THIRD ANNUAL FAIR— A GREAT SUCCESS

THE ATTENDANCE WAS LARGE AND EVERYBODY WAS PLEASED AND HAPPY.

QUALITY OF EXHIBITS NOT SUR-PASSED ANYWHERE—SPLENDID PROGRAMS GIVEN.

The third annual Northville Wayne County Fair which closed last Saturday night was a great success from every point of view. The weather was ideal, the exhibits were all of a very high order, surpassing those of former years in extent and quality, and the attendance was all that could have been hoped for by the management. In fact, no county fair in the state this year has been a greater or more satisfactory success, and none have shown better displays or given the patrons a better program. From the opening day to the close everything passed off smoothly and showed the result of the careful and painstaking planning of the officials and superintendents. The people responded splendidly to the support of the enterprise and visitors as well as home folk were most generous in their words of praise. In all departments the displays were most creditable and they were arranged in an attractive and presentable manner, and columns could be written, if space permitted, in praise of those who directed the affair. The whole affair was a distinct credit to this community and a very high mark was set for all succeeding fairs.

SHOOTING TOURNAMENT.

The shooting tournament held on the opening day, was attended by 35 gunners and their families, who motored here from all parts of the state. Geo. Volk of Toledo, won the 100 registered target event with a score of 98 breaks. B. S. Gaylord of Owosso and A. M. Wesner of Flint tied for second place with a score of 96 and 100.

Frank Holznagle of Birmingham and Mr. Wesner shooting from 21 yards tied with 45 out of 50 for the Michigan Handicap championship trophy (a beautiful gold watch). In the "shoot off," at 25 birds, Holznagle won by one target.

Mrs. L. G. Vogel of Detroit, lady champion of the United States was in attendance, and several members of the Muskegon Gun Club were on the firing line. Lapeer, Bay City, Jackson and Battle Creek were also represented.

FAIR NOTES.

The various refreshment tents did a big business every day, and the ladies who worked so hard to feed the crowds had the satisfaction of reaping a good financial reward for their different societies. A patron at one of the local booths was heard by a Record reporter to remark—between bites—"You can certainly get good things to eat at this fair."

Saturday afternoon an airplane sent by the Wayne County Sheriff's office with Sheriff Coffin himself, sailed over the fair grounds, just as the magnificent Moslem Temple drill was in progress.

The total number of articles entered in the women's department was 641 and 340 of these were in the fancy-work section, the remainder including the canned fruits, baked goods, candy and flowers.

C. A. Ponsford was Secretary Neal's right-hand man all through the fair and their efficient office force consisted of Wendell Miller and Misses Thelma Bennett and Mary Sowles.

The celebrated and unique character, Railroad Jack, appeared at the fair in a few role, in addition to his usual oratorical stunts—that of demonstrator of the Fordson tractor exhibited by our local dealer, D. B. Bunn. The demonstration was in the nature of an impromptu effort, as the versatile Jack successfully manipulated the "creetur" after only an hour's instruction.

The winners of the special prizes given by J. A. Huff for certain specified baked goods were won by Mrs. Leroy Stewart, first; Mrs. A. E. Fuller, second, and Mrs. Volney Miller, Birmingham, third.

The prize money in the girls' baking contest was divided among all the entrants, as but a small number competed.

Many compliments were heard for the manner in which the duties of mounted marshal were discharged by Mr. Ralph Davis of Ypsilanti, who also took part in the saddle and driving-horse events.

SUDDEN DEATH OF JESSE W. CLARK

The entire community was greatly shocked Monday by the sudden passing of one of the best known residents of this vicinity, Jesse Worden Clark, who died at the wheel of his automobile early Monday afternoon just after leaving his home apparently in his usual health and spirits. Mr. Clark was born in Novi township Dec. 6, 1872 his parental home being on the base line, west of Northville and his entire life has been passed in the village and vicinity. He was of a kindly genial nature which made him popular with all who knew him, and greatly beloved in his own family circle. Mr. Clark was twice married, first to Edith Freeman, who died 17 years ago. His second wife was Miss Ella Clark had served this township efficiently as of this place, who survive him. He leaves also one son, Eural, and a brother, Gilbert, Clark of Northville and had served this township efficiently as Highway commissioner, and for several years past had been connected with the work of the Wayne County Road Commission. In company with his son, he had just purchased the coal business of Ambler & Schoultz, and was preparing to immediately open an office, having already taken over the business.

He was a member of the local lodges of the Masonic order, the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of America.

Funeral services were held from the home Wednesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. C. Francis, with interment in Rural Hill cemetery.

FAMILY GATHERING.

A gathering of the VanDyne family was held Sunday, September 28, at the A. A. Lumpert residence, Main street, in honor of C. N. VanDyne of Algonquin, Ill. W. D. VanDyne of Chicago and E. W. VanDyne of Bentley, Mich. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. S. F. VanDyne of Rushton; Mrs. Charles LaPearl and daughter, Helen, Mr. and Mrs. M. Matthews, Lou VanDyne and Frank Heath of Pontiac, Charles Griswold an son, Will Griswold of Detroit; Mrs. E. Groner, Mr. and Mrs. James VanDyne and son, Wayne, of Northville.

Mrs. Fred Knapp of Monroe visited her aunt, Mrs. C. J. Ball, during the fair week.

About 40 or 50 cans of fruit were stolen from the cellar of the Cavell residence on Griswold road and Butler avenue sometime between last week Thursday and this week Monday.

"YOU DIRTY, LOW-DOWN THIEF!"

Synopsis.—In 1832 Lieutenant Knox of the regular army is on duty at Fort Armstrong, Rock Island, Ill., in territory threatened by disaffected Indians. The commandant sends him with dispatches to St. Louis. He takes passage on the steamer Warrior and makes the acquaintance of Judge Beaucare, rich planter, and of Joe Kirby (the Devil's Own), notorious gambler. Knox learns Judge Beaucare has a daughter, Eloise. He also learns strange things about the Beaucare family.

"You mean—"

"In the form of a child, born to a quadroon girl named Delia. The mother, it seems, was able in some way to convince the judge of the child's parentage. All this happened shortly before Beaucare's second marriage, and previous to the time when Haines came to the landing. Exactly what occurred is not clear, or what explanation was made to the bride. The affair must have cut Beaucare's pride deeply, but he had to face the conditions. It ended in his making the girl Delia his housekeeper, while her child—the offspring of Adelbert Beaucare—was brought up as a daughter. A year or so later the second wife gave birth to a female child, and those two girls have grown up together exactly as though they were sisters. Haines insists that neither of them knows to this day otherwise."

"But that would be simply impossible," I insisted. "The mother would never permit."

"The mother! Which mother? The slave mother could gain nothing by confession, and the judge's wife died when her baby was less than two years old. Delia, practically mothered the both of them, and is still in complete charge of the house."

"You met her?"

"She was pointed out to me—a gray-haired, dignified woman, so nearly white as scarcely to be suspected of negro blood."

"Yet still a slave?"

"I cannot answer that. Haines himself did not know. If emancipation papers had ever been executed it was done early, before he took charge of Beaucare's legal affairs. The matter never came to his attention."

"But, captain, I exclaimed, 'do you realize what this might mean? If Judge Beaucare has not issued papers of freedom this woman Delia is still a slave.'"

"Certainly."

"And under the law her child was born into slavery?"

"No doubt of that."

"But the unspeakable horror of it—this young woman brought up as free, educated and refined, suddenly to discover herself to be a negro under the law, and a slave. Why, suppose Beaucare should die, or lose his property suddenly; she could be sold to the cotton fields, into bondage to anyone who would pay the price for her."

"There is nothing on record. Haines assured himself as to that some years ago."

"What are the two girls named?"

"Rene and Eloise."

"Which one is the daughter?"

"Really, lieutenant, I do not know. You see I was never introduced, but merely gained a glimpse of them in the garden. I doubt if I would recognize the one from the other now. You see all this story was told me later."

I sat there a long while, after he had gone below, the taciturn mate at the wheel. Totally unknown to me as these two mysterious girls were, their strange story fascinated my imagination. What possible tragedy lay before them in the years? What horrible revelation to wrench them asunder—to change in a single instant the quiet current of their lives? In spite of every effort every lurking hope, some way I could not rid myself of the thought that Beaucare—either enough, or discretion, to refrain, realizing dimly that not even in the remotest degree, had I any excuse for such action. This was no affair of mine. No, indeed, would I have found much opportunity for private conversation, for only a moment or two later Kirby joined him, and the two remained together, talking earnestly, until the song called us all to supper.

"Across the long table, bare of cloth, the coarse food served in pewter dishes. I was struck by the drawn, ghastly look in Beaucare's face. He had aged perceptibly in the last few hours, and during the meal scarcely exchanged a word with anyone, eating silently, his eyes downcast. Kirby, however, was the life of the company, and the diners roared at his humorous stories and anecdotes of adventure while outside it grew dark and the little warrior struggled cautiously through the waters, seeking the channel in the gloom."

CHAPTER III.

The End of the Game.

It must have been nearly midnight before I finally decided to seek a few hours' rest below, descending the short ladder and walking forward along the open deck for one last glance ahead. Some time the next day we were to be in St. Louis, and this expectation served to brighten my thoughts. I turned back along the deserted deck, only pausing a moment to glance carelessly in through the front windows of the main cabin. The forward portion was wrapped in darkness, and unoccupied, but beyond, toward the rear of the long saloon, a considerable group of men were gathered closely about a small table, above which a swinging lamp burned brightly, the rays of light illuminating the various faces. Gambling was no novelty on the great river in those days, gambling for high stakes, and surely no ordinary game, involving a small sum, would arouse the depth of interest displayed by these men. Some instinct told me that the chief players would be Kirby and Beaucare, and with quickening pulse I opened the cabin door and entered.

No one noted my approach, or so much as glanced up, the attention of the crowd riveted upon the players. There were four holding cards—the judge, Kirby, Carver and McAfee; but I judged at a glance that the latter two were merely in the game as a pretense, the betting having already gone far beyond the limit of their resources. Without a thought as to the cards they held my eyes sought the faces of the two chief players, and then visioned the stakes displayed on the table before them. McAfee and Carver were clearly enough out of it, their cards still gripped in their fingers, as they leaned breathlessly forward to observe more closely the play. The judge sat upright, his attitude strained, staring down at his hand, his face white and eyes burning feverishly. That he had been drinking heavily was evident, but Kirby fronted him in apparent cold indifference, his feelings completely masked, with the cards he held bunched in his hands and entirely concealed from view. Between the two rested a stack of gold coin, a roll of crushed bills and a legal paper of some kind, the exact nature of which I could not determine. It was evident that a fortune already rested on that table, awaiting the flip of a card. The silence, the breathless attention, convinced me that the crisis had been reached—it was the judge's move; he must cover the last bet or throw down his hand a loser.

Perspiration beaded his forehead, and he crunched the cards savagely in his hands. His glance swept past the crowd as though he saw nothing of their faces.

"Another drink, Sam," he called, the voice trembling. He tossed down the glass of liquor as though it were so much water, but made no other effort to speak. You could hear the strained breathing of the men.

"Well," said Kirby sneeringly, his cold gaze surveying his motionless opponent. "You seem to be taking your time. Do you cover my bet?"

Someone laughed nervously, and a voice sang out over my shoulder, "You might as well go the whole hog, judge. The niggers won't be no good without the land, 'er work 'em on. Fling 'em into the pot—they're as good as money."

Beaucare looked up, red-eyed, into the impassive countenance opposite. His lips twitched yet managed to make words issue between them.

"How about that, Kirby?" he asked hoarsely. "Will you accept a bill of sale?"

Kirby grinned, shuffling his hand carelessly.

"Why not? 'Twon't be the first time

I've played for niggers. They are worth so much gold down the river. What have you got?"

"I can't tell offhand," sullenly. "About twenty field hands."

"And house servants?"

"Three or four."

The gambler's lips set more tightly, a dull gleam creeping into his eyes.

"See here, Beaucare," he hissed sharply. "This 's my game, and I play square and never squeal. I know about what you've got, for I've looked them over; thought we might get down to this sometime. I can make a pretty fair guess as to what your niggers are worth. That's why I just raised you ten thousand, and put up the money. Now if you think this is bluff, call me."

"What do you mean?"

"That I will accept your niggers as covering my bet."

"The field hands?"

Kirby smiled broadly.

"The whole bunch—field hands and house servants. Most of them are old."

I doubt if altogether they will bring that amount, but I'll take the risk. Throw in a blanket full of sale, and we'll turn up our cards. If you won't do that the pile is mine as it stands."

Beaucare again wet his lips, staring at the uncovered cards in his hands. He could not lose; with what he held no combination was possible which would beat him. Yet in spite of this knowledge the cold, sneering confidence of Kirby brought with it a strange fear. The man was a professional gambler. What gave him such recklessness? Why should he be so eager to risk such a sum on an inferior hand? McAfee, sitting next him, leaned over, managed to gain swift glimpse at what he held, and eagerly whispered to him a word of encouragement. The judge straightened up in his chair, grasped a filled glass someone had placed at his elbow, and gulped down the contents. The whispered words, coupled with the fiery liquor, gave him fresh courage.

"By heaven, Kirby, I'll do it!" he blurted out. "You can bluff me on the hand I've got. Give me a sheet of paper, somebody—yes, that will do."

He scribbled a half-dozen lines, tautly digging the pen into the sheet in his fierce eagerness, and then signed the document, flinging the paper across toward Kirby.

"There, you bloodsucker," he cried insolently. "Is that all right? Will that do?"

The imperturbable gambler read it over slowly, carefully deciphering each word, his thin lips tightly compressed.

"You might add the words, 'This includes every chattel slave legally belonging to me,'" he said grimly.

"That is practically what I did say."

"Then you can certainly have no objection to putting it in the exact words I choose," calmly. "I intend to have what is coming to me. If I win, and I know the law."

Beaucare again wrote in the required extra line.

"Now what?" he asked.

"Let McAfee there sign it as a witness, and then toss it over into the pile." He smiled, showing a line of white teeth beneath his mustache.

"Nice little pot, gentlemen—the judge must hold some cards to take a chance like that," the words uttered with a sneer. "Fours, at least, or maybe he has had the luck to pick a straight flush."

Beaucare's face reddened, and his eyes grew hard.

"That's my business," he said tersely. "Sign it, McAfee, and I'll call this crowing cockerel. You young fool, I played poker before you were born. There now, Kirby, I've covered your bet."

"Perhaps you would prefer to raise it?"

"You hell-bound—no! That is my limit, and you know it. Don't crawl now, or do any more bluffing! Show your hand—I've called you."

Kirby sat absolutely motionless, his cards lying face down upon the table, the white fingers of one hand resting lightly upon them, the other arm coiled. He never once removed his gaze from Beaucare's face, and his expression did not change, except for the almost insulting sneer on his lips. The silence was profound, the deeply interested men leaning forward, even holding their breath in intense eagerness. Each realized that a fortune lay on the table; knew that the old judge had staked his all on the value of those five unseen cards gripped in his fingers. Again, as though to bolster up his shaken courage, he stared at the face of each, then lifted his bloodshot eyes to the impassive face opposite.

"Beaucare drew two cards," he whispered an excited voice near me.

"Hell! So did Kirby," replied another. "They're both of 'em old hands."

The sharp exhaust of a distant steam pipe below punctuated the silence, and several glanced about apprehensively. As this noise ceased Beaucare lost all control over his nerves.

"Come on, play your hand," he demanded, "or I'll throw my cards in your face."

The insinuating sneer on Kirby's lips changed into the semblance of a smile. Slowly, deliberately, never once glancing down at the face of his cards, he turned them up one by one with his white fingers, his challenging eyes on the judge; but the others saw what was revealed—a ten-spot, a knave, a queen, a king and an ace.

"A straight flush!" someone yelled excitedly. "D—d if I ever saw one before!"

For an instant Beaucare never moved, never uttered a sound. He seemed to doubt the evidence of his own eyes, and to have lost the power of speech. Then, from nerveless hands his own cards fell face downward, still unrevealed upon the table.

The next moment he was on his feet, the chair in which he had been seated flung crashing behind him on the deck.

"You thief!" he roared. "You dirty, low-down thief; I held four aces—where did you get the fifth one?"

Kirby did not so much as move, nor betray even by a change of expression his sense of the situation. Perhaps his anticipated just such an explosion and was fully prepared to meet it. One hand, still resting easily on the table, the other, remaining hidden.

"So you claim to have held four aces," he said coldly. "Where are they?"

McAfee swept the discarded hand face upward and the crowd bent forward to look at four aces and a king.

"That was the judge's hand," he declared soberly. "I saw it myself, before he called you, and told him to stay."

Kirby laughed—an ugly laugh showing his white teeth.

"The hell you did? Thought you knew a good poker hand, I reckon. Well, you see I knew a better one, and it strikes me I am the one to ask questions," he sneered. "Look here, you men; I held one ace from the shuffle. Now what I want to know is where Beaucare ever got his four? Pleasant little trick of you two—only this time it failed to work."

Beaucare uttered one mad oath, and I endeavored to grasp him, but missed my clutch. The force of his lurching body as he sprang forward overturned the table, the stakes jingling to the deck, but Kirby reached his feet in time to avoid the shock. His hand, which had been hidden, shot out suddenly, the fingers grasping a revolver, but he did not fire. Before the judge had gone half the distance he stopped, reeled suddenly, clutching at his throat, and plunged sideways. His body struck the overturned table, but McAfee and I grasped him, lowering the stricken man gently to the floor.

CHAPTER IV.

Kirby Shows His Hand.

That scene, with all its surroundings, remains indelibly impressed upon my memory. It will never fade while I live. The long, narrow, dingy cabin of the little Warrior, its forward end unlighted and in a shadow, the single swinging lamp, suspended to a blackened beam above where the table had stood, barely revealing through its smoky chimney the after portion showing a row of stateroom doors on either side, some standing ajar, and that crowd of excited men surging about the fallen body of Judge Beaucare, unable as yet to fully realize the exact nature of what had occurred, but conscious of impending tragedy. The overturned table and chairs, the motionless body of the judge, with Kirby standing erect just beyond, his face as clear-cut under the glare of light as a cameo, the revolver yet glistening in his extended hand, all composed a picture not easily forgotten.

Still this impression was only that of a brief instant. With the next I was upon my knees, lifting the fallen head, and seeking eagerly to discern some glimmering evidence of life in the inert body. There was none, not so much as the faint flutter of a pulse, or suggestion of a heart throb. The man was already dead before he fell, dead before he struck the overturned table.

"Judge Beaucare is dead," I announced gravely. "Nothing more can be done for him now."

The pressing circle of men hemming us in fell back silently, reverently, the sound of their voices sinking into a subdued murmur. As I stood there, almost unconscious of their presence, still staring down at that upturned face, now appearing manly and patriotic in the strange dignity of its death mask, a mad burst of anger swept me, a fierce yearning for revenge—a feeling that this was no less a murder because nature had struck the blow. With hot words of reproach upon my lips I gazed across toward where Kirby had been standing a moment before. The gambler was no longer there—his place was vacant.

"Where is Kirby?" I asked, incredulous of his sudden disappearance.

For a moment no one answered; then a voice in the crowd croaked hoarsely:

"He just slipped out through that after door to the deck—him and Bill Carver."

"And the stakes?"

Another answered in a thin, piping treble.

"I reckon them two cusses took along the most of it. Enyhow 'tain't yere, 'cept maybe a few coins that rolled under the table. It wasn't Joe Kirby who picked up the swag, fer I was a watchin' him, an' he never ought let go of his gun. That damn sneak Carver must-a did it, an' then the two of 'em just sorter hatrally faded away through that dook thar."

McAfee swore through his black beard, the full truth swiftly dawning upon him.

"Hell!" he exploded. "So that's the way of it. Then them two was in cahoots from the beginnin'. That's what I told the judge last night, but he said he didn't give a whoop; that he knew more poker than both of 'em put together. I tell yer the fellers stole that money, an' they killed Beaucare."

"Hold on a minute," I broke in, my mind cleared of its first passion, and realizing the necessity of control. "Let's keep cool, and go slow. While I believe McAfee is right, we are not going to bring the judge back to life by turning into a mob. There is no proof of cheating, and Kirby has the law behind him. When the judge died he didn't own enough to pay his funeral expenses. Now see here, I happen to know that he left two young daughters. Just stop, and think of them. We saw this game played, and there isn't a man here who believes it was played on the square—that two such hands were ever dealt, or drawn, in poker. We can't prove that Kirby manipulated things to that end; not one of us saw how he worked the trick. There is no chance to get him that way. Then what is it we ought to do? Why, I say, make the thief disgorge, and hanging won't do the business."

"Leave this settlement with me. Then I'll go at it. Two of three of you pick up the body, and carry it to Beaucare's stateroom—forward there. The rest of you better straighten up the deck."

Then I went.

The Revolver Yet Glistening in His Extended Hand.

cabin, while I go up and talk with Throckmorton a moment. After that I may want a few of you to go along when I hunt up Kirby. If he proves ugly we'll know how to handle him, McAfee."

"I'm over here."

"It was just going to say that you better stay here, and keep the fellows all quiet in the cabin. We don't want our plan to leak out, and it will be best to let Kirby and Carver think that everything is all right; that nothing is going to be done."

I waited while several of them gently picked up the body, and bore it forward into the shadows. I slipped away, silently gained the door, and, unobserved, emerged onto the deserted deck without. The sudden change in environment sobered me, and caused me to pause and seriously consider the importance of my mission. Nothing less potent than either fear, or force, would ever make Kirby disgorge. Quite evidently the gambler had deliberately set out to ruin the planter, to rob him of every dollar. Even at the last moment he had coldly insisted on receiving a bill of sale so worded as to leave no possible loophole. He demanded all. The death of the judge, of course, had not been contemplated, but this in no way changed the result. That was an accident, yet I imagined, might not be altogether unwelcome, and I could not rid my memory of that shining weapon in Kirby's hand, or the thought that he would have used it had the need arose. Would he not then fight just as fiercely to keep, as he had to gain? Indeed, I had but one fact upon which I might hope to base action—every watcher believed those cards had been stacked, and that Beaucare was robbed by means of a trick. Yet, could this be proven? Would any one of those men actually swear that he had seen a suspicious move? If not, then what was there left me except a mere bluff? Absolutely nothing.

Knox escapes from the river only to encounter greater danger.

Fingers Tireless Travelers.

Typists' fingers are the most amazing of going tremendous distances without the fatigue that would come to the feet and legs in performing a similar journey. In ordinary typewriting the hand may travel, according to an expert, 10,000 miles a year and not indicate any impairment in efficiency. This refers, of course, to the average typist in an office.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

If you were busy being kind, Before you knew it you would find You'd soon forget to think 'twas true That someone was unkind to you.

If you were busy being glad And cheering people who are sad, Although your heart might ache a bit You'd soon forget to notice it.

SOME FAVORITE DISHES.

This time of the year is filled with such sunny days, and even warm ones, that it is well to keep to the lighter foods and simple repasts until the first chilly days which give the appetite a zest and vigor.

The oyster now has come again to his own and is served fresh, preferably, though in a stew, fried, creamed, or escalloped will always be popular with many.

Creamed Beef.—Chop one pound of beef from the round; put into a hot pan and stir until all is seared. Add one tablespoonful of butter and as soon as it is melted, dredge the beef with one tablespoonful of flour; stir until the flour is browned. Add one cupful of cream, boil up, season with salt and pepper and serve on hot toast.

Delmonico Hash.—Take a pound of finely chopped meat from the top of the round, put it into a hot frying pan with two tablespoonfuls of butter, one small shredded onion and cook until the beef is nicely browned; add one-half cupful of hot water or, better, soup stock, and eight chopped potatoes, previously cooked. Season with salt, paprika and chopped parsley.

Cheese and Olive Canapes.—Cut stale bread into one-quarter-inch slices. Shape with a small oblong cutter with rounded corners. Cream butter and add an equal quantity of soft, rich cheese; season with salt. Spread on the bread and garnish with one-quarter-inch border of finely chopped olives and a piece of red and green pepper cut in fancy shapes in the center of each.

Moravian Apple Pie.—Core and pare six even-sized apples. Place in a covered pan, with a teaspoonful of lemon juice, a little of the yellow rind, a cupful of sugar and water enough to cover the bottom of the dish. Stew until tender. Line a deep pastry plate with rich pastry; place the apples in it, fill the centers with peach marmalade and put strips of pastry over the top. Bake in a quick oven and serve with cream.

Russel Sandwiches.—Take an equal amount of cold boiled chicken and tongue, a dozen olives and six hard-cooked eggs; mix all together and chop as fine as possible. Work into a paste by the addition of mayonnaise dressing, then season and spread on buttered bread.

"To judge with candor and speak no wrong. The feeble to support against the strong. To soothe the wretched and the poor to feed, Will cover many an idle, foolish deed."

THE SEASONABLE WORD.

In the autumn, when there is such an abundance of vegetables, the frugal housewife will provide for winter, when there is less of a choice.

Olive Oil Pickles.—Take 100 small cucumbers, sliced thin, leaving on the peeling, three pints of small onions also sliced thin, three ounces of white mustard-seed, one ounce of celery seed, one ounce of white pepper, two scant cupfuls of olive oil. Add one and two-thirds cupfuls of salt, and add to the cucumbers; let stand three hours. Let the sliced onions stand in cold water three hours. Drain well, and mix the onions and cucumbers with the oil and the spices. Put into jars, and fill the jars with good vinegar. Keep in a cold place. Good in ten days.

Corn Relish.—Cut corn from twelve ears, chop one small head of cabbage, sprinkle salt over the cabbage, mix well and let stand three hours. Drain off the water and put corn and cabbage together; add one cupful of sugar, two quarts of vinegar, one-half cupful of mustard, four small red peppers chopped. Cook all until tender, then put into sterile cans and seal.

Piccalilli.—Take two gallons of green tomatoes chopped fine, eight large onions also chopped, three quarts of vinegar, six tablespoonfuls of mustard seed, one tablespoonful each of cloves, allspice and mace, one tablespoonful of celery seed and two pounds of granulated sugar. Let the tomatoes and onions stand over night, sprinkled with salt; drain in the morning and mix with the spices and boil until tender.

Mint Vinegar.—Put into a quart jar enough fresh mint, carefully washed and dried, to fill it loosely, fill up with vinegar and let stand well covered for three weeks. Strain, bottle and cork, and the flavored vinegar will keep for years. Tarragon, chervil or any other herb may be used in the same manner.

Mushrooms make fine catsup. Arrange in layers in salt and let stand over night. Drain and cook with spices as one's taste desires.

WAY OF THE HEART

By WINIFRED C. O'BRIEN.

The canoe drifted lazily with the current close to the low bank of a placid, narrow river that ran through the woods. A young man lay in its bottom with eyes closed, his face marked by the expression of bitterness and the stern set mouth. Edgar Rawley, noted young painter and received in the best society, was seeking balm for a bruised heart and hurt pride.

He had asked Marion Bracebridge, one of the beauties of the debutantes to marry him, and after a few months' engagement, she had, without warning, sent back his ring with a cruel little note that "she thought that they were not congenial enough to marry."

Then the news came of her engagement, and the engagement of the season's belle, Marjorie Brooke; Marion, to Alan Cos, the banker, and Marjorie's to Stanley Lewis, the poet. Half the young girls and all the women were frankly in love with Stanley and they envied Marjorie her possession.

Just as he was sending the canoe out into mid-stream with a sweeping stroke, he heard a loud call for help, and looking up the bank he espied a girl in a pink dress with her hands held in front of her, seeming to push some object away. With a spring, Edgar landed on the bank and picking up a large club which was sometimes used to push boats out into the stream, he hastened to the scene.

When he neared the girl he gave a start of surprise as he saw that it was Marjorie Brooke, but he stifled a cry of alarm for there on the log was a three-foot diamond rattler, swishing nearer and nearer, and rattling fiercely. With a well-aimed blow the club landed with stinging force on the head of the rattler, crushing it immediately, and both watched the slimy body with its beautiful diamond markings writhe in its death agonies.

Then he turned to the girl: "There are not many of those large rattlers around here. I am surprised that this one should have ventured out at all."

Suddenly she made a little rush, and throwing her arms about him, kissed him firmly on the mouth and then flew up the path before he had vaguely sensed her action. Somehow it was a pleasurable thought that she had kissed him, he thought that he must be lacking in something so that no woman could love him. He turned slowly and then his eyes caught a book which she had dropped, and stooping he picked it up, also a little lace-bordered handkerchief. "Without realizing what he was doing he had read the page that was lying open. 'How could I ever have thought that I was in love with that person.'

"I will never be deceived by my feelings again. I mean never to fall in love if I can help it."

There was more on the closely written page, but that was all that Edgar read before he came to himself that he was reading a girl's personal secrets.

Thinking to send them to Marjorie on the following day, he dropped them in his pocket and turned the canoe homeward. A few hours later in his den, smoking, suddenly he had an inspiration, and hastily he ran up the short flight of stairs to his lighted studio.

There was an unfinished painting here of the low bank; the stunted fir trees and the sweeping forest beyond the placid river. With quick, sure strokes he sketched in the figure of a young girl in a pink dress, with a large shade hat hanging down from her shoulders, her hands stretched out and an expression of such fear that involuntarily would make one shudder, and lest the venomous snake, with its diamond markings. He called the picture "Fears," and knew without doubt that it would be well received at the prize exhibition in the fall.

The following afternoon he made his way to the little cottage which Marjorie occupied and found her drying her hair by the hedge. She thanked him rather distantly for the return of her property, and then began to talk of the various nothings that make up conversation when two persons are occupied with their own thoughts. Suddenly he said "I did not know that you broke your engagement to Stanley Lewis, until I read the paper yesterday."

She looked at him for a moment and then said: "Well, it is a woman's privilege to change her mind." Then she hastily changed the conversation to other matters that concerned the world which they had left behind.

The days slipped by, and the summer was drawing slowly to a close and both vaguely felt that parting would be hard, yet neither would acknowledge to themselves that they had grown to care. Then, one afternoon, Marjorie was not at her accustomed place and Edgar learned that she had left suddenly for home.

Three months later, in the large drawing room at the fashionable town home of one of the great society leaders, an exhibition of the prize paintings was held, and the prize picture which had won the medal at the academy was to be shown for the first time. While the polite chorus of oh's and ah's was rippling through the room, out in the conservatory where Edgar had followed Marjorie just after his picture, as the prize picture, had been exhibited, there was another scene for a delightful picture. "But you see I knew that I was beginning to care and so—" But the rest of the words were mumbled against his coat sleeve and for the second time the dainty lips were pressed against Edgar's.

DAIRY FACTS

BETTER LIVE STOCK DESIRED

Authentic Incidents Related Showing What May Be Expected From Improved Methods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The following authenticated incidents are cited by the United States department of agriculture in its "Better Stock—Better Stock" campaign to show what American farmers and stockmen may expect through improved methods of breeding and handling animals.

One Cow Equals Five.—A New Jersey boy was influenced to buy a high grade cow for $155. The cow on freshening gave 24 quarts of milk and kept it up for a long period. The father owned five cows, the average for the neighborhood. They were fresh in the spring. Their product did not equal the product of the cow owned by the son—five times the labor and five times the feed, in comparison with one good cow.

High-Class Bully Beef.—An Oklahoma farmer had two registered Short-horn yearling bulls that he priced at $100 each for breeding purposes. A butcher saw the bulls, asked the price, but learned that they were registered and that it would take $100 each to buy them. He bought them, killed them, and stated that they were the cheapest cattle he had bought for some time, because they cut the better kinds of beef and more of it.

Valuable Stock—Valuable Offspring.—In several counties of North Carolina more purebred live stock has been purchased during the past year at the higher prices which have prevailed than in any other year. Hogs were never so high, and yet hundreds of boys bought purebred pigs at high prices with the expectation of selling their offspring. Through the county agents many hundreds of pigs bred by the boys have been sold at good prices and this is stimulating the extension of purebred hogs.

Better Poultry—More Meat.—In a southern community, following the introduction of well bred poultry for breeding, there was noticeable improvement in the size of the next generation of the fowls. The average weight of the birds marketed was 25 per cent greater than previously, according to the observation of an experienced poultry buyer.

CHEAP FLY PAINT FOR COWS

Formula Given by Expert of Kansas Agricultural College—Apply It With Brush When Cool.

It is often cheaper and easier to buy the mixture rather than make it for a few cents, but if you want to make it yourself here is the formula as given by George A. Dean, professor of entomology in the Kansas Agricultural college:

For cattle use two parts of pulverized resin, one part of soap shavings, one-half part of water, one part of kerosene, one part oil of tar, one part fish oil, three parts water.

In making this boil the resin, soap and one-half part of water until the resin is dissolved and then add the three parts water, oil of tar, kerosene and fish oil; and boil well for 15 minutes, being careful to keep the mixture well stirred. Put it on with a brush when cool. In using this mixture it will be necessary to make an application every day for two or three days, and after this once every three or five days is sufficient.

ADVISABLE TO SKIM CREAM

Saving Can Be Accomplished by Turn of Screw and Is Well Worth Effort Required.

In skimming a hundred pounds of 55 per cent cream 15 more pounds of skim milk is kept on the farm than when the same amount of 20 per cent cream is taken. This saving can be accomplished by a turn of the cream screw, and at present feed prices is well worth the effort required. More skim milk on the farms also means more calves raised to furnish meat and milk for all. Milk producers are paid for the butterfat in cream, not for the water and other constituents. This makes it advisable to skim a rich cream, so that as much valuable skim milk as possible may be saved for feeding purposes.

To Commemorate the Sailing of the Mayflower

The movement to celebrate next year the tercentenary of the sailing of the Mayflower seems attracting far more attention in England than in America. Simultaneous observance is to be had in both countries, but the English plans, under the direction of a committee of which Lord Bryce is deputy president, have progressed so rapidly as to be announced.

The English celebration will give full scope to that liking for pageantry which marks England. The lives of those Englishmen who fled from the mother country for conscience sake are to be reconstructed with fidelity. Not merely the sailing of the Mayflower, but the whole Pilgrim movement will be commemorated. There will be pageants and moving pictures and ceremonies at Austerfield, Scrooby, Boston, Cambridge and other places in England where the Free church had its adherents.

An American delegation will be invited to attend these observances, and work on the restoration of the ancestral home of Washington, at Sulgrave, is being rushed, in the hope that its formal dedication may take place. Then a combined American and British delegation will visit Holland, "the common harbor of all heresies," where the Pilgrims sought refuge from 1609 to 1620. Meetings will be held at Amsterdam, Leyden, Delftshaven and The Hague. The celebration will culminate with the sailing of another Mayflower, laden with Englishmen and Americans, from the port of Plymouth, a landing being made on the storied Rock, or rather, where the Rock was.

Other compliments to America are reported. The Saint-Gaudens monument of Lincoln is to be installed in Westminster, while the Barnard "Lincoln" will be unveiled at Manchester. The English have established a chair or lectureship (at a cost of $75,000) in American history, literature and institutions, and there has been provided an annual scholarship to give young British scholars an opportunity of one or two years' research and study in America.

July Imports Break Record

Were Largest in History of the Country

Foreign trade of the United States came nearer reaching a balance during July than it has in any month in several years, the department of commerce announced, owing to an immense increase in imports and a sharp reduction in exports.

Imports valued at $345,000,000 entered American ports, the total exceeding the amount brought to the United States during any previous month in history.

Exports dropped $350,000,000 from the high figure of June, but amounted to $570,000,000. For the seven months ended with July exports totaled $4,618,000,000, while imports amounted to $1,955,000,000 for the period.

Believe Magnetic Poles Have Slow Motion Around the Geographical Poles

The geographical poles of the earth are the extremities of the imaginary line passing through its center of gravity and about which it revolves, and are therefore symmetrically located with regard to the equator. The magnetic poles, however, are not coincident with the geographical poles, but are they diametrically opposite to each other. Prior to the recent attempt of Amundsen to determine the north magnetic pole, the only other was by Capt James Ross in June, 1831, who found the dip of the magnetic needle to be 89 degrees, 30 minutes, 5 seconds, in latitude 79 degrees, 5 minutes, 2 seconds, north, and longitude 96 degrees, 45 minutes, 8 seconds, west, which is in King William Land, Canada. The result of Amundsen's observations has not yet been published by the Norwegian authorities. For the south magnetic pole, from a consideration of all the results available, according to the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, the position of latitude 72 degrees, 7 minutes, south, and longitude 156 degrees, east, has been tentatively adopted. These values are only roughly approximated and for that reason are given only in degrees and tenths. By reason of the annual variation of the magnetic needle, it is believed the magnetic poles are not stationary, but have a slow motion around the geographical poles. The subject is shrouded in mystery and constitutes one of the many as yet unsolved problems in terrestrial physics.

First Safety Bicycle Was Placed on Market in 1880

The first of the safety bicycles was put on the market in 1880. In this the high front wheel was reduced and the rear wheel was about two-thirds the height of the front one. The machines with wheels of the same size appeared in 1885. Bicycling began to be popular about 1891, and the "craze" reached its height about 1895, when wheels had become low enough in price to be within the means of the multitude.

Bagdad Is Important as a Distributing Center.

Attention is directed to the importance of Bagdad as a distributing center for cotton and woolen textiles. Bagdad supplies the Tigris valley as far north as Mosul and vicinity, also the Euphrates valley to the northwest as far as Der-el-Zor. To the northeast very large quantities are sent into Persia via Kermanshah and Hamadan. All this business is supplied and controlled by merchants in Bagdad.

Bark for Tanning.

Quebracho bark, one of the chief exports of the Argentine, will tan leather at least three times as fast as the bark of the oak or the hemlock. The growth of the tree is of the slowest, and it is estimated that a thousand years are required for it to reach maturity.

Tiger-Hunting Elephants Must Display Bravery or Forever Be Disqualified

Not all elephants are qualified for tiger-hunting. Every animal used in the sport must be steady, obedient, and fearless; for if a single elephant misbehaves or bolts when he confronts one of the huge cats, the deadly contagion of fear may spread broadcast, and runaways, broken palanquins, and loss of life may result. This is the way in which men select the animals to train for the hunt.

As a preliminary step, they walk the elephants back and forth in a court where are ranged cages containing tigers and leopards, for the sporting rajahs generally maintain private menageries. When they become accustomed to the smell of these animals, a tiger is chained to a post in an open space, with a leash carefully regulated to limit the length of his leaps. The mahouts then force the pupil-elephant to approach as near the post as safety allows and to remain for some time within a few steps of the tiger.

Each day the tiger's chain is lengthened, and the prisoner, which is kept half-starved, charges fiercely at the elephant as it comes near. Those elephants which stand their ground without flinching are considered qualified for the hunt in the jungle, but those that have revealed the least timidity are degraded from the rank of hunter—the aristocracy of their kind—and are turned over to ignominious labor.

According to a zoologist of the Calcutta Museum, among every thousand elephants that undergo this training only about fifty will not bolt when brought face to face with the chained tiger; but nearly half of those that stand their ground bravely at first retreat before a more ferocious assault.

Miracle Plays Popular in Fifteenth Century

In the fifteenth century almost every one of the great guilds acted some sort of miracle play, usually chosen with reference to the patron saint of the guild. The story of St. George rescuing the princess from the dragon was a very favorite subject.

SCHOULTZ-AMBLER.

One of the prettiest Northville weddings of many seasons was solemnized Wednesday evening, October first, at seven-thirty o'clock, at the Ambler House, when Thelma, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Ambler, became the wife of Clyde Schoultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Schoultz and junior member of the firm of Ambler & Schoultz of this place.

The marriage lines were read by Rev. Edward V. Belles of the Presbyterian church, in the presence of a company of fifty, which included friends from Los Angeles, Calif., Toronto and Bradford, Ont., Detroit and Northville.

The entire east side of the family sitting room was banked with ferns, palms and other greenery, in front of which the bridal party stood during the ceremony. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Mrs. Roy Ambler as matron of honor and her cousin, Lillian Park as bridesmaid, with Roy Ambler, brother of the bride, and Russell Park as best man and attendant for the groom. The ring service was used, and Marjorie Schoultz was the dainty little flower girl, Guy Wilkins playing the wedding march. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white satin and her bouquet was of white roses, the matron of honor was gowned in pink organdie and carried pink roses and the bridesmaid wore yellow organdie, with yellow roses as her flowers, completing the color scheme of green, white, pink and yellow, which was also used in the large dining room where a delicious wedding supper was served after the ceremony. Wreaths of smilax, white, pink and yellow flowers and ribbons made the already pretty room, with its large central table and small surrounding ones a fairy-like scene, when illuminated by the many beautiful electric lamps which are a handsome decoration in themselves.

After congratulations—and rice—had been showered upon them, the bridal couple succeeded in escaping from the house and from a noisy gathering of friends outside, and started on their wedding journey to Buffalo, Rochester, New York City and the Bermuda Islands. They will be absent for about a month, after which they will be at home at the Ambler House.

LET THE PEOPLE DECIDE.

At the regular meeting of the village council to be held Monday evening next a matter of very great importance to the future growth and well-being of Northville will be submitted for the consideration of the trustees-- the matter of selling the village water power and pond to the Ford interests.
An offer of $2,000 has been made for the property and it is now the duty of the council to submit the matter to the electors of Northville for their approval or rejection.

The Record believes the people of Northville will heartily support the council in any action the members may take looking toward the encouragement of the Ford interests in their efforts to secure sufficient property for their needs here. There is but one Henry Ford, and he has become interested in Northville without asking any favors or financial inducements, and the people of this community can well afford to display a disposition to meet him more than half way. He has already expended a very large sum of money for property here and if given proper encouragement by our people we believe he will develop an enterprise here that will mean a great deal to this section.

Surely, the council ought to be willing to submit this matter to the people of Northville and the matter ought not to be delayed.

Plymouth is to have a new organization to be known as the Plymouth Home and Loan association, similar to the Northville Loan and Building Association. This new association is due to the efforts of the Plymouth Im-meeting called to promote it the long

organization was cited by one of the speakers as an example of the helpfulness of such an association to a community.

ABOUT OUR NEIGHBORS.

Interesting items from our exchanges—gathered with pencil, paste pot and scissors.

Surveyors have been at work for the past week or two on the proposed route through Milford village to be concreted from the entrance of the New Hudson road from the south to that of the Highland road north.

The township of Salem has allowed one road in that township to be repaired, that is now the despoil of all users of the road. It is a little strip of clay road just east of Nathan Brook's that has been turned up just auto track wide—South Lyon Herald.

Fred M. Warner of this village, has been selected as president of the newly organized First Mortgage Bond Co., with offices in the Farwell building at Detroit. Among the other directors of the new organization are L. W. Goodenough and C. R. Talbot, also of Farmington—Farmington Enterprise.

Plans are well under way for the organization of a band in Wayne. Prof. La Blanc, a former bandmaster and musician, having charge of the details which, if carried out, will see Wayne with a musical outfit next summer that will be as good as that boasted by any of the nearby towns—Wayne Weekly.

Romulus claims, the oldest section-hand in Michigan. Fred Rottosky, within a couple of months of 30 years old and working at the job every day.

Four Belleville ladies were drawn as jurors last week in a justice court case and they didn't ask to be excused, either but stayed right on the job like little men until it was finished.

Since the $4,000 burglary operations in Oxford last week, the two banks there have completed the installation of a first-class burglar alarm system which not only makes a big noise if the vaults are monkeyed with, but has electric buttons handy all over the place so that any employee can instantly set the big outside gong going if a daylight robbery should be attempted.

Elmer L. Brown, of Detroit, and Ted Fordon, his pilot, forced by the storm to land in their airplane, south of Orion, Sunday morning, fell among friends. The plane came down in the cornfield of the farm owned by W. E. Scripps, with whom Brown had made his flight, and with whose son Fordon had gone to school. Instead of wrath the visitors met welcome. The two men were returning to Detroit from Chicago, by way of Grand Rapids and Flint. They were taken to Detroit by Mr. Scripps—Orion Review.

Were All There.

"It wasn't fair to mark me down on that word in spelling," said Jane as she came in from school. "I had all its letters in but I didn't arrange them right."

THE NORTHVILLE SPIRIT.

In telling of the splendid achievements of those who directed the affairs of the third annual Northville Fair it is impossible to make special mention of all who are really entitled to a word of praise. To do so would be to mention the names of many men and women in this section and in some of our neighboring cities and towns, who devoted themselves unreservedly to the success of the fair and regarded no task too great if it would in any way contribute to the success of the enterprise. That was the spirit that made the fair such an unqualified success and that is the spirit that is going to make Northville a bigger and better town. Business men, whose own affairs ought to have received their undivided attention, gave days and weeks of their time to planning for the event and in assisting in carrying the project through to the end. Such service cannot be paid for in cold dollars, because these men have no time to sell upon a commercial basis, but they worked faithfully and willingly for Northville and for the fair and they are satisfied with the compensation they have received in the realization that their efforts contributed to make the fair one of the best county fairs held in Michigan.

In quality the several exhibits would compare favorably with any seen at the State Fair in Detroit, though, of course, the displays could not be so large. In every department the exhibits were arranged in a very attractive manner and they reflect credit upon the ability and skill of the several superintendents in charge. Especially is this true when we take into account the fact that many of these exhibits were displayed to some extent of a disadvantage because of lack of space in which to make a more extensive display. But in each of the departments the Northville spirit was clearly demonstrated and that was the motive which inspired all to work so untrigly to make their department excel.

The spirit of helpful service and self-sacrifice should now be conserved for the other big tasks ahead for this community, and if this can be done much will be accomplished for the upbuilding of Northville and the surrounding country. That is the spirit that makes for better civic conditions—that builds up our schools and churches, that strives for improvement in civic matters and contributes to the well being of every citizen. Let us endeavor to conserve that spirit, and if this can be done its uplifting influence will be manifest in all the future.

FAIR BALL TOURNAMENT WON BY NORTHVILLE

The Fair association offered prize money of $75 for the first and $50 for the second team in the tournament by the four competing teams, Northville, Plymouth, Wayne and Farmington.

Northville defeated Farmington on Wednesday by a score of 14 to 4 in an uninteresting game. Cline Bros acted as battery for the losers, while German, Tousey and VanBuren were on the points for the winners.

German twirled the first four innings allowing but one run then retiring, saving himself for the last day.

Thursday's game was a warm affair between Plymouth and Wayne and it was hotly contested from start to finish. First one team being in the lead then the other until the latter part when Wayne took the lead and kept it. Wayne had a very clever left-hand pitcher on the mound who kept the Plymouth boys guessing most of the time. Thus, same man, Schoutz, was once with the N. Y. American club and of late has been with the Timkin Axle club of Detroit. Toller was the receiver for him in this game and the pair made a good battery.

Jay Stimpson and brother, Earl, did the work for Plymouth as battery. The score finally ended 9 to 6 in Wayne's favor. Northville having won on Wednesday and Wayne on Thursday brought out the two teams Northville and Wayne to battle for first and second money. It also brought out a large audience to see these two well matched clubs contest for honor and the prize money of $75 for first position.

The two umpires were furnished by the Fair association. Brown and McAllister of Detroit. They announced the batteries as Winters and Toller for Wayne and German and VanBuren for Northville. Some speculation noticed along the side lines which was emphasized strongly with ten and twenty dollar bills.

Wayne secured three runs in the first inning by three clean hits, a walk and an error. This looked bad for Pitcher German, but it was the end of the beginning, for never after did Wayne have the slightest chance. Our pitcher warmed-up for the occasion and the "rooting" by the visitors only helped to make him better and only two tallies did they get in the remainder of the eight innings. VanBuren also made a good backstop in this game and appeared to receive his old pitching mate better than he received a strange pitcher. Vernon Spencer and Earl Stimpson were both big factors with the Northville club and their hitting was prominent in both games.

The score of the final contest was 9 to 5 and Northville Independents carried away the first prize money and Wayne second.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

What was at first believed to be a fatal accident occurred at the fair Saturday afternoon, when Ione, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wood of Plymouth was knocked down by an automobile being driven through the dense crowd by E. W. Lockwood, two wheels of the machine passing across the little one's body. She was taken to the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Burt Wood, and for a day or two it was thought there was no hope of her recovery. At this writing, however, the family physician, Dr. T. H. Turner, considers the little girl practically out of danger. That she was not killed outright is a marvel, and her probable recovery from her injuries is almost in the nature of a miracle.

Those who witnessed the accident seem to think it was one of those unfortunate happenings for which neither those in charge of the little one or the driver of the car was to blame, and many have remarked that it is a wonder that more casualties did not occur in view of the crowds that packed the driveway all through the fair, and especially that day.

FARMINGTON BURGLARY FRIDAY.

Farmington came into the limelight last Friday night with a $1,500 burglary. It is supposed that the gang that broke into the Cash Mercantile Co store there is the same that has been operating recently in other Oakland county towns, notably Rochester and Oxford, as the methods employed seem to be similar. The goods taken included clothing, shoes and bolts of woolen and silk goods. Mr. Cook, owner of the store was sleeping directly above the back door by which the thieves gained entrance. A new shoe, found about two miles east of the village, on Grand River road, indicates that the robbers went toward Detroit.

FAIR A GREAT SUCCESS.

Among the many unannounced attractions was the auction sale of the goods displayed in the Huff-Schrader Brothers' booth. The sale was conducted by S. A. Lovewell and the buyers of the goods secured some real bargains, while Mr. Lovewell demonstrated his ability as an auctioneer in a very creditable manner.
N. C. Schrader, superintendent of concessions and attractions, was about the busiest man on the grounds in his efforts to have all the special attractions appear according to schedule and in locating the many concessions to the satisfaction of all. That he succeeded in giving the people a splendid lot of entertaining features during the four days of the fair is evidenced by the many words of congratulation heard upon all sides. So many things were going on at one time Saturday afternoon that a number of cases of "rubber neck" developed.

If fair visitors and exhibitors have their way it is evident that A. E. Fuller has a life job as superintendent of the poultry department at the Northville Fair. Certainly a better selection could not be made and Mr. Fuller evidently enjoys the task imposed upon him for he performs his duties in a most commendable manner.

The Record, while realizing that it would be impossible to make personal mention of all who rendered splendid service in behalf of the fair, believe it would be unfair and unjust not to make special mention of the efforts put forth by President and Manager J. A. Huff. For weeks before the fair he gave practically all of his time to the enterprise and during the four days no one could have been more faithful to the duties of the office he so successfully filled. No matter what came up to require the attention of some one Mr. Huff seemed to be able to find time to perform the task and to attend to the matter promptly. No one could have done more, and The Record believes it voices the sentiment of the entire community in extending the thanks of Northville people to him for the services he rendered so willingly.

The display made by the Detroit Creamery Co. was a most notable one and their handsome six horse team and immaculate wagon were greatly admired.

For the exhibition of saddle and carriage horses the society is indebted to Mr. C. H. Young of the Chaslen Farms, who is among one of the new comers to this section. His enterprise and kindly interest was greatly appreciated.

The Boy Scouts rendered faithful and efficient service during the four days and the gentlemanly conduct of the boys elicited much favorable comment. Always willing and anxious to render any service or to perform any errand, the boys earned the grateful thanks of the whole community.

After a number of delays the owner of Asa Wilkes appeared Saturday to keep his engagement and in the afternoon the handsome horse paced a driverless exhibition mile in 2.16 1/2 the last half mile being "turned off" in 1.07 1/2.

Among all of those who labored for the success of the fair no one had a more difficult task to perform than M. H. Sloan, who was superintendent of the speed department. He was naturally handicapped somewhat by the amount of the purse he was able to hang up for the several events and it was only by his personal acquaintance and solicitation among horsemen that he was able to secure the splendid field of trotters and pacers which were brought here for the three days. There was not a race that did not have four starters and in each event both drivers and horses seemed determined to win.

Feeds seem pretty expensive, but when we stop to consider the matter we must agree there never was a time when 100 pounds of milk or a day's wages would buy more pounds of reliable Dairy Feeds than it will to-day. So don't begrudge the cow her daily bread, but feed her cheerfully and she will more than repay you.

NORTHVILLE'S BANKING FACILITIES

have always been our first thought.

Twelve years ago this bank was organized with a firm conviction that more banking capital was needed in this community. With the steady growth of our business, since organization in 1907, we have done our utmost to satisfactorily serve our customers and the recent increase of our Capital Stock to Fifty Thousand Dollars means still better service and additional security for our depositors. This bank advocated the payment of FOUR PER CENT interest on Savings deposits for the reason that we believe local depositors should be able to receive as good a return on their Savings at home as elsewhere.

Satisfactory Service to customers is still our definite purpose.

THE SHOEMAN

CONDITIONING FOWLS FOR EXHIBITION INVOLVES PROPER FEED AND TRAINING

Show Birds Are Trained in Exhibition Coops and Should Be Handled Frequently.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The beauty-contest season for poultry is again at hand and fanciers who previously have fretted over egg record and feeding rations are now concerned with grooming their birds in their best bib and tucker and preparing them for inspection by judges at fairs and poultry shows.

Something besides external beauty and fine feathers is required to win in the show ring. Every fowl, whether young or mature, should be in first-class show condition when it enters the exhibition hall. The plumage should be the standard length for the breed, lustrous and plentiful, the head bright red in color, and the comb developed to the required size. The specimen should appear in handsome dress—good physical condition, and trained to exhibit his good qualities to advantage. Careful training imparts to a bird sufficient confidence to assume and hold desired poses under show-room conditions.

If possible, obtain exhibition coops similar to those used at the show you will attend. Cover the floor with short, clean straw, or a mixture of bran and straw for feathered leg breeds. Two months before the show place in the coops at night the birds you intend to exhibit. Visit the coops as frequently as you can and handle the birds often. Carry them around under the arm, open their wings and examine the undercolor, and accustom them to every movement of the judge. It is not advisable or necessary to keep the show birds confined in the training coops. At a time is sufficient; then allow them the run of the house for two or three days, and outdoor exercise if possible.

Diet Makes Hens Handsome.
Show birds should receive a variety of foods. If you wish to increase weight rapidly, make a mash of equal parts of cornmeal, ground oats, wheat middlings, and thick sour milk or buttermilk. Sweeten it with brown sugar, and add 10 per cent linseed meal. The mash should be of the same consistency as thick oatmeal porridge. This is similar to milk-feeding rations, but it should be fed only each morning. Feed whole or cracked corn, wheat, kafir corn, barley, or buckwheat, or a commercial scratching feed, in the middle of the day and again in the late afternoon. Feed yellow corn to buff varieties, and white corn to white, black and parti-colored. Yellow corn may cream the plumage of white birds. A little cooked, or raw meat or ground bone will be beneficial, except to specimens inclined to grow large combs.

It is necessary to examine your show birds carefully at least 10 weeks before the show. Remove all imperfect feathers in the hope that they will be replaced by feathers of standard color. Frequently a colored feather showing a little white along the edge of the web will molt out perfectly when the fowl is well fed on the sour-milk mash, meat, and grain. Never pluck a new feather—one in which the quill is filled with fluid—as it will invariably return partially white. A few days before the exhibition again examine your birds and pluck the imperfect feathers. It is quite a problem to determine the best procedure when there is foreign color in some of the large feathers on the wings or tail.

Peroxide Blondes in Hen House.
Many exhibitors of white fowls bleach the plumage of their birds with peroxide of hydrogen and ammonia. They mix in a china bowl a solution of three parts of peroxide of hydrogen and one part of ammonia. A clean muslin cloth is dipped in the solution and the bird is wrapped in it. The muslin is next covered with oiled silk or some waterproof cloth to confine the fumes of the bleaching gas. The peroxide-ammonia solution can be sponged on the plumage or sprayed with an atomizer. The only advantage in wrapping the bird is to make the bleach more effective.

The shanks and feet of exhibition fowls must be absolutely clean and well polished. To overcome rough scales, rub the legs twice daily with a cloth dipped in kerosene and a short time before the show wash them thoroughly. Use a good scouring soap, woolen cloth, and warm rain water. Remove any old or rough scales, and also the dirt between the scales. The latter can be taken out with toothpicks. Dry the shanks and apply a solution of equal parts of sweet oil and alcohol. Then warm a woolen cloth and scrape a little beeswax on it. The warmth will melt the wax, and the shanks should then be polished with the waxed cloth.

Cosmetics and Curealls of Ugliness.
Before shipping the birds to the exhibition apply the sweet oil and alcohol solution to the face and comb. If you are showing white birds fill their plumage after washing and when thoroughly dry with equal parts of bran and rice flour. Some exhibitors use cornstarch which is equally satisfactory. This prevents the plumage becoming soiled, and when the starch is shaken out at the show and the fowls are groomed, they apparently take a higher polish. However, your coops must have wooden or muslin tops and sides to prevent rain from coming in contact with the starched plumage. The final grooming is accomplished with a silk handkerchief, rubbing and polishing the feathers until the plumage has a high luster.

WAR ON YOUNG GRASSHOPPER

Little Attention Paid to Pest by Farmer Until They Have Reached Considerable Size.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although grasshoppers are not usually noticed by the farmer until they have reached a considerable size, they begin to injure his crops immediately upon hatching from the egg. They should be detected and combated, therefore, while young and small, so that time, labor and material, as well as crops, may be saved.

GREEN FEED IS ESSENTIAL FOR CHICKENS

Homemade Poultry Silo Made From an Air-Tight Barrel and Suitable for Storing Green Feed for Poultry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Chickens confined to small yards should always be supplied with green feed, such as lettuce, sprouted oats, alfalfa, or clover, but the best place to raise chickens successfully is on a good range where no extra green feed is required. Where the chickens are kept in small bare yards, fine charcoal, grit, and oyster shell should be kept before the chickens all of the time, and cracked or ground bone may be fed. The bone is not necessary for chickens that have a good range.

Gorgeous Ribbons Reflect Autumn

The goddess of the looms must have lingered about American silk mills when designers were planning this season's ribbons. And she was in a happy and opulent mood, for the utmost in weaving has blossomed in ribbons that are all the way from gay to gorgeous. The richness of autumn's colorful days, with sunshine and moonshine, all are reflected in brocaded ribbons heavy with gold and silver threads and very brilliant in sheen and color. So much beauty lures one away from the consideration of its price which is very high.

But only small quantities of the most gorgeous ribbons appear in any apparel or dress accessories, except for evening dresses. In these wide metal-braided ribbons are used with some generosity. Mostly the wide and brilliant ribbons are used for making shopping bags and purses, in the crowns of hats or in sashes on hats and for vests in dresses and suits. In evening dresses of tulle or crepe or lace they make brilliant panels or girdles and occasionally a handsome afternoon frock looks to them for a touch of splendor in the girdle.

But bags and purses account for more yards of magnificent ribbon than other accessories. Between now and Christmas there will be a lively business at the ribbon counter where mountings for bags are sold along with the ribbon to make them. In the picture above a purse and a bag are shown. The long purse is a black satin brocaded in silver. And the bag is in brilliant colors striped with black, mounted on a black celluloid frame.

The story of plain satin ribbons, for little bags and numberless other trifles that women love, is much longer than that of the splendid brocades. There are innumerable trinkets made of ribbon. A little face powder bag of satin ribbon is shown in the picture. It has a small round mirror in the bottom and narrow satin ribbon handles that draw up and close the top. It serves to carry a small box of powder and a convenient puff.

Hair ribbons for little girls are shown in many pretty striped varieties and taffeta remains the favorite for hair bows, which with bags, keep a gay stream of ribbons flowing over the ribbon counter.

There Are Many Fancy Suits

A stroll through establishments, whose styles we know to be authoritative, soon verifies the assertion made by manufacturers that tailored suits are growing fancier. That is the first impression to be gathered from almost any display. But one must not draw conclusions too quickly. It has come to the place where there are several distinct types of the tailored suit, including the knock-about suit, the walking suit and the promenade suit (which must be another name for what we have known as the formal suit). The knock-about and walking suits will please those who are wedded to severe tailor-made, while promenade and formal suits are for those who like departures from this type.

Probably the influence of French ideas has promoted the success of the fancier tailored suits, for the severe type has never been a favorite with Paris. Where there is no place for a gay or frivolous or dainty touch to apparel, French designers seem to feel hampered; they do not like the type of suit that attends strictly to the business of being practical and well made. They delight in unexpected little decorative touches that have no reason for existing, except to be interesting and good looking.

All the new glove finish fabrics—and their name is legion—promote the cause of fancier suits. Duvelyn, velours, duvet and their like, are very soft with surfaces that vary, but are never hard. Close behind them tri-cotine and gabardine lend themselves to promenade suits by their texture. A fine example in a tricotine model for fall and winter wear is shown in the accompanying picture. It shows allegiance to the last decrees for longer skirts and coats and presents odd emplacements of material on the skirt and coat, with braid, buttons, and buttonholes cleverly managed to elaborate both. The collar is unusual with straight revers that extend over the shoulder and widen at the back into a small square cape. The coat is open to the waistline at the front, making plenty of opportunity for a fancy blouse or vestee. The choker of fur is a separate affair. The choker collar is everywhere present, but is often convertible and is either of fur or fabric or of the material in the suit. Belts are narrow and may be taken off so that the suit is worn with or without them. Occasionally a suit is shown with two belts, one of the fabric and one of leather. Not all coats are long. There are those of the short ripple variety that seem to be liked best in the dressier suits. Their bodies are semifitted. Sleeves are long and plain with occasional narrow turned-back cuffs for a small pointed flare, and skirts are ankle length and only moderately narrow, the hobble variety never having achieved success among smartly-dressed women.

OLD SAYING SLIGHTLY MIXED

Familiar "Before You Could Say Jack Robinson" Does Not Convey the Right Idea.

Opinion differs as to the proper duration of a social call. "Anywhere from ten minutes to a half hour," says the woman who has a social secretary and whose daily job is "calling" to the tune of tea and waiters. "All afternoon," says the bourgeoisie, who takes along her knitting and sits down to coffee and cake. "And then," say some, "it depends upon the call. On some occasions and with different people we stay longer than others."

But Jack Robinson's calls never varied. He never stayed long enough to wear out his welcome. In fact, hardly had he been announced, hardly had the servant who admitted him spoken aloud his name than he was gone.

So, as you see, "before you can say Jack Robinson" has no reference to the time it takes to say it. "As long as you can see Jack Robinson" would be more in order with its origin and significance.

REALLY NOT WAITER'S FAULT

Mr. Green's Perfect Mastery of the French Language Evidently Was Too Much for Him.

Mr. Brown and Mr. Green were taking their long-talked-of holiday in France. For three months Mr. Green had been learning French—by correspondence—and thought he had mastered the language.

One afternoon the pair went into a cafe to have tea, and Green, who always insisted on doing all the talking, gave the order to the waiter. When, however, the tea things were brought, he noticed that something was missing, and spoke angrily to the waiter about it.

"My dear fellow," objected Brown, "what on earth are you saying?"

"Will you kindly refrain from making your absurd criticisms of my use of the French language?" retorted Green.

"Oh, certainly!" answered Brown. "Only it seems rather a waste of time to ask the waiter to bring you a teaspoon!"—London Tit-Bits.

Lost Opportunity.
 "It is a pity those people who used to fast for weeks couldn't get the public interested in their theory."

"Why so?"

"Because if the idea had been taken up and practiced, the ultimate consumer could be striking now."

Home Town Helps

INDUSTRIAL VALUE OF HOME

Well-Recognized That Ownership Makes for Highly Desired Stability of Character.

Man's greatest business in life is the business of living. And nothing contributes so much to the success of this business as does good housing. Civilization is built up on this idea. The most progressive and civilized nations have been best housed.

Today the industrial value of home ownership is well recognized. It develops a pride, a self-respect, a stability of character that makes the home owner the man to be desired.

The man who can save and achieve a real haven to house his business of living has something that differentiates him from those not so fortunate. His credit is better, he is more highly regarded by the community, and he is the desirable citizen.

Most homes must be built on loans. As handled in the past, the mortgage has been pictured a home wrecker, a dreaded something to harass a man's old age.

Today the tendency is toward amortization, which is a gradual paying off of the principal so that in time the home will be free and clear. Amortization removes the only drawback to the ownership of a home. Whereas it is hard to save $4,000 to pay off in a lump sum, it is easy to pay $33 a month for ten years, plus $20 interest charges, which latter decreases every month. How many of us have bought things on the partial payment plan, meeting the payments easily, and meanwhile enjoying the luxury of possession?

Just so it is with a home. And provided it is located right, one or two rooms can be rented that will cut the monthly payments in half. That feature alone has proved the deciding factor with many who desire to be a real success in the business of living.

But this home should be built to last, to be in as good condition when the payments are finished as when they are started. That means spending money where it doesn't show—for a year or so. It means good plumbing, good heating, good, sound timber, framed by a builder worthy of trust by a man whose bid may not be the lowest, but whose bid is based on the kind of construction that will cause the home to stand up bravely against the elements, a real haven for the business of living.

PLANT FLOWERS AND TREES

Now Is the Best Time to Plan and Work on the Improvement of the Home Grounds.

The appearance of the home has much to do with its utility as well as its beauty. A home where there are flowers, trees, lawn, etc., seems more comfortable than where these things are absent. Such a home is always more satisfying, and that of course is a quality of utility.

Fall is a good time to improve the yard, lawn and general appearance of the home. Late fall is a favorable time to transplant many biennials and perennials. Roses, "the queen of flowers," may be set; other shrubs may be transplanted; violets, bulbs of various kinds, sweet peas, etc., may be started for early spring blossoms.

A little time given to the yard and lawn now will be worth much to the appearance of your home next spring. Look over the yard and see what improvements can be made. Doubtless you will find that much can be done to make your home more attractive.

Demand for Better Homes.

The idea of good homes for wage earners as a matter of public policy was widely advertised during the war and gained strong support. The ablest architects, engineers and landscapers assisted the government in housing plans. This has brought about an increasing national consciousness that every family should be provided with a habitation meeting at least the minimum requirements of sanitation and decency. Many soldiers who were reared in city slums have returned with more personal dignity and no longer will stand for their former homes. They are persuading their families to remove to better neighborhoods.

Flowers as Barometers.

Many flowers are said to be excellent barometers. For instance, it is when the blooms of dandelions have seeded and are in the fluffy, feathery condition, that the weather-forecast facilities come to the fore. In fine weather the ball expands to the full, but when the rain approaches it shuts up like an umbrella. If the weather is inclined to be showery, it keeps shut all the time, only opening when the danger from the wet is passed.

Always Cure in Rest.

Sleep is the most perfect rest, of course, and sleep will "cure" most diseases. That is, the person who sleeps is going to recover, as a rule, for he is going to secure the rest that is essential to recovery. But the point is, the doctors ought to begin refusing to prescribe medicines for people unless they will agree to "take a rest," for the medicines are ineffective without rest.

"CARRY ON!"

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Feel grand! Be efficient! Don't stay sick, bilious, headachy, constipated. Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, your breath bad and your stomach sour. With not get a small box of Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest laxative-cathartic you ever experienced? Cascarets never gripe, sicken or inconvenience one like Salts, Oil, Calomel or harsh pills. Cascarets bring sunshine to cloudy minds and half-sick bodies. They work while you sleep. Adv.

Miracle Plays Popular in Fifteenth Century

In the fifteenth century almost every one of the great guilds acted some sort of miracle play, usually chosen with reference to the patron saint of the guild. Inventories of these theatrical properties still exist, and include gorgeous silk and gold damasks and magnificent damascened armor. The story of St. George rescuing the princess from the dragon was a very favorite subject.

Ice Cream Sodas Make Impression on Samoans

A member of the United States medical corps, recently returned, reports that ice cream sodas have made a profound impression upon the Samoans. The officer was detailed in charge of the soda fountains of the solitary drug store at the Pago-Pago naval station, and reports that his patients took much more readily to the sodas than to the anti-malaria serum which he was obliged to dispense.

Badly Handicapped.
 Much against Bob's wishes, his fox terrier's tail was shortened. Not long after this operation Jip, like all other playful dogs, was trying to catch his tail, but it couldn't be done.

Bob, watching him, said sorrowfully: "Poor Jip, if they'd left the tail you was borned with you could catch it all right."

Mahogany Trees.
 Mahogany trees do not grow in clusters, but are found scattered throughout forests and hidden in dense undergrowth.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL DISEASES

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Danger is in sight.

Find out what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pains in the back, wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. These are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate, and be converted into uric acid and other poisons, which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.

First Safety Bicycle Was Placed on Market in 1880

The first of the safety bicycles was put on the market in 1880. In this the high front wheel was reduced and the rear wheel was about two-thirds the height of the front one. The machines with wheels of the same size appeared in 1885. Bicycling began to be popular about 1891, and the "craze" reached its height about 1895, when wheels had become low enough in price to be within the means of the multitude.
