GRADE SCHOOL HOUSE HAD A FIRE SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon about five o'clock the ringing of the fire bell brought Northville people away from the furnace fires for the first time during the day. Investigation revealed the fact that the roof on the grade school building was on fire in a number of places. Fortunately there was not much wind, and willing workers soon had a line of hose to the roof and the blaze was easily extinguished.

It is believed the fire originated from sparks from the chimney, as the roof was ablaze in a number of places by the time the fire fighters arrived. When the fire in the furnace was replenished for the night the chimney evidently burned out, throwing sparks over the roof.

The old school building burned some years ago on Sunday morning.

ROAD MEETING VERY HARMONIOUS.

At the meeting called to give hearing to all property owners who are interested in the assessments to be levied for the construction of the Novi-Northville-Farmington highway improvement, held at the council rooms in this village last Thursday afternoon, there were no objections offered to the proposed construction of the road. About the only subject discussed except as the whole proposition was presented in a general way, was the request made by the property owners of Farmington township who expressed the desire to have the highway leading from Grand River to the Base Line constructed of cement instead of gravel as planned. In presenting their request for the change, they agreed to pay the additional cost between cement and gravel construction.

It is expected that the highway improvement will be started as early in the spring as conditions will permit.

YOUR RED CROSS MEMBERSHIP.

If the committee having in charge the annual Red Cross membership roll call failed to visit you, you may pay your dollar at either of the Northville banks and your receipt and button will be given you.

This annual roll call is now being conducted in all parts of the country and all are urged to have a part in this great movement. We are assured by the national officers of the Red Cross that the roll call is of vital importance and we are also assured that the American Red Cross is the only organization in the world today that can "carry on" the great humanitarian work necessary to relieve the suffering and starvation in Europe. Every penny of your dollar will be expended in a worthy cause and you can be glad that you have had a part in the great work of the Red Cross.

MASONS HAD A BIG TIME.

Northville Lodge P. & A. M., was host Monday night to one of the largest gatherings of Masons ever assembled in this village, the occasion being the initiation of a large class into the M. M. degree. The special feature of the evening after a bountiful dinner had been served to more than 25 members, was the conferring of the third-degree upon R. R. Brown, manager of the Detroit Edison Co. for this district. The Edison degree team from Detroit came out to do the work and the members were accompanied by a large number of friends and acquaintances of Mr. Brown from the city and from a number of surrounding towns. It was truly a great night, and the kitchen squad was nearly "swamped."

Mr. Brown was the 55th member to be raised by Northville Lodge during the past Masonic year, a most praiseworthy record for the order.

SOMMERS - TESHA.

Married at the Lutheran parsonage at Clarenceville, Wednesday afternoon, November 17th, at three o'clock by Rev. Lawrence Harry Sommers, eldest son of Mrs. J. D. Miller, and Miss Helen Tesha, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Tesha. They were attended by Miss Clara Kluck of Ann Arbor and Paul Poss of Northville. After the ceremony a six o'clock dinner was given the bridal party in Detroit by Mrs. A. Bluhm, sister of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Sommers left on a wedding trip to Rochester, N. Y., and will be at home to their friends after December 1st, on a farm west of town.

COMMANDERY MADE A FINE SHOWING

The annual inspection of Northville Commandery, No. 39, Knights Templar, occurred Tuesday evening and the affair was one of the most enjoyable of all the inspections held since the organization of the local Commandery. Albert L. Smith of Howell, grand junior warden of the Grand Commandery of Michigan, was assigned to check up the Sir Knights and the affairs of the Commandery and he was painstaking and cordial in his criticisms and instructions. To several of the officers he gave special words of praise for their betterment of the order. The degree 33 Sir Knights in Northville at the opening ceremonies and it remained to the close making the former appearance of Northville Commandery. The membership is now 158 and the Commandery is still showing very bright prospects for the coming year. Dr. John H. Vossler of Restord was the candidate for the evening. A ballot was served at 10:30 to sixty Sir Knights.

H. C. Thayer, Eminent Commander

TO OPEN STORE IN PLYMOUTH.

Messrs. F. R. & R. P. Woodworth, proprietors of the Woodworth bazaar and phonograph shop in this village, have rented a building on Penniman avenue, across from the post office in Plymouth, and will open a bazaar there about the first of December. These gentlemen have been very successful since opening their store, here and being desirous of branching, out decided upon the Plymouth enterprise. They will carry a full and complete bazaar stock besides phonographs and records and the two stores can be operated in connection very nicely.

The people of Plymouth will find Messrs. Woodworth in every way worthy of their confidence and their new store will need a valuable acquisition to the business interests of that village.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' BENEFIT WELL PATRONIZED.

Northville people again demonstrated that no worthy cause shall suffer in this community. The King's Daughters' benefit was a greater success than even the most enthusiastic worker had hoped for. The receipts from the apron sale were more than $100 and the dinner was so well patronized that it was almost impossible for the people to be accommodated. The affair was well planned and the ladies in charge worked faithfully to make a success of the undertaking. They are very grateful to all who assisted in any way.

THANKSGIVING

Each and every one of us have a lot to be thankful for, and while Thanksgiving Day is nationally designated as a time for giving thanks, we believe in giving thanks throughout each year to the many patrons of this store, who deserve much credit for the success of our business. The large patronage we enjoy and our hundreds of permanent customers who come again and again is a gratifying evidence that we are thanked for our many efforts in providing good merchandise at lowest prices for our endeavors to please and satisfy.

A Royal Thanksgiving Feast

By R. Ray Baker

ALTHOUGH Mrs. Ralph Slocum was a determined, resourceful young woman, she was stupefied. It seemed that she was destined soon to be a widow, if she had not already reached that stage in life's journey.

Yes, it was a gloomy Thanksgiving day, although the sun was shining alluringly. Her husband had disappeared, and the chances were 100 to 1 against ever seeing him again.

She censured herself for agreeing to this South-sea honeymoon. Why had she yielded to Ralph's wishes to explore Kondo Island when something inside her had persistently warned that she should not let him set foot on shore?

She sat on the deck of the steam yacht Crystal and tried to reason a way out of the dilemma—a happy way out. One course would be to hoist anchor and step away. But that would not be the happy way, because it would leave Ralph in the clutches of the cannibals.

The event that had brought her to distraction occurred the previous afternoon about 4 o'clock. They had just arrived at the island and Ralph had insisted on going ashore.

Margaret realized a sense of foreboding as her husband set off in the little boat with Samson Brown, one of the sailors.

Margaret saw her husband lean and help Samson draw the boat where the water could not touch it, then they both disappeared into the forest. She sat on the deck and watched and waited, still harassed by that feeling of foreboding.

The sun was a half circle on the horizon when she saw Samson stagger out from among the trees and push the small boat in to the water, floating in. This action seemed to take the last ounce of strength, for he sank to the bottom of the shaft and lay there apparently helpless.

That was sufficient excuse for Margaret to sound an alarm that brought the crew of the Crystal scrambling and tumbling to the deck, where they at once comprehended the situation and set out in another boat to rescue Samson, whose craft was being tossed back on shore.

"What's happening? Where's Ralph?" breathed Margaret, as Samson was carried on deck, but he answered simply with a glassy stare and was taken to his bunk. He rolled his eyes queerly and opened and shut his hands repeatedly. Presently he seemed to get a grip on himself and managed to articulate:

"Cannibals got him."

While Margaret steadied herself against the wall, growing deathly pale, he went on, talking laboriously:

"We spent some time getting our bearings before he sent me to find a spring of water, while he went in a different direction to dig up some relic your father left two years ago. I found water and was starting after him on the dim path he had taken when I heard unearthly screeching from the direction he had taken. I hurried and soon arrived at the scene of trouble. About fifty black men were dancing round him, shouting and singing, and he was tied to tree with thongs. I knew I couldn't fight whole gang, so hid behind another tree and watched for opportunity to cut him loose. It didn't come, for they took him off into woods. I was scared almost to death and didn't know what to do, but thought it best to return to yacht and get help. Hope you don't think I did wrong."

Samson sank back in the bunk, sighed heavily and closed his eyes. All night he was delirious, and Margaret's condition was not much better. She realized the unfeasibility of sending the men ashore to fight the cannibals, especially at night, but was determined that some action be taken in the morning. When morning came, however, the crew refused to go—all except Joe Larson, the cook who said he'd be willing to wade a river of blood to help Ralph.

The idea of one man and one oxman against hundreds of cannibals was not seem practical, so she sat on deck and thought, and thought.

"Perhaps Samson went crazy and dreamed it," she told herself. "Maybe Ralph will turn up all right. He's the most resourceful person in the world."

But the inactivity drove her nearly to distraction. Finally she told Joe to get ready and row her ashore. The others protested, saying she was taking her life in her hands. But she was determined.

"All right, ma'am," one of them said. "It's up to you. We'd be glad to go along and help, only the odds are too heavy."

Joe rowed her ashore and they followed a faint path into the woods. The underbrush was not so dense as it appeared from the deck of the yacht, and they made fair progress, presently arriving at a clearing. Here they paused, for the ground showed signs of a struggle with numerous prints from bare feet.

She was kneeling to examine these prints, when Joe suddenly cried: "Look out!"

The next instant she and Joe were the center of a howling, cavoring vortex of black humanity. Their arms and feet were tied and they were carried into the forest.

Samson, across the shoulders of a man, saw Margaret give herself up for lost, but she didn't care much.

"If Ralph's dead, I don't want to live," she told herself, and hoped it would soon be over with. The only thing that made her shudder now was the thought of being served at the king's Thanksgiving feast.

After being carried about two miles through the jungle the party emerged in an immense clearing dotted with bamboo huts, with an exceptionally large one in the center. The prisoners were placed in a hut on the outskirts and guarded with spears and darts at the doors.

Presently the black man who had been the leader of the captors appeared, cut the thames from their feet and surprised the prisoners with these words of English:

"Now we take you to King."

In a short time they were ushered into the innermost of the huts, in which was a rudely constructed throne, about which were grouped several natives in fantastic costume, made of skins and feathers.

The king appeared through the door, walking with a Broadway stride. He mounted the throne with a majestic mien and surveyed the captives. Margaret stared at him for a moment in astonishment, then threw herself at his feet, and clasped him in her arms.

"Ralph! Ralph!" she sobbed. "What can this—what does it all mean?"

She stepped back down from the throne and looked up at him, wondering.

He was clad like the natives, only his attire was more fantastic and picturesque.

"It means," he said, simply, "that I pulled a few stunts in magic that showed the old king up and he lost his job—and I am now ruler of Kondo island. I had to either be a king or be eaten by one, and it didn't take me long to decide I'm about to resign though, as soon as we have our Thanksgiving dinner—and a royal one it is. It's in the next hut."

She grimaced.

"Cannibal stew?" she inquired.

"No, wild turkey. I ordered them prepared when messengers brought word that a white woman and man had been captured. Come to the royal feast—you and Joe—and we'll discuss a way of disowning this kingdom."

The Bigger Half of Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is the bigger half of Thanksgiving. If the face shines and the voice has a cheery ring, and little acts of helpfulness and kindness are as natural as breathing, a song of praise is continually rising to the Father in heaven. Words of gratitude mean very little if the life and the lips are not in accord.

Woven Furs Outrival Pelts

"WOMEN FURS" is the new word given to those lovely woolen fabrics that the fooms turn up so amazingly like the pelts they are. We have known them for years, and under almost any name there are varieties in the fur, but they have arrived at a new level of development. Their newness is having made a place for the wonderful imitations of nature that are beginning to work in the fur world and are getting into the fur world. People's eyes have been opened to skins they are not used to, and furs that are not used to, or else they appear to be an improvement on the natural fur that inspired them.

They are trimmed with rich natural furs and displayed along with furs of fur without suffering by comparison. Even the practiced eye has difficulty in telling which is which except by close inspection. For warmth and durability the odds often lie in the favor of the woven furs and there is a long list of names in coats, as may be gathered from the two examples shown. One of these, at the left, is a imitation of minkskin trimmed with a real Australian opossum and fur is the foundation and woven fur is high collar and deep cuffs of shawl. They are high-priced, but not expensive garments, since they will last for years. It is not unlikely that the day will come when women will prefer these fabrics to pelts as a standard in the direction of wearing will be growing among them.

Fine Art in Winter Millinery

IF THE fleeting millinery styles of the passing seasons left any permanent record of themselves those of the present winter of grace would be remembered for their chic shapes, their soft contours, their rich decorations, for the amount of handwork lavished on them. There has not been a time in the memory of the oldest milliner when there was more chance for the exercise of her ingenuity and craftsmanship or for the exercise of individual taste on the part of herself and her clientele.

In shades, the small and medium-sized hats constitute at least three-fourths of all the season's product, and about the same proportion applies to fabric hats as compared to others; that is hats made of hand of velvet, duvety satin and other millinery materials are in for greater demand than any others. It is a milliner's season.

A group of four models, as shown above, embodies the typical, outstanding style-points that have made this a winter of unusually becoming millinery. Where fabrics and needlework flourish combinations of materials follow naturally. This is set forth in the hat at the top of the group, with its top crown and upper brim covered with narrow satin ribbon, its side crown and draped brim edge of velvet and facing of plain satin. Such a brim throws an alluring shadow over the eyes and the right kind of facing can do much to enhance the complexion. A little simple stitchery accounts for the trimming.

In the hat at the left with duvety crown and upper brim and facing of plain velvet, the combination of fine featherwork and embroidery makes a beautiful and striking decoration. The brilliant bird is made of feathers and is poised on a little branch that is embroidered in heavy silk floss. A few scattered motifs in needlework are added to the crown. At the right a soft hat of duvety forms a background for a brilliant embroidered motif that brings a memory of old Egypt to mind, and below it a dashing round hat has a crown of frosty looking tassel cloth, silver and white, and a brim of black velvet. Its ornament is a handsome tassel of ostrich feathers suspended from a silver cord. If ever the fine art of the milliner were evidenced, it is in these difficult but artfully simple looking patterns.

Plaid and serge will still be a favorite combination.

CALLS FOR COMMON SENSE

Community Cannot Be Satisfactorily Developed Unless Work Is Proceeded With Intelligently.

What would you think of a manufacturer whose product was in demand who would fail to make effective use of sales-creating facilities at hand just because it was not immediately possible to inaugurate a whole of a selling campaign?

But wait a minute. Don't answer that until you ascertain whether the reply would apply with equal force to you and others in your own community whose interests depend upon the growth of your community.

For isn't that precisely the situation with many communities whose commercial organizations are doing nothing toward "selling" the community in a practical manner because the time is not ripe for a big campaign for funds for a survey of resources?

Between that senseless form of "town boosting" in which so many cities indulge on the one hand, and the scientific survey which calls for a considerable fund on the other, there is a happy medium which few communities have attained.

So much so-called community promotion is a concoction of lack-of-plan and meaningless superlatives.

Yet in every community that is capable of healthy growth there are certain things which should be perfectly obvious to those in the city whose interests would be enhanced through development work.

Application of the simplest business methods would discover them, and the community would cease to grow more or less by accident and local people would no longer be called upon to invest, from time to time, in this that or the other enterprise that has been hatched into a community where it does not belong by a bonus that is as silly to accept as to offer.—From the Nation's Business.

PUT WASTE PLACES TO USE

Good Idea During the Winter to Plan for Improvements to Be Made Next Spring.

Every city, village and hamlet has the potential of a great amount of land which is not only unproductive, but which is rendered hateful to the sight and detested to the vicinity, as a haven for rubbish and a breeding place for noxious weeds. These waste areas and the unbecomingly spaces commonly denominated as back yards, as a rule, are not fit for garden work in their present condition. But this condition readily can be changed with some intelligent exertion. The addition to this unpromising soil of nature, of the fallen leaves from the trees, and sometimes of ashes sifted from the furnace, soon renders it workable and productive. For a time the co-operation of the community officials might be necessary as a means of encouragement, but each such waste place transformed into a productive garden of vegetables and flowers and small fruits would serve as a compelling example, and in very few years the results would be beyond calculation.

The benefits to be derived from this conversion of waste places into productive beauty spots cannot be measured alone in dollars and cents. An even greater benefit would lie in the improved morals of the community, in the cultivation of habits of industry on the part of the young, especially, and in the beautifying thrift and beauty are the rewards waiting these communities which wholeheartedly and intelligently cultivate in the people the natural garden instinct. A national propaganda in this direction would work wonders.

Young Trees in Winter.

All very young trees require some attention the first winter: after that they will be established and be able to take care of their own welfare. Therefore, all recently planted trees will be benefited by the hilling, of a mound of earth around them, tramping it very hard. This keeps the tree from rocking with the winter winds. If this precaution is not taken with newly planted stock the trees are apt in swaying back and forth to work a hole around the trunk which reaches clear down to the roots, and it is often fatal to the newly planted tree. A row of silver maples, one of the easiest of all deciduous trees to transplant, for lack of this precaution were all killed during last winter.

Building Bungalow Towns.

In London, as in America, the shortage of homes has resulted in a remarkable expansion of bungalow land. On Canvey Island, for instance, homes built chiefly of wood, concrete slabs or most common of all, corrugated iron, are being run up in all directions. A good many folk are building their own homes, camping meanwhile in tents; others have resorted to converting paneled houses, and such like, into homes. What prices are like on the island may be gathered from the fact that a concrete bungalow of four rooms is offered for sale at £600, a paneled house with two rooms for £150 and a gipsy van for £75.

Lost 20 Pounds in the Army—Appetite Fell Off and He Became Weak, Run-down.

TOOK HYPO-COD KNOWING FORMULA WAS GOOD

"I was in the Army and exposed to all sorts of weather, and to that, always having an inside job, I nearly put me down and out. I wasn't used to the exposure and grind and lost twenty pounds in weight. My appetite fell off and I became all weak and run down. I surely looked bad and nights even after I got back on the job I couldn't sleep and would toss and roll half the night. My appetite didn't come back either and my digestion was upset, but just as soon as I started on a bottle of Earle's Hypo-Cod-I began hitting on all cylinders and feeling hip-top," declared N. C. Clarke, a popular pharmacist and manager of Cunningham's Drug Store, 155 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.

"I picked out Hypo-Cod because I know the formula is right, and to show how strong and quick it is from the first dose my appetite picked up and my digestion was so good in a couple days I could even eat anything—even Army beans," laughingly asserted this endorser. "I began sleeping better, too, and feeling better all over, and today I feel as good as I ever did in my life." It has my endorsement and I recommend it to everyone needing a tonic," continued Mr. Clarke, Ph. G., who has many friends that say he looks like a different man now.

When a regular druggist selects a tonic from among all the various ones on the shelf, to take himself, one may be quite sure that the formula is right. That he knows the people make it are absolutely reliable and then when he gets results even better than he has a right to expect, he is sure to be enthusiastic. Drop in at the drug store tonight and read over the formula which is on each bottle. Take home a bottle for the whole family to try. We are sure you will be delighted the way it works, and with its pleasant taste. Earle's Hypo-Cod is sold here by all good druggists, and the leading druggists in all nearby towns—Adv.

L. O. T. M. NOTES.

At the next regular meeting of Forget-Me-Not Live we expect our deputy, Carrie Gilbert, to be with us. We are to have a grab-bag, the proceeds to go toward the Christmas tree which we have each year in Detroit for some one of the homes for children.

Several ladies of the L. O. T. M. surprised Mrs. Wolfson at her home last Friday evening, to bid her goodbye and wish her good luck in her new home. All had a good visit and a good time. The ladies took cake and ice cream which was served at a late hour, after which Commander Cole presented Mrs. Wolfson with a pin of the order. Knowing she would find friends among members of the order wherever she might be.

Our Lizzie is not made of tin.

With brains to spare, she's sure to win.

Why Lizzie, What makes you so happy and cheerful these days?

I'll tell you Blanch, it's a secret, but Tom and I are going to get married and we have each taken out stock in "The Loan" for we do not intend to let any minister pull this: "Stop! You are extravagant" business on us. We'll flash our Loan Books on him before the ceremony, See?

As I was saying, there were many reasons for our joining "The Loan" but the main ones were these:

1st. It pays better. I have heard that dollars increase in "The Loan" nearly as fast as Jack Rabbits up North.

2nd. We will not need our money for some time and it can be used to help some one buy or build a home, and when we get ready to build, there will be plenty paying in to help us out—you see "The Loan" is a sort of "Help-one-another" concern.

3rd. It's the style. We'll, by what you say, I think it is a pretty good thing to belong to.

"Now You Have Said Something." Go to McCully's any Saturday night and the man at the desk will get you started.

THEY WERE SELLING FARM BUREAU PAINT.

During the recent membership campaign of the state farm bureau the Lansing solicitors found some men who were selling "farm bureau paint" according to the state farm bureau.

It seems that there "ain't no such animal" since the state farm bureau issues a warning this week to its members that they should deplore any use of the name of the farm bureau by irresponsible parties and that before they buy anything in the name of the farm bureau they should call the matter to the attention of their local county agent. Instances of making use of the farm bureau to sell farm implements have also been discovered.

SUGAR BEET DEPARTMENT OF BUREAU PLANNED.

Plans for the formation of a sugar beet department of the Michigan State Farm Bureau which will represent the interests of the 12,000 sugar beet growers of the state, most of whom are members of the farm bureau, are being perfected by a committee of five appointed by representatives of 24 counties, according to the state farm bureau.

At a recent meeting of this committee December 15 was set as the time for submitting of its reports to the representatives of the sugar beet counties, when a plan of organizing the interests of the growers is expected to be adopted.

FORD SETS NEW RECORDS IN TRACTION PRODUCTION.

Each of the four months from June to September was a record-breaker in the matter of production at the Ford tractor plant in Dearborn and the assembling plants in Des Moines, Ia., St. Louis, Mo., Kearney, N. J. and Cork, Ireland, according to an official statement. The combined output for June was 9,149 tractors; in July 9,766 were assembled, in August, 10,248, and in September, 10,100. The September output is regarded as a record, inasmuch as Labor Day was a holiday, thus reducing the month's production by more than 400 vehicles.

On August 18 Fordson tractor No. 150,000 was assembled and shipped. Just six months previous—on February 18, 1920—tractor bearing the factory number mark 100,000 was turned out, so that 50,000 Fordsons had been made in six months.

During the week ended October 3 the Cork plant turned out 111 tractors, this being one of the best weeks in a long time. This plant supplies not only England but also the Continent, and Fordsons have been sent from there to Sweden, Norway and Russia. Because the Cork plant is to be considerably enlarged, much machinery is being sent to it from over here, the average being 50 carloads a month, 15 carloads consisting of machinery and general apparatus and the other 35 of production material from the Dearborn plant. In the future the Cork plant may be able to obtain parts from European manufacturers, says the Ford News, and thus obtain better delivery service.—Michigan Manufacturer.

"Thine Is the Glory"

This painting, which hangs in National Headquarters of the American Red Cross, Washington, depicts the homage of America's fighting men to American womanhood as mobilized for service in the World War by this organization. It is the collaborative scientific and art creation of Major Joseph Gray Mitchell, late of the General Staff, U. S. A., and F. Luis Mora, of the New York School of Art. The face of the central figure is a composite of the features of a thousand Red Cross workers selected for the purpose.

WOMEN'S SPHERE AT THE CHICAGO STOCK SHOW.

Not only for the farm woman were the features of the International Live Stock Exhibition especially designed to arouse genuine interest created between city and country women there is a common interest. Housekeeping has been reduced to a science in recent years and is intensifying that character as time works along.

The International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago, November 27th to December 4th, will afford an unprecedented opportunity for the wives and daughters to study domestic science. Skilled demonstrators will expound the principles of that essential art, solving vexed problems associated with living cost by the introduction of modern and efficient methods into domestic culinary operations. Go and see how the cheaper cuts of meats may be prepared, to create palatable dishes, investigate other phases of this interesting study and add to your mental equipment for meeting new housekeeping problems.

In recent years the "International" has rapidly developed features of absorbing interest and educational value to the mothers, wives and daughters of the American family apart from the general attractions valuable in an educational and recreative sense to both sexes.

Quite likely American women bathers in inclination to embolden, it is stated, have taken to painting dimples on their knees. The report of a fashionable New Yorker who does not care for the water has created the necessary illusion by having a lobster pinned on her toe is probably premature. From Punch, London.

The "Greatest Mother" concept which was visualized in the famous art poster used by the American Red Cross in its second war fund campaign has had its symbolism adapted to the Red Cross work of the post-war era and will illuminate the main poster to be used in the Fourth Roll Call November 11-25. This adaptation will bear the title "Still the Greatest Mother in the World." Everyone is familiar with the original "The Greatest Mother in the World," the effectiveness of which has been shown in part by the fact that it has furnished a synonym for Red Cross that has come to almost a household term. More than any other symbol, except the red cross itself, the public has made it the trademark of the American Red Cross.

Where Discipline and Recreation Combine to Better Service

Work is more than just a living to the girl at central. There is always an abundance of fun and recreation, too, during regular rest periods and whenever she is off duty.

Lots of people who have visited our larger exchanges marvel at their simple, homelike atmosphere—the delightful lounging and reading rooms—the immaculate kitchens and pleasant dining rooms—and, most important of all, their watchful, helpful sensible matrons.

Long ago, your telephone company learned that in order to have efficient operators, their girls must also be happy and healthful. So these comforts, which mean so much to our girls, are, after all only instruments to improve your telephone service.

Our girls' health is always carefully guarded. Frequent physical examinations are given and healthful athletics encouraged. In rainy weather dry footwear and stockings are loaned. In the dining room meals are very, very good and are provided at very low prices.

To insure the best service possible, strict discipline, it is true, must be maintained in the operating rooms but after hours and during rest periods complete relaxation is encouraged.

We believe that the life of the telephone girl has all the pleasant, clean joys that should surround the life of a normal girl. We believe, too, that you will find that the careful supervision which we maintain over them is being reflected daily in the improved telephone service which they give.

THE GREATEST MOTHER IN THE WORLD

You, who live in the country... What if you had a child who was sick or who in school seemed dull and unable to learn?

You know a great many times a child is not really stupid; it may be its eyes need attention and glasses would correct the trouble so the child could see. Or perhaps it has trouble in hearing. May be, the child is a cripple.

That's why the American Red Cross is doing such a splendid work in rural communities through its Public Health program. It is because it feels that if America is to grow strong in all good things, it must be through the strength of its citizens.

The children are the material from which this citizenship is to be made and it is a sacred trust to be handed down, that these children be given the fullest chance to develop both mentally and physically.

Wouldn't you like to know what the Public Health program of the American Red Cross does?

It is divided into 4 main parts:

(a) Public Health. This work is carried on by 12 trained nurses in every township in Wayne county, outside Detroit. Not only do these nurses go into the homes and the schools, but there are 4 permanent clinics established now in Wyandotte, Wayne, Redford and Grosse Pointe, and it is definitely decided to have a "traveling clinic" which will go to places not now served. At any of these clinics parents can learn how to take care of their children; and they are urged to come bringing their families with them. You know the old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Well, that's the very purpose of these clinics. Treatment of eyes and teeth and many other ills, is given.

Then there's a clinic to take care of and make strong, crippled children. Can you imagine a finer thing than giving health and strength to a child with badly defective body?

(b) Home-nursing promotes an educational program. Classes are formed in home-nursing and care of the sick and the aim is to reach every woman in the county through these classes.

(c) What is eaten is a big and very important question to every one and especially to children. They must have good food and properly cooked, if they are to grow strong. The American Red Cross provides a nutrition specialist for this. She teaches all about the different foods and their comparative values in building up body waste.

Just to show you how important good food is, last year in the county communities in Wayne county 60% of the children were underweight, the cause of malnutrition. In one rural school, of 30 children, the total underweight was 200 pounds, or 2-3 lbs. per child.

This is entirely wrong and unnecessary, and it is to correct just such conditions that the work of the nutrition specialist is being done.

(d) Last but not least, children must play. This develops sturdy bodies, and then in turn beget a sound mind. This need is being filled by a trained recreation leader who now is devoting a day a week in each of the following places: Wayne Springswell and Hallville. But somehow, the days are not long enough for this very important work, so an evening session is soon to be added.

In addition to the work of recreation, the crippled or defective child has prescribed for it the best sort of corrective exercises by a doctor who is a specialist and the exercises are carried on by the recreation leader.

In all the work the American Red Cross is doing, in the rural communities, the hearty cooperation of these communities is of the greatest help. The Public Health program is but a part of the great work of the American Red Cross, not only in America but in foreign countries, as well. During the war, the Red Cross was called "The Greatest Mother in the World," and are not its works proving its full claim?

A GOOD PROVIDER.

When it comes to being a good provider no man would pride himself on furnishing trash liberally for his family. The family is entitled to good, wholesome food that helps growth.

It is the same with reading. Good reading pleases and creates its own hunger for more good reading. The Youth's Companion is the best of reading for all—every member—every age. And it comes every week—crowded with the best. Let us prove it with a sample.

The Youth's Companion has long since ceased to provide for "Youth" alone. It has become the favorite all-the-family weekly of America. Its name is a misnomer, but it's retained for the sentiment it has generated in American homes through its service to every age.

Still $2.50 for a year of 52 issues, but this price not guaranteed beyond January 1, next.

New subscribers for 1921 will receive:

STATE-CANNING-CROPS GROWERS TO ORGANIZE.

Preliminary steps have been taken in the formation of a national body of "canning crop" vegetable growers, and Michigan growers are planning to take their place in the country-wide organization. The purpose of the association, which is being fostered by the American Federation of Farm Bureaus, is to bring about more satisfactory marketing conditions for growers of canning crops.

Great variations in the prices paid for crops in different parts of the country, and generally unsatisfactory marketing conditions from the growers' point of view, are among the problems to be met by the proposed organization.

"Canning factory men in Michigan have argued that they could not pay more for peas in this state because the canning people were paying a lower price in Wisconsin," said C. W. Wald, extension specialist at M. A. C. in discussing the situation. "Canning factory men in the eastern states have put up the argument that they could not pay the price asked by growers because tomatoes could be purchased much cheaper in Indiana and Illinois."

"These inequalities are among the problems which must be faced by the new association. If canning crops can be grown more cheaply in one section than in another, then there is justice in a corresponding variation in price. If on the other hand the cost of production is quite similar in different sections a more uniform rate should be paid for canning crops."

A committee consisting of one man from each state interested has been appointed by President Howard of the American Federation of Farm Bureaus to look into the organization possibilities for the growers. C. W. Wald, organization secretary of the Vegetable Growers' association of America, and Extension Specialist at the state Agricultural college, has been named the Michigan representative on this committee, and is cooperating with the state and county farm bureaus.

The business men evangelists who conducted a series of union meetings here, are holding a similar series at Royal Oak, and Northville's male quartet has been invited to sing at the service this evening. Mr. Rollings, who directed the singing here, spoke in highest terms of our quartet and declared he had never found a better one in all his years of evangelistic singing.

The demand for houses and for housekeeping rooms in Northville does not seem to abate. Scarcely a day passes but that some one calls at this office in search of a place to live. It is a great pity we have no place for them. Let us hope that next summer conditions may be improved and enough houses provided to care for those who desire to make Northville their home.

"Five minutes in the morning with my Electric Iron makes wash day so much lighter."

This woman realized how often blouses, frocks and even lingerie found their way into the laundry bag ahead of time, just slightly-mussed.

Even a hint of untidiness made dainty things unwearable and added to the weekly washing.

Now she uses an Electric Iron! With just a twitch of the switch and a few moments of gentle ironing, crumpled garments become smooth and lovely—altogether wearable!

THE BLUE MOON

A TALE OF THE FLATWOODS

BY DAVID ANDERSON

THE LYNCHERS.

Synopsis—Never having known his father, and living with his mother on a houseboat on the Washash river, Pearlhunter—the only name he has—learns from her a part of the story of her sad life. She eludes him before he can make her acquaintance. A vacant cabin on the shore has attracted the attention of the aging woman, and they move into it. Their first meal is interrupted by the Man-in-the-Fancy-Vest. Pearlhunter strikes him. Guppyay, the woman's intruder, drives the intruder away. She says he is the "Other-Man," whom she has not seen for 20 years. They find a red mask dropped by the Other-Man. That night Pearlhunter sees the Blue Moon, a great freshwater pearl. His mother dies, and Pearlhunter and the Other-Man meet in the village. A pistol fight is narrowly averted. Pearlhunter believes him to be the Red Mask criminal. Pearlhunter rescues Wild Rose from the Other-Man and meets Wild Man, her father. He is a man cut out by crazed from concussion of the brain the result of an attack by someone wearing a red mask. Nobody knows his identity, he is known at the post office simply as Box 23. Pearlhunter proposes that he sell the Blue Moon and find for a surgeon to operate on Wild Rose. Pearlhunter sells the Blue Moon for $500 to Louis Solomon. The Red Mask murders Solomon and steals the Blue Moon. Pearlhunter is charged with the crime.

"I'm not the Red Mask. I didn't kill Louis Solomon. And I don't know where the Blue Moon is."

"The answer was not convincing. Nothing he could have said just then would have been. Whether the Jew believed it, or any part of it, his face gave no sign he bled away two steps and leveled his revolver full at the Pearlhunter's breast, like a man about to pish, and deliberate planning to make a clean job of it. This instant when the Pearlhunter believed the gray finger was about to press the trigger and he was almost in the act of diving beneath the minute when the Jew motioned to one of the others and said something in a hissing.

The man spoken to darted away through the bushes toward the west, leading the Pearlhunter treacherously.

The man soon reappeared, carrying a piece of rope. One at a time, he took the Pearlhunter's hands, drey them securely together. Even then, so great was their dread of the man he was supposed to be that one of them constantly held a gun on him.

With the knife still sticking in the dead man's breast, they carried him down to the boat, leaving the Pearlhunter before them. There they loaded them in the dead and the living, and roved back up the river to the village—the second time that day; the same trip; the same boat; the same five men. There, a great day opening, the greatest trade ever made among pearl fisher along the Washash in prospect; now, the day nearly done; the pearl lost; one of the men dead; another likely soon to be!

What a difference in the crowd that met them at the wharf! Again driving their prisoner before them, the three grim henchmen carried the dead man up the hill to a small plot of open ground west of the Mud Hen and laid him down upon the grass.

For the second time that day the village emptied its houses to meet them. Women came this time—old women with seared faces; girls with blooming cheeks; and children. Hard men that had drunk to the Pearlhunter barely two hours ago came out of the Mud Hen and stood staring at him in sullen silence. Men from the stores and shops came running. Men that had neither stores nor shops struggled in from every quarter of the village and jostled about in the ever-growing, ominously muttering, circle.

Suddenly, and unexpectedly, two of the henchmen caught the Pearlhunter and held him while the third tied the red mask over his eyes. Bound as he was, he had fished them loose in an instant and raked the mask off against his shoulder. But that one brief moment was enough. The mischief was done. Women screamed; men muttered and swore; but all shrank back, widening the circle.

Who started it, who said it first, will never be known. Nobody knows how the mob forms—a low mumble; a quick hush into frenzy; mild eyes grow wild; stolid faces ashen; a rattle; a clamor; reason down, blood just up.

"Hang 'em! Hang 'em!"

Even the women took up the cry, so great was the terror of his name—the Red Mask—a name that might have stumped the village. The mob charged him. Bound as he was, he dashed at them. A butt of his shoulder caught the foremost man, a burlly blacksmith, on the jaw. He went down like a beef under the mallet. A drive of his head to the pit of the directed kick laid out a third.

He fought as the men of his blood had always fought. "But what" can one man with his hands tied, do against many? They had his blouse ripped off, his shirt in shreds, and a hundred hands still itching to get at him. They beat his face; his body wherever a fist or a club could reach him. A stick of stove wood, in the hands of a lanky woodchopper laid open an evil gash across his head.

He tried to get away, but he was trying to wiggle the rope and mist out of his eyes when a roar was heard on the outskirts of the crowd, and the stocky form of the old Boss was seen lighting his way into the circle. He had probably gone up to Fallen Rock, as he had pointed the night before, missed the Pearlhunter, and come on to the village. He fought well, and opened a narrow swath, half-way through the circle to his friend. But just then somebody struck him above the ear with a bit of a barrel-stave. The ripple subsided; the swath closed. The Pearlhunter's last friend was down and out.

The rope was hung over a knob. Half a dozen hands, some of them women's, stretched out ready to pull. Pearlhunter's hands did pull. The rope slipped slowly. A hush fell on the crowd, so deep that the only sound was the tightening rope could be distinguished. That last final scene broke that stops a life—it is a moment; even to a mob. The Pearlhunter was lifted, the legs of his feet left the grass, he came up and down his spine, and he tumbled black.

There came a sudden dash of hoofs, and a man came straight at the mob. It takes a person to withstand the charge of a horse. The crowd parted, and a man reached the Pearlhunter, and with one slash of a huge blade, cut the rope.

The man came barely in time. The Pearlhunter, only saved from crumpling down to the grass by the arm of the man, dropped limp and cast his head the sid—the world quit feeling; a horse.

"Who is this man?" yelled the Sheriff.

The light came back; he raised his eyes; caught the glitter of a sheriff's star upon the vest of his rescuer.

It is marvelous how one brave man, with the law behind him, can awe a mob.

"Who is this man?" yelled the sheriff.

A man, whose mouth had been mashed by a butt of the Pearlhunter's head, clawed the red mask up from the ground, trampled and soiled, but still unmistakable, and held it high. The sheriff started; glared hard at the Pearlhunter.

"An' so it's you they've roped!" he growled. "Darned if I ain't a notion to let 'em finish the job."

A snarl ran through the mob. They surged forward. The sheriff drew his revolver again, and cursed them back.

"Red Mask or red devil!" he stormed, "he's entitled to a trial under the law—and a trial he'll get."

The mob muttered ominously but fell back, leaving some little space about the horse. The Pearlhunter, was the tallest man there. His height enabled him to see with tolerable clearness to the outskirts of the crowd. He swept his eyes over the mob, the others like a hawk looking for something he fully expected to find. He was not disappointed. In the outer edge of the crowd, leaning carelessly against a hitch rack, stood the man he was expecting to see. He had come out of the Mud Hen at the beginning of the uproar but had taken no part in the lynching. He didn't need to. He had a whole town to do it for him.

The Pearlhunter was not surprised to see him there. Why shouldn't he be there, a very much interested spectator at the final working out of his well-laid plot, a plot that had worked out so infinitely better than he had planned? Why shouldn't a man come to see himself hanged?

And there the Pearlhunter stood, with the rope around his neck—the wrong neck—and no proof to put it around the right one. Something swelled under the rope; something that surged up to his eyes and struck out a splinter of fire. He turned to the man on the horse.

"Sheriff, if you'll stick my gun back and cut my hands loose, I'll rope you the red Red Mask."

It was an unwise thing to say. He knew it the moment he said it. It was unlike him. The man leaning in apparent carelessness against the hitch rack was probably quite unaware that he was suspected. It might prove a costly mistake to let him know that he was. Besides, it was extremely unlikely that he would have the pearl still on him. With the pearl gone, the proof would be gone. The Pearlhunter's usual slow caution should have brought a good many considerations to his mind before he said that. But a rope around a man's neck makes a prodigious difference in the look of things. One cannot help wondering what would have been the outcome had the sheriff heeded the request and cut loose the hands of his prisoner. Things would have happened—and they would have happened fast.

The sheriff laughed; a hard, raspy laugh. A good many things in that laugh. The jangle of handcuffs, the grate of keys in stiff locks—but never a note of mirth.

"He's roped now."

"He's got," was the Pearlhunter's incautious answer, "but he's handy."

He had purposely raised his voice. But the man for whose eye it was intended never shifted his position; never blinked, even in the slightest, his eyes. He did slip his hand down the front of his trunk coat and loosen it against his side, but that was all.

The sheriff swung turned slowly in his saddle and glanced the crowd over. "Eddie an' gentlemen" he said, raising his voice, "as I said before this man is roped to a tree, an' a trial he'll get. He'll hang, an' if he's the law he'll hang. An' got you. I got vice you to break up this damn fool talk an' go home."

It could be seen with half an eye that the sheriff was in no humor to stand any talk. The crowd didn't try it; they obeyed—many sullenly, some grumbling openly. A few started to break back to the Mud Hen.

The village of Buckeye straggles for a quarter of a mile along the river, road. The road is a bigger institution than the village. It formed the principal street. The village lockup, or jail, stood in plain sight a short way to the west on the porta side of the road.

The sheriff dismounted, picked up the silt and trampled blouse, threw it about the shoulders of his prisoner and untied the severed rope—still knotted about his neck. With a muttered complaint he made a slight motion toward the jail with his revolver. The Pearlhunter, still with bound hands, his shirt so tattered that it left him half-naked from his waist up, the blood upon his face and body fast stiffening into clots, obeyed the command.

Inside the lockup the sheriff cut his hands loose, and immediately stepped outside and locked the door, seeming to have no fancy to tarry after his prisoner's hands were free. Turning back to his prisoner he pointed out his house and told him he would bring over some supper later on.

The Buckeye lockup was a two-story, rectangular structure of heavy logs. There were two cells, with a hallway between, on the first floor, and the same arrangement above. The Pearlhunter was the only prisoner, so he had free range of both lower cells. The barred gate opening to the stair leading to the upper floor was heavily padlocked. The door of the jail faced south—faced the river road. Each cell had one window; the window of the one looking east, the window of the other-looking west. These windows were both rather larger than might have been expected. Each contained a single sash, with the four bars to each window, set in arched holes in the logs at the top and bottom. The sash was hinged at the side so as to swing in.

The Pearlhunter opened the sash at the west window and swung it back as far as it would go. Through the bars he could look out under the cool, calm trees in the jail yard. The river road wound dusty and dry toward the sundown; wound to the first curve and then itself in the hills; wound on to that sharp turn at the rim of the deep woods by the low fence. And there the path began, the dim slim path worn by wonderful feet; the path that led to a girl with eyes like the placid sky at the bottom of the spring; eyes that trusted him, that would look for him. What would they be like when he didn't come; when the word reached her that he was the Red Mask? He thought of that bit of scarlet cloth behind the books, with the knife thrust near an eyehole. What if he should never have the chance to see himself right—if he should die without the chance? What would his eyes be like then?

The thought distressed him well-nigh past bearing. He winced as though it had been a blade that stabbed him. The crinkle of paper in his tattered blouse caught his attention. He drew the paper forth—the draft! In the fast falling light he smoothed it out and reread over the words again.

His day! His great day! He had watched it slip into a starry world upon the crest of midnight; had watched it unbar the gates of dawn. And now it had driven across the world and put at the gates of sunset. Dead! Gone back into the night!

He left the window; dropped down upon the one broken chair in the cell and buried his face in his hands.

CHAPTER VIII.

Silence That Came Alive.

The Pearlhunter was not a man to be long held down. His day was gone; but the night remained.

The sheriff was to bring his supper to him. The fact suddenly became significant. Maybe he'd come inside. Maybe he'd come alone.

"Hide it in Your Pants Leg, or Somewhere."

A rusty stove on the hallway between the two cells caught his eye. No poker, would. The door was fastened in a manner that prevented its being taken off. The handle was gone. Nothing loose. He stood studying it. The least he dared behind the stove, lifted it, and wrenched one loose, hid it under his tattered blouse, and went to the east window to watch the sheriff's house.

A scratching at the west window caught his ear. He listened till it was repeated; crossed the hall and thumped to the window. A hand came up to scratch the window ledge again. The Pearlhunter laid his palm upon it. It was snatched away; but came back again.

"That you, Pearlhunter?"

"Yes."

The man on the outside raised himself even with the window. The Pearlhunter would have recognized him in half the light—the Boss. His face came close to the bars on the outside; the Pearlhunter's face came close to the bars on the inside. The friendly but of a six-gun came across the window ledge. The comfortable feel of it in his fingers gave the Pearlhunter a new lease of life.

"Hide it in your pants' leg, or somewhere," the Boss whispered. "An' here's some more bullets, an' the caps an' powder flask."

The young man grasped the hard old hand and whispered an awkward word or two. The Boss drew his hand back and swore.

"Hit an' ro more'n you'd a done for me," he growled. "Now listen, Bull Masterson he's camped three mile up the river. He's got seven men; an' I've got five. That makes fourteen, countin' me and Bull. We can plum count this derned ol' meat house. An' once we get 'u out, let 'em lay a claw on 'u ag'in, if they devil da'st."

"No, no," the Pearlhunter muttered. "You musn't do that. You'd cross the law yourselves."

"Law!" the Boss snorted in his hoarse whisper. "Hit ain't th' law, nor th' sheriff I'm fearin'. Hit's them cussed town yaps. They're wild at th' name of th' Red Mask. They think you're him, an' they're like a herd of deer that's got a wolf down. They're holdin' a meetin' right now 'hind th' Mud Hen. If they start ag'in, the sheriff can't hold out ag'in 'em. That timber-bug'n' feller, him with th' flowery vest, pears to be egg'n' 'em on. 'Pd like t' know what th' thunder."

"I'd kill you, an' I haven't time."

WHEN A WOMAN IS NERVOUS—WORRIED

The lives of most women are full of worry. Men's troubles are bad enough, but women's are worse. Worry makes women sick. It pulls them down, and in their weakened condition they are subject to pains, aches, weakness, back-aches, headaches and dizzy spells.

Most women neglect their health, and for this they pay the penalty. Any woman will find that neglect does not pay. A little more attention to health would brighten up her life. If she asks her neighbors she finds that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription benefits a woman's whole system. It not only acts upon the troubles and weaknesses peculiar to women, but is an all-round tonic that braces the entire body, overcoming nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, dizziness and a run-down condition.

All druggists. Liquid or tablets.

Ypsilanti, Mich.—"Motherhood left me with a bad case of feminine trouble. The doctor did not seem to help me. I heard of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it gave me relief at once. I took just a few bottles and was completely cured. I have wonderful faith in Dr. Pierce's medicine for women."—MRS. LUTHER JONES, 514 S. Hamilton Street.

Back Given Out?

There's surely some reason for that lame, aching back. Likely it's your kidneys. A cold or strain oftentimes congests the kidneys and slows them up. That may be the reason for that nagging backache, those throbby pains, that tired, worn-out feeling. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too, with annoying bladder irregularity. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

Lige Parsons Was Not Actually on the Warpath, but It Seemed There Were Casualties.

"Everybody expects a Kentucky to tell a feud story," stated Governor Morrow of Kentucky recently. "The thing has really been much overdone, but the story of Lige Parsons was worth telling. Lige dropped into the courthouse to see his friend, the probate judge.

"Howdy, Lige," greeted the judge. "Howdy, Judge!" "What's doin' down your way, Lige?" "Nuthin', Judge, nuthin'." "Tother evenin' I was a settin', a-readin' of my Bible, Judge," spoke up Lige, "when some shootin' begun. One of my gals said 'twas the Harris boys down by the middle pasture. Now, Judge, I didn't mind them Harris boys a-shootin', but I was afraid a stray bullet might hit a calf or one of the kids, so I picked up my rifle and dropped a few shots down that way and went back a-readin' of my Bible. Next mornin' I went down that way an' they was all gone 'cept four.'" Harper's Magazine.

CLEANING THE DOG

"THIS is the most wonderful soap ever offered the public," explained the voluble agent, as he opened his grip. "It will clean anything under the sun. It will remove grease spots, polish tinware."

"Oh, I have no doubt it will restore hair to bald heads and make chickens lay eggs," said Mrs. Curfew, sarcastically. "I feel quite satisfied it's made of barks and buds and healing herbs, but I don't want any of your marvelous soap, having had experience with other marvels of the same kind. Last fall an agent came along, selling a soap that would do everything you can think of, from beautifying the female complexion to chasing the crows out of the corn. The agent talked as though he had eight-day works in him, like our old grandfather's clock, and he didn't make any impression until he said the soap would heal all skin diseases of man or beast. It happened at that period that Mr. Curfew had an imitation bird dog that he traded a good watch for, and gave a dollar to boot, said dollar having been extracted from my private savings, and never returned.

"This dog had the mange or some disagreeable disease that caused him to itch in the most reprehensible manner. He was always scratching and rubbing against everything he could find, first and last. One day I set my parlor table and broke my best china, which I had placed on the table a few minutes before. He also upset the sewing machine and the churn, and I don't know what else.

"So when Mr. Curfew heard that the agent's soap would cure skin diseases, he insisted upon buying a cake, and after he had gone he began to wash the dog with that marvelous soap. I don't know what ingredients said soap contained, but after it was rubbed into the dog's skin that unfortunate animal became frantic and acted as though it was on fire. Mr. Curfew tried to hold the beast, and it reached around and bit his ear and I off, and of course he released it then, and the uproar he made, as he danced around the house, holding his ear with one hand, and smothering the police with the other was simply scandalous.

"Meanwhile the dog ran off, entirely demoralized. Mrs. Turpentine was crossing the road pushing her baby buggy, when the animal collided with said vehicle, and spilled her off 'spring' into the mud. I am willing to admit that such an experience was 'aggravating,' but I don't think it was ladylike in Mrs. Turpentine to come over to my house with her muddy infant under her arm, and shake her fist under my nose, and tell me that for five cents she'd pull all my hair out.

"Old Mr. Poppinjay was standing on the corner, leaning on his cane, waiting for a street car, when the crazy dog ran against his cane and he took a header into the gutter, and I really felt sorry for him when I saw him going home ten minutes later, dripping slush and mud like a cess-pot, but I couldn't sympathize with him so very much when he picked up a brick as he was passing our place and smashed a panel in our front door.

"For two days people were coming here claiming that we ought to reimburse them for damages done by that dog. It seemed that the unfortunate animal made a circuit of the town, and left a trail of desolation behind him. He upset six pans of milk for Mrs. Trumpeter, and scared Smith's family horse so it ran away and injured several members of the family, and killed eight prize chickens for Mr. Dippy, and I don't know what else. In view of which, I think we can struggle along without any of your marvelous soap."

An Intellectual. "You often hear it said that Mrs. Githery has all the brains in the Githery family." "But Mr. Githery is a successful business man."

"Oh, yes. However, he merely makes money. While sipping tea and smoking a perfumed cigarette, Mrs. Githery can discuss more abstruse questions that have nothing to do with housework, or the upbringing of the Githery twins than any other woman in her set."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Blocks Easily Removed. A prominent tradesman in south west London expostulated with a gang of road repairers regarding a small mountain of wood blocks dumped in front of his premises.

The protest being ignored, he sur reptitiously stuck a card, bearing the inscription: "Please take one," on the offending heap.

The philanthropic suggestion was quickly acted on by passers-by, and more than half the blocks had disappeared before a vigilant policeman removed the card.—London Express.

If you have decided to select a blooded calf for raising, choose one of the breed that you admire most and believe suited to your conditions, provided the community in which you live has not already adopted some other breed. You should co-operate with your neighbors in developing one breed for your community. You will also obtain much valuable information about calves by working and advising with others, especially those who have had more experience. Select a good purebred calf. It is not sufficient that it be a purebred. It should be registered, as shown by the registration certificate furnished you by the breeder and signed by the secretary of the national association representing the breed.

In addition to being a good individual it should have good breeding back of it. Its parents, grandparents, and so on, should have been useful and profitable to their owners. These facts may be learned from a study of the calf's pedigree. To know a good pedigree when you see it will require some study on your part. Read a history of your chosen breed. Become familiar with individuals and bloodlines which have been instrumental in building up the breed. Such information may be obtained from books sold by publishing houses, from live stock journals, or from bulletins issued by your state college of agriculture, or by the United States Department of Agriculture. Much valuable information may be obtained also from the secretary of the registry association of the breed you select. The state association organized in the interest of your favorite breed will be able to assist you materially. Join such an association at your first opportunity.

Subscribe for a good live stock paper, especially the official journal of the registry association.

listed by the registry association of the breed chosen. Study the advertisement section. Much can be learned from the announcements of sales and auctions in regard to popular pedigrees. Examine carefully the pictures of the breed's best specimens. Become familiar with the names of the breed noted individuals, both past and present, and look for them in a pedigree.

Attend public sales held by breeders. Study sale catalogues and note the remarks made with reference to the breeding of different animals. An appreciation of the esteem in which the breeders hold blood lines of different individuals may be gained by noting the prices paid and the activity of the bidding on them. A word of caution here, however, may be necessary. Breeders frequently become overenthusiastic on family bloodlines regardless of how distant they may be. In analyzing a pedigree consider carefully the sire, grandfathers, and great-grandfathers, or parents in the first three generations, for they contribute seven-eighths of the heredity. Look for the names of famous individuals in these first three generations. Back of them the breeding should be consistent without undesirable outcrosses. Of course the females in the pedigree must not be overlooked, but it is the bulls that determine its value to a great extent. Look for the names of noted men as being the breeders of some of these animals. Remember that a breeder becomes famous by having produced noted animals.

ATTENTION TO STALL FLOORS

Where Cement is Used Bedding Should Be Spread to Protect Udders of the Cows.

When planning a new dairy barn, the stall floors should be given careful attention. A good floor should be sanitary and permanent and a non-conductor of heat. The drains and sizers may be concrete, but for stall floors, cement is not wholly desirable. When used, it must be covered with sufficient bedding to prevent the udders of the cows from coming in contact with it.

Some form of wood block is most satisfactory for this purpose.

TO DETERMINE AGE OF COWS

Most Common Way is to Count Rings on Horns—Teeth Also Should Be Considered.

The common way of judging the age of a cow is by counting the rings on her horns. The first ring usually comes at about three years of age, the second one two years later, and then one ring is formed each year. The shape, size and condition of the teeth should also be considered.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. Pain in the back, headache, loss of appetite, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kline's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, is sure that the remedy needed to overcome such conditions. Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kline & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

On Friday of last week the Northville Woman's club indulged in an enjoyable luncheon at the residence of Mrs. P. E. Simmons. The program for the meeting consisted of an article by Mrs. J. W. Cleaver on "Intelligent Spending vs. Unwise Saving," and the report of the state Federation meeting at Saginaw, which Mrs. D. S. Kysor recently attended as the Northville delegate. The luncheon, of course, afforded a delightful occasion for social intercourse and the members present thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon.

UNION REVIVALS CLOSED SUNDAY

The revival meetings closed Sunday evening. In the strict sense of the word they ought never to have closed so far as the life and christian activity of the people is concerned. Friday evening the church was full, Marian Curdiss as pianist and Mrs. Theodore S. Henderson being the musical attractions. The address of the evening was delivered by George N. Baker and he completely captivated the young people present with his thrilling description of a foot race.

Sunday afternoon another large audience was present while Roy L. Brown delivered his great lecture, "Christ Before Pilate." We cannot report the unreportable, but we are safe in saying that Northville never listened to a more dramatic, eloquent and forceful presentation of a great religious theme. He held his audience spell-bound from beginning to end. It was the oratorical effort of the entire series of meetings. Sunday night the church was crowded to the limit. It was a great meeting and many made decisions to live better lives.

A substantial offering was made as a free will gift to E. L. Rollings, whose masterly work as chorister contributed so much to the success of the meetings. The meeting closed about 8:30. As to the real results they cannot be tabulated. Look for them in renewed lives, larger charity, and in moral uprightness to the community. Let each one of us put new zeal into the work of the churches. They are the real foundation of community betterment. If they fail everything else drops.

People of Northville let us say by the help of God the church shall not fail.

THESE FELLOWS SHOULD BE LOCKED UP.

In discussing the raid made by the state police on the Northville bowling alley, one of the proprietors of the place stated to The Record that it is an uncommon occurrence to have a fellow come into their place of business with a quart or a two quart bottle of booze sticking out of their pockets. Of course it is not expected that any business man will take the arrest of such fellows when they come in his place of business, but it is the duty of the local officers to lock up any person whom they know is peddling booze or those who have booze in their possession and have been obtained unlawfully.

Scarcely a Sunday has passed for weeks but from one to a half dozen drunken, staggering men have been seen on the streets of Northville some during the day or early evening. Under the old order of things it was not considered the proper thing to lock such fellows up because they had purchased their booze from an institution that had been licensed to sell it. But we are now under a new order and when any one is seen on the streets under the influence of liquor they ought to be locked up and made an example of when they have had out to sober up. A few nights in the village jail and a good few dollars to the county seat for twenty or thirty days, will have its effect in reducing the number of these wretched examples of humanity.

Wife as Man's Dr. Children's Wife and children are a fine sight. The wife of a man who is a Northville resident, who is a member of the Northville Baptist church, has been confined to her home for the past week or more with the attack of whooping cough.

ARRANGES TO CARE FOR TBC SOLDIERS.

Members of the American Legion afflicted with tuberculosis can be cared for under arrangements just made with the authorities of the Michigan Soldiers' Home, according to a statement made Monday by Fred Z. Fantland, of Grand Rapids, member of the committee of the Legion delegated to negotiate for hospital facilities.

"The Soldiers' Home has considerable unused space in its buildings,"

Mr. Fantland said, "that can be fitted up to care for the more urgent cases of tuberculosis. When the legislature meets it may be possible to arrange for hospital facilities, at the Soldiers' Home or elsewhere, that will be adequate to meet all the needs of the Legion men."

"The plan of using unoccupied space at the Soldiers' Home does away with the urgent need the Legion has felt for having the Community House at Camp Custer turned into a hospital for tubercular Legion men."
