Other delegations will go from Saginaw, Bay City, Midland, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Ann Arbor, Monroe, Adrian, Flint, Pontiac, Port Huron, Lansing, Muskegon and other cities.

RECITALS BECOMING POPULAR.

The Noonday organ recitals at Central Methodist Episcopal church, in charge of Guy C. Filkins, are attracting a great attendance.

The success of this movement in church work is being aided with interest by pastors and church workers throughout the city.

Only a few large churches throughout the country have attempted services of this description, notably Trinity church, in New York City and the Mormon temple at Salt Lake City, but they have become an attractive institution wherever tried out.—Detroit Journal.

MILFORD FAIR NEXT WEEK.

The Oakland County Fair at Milford will open next week Wednesday and continue until Saturday night and a fine program of events is being worked out by the officers and committees of the fair association. Many special free attractions will be offered and there will be racing on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and Friday will be observed as children's day. Fischer's exposition orchestra will furnish music, and a passenger-carrying aeroplane will make flights each day. The Oakland County Farm Bureau will have a special exhibit of products of farm and orchard.

Water for the special Fair bids on painting the Northville Drug Company's prize for a painting. The Better Baby Contest will take place on Wednesday September 23rd, instead of the 20th, as appears in some of the premium books. This contest will be the most extensive and interesting one ever held in Northville.

DEER SEASON DATES FIXED.

The deer hunting season limits for the coming hunting period have been fixed by the state public domain commission to run from November 13 to November 22. The open season this year covers both the upper and lower peninsular. State Game Commissioner John Baird says there was some difference of opinion among sportsmen as to the dates which should be adopted but it was finally agreed that these dates give as late a season and still get the hunters home in time for their Thanksgiving dinner.

"WENT UP IN THE AIR."

During the home-coming celebration at Farmington Saturday afternoon two of Northville's citizens "went up in the air," and for about twenty minutes "looked down" upon their neighbors. Elmer Perrin and T. R. Carrington were the fortunate ones to indulge in a ride in the aeroplane and enjoyed a splendid view of the surrounding country. Mr. Carrington was given a ride to Northville and back and the journey consumed just eighteen minutes.

ESTABLISHED NEW RECORD.

Traffic Officer Squibbs of Pontiac, formerly a Northville resident, established a new track record for the motorcycle at the State Fair Wednesday. He made a mile in 56 seconds.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Yerkes and son left for Boston Monday for a two weeks' visit.

MILLER-CHATFIELD.

A pretty wedding solemnized on Saturday, August 23th, was that of Miss Lillian Catherine Chatfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Chatfield of Birmingham, and Don R. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller of Northville. It occurred at 4:30 in the afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Standing before a background of flowers, Rev. G. H. North of Port Huron, read the ceremony.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served to the twenty-five guests. Mr. and Mrs. Miller left for Edward Smith's cottage at Leon Lake for a short stay, after which they will be at home to their friends at Northville, Michigan.

Those present included: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Anderson and Mr. Joseph North of Ypsilanti, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Miller of Redford, Miss Helen Miller of Northville, Mrs. C. L. Case of Wayne, Mr. Philip Monckton of Los Angeles, and Misses Lida Jackson, Alice Voorhies, and Edith Burnett of Birmingham—Birmingham Eclectic.

WAS NOT IN GOOD STANDING.

Some weeks ago The Record published an article taken from the Pontiac Press regarding a suit that had been instituted by Emma L. Furman of Wyom against the Grand Hive, L.O.T.M., the complainant claiming benefits from the order. The Record was shown a letter received a few days ago from Emma E. Bower, great record keeper of the order, in which it was stated that Mrs. Furman had not paid one penny into the order during the past ten years. Just how she expects to receive benefits under the circumstances is difficult to understand. The record of the L. O. T. M. has always been to pay all just claims promptly and without controversy.

DIED SATURDAY NIGHT.

John Neuman, who has been in poor health for several months, died at the Henry Hospital, Saturday evening. Funeral services were held from Schrader Bros' chapel Tuesday afternoon with Rev. E. V. Belles officiating burial in Rural Hill cemetery. Mr. Neuman formerly lived in the east later coming to Detroit, thence to Northville. He was well acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Monitt at whose home he was confined by ill health for two months this spring, finally being taken to the local hospital where he has since remained.

FARMINGTON'S HOME COMING A SUCCESS.

Farmington's home coming celebration last Saturday attracted a large crowd and was a decided success from every point of view. The event was a special pleasing and attractive feature and the program of events given during the day pleased the crowd greatly. Northville Community Knights Templar, and forty men and boys added an attractive feature to the parade and was heartily applauded by the people who lined the streets.

MORROW COMING SUNDAY.

On Sunday evening Dr. George W. Morrow will deliver his free lecture, "America's Opportunity at Home and Abroad" at the N. E. church in this village. Dr. Morrow is a forceful and entertaining speaker and will have a message all should hear at this time. He has twice crossed the continent in recent years, speaking on behalf of national prohibition for the Anti-Saloon League, and is regarded as one of the ablest speakers now on the American platform.

INITIATED THREE MINISTERS.

Union Chapter, R. A. M., of this village enjoyed the distinction of conferring degrees upon three ministers on Wednesday night—Rev. F. A. Brass of Wixom, Rev. S. D. Eva of Farmington and Rev. J. R. McWilliams of Redford. They made a splendid team and when the evening's work was over were so well broke they could be driven either double or single and it is said they were able to stand without hitching.

COUNTY MEETING TO BE HELD HERE.

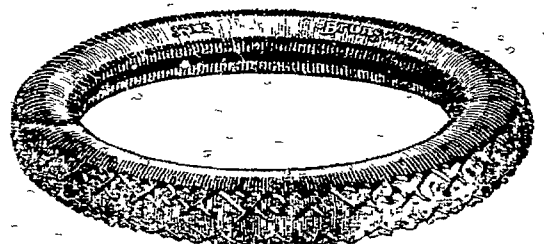

The Wayne County Association meeting of the L. O. T. M. will be held at Foresters' hall in this village on next Monday, the 13th. The meeting will be called at ten o'clock sharp. Lunch will be sold to those who wish to buy, or each member can bring their own lunch. All members are urged to be present if possible. Election of officers will occur in the evening.

Tailored Styles Make Report

FALL displays disclose the fact that fashion still regards the severely plain tailored suit with nothing less than cool tolerance, but smiles at more complicated affairs that include in embroidery and other embellishments. These other embellishments include for stitching and intricate work of cut. Not many buttons are used and flat head is about its place. Taking them as a whole, the new fall suits are tasteful and continue to be suitable as well as charming. Their coats are flared, hip length, with very few exceptions, their skirts high and cozy, their lines loose.

Among the suits, the one-piece dresses are among those present in all the fall displays. Such dresses are usually made in a long or short length or with a skirt of a decorative design and embroidery is often favored.

decoration. The waist line varies in them from normal to very long—a cause for rejoicing on the part of plump women, and slashes of ribbon and silk gain prominence, with these queer backgrounds, are outstanding features of the styles appears in the prominence of brown and other shades that hold their own with a navy blue.

Then a one-piece dress and a fall suit shown in the store began the story of direct change for the coming season. In a straight-forward and accurate fashion, they are reasonable, some they are conservative, some they are innovative, and that women will not improve if they do. That is, we do not have to be subjected to a down-to-earth, or a long length or wide of skirts or decorative design in coats.

"In Silk Attire My Lady Goes"

FORTUNE and Fashion we know are fickle, but they are too wise to turn the cold shoulder on a very good thing, and so those new weaves in silk and sheer silk that made their first success in sports apparel have departed from the main traveled road in several directions. They are counted upon for handsome afternoon dresses, for formal suits and especially for new evening gowns and coats. Their high luster and their splendor, together with the great variety of weaves and beautiful colorings, make them unusually effective in evening dress.

Two new creations as pictured above show their adaptability to formal dress. A handsome afternoon gown at the left, shows a crossbar pattern in two colors made by a plain and crepe weave, in a one-piece garment with a wide, crushed girdle of plain baronet satin. The design is distinctly new with a drop skirt of the same material as the overskirt, and a panel of plain satin like the girdle, set in at each side. It opens at the left side where a double row of small satin-covered buttons do their make-believe part while the real work is done by snap fasteners. The opening discloses a narrow panel of plain satin and edges are piped with satin. The long, straight sleeves have deep cuffs that flare a little and a single row of buttons prominent this novelty. The crossbar pattern is less pronounced in the frock itself than in the photograph, the colors illustrative and beautiful, making a changeable effect in the silk.

A brigaded and crossbar pattern, in lighter colors (American beauty and natter blue in this particular coat) is employed in the handsome evening coat at the right of the picture. The big collar and side panels are of plain blue satin, and the same color appears in the lining. Evening coats furnish a promising field for these colorful and lustrous silk weaves and it has only begun to be exploited.

A SYMPOSIUM OF SALADS.

There is never a sameness in the art of salad making, for one has an infinite variety from which to choose raw materials. Cooked food, odds and ends of leftovers which would otherwise be wasted, may go into the salad bowl and become an attractive dish, with a well-prepared and an appropriate dressing.

Fisherman's Salad.

Take two pounds of cooked fish, one pound of boiled potatoes, a quarter of a head of white cabbage, season with salt and pepper. After flaking the fish and shredding the cabbage add cayenne pepper to season well, one packed beer finely chopped, a so two cucumbers. Mix all together and serve with any good salad dressing.

Potato Salad.

The best potato salad is made with potatoes cooked especially for the salad and seasoned before they become cold. Boil small-sized potatoes with their skins on, peel and cut in cubes, add seasonings of salt and pepper and marinate with a thin dressing—either a cooked dressing thinned with cream or a well-seasoned French dressing. Dressing them while warm sends the seasoning through them and makes a much more palatable salad. Mixed with fresh mustard finely minced, a handful of blanched and shredded carrots and a cucumber or two will make the finest kind of a salad. Providing the salad dressing is a good well-seasoned one. Just before serving add the thick salad dressing and the cucumber unless kept very cold will lose its crispness.

Simple Tomato Salad.

Select a good perfectly ripe tomato of uniform size. Place in a dish and cover with salt and salt for half an hour to cure thoroughly. Rub a salad bowl with the outside of a clove of garlic and arrange the crisp, tender leaves in the heart of head lettuce as a lining to the salad bowl. Arrange the tomatoes cut in quarters or if small cut in quarters without separating the seeds and pour over a good mayonnaise dressing which has been seasoned with a dash of onion.

Veal Salad.

Cook a small piece of veal in a broth made of chicken bones and water, or cook the veal with the chicken. For the meat cut in the broth, then cut in small cubes, mix with celery and salad dressing and it will be hard to tell from a chicken salad.

It matters not how strange the gate they caught with punishment the soul, I am the master of my fate, I am the captain of my soul. In the clutch of circumstance I am not victim or slave; I am the plumb line of chance, My hand is guided but unbound.—Hartley

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

If a cork is too large for the bottle in which you wish to use it, lay it sideways and roll it with a small hard under all the pressure you can put upon it. This will ease it to fit the bottle.

Ripping is an easy task if safety razors are used to do the work.

To keep the eyebrows clean and to stimulate their growth and beauty, they should be brushed gently with a soft brush at night and morning. In applying any tonic or oil only the smallest amount should be used.

Chicken which will not cook tender may be made so by the addition of a teaspoonful of alcohol in the water. Vinegar will also soften the fiber of meat, a tablespoonful to the kettle of stew.

To make mint extract, pick the fresh leaves of mint, wash and dry and pack into a bottle as full as possible; cover with alcohol and let stand two weeks, then strain and bottle for future use. This is the real stuff and one need not fear to use it.

Buckles, beads and buttons of polished steel may be beautifully cleaned by covering with unslaked lime and leaving for a short time.

Suede shoes or slippers may be rubbed with emery paper and they will look like new.

Dry bran is very valuable for cleaning purposes, as is cornmeal. Rub it into fur where the soiled spots are, rub harder, then brush off. Ermine and delicate furs are cleaned well in this way.

Velvet coat collars and collars of men's coats may be cleaned easily with cornmeal wet with gasoline and rubbed well into the pile of the velvet collar and then brushed out. Care should be taken to keep away from all fire.

A damp cloth wrapped around the throat and covered with a dry one will relieve a sufferer from a hacking cough.

To Be Seen at Fashion Shows

Clad in high choker collars of fur and wrapped about with heavy, cold-defying wraps, writes a New York fashion correspondent, the models all over town are tripping the platinums of the fashion shows. These parades are for the retail buyers only, but as they think, so shall the country dress, and it is of no little interest to take note of the things to which the buyers give their sanction. Sometimes one wonders why they do it. One can see the woman looking for something, she thinks is beautiful, being shown only what the buyer thought was beautiful, dismayed by the thing that confronts her, yet driven to buying and wearing it.

Some of the gowns being shown are good, but all of them do not keep up to the highest standard. It leads in the direction of ornate decoration, and they are apt to be very bad. The buyers tell you—and they should know—that women are asking for all this oversupply of decoration. Perhaps they are.

Fortunately the general lines of the silhouettes are straight and short and simple. In other words, they are very good and susceptible of infinite variations. Long waists predominate, and when they are not long they are very, very short, giving an extremely youthful look to the frocks which show them. There are no protruberances to the hip lines. Things are uncompromisingly straight. Some of the skirts, short though they be, tend to hold in about the legs, but most of them are straight and quite scant of material—straight and short and tight. That is the slogan that is supposed to govern the skirts of this coming season, at least for the fall months. The development of winter will be something else—something that develops as the days go on and in the wake of the Paris models which will arrive later.

Sleeves Are Longer.

Sleeves in most of the new gowns have a tendency to fall from their recent established high-water mark. They reach the elbows and drop below the point to a point midway distant between the wrist and elbow and as they reach the hand in a tight fitting manner. Some of the sleeves are quite full and floppy, showing out of a kimono or robe, or are confined at the wrists with tightly fitting cuffs, which are also very out of fashion and which are the worst.

We are no longer a slender nation as far as our women are concerned, but still there is a growing demand for "silk frocks." Most of the new gowns, however, are made originally for slim slimmers, and the consideration of how it enters in, secondarily and as an afterthought.

It is interesting to see the new suits which are made for the new long figure and which have been shown during the past two seasons. These coats reach the knees or extend below them and, because of the extreme shortness of the skirts, there is very little of the latter left to show. Most of these coats are extremely plain in line, and the belts are low. And, with our clever American tailors to do the work, the size of the figure in one way or another seems to make no difference. They can achieve that up and down straight line, it seems, no matter how curved their foundation material may be. They are really artists in this way.

Fur is being used for trimming on many of the suits and gowns, but from a cursory view of the models which have already been shown it would seem as though this material would be used in less quantity than ever before. The collars, to be sure, are broad and wrapping in many instances, but the fur trimmings—as handings and collars for dresses and cuffs and various other bits of garniture—are, as a rule, narrow and tightly fitting, though they are applied with considerable perkiness. Some of the cuffs on dresses are long and floppy about the wrists, but they are made on slender lines all the way round than have been the fur cuffs of former seasons.

Duvetyn in Winsome Shades.

Many of the dresses are made of the various forms of duvetyn which is upon the market now in such fascinating shades. They are more often than not of the chemise type, and there are many variations to this theme. You wonder how there could be such a difference of design on models which have for their foundation the same simple idea of one straight line from shoulder to hem. But each of them

"No Trespassing!"

By SIDNEY E. PORTER

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

Twice Irma Ross had met Dale Westcott and the third time was peeping, the fair, inexperienced young girl told herself with a flutter and a blush.

"Why, it's like some story book romance," declared her closest confidant, Edna Martin. "A stranger in Dodgeville, is he not?"

"Entirely so. He is studying for the bar, he told me, and is on his vacation. It was at the break that I saw him first. My hat blew off and landed on an elder branch just a few inches above the water, teetering and tilting."

"And he?"

"Was fishing, saw my trouble, dropped the pole, made a spring and landed in the water knee deep and caught the hat just as it was swinging free."

"Why, it was almost thrilling!" commented Edna. "And the second time, Irma?"

"It was day before yesterday. There came up a drenching shower as I started across the meadow for home. Again appeared this interesting knight errant, if such exists in these later days."

"He must be following you about," suggested Edna.

"Oh, dear, no! It was all by accident. He drew me under an umbrella and we reached a shelter shed without a drop of rain on me. When the sun came out, he walked with me as far as the wood lot, opened the gate for me and insisted I should keep the umbrella for fear the clouds might come up again. 'I'll pass this gate about noon tomorrow,' he said, 'so, if you will leave the umbrella here, I will get it.'"

"I see," nodded Edna archly. "Oh, Irma! you have certainly got a lover at last!"

"If I am allowed to have one," fluttered Irma timidly.

"Allowed—why, what do you mean?"

"Well, it seems that Uncle Rufus saw me with the young man. Later in the day he questioned me so sharply I almost cried. I never knew him to be so put out. Since his wife died my mother has been his favorite among all the relatives, and he invited me here to see how I would like it and if mother would come later he was to sort of agent, us."

"And make you an heiress, I suppose," murmured Edna. "How delightful!"

"When he spoke to me about this new cousin man I told him just how I had met him. It happened to know more about the incident than you do, so he was angry."

"Why, it's amazing," cried Edna. "What can he have against such a courteous, well bred young man?"

"I don't know," replied Irma, and then she grew indignant. "If Uncle Rufus thinks he has brought my mother and myself to follow out his whims and caprices, I can tell you that I shall leave here very speedily. I am going to write to mamma all about it."

Irma visited the wood lot gate with the umbrella. She hovered about the spot for some little time but noticed her uncle watching her at a distance and returned to the house. By rare good fortune, as she estimated it, she came again across Dale Westcott at a lawn party given by a girl friend. Then there was a week that they did not meet, and coming home one evening Irma was startled to see through an open window her uncle with his head banded and Dale Westcott opposite to him. They seemed to be engaged in earnest conversation. The housekeeper stole to her side.

"Don't be alarmed, dear," she whispered. "Your uncle was attacked by some thieving tramps, returning from the bank with a large amount of money. The young gentleman with him now scattered the villains and recovered the money."

Irma remained near the window. She heard her uncle say: "Young man, you have done me a great favor and I wish to reward you."

"Not with money if you please," spoke Westcott. "If you wish to gratify me very much in another way, allow me to call upon your niece. I will be plain with you. She has attracted me greatly and I do not think she is averse to my attentions."

"But I am!" thundered Rufus, rousing up like the enraged lion. "Young man, gratitude must be put aside in a case like this. I know you and your motive in coming here."

"Know me—motive?" repeated Westcott in wonder.

"Exactly. I saw you two weeks ago in the law office of Brand & Carney at Springfield, to whom I went to make my will."

"Why, yes," answered Westcott. "I am in their service."

"And you gleaned from them a knowledge of the fortune I bequeathed to Irma and her mother. A wealthy heiress was worth the picking, eh?"

Dale Westcott laughed uproariously. "Why, Mr. Lind!" he exclaimed. "I never heard about your will, and as to the availing intentions you ascribe to me, I must tell you that, although only a law student, I am the son of one of the wealthiest merchants in Springfield. As to Irma, it is her rare goodness and beauty alone that have inspired me with a love I shall always cherish."

The stubborn old will soon gave way as conviction deepened in the mind of Rufus Lind, and when Irma had her say as to the state of her mind, her uncle neither changed his will nor turned her away.

"MAKING UP" IS NOT EASY WORK

Appearance Is Everything to Fowl Which Is Going to Be Exhibited at Show.

BEAUTY AIDS ARE APPLIED

Some Worth-While Suggestions on How to Prepare Birds Are Given by Poultry Experts of Department of Agriculture.

The fight of the contest no pains are spared by the contestants in a beauty show to make themselves attractive; and Mrs. Biddy is no exception to the rule, for is Mr. Biddy, for that matter. They want to look their best when the days of poultry shows draw near. All kinds of beauty aids are given them by their owners to put a gloss on their feathers and to manure their bills and feet.

Exhibiting their poultry at the close of the year is part of the work of the boys and girls of the poultry clubs organized by the United States department of agriculture and the state colleges. Some worth-while suggestions on how to prepare the birds for exhibition purposes are made by poultry specialists of the department. After the individual birds have been selected (care being taken that they are as near the American standard of perfection as possible) the following care should be given, they say:

Worth-While Hints

Remove the birds selected from the rest of the flock and place each bird in an exhibition coop for at least a portion of each day. Fowls so confined will become accustomed to the coop and by handling them—that is, removing them from the coop each day—they will become tame. In handling the birds move quietly and handle them gently so as not to frighten them.

First You Wash Them, Then You Rice Them, and Then If They Are White You Blue Them.

All white varieties of fowls, such as the White Leghorns, White Plymouth Rocks, etc., and those having considerable white plumage, such as Columbian Plymouth Rocks and Light Brahmas, and even the buff varieties, should be washed in order to make the best possible showing when exhibited. Dark-colored fowls, such as Rhode Island Reds, Banded Plymouth Rocks, etc., need not be washed unless their plumage is considerably soiled. The head, feet and shanks, however, of all varieties should be properly cleaned as described below.

Wash the birds in a room or building that is free from drafts and where the temperature is from 70 degrees to 80 degrees. The washing should be done in the morning so that the birds will have sufficient time to dry off completely before night.

Washing the Fowls

Each tub should contain enough water to cover the body of the bird when immersed. If possible to obtain it, clean rainwater should be used, as hard water will not produce as satisfactory results as soft water. Any pure white toilet soap may be used for washing. The water in the first two tubs should be heated to a temperature that will be comfortable to the bird, while the water in the third and fourth tubs may be slightly cooler. Before beginning to wash the fowl, soap the water in the first tub well so that there will be plenty of suds floating on the surface; next proceed to wash the face, comb, wattles, shanks and feet of the fowl by scrubbing these parts with a small nail brush and plenty of soap and water. After this is done, immerse the bird in the tub. Before actually applying any of the soap to the fowl be sure to see that the water has thoroughly penetrated all parts of the plumage so that the bird is soaked to the skin. Next, apply the soap by working up a good lather through all parts of the plumage of the fowl with the fingers. Remove as much of the soap as possible from the bird before immersing it in the second tub. When even a trace of soap is left in the feathers it will cause them to appear streaked and matted together when dry. In rinsing the feathers be sure to see that the water penetrates all parts of the plumage. The use of a small sponge will assist in removing the soap. After four or five fowls have been washed, change the water in all the tubs before washing other fowls.

On removing the fowl from the final tub blot the surface of the feathers with a Turkish towel to remove the surplus water. Do not, under any circumstances, rub the feathers with the towel, as this may cause considerable damage to the plumage. Next, place the bird in a coop. Should the fowl appear cold and shiver when placed in the coop, move it closer to the stove or other source of heat.

Drying the Feathers

Do not place the coop close to the stove for any length of time, as it may cause the feathers to dry too quickly, in which case they are apt to curl instead of drying smooth and straight. Should the bird, on the other hand, appear too warm, move the coop or increase the distance between the coop and the stove. The birds after being washed should be kept in this room at a temperature of about 70 degrees for at least 12 or 14 hours before being shipped.

When the fowl is thoroughly dry, closely examine the shanks and feet to make sure that there is no dirt remaining under or around the scales on the legs. Such particles of dirt may easily be removed with a toothpick. It is well, at this time, also to moisten a small cloth with a little sweet or olive oil or vaseline and rub it on the shanks, wattles, ear lobes, face and comb. This will help considerably to bring out the true color of these parts. Do not apply too much oil or vaseline to the head or shanks as it may tend to soil the plumage.

GREATEST DEMAND IS FOR SMALL ROASTERS

Moderately Fat Young Fowl Is Most Satisfactory.

Where Chickens Have Been Properly Raised and Are in Good Healthy Condition About Ten Days' Fattening Is Favored.

For roasting, a young fowl about full grown, but still soft-meat, is used, and to roast satisfactorily it must be moderately fat. Roasters are roughly classed as "small roasters" and "large roasters." The greatest demand is for small roasters weighing four or five pounds each, though the demand for large roasters weighing eight or nine pounds each is steadily increasing. Yellow skin and yellow legs varieties are more generally demanded in a roaster than a white skin and dark legs, and usually bring better prices, poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture say.

If the chickens have been properly grown and are in good healthy condition about ten or twelve days' confinement in a pen and small yard with fattening feed will put them in as good condition as is desirable. They should then be dressed and packed according to market demands. The growing and marketing of roasters is an important business in some parts of the country, especially in the vicinity of large cities. Near Boston, in what is known as the "South Shore" district, the production of roasters engages the attention of many people, several of whom make it an exclusive business. A poultryman living near a good market or having good shipping facilities which bring a good market near him can often dispose of his surplus cockerels as roasters to good advantage.

FORESTRY INCREASES THE FARM INCOME BY—

1. Making waste lands yield a profit by growing timber on poor soils, steep slopes, rocky lands, wet lands, unused corners, gullied or eroded lands.
2. Furnishing paying employment for men and teams during the winter.
3. Utilizing timber better on the farm and avoiding waste by cutting low stumps and small tops, using substitute woods in construction, treating non-lustling woods.
4. Increasing crop yields by planting forest-tree windbreaks.
5. Growing more and better timber on the farm through protecting the woods from fire and overgrazing; selecting for cutting the mature, defective, over-crowded and inferior kinds of trees, and leaving the straight, thrifty and better kinds; planting to fill up openings in woodlands.
6. Marketing the higher grades of wood products direct to consumers at fair prices in the form of saw logs, poles, gilling, cooperage bolts, handle bolts, posts, pulp wood, firewood, spoke blocks, tannin wood and bark.

MAKE YOUR WOODLAND PERMANENTLY PROFITABLE.

POULTRY NOTES

Poulters must have fresh air at night.

Without shade the fowls suffer from heat and cannot develop their possibilities to the utmost.

The pullet that is hatched late and starts to lay late continues to lay later the following fall.

WOOL GROWERS ENABLED TO HOLD THEIR GOODS FOR HIGHER PRICE

Wool Sorting, Inspection and Blending.

Copyright, by American Woolen Co. Boston.

Since the passage of the United States warehouse act in 1916, the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, which is charged with the administration of this legislation, has received approximately 300 applications for licenses. Half of these applications were received within the past year.

The advantages that accrue from the federal licensing and bonding of warehouses storing agricultural products such as cotton, grain, wool, tobacco and flaxseed are just beginning to be fully appreciated, say specialists of the bureau of markets. A continuous educational campaign has been conducted to accomplish this result, and the bureau confidently feels that a steadily increasing number of applications will be received.

Aids in Financing Crops

The chief purpose of the act, which is not mandatory, is to establish a form of warehouse receipt that will be easily and widely negotiable as delivery orders or as collateral for loans, and therefore of definite assistance in financing crops. By licensing and bonding warehouses the integrity of the receipt is assured as evidence of the condition, quality, quantity and ownership of the products stored. These receipts are approved as collateral for loans made by the federal farm loan board, and because of the high value of the paper, bankers generally are enabled to rediscount their loans to greater advantage, thereby securing cheaper money, which in turn should mean reduced interest charges for the growers. It is also a fact that in insuring cotton stored in federally licensed warehouses reductions of from 10 to 25 per cent have been granted by rate-making agencies. Thus the insurance underwriters give tangible recognition to the creation of a better moral class of risk and to the value of government supervision and inspection.

TUBERCULOSIS TESTS ARE MOST RELIABLE

Disease Is Introduced Into Herds in Various Ways

Animals Should Be Purchased Only From Drovers Known to Be Free From Ailment—Community Pastures Are Dangerous

Here are a few ways in which tuberculosis may be introduced into a healthy herd, according to specialists of the United States department of agriculture:

By the addition of an animal that is affected with the disease; therefore animals should be purchased only from herds known to be free from tuberculosis, or from herds under supervision for the eradication of the disease.

By feeding calves with milk or other dairy products from tubercular cows; this frequently occurs where the owner purchases mixed skim milk from the creamery and feeds it to his calves without first making it safe by boiling or pasteurization.

By showing cattle at fairs and exhibitions. Reports have indicated that numerous herds have become infected through mingling with infected cattle at shows or by occupying infected premises.

The shipment of animals in cars which have recently carried diseased cattle and which have not been disinfected properly.

Community pastures; pastures in which tuberculous cattle are allowed to graze are a source of danger.

In most cases the outward appearance of the animal bears no relation to the degree of infection. The disease frequently develops so slowly that in some cases it may be months, or even longer, before any symptoms are shown; therefore, be on the safe side and have your herd tested.

Much valuable information on the subject is contained in Farmers' Bulletin 1069, Tuberculosis in Live Stock. Copies may be had by addressing a request to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

A particular advantage to the producer who stores his product in licensed warehouses is that he is enabled to hold his goods under the best conditions yet devised until such time as the market is ready to receive them. He practically receives his pay immediately, the low interest rate upon his loan being more than offset by "top-of-market" prices received when he finally sells his product.

Wool Regulations Issued

Regulations for the licensing and bonding of wool warehouses recently were promulgated by the bureau. Provision is made for the accurate weighing and grading of wool stored, or to be stored, in such warehouses. The grading tests not only to increase the value of the wool, and make it more readily marketable, but gives the grower information as to the quality or grade of wool he is producing, indicating how the wool and the flocks or bands may be improved to produce the most profitable quality. The grower knows that his wool is safe in such a warehouse, and that it is properly handled because of government supervision and inspection.

Where the wool of the growers is being pooled, the place of assembling or storing it may readily be licensed by complying with the regulations. In this connection the plan of some of the associations which have shown a desire to become licensed is to have the growers turn their wool over to the association, which deposits it in a licensed and bonded warehouse where the lots are graded and like grades are put together in large heaps or piles. The warehouse then issues receipts to the association which can be used as collateral. From the funds obtained the association can make advances to the individual grower.

A copy of the regulations and forms to be used in connection with licensing wool warehouses can be had upon application to the Bureau of Markets, United States department of Agriculture, Washington.

FARM WOODLAND IN THE NORTH

Farm woodlands amount to two-fifths of all forested lands. There are about 53,000,000 acres of woodland.

In New England more than 65 per cent of all forested land is on farms, and in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa from 50 to 100 per cent.

The income to farms from timber products is estimated at about $162,000,000 yearly.

AGENTS HELP IN MARKETING

Various County Representatives Have Done Much to Assist Organization of Associations.

Work of exceptional value to farmers has been done by various county agents in connection with the organization of live-stock shipping associations and live-stock auction sales. The shipping associations have been especially successful in Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin and Oregon, as well as, in general, states in the South. The live-stock auction sales have been developed in California on an Australian model which was introduced by a county agent who had been engaged in agricultural extension work in New South Wales. The value of the stock marketed through these auction sales in California amounted to $1,790,330, and increased returns to the farmers by $166,948 over prices which the stock would have brought had the auction sales not been held.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Keep the pigs growing every minute.

There should be purebred live stock on every farm.

Give pigs shade, water and pasture if you want them to thrive.

Worms in swine have no commercial value. Discontinue raising them.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

CAPE BUFFALOES.

"It is true," said Mr. Cape Buffalo, "that here in the zoo we won't do anything." But still it is glorious to think of the wild days, of the days that our friends and our families have had and still have.

"Yes," said Master Cape Buffalo, "and it is joyous to hear again and again of how we were dreaded and feared in the free state—that is, when we were free and wild."

"In Africa, from where the cape buffaloes come," said Mr. Cape Buffalo, "the natives dread us a great deal more than they dread lions. That is an honor, to be dreaded and feared more than the so-called king of the beasts."

"That is a great, great honor," said Master Cape Buffalo. "Ah, yes, to be feared more than a lion is as great an honor as a creature can have."

And that is the honor that we all have," said Mr. Cape Buffalo. "We have two curved horns, and some say that in front where I have a funny-looking growth which I admire I resemble a stuffed bag. Mrs. Buffalo here, your mother, is a lioness, a lioness. Lusted to her snarling now. She will never, have more than a baby buffalo come to her at a time. She says she can't pay proper attention to more than one."

"Sometimes our family is known as the Water Buffalo family. We travel in droves, or in great numbers. If we were birds we would say that we traveled in flocks, but as we aren't birds we can't say that. The zoo is

Travel in Droves.

Inter-ting and the opinions of people are amusing. They think all creatures who don't look like they do with two sets of legs and faces and arms and hats and coats and skirts or trousers are quite odd.

"The lion here and they stare at us. They are one creature here, though, who will never look at them and will never even pay any attention to the keeper. He is the crooked animal in the zoo, I believe. He is an angora goat, a brown angora goat, and his name is Jacob. He won't let any one be friendly with him. The keeper once tried to be friendly with him and said 'Tag along, may I pull your whiskers?' And Jacobing started to go at the keeper with a bang and a hiss, as though to say:

"You come near me, or you talk to me in a friendly fashion, and I'll give it to you!"

"Still, it is true he likes to have the keeper give him his food."

"There is the jaguar, who tried to strangle his mate, and there is Mrs. Polar, who has scolded Mr. Polar so and snarped at him so many times that the other day he got angry and did his best to get even with her."

"There is Mrs. Lioness, a wild creature. She sometimes gets so bad she could kill her own lion cubs! She eats so much meat, that is the trouble. Creatures who live on vegetables wouldn't do such things, although that doesn't always follow!"

"Most of the goats around here are friendly; all of the plain goats and the zebras in the next few yards go into each other's yards and have a good time, and there is one angora goat who is friendly with all of them."

"The zebra sacred cattle of India, you know, get on pretty well here. The wives only get on with each other and the husbands are all right together because Mrs. Aoudad lets Mr. Aoudad have his own way. And the foxes who like to travel in pairs (as the elephants do), get on with each other."

"But dear me, I wasn't meaning to give the history of the other animals in the zoo. For the thing that interests me most and should interest others more than anything else is the glorious fact that when we're wild and free we're feared more than the lion, the king of the beasts."

"Ah that is most glorious, most glorious," said Master Cape Buffalo. "It is something of which Cape Buffaloes will never fail to be proud."

Here to Study Logging.

For the purpose of studying the most modern methods of logging Mr. Charles Gilbert Rogers, director of forests in India for the British government, is in the United States with a corps of 17 engineers. These engineers are at present at work in logging camps in the Appalachian mountains, and will gradually work toward the Northwest, then down the Pacific coast, and will conclude their studies in the southern territory in February, 1921.

THE RIGHT TO STRIKE.

The majority of the anthracite coal commission added, approximately $85,000,000 to the wages of the miners. A minority report suggested a further increase in the rate of pay, but very fairly stated that the majority report should "have the full practical acceptance" of the miners, in accordance with the obligation assumed when the method obtaining the wage award was agreed upon. Thereupon an energetic group of labor leaders started in to repudiate the vote of the men direct from the mines who accepted the original proposition for settling the wage grievances, and they are now remanded by President Wilson that "by all the laws of honor upon which civilization rests, that (their) pledge should be fulfilled."

Thus again, disaster has been threatened the country, through cutting off the anthracite coal supply, after a plain business agreement within the industry was submitted to an investigation and determination of an official body, which gave the increases in wages that had been asked for.

The term, "collective bargaining," means that wage-earners shall have the right to organize, and through their chosen representatives, make bargains with their employers concerning wages and other phases of their work. During the war this method of governing employment gained full official recognition, and former President Taft was chairman of the War Labor Board that put teeth into the enforcement of the principle in industry.

Railroad employers and wage-workers reached the progressive viewpoint that the government should be taken into consideration as the logical protector of the public interest, and more than two million railroad men agreed with their employers to the adjustment of wage regulations by the federal government. Other industries have been asking the government to adjudicate their affairs, and through the plan of "collective bargaining" the process has been making rapid progress.

The coal miners have been persistent in their demands upon Washington and the government has been rendering the fullest assistance in settling the troubles that have arisen. However it appears to be up to the coal miners to rid their organization of anarchists, bolsheviks and "W. W. W." since that element is prominent in leadership among them. And public opinion has passed the point where it will sustain such leaders.

A LOT OF NONSENSE.

There is a whole lot of nonsense appearing in the public press, these days, about campaign expenditures by the two old parties—republican and democratic—and much of it is the sheerest nonsense. Everybody knows, and has always known, that it requires an immense lot of money to conduct national campaigns and everybody also knows that both parties, yes, that all political parties, have always raised all the money they could among their friends and supporters, but no one believes that these great sums of money were raised, or that they are being raised now, for the purpose of trying to buy the presidency or to purchase the votes of the electors. With the present day high cost of everything it will necessarily require more money this fall than it has in any previous national campaign for speakers, halls, expenses of party workers, printing and the countless other items that are required to be taken into consideration in making up an intelligent budget of expenditures.

If either of the parties were to hold a big rally in Northville next week or next month it would require fully one hundred dollars to meet the expenses of such a meeting, and what is true here is true in countless thousands of other communities. This money would not be used by the local committee to purchase votes, but to pay hall rent, printing, band, refreshments, etc. Multiply that amount by as many other towns as you can think of in your own state and you will get some idea of the amount of money needed to conduct a legitimate campaign.

When any one insinuates that the voters of America can be purchased for three or five million dollars, or even a dozen times these sums, he is saying what no thoughtful man will believe. The American voters never have been bought in any great numbers—there may have been local instances of vote buying—but the people as a whole are far and above the matter of bargaining away their votes, and it is an insult to them to make any such charges either from the public platform or in the public press. The people are eager to hear the vital issues of the present campaign—and there are many of them—discussed in an intelligent manner, but mud-slinging will only injure those who are indulging in that sort of campaigning.

HAS MADE A GOOD RECORD.

Among the candidates whose names will be presented before the republican state convention to be held in Saginaw on the 23rd inst. for re-nomination to the positions they are now occupying, will be that of George M. Clark, who was appointed a justice of the supreme court by Governor Sleeper, and who assumed his duties last January. For a new member of Michigan's highest court Justice Clark has made an enviable record during the few months he has served the people of the state and has given justification of all the good things his friends up in the Thumb country said in his behalf, when he received the appointment. He is a good lawyer, and a fine type of citizen and friends in all sections of the state are urging his renomination at Saginaw.

WELL, IT'S WORTH IT.

Every little while you hear some one remark that it costs as much to live in Northville as it does in Detroit. Well, is it not worth a whole lot more to live out here than it is in a crowded city, where you are posted and stepped on every time you turn around. Out here we have the finest water in the world, out here we have good, pure, health-giving air, out here we have congenial neighbors out here we have home comforts that the people of the large cities know nothing of, out here we have a community interest and fellowship that is entirely foreign to the people of Detroit and other cities.

Honestly, now is it not worth more to live out here in Northville than in any place you know?

Press reports state that "fall clothing will be scarce." Same here, and in some places our clothing are becoming more and more scarce every day.

OAKLAND'S APPLE CROP WORTH A MILLION.

More than a million dollars worth of apples will be taken from Oakland county trees this fall, in the estimation of the county agent, B. F. Beach. Mr. Beach makes this prediction in connection with an outline of plans for the resumption of the contests between Oakland and Oceana counties for the fruit growing title, which for 18 years have been a feature of the Oakland county fairs.

Oceana county won the last tilt and is now busy preparing for the one this month at Milford.

Discussing the rivalry between the two counties, Mr. Beach said:

"This section has three assets. Our dairies, fruit and potatoes. In the former we hold a large lead, and the fruit is only surpassed by Oceana, the Lake Michigan temperature allowing an advantage, while their potatoes may be slightly better flavored than ours."

To offset the advantage of the large body of water we have 464 small lakes, an average tillable soil that gives us a place in the front ranks."

Wm. Verduyn, Novi, and Mr. Tibbitts, Franklin, in charge of the Oakland display on which the decision is based, promise that the showing will be even better than in preceding years.

Instructors from the M. A. C. will be in charge of the question and answer department. There will be demonstrations of silos.

Worked out in a neat design of a horn of plenty, attractively arranged at one end of the horticultural hall, of the Milford fair workmen from Oceana county have completed parts of a display that will be one of the big show's features.—Pontiac Press

WHY NOT INVESTIGATE CONDITIONS AT THE MINES?

A recent order from Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer directed a nation-wide campaign against profiteering coal dealers, and District Attorney Walker of Grand Rapids, Michigan, announced that he had received the instructions and pursuant to the order from the Department of Justice the investigation would be taken up.

The instructions from Washington authorized the District Attorney to put his force on every "lead" that might result in bringing in evidence in violation of section four of the Lever act.

It was explained that while Federal Judge Tuttle has ruled that the portion of this section of the law dealing with "unreasonable charges" was unconstitutional, the agents of the Department of Justice still might work under the provisions against "combinations" in trade. So the district attorneys all around the country will start investigating the local coal dealers to see that there is no profiteering among coal retailers.

In the meantime, and to simplify the campaign of the Department of Justice, the following figures, tabulated late in August showing comparative prices of bituminous coal from 1914 to August 26, 1920, might be used to advantage. It shows the average cost of coal at the mines, freight charges to Grand Rapids, Michigan, war tax, the dealers' charge for unloading, shrinkage, overhead, delivery and profit.

The Department of Justice can find an increase of $7.00 per ton for bituminous coal at the mine between April 1, 1920 and August 26, 1920 and an investigation at the source of supply not only would concentrate efforts but would effect a great saving in operating personnel. But the idea seems to be that the retailer must be investigated notwithstanding these facts and figures and certainly no honest retailer could object to the closest scrutiny.

Comparative Prices of Bituminous Coal

	Apr. 1	Aug. 26
Average cost of coal at mine	$2.85	$4.00
Freight charges to Gd Rapids	2.60	2.60
War tax	.68	.03
Unloading, shrinkage, overhead etc.
Dealers' profit	2.50	3.50
Totals	$8.03	$10.13

There have been a whole lot of federal investigations, but most of them have been started at the wrong place. Why not investigate the conditions at the mines, and the matter of freight car assignment, just as well as to confine all the efforts of the Department of Justice to an investigation of the local coal dealers? Why should coal that could have been purchased at the mines in April for $4.00 now cost $11.00? Surely some one has their hands too far in the bag at the resources of our coal supply. Let the government's agents smoke them out.

Similar Cases Being Published in Each Issue.

The following case is but one of many occurring daily in Northville. It is an easy matter to verify it. You cannot ask for better proof.

J. D. Miller, farmer, R. F. D. No. 1, Northville, Mich. "About a year ago I had a pretty severe attack of kidney trouble. I got down so I had to lay off work for six weeks. The doctor told me I had uric acid in my system and gave me medicine. He also put me on a diet. For a time it helped me, but the medicine seemed to lose its effect and if anything I seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment. Backache nearly set me wild and the kidney secretions contained sediment and didn't pass freely enough. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, so I went to the Northville Drug Co. and got two boxes. It was no time before I was relieved. This remedy seemed to be just what I required and four boxes cured me entirely."

TRADE MARK

Farm Tractor

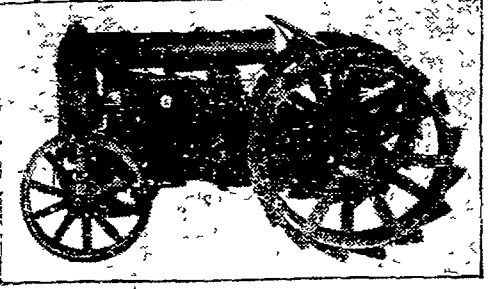

Winter or bad weather does not hinder the Fordson's usefulness. There is always some job—draw-bar or belt—that the Fordson will do more quickly, more efficiently and with a small consumption of fuel. Besides it solves the labor problem.

Day or night—twenty-four hours a day if you choose—you can utilize the Fordson. Like the machines in the factories, the Fordson furnishes power that is always ready for use—a power that means a saving in labor and time. And for that reason, the Fordson is a money-maker.

Back of the Fordson is the Fordson service organization—Fordson repairmen and stocks of extra parts—are always convenient and insure your continuous use of your tractor.

Don't delay ordering your Fordson. Only so many are allotted this territory and orders are filled in rotation. Let us have your order now; we will give it prompt attention.

TO ESTABLISH EXTENSIVE TERMINALS.

The Henry Ford interests have taken option on 483 acres of land, in the vicinity of the village of Flat Rock, planning to establish thereon an auxiliary operating terminal for the recently acquired Detroit, Toledo & Trenton railroad. It is said that Mr. Ford's plans call for new yards and lines connecting with the terminal yards of the D. T. & T. at Ecorse and also with the Ford plants at Ecorse and River Rouge. An alternative plan, also under construction, is to enter Detroit over the tracks of the Pere Marquette and Pennsylvania railroads.—Michigan Financial Record.

CEMENT FEEDING FLOORS ARE PROFITABLE.

The high prices of feedstuffs have turned the farmer's attention to means whereby the cost of feeding corn to hogs may be decreased. It has been found that there is a saving in corn when it is fed on a properly constructed floor. Old plank or wood floors are not desirable, as they furnish harborage for rats and mice. Concrete feeding floors do not have this objection. They also are an aid in the conservation of fertilizer and in the sanitation of the feed lot. The fall days, before harmful frosts set in, offer an excellent time for the construction of such a floor.

OAKLAND COUNTY FAIR.

It is worthy of note in connection with the Oakland County Fair, which occurs at Milford September 15-18, that anyone may become a member of the county fair association, by payment of $1 and that memberships are solicited from all over the county.

The old Milford Fair association was a stock company and occasionally stock dividends were declared. In the Oakland County Fair association, on the contrary, no stock is sold and every dollar made over necessary expenses will be turned into improvements and premiums with the intention of making the fair a valuable asset to the county.

The officers have booked a fine list of attractions for the coming fair and all signs point to a fair that will eclipse anything before attempted. Premium lists and information will be mailed on application to the secretary, W. S. Lovejoy, Milford.

FORD REACHES NEW HIGH MARK.

The Ford Motor company, Detroit, is starting its 1921 fiscal year auspiciously. One day last week there were produced at the Highland Park plant a total of 4,378 Fords, this being 150 more than the previous one-day record. High as this output for a single day may appear, it is expected that 4500 cars will be turned out daily many a day during the next twelve months. Considering that the schedule for the year calls for 1,250,000 cars, on the basis of 300 working days, it will be seen that in order to arrive at this total the average daily production must be 4,166 cars.

It has been officially announced that during the 1920 fiscal year which ended July 31, there was a total of 941,042 Ford cars in the United States, while the Canadian Ford company produced 55,618. There were also manufactured 79,008 Fordson tractors at the Dearborn plant and 2,647 at the Ford, Ontario, plant. Thus the total number of Ford passenger cars and trucks made here and in Canada was 996,660 and the total number of tractors 81,655.—Michigan Manufacturer.

E. V. Dickson, a representative of the bureau of war risk insurance, and C. W. Dean, welfare officer of the Wayne county council of the American Legion, have begun a campaign to reinstate the government insurance they carried during the war.

The only conditions now necessary to reinstate are that two months' premium on the amount of insurance to be reinstated must accompany the application, and that the applicant must be in as good health as at the date of discharge or at the expiration of the grace period.

After December 1, however, a medical examination will be required of each desiring reinstatement. The privilege of again taking up the insurance will be withdrawn July 1, 1921.

"BE PREPARED."

This is the motto of the Boy Scouts of America. And to carry out a program equal to such a motto makes it necessary that a wide variety of subjects be included. The proper tying of various knots, the history of the American flag, and forms of respect due to it; first aid, bandaging, the fireman's life, woodcraft, to know the different kinds of trees and birds, camp cooking, to be able to signal, using either one or two flags. A large number of other activities that cannot be mentioned in this small space.

Scout does at least one good turn daily. The local troop has always been willing to do any "good turn" for the community when possible. For the past several years they have helped at our fair, parking cars and doing unnumbered jobs of this nature.

The local troop is now about five years old, but how many people know anything of its activities, that is aside from seeing the boys at work, occasionally.

There has not been the interest shown in the past that this movement really deserves and this is possibly due to a number of causes. However, the next year will see more activity there will be more hikes out into the woods, there should be more boys to go on these hikes. There will be a full program of instruction, work and play for each Monday evening.

If you are a boy between the ages of 12 and 18 come to the High school gymnasium next Monday evening at 7:30 and hear more about scouting. As the troop enrollment is to be held in the next few days this is the very best time to become a Scout. You will probably have noted by the daily papers that about 100 boys, from America just returned from a Scout jamboree held in London. There were Scouts present from 14 different countries. DAIRY HINTS

"MILK COW" NOW PREFERRED

Advocates of Word Contended, That It Was More Strictly English—Milk Akin to German.

Hereafter it will be "milk cow" and not "milch cow"—at least so far as the United States department of agriculture is concerned.

This decision marks the termination of a controversy in which etymologists in the department have found a little interest. Those defending "milch" have pointed to scriptural use and certain of the classics as establishing precedence.

Liberal Feeding Must Be Practiced If a Profit Is to Be Obtained From Milk Cows.

deuts, while the opposition has contended that dairymen, ranchmen and farmers in general use "milk" instead of "milch" almost universally. The advocates of "milk" also favored that word because, they contended, it was more strictly an English word, while "milch" was akin to German. Since Americanization of language as well as ideals is an article in every patriot's creed, it is thought that this last ally of the "milk" defenders helped as much as any to decide the question in their favor.

COWS APPRECIATE KINDNESS

Animals Are Naturally of Nervous and Excitable Disposition and Resent Roughness.

In the hurry of getting chores done, a dairymen sometimes forgets that dairy cows are naturally of a nervous and excitable disposition, and that under conditions of excitement or fear the milk flow is lessened materially. Driving cows on the run, chasing them by dogs and with loud shouting are not allowed on a well-managed dairy farm. In the stable all operations should be carried on quietly. When a cow kicks there usually is a reason for it; the teats may be hurt by the milker or the cow may be frightened. At such a time a little care in comforting the cause and pacifying the cow often will prevent further trouble. Many good cows become confirmed kickers as a result of a lack of careful observation and kindness on the part of the attendant.

MISTAKE IN FEEDING GRAIN

Common Practice of Many Dairymen to Feed Every Cow in Herd the Same Quantity.

Perhaps the most common mistake in feeding grain to dairy cows is the practice of feeding every cow in the herd the same quantity regardless of the amount of milk she is producing. Instead of regulating the grain according to the daily amount of milk produced.

Considerable waste of feed may result from failure to balance rations. This is especially true if the ration happens to be in protein; for, while an excess of energy may be substituted for energy, energy producing foods can in no case take the place of protein in a ration. The milk flow, therefore, may be limited to the protein content of the ration, even the energy producing foods may be present in excess. An economical ration is a balanced ration.

HOW TO FEED CALVES

Feed the calf only small amounts of milk for the first few feeds.

Do not overfeed. Scours, stunted calves, and deaths are caused largely by overfeeding. A pint of milk weighs a pound. Measure or weigh the milk for each calf. Do not guess at it.

Feed regularly twice a day. Have the milk warm, sweet and fresh. If the milk is poor in quality, feed less of it, not more.

Feed grain and milk from clean boxes and buckets. Buckets should be washed and scalded every morning.

WEIGHING AND TESTING MILK

Only Way Dairy Farmer Can Determine With Any Certainty Which Cows Are Profitable.

The weighing and testing of milk is not yet practiced by the general farmer. It will be, however, as soon as the farmer realizes that only in this way can he know the profitable cow to keep and whether his herd is improving or deteriorating.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued.

"I have," she answered, looking at him steadily in the eye, but speaking with a slight tremor in her tones. I wondered to what it might be due. Was it because she feared the consequences of the revelation as to her identity or was it in—she feared she might be trapped by his questions?

"Now tell me, Mrs. Moore," he shot at her explosively, "who really murdered Daisy Lutan?"

"Henry Kent," she answered quickly, before the district attorney had time to stop her.

"What's this?" exclaimed the judge. "What did you say?"

"Object, object," vociferated the district attorney, striving in vain to catch the attention of the judge presiding. McGregor, apparently well satisfied with the results of his question, stood there, smiling assurance at us.

"Young woman," directed the judge, "will you kindly repeat your last statement—ladder. Who did you say killed Daisy Lutan?"

The girl turned to face the judge. Her lips were set as if she had determined to carry out some fixed plan, cost what it might.

"Daisy Lutan," she repeated, "was murdered by Henry Kent, who was the Grandfather. He's really Orville Granders, the bank president who got away with eight hundred thousand dollars and was sent up for fourteen years."

There was a gaspation in the rear of the courtroom. A dapper little old gentleman with neatly trimmed white whiskers rose hastily and made a dash for the door. Graham, who had been sitting behind him, sprang after him and plucked him by the arm.

"Nothing doing, Granders. I've got you."

Wick, sitting up near the counsel table, at the same time showed evidence that he, too, was centering plating busy flight, but a hush chap whom I suspected of being one of Gorman's allies seized him, too.

"Fair honor," cried my counsel, "I demand the issuance of warrants avenge for Orville Granders, alias Henry Kent, and his confederate, James William, alias James Wick and 'Stuffy Jim,' on the charge of having murdered Daisy Lutan and Rufus Gaston. I further urge the immediate release of my client, Mr. Spaulding Nelson, in my custody. Testimony that we already have obtained will establish that he was an innocent victim of the untoward plots of these two ex-convicts."

The reaction that came from this sudden clearing of my name left me in a puzzled daze from which I hardly recovered until late that evening, when, once more free, I found myself in the Gaston apartment. Granders, his too, Wick, and practically every employee of the Granddeck were under arrest, and warrants were out for other members of the band whose identity had been revealed by the former telephone girl.

And there in the apartment with me were my mother, Gorman McGregor—and to my surprise and delight, Barbara Bradford. After her sister's wedding, it appeared, Barbara's mother had gone away for a brief rest, leaving her alone in the apartment with the servants. She had welcomed the opportunity to work undisturbed on the mystery that had landed me behind the bars. Thinking that at Rufus Gaston's funeral she might pick up some clue that would be of service in unravelling the tangled skein that held her and me together, she had gone farther, and seeing my mother there, and suspecting at once who she might be, had introduced herself. Quickly they had become good friends and she it was who had informed my mother of my plight.

Present also with us, despite the lateness of the hour, was the district attorney and two of his aides, and Nellie Kelly, or as she much preferred to be called, Mrs. Moore. The girl was technically a prisoner, but her services in bringing the real criminals to book had been so exceptional that she had been released on her own recognizance. Hither she had been brought that the district attorney might check up with her the marvelous tale of criminal conspiracy that she had untold to my counsel in the brief recess of the court that day.

Orville Granders, it appeared, had been the master-mind that had directed all the plotting. A score of years before he had been president of one of the metropolis biggest banks. He had been discovered to have embezzled nearly a million dollars. He had been tried and sentenced to seventeen years' imprisonment, but no one ever had been able to find what he had done with the money, so secretly had he hidden it away.

In his long years in prison associating daily with criminals of the worst sort, and listening to their plans for further crime on their release, his own criminal instincts, already developed, had grown stronger, and he had spent his time planning a new system of crime, of which he was to be the head, using as his confederates certain ex-convicts with whom he had become acquainted in prison. When he had been released he had slipped quickly away to the West and lived in close retirement until he had been forgotten. The white whiskers he had grown so changed his appearance, too, that he had little fear of being recognized. Recovering such part of the stolen money as was left to him, he had come to New York in the guise of a prosperous Western investor and, purchasing a plot of land, had erected the Granddeck apartments, designed for the occupancy of the wealthiest class of tenants.

In this building, sitting like a little white spider in his web, he planned to prey secretly on all who came to live there. Every attendant in the building was either a criminal or an associate of criminals, reporting to him daily all that went on, and obeying his orders implicitly. A special switchboard in his apartment enabled him to listen in at will on all telephone conversations that went on. Every letter delivered at the Granddeck went through his hands before reaching the tenants. For every wall safe in the building he held a master combination and his pass-key would unlock every door there was. And in addition to all this—

HE HAD BUILT A SECRET PASSAGEWAY.

We found it that night and explored it, familiarizing ourselves with all its exits greatly to the amazement and confounding of Gorman. Connecting with the service elevator by a massed opening, it ran along the wall of each apartment, with entrances concealed in wall panels. It enabled Granders to wander at will through the apartments at night, leaving mysterious notes to terrify his tenants, prying into the secrets hidden in their wall safes, listening when he chose to their most private conversations, examining the contents of their pockets. As he had planned from the beginning, he gained in this way much information that he was able to utilize to his financial profit without arousing suspicion. He had discovered, Mrs. Moore said, secret stock market movements one of his tenants was planning and had made a small fortune out of the advance information. Several injudicious women he had successfully blackmailed, turning over to agents who never came near the Granddeck the secrets he learned from letters he opened and telephone conversations he had listened to.

In the case of Rufus Gaston, he had plotted to steal the Gaston pearls. Mrs. Moore explained, first terrifying the old couple into leaving the apartment, the whispers that had been heard coming of course from the secret passageway.

"But I can't understand," I said, "why, after he had once got hold of the pearls in Mr. Gaston's absence, he should have restored them to their hiding place."

"He had a duplicate made of phony pearls," explained Mrs. Moore. "It was part of his plan not to have any of the tenants discover the thefts for a long time after they occurred."

"If he was so cautious," said the district attorney, "I am puzzled as to why he killed Miss Lutan and Mr. Gaston. He must have realized that both murders would be thoroughly investigated." "Both were accidents, so to speak," the girl explained. "Each of them surprised him in their apartment, and he had to kill them to make his getaway. I suppose he had been roving around so much he had got careless."

"How about the revolver?" asked Gorman. "How did he come to plant it in Nelson's room?"

"He was puzzled by Mr. Nelson butting in on the Bradford case, and it made him sore. I heard him and Wick talking about it one day, and he said that he'd teach Mr. Nelson not to interfere. 'How?' asked Wick. 'I'll frame him for the goat, if anything happens.'"

"And was it he who had me discharged from my office?" I asked eagerly.

"Sure it was. He wrote a note on Mr. Gaston's stationery saying, 'You had forged a check after he had befriended you. He wrote in the letter that he was not going to prosecute you because of your mother, but that he felt that you were unworthy of employment anywhere.'"

"I believe," said the district attorney, "that that clears everything up, except for one thing—why, Mrs. Moore, did you aid him and Wick in all these crimes?"

"He promised that if I would help him he would get Eddie out," she cried. "I was desperate. I'd do anything to get my husband back."

Gorman and the district attorney exchanged meaning glances. "While nothing more was said, I felt sure that they departed that both were thinking that this brave young woman who had solved the mystery for them certainly deserved some reward, and I think we all realized that the only reward life ever could hold for her was the freedom of her husband."

Presently they went and left us alone, Gorman, my mother, Barbara, and I.

"There are still two things I cannot understand," I said, as we sat talking it over. "The first is—and I turned to Barbara—"what was your sister doing in this apartment on the night of the first murder? When I came up from the Lutan apartment I caught her just coming out of my door. I could not help wondering if they had made her plant the revolver."

Barbara started up, blushing.

"Oh, no," she cried. "It was nothing like that. You remember a few moments before you and I had been in your room looking at the secret passageway. Claire just then had come in, my room looking for me. She was puzzled by my absence, and the only solution that came to her was that I must be in your room. Alarmed at what she considered my imprudence, she had slipped out into the hall, and seeing your door open, had investigated. Of course she did not find me for I had returned by way of the window ledge. She told me about it the night before, when we married. I don't wonder, though, that you suspected her."

"I didn't suspect her," I cried. "I just wondered what she had been doing there."

"That's right," said Gorman. "He wouldn't believe for a minute that she had had anything to do with it."

"But what puzzled me most," I went on, "is how you ever persuaded the telephone girl to give Granders away. It must have been done after she had given her first testimony. How did it happen that she changed so suddenly over to our side?"

"As I looked from one to the other for an explanation, Gorman burst out: 'You'll have to ask Miss Bradford about that,' he said. 'She did it all.' I turned again to look at Barbara, expecting her to speak, but she merely blushed and was silent."

"Go on, tell me," I urged her.

"Well," she said hesitatingly, "as I heard her testifying, I had an inspiration. I heard her say that she loved her husband, and that she did not care who knew it—and—and—and—all at once I realized that love was the strongest influence in the world, so I had Mr. McGregor ask for an adjournment, and then—"

She stopped in confusion, the rosy blushes once more mantling her cheeks.

"Go on," I insisted.

"I can't tell it," she cried. "You must tell it. What did you do?"

"I managed to see her alone." Again she hesitated.

"What did you say to her?" I demanded.

"I just told her," she faltered lowering her eyes as she spoke, "that I loved you just as much as she loved her husband, and I begged her for love's sake not to help send you to the chair, and she broke down and told everything."

"Oh, Barbara, my Barbara!" I cried, springing up and clasping her in my arms. "If only I had something to offer you besides my love—"

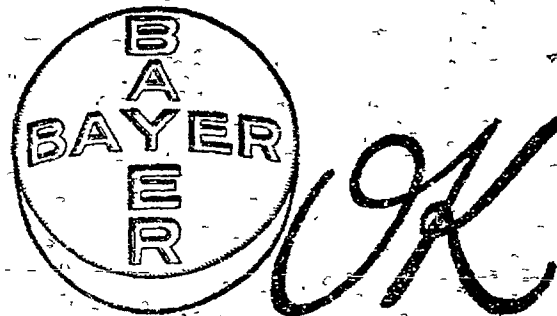

"I wouldn't worry about that just now, Spaulding," interrupted my mother's voice. "They found your great-uncle's will today. He made you his sole heir."

But Barbara and I hardly heeded her good news. We were too busy teasing each other with the whole story.

PEACE WITH SOVIET RUSSIA

Lithuania the First Country to Sign Treaty With the Government Administered by Lenin.

Washington.—Details of the treaty between Soviet Russia and Lithuania signed on July 15 fixing the boundary line between the two countries were received at the Lithuanian legation in an official cablegram from Kovno. The new line starts on the east at Draya and runs south through Braslava and Molodecho on the river Niemen and thence west to the river Svisloch.

The territory gained by Lithuania under the new treaty. It was said at the legation, represents all that "It sought on racial grounds. Natural boundary lines are effected by putting the line along the rivers. Only about twenty miles of boundary on the Polish frontier remain to be settled. It was said, before all the limits of Lithuania are fixed.

The boundary thus fixed differs from important particulars from that set by the allies, who gave to the Poles Grodno and other territory now given to Lithuania by the bolsheviks.

With the Poles, in control the Germans could not send supplies past Grodno to the bolsheviks, but possessed by the Lithuanians, who now seem to be with the Moscow government, it would prove a wide corridor for the passage of munitions of war drugs and other things badly needed by the Russians.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

WHY BOLSHEVISM IS MENACE

Governments and Men in High Place Have Erred From the Beginning in Their Methods of Fighting Its Propaganda

Article XXX.

By FRANK CONERFORD.

The bolshevik government launched a great propaganda drive to bring about disorder. It was, and is, a criminal conspiracy to destroy the peace of the world. It is an appeal to the discontented, an effort to mobilize the unrest of the world under the red flag of violence, in cunning and complete bolshevik propaganda is in a class by itself. It is poisoned publicity. The bolsheviks carefully kept their methods out of their propaganda. They emphasized the poverty of the world. They pictured conditions, always charging these conditions to the inequality of distributing and laying the blame at the door of the capitalist system. They invented "fine-sounding" phrases, in which they concealed the seeds of hate. They quickened the prejudices of the people; they pretended to sympathize with the poor. They urged men to unite and strike for freedom. Had the governments of the world met this propaganda with the truth and common sense, they would have used every available agency to tear the mask from the bolshevik government and show the working people of the world the true character of that government and the methods by which it sustains itself. The allied governments contented themselves with telling the people that bolshevism was a bad, dangerous thing, a pitfall. Instead they should have thrown searchlight on it and let the people see its rottenness and its danger. Instead of fighting propaganda with propaganda, falsehood with falsehood, fire with fire, they should have fought fire with water, propaganda with truth, cunning with frankness, and an enlightened and educated populace would have turned a deaf ear to bolshevik propaganda. The "Red" peril in the world would not be the dangerous menace it is today.

Working People Took Alarm.

The working people noticed that a portion of the press previously allied with the "interests" and against the right of the people, thundered most bitterly against the bolshevik government. This class of papers denounced bolshevism, called it names, but gave little space to the calm, cool, plain statement of the truth about bolshevism. They were as "red" in their conservatism as the Press were false in their propaganda. The newspapers of this class have not the confidence of the general public; they have long been under suspicion. The bolshevik propagandists were in a better position to get results than the conservative press, and for three reasons: first, the bolsheviks had the sympathy of the workers of the world because of their connection with the liberation of Russia; second, the bolsheviks appeared as the underdog in the fight; third, the conservative press suffered from its past reputation as the mouthpiece of those who stood in the way of better living conditions for the great majority. Many leading business men, captains of industry, followed the example of the conservative press and denounced bolshevism instead of exposing it. These men were under suspicion and their attitude confirmed the belief growing in the minds of the workers that bolshevism would benefit them. These same men denounced the workers in their own countries when they sought better conditions. Working people remember that most of the reforms that have come have been won from the same conservative class; seldom, if ever, has a right been conceded to the working class. They have had to fight, strike for it, and even in this hour some of the leading figures of the employing minority call men bolsheviks who are not communists, who are not bolsheviks. On the contrary, they are good citizens, seeking, as they have a right to seek, a larger share, a fairer measure of the things they produce. These methods, these attitudes, have reacted in the minds of men who toil, and I have heard many of them accept the challenge and proudly boast that they were bolsheviks, although in truth they were not.

Investigators Unfairly Treated.

Someone drew a curtain of silence around soviet Russia. At least so it seemed to the people. Men who came out of Russia and brought with them reports which displeased their governments were abused, their reports suppressed. Bullit, Robbins and Steffens are examples in America. The public at once came to the conclusion that these men had found conditions in Russia good; that bolshevism was a safe, sane plan of government; that it was succeeding. Of course, this is not the real story these men brought out of Russia, but the abuse, heaped on these men, the silencing of these men, spoke louder and more eloquently than any report could have done. An English paper went so far as to charge the prohibition movement, of the United States with being in league with the bolsheviks, saying that its object was to make restless the workers by denying them alcohol, hoping that out of this restlessness would come revolution.

Another appeal to prejudice permitted by the allied governments, was that the bolshevik movement was a Jewish movement; that Lenin and Trotsky were Jews and that the soviet machine was Jewish from beginning to end. What difference could it make to freeminded people whether the leaders of the bolshevik movement were Jews or not? While the mass of the people are thought not to be educated, they have the common sense to see in such propaganda an effort to make them hostile to bolshevism by inciting race prejudice.

A great crack was made in the curtain of silence drawn around Russia. Through it came the startling news that the bolshevik government planned the nationalization of women. No fact about Russia was given greater prominence and publicity. I have talked to many men who were bitterly opposed to bolshevism, and in the last analysis I found the only tangible basis for their opposition was that the program included national prohibition. One insurance company in America used the "Nationalization of Women" lie in its nationwide advertising. Of course, it is obvious to thinking people that the plan of nationalization of women was a falsehood, and the workers concluded it was designed to poison the public against bolshevism. Anyone who thinks for a minute will realize, first, that the nationalization of women is not a necessary part of any economic program, second, that one could not get a hundred men or women in any country of the world, who are not degenerates, to subscribe to a program which contemplated the registration and promiscuous violation of their mothers, wives, daughters, and sweethearts. The Russians are human beings; their women are their mothers, wives, daughters, and sweethearts.

Foundation for Silly Story.

This evil and unnecessary lie about the bolsheviks grew out of the fact that in a little city, Ufa, a drunken man made the proposal that they should adopt such a plan. A group in the town of Saratov, calling themselves anarchists, issued a decree in April 1918, containing among other provisions the following:

"From March 1, the right to possess women having reached the age of seventeen to thirty-two is abolished. The husbands may retain the right to use their wives without awaiting their turn."

"In case of resistance, the husband shall forfeit his rights."

"All women according to this decree, are exempt from private ownership and are proclaimed to be the property of the whole nation."

It was unfair to charge this to the soviet government. It was never put in practice, and it is only fair to say that with the exception of the two cases cited above, it was never even contemplated by anyone. This libel of the bolsheviks strengthened their cause in the allied world. Months later it was exposed the world was swept with another evil, unnecessary and false bit of propaganda. It was proclaimed that this second piece of news was intended to corroborate and confirm the nationalization of women; its object was to create hostility for the bolsheviks. It achieved exactly the opposite result. It was that the bolsheviks had decided to abolish Christian names, that henceforth children would be named by number. To illustrate, the first born would be Smith No. 1, the second child in the Smith family would be Smith No. 2, and so on. This was given first-page space in the press of the world. It was printed as serious news, as truth. It fell of its own weight.

Summing up unrest in Europe and in America, I have found that the general course of conduct has caused the people to increase their suspicion of the political governments, of the press, of the leaders of business and industry. These posed lies have molded a judgment in the general thought of the world, and that is that bolshevism is being cried down, libeled and slandered, starved, assaulted, and fought, because its success meant the death of special privilege and the birth of the "New Order." This judgment has come to pass because we have not used our resources to bring the real facts to the public mind; because we have injured our credibility by unnecessary, evil and false charges against the bolshevik regime.

The Invitation

Two recruits in a Scottish regiment were visiting an English church for the first time. They had not been seated long before the organist began to play a very lively voluntary. This was something new to them, and they listened in astonishment, not being used to music of that sort in church. One of them was then aroused from a reverie by a tap on the shoulder. Turning around, he saw a lady, the owner of the pew, who smiled at him, wishing to pass to her seat. He did not take in the situation. "No, no, no!" he said. "Take my mate here—you'll find he can dance much better than me!"

Home Town Helps

IN TRUE COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Example of Small Town Neighborliness That Is the Rule Rather Than the Exception.

This is a story from life for city workers to moralize on.

Howard Kirchengesner is a farmer, living on the outskirts of Staples, Minn. While operating some farm machinery, he crushed his hand. For any farmer to injure a hand at this season of the year is pretty serious business, especially when help is so scarce and live stock and crops must be daily attended to.

Kirchengesner went to bed with his hand painful and wondering how his farm would get along. It looked pretty bad for him. In the morning he was awakened by a commotion in his front yard. He looked out to find Major Harry Long, Rev. W. H. Johnson, Harry Manson, Sherm Tower, Jerry Lynch and half a dozen other neighbors from Staples, dressed in overalls and equipped with hoes and other implements ready to keep his farm going while he was laid up.

Added to a hand up until sundown there was only death for weeds and potato bugs. Then the cows were milked and turned out to pasture and the neighbors departed for their homes.

It would seem that one must turn off from the asphalt pavements to find the places where life is still run pretty much as the heart dictates, and where the question "Am I my brother's keeper?" doesn't wait for an answer. Is it any wonder that the nation and the big city turn to the small town and the country for its captains, when this is the spirit that rules its everyday life.—Minneapolis Journal.

NO ADVANTAGE IN BIGNESS

Los Angeles Man Combats an Opinion That Has Been Long and Generally Held.

Of what advantage is bigness in a city, beyond a reasonable point, except to real estate speculators? demands a writer in the Los Angeles Times. Personally, I found the Los Angeles of 1904 a more livable and lovable place than the Los Angeles of today.

Great cities, he claims, spots on the map, bring places of unrest and revolt. The truth is the cities are one of the most annoying symptoms of our modern life.

Why increase a city by its size and population? Why not rather enlarge upon its beauty, comfort, and good citizenship?

Increasing world bigness, cities are retarding their population, buildings by their height, men by their bank accounts, and babies by their weight. It is a sign of national youth. Children always doubt in "great" cities in case of time—say in a thousand years or so—we shall overcome this weakness, and value quality rather than quantity.

Small Town Opportunities.

The general conception of a progressive man is measured by the size of his bank account, but the real measure of progress is to be found in the amount of good a man does for those around him. The mere shifting of wealth from one to another is not a mark of progress, but rather an increase of privilege. Many an ordinary man has become very progressive by coming to a small town from a larger city, because he had better opportunities to develop in the smaller town, where just the opposite could develop. Live wire by changing to the city. Progressive men are staying in the small towns, else there would be no growing small towns. It takes effort and lots of it, to increase the facilities of the small town.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Women Plan Park.

The women of Wellington, a Kansas town, have succeeded in a crusade they undertook a few years ago, to turn an unsightly swamp of 30 acres into a beautiful city park. It has been named "Community Park." It is laid out with artistic landscape effect, replete with trees, shrubs and flower beds. It contains a park house, surrounded with large shade trees, a neat modern stone building, containing a large reception room, dining room and kitchen, that will accommodate comfortably about 250 persons. The park house is used for entertainments, banquets and parties.—Montreal (Can.) Herald.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

BLAME NOT ENTIRELY HERS

New Maid's Attitude Not Inappropriate Compared With That of Some Politicians.

In a recent political gathering the following story was told apropos of the coming national election:

"Whichever side wins, I'm afraid will let us slide the new mail."

"The new mail was entirely made stuff, and the mistress bore with her patiently at first. But on the third day she placed a very uncharitable plate on the table, and gaudiness broke down."

"Really, Mary, you might at least see that the plates are clean."

"Well, mum, Mary rejoined, I owns to them thumb-marks, but that dried mustard was there afore I come."

Nature's New Role.

Robert, age three, had been put to bed at the usual time, but because of a long afternoon nap the sandman was slow in appearing. At the end of a half hour of pleading to be permitted to come downstairs and play, his sister came into the room.

"Now you lie down there and go to sleep," she commanded.

"Well, sister, nature won't let me," he answered between sobs.—Indianapolis News.

A Forced Levy.

An old farmer, who was complaining to a neighbor of a bad harvest, met the minister of the parish, and as usual, proceeded to hold forth on his favorite topic.

"Ah, yes, Farmer Giles," said the worthy parson, "you have, I must confess, good cause to complain; but you must remember that Providence cares for all and that even the birds of the air are provided for."

"Ah," said the old man significantly, "ah, no, my corn."

Navy Blacksmith Shop.

The village blacksmith shop under the spreading chestnut tree is for rent. The smithy has gone to sea to learn some new tricks of the trade in the U. S. Navy schools.

Blacksmithing is now a highly specialized trade to iron working. Once a man masters it he is sure of a good living for life, either in or out of the service.

A real interest in one's work is as necessary in the Navy schools as in others, but Jack is paid to learn and is sure of his job as long as he wants it, providing he is in earnest.

Mr. W. S. Dickerson, Yerkes street, Northville, gave the following statement September 20, 1916: "When there is need of a kidney medicine in our family, we resort to Doan's Kidney Pills, for we have always found them to do all that is claimed for them. Personally, I know Doan's and am convinced that it is a remedy worth recommending to those who are in need of something for their kidneys. A few of Doan's pills and then, keep my kidneys in good working order."

On April 20, 1920, Mrs. Dickerson said: "I haven't had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills in quite a long time, but my opinion of the pills has undergone no change during the past four years. I gladly endorse Doan's."

Come right to the factory and see for yourself. We have 14 sizes and styles of the best made in either Piped or Single Register (Pipeless so called). Have thousands in use and more wanted.

Why? Because they have weight and are built on the right principle.

We can heat your 4 room cottage or 15 room mansion.

We make them complete in Northville.

BE WISE

And place your orders for your winter supply of COAL NOW. The fuel situation is not promising to say the least, but we are bending every effort to secure enough to meet the needs of this community.

It is to your advantage to have your orders in early and we can thus fill your bins from the cars and that will help later in the season. One thing is very certain, and that is that coal will not be cheaper, but everything points to an advancing market.
