CLASS OF 1920 GIVEN THEIR DIPLOMAS

The High school auditorium was filled to its capacity last Thursday night on the occasion of the annual commencement exercises of the Northville schools. The platform was becomingly and appropriately decorated with plants and flowers and the exercises throughout reflected credit upon the members of the class and the community they represented. As Miss Irene Marsh rendered the processional members of the class, the speaker of the evening, Superintendent Bowen, Principal Millard and President, C. L. Dubuair, of the Board of Education, took their places upon the platform. Rev. E. V. Belles offered the invocation and at its conclusion the salutatory was given by Helen M. Millard, who extended a cordial welcome to the patrons and friends of the school and expressed her pleasure for the interest manifested.

The High school chorus, under the direction of Miss Greene, rendered two selections—"Come Where the Lillies Bloom" and "The Stars Are Brightly Shining." Miss Greene rendered three solo numbers during the evening and was given hearty applause. H. Z. Wilber, deputy superintendent of public instruction, was introduced by Superintendent Bowen and gave an interesting and scholarly address, taking for his subject "Our Present Task." Our greatest task, the speaker impressed upon his hearers was to educate the people relative to basic principles of government so that all might appreciate its value and advantages.

Ruth E. Cattermole gave the valedictory, expressing the appreciation of the class to teachers, patrons and school officers for the part they had played in making it possible for members of the class to finish their High school course. Mr. Dubuair presented the diplomas and the audience sang "America," bringing to a close an enjoyable event. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. Grimwood.

ELECTED OFFICERS.

At the annual meeting of the Ladies' Library association of Northville, held June 18th, the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Kittle Harmon
1st vice president—Mrs. May Wilkins
Secretary—Mrs. Lucy Filkins
Treasurer—Mrs. Ethelwyn Lapham
Five trustees were elected for the year—Mrs. Sophia Benton, Mrs. Emma Knapp, Mrs. Georgia Yerkes, Mrs. Louise Bryan and Mrs. Mary Alexander to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. Della Harmon who has served as a member of the executive board for twenty years, and the loss of whom the members of the board deeply regret.

Because of the generosity of some of Northville citizens it will not be necessary to increase the price of membership cards which will remain fifty cents a year.

GOING TO ST. LOUIS.

Carroll Dubuair received his diploma at the University of Michigan this week, having completed his course in the Literary department of that great institution. He will leave Northville Saturday for St. Louis, Mo., where he has accepted a position with the International Life Insurance company as assistant actuary. Mr. Dubuair is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Dubuair of this village and has many friends in this community who will wish him unbounded success. While a student at the U. of M. he joined the United States forces and went overseas and after his return home, again took up his studies. He is a young man of sterling character and is deserving of the responsible position which awaits him in the southern city.

ESTABLISHED WIRELESS STATION

The Ford interests in this village have established a wireless telegraph and telephone system in their offices and there will be no more delays when the employees of the local plant desire to communicate with the main offices at Dearborn. No longer will they have to wait while the telephone operator informs them "the line is busy," but they can communicate either by telegraph or by phone. Last Saturday afternoon when the new system was being tested out the operator "caught" the U. S. weather report being sent out from Washington.

EDISON CO. TO ISSUE BONDS.

The Michigan Public Utilities Commission has issued an order authorizing the Detroit Edison company to issue an additional $4,000,000 of 6% 20-year gold bonds, to be sold at not less than 84% of their par value.

FREE PUBLIC CLINICS BEING HELD AT WAYNE

The Wayne County Red Cross nursing service has arranged for regular free clinics in the school building at Wayne, which the people of Northville and Plymouth townships are invited and urged to attend.

This means expert advice free of charge, medicines will not be given out by the clinic but patients needing medical care will be referred back to their local physician with diagnosis and suggestions.

The weekly schedule for the summer is as follows:

Infant welfare, Monday, 10:30 a. m. public health, including tuberculosis and nutrition classes.

Thursday, 10:30, Children's dentistry.

Tuesday and Friday, 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., Nutrition classes are for mothers and children and are especially designed to give assistance to mothers whose children are under weight. All children known to be under normal weight or otherwise not physically fit, should be presented at these Thursday clinics.

Dental clinics are for school children—only and adults will not be treated unless unable to afford a regular dentist. Examinations are free of charge but a very small charge will be made for work done.

Any one wishing further particulars regarding any of the clinics may consult Miss McIntyre, local community nurse. Transportation can be arranged for a limited number.

ACTIVITY AT ORCHARD HEIGHTS.

Orchard Heights Northville's future residence district is a busy place this week and improvements are going on all about. S. M. Eaton has his pretty new home all enclosed and it will be ready for occupancy before many weeks. Across Eaton Drive from the Eaton residence a foundation is being laid for a handsome new house and three others will be erected on adjoining lots just as soon as work can be pushed. These four new houses are to be erected by Northville's new building company and will be modern to the very last detail.

Joe Weston has a crew of men constructing a cement walk running from Rogers street to the westerly life of Orchard Heights. Streets are being graded, lots filled and leveled off and the property is becoming more and more attractive as building activities continue. In future years this portion of Northville will really be the "show place" of the community.

THOMAS B. COUCH SILLS OUT.

Thomas B. Couch has sold his grocery and meat business to Hugo Wilde of Detroit who will take possession of the store next Monday. Mr. Couch has not fully decided upon his future plans but he contemplates returning to Illinois where he formerly resided before coming to Michigan.

Mr. Couch has established a very successful business in Northville and while his methods may seem strange to some people, the patrons of his store, and there are a lot of them in this section, will tell you they have always received good values at Couch's. No matter where he may decide to locate he has many friends in Northville who will wish him success.

TO GIVE SILVER TEA.

On Wednesday afternoon next, from 2:30 to 5:00, The King's Daughters will give another of their delightful silver tea at the home of Mrs. M. Brock, to which all are cordially invited. The proceeds from these silver teas go to the flower fund of the organization and is a most worthy object, because it will enable The King's Daughters to "remember with flowers" many to whom sickness and sorrow comes.

Remember the date and kindly tell your friends. The invitation embraces all who desire to assist in this very worthy cause.

DEATH OF YOUNG CHILD.

Ruth Ooda Green, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Green died at her home in this village, Sunday, June 20th, after an illness extending over a period of two weeks. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, conducted by Rev. E. V. Belles of the Presbyterian church, with burial in Yerkes cemetery. Her parents, a brother and sister, and other relatives and friends are left to mourn her loss.

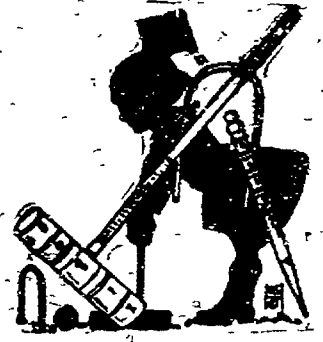

Pontiac merchants will close their places of business on Wednesday afternoons during the summer, beginning July 1. They tried out the plan with great success last summer.

A LASKA, the land of mystery and silence, the land of the midnight sun and the Northern lights, the land of romance and gold, has a lure that draws men to it—and then draws them again and again. It is no mere legend that the North calls back those who have once lived in its snows and amidst its towering mountains and known the beauty of its summers. There may be exceptions among the great army of gold seekers who endured privations during the Klondike rush of 1896, but travel and entertainment conditions today are totally unlike those when, to quote Robert W. Service, "good men and bad men and bold" pressed into the Northland leaving their homes and their loved ones, "crying exultingly—Gold!"

There was an inadequate and inferior steamship service northward along the coast and no effort to make easy the perils and hardships of passes, canyons and rock-fenced rapids where death was ever at the argonaut's elbow. Now, with the traveler, leaving Victoria or Vancouver speeds north a thousand miles to Skagway on a splendid steamship which winds in and out between picturesque islands and the renowned White Pass and the mighty Yukon Miler Canyon and White Horse River his down which bold adventurers were willing to safety or to death nearly a quarter of a century ago are glided in comfort from the wharves of a railway trail.

the rocks. Near by, too, is Lyttel canal, the most beautiful fiord in Alaska, and still another wonder of the Northland is mighty Taku Glacier, at astounding mass of ice one mile long and rising from the water from 200 to 300 feet. This great glacier, from whose summit huge bergs are constantly falling with a roar to the water below, is in plain view of the passenger steamer. Some of these bergs, estimated to weigh 50 tons, disappear beneath the waves and reappear several times before they finally become floating islands of ice.

The trip by coast steamer ends at Skagway, once the wildest and wickedest city in the world, but now a mode of propriety and known as the "Flower City of Alaska." Hard by is the grave of "Soapy Smith," whose gang of outlaws once terrorized the town before the strong hand of the law ended his career.

At Skagway the tourist goes over the famous White Pass by rail, a steel highway that is one of the great engineering feats of the world, to Carcross. At times the train glides along the side of a wall that rises hundreds of feet, while below are the dark depths of an abyss. Majestic mountains, waterfalls and flower-bedecked valleys please the eye as the train climbs Tunnel mountain and then for 27 miles the railway follows the shores of Lake Bennett. Twenty miles north of Skagway is the international boundary and here the British and United States flags fly side by

"THE LITTLE PEOPLE"

Synopsis—Spalding Nelson receives an invitation to dinner from his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. On the way he meets Barbara Bradford and renders her a service. She lives in the same apartment building as the Gastons. They go there together. Gaston and his wife are going to Maine for a trip and ask Nelson to live in their apartments. He accepts. The Gastons tell him of mysterious noises about the apartment—whispers and noises that have scared them. Going to the apartment a few days later Nelson again meets Barbara, his accidental acquaintance. Nelson meets the building superintendent, Wick, and instinctively dislikes him. In a wall safe he finds a necklace of magnificent pearls. Next day Nelson finds the pearls have disappeared from the wall safe. His first idea of informing the police is not acted upon because of peculiar circumstances. He has been discharged from his position without adequate explanation or reason, and feels himself involved in something of a mystery. He decides to conduct an investigation himself. That night Barbara signals from the window of her apartment, which is opposite his, and they arrange a meeting for next day. In the morning he finds no trace of his room. He tells him why he had not informed the police of the loss of the jewels. Barbara tells Nelson her sister Claire had some years before made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone knowing of her escapade has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson and Barbara exchange confidences about the "whispers," mysterious noises and other queer doings, which are much alike in both apartments.

CHAPTER V—Continued.

I wondered which had been his bedroom. It was hardly likely that he had occupied the room in which I slept. As I debated the matter I heard someone moving about my room and went to investigate. It was Mrs. Burke, making up my bed. She would know which room my great-uncle had been accustomed to occupy.

As I entered the bedroom for the purpose of cross-questioning her, my first impression—and philosophers tell us that the first is most likely to be the correct one—was of a simple-minded, kindly old Irish woman of the utmost honesty. I was certain just by looking at her that there wasn't a crooked hair in her head, even if she had had the intelligence necessary for crimes beyond the ordinary.

"It's Mr. Nelson I'm seeing at last," she exclaimed with satisfaction. "I was wondering when I would be laying eyes on ye."

"Yes," said I. "I am Mr. Nelson, Mr. Gaston's great-nephew."

"Sure and I'd have known ye anywhere. It's as like ye are as two peas, barring the old gentleman's white hairs."

Her statement rather startled me, for while I never had regarded myself as an Adonis, on the other hand I never had supposed I looked anything like old Rufus.

"Was this my great-uncle's bedroom when he was here?" I asked, trying to make my inquiry seem casual.

"It was and it wasn't," Mrs. Burke replied. "He gets queer notions, the old gentleman does. In the last few weeks he's slept in every room in the house."

"What made him do that?"

"It's not for me to be saying." Devoutly she crossed herself. "Sometimes I do be thinking the house is haunted. The old man was all the time rambling about."

She hesitated and looked furtively about.

"About whispers," I suggested. Instead of replying to my question she shot another one at me.

"And have ye been hearing them, too?"

"I laughed, trying to put a note of merriment into my tones."

"I don't believe in things like that," The old woman nodded her head sagely.

"It ain't believing in them things that makes you hear them. Either you hear them or you don't. The old man heard them."

"How do you know?"

"Didn't I hear him asking meself about it? He heard them, many times."

"How about the others—the servants—did they hear them, too?"

"They may have that. Niggers is always hearing things anyhow. It's what the white folk hear that counts."

"How about the other apartments in the house? Do the people in them hear whispers?"

"Never that I've heard tell of, but how should I know? This is the only place in the house that I work."

"Did Mrs. Gaston ever speak to you about it?"

"She did and she did not. She never in so many words asked me if I heard them. All she says to me was, 'Now, if ever you see or hear anything strange or unusual here, you're to let me know at once.' And I says, 'Yis, Mrs. Gaston, I will.'"

"And have you ever seen or heard anything?"

The old woman busied herself with making up the bed, for a moment before she answered me.

"I'm not saying I've seen anything," she began, "but there's things I could be telling if I was minded to open my lips."

"If you know anything," I said, "you must tell me. Mr. Gaston put me here to find out what was wrong."

"There's no doubt there's wrong here."

"What makes you say that? What have you seen? What do you know?"

"It's neither what I've seen nor what I know," she nodded mysteriously. "It's what I've been hearing myself."

"For heaven's sake, woman," I cried, losing patience, "what is it you've heard?"

"I've heard them walking," she announced with an air of triumph.

"You've heard who walking?"

"The little people, of course. Who else would it be doing it?"

"Oh, bosh!" I exclaimed. I was well enough acquainted with the superstitions of the Irish to understand who she meant by "the little people." It's the habit of the old crones from the Emerald Isle to attribute anything they cannot understand to fairies.

"You may laugh," she retorted indignantly, "but I heard them, I tell ye."

"Where did you hear them, these footsteps?"

"Coming right out of the wall, here in this room, and in the kitchen, beyond."

"It was probably somebody in another apartment you heard."

"It was not. The floors do be dead-end like, and it's nothing at all you can hear. It was somebody walking soft-like right there in the wall at me back."

"Well," I announced, "if there is anything like that going on, I am going to stay here until I hear it. I want to make sure no one can come into the apartment but myself, so I am going to ask you to give me your key. I'll be home here all the morning, so I can let you in when you ring."

"It's me key you're wanting, is it?"

She produced it from a pocket of her gown and handed it over, first unknocking it from a corner of her kerchief where she had tied it for safe keeping.

"And indeed if it's meself you're not trusting with a key after Mrs. Gaston letting me have it for these ten years back, it's your own bed you can be making. I'll not be coming near the place again."

In fine indignation she flounced out of the place. To tell the truth I was not sorry that she had announced her decision not to return. While my impression of her was that she was a simple-minded old woman of uttermost honesty, I was just as well satisfied that no one but myself should have entry to the apartment until I had finished my investigations and had made farther progress in solving the mysteries that were so rapidly developing.

Left once more to myself, I sat down at my great-uncle's desk and made out a list of questions that must be answered:

1. Where was Rufus Gaston? Had the old gentleman really gone away or was he in hiding in the building?

2. Who had removed the Gaston pearls from the wall safe? It must be someone who knew the combination.

3. Who had written the note I found on the floor of my bedroom? How and when had it been placed on the floor there?

4. Who were the persons who were trying to blackmail the family next door?

5. How had the anonymous notes been delivered on the roof of Barbara Bradford's room? (Evidently the writer was the same as in my case.)

6. Was there anything in the past relations of Mr. Bradford and my great-uncle that would cause my great-uncle to plot against the Bradford family?

7. How were the mysterious sounds heard both by my great-uncle, by Barbara Bradford, and by myself to be accounted for?

8. How were the mysterious footsteps heard by Mrs. Burke to be explained? Were they merely the imaginings of a superstitious old woman?

The relations between Mr. Bradford and Rufus Gaston puzzled me. Miss Bradford's recollection of her father's remark about my great-uncle certainly indicated that he held no high opinion of him. My great-uncle's actions throughout had been peculiar. His suddenly sending for me and insisting on my coming here to live, his insistence on leaving his wife's jewels in my care, and on entrusting me with the combination of the safe—all now took on a sinister aspect. It certainly was peculiar that he had gone off without leaving me any address where he could be reached.

Then, too, there was my own unexpected and unwarranted discharge at my place of business. I was positive in some way it was connected with my having come to this place to live. Had my great-uncle himself brought it about for the purpose of discrediting me? Was it the work of the blackmailers to get square with me for having accidentally butted in on the meeting they had arranged with Miss Bradford?

The scar-faced man! Who was he? I was certain that he was in some way involved. It might have been he who had caused me to lose my job. Certainly the malevolent glance he had given me in the restaurant that night showed that he would have wrought me harm if he could. The next time I laid eyes on him I was determined to trail him with bulldog tenacity until I ascertained his identity and where he lived. I felt sure that the trail of the mystery would lead to his door.

I decided not to leave the apartment all day. I had laid in a plentiful supply of food the day before so there was no necessity for my going out. There was plenty of work for me to do. I must try to devise some way of examining the safe door and the level box that remained for evidence of fingerprints, and I must inspect the building both from within and without to see if I could learn how the notes were delivered.

I must try to devise some way of examining the safe door and the level box that remained for evidence of fingerprints, and I must inspect the building both from within and without to see if I could learn how the notes were delivered.

From one of the toilet tables I obtained some fine powder and opening the wall safe again I took out the jewel box and carefully dusted it over with the powder. I hoped that the powder would reveal markings of hands on the box, but either I was too inexperienced or my method was wrong, for I succeeded in obtaining no sort of result, beyond finding out what my own fingerprints looked like on a sheet of paper prepared with some home-made lampblack. After an hour or two of experimentation I gave it up as a bad job, and turned to the study of methods by which the notes might have been delivered.

The Gaston apartment was on the sixth floor of the building, which was surrounded by ordinary three and four-story dwelling houses. It must have been someone in the building, if not in the apartment itself. It would be quite possible for someone on the floor above to have projected the notes through my window and that of Miss Bradford by attaching them to the end of a long stick. I made up my mind to ascertain who occupied the apartments above.

The mystery of the whispers did not seem to be of such easy solution. While I had been indulged at first to regard my own experience as a dream, the coincidence of Miss Bradford and my great-uncle having had the same illusion convinced me that it was some clasp trap devised by the plotters for preying on the fears of their intended victims.

Eagerly I waited for the coming of evening and from half-past seven on I sat by my window waiting for Barbara's signal. It was nearly nine o'clock before I heard the three taps that had so startled me the evening before. Quickly I thrust my head out of the window and was rewarded by seeing her appear at the same moment.

"We must not talk long," she warned me. "Someone might see us. Have you learned anything new?"

"Yes," I whispered. "In my uncle's diary I found several entries about the whispers."

"How strange!" she exclaimed. "Where is Mr. Gaston?"

"I don't know."

"That's funny."

"It's more than that. It is decidedly odd that he left no word where he could be reached."

"I don't blame him," she almost sobbed. "I wish we could all get away off somewhere, away from it all."

"Don't worry. Everything we find out will help discover the plotters. Tell me from what part of your room did the sounds come?"

"Always from the same place, up in the corner, near the ceiling."

"I thought so," I answered. "That's where they came from in my room. That shows it is just some mechanical trick they are using in the hope of terrifying us. Do you know who lives on the floor above?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. Do you suspect them?"

"I suspect everybody until this mystery is solved," I replied almost savagely.

"Not so loud, they may hear you. Have you learned anything clear?"

"No, nothing," I confessed to Mrs. Burke. Mrs. Gaston's auntiness. She knew nothing, although she insisted that she had often heard footsteps when there was no one in the apartment. Of course it is only her imagination."

"I'm not so sure," Miss Bradford whispered. "I've heard them, too. They seemed to come right out of the wall."

"Why?" I exclaimed in amazement, "that's just how she described them."

"Often, too, when I get up in the morning I have a strange feeling that there must have been someone in my room while I was asleep."

"How strange!" I muttered, more to myself than to her. "I wonder if it could be anyone walking in their sleep."

"You mean"—she hesitated—"my sister?"

"I don't mean anyone," I hastened to say. "I was only thinking aloud, wondering if it could be a possible explanation. I have heard of innocent persons doing all sorts of things under hypnotic influence."

"I've read of that, too," she said soberly. "I wonder—"

She left the sentence unfinished, but I felt that the same thought had flashed into her mind as into mine. Was it possible that the unscrupulous Frenchman who had wronged her sister years ago had in some way recently gained an interview with her and had gotten her once more into his power? Could it be that under the spell of another's mind Claire Bradford herself had taken away the papers concerning the annulment of her marriage and was planning the notes in the blackmail plot?

"Look here," I said determinedly, "we've got to see each other some where tomorrow and talk this over. Where can we meet?"

"I'm afraid I can't manage it tomorrow. I'm busy with my mother and sister all day long. Tomorrow, perhaps, but we mustn't talk here longer. Good night."

"Good night," I called softly but her head had been already withdrawn, so quickly that I hardly knew whether she heard me. As I was about ready for bed I recalled that I had spent most of the money I had in my pockets, so I visited the bookcase where I had secreted my hoard and taking out a twenty-dollar bill, wrapped it about the three one-dollar bills I had left and put the roll in my trousers pocket.

The next morning, as I was dressing, I happened to draw forth my money. I gazed at it horror-stricken.

I distinctly recalled having wrapped the twenty-dollar bill about the three smaller bills. Now one of the dollar bills was on the outside.

There before me was indisputable evidence that someone had been in my room while I slept, someone had gone through my pockets and had examined my money. Someone had put the dollar bill on the outside of the roll.

Who had done it? How had they got into the room?

I gazed at it horror-stricken.

"Excess Profits Tax Is Indirect Tax of the Most Insidious Kind."

By L. F. LORRE, New York State Chamber of Commerce.

The effect of excess profit taxes on business enterprises and on the high cost of living is so evident as to require little explanation. We have the word of former Secretary Glass that this tax encourages "wasteful expenditure, puts a premium on overcapitalization and a premium on brains, energy and enterprise, discourages new ventures and confirms old ventures in their monopolies." What further need be said in condemnation?

It may be appropriate, however, to indicate the fact that as the commodity or raw material passes from the planter, or grower, or producer to the manufacturer, the wholesaler and retailer, each process of distribution involves an addition to the cost of each stage of progress, of an indeterminate amount more than sufficient to the estimate of each intermediary to cover his excess profits tax and that all of these increases are included in the price paid by the consumer for the finished product.

These added costs have no legitimate relation to original cost. As an example of one of these costs, the head of an important manufacturing enterprise has recently stated that his corporation paid in one year to the federal government taxes in a sum more than double the nominal profits retained by the company, more than five times the sum distributed in dividends to the investors whose capital it utilized, and nearly two-thirds the total amount distributed to the workers by way of wages, and this may be considered typical.

The excess profits tax is an indirect tax of the most insidious kind. The laborer, the clerk, those dependent on small incomes from investment, and all whose earnings are less than the exemption allowed under the law, are not taxed under the law. Few of them realize that they are taxed at all. This class, however, as well as others with larger incomes, pays a heavy tax each day for the necessities of life and would, if it realized the fact, be among the strongest advocates of excess profits tax repeal.

It follows naturally to the extent excess profits are assessed, our export tax is penalized. The products of the manufacturer and of the farmer cannot be sold abroad in competition with those of other countries, and our prices are inflated under operation of an excess profits tax. Markets secured by us in the war are in danger of being lost to the American export trade by the effect of the excess profits taxes.

Prevent Decay of Teeth by Teaching Children to Keep Mouths Clean.

By DR. A. B. BLAIR, Northwestern University Dental School.

Definite and practical plans for instructing children in the technique of caring for the teeth have been worked out during the last six years, particularly in Bridgeport, Conn., where twenty-six hygienists are engaged in the education of 20,000 children in the public and parochial schools in the problems of mouth hygiene. During the five years ending January, 1929, the service had reduced the number of carious children (those who were required to take a year over) in the eight grades of the grammar school just fifty per cent.

The cost of treating these children equaled 12 per cent of the entire budget in 1912, and was reduced to 17 per cent in 1918. During these same periods and apparently as a result of this service, communicable diseases were wonderfully reduced. The figures for diphtheria were changed from 30 per cent to 18 per cent, for measles from 20 per cent to 4 per cent, for scarlet fever from 141 per cent to 0.5 per cent. There is good reason to believe that the establishment of this school of dental hygiene is the beginning of an educational campaign which will be far-reaching in the improvement of the health of the nation. Teeth are preserved, healthier bodies and minds are developed; much of constitutional diseases is prevented. Could there be a finer public service?

Chicago has over 300,000 children in the grade schools. A few years ago members of the Chicago Dental Society examined the mouths of about 80,000 children and found fully 95 per cent in need of dental service. It is unpracticable to supply dental service to adequately meet this demand. The record of the dental hygienists in the Bridgeport schools has, however, pointed out a thoroughly practical solution which is a much more rational method—that of preventing decay by teaching the children to keep their mouths clean. It seems so certain that this service will soon come to be a part of the training of the children in our public schools that the establishment of a school for the training of women hygienists is likely to be an important factor in the furtherance of the general child welfare movement.

Bureau of War Risk Insurance Faces Its Big Task With Confidence.

By COL. R. G. CHOLMELEY-JONES, Director.

It is not to be denied that ex-service men and women dealing with the bureau have had just reason to criticize and to complain by reason of the bureau's apparent neglect to respond promptly and accurately to all communications addressed to it.

Any ex-service men or women who are members of any local post of the American Legion, Veterans of the World War, or any ex-service man's or woman's organization and who themselves may have been responsible for the organization of such post, will appreciate some of the bureau's problems, but it is to be remembered that the bureau deals with more than four and one-half million ex-service men and women.

A typical day's mail in the bureau would take a local post or a state executive department of any of the ex-service men's organizations several years to handle. Of course, in this regard, achievement is to a large extent contingent upon the numerical strength of personnel engaged in the task, and yet the bureau's personnel has been cut from seventeen thousand to ten thousand, and will be reduced still further, even though the volume of business handled by the bureau is as great as it ever was.

The bureau, however, faces the problem of its future accomplishment with complete confidence that the determined and earnest endeavor of the personnel at its command must win the approval and endorsement of the ex-service man whose welfare constitutes the object of its existence.

Date With a Party.

My partner in business was called out of town and was not expected to return for a few days, so when I met his wife on the street she remarked that she was lonesome and I asked her to meet me late and have dinner with me. It was all arranged and I went to the office to fix up for the occasion when I came hubby and wanted to know why the dolling up, so I said that I had a date with a party. When I met my friend's wife I told her hubby had returned and she said: "Why I know it; I told him you and I were going out to dine."—Exchange.

Find Value of Various Woods. Investigations by the agricultural department show that one standard cord of well-seasoned Hickory, oak, beech, birch, hard maple, ash, elm, locust or cherry wood is approximately equal to one ton of anthracite coal. A cord and a half of soft maple or two cords of cedar, poplar or bass wood are required to give the same amount of heat. One cord of well-seasoned mixed wood equals at least one ton of average grade bituminous coal.

ASKS $4,000,000 FOR BIG SEMINARY

BISHOP GALLAGHER LAUNCHES
GREAT CATHOLIC CAMPAIGN IN DIOCESE

PLANS BEST INSTITUTION IN U. S.

Priests and Laymen Will Call On Every Church-Goes for Share of Fund.

Beginning Sunday, July 4, the Catholics of the Diocese of Detroit, outside of the city of Detroit and its suburbs, will take up the task of raising their share of the $4,000,000 minimum fund which His Lordship, the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit, has asked for the building, equipping and endowing of the proposed new Sacred Heart Seminary. The movement for this institution, which promises to be the largest and finest training school for priests in America, is regarded as the most comprehensive and one of the most important campaigns ever undertaken by a Diocese of the Catholic Church.

RT. REV. MICHAEL J. GALLAGHER,

The need for the Seminary is the need for relieving the grave shortage of priests that has existed in the Detroit Diocese for several years. Much important work of the Catholic Diocese has been retarded because of this scarcity, and it was in recognition of this fact that in metropolitan Detroit, where the campaign was held May 16 to May 31, the people called upon to do their share responded so generously that predictions are now being freely made that the Diocese will "go over the top" of the minimum fund asked.

The Bishop's Dearest Wish.

One of the first needs of the Diocese that His Lordship, Bishop Gallagher, recognized, on coming to Detroit, two years ago, was that of a seminary. In his address at the ceremony of his consecration, he announced his determination to make every effort to provide this training school, where boys from every part of the Diocese might receive the education and training necessary for the fulfilling of their vocations.

The first step toward carrying out this determination came in March, when the pastor and two representative laymen from every parish in the Diocese were called to a great mass meeting in Detroit. At that meeting, Bishop Gallagher announced the plans for the Sacred Heart Seminary Campaign.

Catholic Census Taken.

At the direction of His Lordship, a complete census of all Catholics in every parish of the Diocese was taken. Every Catholic head of a family and every Catholic of independent means or income was listed.

Then a committee of Catholic laymen, representing the most prominent business men of Detroit, was called in and asked to perfect the plans for the campaign. Work started about April 1, and Detroit and its suburbs were ready when the formal solicitation of funds was undertaken on May 19.

The official emblem of the campaign is a cross mounted on a rock, in the national colors. This emblem, reproduced on stationery, on desk, home and store window cards and in posters, is to be spread broadcast throughout the Diocese. Every Catholic home will have a window card and many business places will display them in their windows.

"It's God's Work."

"It's God's work; God wills it," was adopted as the official slogan of the campaign, and appears, with the emblem, on all printed matter produced in connection with the movement.

To carry the message of the campaign, and its aims and purposes, a speakers' bureau of priests has been put at work. Nearly 100 clergymen have been taken from their regular charges for the period of the campaign, and sent to various parishes to talk at all Masses on Sundays, or the need for generous contributions. Each parish in the Diocese will hear a different priest for three Sundays, and on the third Sunday the actual solicitation of funds from the great body of Catholics is undertaken in all parishes of the four districts into which the Diocese is divided. On Sunday, June 20, visiting priests talked at all Masses in the several churches of the larger centers of population. The following Sunday different priests will occupy these pulpits and on Sunday, July 4, still another group will appear.

A special committee of priests and laymen, on Monday, June 23, took up the work of soliciting the so-called "big givers' lists; those containing the names of Catholics whom the committee believe are able to contribute $500 or more.

Following the sermons of Sunday, July 4, the visiting priests, assisted by special committees of laymen, will thoroughly canvass the various parishes, calling upon every Catholic for his or her share in the campaign fund. Same in Every Parish.

The same plan of campaign will be followed in every parish of the Diocese, which will be taken up by districts as priests are available. The people will listen to two talks on the campaign before the work of solicitation begins. In each parish, too, the "big givers' lists" will be canvassed before the general solicitation is undertaken.

The executive committee has announced that one of the official slogans of the campaign is "Once in a lifetime." Never before, it is pointed out, have the Catholics of Detroit Diocese been asked to take part in a great Diocesan undertaking of this nature. And never again, if each does his share in this movement, will they be asked to contribute to the Sacred Heart Seminary. The endowment plan, on which the campaign is being conducted, provided that once built, the institution shall stand for all time to come, free of debt, free of taxes for repairs, maintenance or extensions.

Contributions are being sought from the "big givers" in three classes. Professorships may be endowed at $25,000 each. This sum, properly invested, will return an income sufficient to maintain forever one professor at Sacred Heart Seminary.

Scholarships, at $5,000 are sought, for the income from this amount of money, will forever provide a fund sufficient to meet the cost of educating one boy through the full seminary course. By means of the scholarship, when one boy has finished his training in Sacred Heart Seminary, another takes his place, and another and another so long as the institution shall stand. For $15,000, both principal and interest, one boy may be educated in the proposed seminary for the full course of six years.

Open to All Catholic Boys.

Sacred Heart Seminary will forever be open to boys of Detroit Diocese who feel that they have a vocation for the priesthood, and the endowment feature of the institution provides that they may receive the necessary training there whether they have money or not.

A site of 17 acres in the beautiful residential section of Northwest Detroit has already been purchased and plans are now being drawn for the several buildings which will make up the Sacred Heart Seminary group.

SPIRITUAL APPEAL ONLY BASIS IN DRIVE

The appeal to Catholics of Detroit Diocese who will be asked to contribute to the minimum fund of $4,000,000 for the new Sacred Heart Seminary is based entirely on spiritual grounds. These Catholics are reminded that in the Liberty Loan drive, he appealed, was patriotism, in the United Fund campaign the appeal was charity.

Detroit and the rest of the Diocese are suffering a serious shortage of priests. It is the first time the Diocese has made such an appeal, it is the first time the people will be asked to contribute to the Seminary, which will be so endowed as to be perpetually self-supporting.

"The harvest is great, but the laborers are few." That is the spirit that actuates the campaign. Every wage-earner or business man or woman will be asked to give, basing this or her contribution, not on his daily, monthly or yearly income, but on the income of a lifetime.

BIG CONTRIBUTORS TO SEMINARY LISTED

Although the work of raising a minimum of $4,000,000 for the new Sacred Heart Seminary, is the work of every wage-earner—every individual of private income in the Catholic Diocese of Detroit—a special appeal is to be made to those who have been especially blessed by God with the goods of this world.

A "big givers' list" is being prepared in which will be the names of Catholics expected to contribute $500 or more. Special solicitation is provided to reach the men and women on the preferred list.

The Seminary will train 400 or more Detroit and Michigan boys for the priesthood.

PARISH CENSUS BASIS FOR SEMINARY DRIVE

A census of every Catholic Parish in the Diocese of Detroit is the basis in which plans are laid for a campaign for a minimum of $4,000,000 for the new Sacred Heart Seminary of Detroit Diocese. The census, like the actual solicitation of the funds, was under the direction of the Pastor and two leading laymen in each parish.

The slogan is "It's God's Work; God wills it!"

POLITICS UP BEFORE WOMEN AT CONFERENCE.

Mixing pleasure with business, and a discussion of home subjects with consideration of the political questions of the day, women from all parts of the state will gather at the Michigan Agricultural college from June 28 until July 2 for the annual Women's conference, which is given as part of the Summer school activities at the college.

While much of the work of the conference will be planned especially for teachers and extension workers, most of the subjects discussed will be handled from the point of view of the housewife who is not a specialist in home-economics study.

Widely known authorities from outside the state will address different meetings of the conference. Among these will be Mary Swartz Rose, associate professor, department of Nutrition, Teachers college, Columbia University, who will discuss recent developments in child feeding. Miss Rose is recognized as one of the country's leading nutrition authorities. Laura L. Baidt, also from Columbia University, will take up the question of clothing for children at the Tuesday afternoon meeting.

A modern flavor will be given the conference by a series of lectures on political questions which will be given by Mrs. Mary Hendrick, assistant professor of History at the Michigan Agricultural college. Political parties, party organization, party processes, talks, one of which will be given on each day of the conference.

Numerous household and home economics subjects will be treated during the conference, while features of entertainment are to be scattered over the four days.

DEALERS REPORT BEAN STOCK LOW IN STATE.

That the available supply of Michigan beans on hand at present is lower than it has been for a number of years is indicated from prominent members of the Michigan Bean Trade Association point to practically a clearing out of a old over in the Michigan market when this year's crop is marketed in the fall and winter.

A report issued to Michigan bean jobbers on June 16 by Frank B. Deseo, secretary of the Michigan Bean Jobbers association, stated that 159 Michigan elevators show a total of only 299 cars of beans, including picking stock, or only one and two-thirds cars per elevator. According to Mr. Madson, of H. E. Chatterton and Sons, one of the state's largest jobbing firms, the stock on hand are lower than they have been for the past 10 years.

The bean grower has apparently excellent chances of marketing his crop under good conditions, says Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the Farm Crops department at M. A. C., and an increase of the Michigan acreage appears warranted.

There is not time for growers in Michigan bean districts to increase their plantings. Beans planted this June 24th will make a crop under average conditions, and a good fall season may be planted as late as July 12th with a crop of a crop.

P. M. TO SPEND MILLIONS.

To meet the summer demand for transportation in Michigan a 100-car train, the Pere Marquette railway, will be in operation during the summer months. The war period President Frank H. Michel has authorized expenditures to cover the necessary budget and already a good part of the work is under way, according to an announcement in the current issue of Pere Marquette Service.

The item of the greatest monetary importance is the purchase and laying of 275 miles of new 90-pound rail on the Toledo-Ludington and on the Port Huron-Grand Rapids divisions, which is now under way. The track-layers are keeping up with mill deliveries of the steel.

Saginaw Terminal Gets $750,000.

The Saginaw terminal is to have a new 42-stall engine house, turntable, coal dock, machine shop and power house. These involve a total outlay of $750,000. This new engine terminal was made necessary through the purchase of 30 Mikado locomotives and 10 eight-wheel modern switch engines which were placed in service last winter. Existing facilities were found inadequate to meet needs of the new equipment and the increased traffic that it was called on to handle.

Work has been started in rebuilding 150 miles of line on the Toledo-Ludington and Port Huron-Grand Rapids and Canadian divisions which are to be ballasted with gravel this season. This work will involve a total outlay of $320,000.

The Plymouth engine terminal which is to cost $369,000 will be a brick structure with 15 engine stalls, including auxiliaries and accessories.

The 12 new Pacific type locomotives, which have been ordered, will be constructed by the American Locomotive works. These will cost approximately $61,000 each, or a total of $732,000.

Other improvements, including some all-steel passenger equipment at an approximate outlay of $16,000,000 additional, are contemplated, but these are dependent on the pending increase in railroad rates which has been asked of the interstate commerce commission.

GROESBECK OUT FOR GOVERNOR.

Atty-Gen. Alex J. Groesbeck made a formal announcement Monday of his entry as a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

Mr. Groesbeck is now serving his second term as attorney-general. He has for many years been prominent in political and public affairs in the state.

Mr. Groesbeck in his announcement declares that there is "abundant opportunity for improvement in our governmental affairs," and that Michigan people should "strive to make its government the very best in the Union."

In order to aid in the systematic accomplishment of improvements by cooperation of those having the state's welfare at heart Mr. Groesbeck declares himself a candidate for governor.

Mr. Groesbeck's platform declares first revision of our primary laws, or our manner as will minimize the use of money in the procurement of nominations, and effectively remove the power of men from politics.

He also declares for laws to be enacted to prevent personal guilt in profiteering.

Second for agriculture fullest consideration for school teachers, plans for using the issues of road bonds when due, reorganization of the national guard, and full friendly cooperation with former service men and especially the wounded, are points urged by Mr. Groesbeck. He strongly advocates full and complete plans of conservation and reforestation.

Of interest because of the part taken by Mr. Groesbeck in the trial of David Provost, for the murder of J. Stanley Brown near Mt. Clemens, is his declaration that "our criminal laws should be amended so as to do away with delay, and uncertainty in criminal trials." He also favors revision of corporation laws so that it is unnecessary for Michigan to incorporate outside the state.

Groesbeck's last plank is one in which he declares the governor should have personal touch with the state institutions.

Alex J. Groesbeck was born in Wrentham, Mass., and came to Michigan in 1882. He graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan in 1893. He has since that time been in the law department of the university with advanced credits and graduated in 1893.

SUMMER SCHOOLS OPEN MONDAY.

The summer schools of the state will open Monday, June 28 at Ypsilanti, Mt. Pleasant, Detroit, Kalamazoo, Big Rapids, Lansing, and Ann Arbor. All teachers attending the schools should be ready for enrollment on Monday morning. Teachers should send for the circulars of announcement to the school they wish to attend. Ypsilanti announcements may be had from the school commissioner.

The above schools are recommended by the state department of public instruction, and credits from the same will be accepted on the regular teachers' examination.

A BOLD HUNTER.

Lecturer (in loud voice): "I venture to assert there isn't a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our vast forests."

Man in audience (mildly): "I've shot woodpeckers."

RENTAL PROFITS HELP STATE FAIR FINANCES

The Michigan State Fair is a beneficiary of the shortage of store-room in Detroit. G. W. Dickinson, Secretary-Manager, has just closed a contract with an automobile-manufacturing concern for use of the fair buildings in idle months as storage warehouse space, at a figure which will allow a generous profit to the fair. Under the law, this money must be used in bettering the fair, which this year will come Sept. 3-12.

The fair last year drew the largest attendance in the United States, and this year Manager Dickinson estimates 1,000,000 persons will attend it.

THE FARMER—ALL HE DOES IS FEED 'EM ALL

"I feed 'em all"—the farmer. This is the slogan which the Michigan State Fair has displayed on the mammoth advertising board which faces the busy Detroit-Pontiac highway.

It is just another method in which George W. Dickinson, Secretary-Manager of the Fair, is seeking to give a full recognition to the farmer's part in the vital problem of food production.

MORE FOOD, CRY OF STATE FAIR

MICHIGAN BECOMING A NEW ENGLAND OF DESERTED FARMS

FULL USE OF MAN-POWER TO BE SHOWN BY EXPERTS

To restore 19,000 Michigan farms to productivity to avert the threatened food shortage, to bring about a greater balance between Michigan cities and Michigan farms—these, it is announced, will be the main purposes this fall of the Michigan State Fair, at Detroit, Sept. 3-12.

George W. Dickinson, Secretary-Manager, says that the fair will be more serious in tone this year than ever before. Carnival and amusement attractions are to be but sidelines, he declares, and the main emphasis of the exposition is to be directed at what he terms "the vital problem of food production."

DEPOPULATION IN TEN YEARS
"Ten years more of our present tendency," said Mr. Dickinson, "and Michigan farms will be depopulated. The census figures show us that New England's deserted farms are coming to our own state. In our most fertile lands, we find farm after farm vacant, and the other are cultivated only to fractional capacity."

Yet can talk about coal problems, and public utility problems, and housing problems, but the big difficulty this state must solve is the food production problem.

TO CONSERVE MAN POWER

A display of all labor-saving machinery is to be featured.

The secret of the world's leadership is right in our keeping. To understand how to lead ourselves, to know what to do, we must study what is going on. To lead others we must lead ourselves. Our power will soon give us our influence. Exchange

NEIGHBORS IN NEED

By SAIDEE E. FALGOM

(Copyright, 1934, Western Newspaper Union)

With a quiet appreciative smile upon her expressive face, Margery Dale bent her ear in the direction of the room adjoining her own. From observation and audible demonstration, she knew that it held four young men. The partition was thin and she could easily catch sounds beyond normal.

One of the group started a mournful tune on a flute. There was a whirling dance, evidently made by a pillow vigorously flung. A dodging body grazed the wall. An easel or a chair was upset. A scramble and a scuffle ensued.

"That horse-piky will do, fellows!" said one in a mellow, pleasing voice which Margery loved to hear, and which she knew from what the landlady had told her belonged to Nevil Barry, "the leader of that turbulent, happy quartette," as Mrs. Parton had put it. "Poor fellows! I'm thinking they are on the ragged edge of nothing, having lost their positions. Jolly enough, though, and honest, for they've paid me all up, but I think went without regular meals to do it."

"I'm going down to the old office, to see if there's any chance of the resurrection of our dismal failure, 'The Weekly Chit Chat.' Went on that same sagging voice. They were to sell the wreck of the layout at auction today, and it may bring enough to settle up the debts and leave a dividend. If it does, you shall eat tonight."

Nevil Barry had disclosed enough to advise Margery of the circumstances surrounding himself and his friends. It appeared that he had become ambitious as the editor of a country paper, and had managed to get together sufficient to start one in the city. His three friends had literary ability, and they got out four issues of a very creditable sheet. Then Barry's capital gave out, and the audacious quartette found themselves on the verge of bankruptcy.

Margery knew of all this and pitied these exiles of fortune.

Now she smiled indulgently at the echo of some caper or bit of badinage from the trio in the next apartment, and rather enjoyed her silent companionship with them. She recognized from their conversation that they were clean, clever young fellows, experienced a true sisterly sympathy in their ups and downs, and amid her loneliness somewhat imbued their spirit of humorism as an attractive phase of life. It was two hours later when she heard Barry return from his visit. A turbulent bubble arose from his conference.

"No substance," cried one. "Where's the promised milk and honey, the succulent roast, the toothsome dessert?"

"They're coming, all of them," declared Barry. "For a week we've had nothing but promise of work. I've got something better—prospects. Fellow, there is no dividend from the sale of our former princely possessions, but the assets of our princely venture were sold at auction for a mere pittance to a rich junkman, so rich, indeed, that when I went to see him he considered investing ten thousand dollars in Chit Chat revived as a mere bagatelle."

"You mean you've found an angel, a backer?"

"Just that; a humble old money-grubber willing to shine as a patron of struggling literature. Next Monday morning all four of us are to enter upon a salary and half interest basis with this ambitious Croesus."

Cheered comment and exuberance greeted the welcome announcement. Amid a merry, excited babble, the tones of Barry arose once more in a diatribe and counsel.

"The landlady is paid up, so we haven't that on our minds," he observed. "All we have to worry about is the food. If we can stick it out until Monday, we are made men. My watch is about the only thing left that is pawnable. Ho, then, for our illustrious uncle!"

Margery acted on an uncontrollable impulse. She went to the door as that of the next room opened. She faced Nevil Barry as he neared her.

"Wait," she said, flushed and excited. "I am your next-room neighbor."

Barry raised his hat with the grace of a finished courtier.

"I have been an eavesdropper unconsciously," she went on. The watch-dog's! And getting through until Monday? I'll help you. I have a little money ahead. And a two-plate gas stove. And if you will be content with my cooking, why not have breakfast and supper with me?"

Nevil Barry stared at the lonely girl as if an angel had abruptly crossed his path.

"It's wonderful," he said simply. "You can't mean it!"

"I do," smiled Margery. "Like yourselves, this is my first city experiment. The landlady is your friend. Let me be the same please!"

Decorously, gratefully, admiringly, at eight every morning and six every evening the boyish quartette filed into the room that held the two-plate gas burner. It was a holy of holies, a haven of friendliness and comfort. And the waiting week was bridged over, and the brotherly four were at work again, and the Chit Chat became a success!

And through it all Margery Dale gained a loving husband and three staunch, adoring friends.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

The announcement in the Record of four deaths in a single week is something unusual. However, but two may be said to have been regular residents of the village.

Those passing away this week were F. H. Banks, Dr. Kingsbury, Mrs. Deborah Rogers and Miss Ella Dunlap. Dr. Kingsbury was for many years a practicing physician at Northville, and died at the Soldiers Home, where he had been in feeble condition for some time past.

Mrs. Rogers was a sister of Wm. Pinkerton of Northville, and was well known here. Her death came suddenly of heart failure while she was visiting at Ovid. Miss Ella Dunlap had been suffering from an affliction to her limb, and but recently had one of her feet amputated, but this proved but temporary relief and she passed from this life on June 24th.

Frederick Banks was one of the oldest pioneers in Michigan, and had reached the remarkable age of 92 years. Until quite recently he had been hale and hearty, but for several months past had been a great sufferer. Four children are left, two sons and two daughters.

A BIG FIELD ON WINDSOR

The request for stabling room by owners, east, west and south at the Windsor Jockey club for the meeting starting July 14, is unprecedented in the history of the track.

According to present indications there will be upwards of 1,000 horses occupying stalls at the Jockey club course and at Kenilworth, where racing begins the day after the conclusion of the meeting at the present thoroughbred organization.

Harry Payne Whitney has asked for an even dozen stalls to house his stars; Commodore J. K. L. Ross seeks stabling for fifteen head, Sam Hildreth wants half a dozen stalls; Gallagher Bros. request eight, and thus it goes with sixty odd owners who will operate their strings during the two weeks continuous racing at the two tracks.

The Windsor Jockey club has accommodations for 500 horses, within its inclosure and may take care of as many more in the immediate vicinity without. Kenilworth has 300 stalls ready for occupancy at the track, a mile and half away.

FORCED TO RAISE RATES.

The Morenci Observer, one of Michigan's most prosperous weeklies, published in one of the best small towns in the state, last week contained the following notice to its subscribers:

"Eight months ago the price of news printing paper was six cents a pound. Since that time the price has advanced steadily and today it has reached sixteen cents and even at that price can only be obtained in small lots and at long intervals."

"This condition forces the Observer to one of two alternatives: either to make an increase in advertising and subscription rates or to retire from the field."

Scores of other weekly newspapers are forced to take similar action and others must follow or close up shop.

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES.

Mother—Why, Willie, what are you doing—teaching that parrot to swear?

PATENT OFFICE—BUSY PLACE

Last Year Broke All Records in the Number of Inventions That Were Filed.

Last year was a record year in volume of quality of inventions. Applications for patents reaching the patent office during 1919 approached the unprecedented number of 73,000, more than any year's output. The increase grew with the year. Aaron Hardy Ulm writes in the Nation's Business. Those for the third quarter exceeded by 51 per cent receipts of the same quarter in 1918.

Invention, of course, did not stop during the war, but, at least in volume of production, it diminished. And a great proportion of that which did function related to war objects. But at noon on November 11, 1918, the great war became as ancient to the inventor as the Palloponnesian conflicts of long ago.

In October, 1919, there reached the division of the patent office handling metallurgical inventions a total of 662 applications for patents. In one division—handling chemical subjects—there are several chemical divisions—489 applications were filed; in the agricultural implement division, 354 applications arrived; and the division dealing with vehicle wheels and such appliances received 729 applications, about one-half of which related to resilient tires. This last item discloses the fact that inventions for the automobile industry best reflect the current work of the patent office.

In October, for instance, 441 applications went to the division that handles automobile engines and parts. That considering frame work and gearing, received 350.

"MARK 'EM ALL QUARTERS"

Simple Method by Which Medical Sergeant Solved Monetary Complication Arising in Crap Game.

The monetary complications of the monetary system of the crap game were more confusing than usual, for the players had but recently arrived in France via England. American silver, English shillings, and French francs were scattered about the floor, and the prices of the players were raised in angry protest over the financial differences between trunks and shillings. Finally they decided to appeal to the only non-player present, a medical sergeant who lay half asleep on his bunk.

"Sarge," they asked, "This here small change has got us all forked. I will a shell 'n' off Bill and he gives me a franc and I say he still owes me two big checkers and he says he don't. Can't you suggest, somethin' to simplify this here thing?"

The medical, who had had a hard struggle with would be invalids at sick call that day, rolled over sleepily.
 "Aw, mark 'em all quarters," he grunted. Home Section.

Britain Needs New Houses.

It has been estimated that 800,000 new houses are needed in the United Kingdom to properly house the population. All building was at a standstill throughout the war. Because of the enormous increase in building materials and the increased cost of labor these houses cannot be built for less than twice the amount they would have cost in 1914. Thousands of big houses in London are for sale, but these are of no use to newlyweds, who in most instances cannot afford to maintain them, nor can they get the servants necessary to keep up such establishments. It has been found too costly to try to convert many of these houses into apartments. They now are monuments to pre-war and opulent family life in London, where servants were employed by the dozen.

Uncle Sam is the "Auto Boy." America is the automobile center of the world. There were in all Christendom, on July 30, 1919, approximately 7,884,000 automobiles, and 6,500,000 were in the United States, according to a survey by the Alexander Hamilton Institute of New York. We have, therefore, nearly five times as many automobiles as all other countries combined. The 1,384,000 automobiles not in the United States when the survey was made, last July, were distributed as follows: Great Britain, 415,000; Canada, 300,000; France, 200,000; Germany, 150,000; Italy, 35,000; Argentina, 35,000; the Netherlands, 20,000; Russia, 15,000; Japan, 3,000; all other countries, 321,000.

"See here," said the manager of an automobile sales agency, "what did you mean by wasting your time showing that rough looking fellow a $6,000 car? A silver would be about his size."

"I thought so, too, at first," replied the smart salesman, "but I noticed a great deal of grime under his fingernails and in his eyebrows and hair. I immediately sized him up as a wage earner and not a splained man."

"Well?"
 "He bought the car," Birmingham Age-Herald.

Hypodermic Vaccination.

Maj. J. R. Goodall of the Canadian army has vaccinated 6,000 soldiers and children by injecting the virus with a hypodermic syringe. There were no accidents and he claims for this method that the wound does not become infected, 20 dressings are needed. There are more "takes," the reaction of the system is slighter and the operation is done more quickly.

DETROIT THEATRES.

The record-breaking "passing show of 1919" noted as the most popular of all the twenty-four New York Winter Garden spectacles, will play a special return engagement at the Shubert-Detroit opera house beginning Monday, June 28th, with popular-priced matinees Wednesday and Thursday the regular matinee Saturday.

The play is the work of James Barrie, and Maggie Vytic, the heroine was the fourth of the line of Barrie characters to be enacted by Miss Adams. It was first offered in Detroit in 1900, with Richard Bennett playing opposite Maude Adams, and should afford Miss Bonstelle a happy vehicle in which to return to her Detroit family after a three weeks absence.

One of Maude Adams' greatest successes. The present is the living sum total of the whole past. Carlisle.

The Secret of the Columbia Grafonola

The qualities that lead musicians of discrimination to the choice of the Columbia Grafonola are qualities hidden beneath the surface.

Outwardly, the instrument is a beautiful piece of cabinet work, distinguished by perfect craftsmanship and a satiny sheen of finish, but beneath its singular grace of proportions is the correctness of acoustic design that makes the Columbia Grafonola as responsive to every gradation of sound—as exquisitely sensitive to the slightest vibration as a rare Cremona violin.

LEMON-ROSS.

One of the pretty weddings of the week was that at the home of Mrs. Alice Ross, when her daughter, Miss Nola Ross, became the bride of Wellington F. Lemont, on Wednesday afternoon, June 23rd at two o'clock.

The wedding party took their places as Miss Eleanor Willis played Mendelssohn's wedding march. Mrs. Wallace Ross, sister-in-law of the bride was matron of honor, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Ross was given in marriage by her uncle, R. W. Ross. She wore white embroidered net over white satin and her bouquet was a shower of white roses and lilies.

Following the ring ceremony performed by Rev. E. V. Belle of the Presbyterian church, a wedding supper was served. The house was decorated throughout with daisies, pink and white roses, and palms, a color scheme of pink and white being carried out. Places were marked for forty guests.

ASKS MORE ROADS IN WAYNE COUNTY.

Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, was in Detroit yesterday for a conference with the highway commissioners of Oakland and Wayne counties, and officials of Royal Oak, Ferndale and Pleasant Ridge with a view to giving other entrance than Woodward avenue into Wayne county from Oakland. The conference was arranged by the Detroit Automobile Club.

"As things stand today," said Edward N. Hines, Wayne highway commissioner and an official of the club "Woodward avenue is the only route into this county from Oakland that is in condition for use; the year round Wayne county is improving Livernois from the Fenkell road to the Eight Mile road, which is the county line, and we hope to see Oakland take up the work there and finish it, or else improve the Ridge road. Traffic conditions on Woodward avenue are bad, owing to congestion, and besides some of the old road must be torn up soon and replaced. While that is being done we will have trouble unless other routes are provided."

It is hoped to have the Livernois job completed this season, on one side at least, although difficulty is being encountered in getting cement, stone and sand.

"The cement situation in Michigan is serious," said Commissioner Rogers, "owing partly to railroad conditions. The cement plants need coal—it takes a pound of coal to make a pound of cement—and the necessary clay product that is a part of cement. Road work is being delayed in many places."—Detroit Free Press.

Tibet's Sacred Mountain.

Inland, 40 days' march from the last British outpost of the Irrawaddy, lies the Mecca of the worshippers of Buddha, the sacred mountain of eastern Tibet. Toward this shrine of the great Chinese god travel each year thousands of pilgrims, dirty, ill-kempt, ignorant and cheerful, writes F. Kingdon Ward, in the Wide World magazine.

The season for pilgrimages to the mountain begins in October and ends in February; these months being the best suited for travel in mountainous Tibet.
