MARKET REPORTS

Show that merchandise is somewhat lower in price than when all commodities were at the peak. The cut has not been as great as rumor would have us believe. It is time, however, for some reductions and as we are in a position to replace some of our lines at a little lower figure than formerly. We have decided to make a Special Reduction for the balance of October on all piece goods of

10 PER CENT

This includes all Bleached and Unbleached Cottons, Gingham, Percale, Silks, Velvets, Curtain Goods, Onting Flannels and Table Damasks—but does not include Toweling.

NORTHVILLE TO HAVE ENTERTAINMENT COURSE

Through the efforts of the Northville Court of Foresters Northville is to have a fine entertainment course of five numbers this winter. There will be three musical numbers on the Winters' program—a male quartet, the Tennessee Duo and the Windsor Trio, and two splendid lectures, making a series of five in all. The talent has been secured from one of the best lyceum bureaus in the country and we may expect something good for each number.

The Foresters are to be commended for their enterprise and community spirit and all who are interested in maintaining such a course in Northville should buy at least one ticket.

Tickets will be offered within a short time by the committee having the same in charge and the support and co-operation of the people of Northville is urged in behalf of this worthy enterprise.

RECOMMENDS FOOD AND MULCH

For the past two or three years Northville has lost a number of its handsome maple trees from some unknown cause. Various opinions have been expressed regarding the cause, but nothing definite has been decided upon, and no concentrated action has been taken to stop the ravages of the enemies of our shade trees. S. E. Cranston brought to this office a few days ago a specimen of a bug which many believe is the direct cause of our tree blight. The Record sent the specimen to the Michigan Agricultural college with a letter explaining the condition of our trees and asked if any remedy could be suggested. We received the following letter in reply to our inquiry:

East Lansing Mich. Oct. 15, 1920.
Editor Record, Northville, Mich.

Dear Sir: The insect you sent is commonly known as the "Pigeon Horn" or "Trencher" columbia. The adult deposits her eggs on the bark; their hatch and the young larvae work around in the heart of the tree. They have several spectacular enemies but do lots of damage to the host before they are killed and of course some escape.

This has been a hard season on town trees in most localities the water level has been changed within the last few years, the weather has been dry and in most cases the trees do not have anything like the amount of foliage that they need. If there were no trees I should like to remedy matters by food and mulch.

I am sorry that there is not a remedy that we can recommend for this creature.

Very truly yours,
EUGENE W. DANIEL

NORTHVILLE LADIES ENTER LUNCH AT PONSFORD

Twenty-three Northville ladies, members of the King's Daughters, were pleasantly entertained by the members of the Redford Chapter at an autumn luncheon on Tuesday. The gathering took place at the spacious home of Mrs. Roy Burgess in that village and in all its appointments the affair was most delightful. The rooms were decorated in autumn shades and flowers and potted plants added their beauty to the handsomely furnished home. The Redford ladies were most gracious in the hearty welcome extended their guests and when all had enjoyed a dainty two course luncheon was enjoyed.

Mrs. Swaser, president of the Redford Chapter, extended a formal welcome to the visitors, and Mrs. E. C. Hinkley responded to the hearty greetings. After the Redford ladies had held their regular meeting a short program was given and a pleasant hour followed with games and conversation.

POLLEY-DIXON.

The marriage of Miss Irene Myrtle Dixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dixon, to Orson H. Polley of Plymouth, was solemnized at the St. Joseph Episcopal church in Detroit Saturday morning at ten-thirty.

The couple were attended by Miss Ruth J. Christensen of this village, and Waldo T. Johnson of Bloomington, Illinois. After an extended honeymoon through the east, Mr. and Mrs. Polley will be at home in Northville, after November 1st.

A party of Northville gentlemen were given an opportunity to inspect the new highway being constructed by Oakland county on Oakland avenue Pontiac, Wednesday.

MANY GOOD MARKSMEN ATTENDED CLUB SHOOT

The American Trap Shooting association tournament, held at Northville, Michigan, October 2nd, under the auspices of the United Gun club was attended by 35 shooters from all parts of the country. The race for high honors in the regular program was between Ross Miller, Howard Benson of Lansing, and Fred Brint of Toledo. In the first century, Benson and Brint each broke 84; Miller '92. In the fifth event, Miller went straight, Benson dropped two and Brint let four escape. In the sixth, Miller stubbed his toe and gave Benson the lead by two targets. In the seventh Benson drove a hatful of tough birds and broke only 22, giving Brint an opening to come under the wire a winner by going straight; with Miller a chance to tie. However, the Toledo gunner missed his chance for a victory by failing to connect with two in his last frame. Miller also drew two zeros, which resulted in Benson winning high general average—87.5 in cash and the A. T. A. trophy. Benson's score was 163x175. Miller and Brint tied for second with 151x175. A strong wind tore across the traps all day making conditions far from perfect. Andrew Hartford of Detroit led the entire field in the first 50, smashing 49. Unfortunately he broke his gun in the third event and was forced to continue the race with a borrowed gun. Mrs. I. C. Vogel of Detroit broke 93 of the first hundred and finished the program with 23 straight in the last event. Mrs. Vogel and John Clay of Texas tied for fourth place. On account of the wind very few straight scores were turned in. Frank Huis Harry Pascoe, Frank Holzangle, A. Hartford and Mrs. Vogel were the only contestants to go through any event without being charged with a miss. In the events and performance, always stand-out more prominently in every tournament. Henry Baucknecht and W. J. Diederich's duel in the Hartford Brothers' handicap was a race well worthy of the attention of the spectators. Baucknecht shooting from 39 yards made the first 25 look like ink spots, and only missed one in the second, finishing with 49x50. Diederich dropped one in the first event but went straight in the second. The field Baucknecht and Diederich for first money and the trophy. The shoot-off was neck and neck until Baucknecht over shot his twentieth target. Baucknecht continued to smash targets over the edge of the trap house, going out with another straight. No more interesting race was ever witnessed in Michigan. Mr. Baucknecht has done the proud of this victory as he has the honor of being the first to win a shoot-off with Diederich.

The visiting sportsmen were grateful for the hospitality extended them by the Northville people, and especially to Mr. Ambler, proprietor of the hotel for his efforts on their behalf.

HOME-NURSING CLASS STARTS OFF WELL.

Can you make a bed? Why, of course we can, but can you make it bed? While some member of the family is very ill—too ill to be moved to a chair or a near-by couch? Can you smooth out the wrinkled pillow and sheets to bring rest and comfort, when your patient is very ill?

Well, this is one of the things the ladies of Northville, who attended the home nursing class Monday afternoon learned to do, and it is not as easy a task as one might think. Many other things pertaining to home nursing will be taught and practically demonstrated during the course of ten lessons by Miss Grohm, who has charge of the class here. Northville ladies are urged to become members of the class, and the expense of the course is but $1.00.

The young women of the village and the girls in the high school are also to receive instruction.

Doctor Cupid

That love sometimes cures disease is a fact that has been called to the attention of the public by a prominent physician. Love is not, however, the cure for all women. Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out for no reason that she can think of.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives new life and new strength to weak, worn-out, run-down women. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well. It is now sold by all druggists in the United States in tablets as well as liquid form.

MANKATO, MINN.—"I have three daughters who are all strong and healthy today due, I am sure, to the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When they were in their teens they were all very delicate. I always gave them this medicine and it never failed to give relief. I am in hopes that this will be the means of aiding some who are suffering."—MRS. MARY GOODRICH, 218 West Rock Street.

CAPONIZING SURPLUS COCKERELS GROWS IN FAVOR WITH FARMERS

Pen of Capons ready for market.

Caponizing the surplus cockerels is growing in favor with poultrymen and some farmers in this industry. For the capon grows larger than the cockerel and in addition commands a much better price.

It is impossible to say just how long the operation of caponizing has been performed. It seems quite certain, however, that the practice was familiar to the Chinese more than 2,000 years ago. Later it was practiced by the Greeks and Romans and through medieval times on the people of middle and southern Europe. In recent years it has been introduced into America. At present capons are most universally known and appreciated in France, although the business of producing them has advanced gradually in other parts of the world.

This industry is most important in that portion of the United States east of Philadelphia, though a few capons are raised in other parts of the country.

In selecting the breed best suited for caponizing several factors must be taken into consideration. Large capons bring the best price. Consequently, the breed should be one that does not mature too early. It does not matter what breed is used, but the caponizer of the United States department of agriculture says that the Plymouth Rock and the Old English Game are the best breeds for caponizing.

Best Price in Winter.
The price of capons is highest in the winter months. This is due to the fact that capons are most popular in the winter months. The price of capons is also highest in the winter months. The price of capons is also highest in the winter months.

KITCHEN WASTE GOOD FOR BACKYARD FLOCK

Converted Into Wholesome and Nutritious Food.

Not Only Helps in Reducing Cost of Living, but Furnishes Eggs of Quality and Freshness Difficult to Obtain.

In every household no matter how economical the housewife, there is a certain amount of table scraps and kitchen waste which has feeding value but which if not fed, finds its way into the garbage pail.

Poultry is the only class of domestic animals suitable for converting this waste material into where it is produced in the city, into wholesome and nutritious food in the form of eggs and poultry meat.

Each hen in her pullet year should produce ten dozen eggs. Poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture say. The average size of the backyard flock should be at least ten hens. Thus, each flock would produce in a year 100 dozen of eggs, which, at the conservative value of 35 cents a dozen, would be worth $35.

By keeping a backyard poultry flock the family would not only help in reducing the cost of living but would have eggs of a quality and freshness often otherwise difficult to obtain. Remember that eggs produced by the backyard flock cost very little, as the fowls are fed largely upon waste materials.

MAN WITH SCRUB PUREBREDS

Mistake for Farmer to Think He Can Let Horses, Cattle, Etc., Shift for Themselves.

The one who thinks all he needs to do to acquire fame and wealth is to buy a lot of purebred cattle, hogs, horses, or sheep, and then proceed to let them shift for themselves will soon earn the reputation of "the man with the undesirable purebreds." He will find that his wealth is not the kind he thought it would be.

DAIRY HINTS

SCRUB COW AT DAIRY SHOW

Object is to Show in Practical Way How Low-Grade Herd Can Be Greatly Improved.

Mrs. Scrub Dairy Cow is about to break into the upper class of dairy society. Madam Scrub will parade with the blue-blooded aristocracy of the cattle world.

The United States department of agriculture expects to exhibit the grade family consisting of a purebred sire, a scrub cow and the grade offspring of this mating at the national dairy show to be held at Chicago in October, 1920. Some of the cattle clubs will also have similar exhibits.

The purpose of this feature is to interest the owners of scrub and low-grade herds and to show in a practical way the manner in which such a herd may be improved by the use of a purebred sire. This will do much to combat the prevailing idea that the scrub cow is a hopeless case.

A Scrub Cow Which Lacked $1,954 of Producing Enough Milk to Pay for Her Feed and Care in One Year.

Don't dairy show is of interest only to the owners of purebred herds. It will help also to advertise the fact that the United States department of agriculture through its "better stock" campaign is offering co-operation and aid to the owner of poorest herd as well as to the owner of improved stock.

After all Mrs. Scrub doesn't get into society on the strength of her own qualifications; she is accepted purely on account of the merits of her mate and her progeny.

CHAMPION DAIRY COWS

Several of our folks have asked for the names and records of leading cows of each dairy breed at the present time. Here they are, fresh from the records of the breeders' associations.

Friesian—Phyllis Mary, 100 pounds butterfat and 15,275 pounds milk.

Jersey—Frieda—A light brown, 1,654 pounds butterfat and 12,100 pounds milk.

Guernsey—Morne Cowan, 3, 69 pounds butterfat and 21, 69 pounds milk.

These are all yearly records, and for cows living at the present time.

CLASSIFICATION OF RECORDS

Department of Agriculture Bulletin Emphasizes Importance of Correct Accounts.

"A Classification of Ledger Accounts for Creameries" is the title of United States department of agriculture Bulletin 865 recently issued. This bulletin emphasizes the importance of the use of a definite and logical classification of accounts for keeping the cost and financial records of any business and describes in detail a classification that can be used advantageously by creameries. The classification of accounts presented in this bulletin, if adopted will insure an adequate basis for correct operating and financial information which will be uniform from year to year, thus enabling comparisons of operating efficiency.

The bulletin has been prepared by experts in accountancy in the bureau of markets after a careful study of the methods pursued at a number of creameries in recording their costs and the financial activities of their business comprehensively and simply.

The bulletin can be had upon application to the United States department of agriculture, Washington.

GET SILO PROPERLY FILLED

One of Most Serious Jobs of Dairy Farm—Requires Careful Study and Work.

To get the silos properly filled is one of the serious jobs of the dairy farm. Careful planning will facilitate the work. The silo should be put in order, the hoops tightened and the doors repaired. The roof should be patched if it has become leaky. The binder must be put in order if delays are to be avoided. Likewise the cutter must be put in first-class working condition. The wagons are not to be overlooked when preparations for an efficient season's work are being made. No silo-filling season passes without accident to one or more wagons. For a wagon to be taken off the work for a day or more means a handicap.

SIDE WHISKERS IN LONDON

Fashion That Was Frowned on Some Years Ago Seem to Be Coming Back

The London equivalent of doing his best to cultivate side whiskers is a fashion that was so much frowned upon a few years ago when Lord Rockingham attempted its resurrection. But day was in the day before the war, and probably it is as a change from the regulation military moustache of the last five or six years that British young men of today are growing, but in front of their eyes with most humorous result.

The ear of Lordstone and his brother, Hon. Lordstone, together, have always been famous in the fashionable world for wearing "side whiskers," but in this hirsute face study they are usually credited with the desire to suggest the "sporting" atmosphere in which they are generally to be found.—New York Sun

VALLEY OF 10,000 SMOKE

Alaska Has One of the World's Greatest and Least Known Natural Wonders.

One of the world's greatest and least known of natural wonders is the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes near Mount Katmai in Alaska. A brief description of which is given in the Century by Andrew J. Stone. The valley is a volcanic depression from which smoking and smoldering vents and lava flows issue into the air by the thousands, some of them up higher than 10,000 feet.

Sulphur fumes of every kind, smoke, gas, and lava flows, are scattered by the wind of the interior, filling the valley with smoke and fumes, until looking at it from a distance it seems one vast valley of smoke from a hundred times as high as a man with only a suggestion of a cloud. With care one may walk about and mingle with the smoke and fumes, and with the marvelous eyes of the valley, watching the smoke and fumes, until looking at it from a distance it seems one vast valley of smoke from a hundred times as high as a man with only a suggestion of a cloud. PLAN TO AVOID CALF AILMENTS

Improper Feeding or Insanitary Conditions Are Said to Cause Most Trouble.

PREVENTIVES ARE OUTLINED

Calf Intended for Herd Bull or for Foundation Breeding Cow Must Be Given Careful Attention—First Aid Treatments.

Most calf ailments are due to improper feeding or insanitary conditions, or both. Particularly if you are raising a calf for a herd bull or for a foundation breeding cow, keep the animal out of cold rains in winter as much as possible, and provide a dry, well-bedded stall at night. Provide nature's tonic—exercise, sunshine, pure air, abundance of fresh water, and a variety of feeds, and there will be little need for medical attention. It is not for the purpose of curing diseases that these suggestions are offered, but to prevent their occurrence. Observe the calf closely at all times. If it should appear drowsy, feverish, stiff, or sluggish, act quickly. Reduce feed at once and the disorder may be in a large measure prevented. Keep salt before the calf at all times. An abundant supply of fresh water should be available always. Some of the common ailments only are briefly discussed here, with a few suggestions for first-aid treatment. In case of serious illness consult a competent veterinarian at once. Do not delay.

Occasionally when the new-born calf fails to get the colostrum or first milk from the cow its bowels remain inactive, and the meconium (first droppings) are retained, which causes constipation. An enema or injection of one quart of warm water in which one teaspoonful of common baking soda or one-half teaspoonful of common salt has been dissolved will usually give relief. Use a syringe or allow the solution to drip into the rectum through a small rubber hose or funnel. Two tablespoonfuls of castor oil may be given, and repeated if necessary.

The cold droppings of an older calf should be observed daily. If they appear extremely solid, the animal is constipated or feverish. With older calves this condition may be relieved in most cases by promptly providing plenty of water, by reducing the grain and dry roughage and substituting a more laxative ration. A small quantity of linseed oil meal, wheat bran and legume hay, such as alfalfa, soy bean, or despeza, may be used. If this does not relieve the condition, give castor oil or raw linseed oil, one-fourth pint, or Epsom salt in doses according to the age of the calf, although dosing should be avoided as much as possible.

Diarrhea or "Scours."

If constipation is not relieved diarrhea or scours may follow. This ailment is indicated by thin, watery, offensive droppings. It is usually the result of improper feeding, irregular suckling, or overfeeding with anything that overloads the stomach. Damaged grain fed to the calf, or even to the cow before the calf is weaned, may cause digestive disorders. Exposure or overheating may also be a predisposing cause. Silage, alfalfa hay, and possibly linseed oil meal, when fed in large quantities to older calves for a long period, may cause this condition, which should be corrected by an immediate reduction of such feeds and the substitution of dry-grass hays and a little cotton seed meal for a part of the ration. If such conditions occur with a calf not yet weaned, reduce the milk allowance and withhold all grain. In severe cases withhold all feed for 12 hours. As a last resort put the cow on dry feed entirely and let the calf nurse another cow.

Remedies easily obtained for the small calf are castor-oil, one tablespoonful to one-fourth pint, depending upon the size of the calf, given as a drench with warm, sweet milk, followed by one teaspoonful of a mixture of one part salol and two parts of bismuth. Another remedy used with success is four drops of formalin to one quart of warm milk. Commonly used home remedies include whites of two raw eggs or a weak solution of lime water given in one or two tablespoonful doses. Feed and manage the calf so as to prevent diarrhea or scours. Such disorders stop the growth of the calf for several days at least and make it more susceptible to them later.

Blackleg.
Blackleg is an infectious disease associated with external swelling, usually about the forelegs or shoulders, and which emits a crackling sound when handled. The germ causing the disease is widely distributed throughout most sections of the country. Young cattle between six months and two years of age are most likely to take the disease. Calves under six months old are rarely attacked. Blackleg is controlled by immunization by vaccination. All animals should be vaccinated before they are six months old and again six months later. Vaccine can be obtained from the United States department of agriculture, Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington, from companies manufacturing the serum.

Lice.
It is not a reflection on the owner for his calf to have lice on it, but to allow them to remain there is a serious reflection. They not only annoy the calf, but lower its vitality to resist diseases and disorders, and prevent normal growth. The hair of a calf infested with lice is, usually, rough stands on end, and lacks the glossy appearance of the coat of a healthy, well-fed calf. The calf may become infested with two kinds of lice—blue and red. The one sucks, the other bites the skin. If a calf becomes infested with lice they should be removed at once. This may be done by dipping early in the spring or fall. As the lice reproduce from eggs, a second dipping in each case, from 10 to 14 days after the first, is recommended.

Since but few dipping vats are available in most sections, it will be sufficient to wash or spray the calf thoroughly with some good coal tar, tobacco, or oil emulsion dip prepared for the purpose. A home remedy frequently used is a mixture of one-half pint of kerosene and one pound of lard, applied by thoroughly rubbing into the hair, especially about the neck and shoulders. This remedy, like dipping or washing, is not advisable for small calves in cold, wet weather. An effective powder which may be used any time is prepared as follows: Mix gasoline, three parts; carbolic acid, one part, and master of paris, enough to take up the liquids. Make a paste and allow to dry. Powder and shake into the hair thoroughly from a shaker or duster. (Caution: Do not mix near a fire.)

Mange.
Small mites which attack the skin and cause it to become thickened and covered with crusts and scabs, greatly annoy the calf and cause it to rub or lick itself constantly with consequent loss of hair about the tail, neck, and shoulders. The mites multiply rapidly and are spread from a diseased to a healthy calf by the animals running together or occupying the same stall or pen.

The treatment is to dip or wash the calf the same as for lice, with a kerosene and sulphur, tobacco, or oil emulsion dip. A mangy calf, like a lousy one, never makes satisfactory gains nor a creditable showing. The hair is usually rough and the skin thick and coarse, which gives the calf an appearance of one lacking vigor and general thrift.

NEWS SERVICE AIDS GROWER AND DEALER

Outlines Movement of Various Important Farm Crops.

Gives Reliable Information Regarding Supplies Arriving at All of Large Consuming and Distributing Markets.

The outstanding feature of the Market News Service of the Federal Bureau of Markets relating to fruits and vegetables, live stock and meats, dairy products, hay, feed and seeds, peanuts, and cotton is that it keeps before the producer, distributor, and consumer a picture of the movement of important crops and of the supplies arriving in all of the large consuming and distributing markets and the wholesale prices prevailing in each.

Prior to the establishment of the department of agriculture's news service, only a few large organizations were able to obtain reliable information on market conditions. Now such information is available to producers and all interested parties simply by requesting the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., to furnish it. The use of the service protects the small grower and dealer and brings about more stable conditions and better distribution.

The Northville Record.

E. E. BROWN, Publisher.

An Independent Newspaper published every Friday morning at Northville, Michigan, and entered at the Northville post-office as Second-Class matter.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., OCT. 22, 1926.

SUBSCRIPTION ACCOUNTS MUST BE SETTLED.

We have been very patient with a number of our subscribers who are indebted for their subscriptions to The Record, but the time has now arrived when we must ask for a settlement of these accounts. To the individual subscriber one or two year's subscription does not amount to much, but when you multiply those accounts by fifty or a hundred the aggregate is a larger sum than we ought to be expected to carry. In ordinary times The Record would be cheap at $1.50 per year, but in these times of high paper costs there is no profit in the subscriptions at that price and we ought to charge more, but we have endeavored to hold the price down to its present figure. This cannot be done, however, and allow a lot of subscribers to get their paper for nothing.

All those past-due subscriptions that have not been settled by November 1st, or satisfactory arrangements made for their payment, will be stopped and steps will then be taken to collect the amount due.

If your home paper is not worth paying for it is not worth having and those who know themselves to be in arrears for more than one year will do well to pay their accounts before November 1st.

Saturday is the last day for general registration for the election to be held on Tuesday, November 2nd and unless you have already attended to this very important matter you will do well to do so today or tomorrow. Let everybody, every woman and every man, who is entitled to vote see that their name is on the poll book of their precinct. To be a full fledged, worthwhile citizen every qualified voter ought to go to the polls and cast their ballot for the candidates of their choice. To be able to vote is a privilege, and to go to the polls and cast your ballot is a duty.

In spite of the high cost of building, Northville has to its credit a number of new homes this season and upon nearly every lot one may discover improvements being made to homes already built. NORTHVILLE'S FOOTBALL TEAM IN SHAPE.

The High school football team is gradually rounding into shape and will reach the height of its perfection in the later games of the season. All good teams are usually prepared for one important game on their schedule and do not fully develop their best team play until that game. Northville is being especially prepared for the return game with Farmington which will probably be the most important game for the locals. The entire team consisting of eleven players and three capable substitutes, have been drilled in an entirely new set of motions and pride in their new uniforms and unbeaten loyalty in their High school should make them play a stellar game at the rest of the season.

New players being given the boys as rapidly as they become thoroughly acquainted with the old ones and a new set of signals have been devised which will develop them by the other teams in the league.

The boys are all well and faithful and are determined to make the present season a successful one for the High school. All that is necessary is a more intense and faithful interest on the part of the student body and the town people. Go down to the field and watch them practice. Show them that you are going to back them during the remainder of the season. Come out to the rest of the games and yell for the team. Let's go, Northville!

The social hour which followed the regular meeting of Orient Chapter, O. E. S., last Friday night proved a most enjoyable affair. The program was given by the children of the members and each participant did splendidly. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program.

Why Lizzie, What makes you so happy and cheerful these days?

I'll tell you Blanch, it's a secret, but Tom and I are going to get married and we have each taken out stock in "The Loan" for we do not intend to let any minister pull this: "Stop! You are extravagant" business on us. We'll flash our Loan Books on him before the ceremony. See?

As I was saying, there were many reasons for our joining "The Loan" but the main ones were these:

1st. It pays better. I have heard that dollars increase in "The Loan" nearly as fast as Jack Rabbits up North.

2nd. We will not need our money for some time and it can be used to help some one buy or build a home, and when we get ready to build, there will be plenty paying in to help us out—you see "The Loan" is a sort of "Help-one-another" concern.

3rd. It's the style. We'll, by what you say, I think it is a pretty good thing to belong to.

Jim Heeney, son of James Heeney, Sr., met with a peculiar accident while returning from Plymouth last Saturday. He was riding his bicycle, and as it swerved in the road he put out his foot to catch himself. The speed at which he was going and the position of his feet were such that he sustained a compound fracture near the ankle. Frank Thompson was another Saturday victim. He was driving corn on his grandfather's farm, and while standing between the wagon and grain the horses started up squeezing him between the wheel and the building. Although no bones were broken, the bruises about the hip were severe, and he was confined to his home for three days.

DEMAND DRESS REFORMS.

Dance and dress reform, rigid enforcement of the prohibition laws and strengthening of the laws prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors were urged in resolutions adopted by the Michigan State Federation of Women's clubs at the closing session of the convention.

The convention took the position greater modesty in the matter of dress, particularly by high school girls, is desirable and that modern dances are in need of reform.

The convention endorsed the colony plan of caring for the feeble-minded wards of the state and called on the next legislature to provide funds for erection of a women's reformatory, but made no direct reference to the state home for girls at Adrian, where the federation participated in a state investigation eighteen months ago.

Grand Rapids was selected as the federation's 1921 convention city.

FARMERS TO HOLD BUSINESS SCHOOLS.

A series of farm accounting schools, taking up the principles of business management in agricultural work, will be held in various counties over the state during the coming winter, according to announcement made this week from the office of farm management at the Michigan Agricultural college.

Proper methods of keeping farm records and account books including inventories of the farm business plant, will be taught at these schools, 50 of which have been planned in about 25 different Michigan counties between the first of December and April.

Putting the farm on a business basis is the fundamental aim of the accounting work. Hit-or-miss, uncertain farming has been all too prevalent in the past, and it is the belief of experts that properly kept account books such as those distributed by M. A. C., will bring system into the agricultural business. Ability to pick out the paying ends of farming and to locate the weak spots which bring losses, follows a good set of farm accounts. They make it possible to determine the relative proportion of each farm enterprise on a profitably managed farm.

About 2,500 Farm Account Books have been sent out by the college this year," says H. M. Elliot, Farm Management demonstrator at M. A. C. "Over a thousand of these have been distributed through the State Grange, while many have gone out through the Farm Bureau."

The purpose of our accounting schools will be, to start farmers off properly in keeping the account books. Twenty-five men will be lined up for each school, the county agricultural agent making arrangements for the local school."

STATE FARM BUREAU COMPARES TWO REPORTS.

With proof that farmers are making a small income on the one hand, and further proof that the wool dealers have been making not only ordinary profits, but "excessive profits," the farmers are confronted with but one duty in regard to their wool—stand by the state wool pool and carry on the fight with the unscrupulous private interests to a successful finish, according to the state farm bureau.

Two statements issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in separate bulletins, are laid side by side by the state farm bureau for comparison. The statement on farm profits says:

Figures on farm profits, covering seven years in two areas and five years in a third, were made public by the United States Department of Agriculture today. These figures show "That comparatively few of the farmers in the groups studied have been making large profits during the recent years of comparatively high prices. That their average return on investments increased from about 4% in 1918, to 7% in 1919. The most of them are making less than $500 cash per year over and above the things the farm furnishes toward the family living, which, however, constitute a very important factor."

Distribution of excess wool profits is described in the following:

"Distribution of excess profits made by dealers who handled the wool clip in 1918 under regulations of the War Industrial Board is being made by the United States Department of Agriculture some 100,000 wool growers, it was announced today. It is estimated by the Bureau of Markets, which has charge of making the refund from the dealers to the growers, that the total amount of such excess profits was more than $1,000,000, of which approximately $460,000 has been turned over to the bureau for distribution. Some of the dealers who accumulated excess profits have failed or refused so far to refund the entire amount, and the bureau is at work auditing the books of some, interviewing others, and corresponding with still others, in order to bring about final settlements."

WOMEN URGED TO TAKE ACTIVE PART.

Women of Michigan and of the whole country were urged to safeguard their birthright of opportunity for tremendous good, and not to trade their great power for leadership for "a little bright authority" through acquisition of political offices, by Mrs. Burritt Hamilton, Battle Creek, retiring president of the Michigan State Federation of Women's clubs, in her annual message last Wednesday afternoon, to the state conference of the organization.

"It is important to exert leadership, but it is more important to make that leadership wise and practical," she told her audience of 600 Michigan club women. "We must not feed the body politic unripe fruit from the tree of theory. We must actually be what we profess to be, must actually do the things we recommend."

"We may not know politics, but we do know fair play. Let us insist on that. We may not know the history of parties, but we do know that the educated child becomes the educated citizen. The flag above the school house must typify the spirit within. Let us insist upon the complete Americanization of education. Our children must learn, as we have learned, that a clear understanding of individual responsibility in government is fundamental of the preservation of our republic."

OLD RESIDENT DIES AT WALLED LAKE.

For President

Warren G. Harding

REPUBLICAN LEADERS

OF NATION AND OF STATE

Their election is urged in behalf of home interests, for the welfare of our state and its citizens, for a return to government by the people, for freedom from autocratic personal rule and to close the present era of national extravagance.

BURT D. CADY, Chairman,
Republican State Central Committee

For Vice-President

Calvin Coolidge

For Governor

Alexander Joseph Groesbeck is a product of a Michigan farm. He was born in Warren Township, Macomb County. His boyhood was spent on the farm and from a school nearby he received his primary education. It has been Attorney General Groesbeck's privilege to be related to more important cases in behalf of state interest than has been true of any occupant of his office for many years. More than a quarter of a million of dollars has gone into the State Treasury as the result of suits instituted by Attorney General Groesbeck in cases where inheritance taxes were being withheld, and where monies due to the state on other accounts had remained unpaid.

Alexander J. Groesbeck

FOR STATE AND NATION

The Republican party proposes to devote its entire efforts to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of the American people, and to maintaining the principles of self-government that have given to our country its favored and unique position.

Let us seek to avoid industrial chaos and to bring to a close the present national era of enormous war-time expenditures.

Vote for a purpose far greater than the success of the party, for the ultimate goal that no harm shall come to the Republic.

STATEMENTS BY GROESBECK

"This is a reconstruction period and there are big problems confronting our state."

"We ought to revise our methods of state administration and make them more efficient and better adapted to conditions as they now exist."

"There should be no invisible government functioning for its own interests in Michigan."

"And it is most important that there shall be a reduction of state expenditures and a period of relief to our people from the burden of excessive state taxation."

For Lieut. Governor

Thomas Read

The Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor, the second in rank on the list of state officers, was chosen Speaker of the Michigan House of Representatives by his fellow members of the legislative body at the opening of the 1919 session. This honor was given to Mr. Read without opposition. His prospective promotion to presiding officer of the State Senate is therefore logical and deserved. Thomas Read graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan. Mr. Read is assured of election by a majority equal to the largest that will be given, and the same assurance can be given as to his zeal and success in the after performance of his official duties.

For Secretary of State

Charles J. DeLand, who was nominated with out opposition at the Republican State Convention for the office of Secretary of State, has represented his district in the Michigan House of Representatives for three terms. Mr. DeLand was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1901, and through education and official experience is usually well qualified to meet the important requirements of the department of state. The loyal and aggressive support given to Mr. DeLand by the delegates from his large city and county testify to his popularity in which he is well known.

For Auditor General

Oramel B. Fuller

On the first day of the coming year Oramel B. Fuller will enter upon his seventh term as auditor general. No other occupant of an elective state office in Michigan has served so long a term. Mr. Fuller has been the experience of Oramel B. Fuller, and no other Michigan state official has proven himself more worthy of special favor and constant attention to the duties of his office. A model in their duty and fearless in the performance of his duties, Auditor General Fuller has given to Michigan a service that in its value will well compare with the honorable extension of his term of office.

For Justice of the Supreme Court

Nelson Sharpe

Justice Nelson Sharpe, who was appointed in September, 1919, to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Bench caused by the death of the late Justice Ostrander, was chosen as a candidate to succeed himself by unanimous action of the state convention. Justice Sharpe has been related to the practice of law in Michigan since 1875. Within that period of time he served his county as probate judge and for more than twenty years he has been the official of the 14th judicial circuit. Justice Sharpe is recognized as a man of high character and ability, and his appointment to the Supreme Bench is a fitting tribute to his long and distinguished career.

For Justice of the Supreme Court

George M. Clark, one of the two candidates for Justice of the Supreme Court who will be voted for at the coming election, has been a resident of Michigan since his early childhood. He was born in West Williams, Ontario, November 21st, 1875, and with his parents came to this state in 1878. Mr. Clark was admitted to the practice of law in 1904 and continued in active service as a lawyer at Bad Axe, Huron County, until appointed in 1920 to the office of Governor Sleeper to fill the Supreme Court vacancy caused by the resignation of Justice Kuhn. Mr. Clark is an important state wide reputation.

For State Treasurer

Frank E. Gorman

Frank E. Gorman is the present occupant of the office of State Treasurer and was nominated at the recent Republican State Convention to succeed himself. Mr. Gorman has served a book-keeper in the office of State Treasurer and is treasurer and deputy treasurer previous to his appointment as the head of the department. Governor Sleeper very much has been true that such high experience as Mr. Gorman possesses of, has preceded an official appointment or party nomination. Frank E. Gorman is a native of Michigan and his entire life has been spent in this state.

For Attorney General

Meritt W. Wiley

The nominee of the Republican party of Michigan for Attorney General is Meritt W. Wiley, well and favorably known throughout the entire state. Mr. Wiley was three times elected from his legislative district as a member of the State House of Representatives, the third time without opposition. For thirteen years Mr. Wiley has practiced law in the home city of South St. Marie and is now senior member of the firm of Wiley & Green. It was that which was known of him as a law major and as a student of law that won for Mr. Wiley the opportunity for important state service as Attorney General.

FORD WAS PATENT SUIT.

The patent infringement suit brought against the Ford Motor Company by the Thompson Patent Company, Evan Mass, has been dismissed by Judge John M. Kilts, in Federal court, Toledo. The contention of the holding company was that the Waheed spot welding machine used in the Ford plant was an infringement of the Thompson patent. Judge Kilts held the Johann Hermann patent, controlled by the Thompson company, to be invalid.

DETROIT THEATRES.

Nora Bayes, America's foremost singing comedienne, comes to the Garrick Theatre for a two weeks stay starting next Sunday night, in her new musical comedy, "Her Family Tree."

It is in 2 acts and 10 scenes with 16 musical numbers and is described as an unusual musical play that permits the star to run the gamut of characterization, appearing in a variety of roles that include, "Our Nell" in a mining camp dance hall, in the far West, during 1850, an English lady of the fifteenth century, Mistress Ursula of medieval Europe, a Chinese girl of the fifth century, and finally as the wife of the grandson of Methuselah.

The new play will be of decided interest to Detroiters, as both the book and musical numbers are the work of two of her citizens. At Weeks dramatic critic of the News, supplied the book, while Seymour Simons is responsible for the music, which is described as unusually tuneful and contains several hits that will be whistled all over town before the first week is over.

Fortune Gallo will bring his San Carlo Grand Opera Company to the Shubert-Detroit Opera House next Sunday night virtually direct from a season at the Manhattan Opera House which was the most successful popular price grand opera New York has ever enjoyed. With the company will come for the nine performances not only the regular roster but guest stars who on his invitation will give performances from time to time during the organization's ninth annual tour of the United States and CANADA.

Among the artists new to Detroit will be Bettina Freeman, the American actress, who will appear in "Tosca" on the opening night, October 24th with May Harroun, a new American mezzo-soprano, Giuseppe Corallo, a new Latin-American tenor, Mario Valle, baritone and the basses, Pietro De Biasi and Natalie Cervi.

OAKLAND, TAX BUDGET TO BE LARGE.

Oakland county's budget of expense for the ensuing year will be larger than in any former year, according to figures reported yesterday by R. B. Cowdin, chairman of the board of county auditors. This was the first budget ever reported by the board of county auditors, which has been in existence but one year. The budget as reported is only tentative and is incomplete at this time because other sums will have to be added to it if certain actions are taken by the supervisors at their present meeting. The report was turned over to the committee on ways and means who have the final word concerning what shall go into the budget, the board as a whole of course reserves the right to pass on it after it is completed.

The total of the budget as reported by Mr. Cowdin without the one or one and a half mills usually voted for good road work, totals $803,276.61, as compared with a total budget last of $720,441.65. It is made up of the following items: Asylum fund, $15,000; general poor, $20,000; jury and witness fees, $20,000; soldiers' relief, $1,000; salary county officers, $100,000; general expense, $275,000; mothers' pensions, $15,000; Michigan Children's Home, $500; drain costs on county at large, $7,591.88; farm bureau, $2,500; sheriff and deputies expense, $30,000; covert road on county at large $226,684.63; and retiring bonds, $85,000.

THE BLUE MOON

A TALE OF THE FLATWOODS

BY DAVID ANDERSON

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

THE RED MASK.

Synopsis.—Never having known his father, and living with his mother on a homestead on the Wash River, Pearlhunter, the only name he has learned from her, a part of the story of her sad life. The record is interrupted by a fearful fit of coughing and he hurries ashore to seek a root that affords relief. He meets a young girl whom he instantly identifies as the Wild Rose. She eludes him before he can make her acquaintance. A vacant cabin on the shore has attracted the attention of the young woman, and they move into it. Their first meal is interrupted by the Man-in-the-Fancy-Yacht, Pearlhunter's arch-enemy, Ganley, who threatens the mother dramatically. Fires the intruder away. She says he is the "Other Man," whom she has not seen for 20 years. They find a red mask dropped by the Other Man. That night Pearlhunter finds the Blue Moon, a great freshwater pearl. His mother dies without revealing his father's name. Pearlhunter and the Other Man meet in the village; a pistol fight is narrowly averted. Pearlhunter believes him to be the Red Mask criminal. Pearlhunter rescues Wild Rose from the Other Man and meets Wild Man, her father.

"I don't know that it's splendid," he said. "I'm going to buy some books; and then—"

He hesitated. The girl dropped her eyes and stood looking at the bonnet strings around her arm. She did not mention that the storekeeper had told her the tragedy of the grave at Fallen Rock; of the mother who had died the very evening of success; whose eyes had not been permitted to rest on the faultless cheer of the jewel for which she, too, had searched a life time.

"And then—" she repeated, when it seemed he was not going on.

A tiny breeze fell into the woods, through the gap but by the road, and stirred the leaves. "There is death as well as life to the woods. Death at night; even in June. The breeze comes a dead leaf among the living ones, and shook it loose. It threatened to light on the girl's bright hair, but fluttered down past her face and fell at her feet.

The breeze; the falling leaf—the woods, her woods, had whispered and she heard.

"Daddy!" she cried suddenly. "Ever left him too long."

Her voice, had grown serious. She held out her hand for the basket. The Pearlhunter passed it over and she turned away.

It was an awkward parting and the Pearlhunter felt it, but he was a man of slow speech. His words had to be chipped by hand out of the rough, one at a time, as men of old fashioned their arrowheads.

"Wild Rose!"

She turned. The name had brought the dimples back.

"May I walk along with you?"

The words were past recall before she knew it.

"The woods are as much yours as mine," was her smiling answer.

He never could remember just how the basket, managed to get from her arm to his as he walked away with her, the sole recollection that stood out in his memory being the fact that the path seemed to fly up and hit his feet before he quite had time to set them down.

CHAPTER V.

Cabin of the Three Gables.

For some distance back from the river the Earthmaker scrambled the Flatwoods. Scrambled—that's exactly what seems to have happened to a strip along the north bank. A maze of gulch and cliff, of gully and bluff; all headed thick with trees and dense underbrush; all alive with the teasing mystery of growing things.

The path the girl traveled wound itself, or rather unwound itself, right through the heart of the hills, deep into the mystery of the thick woods, until it turned sharply and led up the east bank of Wolf run, the little stream in which the Pearlhunter had washed the eucampene roots.

A short distance above the pool, so near that the Pearlhunter wondered he had not seen it before, a three-gabled, one-story log cabin snuggled back against the bluffs just where they left the bank of the stream and curved to the east. A step farther, a small plot of creek bottom had been cleared, and fenced—what the Flatwoods called a "garden patch." Back of the garden, a stable huddled the bluff, but it was half hidden by rank weeds.

The cabin was built of hewn logs, notched artistically at the corners. The roof projected well beyond the walls; the chimneys were of red brick; floor, dropped his hat beside it, and kept his eye on the knife.

A pale fire burned away back in the Wild Man's vacant eyes, and his beard writhed with the quiver of his features. He even raised his hands and ran them over the Pearlhunter's face, as a blind man might in searching for some recognizable feature.

Apparently he did not find it. The pale fires died out of his eyes; his face quivered; his breast seemed to collapse; the tense silence shivered with a groan. The flash of strength that had seemed to dower his vast frame with irresistible force fell from him as a mantle. He tottered as the girl led him, like a tired child, back to his chair.

Her father! The daughter of the Wild Man!

He stepped aside out of the open door and let the sun in. It streaked across the floor and caught her where she stooped over the old man's chair.

She seemed for the moment to have forgotten his presence. He glanced around the cabin. It was really four cabins—four rooms—under one roof. The door by which they had entered faced south. He stood in the center room, or center cabin. A curtained opening led to another room on the west; a similar opening with the curtain looped back and tied with a bit of ribbon disclosed a room on the east. A closed door gave entrance to the third room, probably the kitchen, jogged a little to allow for a window near the northwest corner of the center room.

His gaze traveled to the fire place. A revolver—a very dependable looking six-gun—lay upon the mantel. Above it, arranged across a draped American flag, hung a silk sash, a tasseled cord, a pair of silver spurs, and a sword. Looped in the sword hilt were two strands of ribbon, one purple, the other gold. There came a dim remembrance that he had once heard somewhere, these were the colors of a famous regiment that greatly distinguished itself in the Indian wars.

The half minute or more he had spent looking over the room had given him time to recover his calm, and now his glance came back to the ruin in the chair.

The Wild Man was wheezing his knife against his palm, mumbling and muttering. He seemed to glow over the glitter of it—and the girl with the easy reach of his hand. The Pearlhunter stiffened, pale of himself to the floor, dropped his hat beside it, and kept his eye on the knife.

She had been unwrapping a fold of paper as she talked. The sight of its contents surprised a low exclamation from the Pearlhunter. It was a red mask.

The Pearlhunter fingered the bit of stuff cloth lying across the girl's palm with such quick eagerness that her eyes sought his face curiously. The red mask! The suit of the knife near an eye hole—no man in the Flatwoods better able to read the story it told; none better able to piece together the fragments of the seven-year-old tragedy.

Up through the eye holes there seemed to glow a pair of eyes—blue, like one ice; eyes that glow black when roused. He knew what they looked like when the blue turned to black.

Suddenly, without warning, a deep groan set the silence ashiver. The girl jammed the packer back behind the coals; the Pearlhunter whirled. The Wild Man had risen from his chair and stood peering toward him with wide, weird eyes. With a step that was ghostly noiseless he crossed the floor. Quite close he came, his dulled senses seeming to need the stimulus of close contact. His bony hands and long arms were quivering; his hollow face twitching pitifully.

"He's never like this," the girl whispered.

The young man glanced at her and stood still. The thin hands fluttered over his face and head. Even their lightest touch was heavy with a strength that must have been prodigious—as if the fires of his majesty kindled a force in him more than human. Some impulse of compassion must have reached the heart of the Pearlhunter for he stretched his long arm forth and laid it about the old man's shoulders. Instantly he felt the weight of the arm giant upon him. It might have been the one thing the stricken man craved in his dumb way—the touch of his kind; the prop of a man's arm.

The situation embarrassed the Pearlhunter. It was like winning the confidence of a little child, and then not knowing what to do with it.

The girl was quick to see his embarrassment, and, much as a mother might love a child away from some one she longed to be with him, she led the old man back to his chair, then leaving him, she hurried across the room to the book case.

"I never saw him so restless before," she said, as she passed by. "He seems to like you, though," she continued while thinking the book she wanted.

"Strange, but I'm sure he likes you," even to the doctor. "Won't you excuse me a minute?"

Before he could reply she had found the book and hurried back to the chair. Opening it, she laid it upon the old man's knees. He bent his head and felt over the open page with his hand, but the weird eyes could no longer read the frozen magic of the words. He fidgeted in his chair and the book slid to the floor.

The picture was too distressing and the Pearlhunter turned his face away. From where he stood he had an almost unobstructed view into the east room, the girl's room, and before he realized it his eyes had strayed past the curtains. Amazement held them there a moment in spite of him. The room, in striking contrast to what he had seen of the rest of the house, was almost bare of furniture—a carpetless floor; the rudest of beds; a broken chair, and little else.

He heard her walking across the floor and turned away half guiltily. She had her hand upon the curtained entrance of the west room, and he noticed that it was carpeted, and was otherwise furnished quite in keeping with the room in which he stood, certainly in very decided contrast to the room upon the east.

But he had no time to reflect on all these things, for the girl reappeared in a moment carrying a cello, which she placed, between the old man's knees. She put the bow in his right hand and lifted his left to the strings. He laid his cheek down upon the instrument; grew quiet. The faltering bow tried to wake the strings, but in vain. The old man's body seemed to shrink together. His chin dropped down upon his breast. But the next instant he sat upright and rigid; his wide eyes, groping around, found the Pearlhunter, and he started to rise—grappled up, strained up, as if by a power outside himself.

She fumbled out from behind a row of books a small packet, with the caution:

"You mustn't let Daddy see it. He will go wild if you do. I used to keep it stuck behind the picture, but it worked out into sight one day, and he drove the knife through it before I could get it away from him. If he ever finds the man it belongs to he'll serve him the same way, I'm afraid. Sometimes I think that's why he haunts the woods—to see if he can find him. There, you can see where the knife went through."

She had been unwrapping a fold of paper as she talked. The sight of its contents surprised a low exclamation from the Pearlhunter. It was a red mask.

Quite close he came, his dulled senses seeming to need the stimulus of close contact. His bony hands and long arms were quivering; his hollow face twitching pitifully.

"He's never like this," the girl whispered.

The young man glanced at her and stood still. The thin hands fluttered over his face and head. Even their lightest touch was heavy with a strength that must have been prodigious—as if the fires of his majesty kindled a force in him more than human. Some impulse of compassion must have reached the heart of the Pearlhunter for he stretched his long arm forth and laid it about the old man's shoulders. Instantly he felt the weight of the arm giant upon him. It might have been the one thing the stricken man craved in his dumb way—the touch of his kind; the prop of a man's arm.

The situation embarrassed the Pearlhunter. It was like winning the confidence of a little child, and then not knowing what to do with it.

The girl was quick to see his embarrassment, and, much as a mother might love a child away from some one she longed to be with him, she led the old man back to his chair, then leaving him, she hurried across the room to the book case.

"I never saw him so restless before," she said, as she passed by. "He seems to like you, though," she continued while thinking the book she wanted.

"Strange, but I'm sure he likes you," even to the doctor. "Won't you excuse me a minute?"

Before he could reply she had found the book and hurried back to the chair. Opening it, she laid it upon the old man's knees. He bent his head and felt over the open page with his hand, but the weird eyes could no longer read the frozen magic of the words. He fidgeted in his chair and the book slid to the floor.

The picture was too distressing and the Pearlhunter turned his face away. From where he stood he had an almost unobstructed view into the east room, the girl's room, and before he realized it his eyes had strayed past the curtains. Amazement held them there a moment in spite of him. The room, in striking contrast to what he had seen of the rest of the house, was almost bare of furniture—a carpetless floor; the rudest of beds; a broken chair, and little else.

ROMANCE

By ELEANOR H. RUSSELL.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
The letter addressed in an unknown handwriting seemed to jump to Anne's eye as it lay on the table among the day's mail. She slit it open eagerly and as she read a soft flush rose in her face.

"Well, I never expected anything like that written to me," she exclaimed. "A rare type of American womanhood" and "I should consider it a privilege to come all the way from New York to grasp your little hand."

The bold signature, "Gregory Phillips," told the story. He was a suitor of her chum, Grace, who lived in New York. When Grace had decided to break her engagement to Gregory, and not daring to confess it to him had planned simply to disappear, Anne had written her a straightforward note of advice.

"You've always been honorable and courageous," she had written "Don't fall now. Face it out with him." And Grace had heeded her advice and had evidently told Gregory whence it came. This was his note of appreciation to Anne. It brought a thrill to her as she read. "A man much older than she, who knew so much, holding her up as a criterion of all that was womanly and fine! Ah, that was romance!"

But that evening romance had to be tucked away in the blouse of Anne's gown, because Jim was coming to take her to the movies.

In due time Anne answered the letter and a reply came quickly. She wrote diffidently at first, but as time went on she began to open her heart more freely to her understanding friend.

Even stolid, prosaic Jim thought she was becoming more indifferent and dreamy than was her wont.

"No, I don't want to go to wait. I've got letters to write," she said petulantly one evening.

"You'd better come out," replied Jim. "Seems to me you're getting kind of pale and besides" here his face lit up. "The little house on Pleasant street to show you. Not a very nice neighborhood but just our size."

"I'm sorry, Jim, not tonight," and Anne closed the conversation.

A week later the crisis came. Gregory Phillips wrote he was coming from New York for the express purpose of seeing her. Anne's excitement knew no bounds. She bought a whole new outfit for the occasion. A soft, black satin dress and a change of a lines but that set off her golden hair to perfection, and a pair of dainty slippers. They made a unit in her savings.

On the first evening Anne sat waiting with excitement from the time the crown of her hair to the very tip of her slippers, waiting for him to be included either at a hotel draw ing room or at her own home. After a while, she thought, she and the place of her dreams. Suddenly she looked up as a tall man entered with a black self-assured step. His eyes fell over the room. Anne's heart gave one great bound and then stopped completely. She felt stunned and, closing her first impulse, bent her head. For her momentary all she had been at a distance from the stooping shoulders of disfigurement had not escaped her.

"Did you think hiding your face would prevent me from knowing you?" started her, and she looked up.

After never quite realized how she got through the first sickening moments of the miserable farce of a dinner. Her food lay barely tasted on her plate while her "hero" talked on and on. Nothing of how wonderful she was now, but all of himself, his success, his money, his car and his clubs. Somehow the evening progressed and he sat her at her door with the words:

"Tomorrow afternoon, we'll have tea and then I have tickets for the front row of the best show in town." (Of course, he would put it that way. Apparently he had the best of everything.)

After he had gone, Anne tried the facts squarely. How could she go through two more whole days of it? A poet on paper, but such a poor prize! But she was a sickly little thing and having gotten her into the scrape she determined to see it through.

"And I told Jim I'd be busy over the whole week-end," she moaned to herself.

Angered by the undisguised disillusionment in Anne's face, Phillips grew morose and sulky. He couldn't imagine why he had wasted his good time and money on this little New England lecher. He determined to cut his trip short.

Their parting was chilly. Anne smiled bitterly as she remembered that at this stage she had expected to be wearing a diamond as big as an egg. Disappointment was so strong in both of them that they did not even pretend that they ever doped to meet again. Anne closed the door and shuddered as the taxi chugged off.

"And I thought that was romance," she breathed.

The next instant she was giving a telephone number.

"To Jim! Don't you want to come up? No, it's not too late. I thought we might plan about furniture for that little house on Pleasant street. Five minutes? Oh, all right."

American Companies Threatened.

Spain is one of the great iron-ore centers of the world, shipping out heavy to other European countries, as well as to the United States, and while it has some large iron and steel works its output of the finished product has never been commensurate with its ore development.

Now, however, there is a well defined project of the Krupps to set up a great branch at Bilbao, Spain, to manufacture agricultural machinery for the purpose of driving out of the market American companies who now have a large share of the business.
