TO ERECT MORE NEW FAIR BUILDINGS

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Northville Fair association, held Tuesday evening, it was decided to erect some new buildings on the grounds this year. An addition of sixteen feet will be built to the east side of the grandstand, a new swine shed will be erected and an addition of 40x60 feet will be added to the north side of the main building. This building will be used this year as a dance pavilion and later converted into a department for the women's section.

Many special features are being secured for the fair this year and nothing is being left undone that will in any way add to the popularity of the fourth annual show. There will be special attractions on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, with a magnificent display of fireworks nightly. There will be three days of racing events and purses to the amount of $1,500 will be offered in the speed department. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons there will be ball games between some of the best aggregations of ball tossers in this section. On Saturday the Shriners and their band and chanters will come up from Detroit for the afternoon. Many will remember their visit here last year and the exhibition given on the grounds. The chanters consist of sixty of the best trained male voices in the city and they will prove a very attractive and entertaining feature. Many other special features will be announced later.

TO HOLD REUNION AT MILWAUKEE

Special Pullmans—possibly an entire special train—will carry about 300 former members of the Thirty-second division from Detroit and other Michigan points to the reunion of Red Arrow men to be held in Milwaukee September 19 to 21, inclusive. The Michigan delegation will leave Detroit Friday evening, September 17.

Many ceremonies will mark the three-day reunion. A distinguished guest of the assembled veterans will be General Joseph Mangin of the famous French Tenth army. He will decorate battle flags and units of the division. General William G. Haan, former commander of the division, will attend.

Former Captain William J. Smith is chairman of Michigan committee on the reunion arrangements. Detroit Free Press.

RACE MACHINE SUCCESS

In spite of the wet condition of the track the race machine given Saturday afternoon by the Northville Driving Club was a success and there were fourteen drivers to take part in the three events. Just before noon the committee in charge of the affair decided to postpone the meet but as many horses appeared that it was later decided to have the races proceed. Harry C. Robinson of Plymouth acted as starting judge and the three events were raced to the satisfaction of the crowd. There were three horses in class A, four in class B and seven in class C.

The ball game was between the Foresters of Northville and Farmington and the visitors carried off the honors of the day.

CAMP CUSTER SOON TO BE ABANDONED.

The general commanding Camp Custer, near Battle Creek, has been directed by the war department to gradually abandon and eventually salvage the camp. The 10th infantry, now at the camp will be sent to Camp Sherman, Ohio, for permanent station, and the 14th infantry to the Panama canal zone. All other personnel will be sent to stations in the central department.

The transfer of property will be started at once in order that the work may be completed before winter sets in.

TO HOLD TRAP SHOOT DURING FAIR.

One of the attractive features of the Northville Fair will be the third annual trapshooting tournament to be held under the auspices of the United Northville-Plymouth Gun Club, and it is expected that the program to be presented will bring to Northville a great many "crack shots" from all sections of the state. The shoot will take place on Saturday, the last day of the fair, and extensive plans are being made for the affair by the officers of the local club.

UNITED GUN CLUB HELD FINE SHOOT.

The United Gun club held its regular shoot last Sunday, with the largest attendance ever known. The new trap was working perfectly, and some well deserved thanks are due the trap boys. L. Vick and E. Speck of the Wolverine club, Wyandotte, and J. Cook of the Sunnyside club, made some excellent scores, and we will be glad to see them again. The high general average title, was won by Mr. Cook.

Mr. Vick and Mr. Speck tied up on 46 pieces out of 50. We enrolled two new members, Geo. Stanley and C. Merritt. Scores for the regular 50 target event are:

J. Cook	49
W. Baxter	49
M. Powell	47
H. Passage	47
L. Vick	45
E. Speck	46
F. Whitbeck	46
C. Merritt	45
F. Hills	45
L. Cannon	44
T. Passage	44
G. Stanley	44
J. Patterson	42
W. Murray	42
A. Hall	37
C. Rathburn	37
C. Beard	35
C. Stanley	30
C. Jackson	12

This was Mr. Jackson's first experience at the traps, with the added handicap of having to shoot a gun of different line from his regular field gun.

W. Baxter now holds the high score for the club. The 20 yard shoot showed the following:

J. Cook	44 out of 50
L. Cannon	42 out of 50
G. Stanley	41 out of 50
M. Powell	37 out of 50
C. Beard	34 out of 50
H. Passage	22 out of 25
W. Baxter	21 out of 25
F. Whitbeck	21 out of 25
F. Hills	20 out of 25
C. Rathburn	12 out of 25

High score for the day was made by Mr. Cook with 77 straight breaks. We will shoot again August 29. Don't forget H. PASSAGE, Secy.

THE TALE OF A BEE.

We have no objection if the busy bee improves each shining hour, as it slips the honey from nature's fair flower, but we do protest when you foul humblebee mistakes our world dentist for an August flower. One day this week while Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Alexander were returning by motor from a trip up the state they met with a peculiar accident. Negligence, it is said, and one that came near to be a very serious one. A bee, one of those kind that are always as busy as a bee, can be decided to go home and sting. As Mrs. Alexander was trying to smooth the pinky thing away the doctor lost control of his car and the Ford crashed into a ditch. The car was badly wrecked, but fortunately the women escaped with but a few slight bruises.

GOOD ROADS MEET AT LANSING.

Final plans for the Michigan State Good Roads association's annual convention to be held in Lansing September 1, 2 and 3 are being formulated.

W. H. Bryant, field secretary of the association has established an office at the Hotel Kerns where the headquarters will be located until after the time of the annual meeting.

More than 5,000 invitations have been mailed from Leadquarters. Invitations have been mailed to 2,000 county road commissioners, every Rotary, Kiwanis, Exchange and Lyons clubs, and to Chambers of Commerce, city mayors, village presidents, common councils, contractors and others interested in the progress of road building.

FORD CO. RECEIVES CITATION.

The Ford Motor company of Detroit, has received a Certificate of Merit together with a citation by the director of Air service War department. The chief of ordnance has made similar recommendations. The citation reads as follows: "The company produced 3,950 complete Liberty-12 motors of unusually good quality. They also produced all cylinder forgings used by all plants in the manufacture of Liberty motors, and they invented and developed special machinery and processes for this purpose. This plant was 100% on war work." Manufacturers' Record.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ford and Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Cudaback of Flint and Mr. and Mrs. Phil Taylor of Novi were royally entertained at the Chas. Merritt cottage at Walled Lake on Tuesday evening of this week at a marshmallow roast.

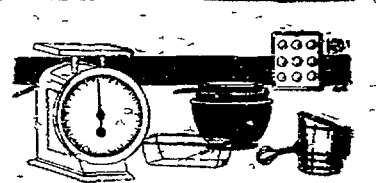

At the corner of a New York street a tall man stood with a map in his hand, at which he gazed with a puzzled air. A kindly passer-by tapped his shoulder and offered to direct him, upon which the man with the map smiled, showing several gold teeth as a result.

"I reckoned I'd figure it out myself," he said, "with this little old map, but I seem kinder lost."

"Yes," said the other soothingly, "I dare say you'd have managed very well. But you're looking at a map of Chicago."

But you won't need a map, when you're looking for good hardware—all roads lead to this store and whether your needs be large or small, you can save money on your purchases, receive courteous treatment and the quality of the goods can be depended upon—we guarantee that.

If you don't know the way phone 120 and we'll be glad to tell you how to get here.

While I was debating the situation in my cell, a keeper opened the door. "You're wanted downstairs," he announced. "What is it?" I asked, wonderingly. "You've got a visitor."

"Who?" I questioned eagerly. Could it, I wondered, be Barbara? Had my sternly repressed longing to see her in some way communicated itself to her through the ether and impelled her to throw caution to the winds and come to the prison to see me?

"I don't know," the keeper answered. "It's a man—I don't know who he is."

A man. Who could it be? In all the monotonous time I had been behind the bars, only two men had come to see me, Gorman and McGregor. It could not be either of them, for both were well known to the prison attendants. As I hastened down the long corridor past the dismal row of barred doors, I was revolving in my mind the possibilities of my caller's identity.

Who could it be? Spurred on by my curiosity, I hastened into the counsel room. There sat my great-uncle Rufus.

He looked much better physical condition than when I had last seen him, more vigorous and healthier. His skin was bronzed from exposure to the sun and wind and his eyes were clearer and brighter. As I studied his face I could trace no vestige there of the terrible fear that had seemed to obsess him on the last occasion of our meeting.

For a moment we eyed each other without speaking. I was wondering, and well I think I might—whether the suspicions I had at times in regard to him had been wholly without foundation. Could it be possible that the crafty, mischievous old chap was the master mind at the bottom of all the mystery and plotting? As my previous suspicions came up in my mind I determined to be wary in what I said to him. The first of our conversation began to unfold when he said to me, "I felt that it was his fault, that I was locked up here."

Meanwhile he had been studying me. His keen old eyes had surveyed me from head to foot, returning to rest fixedly on my face, as though he was trying to read my thoughts. I wondered what was passing in his mind. Was he inwardly scoffing at the plight in which he found me? Was he distressed to see a blood relative behind the bars? Did he believe that I was guilty of the murder of Daisy Lutan? How had he learned of my arrest? What was his purpose in coming to see me? But his expression was unchangeable, so far as I was concerned.

He was the first to speak. "So—you didn't do it, did you?" "Of course not," I retorted indignantly. "Did you suspect that I was a murderer?"

He shook his head disparagingly, smiling an inscrutable smile. "The evidence against you certainly looks convincing."

"I don't care," I exclaimed with heat. "I'm as innocent of the killing of Miss Lutan as—I hesitated—"his you are."

and told of Gorman's unflinching efforts to learn the reason. "The day I was discharged," I went on, "I had drawn out from the savings bank all my money with the purpose of sending it to my mother to whom I was in debt. I still had it with me when I arrived home at the apartment and I decided to put it in the wall safe, to which, you recall, you had given me the combination. Out of mere curiosity—I made this confession with a blush of shame—I had inspected the contents of the safe, the day of my arrival and had examined the two caskets. The minute I opened the safe this second time I saw that it had been looted."

"What," exclaimed my great-uncle, starting from his seat, "not the pearls?"

I nodded. "Everything. The casket with the pearls was gone. The other with the trinkets was undisturbed."

"Good heavens," he exclaimed. "My wife's pearls stolen! Why, boy, I paid a hundred and fifty thousand dollars for that string. Tell me everything about it—everything at once."

I could only repeat what I had told him already. When I had opened the safe on Sunday the pearls were there. When I had opened it again on the following Saturday the pearls were gone. "Of course you told the police at once."

I explained to him why I had not done so, and my reason seemed to satisfy him.

"Go on with your story," he chimed. He seemed to have himself well in hand again. After the first shock of hearing of the loss of the pearls he showed no sign of emotion or displeasure.

He listened intently as I told him of my second meeting with Barbara Bradford when I had learned, at the Bradford wall safe had been looted, too, and the papers abstracted concerning the assassination of Claire's first marriage. He nodded his head slightly when I told him of the anonymous notes found on the floor in bed's apartment.

"Did you hear the whispers, too?" he questioned.

"Yes," I answered. "I heard them several times. Barbara Bradford has heard them and the fact is true."

A great relief came over his face. "I'm glad to know that others have heard them besides myself. When a man gets old his nerves sometimes play him strange pranks. The whispers seemed so weird and incredible that I feared that I was suffering from the hallucinations of old age. Now that I know that the whispers are real, there is nothing to fear."

soo find out about it. I have many matters to attend to today, but tomorrow I shall go up to the apartment, and if there is such a passageway I shall find it and see where it leads."

"Then you are not staying in the apartment?"

"No, I shall remain at a hotel until my wife returns."

At this juncture a prison attendant approached and informed him that the time of his visit was up. Imperiously my great-uncle waved the man away. Somehow, the possession of great wealth carries with it a manner of expecting obedience from every one that generally is successful. The man withdrew, muttering to himself and left us undisturbed.

"Now tell me about the murder," Mr. Gaston directed.

Concisely I stated the facts as I knew them. It was a shock to him to hear that at least two of the trusted attendants at the Granddeck, Wick and the telephone girl, were of the criminal class.

"Terrible, terrible," he exclaimed. "Just think of it! That's the worst of living in a big city. You never know what sort of people there are about you. I'll call on Mr. Keit, the owner of the building, this afternoon and have him get rid of them at once."

"Please don't," I cried. "Gorman and I are both convinced that Wick and the girl know something about the murder. Don't do anything to let them know that they are under suspicion. So long as they are employed at the Granddeck we know where to lay hands on them when we want them."

"That's so," he admitted. "I'll say nothing for the present. As I won't be living there until after this is cleared up, I can make no difference. But don't let me hear you say anything about this Bradford girl and her connection with you at this time. She knows you didn't do it."

"Because I will not permit her to do so," I replied with heat. "I love Barbara Bradford."

"That's it, that's it," he commented, giving me a paternalistic glance from under his bushy white eyebrows. "I wouldn't for all the world," I continued, have her mixed up in this. Her sister is to be married tomorrow, and the scandal must stop the wedding, and besides she's not going to have it known that she was there alone with me that night in my room. I love her too well—that. Some day I am going to ask her to be my wife."

He raised his eyebrows. "And on what do you expect to marry?" he inquired.

"Of course I have said nothing as yet," I hastened to explain. "I've nothing to offer her."

"No," he agreed. "You've nothing to offer her"—and then with a meaning glance he added a little word that in spite of my predicament made my heart sing with joy and stirred my expectations mightily—"you've nothing to offer her—yet."

"But cheer up," he advised as a parting word of counsel. "I'll get in touch with Gorman and your lawyer as soon as I leave here today, and tomorrow we will find out about that secret passageway you think you have discovered."

I met him jubilantly. My uncle's unexpected return to the city and his generous and convincing offers of aid had filled me with new hopes. I trusted, too, that old Rufus' keen eyes quickly would discover the secret passageway now that I had indicated to him where to look for it. I was confidently expecting that the resulting developments quickly would free me from even the suspicion of being a murderer. The minute, however, that I laid eyes on Gorman I knew that something had gone wrong.

"What is it?" I cried. "What's the matter now?"

"You're a wonderful liar, you are," was his surly greeting, "with your pipe dreams about secret passageways and stolen pearls."

"What do you mean?" I replied. I had not the least idea what he was getting at.

"You almost had me believing you," he said savagely. "If it wasn't that I knew that Wick and that girl up there were crooks I would wash my hands of the whole affair."

"I don't understand," I answered indignantly. "Every statement I have made to you has been the absolute truth."

"Yes, it has," he sneered. "Ordinarily, I should have resented anyone talking to me in this manner, but I felt that under no circumstances could I afford to quarrel with Gorman. He was the only friend I had in the whole city that I could rely on, excepting of course my great-uncle. I contented myself with merely reassuring him."

"I tell you it is all true—every word of it."

"The old man's home—old Rufus," he responded irreverently.

"I know," I replied. "I saw him for a few minutes day before yesterday. He promised to do everything in his power to free me as speedily as possible. After talking with him I am confident that he had nothing whatever to do with any part of the plot. Have you seen him?"

"Yes," said Gorman, significantly. "I've seen him. He looked me up yesterday and went over the case together. He suggested that we go up to the Granddeck and look over the apartment, and we did. The minute we got in he went to the wall safe and opened it up and—"

Gorman stopped short and looked at me. It seemed to me that there were doubt and distrust in his expression.

"Go on," I cried. "What did you find?"

"We found," he said, speaking slowly and putting special emphasis on his third word. "Two jewel boxes there, the one with the pearls and the other one."

"What," I cried, "what at this incredible bit of news, 'two jewel boxes'?"

SOME RECORD AIR FLIGHTS

Give Proof That Birds Are Still the Undisputed Champions in the Flying Game.

Long-distance flights by birds have long been anticipated by the birds themselves, says the Christian Science Monitor. Recent proofs of their endurance and wanderlust comes in a report from Cape Town, which says that five swallows have been traced recently from banners in England to temporary homes in South Africa. These birds were ringed as nestlings and found by a happy chance at the other end of the world. One, nesting ringed in Lancashire, was found in Cape Province in February of the next year; another, ringed in Yorkshire, was reported next March in Orange Free State; another, ringed in Yorkshire, was recovered in East Griqualand the following February; a fourth swallow, this time an adult, ringed in Staffordshire was recovered in Natal 19 months afterward; the fifth bird, ringed on June 1, 1913 in Stirlingshire, was found in February, 1920, at Lake Chrissie.

The ringing scheme was inaugurated by J. H. Whitberby, editor of British Birds.

RUBY IS JULY BIRTHSTONE

Gem Has Been Associated Through the Centuries With Some Remarkably Quaint Superstitions.

The ruby is the birthstone of July. It was associated in ancient times with many queer superstitions. How these old fancies originated or how they could have been palmed off on the public it is difficult to imagine. The fact that the common people had implicit faith in them proves how very much more credulous the world once was than it is today.

For instance, the ancients believed that if a ruby were worn about the neck it conferred the power of seeing in the dark. One wonders what monumental faker started this absurd conceit and for what purpose. It was generally believed, however, possibly because rubies were costly and the common people could not test the matter for themselves.

The ruby also was supposed to be a talisman against evil spirits, the plague and poison. By the deepening of its color it forewarned its wearer against impending misfortune. If tied upon the forehead in a linen cloth it was believed to be a specific for disease of the eye.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Kingtchen an Ancient City.
Kingtchen is one of the four largest towns of China. Technically it is not a city. It is a town because it has no wall. In reality it is a busy industrial city, with a population of 300,000. Two-thirds of the people are directly engaged in the manufacture and sale of porcelain and pottery. Historically it dates back to the Han dynasty, 200 A. D. It is during this period that we had the first records of the production of porcelain in China, though earthenware vessels were probably produced some centuries earlier.

MAKING HER WAIT

By RUBY H. MARTYN.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Grizel had stopped on her way home to put another bit of money in the village bank. But the big house had never seemed so lonely nor her waiting quite so futile as it did this sunny day when her bank credit stood for an even thousand. Grizel held the worn book tightly as she went up through the house, where she had lived alone since her father died. She did not need to glance through the open doors to be reminded that the rooms needed renovation. Had she not known the way so well she would have stumbled on the attic stairs because of tears. Living here alone, saving every bit she could to eke out the restoration fund, Grizel was keeping her trust for the soul and body of Jim Brett.

"I promised always to be waiting, and to believe he will make good," she whispered on the stairs.

Stepping into the attic she locked the door behind her and crossed toward the eaves. She always did lock the door before she opened the old, iron-bound sea chest that smelled of the stuff of much voyaging around the world with some ancestor.

When they were children Grizel and Jim had thought the rambling, attic a marvelous place for games and dangles in distress, and kings and queens and knights errant. Even then Grizel had kept her best treasures in the old sea chest, and what treasure could need more careful guarding than Jim's story of temptation and fall, and his determination to make good the awful deficit he had peculated from the bank? Was not that confidence for her the greatest surety of his love?

So it was that Grizel had kept her trust these five years since the shortage had been discovered and Jim had fled to escape the punishment. How time stretched ahead until he would have saved the money to make restitution and return? She dared not say a word of assurance, for Jim in his far country. She dared not lose for one moment the grip on her own faithful waiting. That supply must have some hold on Jim and now she knelt there by the open chest to renew her promise.

Somewhere at a distance a shop whistle blew, and Grizel jumped up. She had forgotten the attic door key that had slipped into the folds of her serge gown, and it clattered to the floor bounced sharply on the plank, and slipped into a wide floor crack. Grizel heard it hit the sides of the partition as it fell down and down.

"Now I'm locked up here," she cried, dismayed by the immediate difficulty.

She could not hope to break down the door of strong, hand-hewn planks. She could not hope to make any neighbor hear from the single, small, back window of the attic. It was a question when she might be searched for. She opened the window to let in the sunny air, and knelt by the sill and laughed softly at her sorry plight. She might well be a real damsel in distress. And Jim had always come to the rescue when it was a girl.

The shop whistle blew again, and Grizel settled to watch. The shop door had lengthened to the wall when a foot crunched on the gravel walk below. Some one was at the house door.

"I'm locked into this attic," called Grizel. "If you will go to the shed you will find a huge magnet to throw a rope I will let down."

When she had the rope down she came around the corner with the shed door open, and tied it on.

"I'll wait, my lady Grizel," he called.

"Jim?"

"Pull away," he said steadily.

Grizel's hands trembled on the coil of the magnet, and then she let it down through the floor crack to reach the key. Would the magnet find that iron? Would the key cling fast? The rope in her hand slackened when the magnet touched bottom, and then she pulled it taut. The key was found and held!

Flinging open the unlocked door she saw Jim, older, thinner, with eyes that questioned hers, as he stood there on the attic stairs. Grizel put out her hand, but he had no mind for social amenities.

"I've just handed the money in at the bank," he said, slowly.

"You saved it all?"

"Every cent! I'm ready to start for myself now. I guess I need you more than ever, Grizel, but it isn't fair to ask you to make any such wait as you may have to until I'm on my feet. That's what I came around to say."

"I don't see us waiting, Jim! I've got some money saved that I can use to fix the house up, and we can start having a home right now, my knight."

"My lady Grizel! A fellow just has to keep making good with yourself having the faith that he will," said Jim.

FOR PROSECUTING ATTORNEY

PAUL W. VOORHIES

HE STANDS FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

The Detroit News Says:

"By inducing Paul W. Voorhies to become a candidate for the nomination for prosecuting attorney the people of Detroit have accomplished a distinct forward step in the movement to make Detroit a safe place to live in, of which the new municipal court is the point of focus."

"In this instance it is emphatically true that the office has sought the man. The people of Detroit could hardly do a better thing for themselves and for the cause of good order and obedience to the law than to elect Mr. Voorhies. He is decidedly the right man for the place.—Editorial, June 28, 1920."

The Detroit Free Press Says:

"In the opinion of the Free Press the candidacy of Paul W. Voorhies for the position of prosecuting attorney gives the voters of Wayne county an opportunity they cannot afford to overlook. Mr. Voorhies has had extensive experience as assistant and as chief assistant in the office he now aspires to conduct, and his record for conscientiousness and efficiency is exceptional. . . . When all of Mr. Voorhies' qualifications are taken into consideration, he seems to us to be decidedly the man Wayne county needs on the job. The voters may cast their ballots for him confident that they are performing their duty by the community."—Editorial, July 30, 1920.

Roll the Table Cloth.
In some of the domestic science schools the pupils are now taught to roll table cloths instead of fold them, since the folds in the linen are always the first places to show wear. The cloths are ironed flat and rolled while being ironed. Start to roll them as soon as a half a yard is reached and keep the roll directly in front of you as fast as the ironing is done. The brown paper may be used if you do not have a regular roll. One clever woman procured several cloths and placed them end to end. They were then with a force with paper tape on each side. This makes a roll found for the roll.

NURSING SERVICE IS RAPIDLY EXPANDING

This American Red Cross Work Flourishing in Small Towns Throughout Country.

More than 37,000 graduate nurses have been enrolled in the American Red Cross to date and its department of nursing is daily increasing this enrollment.

The department of nursing has been authorized to maintain an adequate reserve of nurses for the army and navy. It will continue to supply the needs of the United States Public Health Service to which it has assigned more than 1,000 nurses in the last year.

It will assist in establishing proper nursing service in foreign countries where the American Red Cross has organized hospitals, dispensaries and schools for nurses. Countries in which the American Red Cross has been established for thousands of women to have never received any education in this direction. Rural nursing which has been placed at a disadvantage, through the department of nursing and local Red Cross chapters.

Public health nursing has been extended to many rural communities and now nurses are actively in harness on small towns and counties. Nearly a thousand efficient nurses have already been assigned to this kind of work.

The department of nursing is uniting with other organizations in a year's campaign in recruiting nurses for training schools in educating the general public as to standards of nursing education and in showing the community their responsibility to the schools of nursing. It will endeavor to meet all these needs as well as to continue the enrollment of students who will be utilized as instructors in home dietetics, in developing nutritional clinics, and in supplying dietitians for the United States Public Health Service and the civilian hospitals.

The nursing service will continue to offer to women and young girls the opportunity of securing education, in home hygiene and care of the sick in every community in the country. This instruction has not only laid the foundation for public health but in some places has given impetus to the establishment of hospitals and community health centers.

"As a community profits by the work of the nurse," says Miss Clara L. Noyes, director of the department of nursing, "it is logical that the community should be aroused to its responsibility. The American Red Cross stands ready to help in general campaign of recruiting and must have the support, sympathy and understanding of the medical profession as well as the intelligent cooperation of the people at large."

HOME SERVICE FOR EVERYBODY IN NEED

Do you know what the present day Home Service of the American Red Cross is?

Many people do not know that, besides completing the work for ex-service men, especially the disabled, it provides the same neighborly service to families in general that it formerly gave families of soldiers, sailors and marines.

"Home Service covers a wide and varied field," says Frederick C. Munroe, general manager of the American Red Cross. "It gives aid to families in solving such problems as budget planning, marketing, tiding over times of financial stress, keeping children in school, helping crippled children, aiding backward and deserted mothers, children in conflict with the laws. It renders service to the homeless and transient, to the illiterate, to tenement dwellers, to the unemployed, and gives friendly assistance and advice to foreign speaking groups."

In addition to helping families in the solution of their own problems, Home Service helps in strengthening the weak spots in the social life of communities. It joins hands with others to make communities safer, healthier and happier.

Organizing action along lines in which the community is already interested is one of the objects of Home Service. It has established community meetings, patriotic celebrations, pageants and picnics. Rest rooms, recreation facilities, play supervisors and moving pictures have been provided. Through Home Service other agencies are influenced to bring about improved commercial amusements and better school facilities and to promote traveling libraries as well as to secure county agricultural and home demonstration agents.

If you need assistance at any time, go to the secretary of the nearest Red Cross chapter and describe the situation. Your confidence will be sacredly respected and every possible effort will be made to aid you.

American Red Cross Roll Call.

The Fourth Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross will be held this year from Armistice Day, November 11, to Thanksgiving Day, November 23, inclusive. During this period the men and women of the United States will pay their annual dues and renew their membership.

TRADE MARK

Farm Tractor

The Fordson cuts the cost of preparing land almost to half of what it costs with horses. But even more important is the fact that the Fordson saves from 30 to 50% of the farmer's time. And time saved—getting fields in shape to plant in the proper season, getting things done when they should be done—means money to the farmer. Besides it solves the labor problem.

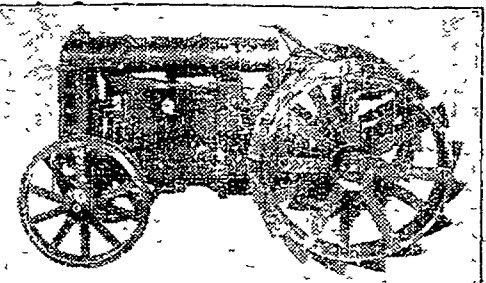

As over the machine-way is proving efficient, faster, easier than the old hand way. In the factory, the machinery increases production, saves labor—produces more, at less cost. And that is what the Fordson does on the farm. The Fordson way is the machine way of farming. Besides it solves the labor problem.

The Fordson's first cost is the lowest in the market and the after operating cost is lowest. It is a compact easily handled tractor, backed by the greatest tractor service organization in the United States.

We are Fordson dealers. Not only do we sell Fordson tractors, but we carry a stock of Fordson parts and employ Fordson mechanics to help the farmers get the best results from the Fordson.

The first Methodist Episcopal church of Farmington has held a series of association with the community.

The original incorporators are Paul E. Perkins, Edgar S. Per-

David H. Nichols, Fred M. Warner, J. J. Dickerson, and Mrs. C. J. Bates, and Mrs. Lottie Mae Arthur.

A chapter of the Oakland County Red Cross was formed here Friday afternoon and the following committee was appointed for this township and village: R. A. Babcock, Isaac Bond, Mesdames Minnie Wilbur, Harry McRacken, Joe Sullivan, Frank Allen, Dr. S. D. Holcomb, Dr. J. A. Otter, Dr. V. S. Switzer, Rev. Sidney D. Eya and Miss Frances Knight.

Driving his car, it is alleged, while he was under the influence of liquor, Edward Saunders, Milford, crashed into another machine west of here on the Grand River road last Wednesday afternoon. No one was injured, but both cars were damaged. Following the accident, state constabulary picked up Saunders, together with his companion, Ray McDonald, also of Milford, and placed them in the Farmington lock-up. They were arraigned before Judge John P. Thayer, Saunders on the charge of operating a motor vehicle on the public highways while under the influence of liquor, and McDonald on a drunk charge. Saunders drew a fine of $50, while McDonald was fined $20 and $5 costs.

Five persons were injured last Wednesday when a car driven by D. Chubb of South Lyon, struck a deep hole filled with soft gravel while traveling at a fast rate of speed, and overturned. Mr. Allen, Mr. Smith, Mrs. Marshall and little daughter June, also of South Lyon, were the other occupants. Mr. Allen suffered a badly lacerated cheek which proved to be the worst of the injuries, none being serious. He was taken to South Lyon where his cut was dressed. Dr. Holcomb of Farmington, administered first aid to the other occupants. The party was on its way to Maclellay lake to visit the pastor of the Presbyterian church, and it was while coasting down a hill near Johnson road near Farmington that the accident occurred.

CATHOLIC SEMINARY NOW ASSURED.

During the past three months at the head of the seminary campaign the directors and clerks have labored unceasingly making plans and directing their execution, and today congratulations are heaped upon them as conductors of one of the most successful campaigns in the country.

The minimum to be raised was four million dollars. Many were pessimistic and thought it could not be raised. Bishop Michael J. Gallagher and his cohort of workers were more optimistic and undaunted by the feeble barriers, and today pledges will total in the neighborhood of $3,000,000.

This was made possible by the perfect organization at headquarters, directing the campaign, and the wholehearted response of the people with liberal donations is the reward.

This money will be used in building, equipping and endowing the Sacred Heart seminary in the city of Detroit. When completed, it will be one of the finest and most complete Catholic institutions of learning in the United States. Here young men will be able to pursue the twelve years of study necessary to the Catholic priesthood and this at no expense to the young man.

In the past the financial problem has prevented many a young man from following this vocation. This fact alone, that so many could not follow their calling in life animated the Catholic people of the diocese of Detroit and spurred them on to make a sacrifice of their temporal goods that the poor boy might stand on a par with them.

HAVE YOU BOUGHT COLD TEA?

If you have ever purchased cold tea when you were expecting to secure Old Crow or Walker's Best, here is a chance to get even with the culprit who put up the job on you. You will be given an opportunity to unburden your soul at the Wayne county prosecuting attorney's office.

Charles Ferry, assistant prosecuting attorney, has announced that he stands ready to prosecute those who sell fake whisky and victims of the sales will not be liable to arrest if they tell their troubles.

Illit run sellers have obtained hundreds of thousands of dollars in and near Detroit by disposing of fraudulent whisky, said Attorney Ferry. "Invariably these salesmen, when caught in their acts, defy the buyer of their spurious product to complain to the authorities. The buyer fearing he will be arrested if he makes the fact that he has attempted to buy liquor, keeps silent. There is nothing in the prohibition law providing punishment for those who buy whisky. It is the seller that the authorities are after and if those who are cheated by illit run dealers will report the fact, prosecutions will follow."

The assistant prosecutor announced charges of obtaining money under false pretenses would be lodged against a dozen of the illit runners if their names were revealed by their victims.

TEXAS FARM BOYS TOLD THEIR MICHIGAN.

About 100 Boys' Club champions from Texas crossed Michigan on Tuesday August 22 in the course of a 5000 mile trip through the northern and eastern parts of the country. The Texas visitors stopped at East Lansing for a few hours to inspect the grounds of the Agricultural college building and lawn, before going on to Detroit.

The lucky boys on the special train won their big journey by virtue of victory in a state wide club boys' contest, in which several thousand leading young farmers of the southwestern state took part. The Texas Chamber of Commerce at Dallas, and the Agricultural and Mechanical college of Texas jointly made the trip possible and took care of arrangements.

Expressions of enthusiasm over Michigan farms were made by the Texans who had just passed through the richest agricultural sections of the country. The M. A. C. crops test plots and herds of beef and dairy cattle, sheep, swine, and horses were examined carefully, as were all phases of Michigan agriculture.

An interesting feature of the stop at M. A. C. was the shower bath the youngsters took in the big college gymnasium. Several days of dusty and continuous travel had put the boys in such a condition and mood that they took to the water like a flock of ducks.

TO ESTABLISH MORE HATCHERIES

The Michigan fish commission has decided to open a campaign having for its object the establishment of a hatchery in every senatorial district in the state where there are lakes and streams. Fish thus procured would be planted in the lakes and streams of the senatorial district in which they were hatched, according to the statement issued by John L. A. Glavier of Petoskey, one of the three commissioners. The other commissioners are Walter J. Ruusaker of Saginaw and Richard E. Pollette of Detroit.

TRACTORS TO SHOW AGRICULTURISTS HOW TO DO ALL WORK OF CROP RAISING WITH MINIMUM OF EFFORT.

MODEL PLANT IS BEING SET UP AT STATE FAIR

Henry Ford is going to set up and operate a model farm during the 10 days of the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 3-12, it has been announced by G. W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the fair association. Mr. Ford will endeavor to show how practically all of the work of a farm can be done by machinery. His farm tractors will supply the power.

The "farm" will be set up on a section of the big fair grounds at Detroit facing Woodward avenue, where crops grown during the summer will be ready for harvesting at the time of the fair. Model farm buildings, all lighted and heated by electricity developed by tractor power, will be erected as a part of the complete farm equipment.

Ford tractors will show farmers visiting the fair how ground can be prepared for planting with the least amount of human effort. Planting equipment will show how the actual planting can be done. Harvesting machinery then will be set to work. A field of wheat will be harvested and threshed. The grain will be hauled to a small mill on the farm and turned into flour which in turn will be made into bread in a model bakery. Slices of fresh warm bread, spread with butter, churned in the farm dairy by tractor power, will be passed out to visitors. In the meantime on another section of the "farm" tractors will be busy cultivating corn and other crops will be cutting and gathering the corn crop.

We want to make our model farm an educational exhibit to show just what can be done on a farm with a tractor, said one of the Ford tractor experts at the Ford plant in Dearborn where the big exhibit is being prepared. "It is our idea to carry to the farm the idea that a tractor is a mobile power unit which can be moved about where it is needed and to offer to him just a few suggestions for the wide variety of uses to which a tractor can be put. By using his ingenuity he can find scores of other ways of using the power which he has at hand in his tractor."

More than a dozen tractors will be used in the exhibit. Those to furnish power for Maloney farm units will simply be backed up to the machinery to which power is to be delivered, their rear wheels lifted from the ground and power belts run over the wheels. The ease with which a tractor can be adapted to nearly any purpose on the farm is one of the big points to be brought out on the model farm.

LAST THING IN AUTOS
TO BE SEEN AT FAIR

Announcement has been made by the Michigan State Fair that the entire automobile building this year will be given over to the automobile show, always a big feature of the fair. Passenger cars will occupy the entire second floor and trucks the first floor. Reservations for space were made in such number that many companies could not be accommodated and all of the space in the building has been taken.

The passenger car show, automobile manufacturers and dealers say, will be on a par with the annual Detroit Automobile Show. Thirty-two different makes of cars are to be shown in the passenger car exhibit alone.

VETCH-RYE PROVE TO BE FINE COMBINATION.

Vetch and rye have proved to be a great combination in western and northern Michigan, declares J. F. Cox, head of the crops department at M. A. C. The ability of this crop to improve the yielding ability of soils, particularly light land, is well known. Vetch seed is bringing a high price and it is likely that the strong demand for Michigan grown seed will continue.

For best results vetch and rye should be planted from August 15 to September 1," says Professor Cox. "Although early September seedlings often do very well. The usual rate of planting is 20 pounds of winter vetch with three pecks or one bushel of rye. Light ground should be rolled firmly at time of seeding."

Michigan orchard men are using vetch and rye to an increasing extent as a green manuring crop for planting between fruit trees. The demand from this source has been so great that there is hardly enough Michigan grown seed produced to meet the demands of the orchard men alone.

Culture for inoculation may be secured from the department of bacteriology at the Michigan Agricultural college, East Lansing. A charge of 25 cents a bottle to cover costs is made for this. One bottle contains sufficient material to inoculate a bushel of seed—directions for application accompany the material.

BOYS AND GIRLS ACHIEVING BIG SUCCESS WITH CHICKEN FLOCKS.

A Boy's Back-Yard Poultry House, Constructed by Himself.

In Catawba county, North Carolina, five boys and their first names are Paul and Allen. The poultry club agent who supervises their work does not state in his report what their middle names are, but, judging from their achievements, Hunter would be a generous estimate. In 1919 these two lads made a profit of $547.79 on their backyard poultry and squabs and won 27 first prizes in the best shows in the state in both open and club classes.

Paul and Allen belong to one of the many poultry clubs which are organized by the United States department of agriculture and the state colleges. Last year they started the season's work with 60 standard bred hens of three different breeds—White Leghorns, Barred Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Reds. They also had chickens which the boys sold from their flock during the year amounting to $703.74. As their expenses were $256.22, a profit of $447.52 was left.

One end of the poultry house in the Wagon back yard is devoted to guinea, of which Paul and Allen have about 100 pairs. A fine pen outside allows the birds an opportunity for outdoor flying and completes a practical inexpensive pigeon loft. A few every week these boys have shipped dressed squabs to New York. In 1919 they sold 785 squabs at a price which from looking most of the young birds hatched in January and February is far below what they hope to sell in an ordinary year. The profit received for the month sold was $145.94. The cost of their feed was $14.94, leaving a profit for the boys of $131.

Juvenile Poultry Clubs

Only in comparatively recent years has poultry production been recognized as both a valuable and important part of the operation of the farm. One of the largest fact factors in bringing about the realization of the importance of the poultry industry is the establishment of poultry clubs among the boys and girls. Just as poultry keeping was formerly considered a minor branch of farm work, so it was formerly thought that the keeping of fowls was purely an activity for adults. With the development of other forms of agricultural clubs among children it was found that there was a very definite place for clubs having for their object the production of poultry. In 1912 this project was formally launched by the United States department of agriculture in the state of Virginia.

The poultry club work was begun on a very small and conservative scale to see if it would be profitable and practical. At the end of 1913 the success of the work, as it was carried on in three counties in Virginia with 150 members, proved that it had wide possibilities for effective results. The project was not only highly practicable in accomplishing its principal object—interesting the boys and girls in rural sections in raising poultry—but it demonstrated that the people in sections where the clubs were formed realized the importance of the work.

Produce of Club Members.

In 1919 there were 29,450 boys and girls engaged in poultry work in the United States. From reports submitted by over 12,000 of them it is shown that they raised 400,352 chicks to maturity, and their flocks produced for them 1,403,719 lbs. in poultry and eggs.

When it is considered that this amount of poultry products was produced by less than one-half the number of members enrolled, it is reasonable to assume that the poultry products produced by all the club members amounted to considerably over half a million dollars.

WHORLED MILKWEED IS VERY POISONOUS

Plant is Especially Dangerous to Trail Sheep Over.

Cattle Should Not Be Given Opportunity to Eat Any Considerable Amount of Weed—Horses Not Likely to Eat It.

Stockmen should learn to recognize and avoid the whorled milkweed. It is a plant very poisonous to both horses and sheep, which grows abundantly in certain sections of southwestern Colorado, southern Utah and the northern border of Arizona and New Mexico. According to the United States department of agriculture, which is making an investigation of the effects of this plant on stock, horses do not seem to be particularly susceptible to its poison. It is especially dangerous to trail sheep over a whorled milkweed area, or to feed them down in the immediate neighborhood.

The whorled milkweed is a toothlike plant not more than 10 to 20 inches high, with great leaves on short petioles and in abandoned fields. As it is a plant with 2 1/2 to 3 inches of the plant will kill a sheep, and 2 1/2 inches may kill a goat or old steer if it is not likely to eat it, but if it does it is as much as its life is worth.

In most cases if poisoning occurs when animals are confined to areas where the plant grows and have little chance to get under such circumstances the results are fatal. Many of the cases have been killed by eating the plant during the night. It is not a plant which is sufficient quantity to be affected by its usually the horses which will prevent death if it has been found.

The whorled milkweed is extremely dangerous to cattle, but by cutting it down before the leaves are formed much can be accomplished in its control and along with ordinary weeds from one to three feet in height.

Persons interested in securing more information regarding this menace to live stock, and illustrations by which it can be easily identified should write the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., for a department bulletin entitled "The Whorled Milkweed."

GETTING AWAY FROM SCRUBS

Use of Purebred Sires of Good Quality Is Goal Toward Which Move Is Directed.

Scrub live stock, 450; grades, 430; purebreds, 173. This is a typical farm example of a gradual change away from scrub animals and toward those of better breeding. Purebred sires bring this change about rapidly.

The figures mentioned represent the live stock on a Florida farm where a owner is enrolled in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" movement. Of the total number of animals listed 44 were sires—all of them purebred. The use of purebred sires of good quality is the goal toward which the better-sires campaign is directed.

POULTRY NOTES

A well balanced mixed ration is best.

Leg weakness is especially common in chicks that are heavily fed and growing rapidly.

Feeding the maturing pullet requires careful thought, just as does the feeding of growing children.

The best treatment for digestive disturbances of young chicks consists in feeding of buttermilk or sour milk.

The Mediterranean or egg breeders are best suited for the production of white-shelled eggs.

A HOT WEATHER LUNCHEON.

Even in warm weather a hot soup is enjoyed, especially those made of fresh green vegetables, such as peas, spinach, vegetable omelets or celery. Cucumber soup may not be so well known, but it is a most appetizing one.

Cream of Cucumber Soup.—Have ready one cupful of stewed cucumber, rubbed through a sieve. Take the factor in which the cucumber is stewed reduce it to half a cupful of boiling, and see to it that it is a soup. Put into a saucepan one tablespoonful of butter, season with salt, pepper and a dash of lemon juice. Stir in the cucumber and the sides of the pan. Add three cupfuls of cold milk and stir constantly until it boils. When the mixture is as thick as cream, add a dash of lemon juice and the half-cupful of liquid. Mix thoroughly, boil up once and serve.

Eggs à la Bourgeoise.—Cut slices of bread half an inch thick and trim off the crusts. Lay on a buttered platter and spread generously with grated cheese. Pour eggs enough to cover the bread, season with salt and pepper and grate nutmeg, pour over the bread and bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are set.

Creamed Fish With Potato.—Prepare creamed salmon as usual and put a layer of the fish in a baking dish, cover with a layer of cold, mashed potato, then with another layer of fish until the dish is full and the potato on top. For each bit of butter, sprinkle with a little salt and crumbs and bake in a hot oven.

Macaroni With Codfish.—Take one cupful of macaroni, add one cupful of milk and one cupful of codfish. Put into a buttered baking dish, season with salt, pepper, grated cheese and a little milk to moisten. Bake in a hot oven.

Potato Border.—Make a rim of mashed potato around a well buttered plate. Fill the center with cream of fish or with buttered crumbs and bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown.

Chopped and boiled are great about the fish, and are great for good food for the family.

WHAT TO HAVE FOR LUNCHEON.

For a warm weather luncheon, and this is a good one to digest, try a fish dish for the main course, a salad and a light dessert with a fruit or a hot drink as one wishes.

Curried Salmon.—Clean a small salmon and fry brown in a tablespoonful of butter. Mix one cupful of curry powder with one cupful of flour and a pinch of salt. Sprinkle the butter with the mixture and stir until the butter is thick. Add one cupful of hot water, stirring all the while. When the sauce is thick, add one cupful of fish and cook until smooth and thick. Cool, fill the shell and cover with a meringue made from the beaten whites with two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Brown in the oven and serve at once.

Peas and Carrots.—Clean and dice enough carrots to make two and one-half cupfuls. Steam until tender; put through a sieve; add butter and flour, one tablespoonful each; one beaten egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of pepper and a grating of nutmeg. Press into a ring mold, cover with greased paper and steam twenty minutes. Fill the center with cooked seasoned peas and garnish with parsley.

Tomato Herbs d'Oeuvres.—Arrange slices of tomato cut one-half inch thick on thin rounds of browned cornmeal mush. Cover the tomato with a paste made of cottage cheese mixed with a few chopped nut meats and add a seasoning of chopped chives and radishes. Garnish with radish roses or with olives. Serve at dinner.

KEEP YOUNG PIGS IN CLEAN PENS.

Young Porks Should Not Be Housed in Pens Contaminated by Other Swine.

Investigations reported in a recent technical publication of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, disclosed additional evidence of the importance of keeping young pigs in clean pens that have not been contaminated by other swine.

A roundworm of pigs, known as Ascaris suum, is held responsible not only for many deaths among swine but for a large proportion of the fruits among these animals. Development and perpetuation of the roundworm is fostered by badly drained and moisture-soaked hog lots, which are on this account dangerous to young pigs and not good for pigs of any age.

Soil May Become Infested. Eggs of the parasite may remain alive in soil for five years and even longer. Places occupied by pigs harboring the adult worms in their intestines will become badly infested with the eggs. Pigs farrowed and kept in such places are certain to pick up many of these eggs, and even suckling pigs are liable to swallow eggs present in dirt adhering to the teats of the sows.

Investigations by the bureau have proved that after the eggs have been swallowed and have hatched in the intestine the young worms do not immediately suffice down, but penetrate the wall of the intestine and travel to the liver and the lungs. From the lungs they crawl up the windpipe and then down the esophagus and return to the intestine. Only after they have passed through the lungs do they establish themselves in the intestine and grow to maturity.

May Cause Pneumonia. In passing through the lungs the young worms cause more or less damage to these organs. Pneumonia may result and the animal may die about a week or ten days after infection. Symptoms of the pneumonia among pigs are commonly known as "thumps." Not all cases of "thumps" come from this source but the worms are frequently the cause. Young pigs are more susceptible than older pigs to infection and are also more likely to suffer severely from migration of the young worms through the lungs.

There is no treatment for the lung stage of the parasite. If the pig survives he may later be treated with worm remedies to remove the worms from the intestine. In such cases, however, it commonly happens that the animal has been so seriously injured by the worms during their migration through the lungs that even after their expulsion from the intestine the pig is unable to make up for the damage he has received, although he does better than if allowed to go untreated.

CO-OPERATIVE GRAIN CONCERNS ASSISTED

Bureau of Markets Ready to Make Timely Suggestions.

Furnishes Specimen Copies of By Laws and Indicates Proper Methods of Organization and Administration of Companies.

In the United States there are some 11,000 co-operative marketing associations. To many of them the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, has given valuable assistance by furnishing specimen copies of by-laws and by indicating proper methods of organization and administration.

The organization of co-operative grain elevator companies is the title of Bulletin No. 302, issued by the United States department of agriculture upon this subject. The bulletin is addressed to those who desire assistance in the formation of co-operative grain elevators, but the subject matter is treated in a manner that makes the bulletin of interest to those engaged in other lines of co-operative endeavor as well.

The scope of the pamphlet is limited to matters regarded as fundamental and general, and it is intended that the suggestions and recommendations be considered with reference to and in connection with special co-operative laws and the laws governing corporations in each of the several states of the Union.

The bulletin points out that the success of any organization, whether co-operative or for private profit, rests upon sound or economic need, a sound organization plan, and efficient management. It then details the various factors that produce these basic conditions. It dwells upon the organization of joint stock companies, private corporations of the capital stock form, and co-operative associations incorporated under special co-operative law, the three common forms of organization of farmers' elevator enterprises in the United States.

Under the chapter of preliminary survey, matters of local conditions, prospective membership, capital, volume of business and methods of survey are covered. Then the processes of actual organization are discussed and a suggested form of by-laws given. The bulletin also contains some general suggestions regarding the selection of the plant, the choice of directors and a manager, a maintenance agreement, emergency capital, and speculative tendencies.

The pamphlet has been written by experts in matters of co-operative associations. It is the composite result of actual experience, and should prove of valuable assistance to those interested in co-operative marketing. The bulletin may be had, upon request of the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

DAIRY

DETAILS OF COST OF MILK

Department of Agriculture Has Been Collecting Facts and Figures for Several Years.

What does it cost to keep a cow for a year, or to produce 100 pounds of market milk? To answer this question in terms of labor, feed and other cost factors the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture has been collecting for several years facts and figures from various sections of the country. The results for northwestern Indiana, typical of many farms supplying the Chicago market, are now available in bulletin form. In collecting the information the department worked in co-operation with Purdue university.

To give permanent value to the figures, the investigators determined the cost of milk production chiefly in terms of feed, labor, and other important factors. Thus by applying current values to any of the items a dairyman, or anyone else interested, may compare his present costs with those published by the department. Practical farmers owned or handled by resident farmers were used in the investigation.

Among the outstanding results are the following:

The unit requirements for keeping a cow one year were: Concentrates, 1.02 tons; dry roughage, 3.64 tons; haying and grinding concentrates, 1.53; bedding, 0.56 tons; pasture, 1.36 acres; human labor, 164.5 hours; horse labor, 16.2 hours; overhead and other costs, $27.11. Credits other than milk: Manure, 6.8 tons; calves, 0.87 of one calf.

Feed and pasture comprised 57.8 per cent of the total cost of production; labor, 19.5 per cent; overhead and other cost, 22.3 per cent. The total cost was offset 22.3 per cent by calves and manure. A different percentage relationship would exist, however, if present prices for the various items were used.

The extent to which cows of high production save labor was shown

One Way of Lowering the Cost of Milk Production is by Having Cows of Good Breeding and High Productors.

Clearly by comparative figures for the 25 herds studied. The owner of one herd of cows averaging 9,000 pounds of milk annually had to feed and milk nine cows to obtain the same quantity of milk as that given by 42 average cows in other herds.

The results mentioned, together with other details are given more fully in the new publication department Bulletin No. 318, Requirements and Cost of Producing Milk in Northwestern Indiana.

FLY PROTECTION FOR STOCK

Destroy Larvae or Maggots, Remove Breeding Places and Use Fish Oil Repellent.

There are three ways in which animals may be protected from flies. One is by destroying the larvae or maggots from which the flies develop; another is to keep the stable or barn dark and cool, as flies do not usually bother the animals under those conditions, and the other way is to apply an oil or spray to the animal which acts as a repellent. The breeding places for the flies are the decaying straw and manure piles, where the flies live over the winter and where they propagate during warm weather. The minimum amount of these around the barns will help to minimize the number of flies. An oil preparation which can be used as a repellent or the animals can be made as follows: One gallon of fish oil, two ounces of oil of pine tar, two ounces of oil of pennyroyal, one-half pint of kerosene.

MOTORTRUCK AIDS DAIRYMEN

Vehicle Cheapens Cost of Haul, Speeds Up the Delivery and Saves Valuable Time.

Dairymen everywhere have found the motortruck a great help in delivering their products to their patrons. It cheapens the haul, speeds up the delivery, and saves much valuable time and labor. It also insures the delivery of the dairy products in much better condition which will insure better prices and better satisfied customers. The only wonder is that more dairymen have not purchased motortrucks.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Watch the horses and see that they do not have sore necks.

An acre of alfalfa or clover, when properly fed, is said to make as much pork as an acre of corn.

The cleaning and disinfection of railroad stock cars is an important means of preventing the spread of infectious diseases of live stock.

Importance of Universal Kindergarten Work for All of Our Children.

By MAJ. GEN. W. G. HAAAN, U. S. Army.

If I should be permitted to step for a moment outside of the educational work in the army, I would be persuaded to mention the importance of universal kindergarten work for all of our children. It is in these early states that the mind is pliable and susceptible to proper guidance in correct thinking; in learning to reason honestly to correct conclusions, simple as they may seem, yet complex as they probably appear to the youthful mind.

It is in these early stages that I believe we could and should lead the children's minds in the correct way of thinking, in coming to correct and elementary conclusions, and in their later work to keep constantly before their minds the principles so inculcated.

I think one of the greatest deficiencies in our entire system of education is a lack of leadership among the very young, the children of kindergarten age.

"The Fires of God:" The Story of the Awakening of a Selfish Man.

By LYNN HAROLD HOUGH, President Northwestern University

John Drinkwater's play, "Abraham Lincoln," has secured an unusual hearing in London. Mr. Drinkwater himself recently spoke on the campus of Northwestern University. He is not only a writer of plays, but he is a poet of no mean ability. One of his particularly vivid and telling poems is called "The Fires of God." It tells the story of the awakening of a selfish man. First you feel his shame

"Of having been unstirred of all the sound

Of the deep music of the men that move

Through the world's days in suffering and love."

You feel the quality of a "little man of little vision, great only in unconsecrated pride." You watch the loneliness of a life which has forgotten "the holy sweet communion of men." You follow his experience as when his soul "was stung at last by that most venomous despair, self-pity." You look upon "the trouble of a soul in thrall to mean despair."

Then you watch this man as the great unselfish fires are kindled in his life. You see him listening to the great human voices of those who can say "we know the proud content of men who sweep unbothered before the legionary fears." You see him thrill to the call of brotherhood from those who cherish "all the dear delights that spring from men's communion with man." You respond to his own answer to the lines:

"All with passionate truth to wage
High battle for the word unsaid,
The song unsung, the cause unled,
The freedom that no hope can gauge."

You surrender with him to their appeal, and you, too, cry,

"Together we will march toward the ways
Whom the marshalled hosts of morning wait
In sleepers' watch, with banners wide unfurled
Across the skies in ceremonial state,
To greet the men who lived triumphant days,
And stormed the secret beauty of the world."

World May Be Safe for Democracy; America Safe for Bureaucracy.

By SENATOR THOMAS of Colorado.

The number of bureaus and other agencies in the various departments is steadily multiplying.

We are a bureau-governed country. The world may have been made safe for democracy, but this country was long ago made safe for bureaucracy.

When I was a boy the old Anglo-Saxon faculty of self-reliance, confidence of the individual in himself, and the assumption that the government was created by the people for their security and prosperity was the prevailing sentiment. Nowadays the government is regarded as an institution created and existing for the purpose of doing something for others, and as a consequence every agency and every enterprise which meets with any obstacles during the course of private development now appeals to the United States of America either to take it over or for that amount of assistance which is more than equivalent to the difference between success and failure.

Martians May Resemble Straddle-Bugs; Cannot Communicate With Us.

By HUDSON-MAXIM, in Scientific American.

Now, while it may be possible that Mars is inhabited by some sort of creatures, they could not by any possibility be like ourselves in any essential respect. They are just as likely to resemble straddle-bugs, spiders, or ground-voles as they are to resemble us.

Mars is much smaller than the earth; its atmosphere is much lighter; it must have cooled off much more quickly than the earth; the action of the elements upon it must have been vastly different from that of the elements on the earth, and changes took place upon it with far greater rapidity, so that there was not sufficient time for the slow evolution of various species of animals upon it of such high types as we have upon the earth.

If one were to take a form of printer's types, set to print the Lord's prayer, throw it into pi, and then throw it back again upon the galley, there would be as much chance of the types falling back into their proper places to print the prayer without an error as there is of there being inhabitants on the planet Mars with whom we might by any possibility communicate.

SOVIETS' MISUSE OF POWER

Conditions in Russia Under That Form of Government, Not of a Sort to Commend Themselves to Thinking Men.

Article XXVII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Soviet government has been a costly experiment. Russia is almost succumbing to the treatment; notwithstanding the "Red" army is meeting with success on the field, back of the army conditions in Russia are growing from bad to worse. The Soviet leaders are drunk with power and they have conducted themselves as drunken men generally do. Reckless waste, intolerant officiousness, greed for spoils, are the record they have made. The political machine is the same plundering graft organization under communism in Russia that it is under democracy in other countries. The Soviet government is a political machine, and communism has not changed its character or its methods. It has simply given it larger opportunities for spoils. Greater security in its corruption.

The "Socialdemocrat" prints some interesting extracts from the bolshevik budget for 1919.

According to this newspaper, the revenue for the first half of 1919 amounted to 20,850,000,000 rubles, and the expenditures to 50,702,900,000 rubles, so that the deficit for the first six months of 1919 of Soviet Russia amounted to the enormous sum of over 30,000,000,000 rubles. The acquisition of foodstuffs and necessities of life has cost a deficit of five billion rubles, and the railways four and a half billion rubles; thus a half year of bolshevik rule cost more than the total outlay on the whole war.

Money Expended Recklessly.

The report of the bolshevik, Nemeny, on the audit of the central soviet commission in charge of all textile factories, appeared in the "Sovetskaya Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn" of February 25, 1919. "The finance credit division of the central soviet commission received up to February 1, 1919, 3,400,000,000 rubles. There was no control of the expenditure of money. Money was advanced to factories immediately upon demand and there were cases when money was forwarded to factories which did not exist. From July 1 to December 31, 1918, the central soviet commission advanced on account of products, to be received, 1,845,010,000 rubles. The value of the goods securing these advances received up to January 1, 1919, was only 143,710,000 rubles. The negligent way of doing business may be particularly observed from the way the central soviet commission purchased supplies of raw wool. Up to January 1, 1919, only 129,803 pounds of wool was acquired, whereas the annual requirement is figured at 5,500,000 pounds.

"The tremendous staff of officials (about 6,000 persons) employed by the commission are in the majority of cases doing nothing useful. It appears that there were on the payroll of this institution 125 persons who actually were not in the service at all, but who were receiving salaries. There were cases where the same persons received salaries twice for the same period. The efficiency of the officials is negligible to a striking degree."

Such soviet institutions, Nemeny says at the end of his report, are a beautiful example of deadening bureaucracy and must be liquidated.

It would seem that the idealists in charge of the communist program in Russia are experts in "grafting" methods. Payroll padding is among their accomplishments. An innocent bystander might suspect some of these soviet officials of having a leaning toward private property, particularly when it is in easy reach.

Their Own Condemnation.

Probably it is fair to the bolsheviks to state their case in their own words. The bulletin of the central executive committee of the soviets, No. 15, 1919, announces: "We have created extraordinary commissaries and extraordinary commissions without number. All of these are, to a lesser or greater degree, only mischief-makers.

"The tolling population see in the squandering of money, right and left in the commissaries and in their indecent loudness and profanity during their trips through the district, the complete absence of party discipline."

People's Commissar Lunacharsky, according to the "Severnoye Kommuna" of March 23, 1919, declared: "The upper stratum of the soviet rule is becoming detached from the masses, and the blunders of the communist workers are becoming more and more frequent. These latter, according to statements by workmen, treat the masses in a high-handed manner and are very generous with threats and repressions."

The soviet machine has had its "run in" with the workers. The factory committees have been bulldozed. The soviets have been brutal in their treatment of the proletariat.

"The struggle between the soviets and the committee of factory workers is an ordinary occurrence," according to the bolshevik newspaper "Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn" of April, 1919.

Workers Denied Right to Strike. The soviets have the whip hand in their controversy with the workers; they are the government and the "Red" army backs their decrees. There is a final court of settlement for all disagreements between the soviets and the workers. It is the "wall" and the firing squad. The right of strike is denied the workers. Many of those who have dared to strike have paid for it with their lives. The workers are without recourse when commanded by the soviet. Whether or not they were the slaves of the machines before communism came, it is certain that they are now the slaves of the soviets. Even the slaves of the machines and the capitalists who owned the machines, they had the right to strike for their rights. The soviets deprived them of this right.

The bolshevik Sosnovsky, reporting on the condition in the Tver province in the "Izvestia" of the provincial soviet March 9, 1919, wrote: "The local communist soviet workers behaved themselves with rare exceptions, in a disgusting manner. Misuse of power is going on constantly."

The conduct of the soviet commissaries is a general scandal in Russia. Their conduct is described in No. 12, January 18, 1919, of the "Izvestia" of the provincial soviets: "The commissaries were going through the Tzaritzin county in sumptuous carriages, driven by three and often by six horses. A great array of adjutants and a large suite accompanied these commissaries, and an imposing number of trunks followed along. They made exorbitant demands upon the toiling population, coupled with assaults and brutality; their way of squandering money right and left is particularly characteristic. In some places the commissaries gambled away and spent of intoxicants large sums. The hard working population looked upon these orgies as complete demoralization and failure of duty to the world revolution."

These pen pictures of life in Russia under the soviet regime are not far removed from the everyday of bolshevism; they are the complaints of bolshevik leaders. Do we need a greater warning of the perils of bolshevism? (Copyright, 1919 Western Newspaper Union)

Reorganize Polish Police Force.

The Polish police mission which went to Warsaw under the direction of Gen. Sir Nevil Macready, commissioner of the metropolitan police, has submitted some reform proposals which the Polish government has accepted and which will have the effect of reorganizing the Polish police force after the style of the metropolitan police. The Polish ministry of justice will cooperate with the British mission in carrying out the scheme, and it is anticipated that the latter will remain in Poland until reorganization has been completed.

Spain Urged to Cut Exports.

An editorial protest against the exportation of shoes, leather, foodstuffs, cotton and linen is published by Imparcial, Madrid. The newspaper gives statistics to show that while the exportation of shoes and leather from January to July, 1918, amounted to 11,000,000 pesetas, during the same period in 1919 exportation of these articles reached a value of 72,000,000 pesetas. The exportation of other raw materials also increased greatly. The Imparcial says this has been the cause of the large increases in the cost of living.

Clemenceau Drops War Duties.

Premier Clemenceau declared in an interview that he could not continue to represent the department of war in the chamber of deputies, adding that "after the effort of the last year I would be loath to start again on a task with a fear that my strength fail me before it could be completed."

"Everything is not finished with our victory," he continued, "we must still accomplish formidable work, demanding patience for which France may be incapable. I will always have a duty to perform, though I have ceased to be a member of parliament."

Belgium Buckles to Her Task.

Belgium is manfully grappling with the great problem of domestic reconstruction. Like practically every other country she is faced with a tremendous shortage of houses, besides her own great devastated areas which must in some way be rehabilitated. Every day, however, the work must become easier, and with a people so remarkably determined to secure unity amongst themselves and the maximum of effort, a comparatively short time ought to see Belgium well on the way to complete rehabilitation.

Italy Urged to Join Russia.

Deputy Cicciotti, in a speech before the Italian chamber, urged Italy to break away from the allies and associate herself with the Russian soviet government. This was the first declaration of the Italian socialists' policy toward the allies.

Immediately after Cicciotti's speech leaders of the Catholic block let it be known that their party has decided against a parliamentary coalition with the socialists.

"Villain."

This word has come down to us from Latin through the French and means a very wicked person. In Roman times, however, a "villanus" (from "villa," a country home or estate) was only a farm servant and often a very good man.

All Women Like Pretty Clothes

We may talk of overalls and uniforms as much as we like, observes a prominent fashion authority, but the love of pretty clothes inherent in every woman never will be suppressed. Those who work toward standardizing fashions for women cherish a vain hope. It is not because women are extravagant that they insist on pretty clothes, for a woman will really work to get what she wants in her dress. She will shop carefully to be sure of the best values and search for dress-makers who will carry out her ideas inexpensively.

Why should we wear overalls? If we adopt overalls and uniforms even to help reduce the cost of living—and it is doubtful whether it would make any great difference in this—we would in time feel as stupid as the overalls look. In a dress of this sort we are limited in the choice of both design and color—and color and pretty clothes may both be said to be synonymous with charm.

Make Their Dresses Over.

One way of economizing in dress is by giving thought to our selection in the first place, and choosing a style that we can easily change. The idea of making a dress over from one fashion to another is typically English. Thus it is quite easy to understand why many English novelists have dressed their heroines from trunks in the family garret. One can imagine that no dress is ever thrown away by an Englishwoman for she expects that either she or some of her descendants will wear it.

In decided contrast to ours, the Parisienne who makes no pretense of being smart would not wear a second season dress. Whereas the Englishwoman wears her clothes year after year because they are good clothes and becoming to her, the French woman has absolutely the dress of the hour which is always a model or a copy of one from a well known firm and which bears the cachet of the best designer's approval for the moment. The smart Parisienne wears this dress almost continuously for a short period. Then she is never seen in it again, but takes up the next smart thing. The Englishwoman during the same period will wear a different dress every day and will keep on wearing this same dress intermittently for a good many months. The American woman makes a happy compromise between the two.

For Summer Dresses.

A smart man, of this summer's dresses show a combination of two materials. There is more back to this idea than might appear on the surface for such a frock needs very little in the way of trimming. As it is always a color combination a frock with some definite color in mind is dotted in soft blue, with a narrow sash and a long collar of plain white organdie contrasting to the bottom of the skirt. The entire dress may be of bright or dark blue, with white dots and a long white organdie collar caught in at the belt and under the hem of the skirt. A hat of peanut straw, bright red in color, the trim bound with white organdie and the Frock of white net with detachable side plaited tunic which may be fastened to a belt or sash.

croon swathed with a scarf of the same material, may complete the costume. Or the straw crown may be removed and one of white organdie substituted.

Another pretty effect is achieved through using two different materials for a frock by making a plain foundation dress, consisting of a straight gathered skirt and simple bodice of white organdie. Over the skirt is placed a side plaited tunic of coral colored Swiss which is open at the front, and a coral overwaist almost like a bolero. The latter is gathered at the waistline and opens at the front so that a wide white panel is revealed from the neckline to the hem. Still more color is induced by a sash of inch-wide gros-grain ribbon of real ocean blue. You may like to work out this model in beige Swiss over white, with a navy sash, or in lavender and white, with a green sash.

For the slender woman. Young girls like frills. So, for the slender young woman the frock in bright colored Swiss organdie is evolved. The hues in which the organdies may be had are ravishing. For instance, there are various shades, and as the material is thin a pretty effect is attained by making one shade over another. That is, if a light flame color is chosen the slip may be a bright red. Two pastel shades, such as pale green over a soft blue, give a lovely effect. Brown over coral and brown over yellow are suggested as combinations. All the frills are pleated edged, so it is not such a task to make this frock as one would suppose. If one wishes, the flimsy may be of white organdie for becomingness, although a smarter effect is attained by making it the same color as the dress.

Since organdie is distinctly a hot weather material, still another model evolved from it is of a very soft green, just a bit lighter than the shade known as holly. It has an apron skirt. A very fine old-fashioned looking white braid and a white sash make the trimming.

English Sateens Again in Vogue.

There was a time when we would have scoffed at the idea of wearing a sateen dress. Now dresses of English sateens are quite in the mode. It is amazing the beauty certain materials acquire directly they become fashionable. We might all become style creators if we had the courage to buy materials when they are not popular and make frocks so pretty that everybody would want to copy them. Of course, when a material such as sateen becomes fashionable its makers give more attention to brightening out pretty patterns. The sateens of this season look like fourtards. There are some with white backgrounds and small conventional designs in bright reds and blues, with here and there a dash of black, that are charming. Then, there is a brown sateen, with a conventional design in white, with accents of black, that is smart.

Design Adapted to English Prints. In a model of English sateen the background of the material is white and the little spots are bright red outlined with black. The sash and trimmings are of organdie. This design adapts itself quite as well to English prints of small pattern. A print with a deep green background and a design in black and white makes a pretty frock of this type. In fact, it is a model that lends itself to many materials. A pink and white checked gingham made after this fashion and trimmed with white organdie makes a pretty country frock.

Wax Porch Floors.

Thoroughly scrub the porch floors and when dry have them waxed with any of the good floor waxes. After this treatment the floors should be polished with a polishing brush just as one would do in polishing hardwood floors. This method preserves the floor and after the porch is treated in this manner one does not have to put water on it during the entire season. Have the porch gone over daily with a broom or a floor mop. Much time is saved this in hot weather and a porch treated in this manner always looks well.

To Clean Neckwear.

The best way to cleanse a delicate collar of lace, net or hand embroidery is to fasten it on a piece of muslin before washing it and ironing it.

The House Dress.

Straight hanging dresses are the most satisfactory for working about the house.
