CAMP FOREST HILL NOW A REALITY

Up among the beautiful hills west of this village, the site of the Detroit Sanatorium, a merry company of 100 girls and boys are enjoying a summer outing, and that they are having the time of their young lives can be declared with a truth. The camp has been designated as Camp Forest Hill and has been established by the Board of Health of the city and fresh air, lots of good wholesome food and plenty of well-directed play will restore these little ones to normal health and strength they will return to the city later in the summer robust, buoyant and brown as berries.

In telling of the establishment of Camp Forest Hill, the Detroit News of Sunday contained the following: "Twenty Army tents have been pitched on the crest of the highest hill of the new municipal Tuberculosis Sanatorium site, two miles out of Northville. In each tent are five cots. There are also a huge mess tent, kitchen, and a neat little hospital tent of bright new canvas, fully equipped for any emergency.

In charge of the camp are eight persons, four recreation leaders, two nurses, two former Army captains, besides the cook and kitchen help.

The entire program for the pre-ventorium has been made possible by the city council which appropriated $10,000 for the purpose. It was the general feeling that the facilities of the city should be utilized to the full in and effort to remove the barriers which are retarding the normal development of Detroit's children.

Reveille at 7 a. m. is sounded by Capt. N. M. Kraemer. The children scramble into their clothes and within 10 minutes are clustered about the foot of the flag-pole for the orders of the day. Capt. M. A. Wiesenhoefer then puts them through their Army setting-up exercises which are followed by a hike. Next comes the tooth brush drill, and by that time all are equal to the dairy breakfast which is spread before them. Plates are filled again and again for nothing in the eating line is denied the youngsters.

There are two recreation periods of two hours each in the morning and afternoon which are in charge of Miss Catherine Shantz, Miss Harriet McClellan, Miss Palmer Magerman, and Miss Lila Richmond. Stories and games are the customary features and these are supplemented with a dip in the swimming pool.

The health of the children has been entrusted to the care of two nurses, Miss Ruth Oakes and Miss Ada Heel of the department of health.

The Vorasi family which number 10 is represented at Camp Forest Hill by three of its members. They are Michael, 12 years old, Marie, 11, and Grace, 9. Judge Hulbert of Juvenile Court decided they needed the fresh air of the country and they were sent to camp at his recommendation.

Dorothy Medynsky and her little brood consisting of Anthony and Stanley are also at camp upon recommendation of Judge Hulbert. Anthony is the pet of the camp and is its youngest member. He is four years old.

Retreat at 7 p. m. proclaims the cessation of the day's activities and 100 tired little heads drop on as many little white cots long before "laps" is blown by Capt. Kraemer.

KILGOUR-DIETZ.

The home of Mrs. Dietz at 648½ Field Ave. Detroit, was the scene of a very pretty wedding Monday evening, when her youngest daughter, Amy J. was united in marriage to Clarence Delvie Kilgour of this place, by the Rev. P. Q. Keicher. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ada Dietz, and Richard Kilgour, brother of the groom acted as best man. The house was prettily decorated with cut flowers and oak boughs. After congratulations, ice cream and cake were served. The bride is a very talented and estimable young lady, and the groom is one of Northville's young business men, having been employed in Wm. Gorton's clothing store the past two years.

After a short wedding trip they will return to Northville and will reside in the Joe Miller house on Church St.

The best wishes of a host of friends go with them.

The Pioneer Inn at Walled Lake, which has recently been remodeled and improved by H. R. Thornberry who acquired the property sometime ago, is now open for business and the public is cordially invited to make it a gathering place. There will be dancing every Friday and Monday night.

CELEBRATED THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Capell celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home on South Center street in this village Tuesday and the gathering was attended by their three sons and a number of other relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Capell were married at Pennyan, N. Y., and have been residents of Northville for the past 22 years.

The day was delightfully spent in visiting and renewing memories of by-gone years, and at noon a bountiful dinner was served the merry company. Among those present to spend the day at the old home were Mr. and Mrs. Carleton W. Capell of Asheville, N. C., Mr. and Mrs. William E. Capell of Detroit and Arch P. Capell of Duluth, Minn., the three sons of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Ward and son and daughters of Ann Arbor, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coe and daughter of Walled Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Lang of Northville, Mrs. Lang and daughter of Ypsilanti, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Jensen and Mrs. Wool of Detroit and Mrs. Nelson Bogart of Northville.

Mr. and Mrs. George Capell received numerous useful and appropriate gifts and the hearty good wishes of all who were privileged to enjoy the happy occasion with them. Numerous friends and acquaintances will join The Record in extending congratulations and in wishing them many more pleasant years journey upon life's pathway.

At the dinner there was a quantity of silverware used that was presented to the grandparents of Mr. Capell at their fifth wedding anniversary in 1874.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING POORLY ATTENDED.

The Annual school meeting, held at the high school auditorium on Monday evening was attended by only thirteen patrons of the district, including four members of the board of education. Last year the attendance was fifty. The meeting was called to order by Moderator C. L. Dubuar and the minutes of the last annual meeting were read by Director C. A. Dolph, who also submitted his annual report, which will be found in today's paper.

There were two trustees to be elected to succeed C. L. Dubuar and Don P. Yerkes and the chairman appointed Mrs. W. H. Cattermole and T. B. Currlington and the ballot was read and resulted in the reelection of Messrs. Dubuar and Yerkes.

The matter of placing sanitary toilets in the small building was brought before the meeting by a number of the mothers of the district who had previously petitioned the board that this improvement be made. At the next meeting of the school board it is believed favorable action will be taken in the matter and the toilets installed before the opening of school in September. No further business appearing the meeting adjourned.

INDEPENDENTS WON GOOD GAME.

Patrons of clean base ball witnessed a good game on the local diamond Sunday afternoon, when the Myrtle Boosters' club of Detroit was defeated by the Northville Independents by a score of 5 to 3. The game throughout was interesting and well played, the teams being pretty evenly matched. Errors by the Boosters gave the Independents a slight lead and they were able to maintain that advantage to the close of the game. Northville's battery did good work and was well supported. The features of the game were the playing of Vallance Hillwell and A. Jaska. Umpires were Dope and W. Hicks.

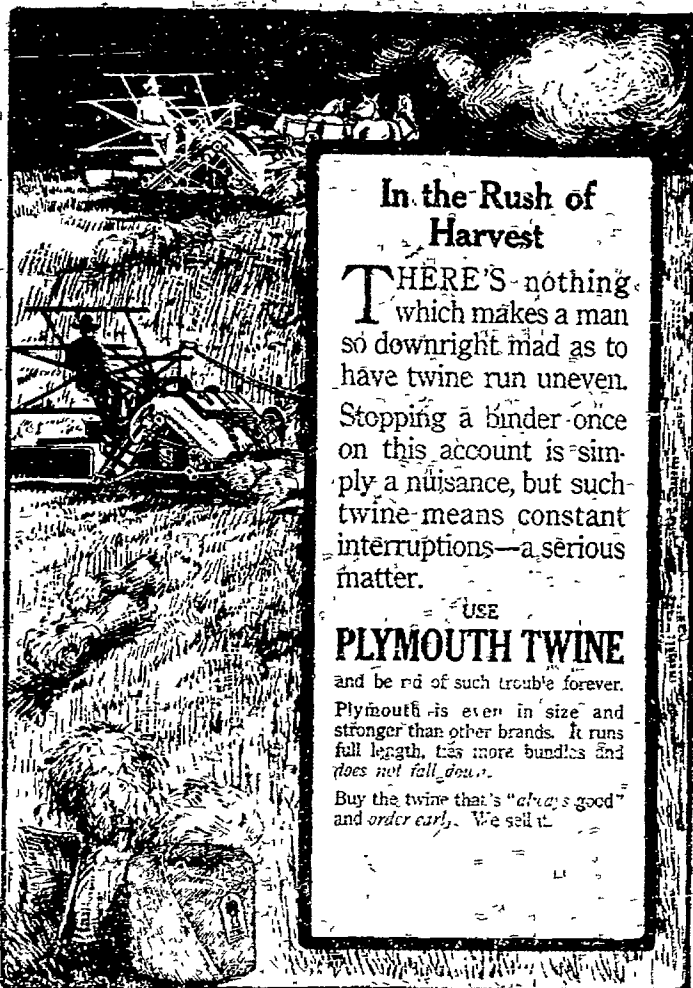

On next Sunday afternoon the Independents will play the strong C. A. Staehling team of Detroit.

MARRIED IN DETROIT.

Milo VanValkenburg of this village was united in marriage to Miss Hazel Hosford of Detroit last Saturday night, the ceremony being performed at the home of the bride's brother at Klammerley Court, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Emory VanValkenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Ray VanValkenburg and Mr. and Mrs. Roy VanValkenburg were present at the wedding.

Many friends and acquaintances in Northville will wish the happy groom much joy and happiness.

Mrs. L. W. Simmons spent the week of the 4th with Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Liddell, in Detroit.

Aristocrats Among Sweaters

NECESSITY—that humble and useful mother of inventions—brought forth some years ago after her kind the humble and useful sweater, and its early intention and seeming design was simply to be comfortable. Man kind adopted it and has required nothing further than comfort from it and these years women adopted it and have led it a merry chase into the land of fancy and changing styles. She requires that it be novel, varied, chic, first, and somewhat useful after yard, and it is far from humble, plain now. There are in fact so many diversified kinds of sweaters that they furnish for a calendar of the year.

July presents us with such delightful affairs in the smart company of sweaters as that a model shown in the picture. It appears to be of fine silk knitted so as to show a solid rib alternating with an open mesh. It is a slip-over model, among the newest of this popular variety, and is very nicely adapted to the figure with its definite fit about the shoulders and bust, and a dignified management of

IN GAY SWEATERS

Garments of Color Are Copies of the Winter Styles.

Cheery Shades in New Country Clothes Have Been Provided by the Manufacturers.

The brilliant colored sweaters seen in the shops are copies of those worn during the winter season at St. Moritz, notes a fashion authority. Some of the loveliest are of copper colored silk. In the holiday models narrow bands in a contrasting color are knitted at the waistline. A yellow angora has brown bands at the waist. Accompanying it is a yellow beret encircled with a brown ribbon knotted in a perky bow at the side. In sweaters of the snood type sleeves are elbow length, while those of Tuxedo cut usually have full length sleeves.

Collars are of various shapes and sizes. They may be large enough to form a scarf with long ends or so small that they are nothing more than a neckband. Or sweaters may be collarless. A change from collars and cuffs of the angora, which we have had for several seasons, to the extensive use of those crocheted of chenille, is seen in this summer's sweaters. The chenille while very becoming, retains the soft effect that made the use of angora so successful. A large, rolling collar of brown chenille is most effective on a midday sweater knitted of French blue wool. While the conservative navy blue and black sweaters are still smart and dissonant, a great many bright colored ones are worn. Dark sweaters are practical. It is true, and for some reason they became fashionable; but after all there is nothing like a cheery color in country clothes. There are so many ravishing hues that custom dealers in wearing on the streets of the city that those who have a love of color should revel in it wherever possible. In the imported cashmere sweaters and angoras, the makers of these comfortable coats have combined two or three bright hues in a single garment. French blue is combined with dull old bright yellow with lavender and so on through an endless number of tints.

Light sweaters have taken the place of Scotland wool for a lightweight garment. They are thinner, and at the same time give considerable warmth, which makes them especially desirable for tennis. In exceedingly bright colors they come in the urticaria style with the sash tying in the back, the Tuxedo and the midday.

There is quite a family of scarfs. Lightweight cashmere, the colors of which are quite gay, is the most popular material. One reason for this popularity is that although very light in weight it is warmer than silk.

Hat and Purse Match.
The hat and the purse often match in color.

CONTRAST IN SPORT SUITS

Widest Possible Color and Fabric Range Appears in Development of Outfits.

The smartest and most approved sport suit for summer wear consists of contrasting skirt and jacket. The widest possible color and fabric range appears in the development of these suits, velours, duvetyne and angora in high colors being used as material for coat or jacket, with skirt of plaid or striped material in blending or widely contrasting colors. Black velvet jackets are worn with skirts of all kinds.

The slip-over jacket is featured considerably, but it is not really as comfortable a garment as the one that buttons at the front or side. The slip-over jacket has the same disadvantages as the slip-over sweater. A woman must remove her hat and generally disarrange her hair to get the slip-over coat or sweater off and, as every woman knows, warm weather makes the wearing of a coat for an extended period rather uncertain.

Both plaided and striped effects are frequently arrived at through the use of stitching. It is possible to make a very handsome sport suit that appears to be of two fabrics by stitching the material for the skirt, collar, cuffs and perhaps belt, pocket flaps and scarf in stripes or checks with heavy silk or wool in contrasting color.

Heavy cottons and lueens are also used for summer sport suits. A black and white cotton recently seen had trimming of many bandings of white braid, while a heavy gray linen had the coat trimmed with white pique.

THE DAINTY RUFFLED BLOUSE

Ruffles to the very ears make this imported blouse one of most bizarre effects. It is of finest handkerchief linen with every stitch made by hand. It will delight the woman who loves daintiness.

LATITUDE IN SLEEVE STYLES

Fashion Permits of the Long, Short, Medium, Tight or Leg of Mutton Varieties.

So far as sleeves of indoor frocks are concerned, you may do exactly as you like; they may be short, medium length, or quite long; and they may be tight or leg of mutton. This is a most convenient season, everything seems to be fashionable. On all sides we see the tubie girl and the pouter, girl working arm in arm, and the squire may be said of the girl with bare midriff, and the ope of the demure long sleeve.

Chemise and tulle dresses are to continue; in fact, the apocryphs of fashion are in mood complaisant; they fully recognize the fact that times are hard and that we are obliged to make the best of things. And so we are happily given a good deal of license in sartorial matters and are to continue to enjoy it.

Some of the new dance-hall frocks are delicious, and really most of them are formed on straight outlines, though a barely effect at the sides is introduced with the aid of wide ribbons, arranged in loops and ends, or waterfalls of chiffon and lace. No doubt about it, the tone's outline is still with us, and it is likely to remain. It is not the long, plain tube of yesterday, but its more ornate sister, who goes in for being fluffy, and who has a weakness for full-blown.

SAY LOW WAISTS ARE COMING

Rumors of Fall Styles Herald Approach of New Style Garment—Two Fabrics Combined.

Faint rumors of fall styles herald the approach of a low waistline but the models so far shown justify the low waistline claim only because two fabrics are combined, one being used for the skirt and the other for the upper part of the dress. The dividing line between the two is at the hips rather than at the waistline proper and the dresses are really held in at the normal waistline by narrow belts, usually made of material matching the skirt.

Fashion changes for years have not been radical and the woman who gives intelligent thought to the question of her clothes is never disturbed by style bulletins heralding this, that and the other that is new. She may feel reasonably certain that when the garments actually put in their appearance they will be close of kin to the ones of the season immediately preceding.

FASHIONS IN BRIEF

Knife plaiting is being accorded a great deal of favor.

Striped skirts are now active rivals of the big gay plaids.

Parasol materials are silk, net, lace and cretonne, as well as linen and fur.

Cretonne is being featured as an attractive trimming by some of the smart designers.

The fine dotted veil is the most popular just now and shows gray and brown as the newest colors.

The short sleeve, with long glove wrinkled so as to cover the hand only, is emphasized as an approved style.

The camisole skirt is the latest addition to a smart woman's wardrobe. It is a plaited model, hung from a loose-vested blouse which matches the skirt.

One of the newest and smartest trimming touches used on taffeta frocks consists of bandings of narrow straw braid in vividly contrasting color. It is not a stiff hat braid; but something very soft, and it is often applied in odd-shaped motifs as well as in straight band effect.

The Size of a Baby's Back

The remnants of flannel and woolen goods you find in an old scrapbox are so small you think there is no use for them. Did you ever notice how small is a baby's back? Babies in the near East perished of the cold last winter because they hadn't a piece of cloth to cover them. Add the largest and smallest of pieces of cloth to your bundle to the clothing you send to your East headquarters, a use will be found for the "least" scrap.

COMMUNITY FAIRS OF GREAT VALUE

Washington Club Girls Show Public How to Can Vegetables That Will Keep.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Community fairs of particular educational value were held last fall in six centers in Spokane, Wash. Many hundreds of people saw a comprehensive exposition of the different phases of food preservation which had been demonstrated to the club girls and women by the home demonstration agent. The points about which women had seemed to need the most help were especially emphasized.

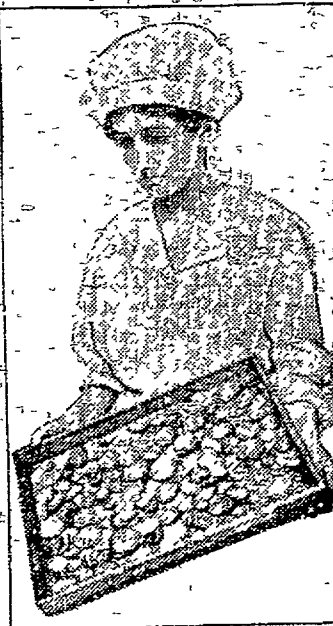

At the different centers girls competent to give demonstrations canned fruit and vegetables, showed how to make a pectin test, and gave directions for drying and brining. Other groups demonstrated the uses of different types of containers and how to avoid or overcome difficulties which might arise with them.

Each Fair Different

Each fair was different in character. At one center the commercial side of canning was emphasized. The club girls there were finishing a large order given them by the county for the tuberculosis hospital. With a small order the preceding year the club members had provided they could turn out a superior product. In 1910 they were given the entire order. One thousand cans of beans, 600 gallons of peaches, and 125 gallons each of apricots, berries and tomatoes were put up by the club girls for the county hospital. Six hundred gallons of tomatoes were wanted, but the entire order could not be filled as school opened and the school kitchens used for the canning centers were needed.

Fairs Proved Interesting

The fairs proved effective in interesting the public in the club work for women and girls which is supervised by the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges.

A Tray of Dried Vegetables, Sliced—Plan to Dry and Can All Garden Surplus.

Several groups of representative women and men attended each of the fairs to inspect the quality of the work, listen to the demonstrators and inquire as to the effect on community life.

TRAPS HELP REDUCE PESTIFEROUS FLIES

Best Plan Is to Completely Destroy Breeding Places.

Bulletin Issued by Department of Agriculture Gives Full Directions for Making and Operation of Various Devices.

As a supplementary means of controlling flies, traps are of much value. To obtain freedom from the pests the best method is either to dispose completely of their breeding places or to treat these places with chemicals. Traps will help capture the flies that have escaped from destruction in other ways.

Fly trapping should begin early in the spring to be most effective. Although comparatively few will be caught then, their destruction means the prevention of the development of millions of flies by midsummer.

The same general principle is involved in nearly all fly traps although they may appear quite different. The flies are attracted into a cage through a passage, the entrance of which is large and the exit small, so there is little chance of the flies, once in, finding their way out again. One kind is a window trap which catches the flies as they endeavor to leave or enter a building. The garbage can trap catches those that have entered garbage cans. The manure box trap retains the flies which are bred from infested manure put into a box. A bulletin issued by the United States department of agriculture for free distribution gives full directions for making and operating a number of kinds of fly traps.

The question of selecting the best bait for flies is an important one. It should be remembered that it is usually the fermentation which renders the material attractive to these insects, and that baits are most attractive during their most active period of fermentation. For the house fly, experiments indicate that a mixture of cheap cane molasses, if mixed with three parts of water, the attractiveness becomes marked the second or third day.

Probably the best poison bait for house flies is formaldehyde in milk, used at the rate of about two teaspoonsful of formaldehyde to a pint of a mixture of equal parts of milk and water. This is placed in places frequented by flies. A piece of bread or a sponge adds to the effectiveness. As formaldehyde is poison, this bait must be kept away from young children.

CAN OR DRY FARM PRODUCTS

Fruits and Vegetables Can Be Gathered and Treated When at Proper Stage of Ripeness.

It is particularly desirable to can or dry the fruits and vegetables raised on the farm, as the raw products can be gathered and treated when absolutely fresh and at just the proper stage of ripeness and tenderness for best results, says the United States department of agriculture.

The average farm family probably cans annually more than 150 quarts of fruits and vegetables, the greater part of which is fruit. Canning clubs have been instrumental in stimulating interest in canning on the farm. The drying of fruit and vegetables, an old farm art until recently on the decline, has been revived quite generally within the past two years. This process offers a good means of preserving perishables without entailing expense for containers, as in canning.

MAKING MUTTON-TOMATO PIE

Excellent Method for Use of Cold Meat Is Given by Department of Agriculture.

An excellent way to use cold mutton is to bake it with tomatoes, using alternate layers of tomato and meat. A tomato sauce may be used or the following method may be employed:

Place in the baking dish a layer of fresh tomatoes or of cooked tomatoes which have been either drained or reduced in volume by boiling. In the dish place a layer of meat dredged with flour, salt and pepper and add small bits of butter. Continue the layers until the casserole is full, arranging to have a layer of buttered bread crumbs or cracker crumbs as a cover. Bake until the crumbs are brown. In following this method use tomato, butter, and flour in the correct portions for tomato sauce—two level tablespoonsful each of butter and flour for each cupful of tomatoes.

Household Questions

Glass baking dishes are a constant joy.

A "breakfast alcove" is handy in the kitchen.

Canvas gloves are excellent to use when dusting.

Add a cupful of jam to a cottage pudding mixture. Omit other sweetening.

When making coffee sprinkle a little salt on the coffee before pouring on boiling water, and the flavor will be wonderfully improved. Always see that the pot is warmed before making coffee.

Ribbons Inspire Accessories

WHEN the young woman's fancy isn't turned to thoughts of love at most certainly be occupied with thoughts of sports apparel for mid-summer. It doesn't seem possible that there can be time left for anything else in minds that succeed in thinking up so many sporty clothes. Everything from hats to shoes is permeated with this flavor of out-door pastimes.

Gifted and ingenious designers are taking advantage of their ribbon opportunities and converting lovely ribbons into smart soft hats for sports wear. This is not a new venture for the ribbon hat has proved so practical for sports and also for between-seasons wear that it is here to stay. A feature of these hats that makes them strong with the tourist is that many of them are collapsible and may be carried in a neat case or small bag. Another merit that everyone likes is their flexibility. Brims may be turned up or down and drawn into lines that are most becoming to the wearer. Faltie and satin ribbons are most popular for hat making.

A group of these sports hats shown in the picture reveals how successfully ribbons have played their part in this type of headwear and the most natural method the world was taken by the designer who made bags and scarf to match. In the set at the top, bright green tricolette and fallie ribbon make a striking and wide scarf, the ribbon being shown in a plaid about the neck of the scarf and across the front of the hat.

Very little wider than the ribbon shirred over it. Just below at the right, there is a hat made of white fallie ribbon with a wide edge and a bag to match in which the ribbon covers a foundation of white satin. The mounting is silver metal and the handles are of the ribbon. At the left there is a brilliant set made of white satin ribbon having black embroidered figures over it. This hat is made over a light frame and is a dignified example of sports styles. The ribbon is ingeniously managed in the bag, being folded to bring the embroidered figures to the center.

Leather Belts

New leather belts are interesting. To begin with, they are most of them quite narrow, and as a second thing, they are worn often at a point above or below the waistline of the coat or frock they go with. One is a narrow belt of glazed dark blue leather, with a narrow binding of black on each side. This part of the belt reaches around the waist. Then there are two ends of the belt of braided thongs of the leather which are loosely tied and hang down at the side, front or back.

Figured foulard blouses are being shown for summer and are attractive.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIANS MISLED BY LENINE

Claim That Bolshevik Government Establishes Equality Palpably False—Despotic Power Put in Officeholders' Hands.

Article XXII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

The first great hypocrisy of the bolshevik government was its pretense at establishing equality. Caste and class reminded the Russians of suffering. The soviet government, through the people's commissars, issued the following decree:

"All designations, such as merchant, nobleman, burgher, peasant, titles, such as prince, count, etc., and distinctions of civil ranks, privy, state and other counselors, are abolished, and one designation is established for all the population of Russia—Citizen of the Russian Republic."

Article 4 of the constitution makes bare the insincerity of the decree. It does more. It gives evidence of the great felony committed against the freedom of the Russian people by Lenin.

These three classes shall have the right to hold office and to vote. They are made citizens of Russia by the constitution:

First, All Russians that are eighteen years of age and who have acquired the means of living through labor that is productive and useful to society, and also persons engaged in house-keeping for the former.

Second, Soldiers of the army and navy.

Third, Members of the former two classes, when incapacitated.

But the constitution goes further; it tells who shall not hold office and shall not vote:

First, Persons who employ hired labor in order to obtain profit.

Second, Persons who have an income, such as interest in capital, rents, receipts from property, etc.

Third, Private merchants, trade and commercial brokers.

Fourth, Monks and clergy of all denominations.

Fifth, Employees and agents of the former police, the gendarmery, and the czar's secret service, also members of the former reigning dynasty.

Sixth, The demented or mentally deficient.

Seventh, Persons who have been deprived by a verdict of their rights of citizenship, because of selfishness, or dishonorable offenses, for the period fixed by the sentence.

Makes Officeholders Despots.

Section 7 affords great opportunity for construction: the soviets are given power to disincorporate citizens, because of "selfishness or dishonorable offenses." Who is to say what shall constitute these offenses? The counts? No. The people? No. The political officeholders? Yes. When we remember that the first thing that the bolsheviks did when they came into power was to drive from the soviets every one who disagreed with the bolshevik plan of communism, at once and by force, it is easy to understand the terrible power given in this phrase and the tyrannical use that may be made of it. Every difference of opinion with their methods or plans would be a selfish and dishonorable offense in the eyes of the bolshevik rulers, and the fortitude of the dissenter could be stripped of his citizenship, and, no doubt, would be. This section writes the death warrant of freedom of opinion; it gives to the soviets a bluegenie with which to beat a man out of citizenship who ventures an opinion at variance with the imposed order. It makes the citizen the servant, the officeholder the master; it is government upside down.

In a note to Section 64 of Article 4 of the constitution, we learn the local soviets may, with the consent of the people's commissars, "lower the age qualification for voters."

What a splendid opportunity this joker in the constitution offers for political jockeying. If the central power discovers it is about to lose control of a village or rural soviet, it has the power to nip the uprising in the bud. The people's commissars can arrange with the minority in the soviet in question to reduce the age limit and give the vote to young boys and girls. When it is remembered that the constitution directs the people's commissars of education to introduce in all schools and educational institutions of Russia the study and explanation and justification of the bolshevik constitution, it is not hard to understand that young people into whose minds have been driven and drilled a reverence for bolshevism and its methods, could be expected to vote for and support the bolshevik program.

Best Citizens Disfranchised.

Three groups of people classified by their occupations are permitted citizenship. They are the members of the army and navy, the working men and women, and the peasants who do not hire labor. Every one else is made an outcast. The man who has saved a little money, earned in the sweat of his face and invested it is not permitted to become a citizen; the man who has a little shop—it may represent the sacrifices and savings of his whole life—comes under the ban, he is unfit for free citizenship in bolshevik Russia. The farmer who hires help, and almost every farmer is compelled to employ help in the harvest time, is a criminal exploiter and he is denied the right to vote or hold an office.

The man who devotes his life to religion, who comforts the poor, visits the sick, the servant of God, is driven from the political house; he is denied the right to vote. It is dangerous to give the thrifty, the industrious, the voter. The fact that they were born in Russia, that their parents and grandparents were natives to the soil for centuries, means nothing. These disfranchised ones speak the Russian language; it is their only tongue. Their blood has had a part in Russian suffering. The bolshevik constitution exiles them. They are natives without a country, and why? Because by honesty and industry they have saved a little; because they have tried to get on. Lenin says such people are filled with dangerous ambition; they are climbing the ladder of capitalism; they are dangerous to the proletariat.

The soldier is not an employer of labor; he cannot be; he is given a vote. The sailor is not an employer of labor; he cannot be; he is given a vote.

The constitutional provision defining citizenship, puts a premium on idleness, a penalty on industry; it encourages waste; it punishes economy; it makes the successful an outcast; it makes of the better-to-do a citizen; frugality, thrift and industry are crimes; those who possess these qualities are branded as undesirable; they are denied citizenship.

No Possible Justification.

Lenin tries to justify all of this by saying that in the transition from capitalism to socialism it is necessary to rule with an iron hand. Capitalism must be destroyed. The system must be uprooted. Even so, what right has Lenin, without the consent of the majority, to take citizenship from native Russians? What is his excuse for it? Where is the force of his argument? Even admitting, for the sake of argument, that communism, bolshevism, is a panacea for all the ills of the human race, what right has Lenin and his minority to force it on the people of Russia? Conceding his creed is for the common good, is it not his first duty to make the people see and understand its virtues, and then, by and with the majority consent, put the creed to the test? To assert that his program is economic does not change the fact that his methods are not democratic. The Lenin system of disfranchising the people is bound to demoralize them.

How can a people be free without learning self-reliance, without trying self-government? Proclaiming people free does not make them free. Freedom is action. It is thinking. It is the ability to govern one's self. It comes from experience and exercise in governing one's self. The definition of freedom is self-determination, and this word "self" is an important part of the definition. Admitting for the moment that Lenin is trying to govern the people for their benefit, although he is not giving them a thinking part in the government, does it not follow that his methods incapacitate the people for self-government? How can a child learn to walk except by trying, and even though the child stumbles and falls, is bruised and hurt, these experiences are part of the education in walking.

Real Test of Freedom.

The right to vote is the test of freedom. Rob a free man of his voting right and you make of him something less than a free man. It does not matter whether you treat him well or not, if you rule him without giving him a say in his own government, you destroy his independence. Suppose the constitution of a debating society, a lodge, a farmer's grange, a labor union, declared that some members could hold office and vote, while others were not eligible for office and could not vote. What would be the position in the body of those who were denied all right of participation in its affairs? They would be compelled to obey the rules, do the bidding, and bow to the wish of those who had the right to vote. What would be the effect upon the voteless ones? They would be demoralized; they would become nonentities. Those possessing the voting power would grow arrogant, arbitrary and autocratic. The war of the ages, the struggle of all history, has been the fight of men for equality in government. The right to vote is the test.

World in Danger From Plague.

Danger from plague-infected ports in the Mediterranean is pointed out by Doctor Beaumetz of the Pasteur Institute, who says that reports show a recurrence of the plague, especially in Syria, Saloniki, Alexandria and Constantinople, where energetic measures are being taken, especially for the protection of allied troops. Doctor Beaumetz expresses the opinion that the plague will not become general, but urges strict sanitary measures at French ports.

"Same Insolent Germany"

At the annual public meeting of the French Academy of Science President Guignard told of the part played by science in the victory of the Allies, and explained the inventions produced to oppose the devices used by the enemy.

M. Guignard declared that Germany today was the same as before, with the same insolent scorn for promises made and the same hope for an opportune return of her strength.

The Treacherous Ford

By WILLIAM H. GREENE

(Copyright)

Two men in high boots and hunting costumes, each with a rifle upon his shoulder, had just waded across Yellow Creek, at a point where there were rocks to aid them, and a firm, sandy bottom, with no slippery mud.

One slightly in advance of the other, they came upon what appeared to be a narrow, but unusually hard, smooth beach.

Suddenly the one in front stumbled slightly and stopped, his feet spread apart in a peculiar attitude.

"Look out," he cried.

"What's the matter?" asked the other, stepping up to his side.

He needed no reply to this question, however. He also slipped in the same queer fashion.

"See if you can step back," said the younger of the two men.

The other made a determined effort to lift his foot, and then the other, but only succeeded in sinking them both deeper into the treacherous, harmless-looking sand.

"I can't lift either foot," he panted. "See what you can do."

The younger man made an equally futile attempt. His feet seemed as if held in a vise, soft and yielding, but stronger than steel.

"It's no use," he said. "And then, with a sudden access of terror: 'Look! It's almost up to my knees—the sickly, slimy stuff!'"

His lips twitched and drops of perspiration stood upon his forehead.

"It's up to my knees," said the other. "It's something pulling at my feet!" His voice rose almost to a shriek. "Let me go! I—Oh—"

The younger man had straightened himself up, and as he watched his companion the look of terror on his own face changed, and some of his color returned. His lips ceased to tremble, and a determined look came into his eyes. Grasping the other by the arm, and shaking him roughly, he said:

"Stop that! Stop it, I say. We mustn't lose our nerve now. We've got to think quickly. Every second we stand here we're sinking deeper. It's up to us. This is no time to get scared."

"That's right," agreed the older man, controlling himself with an evident effort. "Good!" he called, passing his hand across his face. "I nearly went off my trolley for a minute."

"Don't give up," encouraged the other. "There ought to be some way out of this."

The higher his face was a puffed, protruding form, as if he refused to believe that his life was about to be cut off in this sudden, cruel fashion.

"Look here!" he exclaimed after a moment's thought. "Were a couple of fools these rifles are weighting us down!"

They both tossed their weapons, and all other articles of any weight, including their coats and hats, up on the bank in front of them—the good, solid, honest ground, so lately ten feet away.

From the grass-covered bank their gaze traveled on to the field, and then to the woods and hills beyond. Hills which they had wandered over and explored together as boys, and to which they had returned every autumn for several years, to hunt and fish, as they had been doing that day.

From the shadow of the nearer hills rose columns of blue smoke, indicating the location of the little village of Wild Rose, toward which they had been returning.

Something must be done. Attract the slippers, cooing sand had reached their knees and was gradually crawling higher and higher.

"Good heavens, isn't there something we can do?" said the shorter man.

"Maybe you could lift me out," said his younger companion. "You are very strong. If I could get over to the bank I could reach out one of the guns for you to take hold of and drag you out."

Without a word the shorter man leaped over and grasped the other about the legs, straining every muscle until his face turned purple with the effort and the veins stood out on his forehead, until it seemed as if they must burst.

He succeeded only in burying his own feet a little deeper in the merciless sand.

"No use," he admitted as he straightened up, his chest heaving like a bellows. "I can't budge you."

Then his face, which had been contorted with fear, assumed a crafty look. He looked at his companion with calculating eyes.

"I've got an idea that might save one of us," he said. "There's no use in both of us going under, if one can be saved, is there?"

His face flushed, and he looked away as he made the suggestion.

"No, I suppose not," answered the boy.

"Well, then," the other continued, still looking away, "this is the idea: If one of us throws himself forward, face down on the beach here, the other could probably climb over him and get to the bank."

"It's a chance, and the one who acts as the human bridge is a goner sure. But we'll both go down in a few minutes, and another like rats, if we don't try something."

"I see," said the younger man, a little fonder. "But who—We're friends, of course, and have been for years, and all that, but it's a good deal of a sacrifice."

"I'm not asking you to be a hero," said the other nastily. "We'll toss a coin for it. And don't let's do any more arguing. We're wasting valuable time."

"All right," agreed the young fellow. "I'm game, if you think it's the only way for one of us to be saved."

"Have you any better idea to offer?"

"No."

"Then come on."

They both felt in their pockets for coins.

"I was always pretty lucky at any kind of gambling," muttered the older man.

He had not meant to speak this thought aloud. There was no more to be said, and each drew a coin from his pocket, tossed it into the air, and caught it between closed hands.

"Heads," said the younger man calmly.

His eyes bulging with excitement, the other opened his trembling hands and looked. His coin had also fallen with the date side upward. His already pale face turned the color of chalk.

"I win," shouted the boy, and then flushed, as if ashamed of his evident gladness.

"Yes, you win," said his companion, dropping his coin carelessly into the sand. Again they eyed each other, as if they were strangers, instead of lifelong friends.

"All right," said the older of the two suddenly. "I'll make good, but I've got just one favor to ask of you before I take the plunge. You'll grant me just one favor, won't you, old man?"

"Sure—certainly," said the boy, feeling very cowardly and ashamed. "Anything you ask, of course."

"All right. I just want you to take a message to Violet Wellwood for me. I haven't time to write it. We're got to hurry. But, you see, last night she promised to marry me."

"It's pretty hard to go now, just when life was beginning to be really worth while. Just when I was beginning to know real happiness. You understand, don't you, old man?"

If the younger fellow's face had been haggard and frightened before, it was nothing to the dull, hurt, hopeless look which now came into his eyes. He stared at his friend and stupidly, as if he was not sure he had heard correctly.

"You say she—Violet Wellwood—promised to marry you?" he asked.

"Yes. I don't know exactly how to tell you that at all before, for I knew you were fond of her, too. But now—Well, you'll have a clear field now."

"You're not joking, are you?"

"Joking?" cried the older man, as if shocked at the idea. "This is a time for jokes? Oh, that a subject to be joked at?"

"No. Of course not."

"Well, then, please go and see Violet at once, as soon as you get back to town, and bring the news gently to her. Tell her I—"

"Stop!" cried the boy, his face twisted with the hurt of it. "Stop! I don't want to tell her I'm to break the news gently to her, am I? To tell her the laughable white, 'Man, do you suppose I want to live now?'"

He did not see the other's empty and quickly hidden.

"So," he went on, "I am to tell her that the man she loves—"

"The man she loves?" The boy told her she loved him last night?"

"Of course," said the other.

"Well, then, she can have you," he cried hoarsely. "Now listen. You'll get a message to her from me. Understand? Tell her—"

He paused, and the water died out of his face, leaving only the hopeless misery.

"Oh, never mind," he said, and before his companion could have moved to prevent him, he had entertained any such intention, the boy threw himself forward and lay flat on his face in the quicksand.

The older man gave himself no time to think of what he had done, but managed, with some difficulty, to take the slender, prostrate form of his friend as a bridge, upon which he found footing.

Once his feet were pried out of the clinging sand he found little difficulty in leaping to the solid bank from the boy's shoulders.

Having at last reached safety, he stood for a moment, as if dazed. Then, as a full realization of his own cowardice came over him, he turned swiftly and began to make frantic efforts to reach the prostrate form of the other.

Already the oozing sand had almost covered the boy, the man at last managed to get a grip on the collar of the boy's flannel shirt. But quicksand does not give up its prey easily.

He only succeeded in rearing the boy's collar loose from his throat, falling back upon the grass when the cloth gave way. When he leaped forward again, the soft, yellow beach was closely smoothed over the sinking form of the boy who had been his friend.

Suddenly he heard hoof-beats of a horse upon the soft turf behind him, and, turning quickly, he saw a young girl galloping toward him.

She rode astride, and bareheaded, her thick, brown hair flying in the breeze.

Pulling her mount up almost beside the man, she smiled down at him.

"Hello, Jim!" she said. "Where's Fred?"

"Violet!" he began. "Miss Wellwood—"

But he could get no further, and he could not look at her.

Swallowing hard, he made several attempts to speak, and then, cringing like a dog before her steady, astonished gaze, he turned and fled precipitately across the field.

FOR BEAUTIFICATION OF ROAD

Praiseworthy Idea Is That of Planting Trees in Streets of the Various Cities.

New comes Charles Lathrop, Pack, president of the American Forestry association, who urges the beautification of roads. Mr. Pack suggests that we cease building monuments for at least ten years, until the proper perspective can be given the situation, and that all the roads of the country, old and new, be planted in honor of the men and women who entered war work. He also suggests that counties work out plans for the placing of groves, so that we may in time have a national extended memorial.

The suggestion has been taken up in many parts of the country. A unique instance is the work of the people of Minneapolis, who are planning as far ahead as 1951. Trees are being planted there for 50 years hence, the American elm, of the same type, being used. A fund of $50,000 has been set aside for the care of these trees.

Mr. C. M. Loring is the chief of the park system of Minneapolis, and this is his contribution to the memorial. The trees will be planted 60 feet apart.

Other cities are also alive to what can be done in this work. Washington plans to have a driveway between Potomac and Rock Creek parks, and memorial tree planting is under discussion there. In Cincinnati a boulevard starting in the downtown section may be improved in this manner.

ATTRACTION MAIL BOX

That his roadside mail box might harmonize with the stucco ranch house, this little man roved base, polished and lustrous with care. The roof of the box is painted green, from Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Concerning the Garden.

The delights of a part don't need emphasizing, but some of the difficult things to do (the best is to find the right place in which to make the garden). It should be in a locality where the sun will shine on it for at least five hours each back day. It should not be where the soil is so thin and the trees so near the surface that the garden will burn out during the summer. It should not be under or near large trees, the trees will not only keep the sun off but will draw all the moisture and plant food from the soil. Nor must the garden be in a spot that gets flooded.

Co-ordination of Work.

Through the association of commerce the city of Milwaukee is planning to centralize all of the city's activities among the foreign born. The plan calls for a general committee, whose representatives are drawn from the various civic, social and patriotic bodies and for an executive committee of five members to be appointed from the general committee. The co-operation of a member from each of these bodies will obtain all duplication of work and will mean a large increase in the ground covered in the coming year.

Her Heartlessness.

"I hear that Gabe Gawkey is figuring on getting a divorce from his wife," said a neighbor. "What's the matter with her, anyhow?"

"She's plumb heartless," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, Ark. "He talked about taking some spring medicine and she up and told him that the best kind to suit his case was a buck-saw and ax. That there infernal lady can't get no more feelings than a snapping turtle."—Kansas City Times.

Community's Benefactor.

The man who owns an attractive home, large or small, is a real benefactor to the community. He is particularly fortunate if he can build the house himself. Then he can say with satisfaction, "When I am gone at least I shall have left a monument in the shape of this house. The town is more attractive than it would have been if I had not built my home here."

When Love Grew Cold.

My most embarrassing moment happened when I was twelve years old. I was, in love. It was on a winter morning, and my mother was sending me to the store, when the boy I loved passed by. I went out of the house as fast as I could, but I slipped and fell down the stairs. It was so funny he laughed out loud at me. I never looked at that boy again. Exchange

Lost 65 Pounds in Weight and Had to Give Up Work. Has Been Well Since Using Doan's

"Being exposed to extreme heat when working as an engineer, and then going outside to cool off, caused my kidney trouble," says Karl Goering, 8513 N. Ordway St., Philadelphia, Pa. "In cold weather, and when it was damp, my joints and muscles would swell and ache, and often my limbs were so badly affected it was only with great misery I was able to get around. For a week I was laid up in bed, hardly able to move hand or foot."

"After trouble was from irregular and painful passages of the kidney secretions. I became dull and weak and had to give up my work. Headaches and dizzy spells nearly blinded me and I went from 265 to 200 in weight. Nothing helped me and I felt I was doomed to suffer."

"At last I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills and began taking them. I soon got back my strength and weight and all the rheumatic pains and other kidney troubles left. I have remained cured."

"Can't Cut Off My Leg" Says Railroad Engineer

"I am a railroad engineer, about 20 years ago my leg was seriously injured in an accident out West. Upon my refusing to allow the doctor to amputate it I was told it would be impossible to heal the wound. I have tried all kinds of salves and had many doctors in the past 20 years, but to no avail. The Northville Record.
L. E. BROWN, Publisher.

An Independent Newspaper published every Friday morning at Northville, Michigan, and entered at the Northville post-office as Second-Class matter.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., JULY 16, 1920.

In announcing his decision in the appraisal made of the D. U. R. property, Dean Cooley, stated that he found a fair valuation far above the capital issued, whether in stock, bonds or notes. This find by such authority ought to open the eyes of the people of Detroit, that they made a very great blunder when they voted not to purchase the city lines at the price for which they were offered. Less public and more good common sense are needed to properly solve the street car problem. Over at Jackson the people are paying ten cent fare, single fare, and the increased earnings of the company in that city are being handed over to their employees in increased wages. By buying tickets you may have four rides for 30 cents, and no one is complaining about the new rates.

The Literary Digest suggests that the several candidates for president announced in advance of the November election the personal of their cabinets, and the advice is both timely and reasonable. For purely political reasons, however, we do not believe any of the candidates will make such an announcement. If a whole lot of fellows knew in advance that some one else was to receive the political plums their enthusiasm would very soon begin to wane, but by keeping them all on the anxious seat the several candidates will receive the enthusiastic support of a lot of fellows who hope they may be up near the pile counter when the "political pot-luck" is served.

It was a draw. Candidate Cox telegraphed the governor of Louisiana urging him to try and influence the legislature of that state to take favorable action regarding the suffrage amendment for the sake of helping the Democratic party, and Candidate Harding urged the governor of Vermont to take similar action in the granite state and for similar reasons. Both candidates were given to understand that the people of those two states were running their own affairs and that party politics could "go hang." This question ought not to have been made a political issue in any sense of the word.

Mayor Courson of Detroit was very anxious to have the people of the city speed millions for a street railway system but he is determined to protect the teachers of the city schools from receiving a bonus of $400 which the board of education had promised them for last year's services.

The boys ought to have manifested Bergman and Goldstein's ben ead date. There could tell the country a whole lot of things about right and wrong during the process of a campaign.

The Baptist Sunday school will have a picnic at Walley Lake next Monday, leaving the church at 10 a. m. All who wish to spend the day with us will be heartily welcome. Come and bring your basket full of good things if you can. Come anyway. Arrangements have been made for the use of the park and for boating and bathing facilities. Next Monday instead of Wednesday as announced last Sunday. The Farther Lights class of the Baptist Sunday school enjoyed a very pleasant evening at the home of Henrietta Williams last Tuesday evening. The attendance was unusually good. Plans were made to begin to make money with the painting of the church and parsonage in view, and it is hoped that with the cooperation of the Ladies Aid this much needed work will be done in the near future. Notwithstanding the scarcity of sugar, cakes and other refreshments were passed round in abundance. The next monthly meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Cora Bissell.

GARFIELD-CLARK.
Married at the home of the bride's parents at Hadley, Mich., on Wednesday, July 14th, Miss Ruth Clark to Truman Garfield of Northville. Mr. and Mrs. Garfield left the same evening for a wedding trip to Cleveland, O. Those attending the ceremony from this place, were the groom's brother, Avery Garfield, and two sisters, Mrs. Flora McLeod and Mrs. Myron Taylor, and a daughter. The bride is well known in Northville having been a teacher in the schools last year. The young couple expect to make their home in Hadley.

FORMER NORTHVILLE MAN KILLED.
William Stewart, a former resident of this village and a brother of A. T. Stewart, was killed in a wreck on the Wabash railway at Tilton, Ill., June 28th. Mr. Stewart was engineer and his train ran into some oil cars on the main track while his train was endeavoring to make up lost time. Realizing his danger, he called to his fireman to jump and then applied the emergency brakes and reversed his engine and jumped. He struck his head on the rails of an adjoining track and was unconscious when found. Mr. Stewart showed remarkable coolness and bravery and remained at his post until within thirty feet of the oil cars.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart resided at Peru, Indiana, and many old friends in Northville will extend sympathy to Mrs. Stewart in her bereavement.

HAD DELIGHTFUL OUTING.
A more delightful day could not have been chosen for an excursion that the weather man provided for the joint picnic excursion given by the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday schools of this village to Bob-Lo on Monday. Automobiles were provided to convey the excursionists to the boulevard dock, where the boat was taken for the island. At noon the well filled baskets furnished delightful spreads to the several groups who gathered about the tables on the spacious grounds. Games were enjoyed throughout the day, the merry-go-round proving the most popular diversion. The men enjoyed a game of bill and it was charged the day's pure was biased in his decision because of certain relationships.

The boat returned a merry crowd to the city about eight o'clock and after a delightful ride home they reached Northville soon after nine o'clock but happy lot, ready to go again next year.

STATE ISSUES FACTS ON SICK SOLDIERS.
There probably will be no definite plan adopted for the hospital and medical care and treatment of tubercular soldiers until an accurate and complete survey of the number of defective cases is obtained. This work will be carried out through the state health department, which already has taken over the clinical work of the present state and tuberculosis association.

There seems to be much prevailing opinion that the number of actual cases in Michigan is many times less than has been represented this opinion being based on partial investigation of the situation at this time.

At a meeting of former soldiers and members of the National Guard, together with the state military board, in an informal manner at Grayling on July 24 and 25, the offer of Governor Sleeper for the use of the Post hospital there for tubercular men may be incidentally discussed, but the main purpose of the gathering seems to be more in the interest of the future organization of the guard in Michigan.

"THE MAN WORTH WHILE"

R. A. Nichols Lectures at Chautauqua First Night

ROLAND A. NICHOLS

Roland A. Nichols is one of the few thought-provoking lecturers in the country today. After hearing his long, vital lecture, "The Man Worth While," you will realize fully what the term "thought-provoking" means. Here is a man with a running fire of eloquence and wit which is sure to please and make you think. What is the biggest problem of modern civilization? Do you know how heredity affects you and yours? Mr. Nichols asks and answers these and other questions in a manner which delights young men and women, while it brings sober thinking to every parent.

One hundred per cent. American, fearless, sincere—a sane, clear thinker—this sums up the attributes which have made Roland A. Nichols one of the foremost personalities on the platform. As the opening night attraction, this big man with his brilliant, inspiring story-lecture cannot be equalled.

A FAMILIAR SONG

Some incidents which surrounded the birth of the song "Marching Through Georgia."

It was in the summer of 1864, General Grant had been appointed by President Lincoln Lieutenant General Grant was made commander of all the Union armies. Instead of letting the opposing forces play after the fashion of playing fox and geese, while the portion of the army was busy the rest remaining idle. The plan let the Confederate forces be divided and sent here and there where they could be of greatest assistance to the different divisions of the Confederate armies. Grant issued two remarkable decrees. "Forward all along the Line," and another "We will fight it out on this line if it takes all Summer."

While Grant was commanding the army of the Potomac and tightening his coils around Lee's army, he sent Sherman, then commanding the army of the Cumberland, after General Johnston, the rebel general, who had acquired a reputation of making an attack, getting whipped and yet getting away in good order and sustaining comparatively small losses. By some blunder in the Confederate management Johnston was retired and Gen. Hood was put in command of that branch of the rebel forces. Gen. Hood was a reckless commander and in a short period of time Sherman and Thomas had scattered Hood's army in many directions.

Following up a fragment of Hood's army Sherman practically annihilated what remained in the south and he was in possession of the important railroad center, Atlanta. Instead of returning to receive congratulations from President Lincoln, he started out boldly with his sixty thousand men toward the southeast. The people of the north were wild with excitement and enthusiasm while the people in the south were terror stricken.

While the stirring events were being enacted in the open fields between Atlanta and the sea, there was a Union soldier who was held a prisoner in that notable pen called Libby Prison. The stories of Sherman's march that were heralded in the papers all over the country leaked into Libby Prison. There under the blue arches of the prison beneath the light of the moon and the twinkling of the stars the prisoner and yet soul-stirring words of the memorable song were composed. The words were spread through all the camps in the northern army and were very popular. They even reached Sherman's army. A Sherman's sixty thousand soldiers marched into Columbia the news that Sherman's army was in that town. The news of his escape from the prison was a tremendous and had a new with the hearts of refugees to the scene of the Sherman's march.

Shannon reached Sherman's army in the morning and the words were spread through all the camps in the northern army and were very popular. They even reached Sherman's army. A Sherman's sixty thousand soldiers marched into Columbia the news that Sherman's army was in that town. The news of his escape from the prison was a tremendous and had a new with the hearts of refugees to the scene of the Sherman's march.

What Would You Do Without Newspaper Advertisements?

What if there were no advertisements in any newspaper?

Lost and found articles might never be restored to their owners. Buying, selling and renting houses would be greatly delayed.

Merchants would be compelled to depend almost entirely upon those who passed by their stores for their trade.

Such a condition would set the hands of the clock of progress back two hundred years. It would limit trade. It would bring delays and annoyances and make purchasing risky and expensive.

This goes to show how important newspaper advertisements have become in our everyday affairs.

Read them fully and faithfully. It may mean many added advantages in your life and dollars in your pocketbook.

POPULAR TENOR SOLOIST -
HERE THE SECOND DAY.

AMBROSE WYRICK

It is with much pleasure that our Community Chautauqua management announces the engagement of Mr. Ambrose Wyrick, the well known concert tenor, whose wonderful voice has earned for him a large following of musical people. Mr. Wyrick is held in great favor by concert-goers. He has sung in most of the cities throughout the United States, while his record of success in England and Scotland was very unusual.

The audiences who hear this singer are always in complete sympathy with him, not only because of his pleasing voice, but because of his earnestness, of his enunciation, which enables every word to be heard. These unusual qualities are fully apparent in the numbers which he will sing on the second day of our Chautauqua. Mr. Wyrick appears on both the afternoon and evening program, singing his most delightful songs, some of which he has made records of for the Columbia Phonograph Company. Albert Heilman, the young and talented pianist, will assist Mr. Wyrick throughout his splendid recitals.

OUR CHAUTAUQUA HAS
WM. I. NOLAN THIRD DAY

No man in public life stands higher in the estimation of Chautauqua patrons than Hon. William I. Nolan. He does not rely upon his political renown to preserve him a place on the platform. On the contrary, he presents a lecture which needs no political props on which to lean. A fine personality is an effectual aid to the presentation of his vigorous address on "Americanism," entitled "We, the People." Mr. Nolan's lecture is brimming over with instruction, information and entertainment.

He is a constructive level headed, forceful business man who knows the problems of the country—our problems. We can well afford to spend an hour or so with William I. Nolan on the third day of our Community Chautauqua.

OPERATOR DISPLAYED FLUCK

Between 2 and 3 o'clock Sunday morning the telephone operator at Brighton was awakened by men's voices. The telephone office is located in the second story of the Brighton State bank building. When she came to the window, the men asked her to come down and unlock the door so they could come upstairs and do some phoning. The girl was very wary and surmising them to be robbers, called the officials. She was unsuccessful in arousing them by the telephone so she started the burglar alarm.

In the meantime the robbers had gone to the rear of the bank and were forcing in the windows.

Frightened by the alarm they fled, leaving their tools, acid, and dynamite on the ground. They drove out of town.

A HANDSOME NEW HOME.

C. R. Benton is putting the finishing touches on his new bungalow this week and the handsome new home has been rented by Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Heilrich, the former having been chosen superintendent of Northville schools for the coming year. The house is of stucco construction and is finished throughout in Georgia pine and is one of the most attractive homes in this section. There are a nice big living room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms and bath and a full basement with furnace and hot water heater. Running water is supplied to the kitchen and bath and a good sized cistern is in the basement. The woodwork throughout the house is handsomely finished and Mr. Benton is especially proud of that fact because he did much of the sanding and rubbing himself.

The house throughout has been admirably planned and it is a pity that Northville could not have had a hundred of such houses built last year. They could all have been sold or rented more this time.

BIG DOUBLE CIRCUS COMING THIS -WAY.

This locality has entertained many circuses, but never anything to compare with the gigantic double shows billed as Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined which will exhibit afternoon and evening at Detroit, Monday and Tuesday, August 2 and 3.

The merging of these mammoth institutions in one circus of colossal size, constitutes the amusement surprise of the century. Nothing to approach this gigantic, new circus has ever before toured America. It has been formed by merging the pick and the cream of all that was biggest and best in the two famous shows. It would be folly to attempt to enumerate its many wonders. Some idea of the enormous scale upon which features are presented may be had when it is stated that a quarter of a million pounds of elephants take part in a single act. In other words—six times as many of the big-eared giants than have ever before been seen in one main-tent exhibition. All else to be seen is in proportion. The arena stars embrace all the world's foremost circus performers. There are three hours of novelties and big sensational acts. The menagerie is far and away the most colossal ever traveled. For instance—a herd of eight giraffes are exhibited in place of the two or three shown in the past. The great tournament which opens the main-tent program, is the most magnificent thing in pageantry yet produced in America. Hundreds upon hundreds of gorgeously costumed characters and beautiful horses take part in it. The morning great parade is the longest and most brilliant ever given anywhere, and offers something entirely new and novel in professional display. It is a stupendous double-circus that baffles description.

SPRAGUE IS GIVEN LIFE PRISON TERM.

Arthur Sprague, convicted of the murder of his wife, Mrs. Jennie Sprague, was Monday afternoon sentenced by Judge Covert to life imprisonment in Jackson prison.

Sprague was convicted last week by a jury in the circuit court of shooting to death his wife, of whom he was jealous because she had left him and had written him a letter announcing she would never return and started suit for divorce. They lived in Plymouth but the woman had gone to Walled Lake to act as housekeeper in the home of Arthur Hood, who it was alleged had been showing her some attention before she left Sprague.

Sprague followed her to Walled Lake and on the afternoon of June 12th finding her in an upstairs room in the Hood home, shot her twice, once in the back of the head and once in the back. He then turned the revolver on himself but the bullet entered his head in a spot that was not fatal and the injury did not kill him. He claims to still have the bullet in the lower part of his head.—Pontiac Press.

You Control
The Michigan
State Telephone Company.

Your telephone is operated by a company, organized and controlled under the laws of the State of Michigan.

So far as its rates are concerned, it is directly subject to the decisions and direction of the Michigan Public Utilities Commission.

You, through this commission, actually control the telephone service which is so intimately a part of your every day life. Its future success or failure is directly in your hands, because the commission must have your moral backing if it is to deal fairly with the telephone company in the matter of revenues. Sufficient and adequate revenues are absolutely vital to the very existence and the development of the utility. Without them the telephone cannot properly function in the industrial and social advancement of the State.

The close association of your telephone company with the Bell system of America gives you the advantages of a service which is world-wide in its scope. By means of this service, you can, at your will, talk to any one of 13,000,000 telephones in use throughout the United States today.

It gives your telephone company, too, the advantages of the scientific research of the greatest telephone engineers in the world. This research has developed the telephone art in the United States until today it is by far the most efficient in the world. It is daily developing new improvements which will do much to make your service better.

The officers of your telephone company, who are directing its affairs, are Michigan business men, keenly alive to the many problems incident to the development of the State.

And so it is throughout the entire personnel of our company. It is made up of men and women, actuated by no other desire than to do their jobs well and to deserve this great responsibility of giving to the people of Michigan the kind of telephone service they desire.

THE FORD INTERESTS
BUY RAILWAY SYSTEM

Purchase of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad, with its 451 miles of main track, 155 miles of side track, 85 locomotives, 3,200 freight cars and 27 passenger cars, was announced by Henry Ford and Edsel, his son, Saturday.

Through this action Detroit and Michigan are assured of a non-confiscable coal supply all the year around as the road, Mr. Ford states, will be used chiefly as a coal carrier from the southern Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky coal fields.

Some 2,000 employees of the railroad will be brought under the Ford plan of wages and hours, which includes the bonus and investment certificate privileges.

It is announced that the new Ford gas car of the interurban type upon which Ford engineers have been at work for months will be used in providing passenger service.

Personnel of the company under new management has not yet been announced. There will be but few minor changes.

The name of the road also will be changed.

This railway has been the pawn of money-grabbers for a number of years and it is alleged the Zimmerman interests, "milked" the system to the tune of several million dollars without investing anything in improvements or equipment. It is a good thing for Detroit and Michigan that the road has fallen into the hands of the Fords.

Following upon the heels of the announcement of the purchase of the D. T. & I. by the Ford interests comes the confirmation of the rumor that Mr. Ford had purchased a large timber tract in Northern Michigan. The land was purchased from the Michigan Iron & Lumber Co. and contains 165,000 acres of hardwood timber and 100,000 acres of second growth timber with indications of valuable iron ore deposits as well.

A saw mill and other wood working industry will be located on the property and it is expected the lumber entering into the construction of the Ford cars and Fordson trucks will be obtained there.

PREPARING FOR CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE.

Mrs. Ruby B. Carlton of Dimondale, Mich., has been re-engaged by the Michigan Anti-tuberculosis association to conduct the annual Christmas seal sale throughout the state. Mrs. Carlton was in charge of the sale last year and made a success of it. She is already at work getting the state organized for the year's sale.

Mrs. Carlton will be assisted by an advisory committee composed of Wm. Wooden of Pattle Creek, Julius Amburg of Grand Rapids and Mrs. C. J. Smith of Bay City.

The state will be organized throughout between now and December when the actual sale of seals will be held. An attempt will be made to get an effective working force in every county and city in the state. The last year Michigan this year calls for the sale of ten Christmas seals for every man, woman and child in the state. This means the sale of approximately 30,000,000 seals. The seal sale this year will not come under the auspices of the American Red Cross, but the emblem will be the double Red Cross, the official emblem of the anti-tuberculosis movement, the world over.

The Whole Secret of
A Better Tire

Simply a Matter of the Maker's Policies

This you will realize—once you try a Brunswick—that a super-tire is possible only when the name certifies that the maker is following the highest standards.

For tire making is chiefly a matter of standards and policies—cost plus care. Any maker can build a good tire if he cares to pay perfection's price.

All men know Brunswick standards, for Brunswick products have been famous for 74 years.

Formulas, fabrics and standards vary vastly in cost. Reinforcements, plies and thickness are a matter of expense. And these variations affect endurance. It rests with the maker how far he wishes to go—how much he can afford to give.

For there are no secrets nor patents to hold one back.

To ascertain what each maker offers one must analyze and test some 200 tires—as our laboratories have done.

Then it is a matter of combining the best features and building according to the highest standards.

Once you try a Brunswick you will understand how we have built model tires, regardless of factory expense.

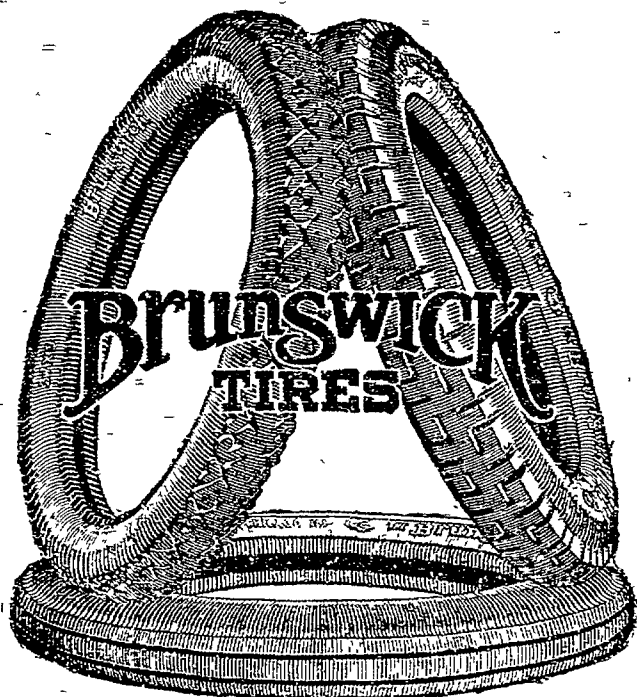

Yet Brunswick Tires cost you the same as other like-type tires. Our saving is on selling cost, through our nation-wide organization.

We realize that you expect more from Brunswicks, and we assure you that you get it. ONE Brunswick will tell you the story.

And then you'll want ALL Brunswicks. No other tire, you'll agree, gives so much for your money.

Between 35 and 40 members of the Epworth League of Plymouth, met with the Northville society at this village, last Wednesday evening. After the regular meeting, a social hour was enjoyed, and dainty refreshments served to the large company.

A lot of machinery used in the Highland Park plant of the Ford Motor Co. is being installed in the Northville plant and will be used in making valves for Ford cars. Thus far the output of the local plant has been valves for Fordson tractors.

The O. E. S. will meet this afternoon for the conferring of degrees. At six o'clock supper will be served and work will again be taking up in the evening. Wayne chapter will be guests of the local chapter. Members will be charged with their own supper.

S. A. Lofgren returned home from Battle Creek the last of the week. He was advised that an operation would be necessary to remove the ailment with which he has been afflicted for some years past and he expects to go to Grace Hospital in Detroit for that purpose.

Marshal Lile is to be commended for the manner in which he is keeping the streets clean and all should co-operate with him. Nearly every time a load of goods comes to the Smith store a lot of straw and hay and other litter is left on the street and this practice should be prohibited.

H. J. Wilde and son, Elmer, took possession of the Thomas B. Couch grocery and meat market Monday and they are now residents of Northville. Wilde having rented the Carpenter house on North Center street. They are re-arranging the stock and making the store look very attractive. The business will be conducted under the firm name of H. J. Wilde & Son.

G. A. Dolph received a letter from his father, J. W. Dolph who is in Los Angeles, Cal., giving first-hand information regarding the recent earthquake which visited that section of the coast. The family was eating supper when the shock came and while no serious damage was done in that immediate section buildings were damaged in other parts of the city. The chimney on the house of Willard Dolph was demolished and the house somewhat damaged.

It was currently reported about town last Friday that Milo N. Johnson had been "pinched" for speeding his auto on the streets of Northville. People who had known Mr. Johnson for many years were just a little surprised, but realizing that he has been engaged in the fruit business for the past two weeks they surmised he was anxious to get his crop to market and for the instant forgot himself. A search of the court records, however, failed to reveal any evidence of his arrest and our village traffic officer assured The Record the report was a mistake.

Those from out-of-town attending the Waldron-Westcott wedding Saturday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Waldron, parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Faye VanValkenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Leon VanValkenburg and sons, Roger and Raynor, Mr. and Mrs. J. Maynard Mulyaby, Mrs. Alma Foor and son, Burton, all of Tecumseh, Mrs. Elizabeth Haddon of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Waldron of Howell, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Burley of Ft. Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Caswell and daughter, Florine, of Pontiac.

HOSPITAL NOTES.

Howard Simpson underwent an operation on Tuesday but is improving nicely.

Mrs. Wm. Warner has recovered sufficiently to go to her sister's home in Salem.

Mrs. Wm. Buers and Mrs. Lem Potter were able to be taken to their homes last Saturday.

Mrs. Harry Austin returned home last Tuesday much elated over the prospect of good health again.

On behalf of the patients and also his own personal gratitude, Dr. Henry desires to thank all those who contributed flowers for the sick room.

A large screened porch has been added to the present building, making a splendid place for sun baths, etc., and has improved the appearance of the building very much.

John Newman, who has been ill all winter at the home of Mrs. Mott, was transferred to the Hospital last Thursday. Owing to his prolonged fight against blood poison his chances of recovery are very slight.

Owing to the noise made by the heavy trucks passing to and from the sanitarium, placards will be posted announcing the hospital zone, and reminding the public of the necessity of quietude when near the sick room.

John Friedland was painfully injured at the new Sanitarium last Thursday. A large elevator fell several feet, crushing him into the earth, and injuring his spine to the extent that he was paralyzed for several days, but is now able to walk around again.

Keeps the Cattle Away.

Cattle will not allow young hazel, oak and most other trees and shrubs to survive in a pasture, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington, but the thorn-apple bushes will flourish because their sharp thorns keep away the browsing cattle.

The House of Whispers

By WILLIAM JOHNSTON

A SECRET PASSAGE.

Synopsis.—Spalding Nelson is occupying the apartments of his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. The Gastons, leaving on a trip, tell him about mysterious noises and "whispers" that have scared them. He becomes acquainted with Barbara Bradford, who lives in the same big building. He instinctively distrusts and distrusts the superintendent, Wick. The mysteries in his apartment begin with the disappearance of the Gaston pearls from the safe. He decides not to call the police, but to do his own investigating. It is soon evident that someone has access to his room. He becomes friendly with Barbara, he learns that her apartment is equally mysterious. She tells him that several years before her mother, who lives with her, had made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the man had been named, "Gorman." She is engaged to be married and someone has stolen documents concerning the matter from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson takes Miss Kelly, the telephone girl, to dinner with the idea of "pumping" her. Gorman, the hotel detective, recognizes her as the wife of Lefty Moore, a noted burglar. Nelson tells his story to Gorman.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

"And the number she called up—the private number—did you find out about that?"

"Sure, that was easy. It's one of the apartments in the Granddeck—Henry Kent's. Who's he?"

"I never heard of him. I'll try to find out, though."

"I would, but be careful how you ask questions around the place. The Moore woman may have a pal. They generally work in pairs."

"The ease and comeliness with which Gorman had learned all these things about the girl impressed me greatly, and I said as much. He received my compliments with a deprecating wave of the hand."

"Nothing to it, boy, when you know the ropes. But last night you told me you had taken the girl out to try to pump something out of her. What was it? What's doing?"

"From beginning to end I told him the whole story in all of its perplexing details, starting with the day that I had received my great-uncle Rufus's note that had led to the chance meeting with Miss Bradford, bringing in the discharge and the disappearance of the Gaston pearls, and explaining that made me think the facts were in some way involved with the attempt to blackmail the Bradfords."

"What do you make of it? I asked."

"I ended my narrative. 'Who do you think is at the bottom of it?'"

"I don't think," he returned. "In my business it does not pay to think too quick. You're apt to convict the wrong party."

"But you must think something," I protested.

"I think," he said slowly and gravely, "that there's a lot of crooked work going on—I'll say it—much and you and Miss Bradford are pretty close to being the center of it."

"What can we do about it?"

"There's a way I learned from a lawyer that ain't bad. Help take his client out and put him in the center of a big circle with lines running to all directions—falsely, untruthfully, mistaken identity, no proof of guilt, lack of indisposition to escape on legal technicalities—then he'll mark out every possible defense. Then he'll follow each one up and see where it led and what plan the opposing lawyers would be likely to spring on him. Generally he gets his man off."

"I don't quite see how that applies."

"You don't, eh?"

"He traced an imaginary circle with his forefinger on the table in the little back room where we were sitting."

"Here's you and Miss Bradford in the center, surrounded by a lot of mysterious devilry. We'll make two circles. This inside one is the things that have happened to both of you—the wall safes opened, the papers stolen, the pearls gone, the anonymous notes, the blackmail threats, the loss of your job, the voices you've heard. Now on this outer circle we'll mark down all the people who might be mixed up in these things—mind ye, I mean only might be. First, there's Lefty Moore's woman—we know she's crooked. Then who do we know that knows her? There's at least two—Wick, the superintendent that lives here, and this Mr. Henry Kent. His apartment she telephoned to. There's all the rest of the help in the house. Any one of them might be mixed up. Then there's the flighty building girl—"

"You don't suspect her, do you?" I asked, horrified at the prospect of his suggestion taking this turn.

"No," he returned. "I'm not suspecting anyone. I'm only putting the possibilities on the table. There's the Bradford's ex-husband. He's a big fellow that makes him a crowd. You know, say, in the park with a bear on his face—" that's a start. There's the man who shadowed you—would you know him again if you saw him?"

I shook my head doubtfully.

"I'm afraid not," I admitted, "you see—"

"Don't bother to explain. You either would or wouldn't, and that's all we need to know now. There's old Mr. Gaston and his wife. It's queer about their ducking out so suddenly and leaving no address, but maybe they're only scared. Let's see who else is there—the Bradford servants and the old man's, the old washerwoman—and the families who live in the house. We've got the circle pretty well covered, haven't we?"

More and more I had begun to appreciate how valuable the services of an experienced detective would be likely to be in helping to solve the mystery.

"Look here, Gorman," I said, "why can't you take charge of this case for us?"

"What's in it?" he asked.

My face fell, and my enthusiasm died a sudden death. Once more I was confronted by the specter of my poverty. Of what use my talking to a high-priced investigator like Gorman when all the money I had in the world was less than two hundred dollars, out of which I had to live until I found employment. Yet I must serve Barbara Bradford.

"If you clear up this case," I announced, "I'll give you every cent I've got in the world."

He shook his head.

"It ain't enough. If I take this case it won't be for the money that's in it. For that matter I can get all I want from old Gaston for getting his pearls back. That'll be enough."

"Then you will take the case," I cried jubilantly.

"On one condition. That you'll promise to keep everything away from the police."

"I'll promise that for myself and Miss Bradford, too. That was the one reason she advanced against my telling you about things. She was afraid you'd call in the police."

"Never fear about that. There's nothing I'd like better than to put it over that bunch of young reformers they've got down in Center street. This hotel work don't sell me anyhow. I've been thinking of opening up an office of my own. The recovery of the Gaston pearls would be a nice feather in my cap to start with."

"If so," I replied, "but you'll need money for expenses and that sort of thing won't you?"

"Leave that part of it to me," he retorted with a quizzical smile.

"After all the years I was on the police force I ain't exactly broke by a long shot. All you've got to do is to keep your eyes open and let me know all that goes on in the apartment house. I'll attend to the rest. Don't do anything, though, without consulting me first."

"I'll gladly promise that."

"Good enough. We'll better arrange then to meet here every day at three sharp. It's a good place as any."

"I'll be here."

"And look out you're not trailed. They may try shadowing you again."

"Who do you mean by they?" I asked eagerly.

"That's what trailed you yesterday," replied Gorman with a grin. "If you don't know, I don't know either—yet."

From his manner I was confident that he already had a shrewd suspicion as to the identity of some of these "reins." The maze in the center of which he had placed Miss Bradford and myself must have been far more to him than merely his last knowledge of the methods of criminals and his acquaintance with others like Lefty Moore and even him, as Gorman was to whom to look for the plotters. I realized that it would be useless to question him further. He would admit suspecting no one until he was sure of their guilt, a quality I admired greatly.

"You can count on me," I repeated. "I'll be here at three tomorrow."

Yes, how foolish it was for any of us to predict what we will be doing or where we will be twenty-four hours from now. Seldom do things happen in the routine of our lives as we had anticipated. I was not there the next day at the time appointed. By no possibility could I have been there, however much I might have wished to. Many things had happened in quick succession.

How it came about that my promise to meet Gorman went unfulfilled can best be explained by narrating the events of the evening after I returned to the Granddeck. It was nearly five when I left the detective. I strolled leisurely down town and had dinner in the cafe, where on one occasion I had seen the scar-faced man. I lingered there for a long time over my coffee hoping in vain that he might appear. I even ventured to cautiously question the waiter and head waiter, describing the man as best I could, but both of them insisted that they never had seen any such person. As I walked home I kept a wary eye out to make sure I was not being followed, but apparently no one was now shadowing me.

It was nine-thirty when I reached home. It had been arranged that Barbara should ten would signal me that we might have a chat from our respective windows. As I sat in my room waiting for the time to come, I was reviewing the case in all its aspects. Indeed there was hardly a waking moment that I was not thinking of the many mysteries about us. I was wondering if, when the case was cleared up, the mysterious whispers that we all had heard would also be explained. I recalled Claire Bradford's unexpected visit to my apartment the evening before and her confusion when I had captured her. I wondered if the explanations she had offered had been the truth. Was she really trying to locate the source of the whispers? I looked interestedly up at the section of the wall that I had found her inspecting. What had she hoped to discover there?

I decided to make a close inspection of both sides of the wall. As I lighted up the sitting room and hall for this purpose, something unusual came to my notice that had hitherto escaped me entirely.

THE INNER WALL OF MY ROOM—The one running along the hall of the apartment—HAD THE APPEARANCE OF BEING AT LEAST FOUR FEET THICK.

It seemed so absurd that I refused to believe the evidence my eyes had given me. In these modern days of steel construction there was no reason for a wall being of medieval proportions. I sprang to my great-uncle's work basket and began rummaging to see if I could find a tape measure, and luckily my search was quickly rewarded.

I sketched a rough diagram of the rear rooms, and began measuring them off, carefully checking my figures as I went along. I found myself growing wildly excited as the tape measure confirmed what my eyes had told me. The inner wall was at least four feet thick.

With this in the thought of the possibility of a secret passage there, I climbed up on a chair just as Claire Bradford had done and began inspecting the wall inch by inch. Ever

As I, Trembling All Over at the Thought of the Peril She Had Been In, Put My Arms About Him and Helped Her In.

As I did so I could not help laughing at myself. The idea that a modern apartment building might contain a secret passage was utterly ridiculous, yet as I pounded lightly on the wall I gave forth a hollow sound, vastly different from any other part of the room. I was convinced that between my room and the hall there was space enough at least for a passageway in which a man might walk.

I surveyed with growing interest the wooden paneling that in turn ran clear up to the ceiling. In the other rooms there was no paneling. Mounting the chair again I pressed sharply against the wood at the point from which the sound had seemed to come. It seemed to me it gave a little to my touch. I struck one of the sections a sharp blow. It dropped back a full half-inch, leaving what looked like a doorway—a space three feet wide by five feet high. The bottom of the opening was hardly two feet from the floor. If there was a passageway here, this panel certainly would explain how my rooms had been surreptitiously visited.

Feverishly I worked at the panel trying to push it further back. If there was a passageway there in the wall I was determined to see whether it led. My efforts to move the panel further seemed hopeless. As I worked at it I heard a tapping on my window sill.

It must be Barbara. In my excitement over the find I had forgotten all about the time. I sprang from the chair and rushed to the window. I found her peering out, trying to ascertain why I had not answered her signal.

"Oh," she breathed with relief, as my head appeared, "you were there. Did you see the detective?"

"Yes," I replied, speaking as low as my excited state would permit me, "but just now I discovered something that is more important."

"What is it?"

"A secret passageway leading into my room. It seems to run along the hall. The wall there is at least four feet thick—room for a man to walk. There is a panel in the wall in my room leading into it. I was just prying it open when you signaled."

"Oh, how I wish I could see it!"

"Why can't you? Slip out of your front door, and I'll be at my door to admit you."

"I can't do that. Mother and Claire are in the front part of the house playing bridge with some guests. They will be sure to hear me going out."

"Come in tomorrow morning, then," I suggested.

She did not answer, and before I realized what she was doing, Barbara was out on the ledge making her perilous way across to my window.

"If Claire can do this, I can," she announced triumphantly, as I, trembling all over at the thought of the peril she had been in, put my arms about her and helped her in.

"Darling," I cried, still holding her in my arms, "don't ever do that again. It's too dangerous. Promise me, Barbara, dear, you'll never again try that."

With her pretty face flushed at the terms of endorsement that had unwittingly escaped me, she laughingly released herself from my arms.

"That was nothing," she said in a tense whisper. "Where's the panel?"

Relieved to find that she was not angered by my presumption, I hastened to turn up the light and pointed at the hole in the wall. As I had done, she sprang up on the chair and endeavored to push the panel further back, but was unable to budge it. Quicker witted than I, she then tried sliding it along. At the slightest touch it slid back in a groove, revealing the opening—leading into what?

Striking a match, we both of us peered in. The space between the walls was certainly high enough and wide enough for a man to walk there in comfort. So far as the flickering light of the match enabled us to judge, it ran the length of the hall, and near its further end there appeared to be some steps.

"Gosh," cried the intrepid Barbara, "let's explore it."

"No," I said firmly. "We must do nothing until I have seen the detective. We have put the case in his hands."

"But we must find out about it," protested the girl.

"Tomorrow," I said. "We know where it is. We know where the voices and whispers come from now."

"I wonder," she said thoughtfully, "if there is any sort of a passageway in our apartment?"

"Promise me that if you find there is one, you will not attempt to explore it alone."

As we argued about it we both stopped short and with blanching faces listened from somewhere—it sounded as if it was right below us—we heard sounds as if two people were struggling. Then came a woman's shriek, a wild scream with the death terror in it. The sound seemed close at hand. It seemed to come right up from the opening in the panel by which we were standing.

Once more there came an awful scream—a scream stopped off short as if some brutal hand had throttled the woman's throat.

"What is it?" cried Barbara.

"Listen," I commanded. "It seems to come from the floor below."

Holding our breaths we strained our ears for further sounds. Suddenly a shot rang out, and there was a thud as if a body had fallen to the floor. Then all was silence.

With terror in our faces we turned to each other, seeking an explanation which neither could give.

"Mother—Claire!" cried Barbara. "They'll be alarmed. I must go back to them at once."

"She's been murdered. Get the police quick."

Taught Chinese Lacemaking.

The art of lacemaking was first taught to the Chinese, of the Chofo district by foreign missionaries about twenty-five years ago. They believed that by teaching lacemaking the women and girls would find profitable employment within their own homes, and the subsequent spread of the industry has fully justified their efforts. Although first taught in Chofo, China Hsien was the first district in which lace was extensively made.

Time Measured by Candles.

The Chinese, besides using water clocks also invented joss-sticks, which burned uniformly. The joss-stick is somewhat similar to what good old King Alfred of England is said to have used way back in the eighth hundred. He was a great educator, and discovered that tallow candles could be used for dividing the time which he allowed his nobles, in which to have complaints against each other.

FOWLS WILL REPAY GOOD FEEDING BY MUCH BETTER EGG PRODUCTION

The Hen That Is a Good Producer Looks Alert and Businesslike.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

There isn't any money in hens. Of course, we want fresh eggs and plenty of chickens to eat on our own table, but as for their being a money-making proposition, there's nothing to it. Why, they don't even pay for their "keep."

This statement is often heard on the lips of farmers who give these fowls very indifferent care, and do not keep any records of the cost of feeding or of the receipts returned. A flock of poultry properly managed on a farm will return a greater profit than under any other conditions because they pick up a large amount of waste products and only a comparatively small amount of feed has to be bought. Much greater returns would be secured from the average farm flock if the poor layers were culled out, as some of the birds hardly pay even for this feed which has to be purchased. This keeping of a free boarding house for a lot of hens is as poor business, however, for the general farmer as it is for the poultry man who is making a business of egg production.

A hen that lays no eggs requires as much feed and care as one that lays many. The thrifty see to it that their flocks consist of layers.

Requisites for Egg Production.

Hens of a good egg-laying strain will lay more eggs, in the course of a year, than will a flock of mongrels. In the majority of instances it is not feasible to sell all the old flock and start a new standard one; but, if standardized roosters are used to head the flock for three or four generations, the resulting flock will resemble pure-bred fowls. The better way, however, is to get hatching eggs from a good strain of purebred fowls.

Culling must be practiced in all flocks if a profit is to be made. In the better flocks few birds will be discarded, but in the ordinary farm

BUYING CHICKEN FEED

When one has only a few chickens it is less trouble to purchase the prepared chick feeds, but where a considerable number are reared it is sometimes cheaper to buy the finely cracked grains and mix them together. Many chick feeds contain a large quantity of grit and may contain grains of poor quality, so that they should be carefully examined and the quality guaranteed before they are purchased.

flocks from 40 to 60, per cent are often found to be poor layers.

Only a little practice is required before a person can readily distinguish between a good laying hen and a poor one. County and home demonstration agents give this information by means of demonstrations and the United States department of agriculture has published a circular which tells how to cull.

Feeding is one of the most important factors in egg production. On poor rations hens will live and even keep in fair health; but, well-balanced, palatable feeds are necessary to get good egg production. The additional cost of a good ration compared with a poor ration is repaid many times by the extra eggs obtained. As a rule the simplest feed mixtures, composed of home-grown grains and their by-products, supplemented by sweet or sour milk or some animal feed rich in protein, such as meat scrap, will prove most profitable and will produce eggs at the lowest cost.

There is no one best ration for all conditions, but many of the grains can be fed interchangeably, depending on their availability and price.

ESTIMATE RECEIPTS FOR FARM PRODUCTS

Grower Should First Consider Grade and Quality.

Returns May Not Always Agree With Figures Given in Bulletins on Account of Changes in Prices Made Overnight.

To estimate what he should expect to receive for his product in a given market and on a given day, the grower or shipper should first consider the grade, pack quality, and condition of his product compared with the bulk of that product as quoted in the bulletins for that day. Second, deduct from the stated price the freight or express charges other costs, and commissions.

Even after proper deductions have been made, returns may not always agree with prices quoted in the bulletins, because of unexpectedly heavy receipts later in the day, sudden changes in weather, or other factors which influence the market quickly.

Anyone desiring to secure information more promptly than is possible through the mails may have all or any part of any report sent by telegraph, charges collect, from the nearest market station maintained by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, or by addressing the department at Washington, D. C., which will refer him to the proper station. A blank for entering the details or the desired telegraphic service will be furnished upon application.

VIGOROUS FOWL IS FAVORED

Strong, Healthy Birds Are Preferred as Breeders—Eyes Should Be Bright and Clear.

Fowls for breeding purposes should be strong, healthy, vigorous birds, says the United States department of agriculture. The comb, face, and wattles should be of a bright-red color, eyes bright and fairly prominent, head comparatively broad and short and not long or crow-shaped, legs set well apart and straight, plumage clean and smooth.

PLAN FOR MARKETING EGGS

White and Brown Varieties Should Be Placed in Separate Packages—Keep Culls at Home.

Market white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs in separate packages, says the United States department of agriculture. Eggs irregular in shape, those which are unusually long or thin shelled, or which have shells otherwise defective, should be kept by the producer for home use, so that breakage in transit may be reduced as much as possible.

An egg that shows any defect should not be marketed.

The farmer, above everyone, is the man to succeed with poultry.

Good fences save many a heartache for the man who keeps turkeys.

Turkeys are fattened for market from about October 1 up to selling time.

The "day-old chick" industry has made wonderful progress in the last few years.

Infertile eggs will withstand marketing conditions much better than fertile eggs.

Toulouse geese usually lay more eggs in a season than Embden or African geese, but not so many as the China geese.

Inexperienced poultry raisers are tempted to feed chicks immediately after they are hatched, but this should not be done.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND AUTO CLUB CONSOLIDATE

Some months ago the Northville Chamber of Commerce was run down by a "fyer" while walking down the highway of public progress, and before it could gain its equilibrium, other forces came along and buffeted it, while still others belittled its efforts and declared the youngster could not long survive. A few faithful friends endeavored to nurse the organization back to health and vigor and to repair the fractured structure, but owing to its state of putrefaction their efforts failed and the condition of the patient grew gradually worse until claimed by death the first of July, and it has gone to join that innumerable hosts of singular organizations which have been formed in nearly every community in the state. The end came peacefully and there were but few mourners when the spark of life went out. In fact the circumstances of its demise resembled the death of a relative who was very wealthy but who remembered all his kins. The mourners could not weep; but they dare not rejoice.

At a joint meeting of the boards of directors of the Northville Chamber of Commerce and the Northville Automobile Club held Tuesday night, it was deemed advisable to consolidate the two organizations, or to be more exact to permit the former organization to die a natural death, and to have the latter take up its work. Naturally the two organizations were working along common lines in a community of this size and it was thought that one strong, aggressive organization could accomplish more than two in this community. A committee on community welfare will be appointed by the Automobile Club to which matters of a civic nature will be referred and thus the auto club will be able to serve the whole community.

At the meeting of the directors of the Automobile Club which followed the joint meeting the following officers were chosen for ensuing year: President, C. C. Yerkes; Vice Pres., T. G. Richardson; Secretary, F. S. Neal; Treasurer, L. A. Babbitt. The committees will be named by President Yerkes and announced later.

WALDRON WESTCOTT.

On Saturday afternoon, July 10th, at four o'clock, the marriage of Miss Loraine Westcott, to Mr. Leon J. Waldron of Flint, was solemnized by the Rev. E. V. Belles at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Westcott. The bride and bridegroom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Faye VanValkenburg of Tecumseh.

The rooms were exquisitely decorated for the occasion with palms, amaranths and roses. After the ceremony a dainty two course luncheon was served. The bride, who is one of Northville's most estimable young ladies, was attired in white georgette and not over white silk, and carried a bridal bouquet of sweet peas and ferns.

The groom belongs to one of the best families in Tecumseh, and is an accountant of ability, employed by the George A. Burley Co. of Flint.

The wedding presents were numerous and beautiful, comprising mostly of cut glass and silver.

Mr. and Mrs. Waldron will be at home to all friends after July 25th at 91 Ann Arbor street, Flint.

Most health and happiness attend them as the wish of their many friends.
