The tourists are expected to arrive here in the afternoon and a program appropriate to the occasion will be given. Eighteen trucks of all sizes will comprise the caravan, including army, navy and marines corps recruiting trucks.

In addition to being endorsed by the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Automobile Association of America, the National Automobile Dealers Association and other prominent bodies, the ship-by-truck tour is approved by Governor Sleeper, who has issued a proclamation declaring the week of May 17 a combined ship-by-truck and good roads week. He calls upon all farmers, merchants and others interested in transportation matters and the betterment of highways to meet during that week in their respective communities to consider the serious problems as to transportation of produce and supplies. Four trains will leave Detroit taking different routes they will work their way through the richest rural communities of Michigan to Lansing. The latter part of the week they will return to Detroit by still other routes.

OBITUARY—MRS. GEORGE GRINNELL

Mrs. George Grinnell, whose death on May 4th was briefly mentioned last week, was born in Detroit in 1862. Her maiden name was Frances Floyd, and she became the wife of Mr. Grinnell in 1880. Most of her life before coming to Northville was passed at Washington, Michigan. During her fifteen years' residence in this place Mrs. Grinnell's many excellencies of character and pleasing personality had won for her a wide circle of warm friends and her passing from life has brought sorrow to many beyond her own family.

For many years she had been a member of the Ladies of the March, an efficient singing various offices in that order, which duties will be missed.

Her most precious legacy are her two beautiful daughters, Mrs. George Miller and Mrs. John B. Reed. At this place and Mrs. B. Reed's daughter, Mrs. J. C. Reed, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Reed of Seattle, Washington.

Funeral services were held Friday, May 14th from the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. C. Balder, the L. O. T. attending in a body.

The appearance of beautiful flowers and the large attendance were expressive of the general esteem and sympathy of the community. The services were conducted by Rev. F. V. Belcher of the local Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev. Sydney D. Eva of the Farmington Methodist church, and interment was made in Rural Hill.

BUILDINGS BEING REMOVED.

With the exception of the one story sheds skirting the highway the last of the old buildings on the property acquired by the Ford interests at the foot of Main street is being torn down this week. The building had been used for years as a storehouse by C. L. Dubuair and he reserved the building when he sold his other property holdings along the flats. The building is a two story structure and contains an immense amount of good material.

Over near the Northville Mills D. P. Terkes has men employed tearing down the old building located just across the race bridge, the one occupied by the "baby food" factory during its brief existence in Northville. The houses purchased by Mr. Ford have all been vacated and it is a reality they cannot be moved to other lots and occupied. Many people have looked at the houses hopefully, but the estimated expense of moving them has been so great that those who would like to buy them have been discouraged when the cost of placing them somewhere else has been figured.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pickett, and Mr. and Mrs. Phylmon Pickett and son, of Leamington Ontario, were visitors at the Henry Pickett home on Sunday.

NORTHVILLE BOY ON FAR EASTERN CRUISE

Mrs. W. P. Johnson has received during the past few months many post cards and some letters from her son, Ben R. Johnson, who is a steward on the U. S. A. Transport Madawaska, sailing from New York. The post cards were postmarked at Manila, Ceylon, Japan, China and the letters from which we are privileged to take some portions were written at sea, near Hong Kong, China. Under date of March 15th he wrote as follows:

"Well, dear mother I do hope this finds you well. Would like to have you with me very much as you could not help but enjoy such an interesting trip. We just came from Siam, where it was very cold. The Red flag is up there and the Red forces seem very strong, and it is up to a man to mind his own business while there for they do not thing anything of 'taking a shot' at you. The U. S. soldiers are all out of there now and all troops are ordered to get out, and they are getting out as fast as they can with the exception of the Japs, but I look to see the Reds drive them out about the time you receive this letter. 'The morgue' is the most popular place and does the most business. Vladivostok. You get 250 Roubles for a dollar now and to get ten dollars larger you would need a small box of soap your money around in. We have 2500 Czechoslovak soldiers, and there, where they have been prisoners of Russia as prisoners and so on. Waiting for different factories for a few years. They seem to be a very good class of people. They have a good many war brides with them. They seem to be very healthy but when they reach the Red Sea the heat is a little afraid they will be some suffering. We are taking them to Asia Minor, Hungary. Do not know just where we will go from there, but I think Hamburg, then to New York arriving about May 20th. This is a truly a most wonderful trip and could not be any better if I paid for it as I have everything nice now. We have some good albums of pictures of places I am at, and hope to send them to you some of these days in the near future."

Under date of March 2nd near Saigon, Malay peninsula, India he wrote as follows:

"I am at sea off the Gulf of Siam, about the equator. It is very hot here, being in my state room with an electric fan going and the sea is very rough off me. Will arrive in the morning tomorrow where we will stay about 10 days. On our way to Singapore and expect to arrive there about May 1st. From there we go across the Indian Ocean to the Suez Canal, then to Aden, then to Port Said, Egypt. If we stay there long enough we will make a trip to Jerusalem. From Port Said across the Mediterranean sea through the Arabian sea to Trieste, Austria Hungary. We are going to make a trip on rail from there to Venice, Italy which is only about sixty miles. It is a place I always thought I would like to see. Will probably get a cargo at some port in Europe and sail for New York. If I go overland from there to California will try and stop at home. It will be about a month longer steady going about 210 miles a day even before we reach Trieste. The poor soldiers we are taking there, will find some change in their homes. It has been six years away for the most of them and they have no mother to speak of and the majority have not heard from home. Will send cards from Singapore tomorrow."

MAKING LOTS OF VALVES.

The Ford plant in this village is running full force again and the daily output of the plant is nearing the five thousand mark. In fact with the installation of two or three machines that are now being repaired at Dearborn, the local plant could turn out 5000 valves a day with its present force.

The grounds about the plant will soon be graded and everything put in a very attractive condition.

WE ARE FORTUNATE.

In the matter of gas service this community is much more fortunate than many others about the state. All through the western part of the state gas plants are being operated only at meal time and all commercial supply has been cut off.

Fortunately the Northville & Plymouth Gas Co. is well supplied with coal for the present, but the matter of labor is the serious problem with the company just now.

TARZAN

AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

"Tarzan of the Apes"
"Son of Tarzan"

Copyright, 1918, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

CHAPTER XVIII.

As Tarzan of the Apes nurtured through the trees, the discordant sounds of the battle between the Abyssinians and the lions smote more and more distinctly upon his sensitive ears, redoubling his assurance that the plight of the human element of the conflict was critical indeed.

At last the glare of the camp fire shone plainly through the intervening trees, and a moment later the giant figure of the ape-man paused upon an overhanging bough to look down upon the bloody scene of carnage below.

His quick eye took in the whole scene with a single comprehending glance and stopped upon the figure of a woman standing facing a great lion across the carcass of a horse.

The carnage was touching, to spring as Tarzan discovered the tragic tableau. Numa was almost beneath the branch upon which the ape-man stood naked and unarmed. There was not even an instant's hesitation upon the part of the latter—it was as though he had not even passed in his swift progress through the trees, so lightning-like his survey and comprehension of the scene below him—so instantaneous his consequent action.

Wide-eyed and incredulous as he beheld this seeming apparition rise from the dead, the lion was for a moment—her own pet—everything save the wondrous miracle of this strange resurrection.

She saw the ape-man leap to the shoulder of the lion, hurling against the leaping beast like a huge, infuriated lightning bolt. She saw the carnivore brush aside as he was almost upon her and in the instant she realized that to silence her wrath could thus turn the charge of a mad, denuded lion with brute force greater than the brute's.

Tarzan, her Tarzan, heard a cry of unspeakable distress broke from her lips, only to die in terror as she saw the other disappearance of her ape and realized that the lion had recovered himself and was turning upon Tarzan in his lust for vengeance.

At the appearance of the discarding rille of the dead Abyssinian whose mother's corpse lay unheeded where he had abandoned it, the quick glance which had swept the ground for some weapon of defense discovered it, and as the lion reared upon his hind legs to seize the fish-man thing who had dared interfere with his prey, strength between Numa and his prey, the heavy stock whirled through the air and splattered upon the broad forehead.

Not as an ordinary mortal might strike a blow did Tarzan of the Apes strike, but with the maddest frenzy of a wild beast backed by the steel teeth which his wild, unbroken boyhood had bequeathed him. When the blow ended the splintered stock was driven through the lion's skull into the savage brain and the heavy iron barrel was bent into a rude V.

In the instant that the lion sank lifeless to the ground, Jane Clayton threw herself into the eager arms of her husband. For a brief instant he strained her dear form to his breast, and then a glance about him awakened the ape-man to the dangers which still surrounded them.

The blacks who had witnessed his advent, looked on in amazement, as they saw the naked giant leap easily into the branches of the tree from whence he had dropped so unceremoniously upon the scene and vanish as he had come, bearing away their prisoner with him.

Unmolested Tarzan passed from the camp of the Abyssinians, from which the dawn of conflict followed him deep into the jungle until distance gradually obliterated it entirely.

Back to the spot where he had left Werper went the ape-man, joy in his heart now, wariness and sorrow had so recently reigned, and in his mind a determination to forgive the Belgian and aid him in making good his escape. But when he came to the place Werper was gone, and though Tarzan called aloud many times he received no reply. Convinced that the man had purposely eluded him for reasons of his own, John Clayton felt that he was under no obligations to expose his wife to further danger and discomfort in the prosecution of a more thorough search for the missing Belgian.

"He has acknowledged his guilt by his flight," he said. "We will let him go to lie in the bed that he has made for himself."

Straight as homing pigeons, the two made their way toward the ruin and desolation that had once been the center of their happy lives, and which was soon to be restored by the willing black hands of laughing laborers, made happy again by the return of the master and mistress whom they had mourned as dead.

Past the village of Achmet Zek their way led them, and there they found that the charred remains of the palatial and the native huts, still smoking, as mute evidence of the wrath and vengeance of a powerful enemy.

"The Waziri," commented Tarzan with a grim smile.

"God bless them," cried Jane Clayton.

"They cannot be far ahead of us," said Tarzan, "Basuli and the others. The gold is gone and the jewels of Opar, Jane; but we have each other, and the Waziri—we have one and loyalty and friendship. And what are gold and jewels to these?"

"If only poor Mugambi," she replied, "and those other brave fellows who sacrificed their lives in vain endeavor to protect me!"

In the silence of mingled joy and sorrow they passed along through the familiar jungle and as the afternoon was waning there came faintly to the ears of the ape-man the murmuring cadence of distant voices.

"We are hearing the Waziri," Jane said. "I can hear them ahead of us. They are going into camp for the night, I imagine."

A half hour later the two came upon a horde of ebony warriors which Basuli had collected for his war of vengeance upon the raiders. With them were the captured women of the tribe whom they had found in the village of Achmet Zek, and tall, even among the giant Waziri, loomed a familiar black form at the side of Basuli. It was Mugambi, whom Jane had thought dead amidst the charred ruins of the bungalow.

Ah, a reunion! Long into the night the dancing and singing and laughter awoke the echoes of the sonnet wood. Again and again were the stories of their various adventures retold. Again and again they fought their battles with savage beasts and savagery men and dawn was already breaking when Basuli, for the fortieth time, narrated how he had a handful of warriors had watched the battle for the golden ingots which the Abyssinians of Abul-Monrek had waged against the Arab raiders of Achmet Zek, and how, when the victors had ridden away, they had sneaked out of interests and mutual respect breed between honest and intelligent men of any races.

Jane Clayton's horse shied suddenly at an object half hidden in the long grasses of an open space in the jungle. Tarzan's keen eyes sought quickly for an explanation of the animal's action.

"What baye we here?" he cried swinging from his saddle, and a moment later the four were grouped about a human skull and a little litter of whitened human bones.

Tarzan stooped and lifted a leathern pouch from the grisly relics of a man. The hard outlines of the contents, brought an exclamation of surprise to his lips.

"The jewels of Opar," he cried, holding the pouch aloft, "and," pointing to the bones at his feet, "all that remains of Werper, the Belgian."

Mugambi laughed. "Look within Bwana," he cried, "and you will see what the Belgian gave his life for, and the black laughed aloud."

"Why do you laugh?" asked Tarzan. "Because," replied Mugambi, "I lifted the Belgian's pouch with river gravel before I escaped the camp of the Abyssinians whose prisoners we were. I left the Belgian only worthless stones, while I brought away with me the jewels he had stolen from you. That they were afterward stolen from me while I slept in the jungle is my shame and disgrace; but at least the Belgian lost them—open his pouch and you will see."

Tarzan untied the thing which held the contents of the leathern bag closed, and permitted the contents to trickle slowly forth into his open palm. Mugambi's eyes went wide at the sight, and the others uttered exclamations of surprise and incredulity for from the rusty and weather-worn pouch ran a stream of brilliant, scintillating gems.

"The jewels of Opar!" cried Tarzan. "But how did Werper come by them again?"

Nom could answer, for both Chuk and Werper were dead, and no other knew.

"Poor devil!" said the ape-man as he swung back into his saddle. "Even in death he has made restitution—let his sins lie with his bones."

[THE END]

Hurling Against the Leaping Beast Like a Huge Animated Battering Ram.

the river reeds and stolen away with the precious ingots to hide them where no robber eye ever could discover them.

Picked out from the fragments of their various experiences with the Belgian the truth concerning the malign activities of Albert Werper became apparent. Only Lady Greylocke found fault to praise in the conduct of the man and it was difficult even for her to reconcile his many heinous acts with this one evidence of chivalry and honor.

"Deep in the soul of every man," said Tarzan, "must lurk the germ of righteousness. It was your own virtue, Jane, rather even than your helplessness, which awakened for an instant the latent decency of this degraded man. In that one act he retrieved himself, and when he is called to face his Maker may it outweigh in the balance all the sins he has committed."

And Jane Clayton breathed a fervent "Amen."

Months had passed. The labor of the Waziri and the gold of Opar had rebuilt and refurbished the wasted homestead of the Greylockes. Once more the simple life of the great African farm went on as it had before the coming of the Belgian and the Arab. Forgotten were the sorrows and dangers of yesterday.

For the first time in months Lord Greylocke felt that he might indulge in a holiday, and so a great hunt was organized that the faithful laborers might feast in celebration of the completion of their work.

In itself the hunt was a success, and ten days after its inauguration a well-taken safari took up its return march toward the Waziri plain. Lord and Lady Greylocke with Basuli and Mugambi rode together at the head of the column, laughing and talking together in that easy familiarity which common

MANY LEGENDS OF THE HAW

Scarlet Berry Regarded in Some Parts of the World as the Embler of Hope.

Around Little Rock the haw is seen in the full glory of its plumage. In words that are dull and brown its never had been a great eye with a warm glow of glowing gold. Here is a single tree, its spreading branches, straddled all over with scarlet fruit. It makes a picture that seems to be waiting to be transferred to canvas. Further on are one or six trees standing together, their mass showing a wealth of color that a landscape artist might rejoice to reproduce with his art. Any one of scores of groups of these trees would, in a public park or large private grounds, be a never ending object of admiration.

He who has not read of Hawthorne hedges has not read the literature of England, remarks a writer in the Little Rock Gazette. In that country of beautiful landscapes the haw blooms in many spots that have been beautified by long years of care. And it has its legends both pagan and Christian. It has been regarded as the emblem of hope and its branches are said to have been carried by the ancient Greeks in wedding processions and to have been used to deck the altar of Hymen. An old superstition in the British Isles accounts it uniquely a propitious story. There has been for centuries a story that this tree was the source of Christ's crown of thorns and there is a tradition among French peasants that in its innocence it uttered groans and cries on the anniversary of the day when he whose birth we celebrate in Christmas, suffered death upon the cross.

Saint Lucy.

Refreshing as a spring on a July noon, lovely as the song of the thrush at the close of a gaudy day, is the life record of Saint Lucy. The dear girl, whose name, from the Latin (lucis) means "light," was born in Syracuse in 304 A. D. Her startling beauty brought a mob of suitors at her feet. But she had vowed herself to the religious life and declined their advances. A young nobleman, madly in love for her, accused her to the governor as professing Christianity. In the fearful persecution under Diocletian she was martyred. She is represented in art as holding a platter with her two eyes upon it.—Chicago Journal.

Can't Be Done.

"You told me Jibway was a forward-looking man."
"So he is."
"But he's always in financial difficulties."
"That's just the reason. Jibway looks so far ahead he's trying to live today on the income he hopes to have five years hence."

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIA'S TRIAL OF SOCIALISM

Ultimate Good to the World? Or From the Practical Test Now Being Made in That Country.

Article XIV.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

The "red flag" remedy has been demanding a trial, a test. The demand has been growing. Before its advocates can be silenced they must be shown. Out of the test of socialism in Russia is bound to come good. Whether the theory is a practical one or not, putting it to the test will answer a question satisfy a demand, and tend to quiet unrest.

The fair-minded investigator cannot deny that there was justification and reason back of the effort to try the remedy. That the world has been suffering from poverty cannot be denied. I have found few men, even among the conservative responsible leaders of business and governments in Europe, who did not admit that conditions in the world before the war were not right; that some change in the order of things was imperative; that the dissatisfied elements in society were coming together and that unless men were given better lives, they were determined to fight. The working man was deteriorating physically under the strain of brutal working conditions which exacted too many units of physical energy for the number of calories of food he was getting. The bacilli of crime, the real corpses, were disappearing from the blood of the working people. It was not a theory; one could see it in the faces and movements of the people. Medical men recognized the fact. A walk through the poorest district of any industrial city in Europe furnished plenty of evidence of this alarming condition. Men, women and children were resorting to drugs to stimulate to keep up. Tea, coffee and alcohol were being used in increasing amounts.

Always on Verge of Want.

Men were stretching their arms and yawning. Squander and squandered the money. Many lived in abject poverty, many more lived in the border line of the gutter. Few were able to accumulate even the smallest surplus. They found not by saving and saving a week ahead of the game. It had become a hand to mouth existence, a weekly, monthly fight to meet the grocery bills, buy stockings, shoes, and the scant amount of clothes to cover their bodies. It was bread and butter for breakfast, bread with tea and for dinner and cheese for supper. Savings sometimes took turned with loss. Once a week the Sunday repast a great stew, a few vegetables and a bone. In the Latin countries it was the same except that diluted cheap wine was substituted for tea. The great majority of men found themselves poorer and older at the end of the week than they were at its beginning. Over the workman's head was suspended night and day by a weak thread the threatened sword of poverty. Men feared that the thread might break any minute. It was the thread by which they held the thing called a "job." What did they care about the rights of private property? They didn't have any private property. The socialists had willing listeners when they ranted about communism. It promised to give these people property, to give them a common ownership of everything. It wasn't hard to convince them that this was better than ownership of nothing.

The bolsheviks of Russia are entitled to the presumption of good faith in selecting the Marxian formula. It is only fair to them, and to the remedy, to examine the experiment with a mind free from prejudice. In admitting the good intentions of the bolsheviks I am not conceding that bolshevism is practicable, verifiable; that it has succeeded or can succeed. For the present I am trying to fairly give the whole story of the effort. It is as foolish to try to answer the bolshevik propaganda by calling the bolsheviks ugly names, as it would be stupid to accept bolshevism because its advocates are sincere.

Need for Calm Consideration. Russia is the patient. If we are to intelligently judge the treatment called bolshevism, it is necessary to get a complete history of the patient and examine the conditions under which the experiment was tried. Any doctor who is a scientist would follow such a procedure in handling a medical case. If a doctor announced to the scientific world that he had a remedy for cancer, which at the present time is an incurable physical disease, just as poverty is a social one, the scientists would give a hearing to his theory, seek a fair test for it, keep their minds open, and judge the efficacy of the remedy by the results it produced. Communism, as a treatment, a cure for poverty, has never been put to the test on a scale and in circumstances which justify any positive judgment as to whether or not the plan is a practical one. As I have written, the Russian bolsheviks insist that if every one owns everything in common there can be no poverty. They base this statement on their faith that communism will increase production. They claim that competition, selfish production. They say that the competitive system takes from the individual the inducement to work—that communism would give him an incentive to work; that it would be a stimulant; that under it men would work better and produce more. They add that the present system is bound to provoke an increasing number of strikes and that strikes stop production, cause waste, increase poverty. There is no doubt about the fact that there could be no poverty in the socialistic state if communism succeeded in stimulating men to work harder, thus greatly increasing production, because there would be more to eat, more to wear, more to use and as the distribution would be controlled by the state, all of the people would receive an equal share of the great abundance, all would have enough. For the sake of fairness to them I am conceding that the distribution program would be honestly and justly carried out, but a better distribution, a more equal and just division would mean nothing if the first, the fundamental promise of bolshevism—greater production—is not fulfilled. Any plan which decreases production causes a shortage of the things necessary to life. If the bolsheviks are wrong in their belief that communism will increase production, then bolshevism would make poverty general, universal, and instead of bolshevism curing the cancer on the body of civilization, it would make the entire body of civilization a cancer. If the claims of bolshevism are well founded, sound in common sense, capable of fulfillment, communism would be the greatest blessing ever conferred upon humanity. On the other hand, if the bolsheviks are wrong, and communism took from them the inducement to work, then notwithstanding the good intentions of the bolsheviks, their communism would be the greatest scourge the world has known. This is the simple issue in the case. If bolshevism is the good thing its advocates say it will bring the millennium, and every human being should be in favor of it; but if it is not practical, and will not work out, then it is a danger, the red flag is its proper signal, and the world should avoid the danger signal as an engineer charged with the safety of human life would avoid running by a red light on the track ahead.

Examine Before Condemning.

Going back to the case of my friend, the doctor who honestly and sincerely believes he has a cure for cancer, let us consider what the scientific world would demand before offering a judgment as to the value of his proposed cure. First, they would free their minds of all prejudice. They would be reasonable and patient as they would be thorough in examining the proposed remedy from every possible angle. They would analyze the formula, examine it in the light of experience. Why shouldn't we follow the sane, sensible plan in considering bolshevism? Won't we get farther if we do? Isn't such a course an advance over quarreling about it? Why should some of us accept it without knowing what it is? Why should others condemn it without understanding? And why should both these groups get excited and infuriated, call each other names, learn to hate, and add to the world's unrest?

I propose to follow the method of the scientist as nearly as I can in examining the patient, Russia; the world cancer, poverty and the remedy—bolshevism.

1. A complete family history, so that we may know and understand the constitution of the patient.

2. The physical and mental condition of the patient at the time treatment was begun.

3. The formula—the remedy.

4. The theory of the cure.

5. The methods used in applying the remedy.

6. The history sheets showing the effect of the treatment upon the patient.

7. The condition of the patient after more than two years of bolshevism.

Monarchs Tire of Switzerland.

Former Emperor Charles of Austria and Empress Zita are tired of remaining in Switzerland according to a telegram from Prague, and have applied to the Czechoslovak government for permission to reside in Prague. The request was refused for political reasons.

One reason given for the request is that owing to the low rate of exchange in Switzerland the former royal couple are receiving only one-tenth of their income from Vienna. Empress Zita is reported to have been forced to sell more of her jewels.

An American newspaper is understood to have offered the former emperor $500,000 for his reminiscences, but although financially embarrassed, he refused.

Child Victims of the War.

In Jugoslavia there are 300,000 fatherless children of whom 150,000 are absolutely destitute. Among them tuberculosis, eye and skin diseases are rife. Of these children up to July, fewer than 2,000 had been provided for largely because of the tremendous difficulties attending the work in an utterly disorganized community. The government at Belgrade and the great American and English relief organizations are now working in thorough harmony in their efforts to carry these children safely through the winter. They can only succeed if there is no slackening of effort on the part of the American and British public.

BILLIE'S CHANCE

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

She was the most wonderful girl he had ever met. She was "the girl" Billie told himself all this, as he sat in desperate mood, on his own porch steps. All his life he had been waiting for just such a girl, and now that she had come, he could make no progress whatever in winning her, or even in voicing his affection. He raked the gravel wrathfully as he thought of the many opportunities which had heretofore been thrust upon him, for swooning hours. Yes, thrust upon him, Billie reflected by willing parents. For Billie's bank roll was substantial.

Billie's family, beyond reproach, found himself good to look upon and equally "good" to talk to. And now that he was in earnest—deeply, deeply earnest—he was balked in his love-making intention at every turn. Billie felt that he could not survive another day without making love to Connie. He had held his tongue in check just as long as he could.

Connie was too pretty, too altogether charming to be held from him longer. Yet, how he was going to express his feeling for the girl in the presence of her forbidding mother was more than Billie could figure out. Mrs. Webster's frigid proximity alone, he was sure, would freeze the words on his lips, and Mrs. Webster was never absent during Billie's calls at least, from her only daughter's side. Brandon had warned him of this, when Billie requested the introduction to Connie.

"Well, never be a boy's company," Brandon had said. "Mother is always on the job. This mother intends to keep little daughter her willing slave in subjection. Wiser and braver men than you have failed there, Billie."

But still Billie persisted; to find his friend's warning true. His cleverly planned invitations for drives or theaters had all been accepted in mother's name—mother always went too; this was understood.

Billie confessed to himself that Connie had a remarkable way of dealing with one in confidence as it were—with her eyes. According to the luminous eyes of Connie her mother's presence between them was as great a regret to herself as it was to him. And according to the twinkling eyes of Connie, she admired immensely his clever, though useless maneuvers, to be rid of that presence. And lately—only very lately—according to the soft and wistful eyes of Connie she knew an ingenious plan to his own in wishing to hear the words that he so yearned to speak.

With a gesture of weary despair, Billie arose from the porch step and proceeded "Westward," to fulfill an engagement to take Connie and her mother to a concert. He smiled, comforted, undulating the girl's goodness during the performance. If he could be quick enough to push the old lady in the first seat, Connie would sit next to him. But alas! Billie was not quick enough. It was Connie, whom her mother's directing arm, put into the first seat.

So Billie sat, throughout the concert, and Billie further sulked as Mrs. Webster, upon the homeward walk, insinuated herself between Connie and himself, a victim arm upon either.

A strong breeze coming up in the early spring night, blew dust in their faces, and Billie felt a savage delight in forcing his charge against the gale. Her skirts buffeted her steps and as Connie hastily withdrew an assisting arm in order to cling to her own hat, Mrs. Webster's new straw turban was merrily lifted by the breeze and carried swiftly off in the darkness. "Catch it, Connie," she gasped, and Connie dashed off in pursuit.

Then as Mrs. Webster vainly peered about in the windswept gloom, Billie with a shanted word ran in an opposite direction.

"We will round it up," he promised, but everything which lured as a shadow hat, proved to be no hat at all, and accidentally or purposely, which, I cannot say, Billie and Connie met in the darkness at the end of the Webster lawn behind a Webster tree. And Billie, believing that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good," proceeded to capture his own good and Connie's slight figure, as well, at the same time.

"No use looking further," Billie murmured inarticulately, "too dark, too breezy. Hark's gone to Jericho by this time."

"But mother," whispered the girl, "she's coming, I hear her."

"Let her come," answered Billie wickedly, "we are harder to find back here than the hat."

And then Billie told his love story! It was eloquently told—and very well—it shyly received.

"Connie!" came a querulous voice. "Oh, Connie! where are you?"

"Mother thought a lot of that hat," the girl said into Billie's coat lapel, "I really think that you might get a long way into mother's graces, Billie, if you could bring it back in the morning."

"But, darling!" objected Billie. "If I could find that hat, what would it look like in the morning. It's raining now."

"Mother bought the hat at Miss Wolcott's," Connie insisted. "Miss Wolcott would know where to find another like it, Billie."

And that is the very way that Billie made the grand opening for his victory.

HOME-MADE TOGS

Women Clever With Needle Can Save on Clothing.

High Cost of Materials Behooves Majority to Fashion Their Own Simple Gowns.

There is no denying that home dressmaking, at least for grown-ups, is less popular than it used to be. There are several reasons for this, one being that so far as cotton frocks were concerned the American manufacturer offered such smart designs at such reasonable figures that it did not pay the average woman to cut and plan, and sew a simple cotton or gingham frock. But like everything else, since the war, the summer frock of ordinary materials has increased in cost until $25 or $30 is now the usual figure for a gown that a few years ago could be made by a woman clever with the needle at from $5 to $7. And even when the services of the dressmaker by the day were enlisted to supplement home talent the summer frock was still inexpensive.

But a different tale is related nowadays and while no sensible person would recommend that an inexperienced woman should undertake to fashion a serge or satin gown, there is no good reason why, fortified by good patterns, one who is accustomed to sewing cannot turn out simple cotton frocks that will admirably serve every summer purpose.

BLOUSES FOR SPRING WEAR

Over Garments to Accompany—New Tailors May Be Constructed From Tricotee.

To accompany the charming new spring tailors there are the most delightful blouses of tricotee. All the lovely pastel shades, too, are being worn, with perhaps a preference for the new parrot green. And, by the way, not in many seasons has any color been taken up so quickly as the spring shades of green. But then there are those soft shades of rose, French blue, violet gray, raspberry, orange, cream, sand and apricot.

These unusual blouses assume the lines of the Balkan model and are of hip-length, with short sleeves and round neck. The blouse is sometimes made into a broad band at the hips and puffed over gracefully. One tricotee blouse in this style chose green for its color and trimmed the neck and sleeves with bands of cut straw beads. "The overblouse to be smart must be simple and have good lines," says one authority, and that's why these new tricotee blouses are among the leading models of the season. A stunning blouse to accompany a suit of gray velvet was developed in raspberry colored tricotee. It was a lasque effect with round neck and brief kimono sleeves. Odd motifs of wool in various colors graced the front and lent not a little charm to the silky fabric.

Hooks and eyes properly adjusted so that they meet in just the right place, have a great deal to do with

CHARMING GARDEN FROCK

Here is shown one of the season's garden frocks. It is composed of a white silk skirt with an unusual old gold blouse, set off by a broad-brimmed white hat.

ABOUT THE LATE NECKWEAR

Separate Collars, Scarfs, Net Frills, Jabot Ruffles, Ribbons and Beads in Favor.

This is a season of neckwear. The shops are full of lovely "separate" collars, and that, of course, is an indication of the style for separate bits of white and colored neck wear.

There is, perhaps, nothing new that might be used for neckwear. Within the last few years we have used handkerchief linen, organdie and net, lace and crepe de chine tulle and ambrosine. These things are still used, all of them, for neckwear. It is just the way they are used that makes them sensible.

For one thing, there are silk scarfs of silk this season. They are lovely in color and design.

Then there are lovely waistcoats of broadened and embroidered ribbons.

Net frills are fastened on the edge of organdie collars and jabots.

The handkerchief linen is heavily embroidered in satin stitch.

Sheer, colorfully lace is used to form jabot ruffles, attached to high collars, that suggest the burrled skirts of the dandies of bygone days.

Not exactly neckwear, but in these days sensibly classed with it, because it all goes to produce the right effect at the neck finish of the bodice, is the band chain. Some new ones are made of ribbon and beads. The ribbon forms the center part of the chain, and at each end of the ribbon, a strip perhaps three-quarters of a yard long, there is attached a chain of beads.

Round Hat Is Passe.

As far as Paris is concerned the round hat is passe, at least so runs the report. Shapes are irregular being broken on the sides and in front, the Breton style being popular. Soft plush crowns with a shawl being shown, while a partiality is evidenced toward hats of taffeta and satin with medium height crowns.

Personality in Decoration.

Colors are of paramount importance in apartment decoration and the cool and receding shades are sure to create the more quiet and "roomy" effects. Patterns are of vital importance as well and if those that are selected are large and "spattery" they will tend to make the apartment seem small and crowded. Pronounced designs always take away from the effectiveness of the background. There is a great deal of decorative interest in fixtures, in hangings, in lamps and incidental pieces of furniture and if these are thoughtfully selected their individuality will go far toward creating personality for the impersonal department.

The Unusual Hat.

Interesting and unusual hats will not be hard to find this spring. The French milliners have thought of many ingenious things to give variety. One recently seen was made of a braid made by plaiting or braiding bright green silk and coarse straw together.

He says the girls will not ride in a buggy any more, and nothing less than an auto will do them. And he says he will be derided if he will any one. He says all the luxuries his mother wants is a one-lb. of corn cake tobacco a month, which he buys of Couch. If he hasn't got the cash his credit is good.

Well I have so many good things to eat and to use, I can't mention one-tenth of them, but if you will call and see what I have got, you will surely be pleased with both quality and price. I am still headquarters for flour, potatoes, bread, fried cakes, cookies, and crackers of finest quality and lowest prices. Have several kinds of good coffee and tea—Savory Tea, and Harvest Moon and Mallard brands. There are the best brands of tea on the market. Also have the Bonita coffee, the Witch, the Sunham, the White House, the Winner, the Tablata, the Niro, all high-grade coffees. Several brands of the best Salmon, 25 to 35 cts. for No. 1 Tail. I have another one of the best hatters in Wayne county hanging in the ice box, bought of G. C. Rendon, who does not figure on what it costs but how good he can get them. This 4-year-old hatter dressed over 700 lbs. Bought right, will sell right. Also lots of good pork of all descriptions—Smoked hams—Pork loins—a lot of good fish in barrels. Also sweet pickles, sliced cucumbers, fresh grated horse radish, pepper, catsup, and lots of bulk goods. Much cheaper than package goods. And do not forget the large racks of salt. Have 6 or 8 bushels of Field Seed Peas at $4.25 per 60-lbs.

A lot of flour at $1.65 for 1-8-bbl. This is $2.00 per bbl. less than mill price today. Also a lot of bulk graham flour, fresh and new at 7c per lb. A lot of good buckwheat flour at 7c per pound.

FRIVOLITIES OF 1920 AT SHUBERT-DETROIT.

"Frivolities of 1920," the first revue of the leap year, will inaugurate a week's engagement at the Shubert-Detroit Sunday evening. It is the first of what its producer, G. M. "Broncho Billy" Anderson—one time cinema cowboy here—announces will be a series of annual entertainments, fashioned in the same generous and gorgeous mould, for the edification of the fatigued-gentlemen engaged in commercial pursuits and for sundry others who are not so weary, and for the illumination of the leading theatres of the larger cities. "Frivolities" concerns itself with making satirical and comic faces, at some of enduring political, social and amusement institutions, with multiplying costly fabrics on comely figures until the stage is ablaze with vivid dyes, with a musical score that arouses a sympathetic rhythm in the toes and shoulders of its auditors, with a corps of comics that tickle the collective ribs of their audience with their quips and wiles and ribes, with color-splashed scenic effects that are at once startling and gay, and with an array of girls that might well have walked on the front covers of the popular fiction magazines into the front line of the ensemble.

After an all season's run at the Harris Theatre the Selwyns production of "Wedding Bells" will be next week's attraction at the Garrick Theatre beginning Sunday night. There have been numerous reasons for the long popularity of this delightful comedy by Salisbury Field, who has told us it a novel story and threaded it with an effervescent humor which tickles the risibilities of each and every audience. In it Mr. Feld begins his romance where the average playwright ends a story, and in so doing evolves for himself a series of interesting situations from which he extracts an evening of joyous fun where another might easily have found only the making of a tragedy.

For the engagement of "Wedding Bells" in this theatre and for the contemplated tour to the Pacific Coast in a few weeks, the Selwyns will present the same incomparable company of players which has been seen all winter in support of Margaret Lawrence and Wallace Edinger.

Robt Thompson is confined to his home with the smallpox.

The clerk read the following communication from the Plymouth & Northville Gas Company:

To the Council of the Village of Northville:

Gentlemen:

Your letter of the 10th inst. is called to Section 13 of the Gas Franchise granted to the Plymouth & Northville Gas Company by the Village, dated February 10th 1914.

The Franchise permits the Gas Company to charge $1.50 per thousand cubic feet, subject to a discount of 15c per thousand cubic feet if payments are made at the office of the Gas Company on or before the 15th day of the succeeding month.

Section 13 provides that such ordinance shall be revised and readjusted at the expiration of each five year period, as to the price that may be charged. Apparently the readjustment as to the five year period commencing February 10, 1919, was overlooked and we desire that the matter be now taken up and a readjustment of price be made for the present period.

Under existing conditions, and in view of the unusual and excessive cost of coal and labor and other items that enter into the manufacture of gas, it is impossible for us to continue to produce and deliver gas at the original price without loss that is a very short time would render us bankrupt.

We have very carefully, and in detail, gone into the actual cost of gas production and its distribution at this time and we find that it is impossible for us to furnish gas to the consumers in the Village of Northville and Plymouth for less than a rate of $2.00 per thousand cubic feet, with a discount of 20c per thousand cubic feet if paid on or before the 15th day of the month succeeding the month of delivery.

We then would ask that, under the Section above quoted that a readjustment of price be made for the current five year period and that we may be permitted to charge, not to exceed the said sum of $2.00 per thousand cubic feet, subject to said discount of 20c we are making a similar request to the Village of Plymouth and we trust that the adjustment be made in both places.

It is for the intention of this company to discriminate between the consumers in the Village of Northville as against those in the Village of Plymouth.

Yours truly,

PLYMOUTH & NORTHVILLE GAS COMPANY.

F. S. HARMON, President.

Enclosed will be presented the following resolution:

RESOLVED, That WHEREAS under the gas franchise now owned by the Plymouth & Northville Gas Company granted to certain persons under date of February 10, 1914, it was provided by Section 13 that the price to be charged for gas should be readjusted at the expiration of each five year period.

And WHEREAS, no such readjustment or revision was made at the beginning of February 10, 1919 and it is the opinion of this Council that such readjustment and revision should now be made for such period.

And WHEREAS, it appears from certain facts and representations that have come to our knowledge and at test that it is impossible, without enormous loss and damage to such Gas Company to furnish gas to the consumers at the price named in such franchise and that, from such action we believe that a fair and reasonable charge, during the unexpired term of such period, would be the sum of $2.00 per thousand cubic feet, subject to a discount of 20c per thousand cubic feet.

Therefore, BE IT RESOLVED, That the power contained in said Section 13 of the Village of Northville ordinance agree that said franchise or the unexpired portion of said five year period be fixed at the sum of $2.00 per thousand cubic feet, subject to a discount of 20c per thousand cubic feet if paid at any time on or before the 15th day of the month next following the fiscal month for which bills for said gas be rendered and that no charge shall be made in the minimum charge of 50c per month at which gas will be furnished to consumers through any one meter, and upon the acceptance, in writing by said Gas Company of the proposed revision as above outlined, at any time within 90 days from this date, that said prices shall go into effect on the first of the month succeeding the filing of such acceptance.

"POOR MAN'S LAWYER" HAS ITS FIRST WOMAN ATTORNEY

"Legal advice," said Miss Dorothy Frooks, attorney for the Salvation Army, at National Headquarters, New York City, "ought to be given away."

DOROTHY FROOKS

for the asking. It ought to be dispensed like religion and medicine."

This is the reason why Miss Frooks chooses to cast her legal career with the Salvation Army, to aid the organization in the part of its work in which it serves as "The Poor Man's Lawyer." That is the reason why, armed with a legal degree, dated 1918, an admission to the bar, on which the ink was scarcely dry, 22 years of youth and more than ordinary good looks, she opened her office at Salvation Army Headquarters, 122 West Fourteenth street, New York City.

Miss Frooks has made good. She has untangled many family snarls without resorting to the divorce courts. She has obtained justice for tenement dwellers who have been preyed upon by landlords, installment collectors and loan sharks. She has helped pay off mortgages, settle wills and draw up contracts. She has defended criminals accused in court and protected the rights of men and women who were prevented by iron bars and prison gates from managing their own affairs. But that's not all. It was found that an additional legal adviser was needed by the Salvation Army to look after its $10,000,000 worth of property— orphan asylums, maternity hospitals, industrial homes, day nurseries, schools—scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land. Miss Frooks was given the work. Again she waged triumphantly through the task.

It is no uncommon thing for the Salvation Army to receive urgent calls from the poor for legal advice and assistance, and when the cases are worthy the Army obtains competent lawyers and sees that justice is obtained. This is one of the incidental developments of the Army's many activities which bring it into intimate contact with the poor, the unfortunate and the misfit of the country over.

Attorneys in many cities make it a practice to give their services free to those recommended by the Salvation Army. Miss Frooks is the first woman lawyer to "hang out her shingle" with the Army.

Famous Editor Appeals for Humanity

R. Edward Bok

(Former Editor of The Ladies' Home Journal)

"We have overlooked all the problems that confront us today," which, at the end of the day, is really no more than the remarking of a man setting him on his feet, putting another one in his way, and giving him back to his children and wife, or to the community, as the case may be, instead of a liability. If ever there was a piece of real practical citizenship work, it is surely this. It is this work, as I know from a personal knowledge, that the Salvation Army does, and that is why when it asks me for my support I give it freely and fully, and why it should appeal to the same way to every American man and woman.

EDWARD BOK

Here, at least, is one agency of uplift work which overlaps on other, for the Salvation Army reaches men whom the churches and all other agencies combined do not reach with the same sure appeal. The Salvation Army worker knows the man who is down, and the man knows that the worker knows him and here there is a mutual feeling of understanding and sympathy that is true of no other and that reaches out to him.

To do such work the Salvation Army has to ask our support, and it has a right to expect a full-hearted response to the cry of our distressed humanity.

"THE FATHER OF THE MAN"

THIS is "Jimmie," towheaded with an eye that gets your unsavory glances and as winsome a little as a kitten for bedtime prayers. Jimmie is one of more than 25,000 homeless or poor children, young and old, by the Salvation Army in the United States, and he lives in one of the "Jimmie's" nighty nighty "Send me a papa and mama" is the blarney of "Jimmie's" nighty nighty "And—God bless the Salvation Army!" he almost invariably adds.

The Salvation Army is a great big organization caring for "Jimmie" and his thousands of brothers and sisters as they did in frying doughnuts for doughboys and marines in France. If the child is father to the man, they argue, the father must have a good bringing up. And so the chain of fifty Salvation Army orphanages, day nurseries and children's hospitals that stretch from coast to coast.

ANTICIPATION!

Is like counting your chickens before they are hatched. For the time being it makes you feel good to think what you are going to do if a certain thing happen.

It's the reverse in "The Loan" though, for frequently in setting up with a stockholder we hear him say "That's more than I figured on."

"More Power"

You know what happens when a car runs dry for lack of gasoline—it is just naturally out of business.

In other words you can't run a car without gasoline. A telephone company, or any other company, is in exactly the same fix; it can't run unless it gets enough financial "power" to keep the employees working "on all cylinders," and to insure proper operating conditions.

WE MUST HAVE
YOUR SUPPORT
IF YOU ARE
TO HAVE THE TELEPHONE

You also know that it takes more "power" today to keep a business going than it ever did before. Workers must be paid more if they are to meet the increased cost of living also everything that goes into the building and repairing of property has gone up in price.

So long as you furnish the necessary "power" we will see to it that the telephone keeps running.

LET'S ALL DO OUR BEST.

From the Harvester-World, a publication issued monthly by the International Harvester Company, we take the following, which expresses the needs of the hour so nicely that we are glad to give it to our readers.

"These are uncomfortable times. Nearly every fine optimistic view upon the 'world is' clouded by a mist—a pessimist. We don't know where we're going, we don't want to get there, we don't like the scenery along the way, and we can't turn about and go back. We are floundering and muddling and swearing and being unhappy."

"Consider the laboring man. Food and clothing are high, and rents are going higher. Think of the manufacturer. Materials are scarce, labor is indifferent. It is hard to ship the products when they are finally manufactured, taxes are ever higher. And think of the farmer. Shipping and farm labor conditions are discouraging."

"But this is readjustment. They told us it was coming, this is it. Nobody likes it, very few can escape it, and there is more of it coming. We have to take our medicine."

"We have to swallow it but there is one way to lighten the dose. Be more careful how you spend your money. Spend no more than usual—spend less if possible. Buy fewer luxuries. Prove that you are a true American by saving regularly part of what you earn and investing it in some good enterprise."

"And try to give an honest day's work for every day's pay. Deliver a little more for the money than you ever did before. Do this on faith for its own sake and for the good of the rest of us. By buying less and working more, you will help production catch up with demand, and after all that is most of our trouble. We are used to living with a surplus of goods and manufactured products ahead. That surplus doesn't exist now as a balance wheel, and it is one of the causes of our symptoms of readjustment. It makes us angry, restless, dissatisfied, afraid."

"If a strong trusted man could rise up and tell us what the matter with us is, and tell us all to be courageous and to be patient and to be economical, it would do a lot to help us through this trying working readjustment. But it shouldn't be necessary for us to do this. We ought to be doing it if we will keep our heads and our hearts the other way. And that is what we will do."

KIND WORDS FOR KELLY.

One of the staunchest supporters of democracy in the south the day after yesterday at Ocala, Florida, Kelly, the Governor of Florida.

The United States committee of the United States, on May 1 adopted resolutions to end the war which was in progress.

The vote on the resolution was 9 to 6. The resolution was adopted by the committee on the day after yesterday.

On the resolution of Mr. Patrick H. Kelly, a Republican of Michigan, says: "We have in our country many The war is not, let us hope, a long one. Let us hope it is a square, but a long one, besides we want to trade with you."

Mr. Kelly is one of the few who has the courage of his convictions. Notwithstanding the fact that fearfully and almost on a daily basis the committee whose displeasure most of the members of the republican state feels to an extent, that is intolerable. He puts his eyes to the election, and he is out in next November and sports out in meeting to his colleagues.

Stopping for a moment at the same house as myself was a young man, who was annoyed at every hour by the kindly inquiries as to the name in Scotland of the various organs on the table. On this particular day he passed the time to him saying, "What would you call that in Scotland?" He tried to answer with his fork then looked up and said, "I don't know."

WHAT a difference in these motor-car days, when every point in the county is hardly more than "just around the corner."

People's ideas are changing, too.

They're beginning to figure out how much it is costing them to keep a car. And the man who is doing the greatest amount of figuring is the man with the moderate-price car.

There still seems to be a notion in some quarters that any tire is good enough for a small car.

Large or small, U. S. Tires are built to only one standard of quality—the standard that produced the first straight side automobile tire, the first pneumatic truck tire.

Every tire that bears the name "U. S." is built the best way its makers know how. It isn't the car, but the man who owns the car, that counts with the oldest and largest rubber concern in the world.

REJECTED ALL BIDS ON BONDS

Such large broker's commissions were asked by bonding houses who presented bids on the county's $375,000 jail bond issue, that the board of supervisors Friday afternoon rejected all bids received. By a resolution of the board it is now the duty of the county clerk, treasurer and chairman of the board to negotiate for sale of five bonds. The board adjourned subject to call with the understanding that it will be called into session when the committee of three has arranged a sale of the bonds.

Due to the fact that the bonds bear interest of only 4%, no premiums can be obtained at this time because of the condition of the stock market. The bonds must be sold at par and to offset this the bidding companies all asked broker's commissions—Pontiac Press.

SEED PRICE CUT TO HELP FARMERS

Action looking toward the use of pure-bred seeds of highest quality on all the farms of the state was taken last week by the board of directors of the Michigan Crop Improvement association, when recommendations were passed calling for a price cut for local needs of from 25 to 40% of the margins asked for seeds registered by the Crops association.

"This action was taken in an effort to stimulate the use of high quality seed throughout the state," says A. L. Bibbins of the farm crops department at M. A. C., who is secretary of the improvement association. "We want to see the best of seed on every Michigan farm."

There is a great demand from other states for car lots of Michigan grown seeds. This calls for community production of standard varieties, in order that the shipments may be made up in one locality.

The Crop Improvement association adopted a definite scale of prices at last week's meeting. These prices will be based on the Chicago market, with the addition of margins necessary to cover the increase cost of producing and handling registered seed.

FORBIDDEN PATH

By CECILLE LANGDON

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

"Now what does that ever mean?" Miss Anice Gordon, spinster, gave a sniff of indignation and peered sharply at a piece of board supported by chains covering an open gateway. The sign read: "No Trespassing—Allowed."

Her younger sister, Millie, paled. "Can't you answer?" demanded Anice irritably.

"I can only see that the path across to the main road has been closed to the public," spoke Millie in a subdued tone.

"The public!" snapped Anice. "Fudge! We are the only public who ever cross this way. Heretofore, as it saved us going around half a mile, we used it. We had been invited—welcome, in fact, to do so. Now it is closed as a forbidden path. Why! I take it as a deliberate insult on the part of Mr. Morton Chester."

"Oh, don't say that, sister," quavered Millie pleadingly. "There is some mistake—some reason."

"Well, I shall never recognize Mr. Chester until I know what it is," snapped Anice testily, and bounded away.

Millie walked slowly back to their little vine-embowered cottage. Hers had been a humdrum, uneventful life until six months previous, when Morton Chester bought his present estate. He was four years the senior of Millie and it was rumored had made a business success. It was also learned that he had only one relative in the world, a younger step-brother, whom he always spoke of with loving tenderness. Mr. Chester proved to be a good neighbor. His only servants were a housekeeper and a cook, and one day he invited the sisters to a formal dinner, later took tea with them, and it grew to be so that he would drop in on them for a chat, or invite them over to Fairview to advise him as to some landscape gardening. Anice was an exacting chambermaid, but Millie and he pursued a warm mutual companionship that both prized. For about a month, however, the Gordons had barely seen Mr. Chester. Abruptly he seemed to evade them. He called no more at the cottage, and Millie grew grave and puzzled and Anice quite offended. The latter hinted at mystery when there appeared a dark, sinister appearing man. Now Millie gave an hour's serious thought to the stranger, seeking to analyze the alteration in the behavior of their neighbor and his to her sister later.

"Anice, I fear that Mr. Chester is in some deep trouble," replied Anice crossly. "He has been fit to ignore us and I have no further interest in him."

"But I have, sister dear," began Millie, flushing visibly.

"Perhaps too much," commented Anice significantly.

"I do not forget how kind and considerate he has been to us," proceeded Millie. "I am satisfied that Mr. Chester is in difficulty and has been ever since that man, Walters, came to Fairview. Mr. Chester acts as if he is afraid of him. He looks pale and worried, and I have seen Walters meet a vicious looking fellow at the stock market, shed several times always at dusk, and they suggest a couple of plotters."

It was two evenings later when Millie, wandering sadly past the western confines of Fairview, noticed a light at the shelter shed. An hour later, pale and agitated, she hastened homeward to seek her sister at once.

"Anice," she said, "I have overheard that man Walters and his sinister friend discussing Mr. Chester. He is the center of an infamous scheme of extortion. It seems that his step-brother is in South America on a secret business mission, and they have convinced Mr. Chester that he went there to escape prosecution for an embezzlement he committed, but which his former employers have not yet discovered. Walters threatens to expose him unless Mr. Chester bribes him liberally. They have so deftly worked, on the fears of Mr. Chester that he hides himself in fancied disgrace from all his friends. I have learned enough to give names and addresses, whereby Mr. Chester can easily be assured of the innocence of his step-brother and the guilt of these human harpies. Why! where are you going?" for Anice had arisen with set, resolute face.

"I am going to see Mr. Chester, and I am going by the short cut," came the grim answer.

Mr. Chester did not return with Anice, but there was an expectant, triumphant look on her face as she said: "Mr. Chester will be here within an hour, Millie. He insisted on seeing you to thank you for relieving him from a domination that has caused him untold misery."

"Before I left the house," announced Mr. Chester, when he arrived, "I sent Walters on his way with a promise to send him to the penitentiary if I ever saw his face again. On my way here, I smashed that 'No Trespassing' sign to splinters, Millie. The forbidden path is forevermore a public highway and you can enter Fairview as freely as you can my heart, which has been yours since the day I first met you. Speak, dearest! Is it worthy as an abiding place for your love?" and Millie hid her blushing happy face on Anice's shoulder, and Morton Chester had his answer.

2ND MISSION COMES FROM PHILIPPINES

Body Headed by Senate President Quezon Reiterates Demand for Independence.

That the Filipino people are in earnest in their demand for immediate independence is indicated by the coming to the United States of a second Philippine mission to work for independence. Coincident with this announcement the War Department received a cable from Manila stating that the all-Filipino legislature had adopted resolutions reiterating its plea for immediate independence.

The second mission, like the first, is composed of the leading men of the islands and will work in the United States not only for immediate independence, but also to bring about "better understanding, greater confidence and closer economic relations between the United States and the Philippines."

The mission is again headed by Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, who is well known in America, having been for six years resident commissioner to the United States.

Senate President Manuel L. Quezon.

States. Mr. Quezon and the Hon. Sergio Osmeña, speaker of the Philippine House of Representatives and Vice President of the Council of State, are the leaders of the Nacionalista party, which has been in power since 1907.

While speaker Osmeña is not so well known in the United States as Quezon, he is considered one of the ablest men in the islands. Senate President Quezon has been in the United States as "the first of the Philippine delegation."

The personal relations between Osmeña and Quezon are probably without a parallel in modern politics. They have been the leading political figures in the islands for 12 years, yet there has never been the slightest indication of rivalry between them. Throughout their careers, as well as their long political careers, they have refused to be a candidate for any position that the other aspired to.

During the 1919 session of the Philippine delegate to the American Congress he won the esteem and confidence of both the Republican and Democratic sides of the chamber. Whenever he spoke he was assured of a good attendance. One of the official short hand reporters once declared Quezon used the purest English of any member of the House.

Osmeña, as president of the Nacionalista party, is the leader of the national movement for independence.

"Osmeña is the premier de facto of the Philippines," said a leading Filipino Speaker Sergio Osmeña.

no journalist, now in America. "A very conscientious and tireless worker, thorough and persistent, a genius for grasping the big features as well as the smallest details of public affairs, cool headed, quiet by temperament and education, a deep thinker, an eloquent speaker, a polished writer, a keen observer of men—such is Osmeña."

Both Osmeña and Quezon have been consistent advocates of Philippine independence, yet when the occasion demanded it they have never hesitated to champion the cause of America's good intentions toward the Filipino people.

Privacy. "Living without privacy," said a woman the other day, "is as bad as being without the sacred lotus of the Orient. I must be confused with the planting house, leads us to reveal a story of wreck. We feel the strain of too close contact with the other members of our family and with our neighbors. But we do not know what the trouble is. We feel that something is wrong with the place we are living and we move. We simply move from one box to another. What we need is more room—room enough for privacy—room enough to be alone."

True Lotus and the Lotus of Poetry. Neither the true lotus of ancient Egypt nor the sacred lotus of the Orient must be confused with the planting house, leads us to reveal a story of wreck. We feel the strain of too close contact with the other members of our family and with our neighbors. But we do not know what the trouble is. We feel that something is wrong with the place we are living and we move. We simply move from one box to another. What we need is more room—room enough for privacy—room enough to be alone."

CANNING FRUIT WITHOUT SUGAR.

With the present price of sugar at 10 cents, the prospects for a further increase in the fruit season are not so bright as they were. The housewife and family who usually purchase their own canned fruit for winter use, may not be generally known that fruit may be canned without sugar and still retain its flavor and color. It is a little dandy as is proven by the fact that their export trade is sending them to many foreign countries.

In canning fruit without sugar, the product is the best it is possible to get. It is packed, sealed, and clean fruit by placing in strainer and pouring cold water over it. Pack the product carefully in hot glass jars or tin cans until full. Use table-spoon, wooden plate or table knife for packing purposes. Pour boiling hot water over the product in the hot jar. Place rubbers and caps in position not tight. It using tin cans, seal completely. Place product in the sterilizer vat, or canner, and sterilize for the length of time given below according to the particular type of outfit used.

Hot-water bath, homemade or commercial, 30 minutes.

Water seal, 214 degrees, 20 minutes.

5 pounds steam pressure, 12 minutes.

10 pounds steam pressure, 10 minutes.

After sterilizing remove the filled containers. Seal jars; invert to cool and test the joints. Wrap in paper to prevent bleaching and store in a dry cool place. If tin cans are used it will be found advantageous to plunge them in cold water after heating.

Economy of Good Tailoring

We mean the tailoring you don't see rather than the outward finish that appeals to the eye.

There's as much opportunity for skillful workmanship in a coat as in a watch—and it is easy to put poor work into a coat or watch without its showing—for a while.

The reason you buy good clothes is because it is worth money to you to look well dressed all the time. A work shirt and jumpers are practical garments but they don't get the jobs where personal appearance counts.

Now—a coat can look great in a store and yet be badly tailored. Such a coat depreciates more rapidly than a rusty lawn mower. It bags, twists out of shape, curls up and quits. In a month it looks like something you borrowed—in two months, like something you slept in;—in three months, you wear it only where clothes don't count.

Well tailored clothes never lose their dignity. They look about as well the second season as the first. Almost any man who buys good clothes has suits several years old which he puts on with almost as much pride as he feels for his latest purchase.

A suit that is properly tailored is presentable and useful until the fabric is literally worn out. Good tailoring is a matter of science and organization rather than of expense. Michael Stern clothes are, in our opinion, the best tailored garments a man can buy, yet they're very reasonably priced. We're showing spring suits and spring overcoats for as little as $35; also at $40, $45 and up to $60.

One reason why our Michael Sterns clothes enjoy their commanding prestige is because a good many men in Northville have learned the big economy of good tailoring.

HE REMEMBERED THE LAW

Boy Scout's Explanation Somewhat Disconcerting in That it Implied So Much.

The boy scouts were telling their account of some of the good things they had done during the last week.
It was during this time for the benefit of one of the city school teachers who was visiting the meeting. One of the little scouts said, "I helped an old lady across the street."

The next little scout looked at the visiting teacher who happened to be his teacher, and who was in the early thirties. "I brought my teacher a pitcher of well water when she was not feeling well," he told the scoutmaster.

The teacher smiled. "Why didn't you say you helped another old lady?" she asked.

The scout that came back staggered her. The little scout said sweetly, "A scout is courteous."—Indianapolis

"They say that Dobbs is madly in love with his wife, but I don't see any sign of it. He doesn't pay her any special attention, doesn't make any lover-like speeches or any particular fuss over her."

"That's a wild cat," he murmured.
"Maybe not; but whenever she asks him for money he gives it to her without asking what she wants it for."

Last Carver of Totems

William Shelton Carving His "Life Work."

THIS unusual photograph shows one of the last—possibly the last—of the carvers of totem poles. He is William Shelton, head of the Indian reservation school at Tulalip, Wash. The making of totem poles is an art and few nowadays are the men who can carve them.
What a totem pole looks like when completed and set up is shown in the side picture.

Shelton regards this enormous totem pole as his life work. He has already put in 3,000 hours on it. It will set forth the family history of the Snohomish tribe of western Washington.
When set in place it will be 6 feet in diameter and will rise 84 feet. Upon completion of this life work Shelton intends to devote the rest of his days to informing the world of the true inwardness of totem poles. It is a large undertaking.

What is a totem? Well it would take a Philologist to give a definition and then, having heard work to make the average man understand the true inwardness of totemism, totem and totem pole.

Totemism, the anthropologists say, is common to primitive man in every part of the world but is far from being universal. It is found among the American Indians, but there are tribes which show no trace of it. The Eskimo know nothing of it. Certain African savages have it. The Australians have it.

A totem is a class of material objects which a savage regards with superstitious respect, believing that there exists between him and every member of the class an intimate and allegorical spiritual relation. The totem is often a man and his totem is mutually beneficial, the totem protects the man and the man shows respect for the totem in various ways.
If his totem is an animal he may show this respect either by refusing to kill and eat it or by making it his favorite diet.

Early explorers found the American Indian communities, independent of their local distribution into tribes, bands and villages, composed of several distinct clans. Each clan had its emblem, consisting of the figure of some bird, beast or reptile as for example, the clans of the wolf, deer, otter and hawk. In the language of the Algonquians these emblems are known as totems. Members of the same clan were prohibited from intermarriage;
a man could take a wife from any clan but his own. To different totems attached different degrees of rank and dignity; those of the bear, turkey and wolf were among the first in honor. Members of the same clan, though they might dwell far apart and speak different dialects were yet bound by the closest ties of fraternity. This kind of totem was found in at least three varieties: the clan totem, common to a whole clan and passing by inheritance from generation to generation; the sex totem, common either to all the males or to all the females in a tribe, to the exclusion in either case of the other sex;
the individual totem, belonging to an individual and not passing to his descendants.

As to the totem pole, it is hard to say what it is. There is one thing however, which it is not; it is not a fetish or an idol or a thing to be worshipped. The totem pole of one man may be simply his individual totem.
A second totem pole may also bear the clan totem of the owner. Then a chief or a rich man may have an elaborate totem pole containing "all his crests and all the stories connected with them." So that a very large and pretentious totem pole may be a sort of family tree of the owner or even an autobiography.

Even in case the carvers of totem poles become extinct, a number of the most noteworthy of these remarkable creations will be preserved for posterity for several generations to come.
Uncle Sam realized quite a while ago the advisability of this. The result is that there are two national monuments in Alaska, created in large part by the view of preserving some very fine examples of these curious relics of bygone days.

Sitka National monument was created in 1910. It is about a mile from Sitka and contains 37 acres. It contains 15 totem poles, the highest of which rises 60 feet. These totem poles are carved from red cedar and when the paint wears off the unprotected wood cracks badly. These totem poles have recently been given two coats of paint by the National park service in six colors. Where the carvings were broken or decayed they were re-faced. This monument is a picture and place and from it there is a magnificent view of beauty and interest is the scene of the massacre of the far hunters by Indians in the early days when all this region was ruled by Russia.

Kanai National monument was created in 1916. It contains 38 acres and within its bounds are an abandoned Indian village, numerous remarkable totem poles and other objects of historical interest.

WAR AND FUTURE OF ART

Even Creative Force May Reasonably Be Hoped for, Is Conclusion of Noted Writer.

As for the action of the world's great war upon the world's great art, it is a theme too vast for easy handling, writes Agnes Repplier in Art and Life, New York. It was said in the spring of 1915 that the quarter Latin had ceased to produce, having nothing which breathless humanity could pause to look at. Death took its toll of artists and month after month saw the blighting of hope, as men died with their work undone.

Mr. Pennell, an acute but not a sang-uine observer, says plainly that new inspiration—as a result of the conflict —is not to be hoped for. Yet if intentional fervor was fed by the simplities of art, by the cartoon, the verses of the trench, the "half articulate songs" that set the soldier's blood tingling, it is reasonable to believe that the high tide of human passion will not ebb before impregnating a lethargic world with fresh creative force.

Rodin, brooding over the darkest hour and minimizing no peril or calamity, spoke with heroic assurance of the future: "Our young soldiers and our old cathedrals fall that there may flourish again a youth, pure, ardent, healthy, hostile to materialism, keen for spirituality; and that a renewed and sublime art may spring from the soil washed and fertilized by blood."

Milk Consumption.

As it is estimated that only 2.9 of the milk produced in this country is used in making condensed milk, the industry can not have any considerable effect upon the milk industry of the cities. According to figures given for last year, 43.1 per cent of milk produced is used as liquid milk, 41 per cent for making butter, 4.3 per cent for feeding calves, 5 per cent for making cheese, 3.7 per cent for making ice cream, and 2.9 for condensed milk.
The United States has about 23,000, 000 dairy cows. It is estimated that Europe lost about 22,000,000 cows in the last few years.

Limited Vocabulary.

"Dark" to the lament of a former doughboy.

"What about?"

"He says he's been out of the army only eight months and he's forgotten every word of French he knew."

"Too bad. How many words did he know?"

"About six"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Most Tobacco in Cigarettes.

Of the tobacco consumed in this country 77 per cent is made into cigarets, 20 per cent is smoked in pipes and 3 per cent in cigars.

GIVEN PRIVILEGE IN WAR

Channel Islanders for Centuries Were Not Forced to Take Part in Britain's Conflicts

For over two centuries the Channel Islanders were allowed to remain neutral in any war that England might undertake. This singular privilege was granted to them by Edward IV, and was not revoked till the reign of William and Mary. It was granted as a reward for the loyalty of the islanders whose commerce with the neighboring coasts of Brittany and Normandy was constantly being interrupted by the numerous wars. Then the paper joined in enforcing the right, and by a bill dated 1483 Statute IV treated not to communicate any one who violated the order. On the whole, it was fairly rigidly observed and when a Guernsey vessel was taken in the channel by a privateer of Morlaix, the Islanders with their boat were released, but a few Englishmen on board, with their merchandise, were captured. The privilege does not seem to have been of any great commercial value, for when it was withdrawn the islanders made more money than before by fitting their vessels out as privateers.

IN WORDS THAT APPEALED

Periodically Expressed Offer of Needed Assistance Touched Elderly Spinster's Romantic Heart.

After the "personally conducted"
tour about a band of English travelers were crossing the channel home.
It was very rough and most of the ladies retired to the cabin. Only one —an elderly little spinster—stayed on deck.

As the vessel pitched and tossed,
and heavy showers of spray drenched everything, a fellow tourist came to her.

"Excuse me, Miss Black, but I thought perhaps you had the need of a strong arm to lean on—something to support you, you know."

"Oh Mr. Burks," sighed the lady, as she lurched toward him and landed her head on his shoulder. "How sweetly and romantically you have expressed it!"

She Came Through Clean.

Rev. Snickers—And your daughter, Mrs. Burks—the one that was going in for nursing—how is she? Well, I hope?

Mrs. Burks—Splendid, thank you, sir. Last we heard from her she was going up for her final examinations.

Honest, now, doesn't it tickle you to have other men try on your hat and find it too large for them?

Grotesque Nourishment.

"There's a time for everything," said
the ready-made philosopher.
"Fortunately," rejoined Miss Cayenne. "I'd seldom enjoy my breakfast if they insisted on coloring eggs the year round as they do at Easter!"

Car Tracks Wear Tires

The severest wear on solid tires is caused by driving on the car tracks according to an official of a rubber company quoted by the Scientific American. He says that when on the tracks most of the load is concentrated on a limited portion of the tread so that it is overloaded and quickly worn away, besides a sharp pointed rim, may actually cut a piece off the tire just as a knife would.

But One Way to Acquire Wealth.

Wealth is not acquired, as many persons suppose, by fortunate speculations and splendid enterprises, but by the daily practice of industry, frugality and economy. He who relies upon these means will rarely be found destitute, and he who relies upon any other will generally become bankrupt. —Francis Warland.

Insyde Tyers Give You Service.

They Give You Greater Mileage

Insyde Tyres add from 1,000 to 5,000 miles to the life of a casing by reinforcing it and preventing blow-outs, if put on when the tire is new. Insyde Tyres eliminate 50 per cent of all punctures by preventing sharp articles from reaching the tube. Insyde Tyres save their small cost in a short time and may be used over and over again in several casings. Insyde Tyres are made of tough rubber-impregnated fabric, which is practically puncture and blow-out proof when placed inside of an outer casing.
