NORTHVILLE MUST PROVIDE HOUSES

There is a crying need in Northville for more houses, and the demand ought to be supplied notwithstanding the fact that building conditions are somewhat out of joint. Other towns are building new houses in an effort to meet the great need, and unless Northville people do their share we shall be left behind in the forward march of things. The scarcity of houses in Detroit is forcing people from the city and that condition is Northville's opportunity. If we sit still and wait until conditions become normal again the demand for houses by those who feel they must get out of the city will not be so great and Northville will have lost its chance to aid many families to its citizenship.

A good many people declare "we can't get material," but the fact remains that other towns are getting building material in sufficient quantities to build many new houses. What our neighbors are doing we can do if the proper effort is made. If Northville permits this season to slip by without providing suitable homes for a good many families, she will have missed one of her greatest opportunities. Can we afford to take such a risk?

PLEASED A LARGE AUDIENCE.

The members of the public speaking class of the Northville schools are to be congratulated upon the number in which they presented "At the End of the Rainbow" at the Alceum theatre last Friday night. The house was filled to its capacity and every one in the large audience was pleased with the performance. The piece told an interesting story of college life and the three acts were staged in a very attractive manner. All who took part did exceptionally well, so well, in fact that it would be unfair to make special mention of any of the members of the cast without mentioning them all individually.

The music by the orchestra, the vocal solos rendered by Miss June Flinn and the dancing by little Miss Murray all added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening, and the performance was a distinct credit to those having the affair in charge.

ELECTED THREE DELEGATES.

At the republican caucus held at the village hall on Saturday afternoon the following were chosen delegates to attend the county convention held in Detroit Wednesday: C. A. McCullough, F. T. Brown, and T. R. Carrington. W. H. Sanford was chosen as one of the delegates but was compelled to decline and at his suggestion Mr. Carrington was chosen in his place.

Mr. T. B. Henry was chosen chairman of the caucus and in assuming the position expressed his pleasure at seeing so many ladies present and the hope that they would feel at home and take an active interest in the political affairs of the township, county, state and nation. T. R. Carrington was secretary and Frederick Hedge and Henry Desautels officiated as tellers.

W. R. C. NOTES.

The eighth regular of Allen M. Harmon Woman's Relief Corps will be held at the usual meeting place, April 28th. We would like all the members to come and help us make the evening meeting interesting. There will be initiation.

We wish to thank all who so kindly assisted us to make the entertainment of Lloyd Green Post No. 147 American Legion, a success. We wish the boys to feel that three patriotic organizations are "one" in the cause which we honor. The assistance of visitors and members made this possible and will leave with each a pleasant memory. Again we thank you.

POPULAR COUPLE ARE UNITED IN MARRIAGE

A very pretty wedding took place on Thursday evening, April 15th, at seven o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Clark. When their daughter, Lydia, became the wife of James Sessions, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Sessions, in the presence of about seventy-five guests. The living room was attractively decorated, the bridal party taking their places beneath a bower of palms. The wedding march was played by Miss Olga Werner, and just before the ceremony, Miss June Flinn sang "I Love You—Truly." Miss Amy Sessions, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Bert Clark, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Miss Blanche Clark was her sister's maid of honor.

After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. H. J. B. Marsh, of the M. E. church, a two-course wedding supper was served in the dining room, which was decorated in fragrant pink roses.

The bride was charming in a gown of white georgette, and carried white roses. The maid of honor and bridesmaid were dressed in pink, and carried shower bouquets of pink roses and sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Sessions left that evening on a wedding trip to Cleveland, returning on Monday, to Northville, where they will make their future home. They were the recipients of a number of beautiful and useful gifts.

Both young people are well known in this village and vicinity, and their many friends wish them a happy wedded life.

MAKING HANDSOME FURNITURE.

The Globe Furniture Company of this village is meeting with wonderful success in the sale of over-stuffed furniture, a new enterprise just recently established. In keeping with the policy of the Globe company nothing but high grade material is used in the manufacture of these articles of furniture and as a result of this fact, together with the evidence that the work is being done by expert upholsterers, this new department gives promise of great development.

The first of the week deliveries of over-stuffed pieces and suites were made to some of Detroit's most extensive furniture dealers and the buyers expressed themselves as being well pleased with them.

HELD ENJOYABLE MEETING.

The King's Daughters held their annual "spring picnic" at the pleasure of Miss Jennie Carpenter on Friday night, with about 50 members in attendance. The ladies from the R. R. chapter came to enjoy the picnic with the Northville ladies. The supper was a fine affair and the program given included vocal solos by Miss Ruth Greife, readings by Mrs. John Tunham, and Mesdames Spurr and Wikendu of Redford also contributed to the pleasure of the evening by giving readings and solos.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Roy Clark.

THE STRIKE IS BROKEN.

The switchmen's strike was practically broken on Saturday and by Monday a good many switching crews had returned to work in the Detroit yards. This relieved the situation locally and the Northville factories which were forced to close last week started operations again Tuesday morning.

The matter of wages for the striking switchmen will be agitated by the newly appointed railway board at Washington.

ROBBED THE CASH DRAWER.

Sometime Saturday some sneak thief robbed the cash drawer in Thos. B. Couch's store of $75 in currency and made his get-away without being discovered, although Mr. Couch says he has a pretty good idea who the culprit was. The fellow evidently watched until Mr. Couch stepped into the back room for a moment and by quick work was able to gain entrance to the drawer.

Suffered for Years

Miserable From Kidney Trouble
Doan's Made Mr. Barnett Strong and Well.

"I suffered untold agony with my kidneys for years," says John Barnett, 36 Virginia Place, Buffalo, N. Y. "Sometimes I felt that I would burn up with fever, but every now and then would have a severe chill. Often my clothes were wringing wet with perspiration. The kidneys secretions were unnatural in color and odor and burned terribly. At night my shoes were so tight on my feet that I could hardly get them off, and my hands swelled so I couldn't hold a teacup. My back! Oh, how it ached! I walked with two canes and all bent over like an open man. When the terrible pains shot through my kidneys my knees would give way, and many times I had to lie down in front of people on the street. I didn't care whether I lived or died. I was miserable. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me. I feel strong and well."

It sends its hurtful acids and gives all over the body, instead of health and strength. Day and night, restlessness and age goes on. No matter how strong a victim cannot long withstand the health destroying effects of an acid stomach.

Good news for millions of sufferers. Chemists have found a sure remedy one that takes the acid up and carries it out of the body, of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well.

Bloating, indigestion, sour and gas, stomach troubles all relieved. This is proven by over 15 million people who have taken EATON'S with wonderful results. It can be obtained from any druggist, who will cheerfully refund its trifling cost if not entirely satisfactory. Everyone should enjoy its benefits. Frequently the first tablet gives relief.

The SANDMAN STORY

TWO ORPHANS

ONE day Bab Rabbit was playing around the woods when he met Tom Kitten. "Where are you going?" asked Bab Rabbit, for at first he thought Tom was one of his relatives, he looked so much like his family.

"Oh, I am going to play I am an orphan and get a fiddle. Then every one will give me money. I expect I'll get rich because I saw a hand organ man playing on the street and he got lots of pennies."

"I wonder if I could get some young fiddles if I played, too?" asked Bab Rabbit.

"Come along with me. I am sure we can get lots of things," said Tom Kitten.

Off they ran up to the farm over the hill, and hanging in the barn they found an old fiddle with one string and a drum with a hole in it.

"We will have to look poor and forsaken if we want everyone to give us things," said Tom. "I'll make a hole in my coat and you tear your stomach."

Oh, such a fight as these two poor fellows had when a little later they went along the road playing the old fiddle and the drum.

But the hole in the coat and the tear in the stomach did not make them look any more like orphans. They had to go on and on.

Oh, how they felt when they saw the two orphans. They had to go on and on.

WAVING THE HAIR

DAILY I find a half dozen or so of letters in my mail, containing a request for something that will make the hair wave. As a general thing I answer that, while there are various cutting styles on the market, they are unsatisfactory, though quite harmless.

I know the reason for two of them, and know that in some cases, the mixture will make the hair wavy, but in other cases it has no effect at all due to the varying composition of the hair cells.

Specialist Hawk Been Detailed to Bring to This Country Enemy of Horticultural Pest

The Japanese beetle is going to have its old enemy on its trail in this country. The United States department of agriculture has sent a man to Japan to find these enemies and send them across the ocean. They will then be established in the sections of New Jersey where the beetle has gained a foothold, and they are expected to aid greatly in the control of the pest.

The agent employed in Japan is familiar with Japanese conditions and is a specialist in this kind of work. It is expected that the task will require his sojourn in Japan for two or three years. While something is known of the parasites of the Japanese beetle a great deal is still to be learned only under field conditions, where the beetle lives with all the enemies that prey upon it. The beetle reached this country with importations of greenhouse plants, and thus far apparently has been comparatively free from molestations by natural enemies.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

"Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it."

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney, or bladder, or trouble of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Finally the lion lifted a forepaw and turned the body of the girl half over; then he stood again eyeing her as though still undetermined whether life was extinct or not. Some noise or odor from the nearby jungle attracted his attention for a moment. His eyes did not again return to Jane Clayton, and presently he left her, walked over to the remains of Taglat and, crouching down upon his kill with his back toward the girl, proceeded to devour the ape.

It was upon this scene that Jane Clayton at last opened her eyes. Inured to danger, she maintained her self-possession in the face of the startling surprise which her new-found consciousness revealed to her. She saw that the lion had killed the ape and that he was devouring his prey less than fifty feet from where she lay, but what could she do? Her hands and feet were bound. She must wait then, in what patience she could command, until Numa had eaten and digested the ape, when, without doubt, he would return to feast upon her, unless, in the meantime, the great hyenas should discover her, or some other of the numerous prowling carnivora of the jungle.

As she lay tormented by these frightful thoughts she suddenly became conscious that the bonds on her wrists and ankles no longer hurt her, and then of the fact that her hands were separated, lying upon either side of her, instead of both being confined at her back.

For a moment Jane Clayton was overwhelmed with joy and thanksgiving; but only for a moment. What good was her new-found liberty in the face of the frightful beast crouching so close beside her?

She watched the lion narrowly. He could not see her without turning his head more than halfway around. "She would attempt a ruse. Silently she rolled over in the direction of the nearest tree, and away from the lion, until she lay again in the same position in which Numa had left her, but a few feet farther from him.

Here she lay breathless, watching the lion, but the beast gave no indication that he had heard ought to arouse his suspicions. Again she rolled over, gauging a few more feet and again she lay in rigid contemplation of the beast's back.

The girl was but a few paces from the lion—a moment more and she would be close enough to chance springing to her feet, throwing caution aside and making a sudden, bold dash for safety. She was halfway over in her turn, her face away from the lion, when he suddenly turned his great head and fastened his eyes upon her. He saw her roll over upon her side away from him, and then his eyes were turned again toward him and the cold sweat broke from the girl's every pore as she realized that, with life almost within her grasp, death had found her out.

For a long time neither the girl nor the lion moved. The least motion on either side would have meant disaster and his glaring eyes fixed upon the rigid victim, now nearly forty yards away.

Realizing that she could not again turn without attracting his immediate and perhaps fatal attention, Jane Clayton resolved to risk all in one last attempt to reach the tree and clamber to the lower branches.

Gathering herself stealthily for the effort, she leaped suddenly to her feet, but almost simultaneously the lion sprang up, wheeled and with wide-distended jaws and terrible roars, charged swiftly down upon her.

Fear can work wonders, and though the upward spring of the lion as he neared the tree into which she was scrambling brought his talons in contact with her boots she eluded his faking grasp, and as he hurtled against the base of her sanctuary, the girl drew herself into the safety of the branches above his reach.

For some time the lion, paced, growling and moaning, beneath the tree in which Jane Clayton crouched, panting and trembling. It was almost dark before he finally quit the clearing, and even had his place beside the remnants of the mangled ape nor been immediately usurped by a pack of hyenas. Jane Clayton would scarcely have dared venture from her refuge in the face of impending fight.

Tired nature at last overcame even her fears, and she dropped into a deep slumber, cradled in a comparatively safe, though rather uncomfortable, position against the bole of the tree, and supported by two large branches which grew outward, almost horizontally, but a few inches apart.

The sun was high in the heavens when she at last awoke, and beneath her was no sign either of Numa or the hyenas. Both hunger and thirst assailed her now, and realizing that she must descend or die of starvation, she at last summoned courage to undertake the ordeal of continuing her journey through the jungle.

Descending from the tree, she set out in a southerly direction, toward the point where she believed the plains of Waziri lay, and though she knew that only ruin and desolation marked the spot where once her happy home had stood, she hoped that by coming to the broad plain she might eventually reach one of the numerous Waziri villages that were scattered over the surrounding country, or chance upon a loving band of these indefatigable hunters.

The day was half spent when there broke unexpectedly upon her startled ears the sound of a rifle shot not far ahead of her. As she paused to listen, this shot was followed by another and another. What could it mean?

As the firing became less rapid she caught the sound of men's voices, though she could distinguish no words, and she heard two men calling to each other in loud tones. Then there was a long silence which was finally broken by the stealthy padding of footfalls on the trail ahead of her, and in another moment a man appeared in view facing toward her, a rifle in his hands, and his eyes fixed in careful watchfulness along the way that he had come.

Almost instantly Jane Clayton recognized the man as M. Jules Frecoult, who so recently had been a guest in her home. She was upon the point of calling to him in glad relief when she saw him pull quickly to one side and hide himself in the thick verdure at the trail's side. It was evident that he was being followed by an enemy, and so Jane Clayton kept alert, lest she distract Frecoult's attention, or lead his foe to his hiding place.

Secretly had Frecoult hidden himself from the figure of a white man, a Arab, creeping stealthily along the trail. From her hiding place Jane Clayton could see both men plainly. She recognized Achmet Zek as the leader of the ruffians who had entered her home and snatched her away from her father's side, and she saw Frecoult, the friend and ally, raise his gun and aim at the Arab. But he understood still and every power of his soul was directed upon a fervent prayer for the accuracy of his aim.

Achmet Zek paused in the middle of the trail. His keen eyes scanned every bush and tree within the radius of his vision. His tall figure presented a perfect target to the perceptive assassin. There was a sharp report, and a little puff of smoke arose from the bush that hid the Belgian, as Achmet Zek stumbled forward and pitched, face down, upon the trail.

As Werper stepped back into the trail, he was startled by the sound of a glad cry from above him, and as he wheeled about to discover the author of this unexpected interruption, he saw Jane Clayton drop lightly from a nearby tree and run forward with outstretched hands to congratulate him upon his victory.

If the Belgian had entertained any doubts as to the woman's knowledge of his part in the perilous attack upon her home and herself, it was quickly dissipated by the genuine friendship of her greeting. She told him quickly of all that had befallen her since he had departed from her home, and as she spoke of the death of her husband her eyes were veiled by the tears which she could not repress.

"I am shocked," said Werper, in well-simulated sympathy; "but I am not surprised that you should be so pointed toward the body of Achmet Zek. 'Has terror' the entire country. Your Waziri are either exterminated or have been driven out of their country, and to the south. Our only hope lies in reaching northward as rapidly as we may, of coming to the camp of the ruffians, before the knowledge of Achmet Zek's death reaches those who were left there; and of so cunning, through some ruse, an escort toward the north. It is our only hope, Lady Frecoult, and you must place your entire faith in me if I am to succeed. Wait for me here a moment while I take from the Arab's body the wallet that he stole from me," and Werper stepped quickly to the dead man's side, and, kneeling, sought with quick fingers the pouch of jewels. To his consternation, there was no sign of them in the garments of Achmet Zek. Puzzled, disappointed and angry, he at last returned to the girl. "The wallet is gone," he explained, crisply, "and I dare not delay longer in search of it. We must reach the camp before the returning raiders."

Unsuspecting of the man's true character, Jane Clayton saw nothing peculiar in his plans, or in his specious explanation of his former friendship for the ruffian, and so she grasped with alacrity the seeming hope for safety which he proffered her and, turning about, she set out with Achmet Werper toward the hostile camp in which she so lately had been a prisoner.

Calling aloud to those who tended the gates, Werper grasped Jane Clayton by the arm, walked boldly across the clearing. Those who opened the gates to him permitted their surprise to show clearly in their expressions. That the discredited and hunted lieutenant should be thus retreating fearlessly of his own volition seemed to disarm them quite as effectively as his manner toward Lady Frecoult had disarmed her.

Jane Clayton was again confined to the prison hut she had formerly occupied, but as she realized that this was but a part of the deception which she and Frecoult were playing upon the credulous raiders it was with a different sensation that she again entered the life and filth of the interior, from that which she had previously experienced when hope was so far away.

Once more she was bound and sentries placed before the door of her prison, but before Werper left her he had given words of cheer into her ear. Then he left and made his way back to the tent of Mohammed Beyd, Achmet's lieutenant.

Mohammed Beyd sat cross-legged upon a rug smoking. The Arab looked up as the European came into his presence.

"So things, O, brother," he said, "are going well?"

"Excellent," replied Werper. "I am a while neither spoke further. The Arab was the first to break the silence."

"And my master, Achmet Zek, was well when last you saw him, was he not?"

"Never was he sicker from the effects of drink and of brutality," replied the Belgian.

"It is well," said Mohammed Beyd, blowing a little puff of blue smoke "till he was before him."

"And there was silence for several minutes."

"And if he were dead?" asked the Belgian, determined to lead up to the truth and attempt to bribe Mohammed Beyd to his service.

The Arab's eyes narrowed and he stared forward with a gaze that brought into the eyes of the Belgian.

"I have been thinking much, Werper, since you returned so unexpectedly to the camp of the man whom you deceived and who sought you with death in his heart. I have thought over it, and the result of my thinking has assured me that Achmet Zek is dead—for otherwise you would never have dared return to his camp, unless you were either a braver man or a bigger fool than I have imagined. And it is this evidence of my judgment is sufficient, I have but just now received from your own lips even more confirmatory witness—for did you not say that Achmet Zek was never more seen from the sins and dangers of mortality? Tell me why you have come back here. Tell me what you want, and Werper, if you still possess the jewels of which Achmet Zek told me, there is no reason why you and I should not ride north together and divide the ransom of the white woman and the contents of the pouch you wear about your person. Eh?"

Werper was both relieved and disturbed by the Arab's attitude. The complacency with which he accepted the death of his chief lifted a considerable burden of apprehension from the shoulders of Achmet Zek's assassin; but his demand for a share of the jewels boded ill for Werper when Mohammed Beyd should have learned that the precious stones were no longer in the Belgian's possession.

"Yes," he said, "Achmet Zek is dead. He fell in battle with a company of Abyssinian cavalry that held me captive. During the fighting, I escaped, but I doubt if any of Achmet Zek's men live and the gold they sought is in the possession of the Abyssinians. Even now they are doubtless marching on this camp, for they were sent by Menelek to punish Achmet Zek and his followers for a raid upon the Abyssinian village. There are many of them, and if we do not move haste to escape we shall all suffer the same fate as Achmet Zek."

Mohammed Beyd lowered his eyes. How much of the ugly truth he might safely believe he did not know, but as it afforded him an excuse for deserting the village and making for the north he was not inclined to cross question the Belgian too minutely.

"And if I ride north with you," he asked, "half the jewels and half the ransom of the woman shall be mine?"

"Yes," replied Werper.

"Good," said Mohammed Beyd, "I go now to give the order for the breaking of camp early on the morrow," and he rose to leave the tent.

Werper laid a detaining hand upon his arm.

"Wait," he said, "let us determine how many shall accompany us. It is not well that we be burdened by the women and children, for then indeed we might be overtaken by the Abyssinians. It would be far better to select a small guard of your bravest men, and leave your women and children riding west. Then, when the Abyssinians come they will be put upon the wrong trail should they have it in their hearts to pursue us, and if they do not they will at least ride north with less rapidly than as though they thought that we were ahead of them."

"The serpent is less wise than thou, Werper," said Mohammed Beyd with a smile. "It shall be done as you say. Twenty men shall accompany us, and we shall ride west—when we leave the village."

"Good," cried the Belgian, and so it was arranged.

Early the next morning Jane Clayton, after an almost sleepless night, was aroused by the sound of voices outside her prison, and a moment later, M. Frecoult, and two Arabs entered. The latter unbowed her ankles and lifted her to her feet. Then her wrists were loosed, she was given a handful of dry bread, and led out into the faint light of dawn.

She looked questioningly at Frecoult, and at a moment that the Arab's attention was attracted in another direction she leaned toward her and whispered that all was working out as he had planned. Thus assured the young woman felt a renewal of the hope which the long and miserable night of bondage had almost extinguished.

Shortly after she was lifted to the back of a horse, and surrounded by Arabs, they set out through the gateway of the village and off into the jungle toward the west. If it had not been for the pure, barren north and a barren waste the direct line for the better of the march.

On the march a private hut had been provided for the captive, and at this hut she pitched between those of Mohammed Beyd and Werper. A sentry was posted at the front and another at the back, and with these men Jane Clayton was left to her own devices, to receive the prisoner as best she could.

As the girls were wandered across the plain and passed a long, already sagging tent of the presence of man, she recognized, apprehended either the nearer objects of the foreground, the uncouth men laughing or quarreling among themselves, or the jungle beyond, which reemerged the extreme range of her material vision. Her gaze passed through all these, unseeing, to center itself upon a distant, but all too real, and happy security mingled joy and sorrow. She saw a tall, broad-shouldered man riding in from distant fields, she saw herself waiting to greet him with an armful of fresh-cut roses from the bushes which flanked the little rustic gate before her. All this was gone vanished into the past, wiped out by the torches and bullets and hatred of these hideous and degenerate men. With a stifled sob, and a little shudder, Jane Clayton sobbed forth her misery until kindly sleep brought her at least temporary relief.

And while she slept a figure stole from the tent that stood to the right of hers. It approached the sentry before the doorway and whispered a few words in the man's ear. The latter nodded, and strode off through the darkness in the direction of his own blankets. The figure passed to the rear of Jane Clayton's tent and crouched again to the sentry there, and this man also left, following in the trail of the first.

Then he who had sent them away stole only to the tent flap and, unheeding the sentry's entrance and the consciousness of a disembodied spirit (TO BE CONTINUED)

BRIDGE-VOTE HELD ILLEGAL.

The bond issues for the new county bridges over the River Rouge at Fort Street west and West Jefferson avenue, approved by popular vote April 5, must again be submitted to the voters, because the ordering of the vote was not preceded by public notice as required by the law of 1919.

The board of supervisors received this report from its ways and means committee and the prosecuting attorney Thursday. The matter probably will be submitted in August, though Road Commissioner Hines urged a special election if possible. On advice of Prosecutor Bishop, the Detroit council will forward a new petition, and the whole proceedings will be followed out anew.

ROUGE TO BE IMPROVED.

Final efforts to prevent the widening and deepening of River Rouge by the government suffered another defeat in the Detroit Federal court last week when Judge Arthur J. Tuttle refused to grant an injunction restraining the officials from proceeding with the work. The injunction proceedings were brought by Alexis C. Angell, counsel for six opponents of the proposed improvement. The government was represented by Attorneys Alfred J. Murphy, Howell VanAuken, special assistants to the U. S. Attorney General.

A few days later the people of Wayne county voted almost unanimously in favor of bonding for $800,000 to build two bridges of most modern type over the Rouge, at W. Jefferson and Fort streets, thus closing the final chapter of this great improvement.

As a result of the court's decision Col. Markham, in charge of the work, will proceed with the dredging at once. Bids have been asked for and will be opened April 15th, and within 30 days after the contract has been awarded the work will start, unless some unexpected legal tangle develops. Last spring when the government started condemnation proceedings to facilitate the acquisition of land along the river edge, opponents of the project filed a set of motions for dismissal of the condemnation suits. These motions were overruled by Judge Tuttle. —Wyandotte Suburbanite

Year's Growth of a Pine Tree.

Mr. H. H. Lockmaster at Buckhorn, Ont., experimented with a pine tree to determine improved growth which may be secured by proper care. Fifteen years ago he planted all the lower branches off a four-inch white pine sapling, removing other saplings from its vicinity, dug up the earth around it and applied manure to its base. It is now a magnificent tree in diameter, at its base and is a fine specimen of growth in diameter. —Farm and Garden

To Preserve Furs

There is a danger of losing the skin of a fur animal if it is not properly cared for. Take out of the animal's fur some into a saucer, stuff it in small pieces of new cotton or wadding, and place where required. It is also well to place some between the animal's legs. When putting furs away for the summer fold carefully with a little cambric, and then wrap in a broad cloth in newspapers, gumming down the edges. Place in a closet, shutting drawers with a little cambric.

"Devil's Dozen"

The saying "devil's dozen" means the same as "baker's dozen," but the origin differs. It "connotes," as the metaphysicians love to say, 13 loaves of bread instead of 12 and it sprung from the idiotically superstitious attempt to explain the baker's dozen, which also was 13 loaves. This latter practice of giving 13 loaves was due to the drastic penalties in England for short-weighting and to be safe the baker threw in the extra loaf.

Source of Tears

"Where do tears come from?" in each eye there is a small duct called the tear duct. This little gland is constantly making tears and washing the eye. The eye "closes" are the brushes that wash the particles of dust away from the delicate portions of the eye. When we cry the tear gland "works" over and sends one tear chasing another like rain drops on the window pane.

On the Contrary.

Marion had been out several evenings in succession and looked tired. "Mother suggested she retire early instead of going out again that evening. When little Dick came down stairs from her room mother said, "Well, is sister making up her mind to stay in?" He replied: "I should say so, she's making up her face to go out."

Score One for Employer.

A Kansas City man received four very nice presents on his birthday early this week. A silk shirt, pair of gloves, and a pair of slippers. The shirt, given him by his wife, was size 15½. He wears 11½. The gloves, selected by his mother, were size 6—he wears 7½. The slippers from his brother, were size 12—he wears 10. His employer, however, who has known him more intimately for several years, sent out a box of soft collars which fit him exactly. —Kansas City Star.

Wolf Once a Monarch.

The old folk tales are right—as they nearly always are if rightly read. Before firearms were well developed, no lone man had any chance worth mentioning against the rush of a wolf pack. The gray provokers were the terror of Europe, as the tiger still is the terror of India and deservedly so. Children who gather to stare at a wolf in the zoo are gazing at a captive king.

Many Minds Make Speech.

No man can make a speech alone. It is the great human power that strikes up from a thousand minds that acts upon him, and makes the speech. —James A. Garfield.

Lack of Tact.

Jones—What a Jonah that fellow Smith is! After owing me $5 for two years he came up to me on the street and paid me right while I was talking to Brown whom I had owed $5 for three years. —Chicago Daily News

Why Is Northville Firm?

Because Its Citizens Have Learned The Truth.

After reading this generous and encouraging report from Mr. Clark, those who have the misfortune to suffer, as he did, will naturally long to get similar relief. But to get the same good, as Mr. Clark had, you should get the same remedy. There are of course, other kidney pills but there are no other kidney pills the same as Doan's. That is why Northville people demand the genuine.

N. L. Clark, retired farmer, Grace avenue, Northville, says: "It has been some time since I have had to take Doan's Kidney Pills, but, speaking from vast experience, I couldn't advise anyone to use a more reliable medicine than Doan's. Whenever my back bothered me or my kidneys acted irregularly, Doan's Kidney Pills soon rid me of the trouble."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Clark had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. —Advt. 71

A PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

Equal amounts being deposited weekly or monthly, a Loan Association will prove the most profitable place to invest your savings as the earnings run from 5½ to 7%.

ACQUIRING HOMESTEADS.

Helping people do this is our strong point but as at the present time it takes about three times as much as formerly to obtain a home, we are financially frequently up against it. Our members have the right idea and to the best of their ability are helping to solve the housing problem.

Those that need no help do far as a home is concerned, know that the money they pay in is being used to help some one procure a home, and this is true of the borrower also, as his money helps out on the next party, etc.

Every one is making a good thing for himself and helping the other fellow also.

Those who can only save a small amount each week, perhaps may think that doesn't count, but united with what we have coming in it helps the work along. We have the organization, experience and machinery, so come on, loosen up, join with us, help buy the gas and watch the houses go up.

FORD WOULD MAKE AIRCRAFT.

Henry Ford has offered to turn over to the United States government the resources of his Detroit plants for the manufacture of aircraft, he announced last week. The only condition he has imposed is that the manufacture be without profit. The airship of the future, said Mr. Ford, will be a combination of the airplane and the dirigible. W. B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Motor company, laid the proposition before the Senate naval committee during the hearings in which the committee was considering aircraft appropriations. If the offer is accepted, another huge Ford industry for Detroit is predicted.—Michigan Manufacturer.

A FINE IDEA.

Old newspapers, magazines and every other kind of printed matter stored away in cellars and attics will soon be collected by the Business Women's Association of Commerce, if plans promulgated by that organization at a recent meeting are carried out. Each member of the association has pledged herself to collect as much paper as possible and it will be taken to a storeroom, there to await sale. The proceeds of the sale will be turned over to a fund to be used to rent a cottage on the shores of one of the Oakland county lakes, where members of the association may go during the summer.—Pontiac Press.

HAVE THE DOG HANDY.

On last Saturday John Vance, who bought a home in Dearborn a week ago, was called to the door by two men, one wearing a badge, and was told he was under arrest for non-payment of $26 taxes. To square himself Vance paid the money and in return received a receipt on which a gold seal had been affixed and signed "S. S. Vance." He was told to bring it to the 12 County Building on Tuesday morning to exchange it for a permanent receipt. Tuesday he discovered it was the judge's rest room. He told his troubles to Norman G. Giesberg, assistant prosecutor, who issued a warrant charging false process. Now all that remains is to supply proof of finding the receipt. It was found on Dearborn St.

TO HAVE BEAD APPROPRIATES AT LAST.

Randy Lot, a confederate, of the Michigan State Farm, has been the subject of a hearing, which has been for the last year, to Lansing, will take place April 30th.

This action was prompted by the purchase of a large office building, and was taken at 211 N. 4th street, Lansing, Mich. The building is to house the new offices of the Farm Bureau. This Lansing building will also include the seed and wool department of the organization. The storage facilities of the warehouse are expected to be taxed this spring and summer following shipments of wool from various counties for pooling at Lansing, which will be given within the next two weeks.

Local assembling points are being established all over the state for the convenience of the forty-three odd thousand members of the organization. This wool will be handled on a co-operative cost basis.

SEVERE PENALTY FOR DRUNKEN MOTORISTS.

In preparation for the coming of spring, Prosecuting Attorney Glenn C. Gillispie has issued a challenge to motorists in the form of a letter to every justice of the peace in Oakland county, making it mandatory for township authorities to deal severely with persons who drive automobiles on the public highways while under the influence of intoxicating liquors.

"This letter," said Mr. Gillispie, "has been written because of the fact that my attention has recently been called to a case in one of the justice courts where a man, arrested for driving a car while intoxicated, was discharged on payment of a nominal fine. With the congestion and traffic upon the highways of Oakland county at the present time, and much more, perhaps, during the days to come, it is all that a man in the full possession of his faculties can do to avoid accidents on injury to other persons upon the road. Whenever a complaint of this nature is made in any justice court in the county it is imperative that upon conviction of such cases the offender receive adequate punishment. Perhaps in that way we can eliminate some of the danger to motorists by teaching a lesson to those who drive while under the influence of intoxicants."—Pontiac Daily Press.

PROPOSED MR. BENTON FOR GOVERNOR

Among the "Political Pointers" which appeared in the Sunday News we discovered the following "tucked" away on page 17 or 18:

A. W. Miles, Mecosta county member of the Legislature, one of Big Rapids' city commissioners, chairman of the board of supervisors and holder of a few more titles—he is "Paddy" Miles to all who know him well—organized the first Johnson-for-President club in the state. Now, writes "Paddy" concerning the next Michigan race—namely for the Republican nomination for Governor:

"Horatio Earle won't do. Milo Campbell can't win. Lieut. Gov. Dickinson won't pace with anyone. Atty. Gen. Grosbeck is slow to leave the wire. How would Cass Benton (state tax commissioner), do for Governor? He is a Wayne county farmer, a living contradiction of a widespread delusion everywhere outside of Detroit's 50-mile circle, that there are no farmers left in Wayne county; and, he is well known throughout the state. He is a real farmer, three strain, home-grown, none of your hothouse variety, and he gets the grapes whenever he goes after them. Have everything set to organize a Benton-for-Governor Club as soon as I get the flash."

It may be a long ways from Northville to the executive office at Lansing, but the people of Michigan mean to do a whole lot of things that would seem more unusual and unreasonable than to select our fellow-townsmen as governor of this great state. As a citizen of this section, as a member of the board of supervisors a representative in the state legislature and as a member of the State Tax Commission Mr. Benton has proven true to every trust reposed in him and he has discharged his duties in his private and public life honestly and efficiently. Mr. Benton has a wide acquaintance about the state and he knows and understands the needs of the state as but few of our public men understand them. He is conservative and he would direct the affairs of the state in an economical manner. He realizes, as but few of our public men seem to realize, that the matter of piling up taxation millions upon millions must be stopped, and that the only way to stop this tremendous outlay of money is to conduct the affairs of the state upon business principles. He does not believe in being lenient, or in hampering any of our splendid institutions for lack of needed funds, but he is of the opinion that by the adoption of a more business like method in the expenditure of public funds would curtail state expenses to a remarkable degree.

The Record has not discussed the News item with Mr. Benton, nor do we know whether he would consent to have his name considered in connection with the governorship, but we believe he would make a careful and conservative chief executive. He is of the long friends in this section would be glad to become members of Mr. Miles' "Benton for Governor Club."

TO RE-ORGANIZE GUN CLUB.

To Plymouth Gun Club, at a meeting held at Becker's Hall, Northville, selected the following officers for the coming year:

PRESIDENT—Frank E. Hall, Northville.

Vice-Pres.—Lou Cameron, Plymouth.

Sec. Treas.—Harry W. Passage, Plymouth.

The president then appointed an executive committee of five members as follows:

Howard Hall and Nelson Schrader, Northville, Roy Wheeler, Matt Powell and Wm. Pettingill, Plymouth.

The business of the club for the year will be transacted by this committee. No decision was made as to the location of the club for the next year, but all indications point to the moving of the trap ground to near Northville, where a fine location can be secured at reasonable rates. The object of such a move will be solely to secure a good background and a permanent location. Another meeting will be held later to decide such things as dues and the year's calendar. Northville and Plymouth shooters both feel that the time has come when either can afford to operate a separate club.

All who are interested in the sport are requested to send their names and addresses to an officer of the club, who will in turn provide date and place of next meeting. The name, Plymouth Gun Club will soon be changed to Plymouth and Northville Gun Club.

Send in your name now. We want to do some shooting this month. Get in line as a charter member of the new club. Ladies are cordially invited.

Mrs. Frank Washburn and Mrs. Jaf Reed of South Lyon, B. C. and W. C. Banfield of Farmington and Edwin Banfield and wife of New Hudson were here last Saturday to remove their mothers' household goods from her house, which she recently sold to Rev. F. A. Brass.

Ann Holmes was born in Commerce township May 9th, 1857, and died at her home near Clarksville, Mich., April 15th, 1920. She was married to John W. Herron April 14th, 1897 who with three sisters and two brothers, and many friends survive her. She united with the Presbyterian church when a girl and, later, with the United Brethren church at Campbell, of which organization she was a faithful member. Till Jesus called her home.

Her suffering ended with the day, yet lived she at its close. And breathed the long, long night away in statelike repose. But when the sun, in all his state, loomed in the Eastern skies, she passed thru glory's morning gate to dwell in Paradise."

DETROIT THEATRES.

Oliver Morosco's latest musical comedy success, "Linger Longer Letty" with Charlotte Greenwood as the star will begin a week's engagement at the Garrick theatre next Sunday night.

"Linger Longer Letty" is a sequel to "So Long Letty," the famous song and dance show, in which the monumental comedienne was starred for five years.

The book is by Anna Nichols who is responsible for numerous successful comedies. There are bright lyrics by Bernard Grossman and music of up-to-date character, tuneful and full of pep, has been furnished by Alfred Cordman.

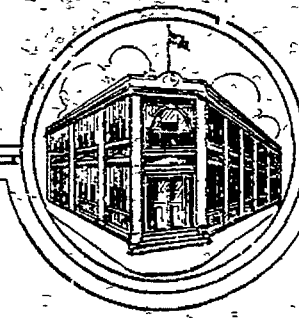

The sequel part is explained by the fact that Mrs. Greenwood appears once more as the free and easy Letty, the heroine of all sorts of humorous situations and the proud possessor of the longest arms and legs that the American stage can boast of.

Greenwich Village, the Latin quarter of New York City, where the talented and ambitious congregate, recreate and work, has been made the theme of the Greenwich Village Follies which will play a limited engagement at the Shubert-Detroit for one week, beginning Sunday night, April 25th.

As if interpreting the whimsical attitude of the artist when he is essentially a playboy, it has been characterized as a re-revelous musical comedy of the life in New York's Quarter Latin. This is one of the first cities visited at the conclusion of the thirty-two weeks run which this piece has enjoyed in New York. Opening last July in the dead heat of summer at its own quaint Greenwich Village theatre, it rushed to immediate success not only among its own people of the village, but with transient New York and the multitude of smart summer-resorters, whose private cars filled Sheridan Square nightly. The crush was so great that the management had to move the Follies uptown to the Nera Bayes theatre for a larger capacity. There it remained with no cessation of popularity.

South Lyon—Mrs. R. Kimey reports gathering an egg that measured 6 inches in circumference and 7 1/2 inches the other. This egg weighed exactly one-fourth pound.

Millford—The Board of Commerce will install six signs on county roads leading out of this village, warning motorists of road patrol and speed limit.

Record Liners certainly bring quick results. Last week a string of beads were lost in this village and they were left at this office by a lady who resides some distance from Northville who found them on the sidewalk. We also recovered a wrist watch for Detroit parties who lost the timepiece while visiting Northville. These Liners cost but little but they produce big results.

Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezone costs only a few cents.

With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callous. Instantly it stops hurting then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callous right off—root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!—Adv.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts or the urine is cloudy full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells and stomach or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of 100 Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

100 Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

Hit Hard.

A village minister in New England was called upon to go several miles into the country to officiate at the funeral of a farmer's wife. Arrived at the house of grief the minister spoke the usual words of sympathy and condolence to the bereft husband:

"You have met with a great loss, brother."

"Yass," was the reply, "an' it makes good—the old sayin' that misfortunes never come singly. I lost my best boss four days ago, an' now she's gone. I tell ye I'm gettin' hit hard!"—Harper's Weekly.

"CARRY ON!"

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Feel grand! Be efficient! Don't stay sick, bilious, headachy, constipated. Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, your breath bad and your stomach sour. Why not get a small box of Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest laxative-cathartic you ever experienced? Cascarets never gripe, sicken or inconvenience one like Salts, Oil, Calomel or harsh pills. Cascarets bring sunshine to cloudy minds and half-sick bodies. They work while you sleep. Adv.

R. F. D.

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1926, Western Newspaper Union)

"It's a 'ridiculous world'—the girl addressed the dog at her feet. 'Here we are dying of loneliness, Billy, and the nicest, friendliest looking man living just down the road. Let us dare not speak to him, or he to us, because we have not been introduced. In this wild who is likely to appear. I ask you, to introduce us? A girl is mighty hard up for conversation, Billy, when she has to exercise her own voice talking to a dog. Otherwise I should not be certain but that I had turned dumb. After, father bringing me to this place, where he could rest his overworked nerves, I now appear to be the only nerve irritant, so he hides himself away among the pines, responding only to my dinner bell."

The dog, who had listened, his loving, liquid eyes searching the girl's face, came to rest his head in sympathy against her shoulder and her laugh rang out like the joyous chirp of a bird. "It isn't that I want to marry the nice man, you understand, or to have him make love to me, Billy. It's just that his log veranda looks so inviting, with its chairs and magazines and the victrola in the corner. Our own magazines are either delayed or gone astray, and I've read the last ones to shreds."

Now let us put the saddle on Lassie, and be off to get our amusement—the exciting quest for mail at the distant post office."

Billy, recognizing one single word, became at once excitedly alert, and the girl changed her chatter to a merry whistle as she saddled the slim pony and went picking her way down the narrow path through the growth.

"Who is she?" the man asked of old Annie, who came in to do his chores. Old Annie didn't know.

"A summer stranger," she thought, "probably."

The "summer stranger" advancing, wondered impatiently why in the world the nice man lay always hazy in his long wicker chair. Why didn't he move and stir about as one of his athletic build might be expected to do? Then her face clouded in quick comprehension—close to the man's chair stood a crutch. He was lame, then—crippled. Her heart beat faster, as he sat up and called to her. He was asking some favor, and if in remorse for her unkind criticism there was anything that she could do—She rushed to him promptly, and dashed at the man, exclaiming:

"You asked me?" she questioned. "I wonder," he asked—his voice was pleading. "If you are going down for the mail? And if so, could I ask you also to bring mine. I am—unable to go by myself, you see, and am expecting an important communication. You will pardon, I hope, my lameness."

"I shall be very glad to accommodate you," the girl answered matter-of-factly.

"Your name?"

"Dalton," the man replied, "Donald Dalton, and thank you very much."

Billy had a difficult time keeping up with Lassie's heels after that. Some of her rider's joyous spirit seemed to have entered into the pony's being; and when the girl later slipped from Lassie's saddle before the log veranda and bestowed a generous supply of businesslike mail upon the recliner in the wicker chair her eyes were shining and her cheeks aglow with the promise of adventure.

"I am a civil engineer," the nice man told her. "We are scouting around here to try to put our railroad through. I was so unfortunate in my 'scouting' as to break my leg. Every day since then has been forty-eight hours' loss. You—'he smiled apologetically—'have been my one interest. I wondered about your being in this desolate region, you see," he hastened to add, "and how you got here."

The girl laughed as she cuddled the cat in her arms. "I love to be a mystery," she said. "It is so unusual. Back home I'm so well known that I am tiresome."

"But you will tell me your name," Dalton begged, "and allow me to invite you, and your family, perhaps, down occasionally to break my monotony."

"I've only part of a family," the girl ruefully replied. "and he is here just to keep from being invited. Father is determined to 'commune only with nature.' And as to my name," she laughed back at him as she swung into the saddle. "You may call me R. F. D. Rural Free Delivery," you know, for I'm going to bring your mail every day until you are well."

The moments that she stood each day by his side were to Dalton the happiest that he had ever known. The girl, too, looked forward to them in wondering joyous intensity. And when at last the leaves had turned from green to scarlet, the young engineer made his way walking still with difficulty to the copse above.

"It's unusual not to know the name of the girl you are going to ask to be your wife," he said. "But I think I can wait to know your name, Little R. F. D. better than I can wait to know the answer to my question."

"Well," the girl said, and she laughed softly, "my initials will always remain R. F. D. I hope, Mr. Donald Dalton, I'm Rose Forrest, now. So that's the answer to your question."

Warning to Tourists.

Hugh Walpole, the English novelist, said at a tea in Philadelphia:

"I advise you, if you go to London to sign your hotel accommodation in advance, for all the London hotels are crowded all the time."

"An American was walking the Strand, the other day, when a red-nosed chap, touched his arm and said: 'Could you give me a few coppers, sir, for a bed?'"

"A few coppers?" said the American. "Why, man, I'll give you a couple of sovereigns. Where the deuce is it?" The chap, looking for a bed all over this blasted town for two days.

Insyde Tyers Give You Service.

Insyde Tyers cost but a small fraction of the price of new tires. They last more than double the life of a tube. It is certainly economy to use them.

Insyde Tyers often deflect nails, wire or other long sharp objects which have passed through the casing and would otherwise cause a puncture in the inner tube. The reason is simple. After the sharp object has passed through the casing it strikes the Insyde Tyre, which, although stuck to the casing so that it cannot slip, will tear loose rather than allow the object to pass through. Thus the point is deflected and a tube puncture prevented.
