MANY RETURNED FOR THE ALUMNI BANQUET

Friendships were more closely cemented, memories were refreshed and acquaintances renewed by a large company of former students of the Northville High school at the fifth annual banquet of the Alumni Association which was held at the school auditorium Friday evening last. Many who left the "home nest" years ago returned for the annual event, and in memory the passing years seemed but a short span, of a few "days".
Though the years and their cares and duties of a busy life had left their traces, yet hearts were still young and to the onlookers the merry company had the appearance of a happy group of youths and maidens.

The reunion and social hour occupied the time until 5:30 when the annual meeting of the association was called to order by the president, Mrs.
Louise Thayer Bryan. Reports were submitted and officers were chosen for the ensuing year as follows: President, Wendell S. Miller; vice-president, Miss Margaret Yerkes; secretary, Miss Helen Cunningham; treasurer, Don Ball. A small balance remained unprovided for in the "dish fund" and some one suggested that an effort be made to secure the amount necessary to pay the obligation. Subscriptions were received and a generous sum was realized.

Following the annual meeting an informal reception was held in the halls and auditorium and a most delightful hour was passed in renewing acquaintances and making new ones.
Finally the banquet was announced and the large company was ushered to the gymnasium which had been converted into a hall of beauty by the ladies of the M. E. church who had the feast in charge. Montgomery's orchestra furnished music as the banqueters took their places at the hand-somerly arranged tables and during the serving of the splendid and appetizing meal rendered a program which elicited hearty applause. Rev. E. V.
Belles offered the invocation. Eight-teen young ladies served the guests and the service was all that could have been desired, with such grace and grace did they do their part.

After the dinner had been partaken of, Mrs. Louise Thayer Bryan, who served most efficiently as president of the association during the past year, called the company to order and extended a most cordial welcome to all.
She expressed the hope that good fellowship would mark the annual meeting of school mates and friends and that all might be strengthened by the associations thus formed to meet the duties of life and better to become the "duty" which the passing years would bring to each one present.
She introduced to the company of the evening John D. L. Rice, Mr. L. Rice preferred his introduction of the women who were to take part in the program with amusing stories and anecdotes and kept the audience in fine humor throughout the evening. Miss Lucile Calkins rendered a vocal solo, being accompanied by Mrs. John Tinsam and was compelled to sing a second number. Harold Belles responded to the theme "New Times—New Methods," and in his remarks reviewed briefly some of the advancements that have been made during the memory of many of his hearers. He expressed the belief that new methods must be applied to meeting the conditions of the new times in which we were living and urged a closer fellowship among the peoples of the earth. "Woman of the Twentieth Century" was the subject assigned to Miss Francis Evelyn Yerkes, and she paid a worthy tribute to the women of America and urged upon her hearers the great need for women to take their places in the affairs of the community, the state and the world. American womanhood had met every task set before them and they must continue to make their contribution to those principles and causes which have for their purpose the up-lifting of humanity throughout the world.

Mrs. Ethel Johnson Walters, who had been assigned a place on the program, was unable to be present and former superintendent I. N. Barnhart of Grand Rapids was asked to "fill in" and he responded in a manner that left no regrets. He told of some of the early experiences of our schools, when there were out three departments and three teachers. Both old and new friends were glad to listen to his remarks. Carl Bryan sang "Myself When Young." Mrs. May Noble playing his accompaniment, and as is usual the case he was compelled to respond to an enthusiastic encore.
In the address of James Schemerhorn, editor of the Detroit Times, the banqueters were regaled with the most delightful treat of the season, and from first to last Mr. Schemerhorn's post-prandial talk was heartily applauded. In his introductory remarks the toastmaster referred to Mr.

Schemerhorn as "the ace of diamonds," and he might with truth have added he was the whole "pack," joker and all. His rich humor, his splendid philosophy, the heights and depths of his logic, furnished entertainment for his hearers for more than an hour and all would have been pleased to have had him continue. He was assigned no subject for a "set" speech because the committee realized he needed none, rather he was given free rein and the banqueters were constantly convinced with laughter at his ready wit and amusing anecdotes. Few men can tell a story with better effect than Mr. Schemerhorn and he possesses the faculty of having one ready to meet every situation and to illuminate his points with telling effect. Mr. Schemerhorn's address closed the program for the evening and when the tables were removed the company enjoyed an hour of dancing. An added pleasure made possible by the generosity of the members of the orchestra, who volunteered their services and rendered a delightful program. It was midnight when good night and goodbyes were said and the fifth annual banquet became a vivid memory.

Quarrelling over the result of a

Synopsis—Spilling Nelson receives an invitation to dinner from his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. On his way he meets Barbara Bradford and renders her a service. She lives in the same apartment building as Gaston. They go there together and his wife is going to Maine for a trip and asks Nelson to live in their apartment. He accepts. The Gastons tell him of mysterious noises about the apartment—whispers and noises that have scared them. Going to the apartment a few days later, he meets Harry and Barbara, her accidental acquaintance. Nelson meets the building superintendent, Wick, and instinctively dislikes him. In a wall safe he finds a lockbox of magnificent pearls. Next day Nelson finds the pearls have disappeared from the wall safe. Harry's idea of borrowing the police is not acted upon because of peculiar circumstances. He has been discharged from his position without adequate explanation or reason, and feels himself involved in something of a mystery. He decides to conduct an investigation. He goes to Barbara's apartment and finds signals from the window of her apartment, which is opposite his, and they arrange a meeting for next day. In the morning he finds a note in his room asking him why he had not informed them of the loss of the pearls. Barbara tells Nelson that her sister Claire had some years before had a runaway marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is expected to be married to someone known to her father, and she has some documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to obtain the Bradford's Nelson and Barbara exchange confidence about the "whispers," mysterious noises and other odd things, which are the cause of the trouble. Nelson encounters more trouble. He takes Miss Kels, the pretty girl to dinner with the idea of pursuing her.

CHAPTER V

Left alone for a moment, I went to the parson, I sat there at a table at the crowded restaurant, and while he listened to my story, I thought about me listening doubtfully to the murmur of conversation, as I had just entered the crowded kitchen of the residential college where I had been dining there in the past when I had deeply enjoyed my meals by listening to the voices of the students.

"What do you think?" asked the parson, here I said:

"What do you think?" I asked for a moment, looking up at a young, cheerful-eyed, but mostly serious-looking man, who was studying a side dish table.

He looked at me in amazement and said: "Don't you know you can't bring that kind of people in here."

As explanation for my presence there in the White room of the famous Humphreth hotel, I told me that they first cast into the perplexing chain of mysterious circumstances in which Barbara Bradford and I seemed to be each day becoming more firm. I told, I had finally led me to deduce three different theories, each more or less plausible and each involving an entirely different set of persons.

There were certain happenings and circumstances that made me sometimes wonder if the whole thing were not a base plot on the part of my great-uncle Rufus, perhaps influenced by a desire for revenge or perhaps on by an insane greed for still greater wealth.

Yet, on the other hand, there were those entries in his diary about the mysterious voices. Apparently too, his wife and Mrs. Burke had heard them.

Did it not seem more likely that the arch plotter was Claire Bradford's ex-husband?

This theory seemed far more tenable. While the Bradfords had heard nothing from him for several years the publication of Claire Bradford's engagement might have attracted his notice and inspired him to an attempt at blackmail. Yet how could he gain access to the wall safe where the divorce papers were kept, or how could he be dropping notes on the floor of Barbara Bradford's bedroom? How could he have stolen the Gastor pearls? It seemed incredible but still my thoughts kept returning to the possibility of his directing Claire Bradford's actions through hypnotic control. Once he had had influence over her sufficient to make her give up family, friends, home, everything to marry him. Had he, in some way, unknown to Barbara Bradford, regained his control over her sister and was he using her as the unconscious tool for his villainies? She could have gained access to my room by walking along the ledge when all the house was still. Yet this theory explained neither the theft of the pearls, my great-uncle's peculiar actions, my own discharge, nor the mysterious noises in the apartment. I had still a third theory.

Suppose a band of criminals, was located in the apartment house of the White room in Bradford and they

Access to either apartment would not be difficult. By short rope ladders they could easily reach either set of rooms. They would be so located that there would be little difficulty for them to devise mysterious signals for terrifying the people in the apartments below. I recalled that, in every case the voices and the footsteps seemed to come from somewhere up near the ceiling. Of course it seemed preposterous that a criminal band would find lodging in a luxury apartment house like this, yet, why not? Tenants in these buildings knew little about each other and cared less. There was no exchange of neighborly visits. Once having gained access to such a building or forced references so long as they paid their rent promptly, no one in the building would bother his head about the character of any of the other tenants.

This last theory seemed the most plausible. Besides it was the easiest to work on. It ought not to be difficult to ascertain who lived in the two apartments above. Unoubtedly my best source of information would be Nellie Kelly, the telephone operator. Perhaps, too, she might be able to inform me of my great-uncle's whereabouts. More than likely he had left a forwarding address for his mail with her.

With a letter I had written to my mother I descended to the main floor and began a conversation with Miss Kelly by asking where was the nearest place that I could buy stamps. She chuckled. I began complaining how lonely it was in the apartment and would stop by any time her to dine with me that evening.

I had anticipated a good acceptance of my invitation and was amazed to find it firmly refused. In a touch regretful manner she advised a dozen reasons or rather pretexts. She did not go out with the people of the house. Her mother would not like it. She did not know me well enough. Mr. Wick would discharge her if he heard about it.

From an unexpected corner, though, came the less unobtrusive sounding suggestion. Mr. Wick likes to dine up from somewhere completely by himself. He is in the neighborhood of our conversation. I knew what it was about.

With a curt, "No, I don't," he declined my proposition. "I am not," Miss Kelly replied to me. "Miss Kelly if he had to go to dinner with you. It is part of her business and it is not pleasant for the tenants."

It seemed to me that the girls expected defiance at once and that she was actually needed to refuse and I was sure to explain tactfully that my mother's was not issued on a business basis when Mrs. Wick's face came suddenly back. Something almost like defiance.

"Of course Miss Kelly will be glad to go with you," he repeated sharply. "Certainly," said the girl quickly, before I had a chance to speak. "Mr. Wick thinks it is all right, I will be glad to go."

Her acceptance did not ring true. I was surprised that it was unwillingly given under some sort of compulsion, from the odious Wick.

I met her, at her suggestion, in the parlor of one of the less pretentious hotels. In the hour that had elapsed since she left the apartment, she had exchanged her neat black working suit for more modish clothes. After one quick glance at her transformed appearance my mind was quickly made up as to what sort of a restaurant to take her. It was manifest that she was of the type that would enjoy to the utmost the costly whirl of the fashionable cafe of the moment. It was my purpose to give her such a delightful evening that she would be wishing to spend others in the same way, for I felt certain that she, perhaps better than anyone else, could supply me the information I wanted about the tenants in the building. I was sure it would be well worth my while to win her good graces, cost what it may. Calling a taxi, I bade the chauffeur take us to the "White Room," the very latest fashion in restaurants, where hordes of hectic pursuers of pleasure were wont to assemble to dine and dance. I observed the gleam of satisfaction that came into her eyes as she heard me mention our destination.

At first we talked, in Broadway fashion, of the theaters and restaurants of the place we were in, of the people at the tables about us, but gradually I led the conversation to Miss Kelly herself and to her work in the apartment.

"It was funny, wasn't it," I said, "about Mr. Wick insisting on your coming with me? I had a notion he didn't like me."

Hitherto my companion had been most vivacious, chatting merrily, flashing back at my sallies with clever bits of that slangy repartee of which most of the metropolitan business girls are such clever mistresses. At my last remark a quick change came over her face. It was as if a mask had been set up between us behind which she was hiding from me.

"I guess, he likes you," she answered

ed guardedly. "I never heard him say one way or the other."

"While we're talking about the apartment," I went on, "did my great-uncle happen to leave a forwarding address with you? There are some things I want to send him—some pearls they left behind—and he hasn't written me yet where his address will be."

"I had not intended to mention the Gaston pearls. I had slipped that phrase in on the spur of the moment, but little was I prepared for the astounding effect my words had upon her."

"The pearls!" she gasped, turning white. "You're going to send him the Gaston pearls?"

There was a note of amazement, of incredulity in her tone.

"Excuse me," she said, rising unexpectedly. "I gotta telephone."

Before I could gather my wits together, she had vanished, leaving me sitting there, staring after her in dismay. What did she—the telephone girl—know about the Gaston pearls? How could she possibly know that they were missing? I had told no one—no one except Barbara Bradford—about the rided wall safe. How could her excitement and perturbation be accounted for except by the fact that she knew of their loss? I was sitting there, puzzling over her mysterious conduct when I became aware that a man was standing beside my table, glaring at me. I looked up, expecting to see the waiter, or headsutter. Instead it was a man in a dinner jacket, a stout, broad-shouldered chap with a crooked gray mustache.

"You've Got Your Nerve," He Sneered at Me.

"You're got your nerve," he sneered at me. "You're a mouth of brass sort here."

"A mouth of what sort?" I asked eagerly, surprised to find someone in a place of this sort who knew the Grandde's telephone girl.

"Why, Lefty Moore's wife, of course."

"I don't understand," I replied, "I'm here with Miss Kelly."

"Oh, she told you that was her name, did she?"

"I know it's her name—she's the telephone girl in the apartment where I live—the Granddeck."

I could see his manner toward me change at the mention of my abode, but he was still insistent about the identity of my companion.

"How well do you know her?" he asked.

"Well"—I am afraid I colored, as I realized that my acquaintance with the girl was limited—"I've been living there for a week or so, and I've talked with her two or three times and—"

"I thought so," said my inquirer. "There's nothing to it. Sue's Lefty Moore's woman all right. If I'd seen you come in with her, you'd never have got a table in this place."

"What is the matter with her? Who is Lefty Moore?"

An expression of amazement came into the man's face.

"Did you never hear tell of Lefty Moore, the cleverest three-time burglar there is in or out of Sing Sing? Fourteen years, he got the last time, and it was quite a write-up the papers gave me for catching him."

"It began to dawn on me then who the man was. He must be an ex-ponchman employed as the restaurant's employer or house detective.

"You're sure Miss Kelly" and Lefty Moore's wife are the same person?"

The reasons for not forgetting her. She was with him that time when I took him. I've got the marks of her nails in my face yet. It's her all right, even if she has gone to work as Miss Kelly while Lefty's doing his stretch. She's a bad one, she is."

"Is she a crook, too?" I asked excitedly. I was trying to measure up the importance of this astounding bit of information. Already my deductions had convinced me that some band of criminals was in collusion with someone in the apartment who was carrying out their plots against the Bradfords and me. I had been thinking of an apartment surreptitiously tenanted by a criminal gang,

How much more likely that an employee of the place was in the pay of the plotters! And now to learn that the telephone girl was, if not a criminal herself, at least the associate of criminals.

"She's got no record that I know of," the detective admitted, "but she couldn't be Lefty Moore's wife without being a crook herself."

"That helps explain things," I said more to myself than to him.

"Explains what?" he asked suspiciously.

"Look here," I said with a new determination. "There have been some mysterious happenings in the Grand deck, and I brought this girl here to try to pump her. I asked her a question or two and she became much embarrassed and confused. She jumped up and said she was going to the telephone. Do you suppose that she saw you and recognized you?"

"Not a chance," said the detective.

"Well, I'd like to find out to whom she telephoned. Can you find out for me?"

"Sure I can, but you got to get her out of here."

"All right," I replied. "As soon as she returns to my table, I'll pay my check and we'll leave. I'll be back here, and by and see if you've learned anything."

"Here she comes now," said the detective, hastily taking his departure, but I noticed that he had stationed himself behind some palms where he could watch the girl without being seen.

"Who was the fellow talking to you as I came up?" asked Miss Kelly curiously.

She was cool and collected now. Her telephone message—if she had been really phoning—seemed in some way to have fortified her.

"Oh, that fellow," I replied with assumed indifference, "that was the manager of the place."

"What?" he wanted?

"Nothing in particular. He just asked if everything was all right."

"Why?"

"He thought I was like a bull—like a detective I used to know," she hastily corrected herself.

Her slip in using the intolerant slang phrase served to aid in convincing me that my informant had been correct in his identification. I was as anxious now as the police detective to get her out of the restaurant and to summon the waiter I had asked to pay my check.

"Let's stay for a couple of drinks," she suggested.

"Sorry," I said, "but I can't dance"—merrily adding the words "with you."

"Let's go then," she said disappointedly, and to my surprise on the way out she revealed the subject of Mr. Gaston.

"You were asking if the old gentleman left a forwarding address. He didn't leave any with me. If you find out where he is will you let me or Mr. Wick know? Mr. Wick wants to get in touch with him."

Something told me then it must have been Mr. Wick she had telephoned to. Probably she had informed him I had been asking about the Gastons' address and had consulted him as to what answer to give. Putting the girl into a taxi I paid her driver to take her home and hurried back into the hotel. I found the house detective, James Gorman, I learned his name was—waiting for me in the lobby.

"Was it to the Granddeck she telephoned?" I asked eagerly.

"It was 0900 Plaza. That's a private number. I called up information and she wouldn't tell me where it was. I'll find out tomorrow, though. There's other ways besides through information."

"If you find out you'll phone me right away, won't you?" I asked him giving him my card.

"And have Lefty Moore's wife listening in," he suggested. "Nothing doing, son. You'd better call me from a public pay station."

A night visit from a beautiful ghost.

Word to the Warren.

It may not beget undue attention but 240,162,943 needles were made in the United States last year. It would be pleasant mental recreation for a long evening to figure how many hours of labor, based on the proverb that a stitch in time saves nine, would have been saved the women of the nation if all these needles had been applied at the psychological moment.

First Gun of the Civil War.

On the 8th of January, in 1861, the steamship Star of the West was sent by the federal government from New York with supplies and reinforcements for Fort Sumter, in Charleston harbor. When the Star of the West reached Charleston she was fired upon by Confederate batteries from the town, and was obliged to turn back. This was the first actual gunfight of the Civil war.

The next unit of government in Russia is the county. The people do not have a vote for the delegates to the county soviets. These county commissioners are elected by the members of the city and village soviets and the members of the rural soviets. Here we have government one step removed from the people of the cities and two steps removed from the "poor peasants."

The provincial soviets are elected by the city soviets and the rural so-ties. Again the people are without a direct voice in their own government. The constitution says: "The All-Russian congress is the supreme power." This body in the government of Russia takes the place of our congress, our president and the cabinet. It has the supreme legislative and executive power. Do the people have a vote, for these all-powerful congressmen? Certainly not. The All-Russian congressmen are elected by the city soviets and by the soviets of the provinces, who were elected by the city and rural soviets, the rural soviets having been elected by the local rural soviets, whose members were elected by the people.

Congress Not Governing Body.

The All-Russian congress is a very large body. The first congress met in 1917. It numbered about 1,200 delegates. The eighth congress next (January, 1920), in session and the present membership has grown to over two thousand. It is a big, cumbersome body, unfit for deliberative purposes. It is more of a mass meeting, a platform for the relief of those who have speeches burdening their chests. The congress never sits for more than a week. It was never intended to be an organ of government. The constitution tells the story.

Section 23 reads: "The All-Russian congress shall elect a central executive committee of not more than 200 members." This takes the government another step from the people.

Section 30 says: "When the All-Russian congress is not in session, the central executive committee is the supreme power of the republic." But we have not reached the end of the journey from the people to the seat of power.

Section 35 reads: "The central executive committee shall select a council of people's commissars who shall manage the affairs of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic."

But let us read on:

Section 37: "The council of people's commissars is entrusted with the general management of the affairs of the republic."

Section 38: "For the accomplishment of this task the people's commissars shall issue decrees, resolutions, orders, and in general take all steps necessary for the proper and rapid conduct of government affairs."

Section 40: "The central executive committee has the right to revoke or suspend all orders and resolutions of the council of people's commissars."

But a note to this section of the constitution reads: "Measures requiring immediate action may be executed directly by the council of people's commissars."

Without Voice in Government.

The council of people's commissars is 17 in number. The people had no voice in selecting the people's commissars; they were not given a chance in putting the central executive committee; they were not allowed to vote for the All-Russian congress; and in the rural districts the poor peasants were not even allowed to vote for the men who elected the men who in turn selected the congressmen.

At the head of the Soviet State today is the chief of state, Lenin. A high hand sits forth, a commission of force in charge of a very army. When I think of the part the people play in this newest form of "free" government and the distance they are kept from their country's affairs, I cannot help but see that through this constitution as though we were looking at them through the wrong end of a pair of opera glasses.

Truly it is a long way from the people to the throne of Lenin. The people make only the first and shortest step. There are five long and important steps between the poor peasants and the power, and three between the city voters and the real government of Russia.

The bolshevik government is a government of officeholders, for officeholders and by officeholders. It is Lincoln's formula reversed. I have heard it said that democratic government is a failure because political officeholders do not truly represent the people. There is some truth in the statement, but the people have a remedy; the system is not at fault. I cannot understand the logic for the faith that a government which provides three or five additional sets of officeholders between the people and the government will make things better.

Title Conveys Much Meaning.

The title people's commissar is full of meaning. It is obese with power. The title is copyrighted in the constitution.

In December, 1918, Lenin addressed a letter to the American workmen in which he said:

"Let incurable pedants, crammed full of bourgeois democratic and parliamentary prejudices shake their heads gravely over our soviet; let them deplore the fact that we have no direct elections."

I suggest that Lenin put the soviet man before organized labor in the United States and ask the union carriers of America to give up direct elections in their labor unions and accept a scheme of government for the unions modeled after the bolshevik plan; and see how many followers he will get. The rank and file of the labor movement guard jealously their right to a voice and vote for measures and men.

Lenin is a master machinist. If he can prove that he designed and built the soviet steam roller I know where he can get a job when he quits Moscow.

What wouldn't Tammany give for the services of Lenin?

It may not begot andue attention but 240.162.943 needles were made in the United States last year. It would be pleasant mental recreation for a long evening to figure how many hours of labor, based on the proverb that a stitch in time saves nine, would have been saved the women of the nation if all these needles had been applied at the psychological moment.

First Gun of the Civil War.

On the 8th of January, in 1861, the steamship 'Star of the West was sent by the federal government from New York with supplies and reinforcements for Fort Sumter, in Charleston harbor. When the Star of the West reached Charleston she was fired upon by Confederate batteries from the town, and was obliged to turn back. This was the first actual gun-firing of the Civil war.

Governed by Officeholders.

The "poor peasant," having cast his vote for the local rural soviet, leaves the task of government to the officeholders. The deputies elected to the local rural soviet meet and elect their deputies to the next higher governing unit, the rural soviet. Here we find the first governing body for which the "poor peasant" is denied a vote, but not the last.

The next unit of government in Russia is the county. The people do not have a vote for the delegates to the county soviets. These county commissioners are elected by the members of the city and village soviets and the members of the rural soviets. Here we have government one step removed from the people of the cities and two steps removed from the "poor peasants."

The provincial soviets are elected by the city soviets and the rural so-

The Most Welcome Tire That Ever Came to Market

Men Who Appreciate Superlative Values Prefer The Brunswick

In every great tire factory, the chief question is: "How much can we give for the money?" And the product depends on the policy adopted.

Every man who has become acquainted with Brunswick Tires knows that Brunswick standards are again evident. This famous concern—noted as a leader in every line it entered since 1845—has once more proved that its policy is right.

A perfect tire is simply a matter of knowledge and standards and skill. No secrets nor patents prevent making an ideal tire.

But standards come first. For in tire making there is vast room for skimping, for subtle economies, for hidden shortcomings. Makers without the highest standards don't build high-grade tires.

The Brunswick organization of tire makers includes a brilliant staff of technical experts. Not a man among them has spent less than 20 years in handling rubber.

Each is a master of his craft. And the new ideas they bring to the attention of Brunswick directors receive sincere consideration.

Every proved betterment is adopted unanimously.

The Brunswick Tire is a combination of acknowledged features—plus Brunswick standards of manufacture.

The result is a super-tire, the like of which you have never known before. The kind of a tire you will gladly join in welcoming.

Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires.

Try ONE Brunswick. We promise a surprise. And we feel certain that you will want ALL Brunswicks.

Then good tires will have a new meaning to you.

HELP THE "BOYS."

The "Michigan Community Council" is about to decide upon the expenditure of a $200,000 balance in the "Michigan War Chest" which was raised by popular subscription throughout the state in 1918. The American Legion of Grand Rapids has made the suggestion that the money be used to help save the lives of the victims of tuberculosis among the veterans of the war. The Michigan Anti-tuberculosis association today heartily endorsed this suggestion. According to the association, no better use could be made of the money. The state tuberculosis association is acquainted with the great need that there is in Michigan to help the victims of tuberculosis among the ex-soldiers. Since 1917 the state association has given a great deal of its attention to this problem, but the funds of the state association are very limited, and the problem is so big and the need so great that comparatively little can be done. The $200,000 in the "War Chest" would be a wonderful help. This is not a suggestion that the state association be allowed to expend this money. The Michigan Anti-tuberculosis is merely interested in having it used to make a fight against tuberculosis among ex-service men. It has been stated that upwards of 3,500 Michigan young men were rejected because of tuberculosis tendencies which showed themselves at the final examinations as these young fellows offered their lives to their country. Instead of being permitted to return home to the same conditions and environments under which they had grown to manhood some place should have been provided by the state where they might have received proper treatment until the danger which threatened them had been eradicated. It is not too late yet to save a lot of these young men and a better use could be made of the $200,000 to establish a place for their care and treatment.

CUBA OWES MUCH TO GORGAS

Work of American Medical Officer Converted Island From Plague Spot to Pleasure Resort.

Cubans take a great deal of pride in the Prado, a splendid avenue about two miles in length, extending from a charming park to the Havana waterfront. Several years ago the tourist who had walked on the Prado was generally held to have risked his life by mingling with the crowd, when yellow fever scourged Cuba annually. Malaria was also frequent, and Havana had the reputation of being one of the unhealthiest places in the world.

In 1901 General Gorgas, then a major, became sanitary officer at Havana and dealt successfully with the terrible plague that by 1910 not a case had originated in the city. The successful fight against the fever was due to the remarkable discoveries by American physicians that these diseases were transmitted by mosquitoes. The fight against yellow fever helped to curb other epidemics.

Havana has generally been extraordinarily prosperous. Under the harsh Spanish rule, at a time when only a tenth of the land in Cuba was cultivated, the island was able to pay Spain between $20,000,000 and $40,000,000 annually. The world shortage of sugar has made this prosperity of the island seem a still greater achievement. There have been made over night, the Cubans having so much money and entertaining so many millionaires from America that Havana is not a good place to a poor man to visit.

Groceries, Meat Market and General Merchandise

Dear Friends:—

Ray Barlow was over to the near beer saloon and bought a bottle of near beer, just to try it out, and he says its nothing but beer with its hind legs handcuffed.

Well I am here with all the good things you need to eat and lots of other things too numerous to mention. Will be pleased to see all my old customers every day and lots of new ones. I have lots of the fine granulated sugar for everybody and I had to buy lots of groceries to get the sugar, and must sell lots of groceries so I can buy more groceries to get more sugar, so come and buy your groceries and near beer, potatoes, beans, candy, peanuts, pies, cakes, crackers, cookies, bread and sugar—and talk about tea and coffee, canned goods, and fresh meat. I can undersell anything in town, quality considered, and four credits is good so why go anywhere else. Old man is an easy mark.

Open night and day. I'll be out there at 10 cents an hour and heard myself.

Our Ambition: Ideal Telephone Service for Michigan.

The Michigan State Telephone Company has set itself earnestly to the task of making the telephone service in Michigan as near ideal as possible.

To us, ideal telephone service is summed up as follows:

First—When the service given present subscribers is as intelligent and as nearly perfect as human ingenuity and mechanical accuracy can make it.

Second—When every home and business, that has any use for a telephone, has one.

Third—When there is a mutual understanding between the Telephone Company and its subscribers, that fosters confidence and encouragement and courtesy.

The attainment of such an ideal calls for the best brains, the nimblest fingers, the most careful training, the expenditure of vast sums in buildings and material—yet it is a task that we are entering upon with all the enthusiasm of an age when mighty things are being accomplished.

There will be many obstacles and discouragements, but honest effort will overcome them all.

It is our purpose in these announcements, from time to time, to tell you of the progress we are making, and if we can know that we have your confidence and co-operation it will lend strength to our efforts and courage to our hearts.

Almost Deserved to Escape.
Butter served to the prisoners in the county jail at La Crosse, Wis., helped one of them in trying to escape. The butter, mixed with some cell disinfectant, made a substance which furnished him with light for his night work. A strip torn from his shirt made a wick. With this improvised candle he worked nights, cut the floor of the cell, making a hole large enough to let him through. A short tunnel took him to the brick wall, which would have been easy picking for him had he not been discovered.

MILLET WILL MEET HAY CROP SHORTAGE.

In response to questions from many farmers of the state as to crops that may be sown at this late date in order to offset the shortage of the hay crop, C. R. Megee of the M. A. C. Farm Crops department is sending out word that millet may be safely sown as late as the first week of July. Sorghum is also mentioned as a possibility for a late crop to meet the hay shortage.

"One of the most dependable late crops is millet," says Professor Megee. "Common millet will mature in from 60 to 65 days. The Golden is later in maturing, requiring from 85 to 90 days. Yields of from one and one-half to two tons per acre were secured the past season on the college experiment station field when millet was sown the latter part of June. Millets are usually sown with the ordinary grain drill at the rate of from 25 to 30 pounds per acre."

"Sorghums may also be used for this purpose, the Early Amber variety being best adapted to Michigan conditions. Good yields are usually secured by drilling solid with the grain drill, at the rate of from 35 to 40 pounds of seed per acre."

AUTOMOBILE CLUB HELD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Northville Automobile club was held at the village building on Tuesday evening. After listening to the reports of the officers, the following were elected as members of the board of directors for the ensuing year: C. C. Yerkes, T. G. Richardson, L. A. Babbitt, F. S. Neal, M. N. Johnson, W. L. Tunham, N. C. Schrader, C. A. Ponsford, Cass R. Benton, Harry M. Bogart, Dan Mathews, J. W. Taylor and Chas. McLean. It was voted to increase the annual dues to $3.00 per year, beginning with July. A sign committee composed of C. C. Yerkes, T. G. Richardson, C. A. Ponsford and N. C. Schrader was appointed and it is planned to "sign" all the highways within a radius of twenty miles of Northville.

The annual meeting ought to have been held in January and in his report Secretary Neal gave the receipts and expenditures for the year 1919, which were as follows:

Receipts.
We had on hand at the beginning of the year	$ 13.01
During the year were received for:
membership dues	218.00
Total	$231.07
Disbursements.
Paid for Printing	$16.75
For Postage	14.99
For Cigars	2.50
For Clerical Hire	54.00
For Road Signs and Lettering	52.30
Annual Dues American Ass'n.	16.00
For Freight and Express	1.55
Bal. on Emblems	30.00
For Office Rent	15.00
Total	$197.99
Leaving cash on hand	33.98

Our membership has gained somewhat during the past year but seemingly not near as much as it should. In 1918 our membership reached 111; this year it reached up to 147 although some few did not renew their membership last year and 11 autoists had lost their emblems so that new emblems have been issued to them. This really would make our membership a little less.

We believe a great deal has been accomplished since the organization of the Auto club along line, that are beneficial to the motorist. The start on the new cement road leading from the so-called Seven mile road thru a bludge to the Detroit automobile grounds, was in a measure brought about through our association. The hope of getting the road constructed this year was practically abandoned, when Mr. Yerkes, C. R. Benton and Milo Johnson, directors for our club, took hold of the matter and presented a very such forceful argument to the County Road Commissioners, getting aid from the officials of the city of Detroit as to convince them of the importance of immediate construction of this road. Of course following that the hearty cooperation of the Northville Village Council was also instrumental but it was a case of every stick in the chain coming for its strength.

In addition to the nearly all the roads leading into Northville have been sign posted, as far as as far as Arbor and for long distance on Grand River and other main roads leading to and from this section. Also a large number of danger signs have been put in places where the autoists could be warned of sharp turns and obstructed views. "Drive Slow" signs have also been placed around the school house in the village, and next year it is contemplated going into other nearby districts.

The Pere Marquette crossing at the condenser has been widened and greatly improved at the request of the Auto club. This crossing now conforms to the width of the splendid new road that has been built, there by Northville township authorities.

Next year the club contemplates putting up other road signs and hopes to do an extensive lot of work along this line. We also feel that the fact that all kinds of automobile blanks for licenses can always be obtained at the secretary's office, making that part of it a very great convenience.

The secretary's office is always able to obtain maps and touring information for any of its members, free of charge. It is hoped that this year will be bigger and better than ever.

Thus far in 1920 there has been paid for membership $360 and the expenditures have been $100.70, leaving a balance in the treasury amounting to $259.70.

UNCLE SAM'S BIRTHDAY.

At midnight a bell rings, a cannon booms at dawn, And noisy crackers pop and snap as day wears on, And then at dark the sky grows red with sudden bursts of light, And balls of wonder-colors plow up ward through the night. What means this reckless tumult from early hour to late? 'Tis the birthday of our Uncle Sam—the day we celebrate! So let the welkin ring until the sleeping hills awake, While we place another candle on the birthday cake.

HOME TOWN HELPS

ALL SHOULD HAVE A GARDEN

Health and Profit in the Cultivation of the Ground, Even Though Plot Is Small.

The "city farmer," as they humorously call him, was a very great help, not only to himself, but to the country during the war-garden time, and the experience he gained from his war-garden activities has since helped him in the fight to win out against the high cost of living.

He has profited by that experience in every beneficial way, and the best of all is that he felt in love with his garden, and has been in love with it ever since.

He found health, here, and more of home happiness, and the profit was there, as it will be now, that he didn't have to take the market basket from home.

To the town dweller, who perhaps hasn't given much attention to gardening, the Albany (Gr.) Herald says:

"It's great to have a garden, even though it produce few vegetables. It's great to have a place for out-of-door exercise—a place in which to turn up the fragrant earth with a spading fork level it with a rake and lay it off with a trenching hoe. Some folk say it's better exercise than golf or tennis, though on that question we do not presume to sit in judgment. A man can work in his garden before sunrise, when golf links are too wet with the dew to be used, and his garden is a whole lot nearer home than the golf club."

And there is no reason why Mr. Townsend, though he has a garden with vegetables, in it if he will give a little practical thought and diligent application to its preparation and culture. At least, Constantin

STRAIGHT ROWS AID GARDEN

Utilize Space to Best Advantage, and Add Greatly to the Appearance of the Plot.

It would be a considerable mistake to think that the only way to make the most of the plot in the city is to plant in straight rows. Besides, it would be a mistake to think that the only way to make the most of the plot is to plant in straight rows.

Who is it that says that? It is for many the only way to make the most of the plot, and the only way to make the most of the plot is to plant in straight rows.

SEES BILLBOARDS AS WASTE

Eastern Authority Gives Excellent Reason Why Unsightly Structures Should Be Done Away With

Attack on the American billboard from a new angle, Mr. Joseph Pennell declares that the lumber expended in unnecessary and unsightly billboards in this country would rebuild nearly everything destroyed abroad.

The point wasted here would cover all the real buildings, and the labor would be of the double benefit in what we have is the great essential of producing more. The argument should do much to help the anti-billboard campaign, for although many will hesitate to believe that Mr. Pennell's arithmetic is altogether correct, so nice a balance between billboards in America and "everything destroyed" in Europe, there will be plenty to agree that the unnecessary erection of American billboards consumes a vast deal of material that would be very helpful in the erection of buildings in Europe.

Meanwhile the billboards multiply, and by so doing add constantly to the evidence of their own undesirability.

His Fears Realized.

Tane and John twins are exceptionally fond of each other. John, being much the older with the prophetic solitude for Tane's welfare, Tane had spent the week end out of town in the train drive into the station. John was there to meet him. Quickly noting the newly bandaged finger he exclaimed, "I just knew you'd get hurt if I wasn't along to take care of you."

Luck and Labor.

Luck is ever waiting for something to turn up. Labor, with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something. Luck lies in bed, and wishes the postman would bring him the news of a legacy. Labor turns out at six o'clock, and with busy pen or ringing hammer, lays the foundation of a competence. Luck shines. Labor whistles. Luck relies on chance. Labor on character.—Cobden.

CLAD FOR OUTDOOR AND INDOOR WEAR

THE heart of the flapper rejoices in many smocks and blouses and jackets for outdoor wear, that range all the way from plain white, with a little inconspicuous decoration, to vivid colors that form backgrounds for even more vivid cut-out figures posed against them. Among the latter there are slip-over smocks with short kimono sleeves, up heavy cotton weaves, that are shown in orange, green, blue, and white figures cut from contrasting colors and black or colored, ranging their makers use them as an anti-mighty a canvas, posing without garters or gaudy flowers on them. When these figures turn out unexpectedly to be pockets in every corner, the joy of youthful wearers is complete, for it is a true thing to have one's high spirits vivified in clothes.

A belted smock in blue often shows the picture above it is the reverse of the blue blouse and plays the same role in the wardrobe, but it is a bit more graceful in line. Its odd color and flaring cuffs lend it interest, and they are supplemented by slashes over the hips and the management of the belt which slips through slides. Let us overlook this cleverness, the design, has put small sprays of embroidered flowers at each side. A pretty and demure dress of glenham for the home, is shown in the second picture, and hardly needs description. These small plain checks are very fashionable this season, for both grown people and all the younger generation. Organdie lends them delicacy. It appears here in a skirt and in little, narrow flairs on the cuffs. Often a sash is made of it, but in the dress pictured there is a wide girdle made of a bias strip of glenham. These garments are of the kind that women make at home, and the materials for making them are to be found everywhere, yet they appear in all the best displays in centers of fashion where their qualities are appreciated.

Airy Midsummer Hats in White

SOME of the hats of midsummer might be inspired by the soft down of the exotic aerie globe that follows the flower of the dandelion—they are so light and so cool-looking. Only the shierest and most like-like materials go into their making, mere muslin or fabrics in pure white. Their attributes are often all-white also; the cold but lovely ghosts of gay flowers and frills and grays that adorn their colorful rivals. Occasionally a little pale color appears in ribbon or other trimming or these fragile-looking white shapes but designer-like best to make them all in white.

Half bird, feathers and the flimsiest lace over the finest wire frames make the majority of the white dress hats for midsummer, and white flannel in the narrower widths appears to lend them just enough of substance and stiffness to make them pass as head coverings. The group of four hats shown here reveals the success with which millinery artists deal in these materials. They indicate something of the great diversity they create in styles. There are two dressy models, one with a crown and sweeping, upturned brim in which the frame is covered with maline. Narrow ribbon tied in loops midway of the brim makes a beautiful facing and fine white lace drapes the top. The other wide-brimmed hat has a crown of half bird and a brim of maline with two small tufts of Val lace as a finish. Proof-edged ribbon about the crown, wanders over the brim edge and ends in a flat bow in the middle. A half wreath of grasses and flowers completes it.

Four broad crown with very narrow ribbon in rows, and a hint of ribbon loops make the small hat trimmed with tiny roses, white snowdrops and maline cover the rolling brim of the hat having a round crown of half bird.

FIGURED GOODS FOR BLOUSES

Materials Lend Themselves Very Satisfactorily to the Simplest of Style Designs.

Figured foulard blouses are being shown for spring and summer and very attractive they are. Figured materials lend themselves best to the simplest style designs. The woman who wants to make her own blouses, but is not sufficiently skilled to work out elaborate fashion ideas, may do very well with a lace blouse, which requires only care in matching the pattern.

Skirt and Trousers to Match. For the real sportsman there is a new divided skirt with trousers to match.

Father of the Fourth Jefferson Ever Friend of Liberty and the Enemy of All Forms of Despotism

By ROBERTUS LOVE

The 100th anniversary of the birth of George Washington is being celebrated in the Fourth of July. The Fourth of July is a day of national pride and patriotism. It is a day when we remember the sacrifices of our forefathers and the freedom that they won for us. It is a day when we reaffirm our commitment to the principles of liberty and justice for all.

So far as the human interest goes, the home of Jefferson was and is more fruitful of certain and precious and remembrance than the home of any other. Both homes are in Virginia. Jefferson's home, which he called Monticello, divided with Noah Vernon the reverence and homage of Americans who have inherited the priceless blessings of Republican government for which Washington fought with his sword and Jefferson with his pen.

Sacred to Lovers of Liberty. Monticello is one of America's shrines of pilgrimage. The house shown here is three miles from the town of Charlottesville. Albemarle County, Va. The house is a fine example of Georgian architecture, with a large portico and a central chimney.

History of Monticello. In 1703 Jefferson began the construction of his residence on the mountain above Charlottesville. On Nov. 17, 1772, he took dinner at the house, the "little white house" of the time, whose name and location he had chosen when he was in England.

Jefferson's Monument. The epitaph on the tomb of Jefferson, which was written by Jefferson himself, reads: "Here was buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, of the Statute of Virginia for Religious Freedom, and Father of the University of Virginia."

It thus appears that Jefferson was more proud of these three achievements than of being president of the United States, as he does not even mention the latter distinction. From a hilltop near Monticello one may see the birthplaces of three men whose work and wisdom added to the United States nearly as much of its present territory as its continent. These men were Jefferson, George Rogers Clark and Meriwether Lewis.

Through the efforts of Clark, the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and part of Michigan were added to our domain. Meriwether Lewis, with a younger brother of George Rogers Clark, was sent by Jefferson on the famous trip of exploration and discovery which, many years later, resulted in finding Uncle Sam's trail to the Pacific Northwest.

OUT-OF-ORDINARY PEOPLE

J. P. Morgan's London Mansion

J. Pierpont Morgan owns a mansion in London, which has been the London home of his father and grandfather. This mansion is termed of two large houses. These stand on freehold property, which is extremely rare and valuable in the British metropolis. The mansion occupies a splendid location, with an outlook on Hyde Park.

Mr. Morgan has offered this mansion as a gift to the United States government for use as a permanent home of the American ambassador to Great Britain. Had it been accepted, it would have remained in the possession of the American government in perpetuity, its real American soil, subject only to American law, immune from every form of British rule and jurisdiction in the very heart of the British empire.

But this gift has not been accepted. The tender of the house was made by Mr. Morgan some seventeen months ago, and beyond a bare acknowledgment of the receipt of his letter to further notice was taken of the affair until the other day, when, on his pressing for a decision, his offer was sent on to congress, just before adjournment without any recommendation. This was equivalent to an expression of disapproval on the part of the administration.

Troubles of a Very Rich Man

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., probably the richest young man in the world, arrived in Denver the other day on his way to the Rocky Mountain National park. The Rockefeller party included Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller, Miss Abby Rockefeller, the sixteen-year-old daughter and the three young sons. In the Union station a newspaperman took snapshots of the Rockefeller children. Mr. Rockefeller pursued him and seized him by the arm. "Pardon me," said he, "but I'm Mr. Rockefeller."

"I know it," replied the newspaperman.

Look here," cried Mr. Rockefeller, "you can't use those pictures. You had no right to take them."

So the multifarious and the photographer argued about it.

"You don't understand my troubles," said Mr. Rockefeller finally. "I'd be only too glad to trade places with you."

"I am," said the photographer, proffering his camera. "It's a trade."

Mr. Rockefeller laughed and went on to say: "The average person doesn't appreciate the problems of a rich man's family affairs. If I permitted my children's pictures to be printed in every paper it would put wrong ideas in the kiddies' heads. They are no better than any one's children, and I want them to be kept free from curiosity. I don't care how much you photograph me, but leave them out of it."

Norman H. Davis Succeeds Polk

Norman H. Davis, assistant secretary of the treasury and financial adviser of the American peace delegation, is Frank L. Polk's successor as undersecretary of state. Mr. Davis' appointment is regarded in Washington as a logical one, as the treasury department official is thoroughly familiar with the international situation, including all the important financial phases. Immediately after the armistice he served as one of the president's representatives on the supreme council of supply and relief, whose function later was taken over by the supreme economic council created by the peace conference, on which Mr. Davis was financial representative of the United States.

In January, 1919, the president designated Mr. Davis as finance commissioner of the United States and also United States commissioner in connection with the armistice discussion with the Germans at Spa and Treves. He was at the same time attached to the American commission to negotiate peace as chief of the financial advisers to the president. He was a member of both the reparations and financial subcommittees of the peace conference.

Senate Wants to Know, You Know

Senator Pomerene (portrait herewith) of Ohio (Dem.) sponsored the resolution which was passed during the last few minutes of congress and gave extension of the powers of the committee investigating campaign expenditures. So the committee will be enabled to throw publicity on the financial outlay of the presidential candidates up to election time. The committee will take up its labors July 9 and continue to investigate.

The resolution went through on a flood of oratory and campaign speeches from both sides of the senate chamber. Two reports were made on the resolution from the committee on contingent expenses. The majority report signed by Senator Calder of New York (Rep.) and Senator Smoot of Utah (Rep.) recommended the defeat of the resolution, while Senator McKellar of Tennessee (Dem.) in a minority report urged its passage.

On top of this it was necessary that unanimous consent for a vote be obtained, as a legislative day had not elapsed since the introduction of the resolution.

Senator Smoot registered objection after a speech by Senator Pomerene. Senator Kenyon of Iowa (Rep.) and Senator Borah of Idaho (Rep.) urged him to withdraw his objection. He did so at 3:58, and the resolution was adopted unanimously just before adjournment at 4 o'clock.

Senator Borah made the point that the questions involved did not appertain to any one party and the man who interfered with the investigation was a partisan before he was a patriot.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

STOCK THRIVE ON ROUGHAGE

Feeding Value of Silage, Fodder and Stover in Dairy Ration Not Fully Appreciated.

The feeding value of corn silage, corn fodder and corn stover in the dairy ration is not sufficiently appreciated, especially in those regions where legumes do not thrive, says a specialist of the dairy division, United States department of agriculture. A recent study of records from cow-testing associations points to the conclusion that the growing of more corn roughage, and less non-leguminous hay would increase the profitability of the ration.

In all sections where legumes thrive it is, of course, advisable to grow them, as their value is well recognized for feeding dairy cattle. In fact, from a study of cow-testing association reports it would seem that even grain does not fully take the place of good legume roughage. It is in those sections where legumes do not thrive, however, that dairymen may well consider the growing of more corn roughage and less non-legume hay.

Few plants apparently contain all the substances required to nourish properly the animal body, but in the light of present knowledge, the corn plant seems to be one of these. It is possible to balance a ration from corn products only that will enable the animals to thrive and reproduce with apparently no ill effects. This is not the case with many other crops. Corn, then, has unusual feeding properties.

Experimental work done at the South Carolina and Pennsylvania stations has shown that it is practical under some conditions to feed dairy cows on a ration of corn silage and grain without hay. Such a ration has been used successfully in feeding live steers. Reports from one cow-testing association in a non-leguminous region laying an unusually high production per cow in a district where the dairymen have practically discontinued the feeding of hay but instead feed silage and corn fodder. In this association the grain ration is also composed largely of corn by-products.

No matter what other conclusions may be drawn from the evidence available showing the value of corn fodder and corn silage as dairy feeds, it seems certain that the corn plant provides an excellent roughage.

Hay is often damaged very much by becoming overripe. Storms damage it seriously. The feeding value of corn is not damaged by its becoming mature, and if it is properly shocked storms do little damage to it.

There are undoubtedly many dairymen who can well consider the wisdom of reducing the amount of non-leguminous feed, corn fodder, and silage to feed their dairy cows.

DAIRY NOTES

Feed the cows well.

The sooner the utensils that have contained milk or been in contact with it are washed the easier the job will be.

Grass, hay, fodder, and other roughage which may not have a ready sale are economically utilized by the dairy cow.

Contagious abortion can be prevented by the use of an antiseptic solution used on the spire after each service.

Through the dairy cow many unsalable roughages may be transformed into products from which cash may be realized.

A jar of vasoline is almost a necessity around the dairy barn, especially on very cold days when chapped and cracked feet are common.

GOVERNMENT DESIGNS PEACH SIZER

Peach Sizing Machine—Fruit Can Be Carried Along by Conveyors Which Are Adjusted to Carry the Largest Fruit to the End, Whence It Drops Into the Apron in the Foreground.

This year a part of the peach crop may be better graded at less expense than heretofore by use of a new sizer developed by government workers. Two machines were built last year and tested under commercial conditions at Leesburg, Va., and Milledgeville, Ga. Information gained through these tests was used in perfecting the present machine drawings of which are now available to all growers or manufacturers interested, according to announcement by the bureau of markets.

The machine has several unique features and advantages over existing types of sizers which make it possible to handle fruit with less bruising while its construction permits 10 to 15 pickers to work at one time, thus making possible a run of two to three car loads of peaches a day from each machine, the amount depending on the average quality of the fruit. The over all dimensions of the machine are 24x17x10. It requires an electric motor of less than one horsepower, a pump (or a small gas engine) to operate it and it can be run at half capacity, a desired "under commercial conditions" should be sold at a price not over $170, according to estimates of the designers.

How It Works. The peaches from the orchard are fed, each on an inclined roller conveyor, or on a table of which rollers stand and are not cut and damaged fruit. The rollers of the peaches on this conveyor are obtained without bruising the fruit, so that the rollers of the fruit without bruising it. From this roller conveyor the peaches are delivered by two sets of rollers running over pulleys. A spring lever arrangement permits the rollers to accommodate any size fruit, and is adjusted to grade. Although the rollers diverge from each other under ordinary operating conditions, they may be set nearly parallel to facilitate the distribution into the bins of fruit which runs almost uniform in size. This control is made possible by a perfected bar rack movement which is one of the unique features of this machine.

As the peaches come off the roller conveyor they roll down a slight incline to the rollers on which they travel until dropped through into canvas bins. It is impossible to damage the machine because the peaches are fed off at a time to the moving rollers which serves to keep the proper tension on the rollers and the mechanism which quickly widens or narrows the space between the rollers. The machine, which was devised particularly for six-basket carrier packing, can be used equally well for bushel boxes with a slight modification of the rollers.

Possibilities for Other Fruits. In announcing the perfecting of a machine which is the work of a grades and standards project and the technological laboratory of the bureau of markets, it is stated that the machine has possibilities for grading other fruits such as apples, pears and grapes, while it may be possible to adapt it to a number of other fruits. A machine of this type is in patent office. The department can give as much as a patent will be at $1000 in the machine in the same of the bureau covered by the application in not already protected by existing patents. The bureau has applied for patents on parts of a machine in order to make them available to all and is ready to furnish a set of working drawings to any grower or manufacturer for $2, which is intended to cover only the cost of labor and material.

GIVE HOME GARDENS BEST OF ATTENTION

Don't Put Away Rake and Hoe Too Early in Season.

Surface of Soil Should Be Lightly Stirred and Kept Mellow—Firmly Sifted Manure Scattered Over Seeds Is Excellent.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here is a message for the tillers of the thousands of home gardens already planted in cities and the smaller towns, and other thousands in process of being planted. Let every gardener remember that his work of food production is only begun. Many amateurs make the mistake of putting away the rake and hoe as soon as they have the seeds in the ground. The surface of the ground should be lightly stirred with a rake and kept mellow before the seeds come up. Often a week or so of extremely dry weather comes after garden planting. This is liable to cause many of the smaller seeds to fail to germinate, or, if they germinate, they may not have enough moisture to keep them alive.

There are two or three ways of preventing loss. One is to use the sprinkling can and keep the surface lightly watered until the seeds are up. Another is to lay a board directly over the row of seeds until they sprout and are just about ready to come through the ground. It does not do, however, to leave the board over the row too long, as the little seedlings on coming up against the board will be bent out of shape and weakened. Still another method is to scatter a little fine, sifted manure. Here, also, care must be taken that the covering is not too heavy, or the seedlings will be injured when they come through the ground.

A steel rake is one of the best tools for cultivating the garden, because it loosens the top inch or two of the soil. Before the plants are up, break the surface over so gently over the rows, with the rake. After the plants appear, use the rake frequently along each side of the row to keep the soil loose and mellow.

AVOID OVERCROWDING CHICKS

One of Leading Causes of Range Losses During Summer Months—Fresh Air Is Needed

During the hot summer months the greater part of the trouble experienced on poultry farms is found on the ranges where the growing stock is kept. According to the poultry department of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station one of the leading causes of range losses during the summer is the overcrowding of the birds. There should be a sufficient number of colony houses to accommodate the birds. The colony houses are used by the young birds at night, and if they are forced to breathe the same air all the time, a condition which results in stunted growth and invites disease. Colony houses with from 50 to 75 birds in each provide much better conditions than in cases where hundreds of birds are kept in a single house. If several emaciated, stunted birds are found on the ranges, look first to the colony houses at night. They are probably overcrowded.

ELIMINATION OF ANT HILLS

Effective Plan is to Punch Holes in Mounds and Apply Carbon Bisulphide on Cotton.

Ant hills may be eliminated by punching holes in them and placing cotton, which has been wet with carbon bisulphide, in them. The fumes of this material penetrate the hills and kill the ants. Keep the material away from an open flame as it is very explosive.

INFERTILE EGGS KEEP BEST

Under Normal Conditions They May Be Stored for Period of Four to Five Weeks.

Infertile eggs will keep under normal conditions at a temperature of 60 to 80 degrees, for a period of four or five weeks, while on the other hand fertile eggs often become unfit for use in less than a few days.

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peerson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 25 cents a large box."

Dear Sirs: "I was an untold sufferer from old running sores and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years and after using just nine dollars' worth of the same I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6 inches and it healed and I can walk now, never will I be without Peterson's again."

"O Promise Me" was sung by Miss June Filkins accompanied by Mrs. C. A. Dolph at the piano and Mr. Floyd Evans with violin.

After congratulations luncheon was served and then the young couple eluded their guests and were taken to Detroit. Their short honeymoon was spent in Cleveland with Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Murphy and other friends.

Miss Bovee is well known in Northville, having been born and brought up here, and graduated from the High school. She has lately been in the employ of the advertising firm of Curtis & Co., Detroit. Mr. Wellwood is a practical printer with Joseph Mack & Co., and is greatly esteemed by them.

The young couple will live in Detroit.
