and buy your goods and groceries at some other place; never subscribe or support your local papers, and if you are in business, never spend a penny for advertising."

Water and the Human Body.

The specific gravity of water and the human body is virtually the same. A body in the water is supported by equal pressure at all points. It is more likely to be at ease than under other circumstances. It is, therefore, more likely that it may move without pain. So cripples are often given their exercise in the water.
